47-a 1943

Guide Correspondent Scans The Personalities Of 332nd Fighters

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—People are what make an army unit tick. Ranks of the ground headquarters and three fighter squadrons comprising the 332nd fighter group in training here are studded with interesting personalities. Below are a few glimpses at the men who provide the outfit with some of its leadership and character.

OCT 30 1943

CAPT. GEORGE L. KNOX of Indianapolis, Ind., group operations officer. He was among the first Negroes seeking Army wings, and graduated in the third class to finish Tuskegee Army Flying School. After finishing Fisk University where he played football, he got in a few months work at a defense plant before his call to the Air Corps came.

CAPTAIN KNOX

In charge of plans and training over this side, his job is not so difficult now because the training program is handled by a regular staff of instructors. But in combat his job will be plans and operations, and he'll be an extremely busy man then with three squadrons to keep in the game. He is married and is a father.

FIRST LT. CHARLES DeBOW of Indianapolis, Ind., commanding officer of the 301st fighter squadron. Author of the much read magazine article "I Wanted Wings" which was reprinted in the Journal and Guide several years ago, Lt. DeBow was one of the first five Negroes to win Army wings, graduating in the class with Col. Davis.

DeBow is cocky and sure of his ability when it is put to the test. His isn't the cockiness you usually encounter. It is refreshing and pleasant and inspiring. Talking with him you feel that here's a pilot who's confident. And make no mistake about it, confidence is something you can't do without when you're up there shooting it out with a Jerry. That observation is imported direct from the shooting zone in Sicily by this correspondent.

GLEED WAS A PHOTOGRAPHER, TOO

A very recent groom, DeBow isn't so sure he was eager to go overseas when the 99th left, but now he's keen about it. I think he will be glad when the order come directing his squadron to move.

FIRST LIEUT. EDWARD G. GLEED of Lawrence, Kan., commands the 302nd squadron. My first knowledge of him came while I was overseas with the 99th. [illegible] of the boys had just heard from home with news of Lt. Gleed's appointment.

OCT 30 1943

Among them there was some surprise, but a fairly unanimous opinion that a good man had been chosen. Gleed was one of those cocky pilots, too—the kind you need more of in the Air Corps.

Jim Freeman (Lt. James O. Freeman of Jamaica, L. I., commanding the ordnance detachment with the 99th) told me then of the incident that marked Gleed for future reference. They were demonstrating a P-39 at Tuskegee where all the fighter planes were P-40s. None of the Tuskegee-trained fliers ever had flown the Aircobra before, perhaps never had even sat in the cockpit of one.

But with the permission of the commanding officer and the consent of the manufacturer's representative, Gleed climbed in, the P-39 down the runway and climbed right up in the skies with it. That was his first time at the controls of this type of plane.

Several years ago he was in the photographic business with Alex Rivera and Charles R. Stanback in Durham.

MAN WITHOUT A HOME TOWN

FIRST LIEUT. ROBERT B. TRESVILLE commands the 100th squadron, and doesn't claim any place as his home town. Like Col. Davis, he was born into the Army so to speak, and he's been moving about the world on military orders ever since he first gnawed on a teething ring.

LT. TRESVILLE

Like Davis, he is the son of an old army man, and he too went to West Point, stuck it out and graduated with a commendable record. He chose the Air Corps and his future should be just fruitful during the next few years.

Tresville is a man to keep your eyes on, too. Stately, gentlemanly, soldierly, personable, he thoroughly justifies the Army's claim that its leaders are officers and gentlemen.

An interesting sidelight was his Spitz puppy, "Brownie," running around behind Tresville and refusing steadfastly to be photographed. We got his picture only when the amiable squadron commander collared him and held him still for a few seconds.

"Brownie" already is deep in army tradition, although only a few weeks old. Probably a bit awed and displeased by the sight of "mufti," he grabbed the cuff of my civilian trousers and tried to rip them off me.

CAPT. MULZAC'S NEPHEW IS RADIO MECHANIC

T/SGT. JAMES JONES, of Montgomery, Tex., line chief of the 100th squadron. He has studied aircraft engines at the Air Corps technical schools and he's Lt. Tresville's chief dependence for "keeping 'em flying."

2ND. LIEUT. SPURGEON N. ELLINGTON, 24, of Winston-Salem, N. C., one of the pilots, recently crashed the news when he brought his P-39 down on a Michigan highway when it ran out o gas. He taxied up to a gas station to wait for help, but he did not ask for a fill-up as was reported. He knew well that ordinary automobile fuel wouldn't run his plane. He is a 1939 graduate of Winston-Salem Teachers College and lives at [illegible] N. Highland street.

ELLINGTON

OCT 30 1943

LIEUT. ORMAND G. McDANIEL, 27, of Martinsville, Va., a pilot who taught school for several years after finishing Virginia State in 1937, before getting his call to the Army. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McDaniel, 804 East Church street, Martinsville. He is single.

McDANIEL

CPL. JOHN MULZAC of New York City, is a nephew of the famed Liberty ship commander, Captain Hugh Mulzac, who now sails the seven seas with the S. S. Booker T. Washington. Young Mulzac is a radio operator and mechanic.

CPL. WILLIAM A. GRAVELY of Martinsville, Va., is another product of the Old Dominion with the fighter group at Selfridge. He spent one and a half years at Virginia State prior to entering the Army.

CORPORAL MULZAC

Some of the other pilots seen here and there are Lieuts. Wendell O. Pruitt, of St. Louis, Mo.; John F. Briggs, also of St. Louis; Joseph D. Ellsberry, of Langston, Oklahoma; Frank D. Walker, Richmond, Ky.; and Willie S. Hunter, of Albany Ga.

OCT 30

MAPLES

LIEUT. CLEMENCEAU M. GIVINGS, of Richmond, Va., He is former Journal and Guide representative for Richmond, and ace photographer and news-gatherer, Givings is a pilot who makes no effort to hide the fact from anybody and his "plane talk" is as invigorating as it is genuine.

Clem Givings got into the Army on the advice and with the consent of his draft board and wound up as a very buck private at Tuskegee. The sight of planes flying overhead was too much for him and soon he was applying desperately to become a flying cadet himself.

He got his wish and he's right up front with the boys who have flying for a career, at least for the duration.

FORMER JOURNAL AND GUIDE AGENT

LIEUT. ANDREW MAPLES JR., Orange, Va., was for years before entering Hampton Institute a Journal and Guide agent in his community. In fact, he still holds the franchise because papers are shipped out every week addressed to him, although distributed now by his successor. He is a pilot in the 301st Squadron.

LT. GIVENS

GETTING A LANE SERIOUS BUSINESS

If I needed any additional evidence of the fact that the size of the world is shrinking rapidly, the ubiquitous Clem was on hand that Sunday night to furnish it. When I walked up to the P. C. A. ticket counter to claim my reservation Lieut. Givings was there hoping that some passenger who had a seat would not show up and he could get on.

OCT 30 1943

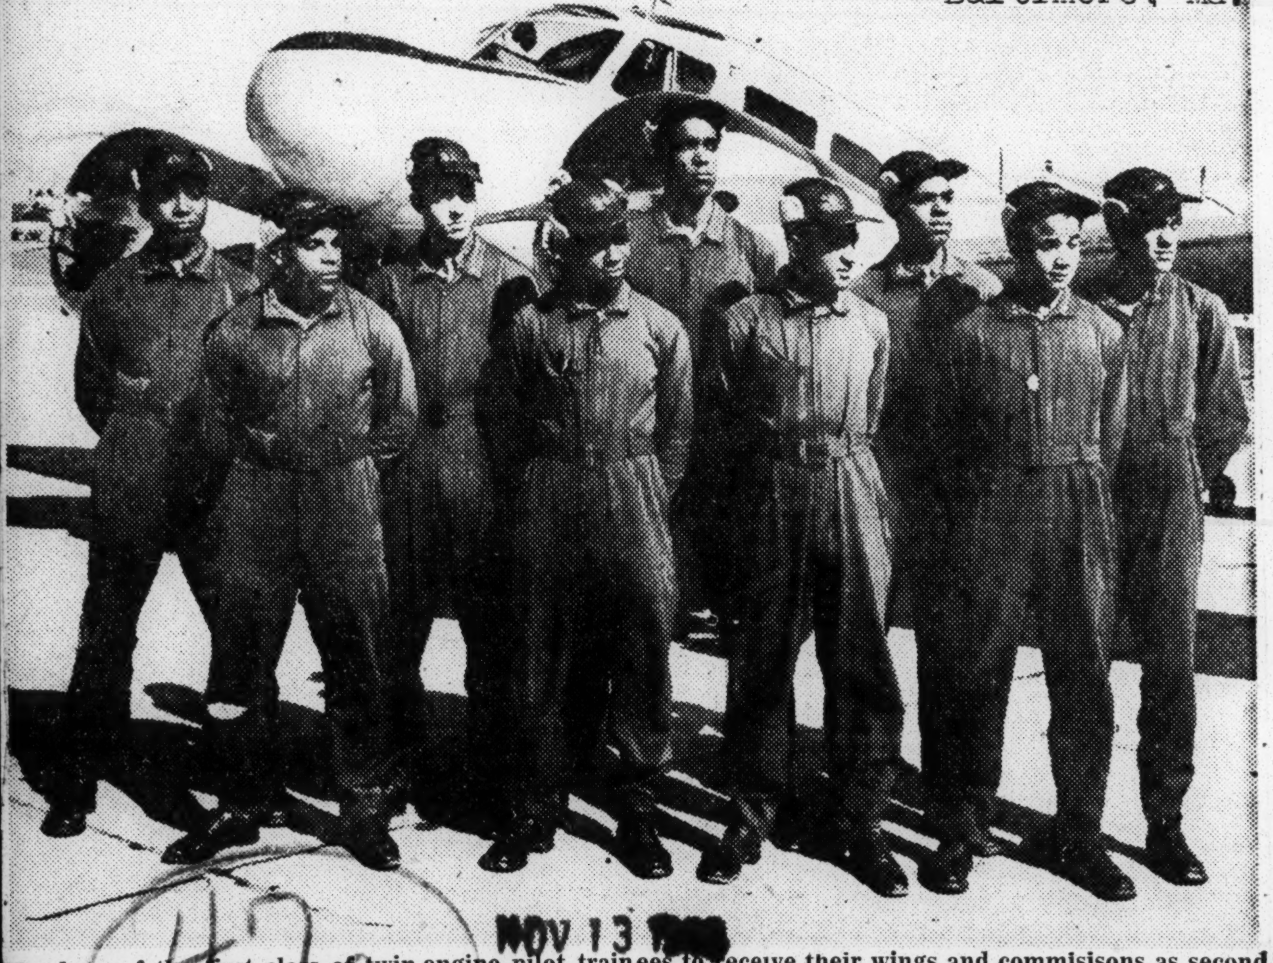
Having a day off, Givings had hopped aboard an airliner and flown to Washington on Saturday night. Of course he had to be back at Selfridge Field Monday morning, so getting a plane out of Washington Sunday night was serious business with him. Well, he got his seat and for most of the three hours which the trip required, Clem kept me deeply intrigued with all the latest news about flying men, machines, and methods.

When we got to Detroit at 12:30 that night I was certain my offer to give him a ride to the bus station would be readily accepted. It seemed reasonable that he would want to go directly to Selfridge Field for a night's rest.

But not Clem Givings. While there was still time before reveille Givings wanted to do some patrol duty in "the Valley," which is Detroit's bright light region. Next day when I saw Clem he had already put in four hours of flying and wanted to get one more in before calling it a day. He was obviously none the worse for his operational missions in "the Valley."

First Bomber Pilots Receive Wings at Tuskegee

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.



NOV 13 1943

Members of the first class of twin-engine pilot trainees to receive their wings and commisisons as second lieutenants, who were graduated at the Tuskegee Army Air Field Wednesday and, after a short leave of absence, will undergo transitional training in B-25 (Mitchell) Medium Bombers at Mather F i e l d, Calif. They are, left to right: 2nd Lieutenants Herman R. Campbell, N.Y.C.; Hemry F. Fletcher, San Antonio, Texas; Perry Hudson, Jr., Atlanta; Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N.J.; [illegible]me King, Jamaica, N.Y.; Jerome D. Spurlon, Chicago; Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore; William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass., and Leslie A. Williams of San Mateo. Calif. Lieutenant Williams stood first in the class and Lieut. Pinkney, third,

NOV 13 1943

47a

U. S. Gambled Millions; 99th Made Good--Rouzeau

DEC 11 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

DEC 11 1943

47a

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU, Courier Correspondent

The use of Negroes as fighter pilots will go down in history as one of the big gambles of World War Two. The stake runs into millions of dollars. Its success or failure will decide the status of American Negro youth in the surging progress of aeronautics.

Official circles may not admit this, but when the 99th Pursuit Squadron was organized at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., the Army was helping to decide whether or not our commercial airlines will some day have to fret over the problem of employing Negro pilots, co-pilots, flight engineers and ship radio operators, or continue to use them only as red caps and janitors.

PAYROLL AVERAGES $30,000 MONTHLY

Perhaps the Army was only pondering the stake, in cash, which it was gambling on the 99th. The stake included at least 24 planes which were then costing the Army around one hundred thousand dollars each. About 30 pilots had to be trained at an approximate cost of six thousand dollars per man. The Army had to lay out a fortune for genuine camel hair and other fleece lined flying suits, and had to put up a payroll which now averages thirty thousand dollars per month for the 99th Squadron alone.

DEC 11 1943

When the [illegible] arrived early this year in North Africa, our boys had to make good, with a capital "G." They knew it. Either make good or forfeit the right of other Negro youth to apply for service as military aviators. Make good or seal the fate of Negroes with our commercial airlines.

WENT OVERSEAS AS "ORPHAN"

DEC 11 1943

You, the reader of this article, can judge whether or not the squadron was an experiment. Here are some facts to guide you. White fighter squadrons, when ready to go abroad, are permanently linked up with other squadrons which are then permanently linked up with a group. The group is then attached to a wing, and the wing to a given air force, or at least to a theatre. The 99th went overseas as an orphan outfit. It was not linked up with any other squadron or with any particular group.

It was pretty much as if the Army, having staked a million dollars on a Negro squadron, was waiting to see how the gamble would pan out before sinking more cash to organize a Negro group. Today there is a Negro fighter group, the 332d. Does that imply anything?

With their P-40 Warhawks, our boys have made good at various types of operations. At dive-bombing, they are about as good as any other fighter outfit. When they were assigned to provide close cover for medium bombers traveling from Africa before Sicily was invaded, they stuck so tenaciously to the bombers, even through the heaviest anti-aircraft fire, that bomber crews everywhere were soon requesting that the colored squadron be assigned to escort them over.

WITH BRITISH ARMY

DEC 11 1943

They have made good on shore patrols. They had the job of flying "umbrella" over the left wing of Gen. Patton's Seventh Army during the invasion of Sicily, and they flew "umbrella" over our shipping during the invasion of Italy by Gen. Clark's Fifth Army. Today they are being used as aerial artillery, dive-bombing and strafing in front of Gen. Montgomery's Eighth Army so as to blast a path for the ground forces.

Our boys are credited with only one enemy plane destroyed, but this is not their fault. To shoot down enemy planes, you must have some enemy planes around to shoot at. When our boys first went into action, the German air force had been weakened considerably. Nowadays the Nazis are taking good care of the few fighter planes they have. They no longer send them up to pick fights just for the fun of it.

The Nazis will send up fighter planes after our big bombers, like the Fortresses and Liberators. That's because the big jobs have the range to travel to Germany proper, where they cause a lot of destruction.

DEC 11 1943

Our P-40 Warhawks, when carrying bombs, can cause a lot of destruction, too, but they lack the range to travel to the big German industrial cities. They work near the front lines and the Germans seldom bother to go up after them. The Germans appreciate the fact that our Warhawks can drop their bombs at a second's notice and become deadly fighters, too.

P-40's ARE SLOW

Then, again, as long as our boys are piloting P-40 Warhawks, it is up to the German fighter pilots to decide when there is to be a fight. Their Fockewulfs and Messerschmitts are much faster than our Warhawks. When outnumbered, they keep their distance and there is nothing our boys can do about it.

DEC 11 1943

The 99th is not the only fighter squadron which finds itself in this predicament. Some of the pilots in the most active squadrons have not seen a German fighter plane in months. There are some squadrons with imposing records against enemy fighters. But the pilots admit that the records were achieved in the days when the Germans had a real air force and German pilots were wearing a chip on their shoulders. Back in those days our boys were [illegible] in training for the big show.

DEC 11 1943

There is no question in the mind of this reporter that the War department considers that its gamble with Negro fighter pilots has panned out well.

The stakes have been increased. Because of the record of the 99th, the Army has organized a full-fledged Negro fighter group, composed of three additional fighter squadrons.

DEC 11 1943

Because of the capability our boys have shown as dive bombers, the Army is increasing the stakes again. This time the Army is investing millions of dollars in a Negro medium bomber group.

And if you still have your doubts about it, let me assure you that there is nobody in the world who could palm off a second rate outfit on Gen. Montgomery. The Commander of the British Eighth Army demands top performance in every one of its units. To be attached to the Eighth Army, our boys had to rate as good as anything the R.A.F. can boast of.

47a-1943

Amsterdam Star-News

New York, N. Y.

Negro Flyers Bombard Axis Troops in Sicily

AUG 21 1943

WASHINGTON—The 99th Fighter Squadron, all-Negro flying squad, is actively participating in the relentless drive of Axis forces from the island of Scily, according to a report from the War Department this week. This force of Tuskegee-trained pilots and ground crew is under the command of Lt. Colonel Benjamin O. Davis.

47a

The squadron since its arrival in North Africa, a few months ago has been ceaselessly bombing Axis communications and supply columns in Sicily.

The report also stated that "Ordnance and Supply Units in North Africa are pursuing the construction and repair work on invasion ports that were blasted when the African campaign was carried out a few months ago."

AUG 21 1943

Anti-Aircraft units are also reported "to be carrying out their regular missions."

New York. N. Y. Age

LT. MITCHELL KILLED IN ACTION

SEP 23 1943

Hampton Institute, Va., Sept. 17—First Lieutenant P. Graham Mitchell of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, who was recently killed in action in Sicily, is a former student of Hampton Institute and not of another college as stated in recent news dispatches, Major Walter R. Brown, dean of men, said today.

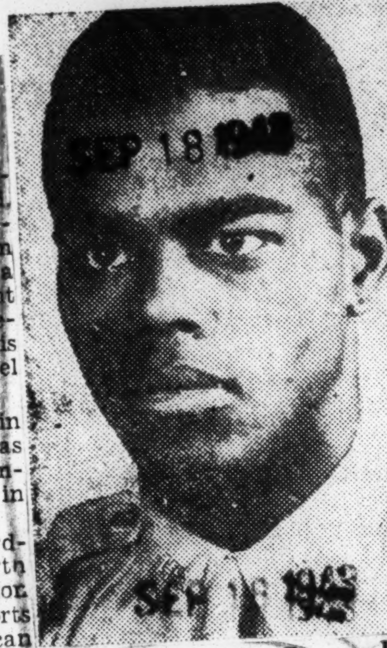
47a

SEP 23 1943

Mitchell, who received his early flight training in the Civilian Pilot Training program at Hampton Institute, graduated from the college in 1941 after completing four years of study in Building Construction. He was one of six Hampton flight officers with the 99th Squadron.

A gold star in Mitchell's honor has been added to the Hampton Institute service flag, which now honors 837 Hamptonians known to be serving with the armed forces and six Hampton Institute casualties of World War II.

KILLED IN ACTION



SEP 18 1943

SEP 18 1943

LT. PAUL GRAHAM MITCHELL, member of the 99th Pursuit Squadron has been killed in action in the North African area.

Lt. Mitchell was born in Washington, D. C., on June 26, 1919. He graduated from Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., with a Bachelor of Science degree in 1941. He received his appointment as aviation cadet on February 25, 1942 and was assigned to the Tuskegee Army Flying School, Tuskegee, Ala., from which he was graduated a pilot and received a commission as second lieutenant (temporary) in the Army United States) on July 3, 1942, and was assigned to the 99th Fighter Squadron.—U. S. Air Forces Official Picture.

47a

Tuskegee Army Air Field Commended For Its Safety

Age

New York, N. Y.

NOV 13 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. — For its past [illegible]e air safety record [illegible] the Army Air Forces for the f[illegible] year of 1943, the Tuskegee Army Air Field was recently presented with a facsimile of the National Safety Council's Distinguished Service to Safety Award, bestowed on the Army Air Forces.

47a

In a letter sent to the Commanding Officer of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, Col. Noel F. Parrish, from Robert A. Lovett, Ass't Secretary of War for Air, it was stated, "Please convey my congratulations to the o[illegible] and men of your field. You have helped effect a reduction in the rate of Army aircraft training accidents during 1943 as compared with the previous year".

NOV 13 1943

First Class Of Bomber Pilots Becomes Expert

Atlanta, Georgia

Daily W.

Learn To Fly

B-25 Medium

Billy Mitchells

MATHER FIELD, California — (SNS) — The first contingent of Negro flying officers which recently arrived at the Army Air Forces Training Command's [illegible]-engine transition school at Mather Field, is well on its way to becomng expert in the operation of B-25 medium bombers.

DEC 17 1943

The officers, nearly all of wnom are graduates of Tuskegee Army Flying School in Tuskegee, Alabama are qualified Army Air Forces pilots.

They earned their wings flying single-engine pursuit ships [illegible] now are learning the intricacies of piloting medum bombers.

DEC 17 1943

Ther training will be given them on the same type of ship — the Billy Mitchell — which Major General Jimmy Doolittle and his men used in the raid on Tokyo, and which has been employed so effectively since then in the South Pacific and the European theaters of war.

47a

In addition to actually learning how to fly B-25's, the Negro officers will attend ground school, where they will be given a complete technical and mechanical knowledge of the Billy Mitchell's operations, which the Army Air Forces demands of its medium bomber pilots.

They also will learn in ground school how to repair and maintain their planes, as do all other pilots. By the time their training at Mather Field is completed, they will be able to give their ships the rigorous "50-hour check" which all Army planes must undergo after they have been flown approximately 50 hours.

DEC 17 1943

Instruction in making the 50-hour check will be given to them by especially trained enlisted men who have attended Army Air Forces technical schools.

Coming from all parts of the United States, the pilots have varied backgrounds, ranging from one flier who was a nationally known athlete at Long Island University to another who holds M. A. and L. L. B. degree from Boston University.

New Jersey Pilot Defies Death To Rescue Two Mates

OCT 30 1943

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa

ALGIERS, N. Africa—(Via Wireless)—First Lieutenant Spann Watson of Hackensack, N. J., has been nicknamed "Life Saver" by his mates of the 99th Pursuit Squadron following his recent rescue feats.

Watson, on a recent patrol, saw a Messerschmitt pursuing another P-40 Warhawk. The German had scored several direct hits with his cannon when Watson caught up with the chase and poured a stream of bullets on the German plane's tail causing the Messerschmitt to break off and flee. At the controls of the damaged P-40 was a white pilot from another squadron. Watson escorted him home, the damaged plane holding together by a miracle until the landing wheels touched the ground. Then the plane fell apart from the jolt. An examination revealed it was full of holes. One or two more hits by the German would have finished it off.

47a

OCT 30 1943

TRUE DEMOCRACY BORN

The white pilot, unhurt, knew he had been rescued by a desert colored plane, recognized as belonging to the Negro squadron. He looked up the squadron and asked for the pilot to whom he owed his life. Watson modestly stayed in the background, feigning [illegible] until fellow pilots, who had witnessed the episode and followed the chase from afar, pushed him forward. The white pilot gripped Watson's hand and said, "I'm your brother for life."

On another occasion, Watson saved Lt. Lee Rayford of Washington, D. C., a member of his own squadron. A Focke-Wulf dived out from the sun and clamped on the tail of Rayford's P-40. The Focke-Wulf had hit Rayford's plane twice when Watson bobbed up from nowhere and [illegible] the German [illegible]. On still another occasion, [illegible] James B. Knighten of Tulsa, Okla., found himself battling two Messerschmitts and praying for help. His prayer was answered—and who came along to stage the rescue? That's right—Lt. Spann Watson!

OCT 30 1943

"99TH" CHIEF HAS HAD MOMENTS TOO

Capt. George Spencer Roberts, new squadron commander of the 99t, has had several narrow escapes. Here's his account of one of them:

"During the invasion of Sicily our squadron, operating from Africa, was assigned to protect the extreme left flank of American ground forces. On these patrols we flew Sicilyward, just above sea level to avoid detection by the enemy, but not near the water, because of the curvature of the earth's surface. The Germans prepare a warm welcome when expecting visitors. We don't use radios on such missions unless emergencies arise. On one patrol, I was commanding 12 planes when my motor sputtered and died out 60 miles over the ocean. Realizing the plane would plunge seaward in a few seconds once she started falling and, not being high enough for parachuting, I experienced a frightful ten seconds while doing everything I could think of to get the motor started. I turned the plane homeward and the others followed suit—since it is the usual practice of pilots to follow the leader everywhere. I waved them frantically to continue the mission, which motions they finally understood. Although the gasoline tank I was using was nearly full, I switched to another tank and the motor roared again. It all happened in less than ten seconds, but it seemed like a lifetime."

OCT 30 1943

MIRACLES SAVE BOYS

Continuing, Captain Roberts narrated:

"I had two interesting experiences with Flak. On one occasion, the squadron was sent to bomb gun positions over the Pantelleria island. Shells from ground battery burst under my plane. The ship zoomed upward as if flung by a giant hand. After dropping my bombs I hurried home and found Flak had knocked several holes in my fuselage elevators, rudders and wings, but had found no vital spots. On another occasion, we were on a figter sweep over Randazzo, Sicily. We knew where enemy Flak guns were supposedly located, but ran into new Flak positions. Several planes were hit, but none seriously. Returning to the base, I discovered that shrapnell had entered by right wing, penetrating the ammunition case and setting all my bullets afire. I can't understand yet why the bullets didn't explode and blow of my wing. Our rugged P-40's take considerable punishment, but we also owe our lives to miracles which defy explanation."

OCT 30 1943

HARROWING EXPERIENCE

Lt. William Fuller of Tarboro, N. C., relating his greatest thrill as a 99th pilot overseas, recounted:

"During a bomber escort mission to Milo airdrome in the northwest corner of Sicily, we encountered a solid carpet of Flak. Orders came over the radio to [illegible] the belly of our gasoline tanks. Suddenly, I saw a bright glare of fire to the right and thought my pal, Lt. Alleng Lane of Demopolis, Ala., had been hit and set afire. I dropped the belly of my gasoline tank. Shrapnell pierced it and it blazed. I was very uncomfortable until we emerged from the Flak area."

PILOT'S MATE SAVES LIFE

"My biggest moment as a combat pilot," recalled Lt. Herbert Van Allen Clark of Pine Bluff, Ark., "was while escorting two dozen A-20 bombers to Sciaca, Sicily, in early June. My motor started sputtering en route and the target threatened to go out completely when we spotted eight Focke-Wulfs overhauling our formation. Two Focke-Wulfs dived from 2,000 feet. I tried the usual turn with the object of meeting them head-on, but my motor sputtered in the middle of the turn, leaving the plane suspended in the air momentarily and a perfect target for the leading Focke-Wulf. I was terrified when, glancing around, I saw smoke belching from a Focke-Wulf canon. I was puzzled how the German could have missed me, but he did. My motor caught again, enabling me to complete a turn. Another Fock-Wulf dived from the left. I turned into him. He leveled out in front of me and flipped over. His was a crazy stunt. I shot him and I was planning to follow downward to claim a "kill" when a fellow polit, Lt. Walter Lawson of Newton, Va., yelled over his radio, "Turn!" I did not know his reason for the command, but I obeyed and then I saw another Focke-Wulf was on my tail and would have got me the next instant but for Lawson's timely warning. He saved my life. I realized then that the Focke-Wulf I shot was a decoy to hold my attention while a mate of the German was afforded the chance to shoot me from the rear. My victim misjudged his distance in front of me, however, and my motor also stopped cutting up. We all returned safely, losing no bombers. I was officially credited with a probable "kill."

47a

SAVES 2 PILOTS

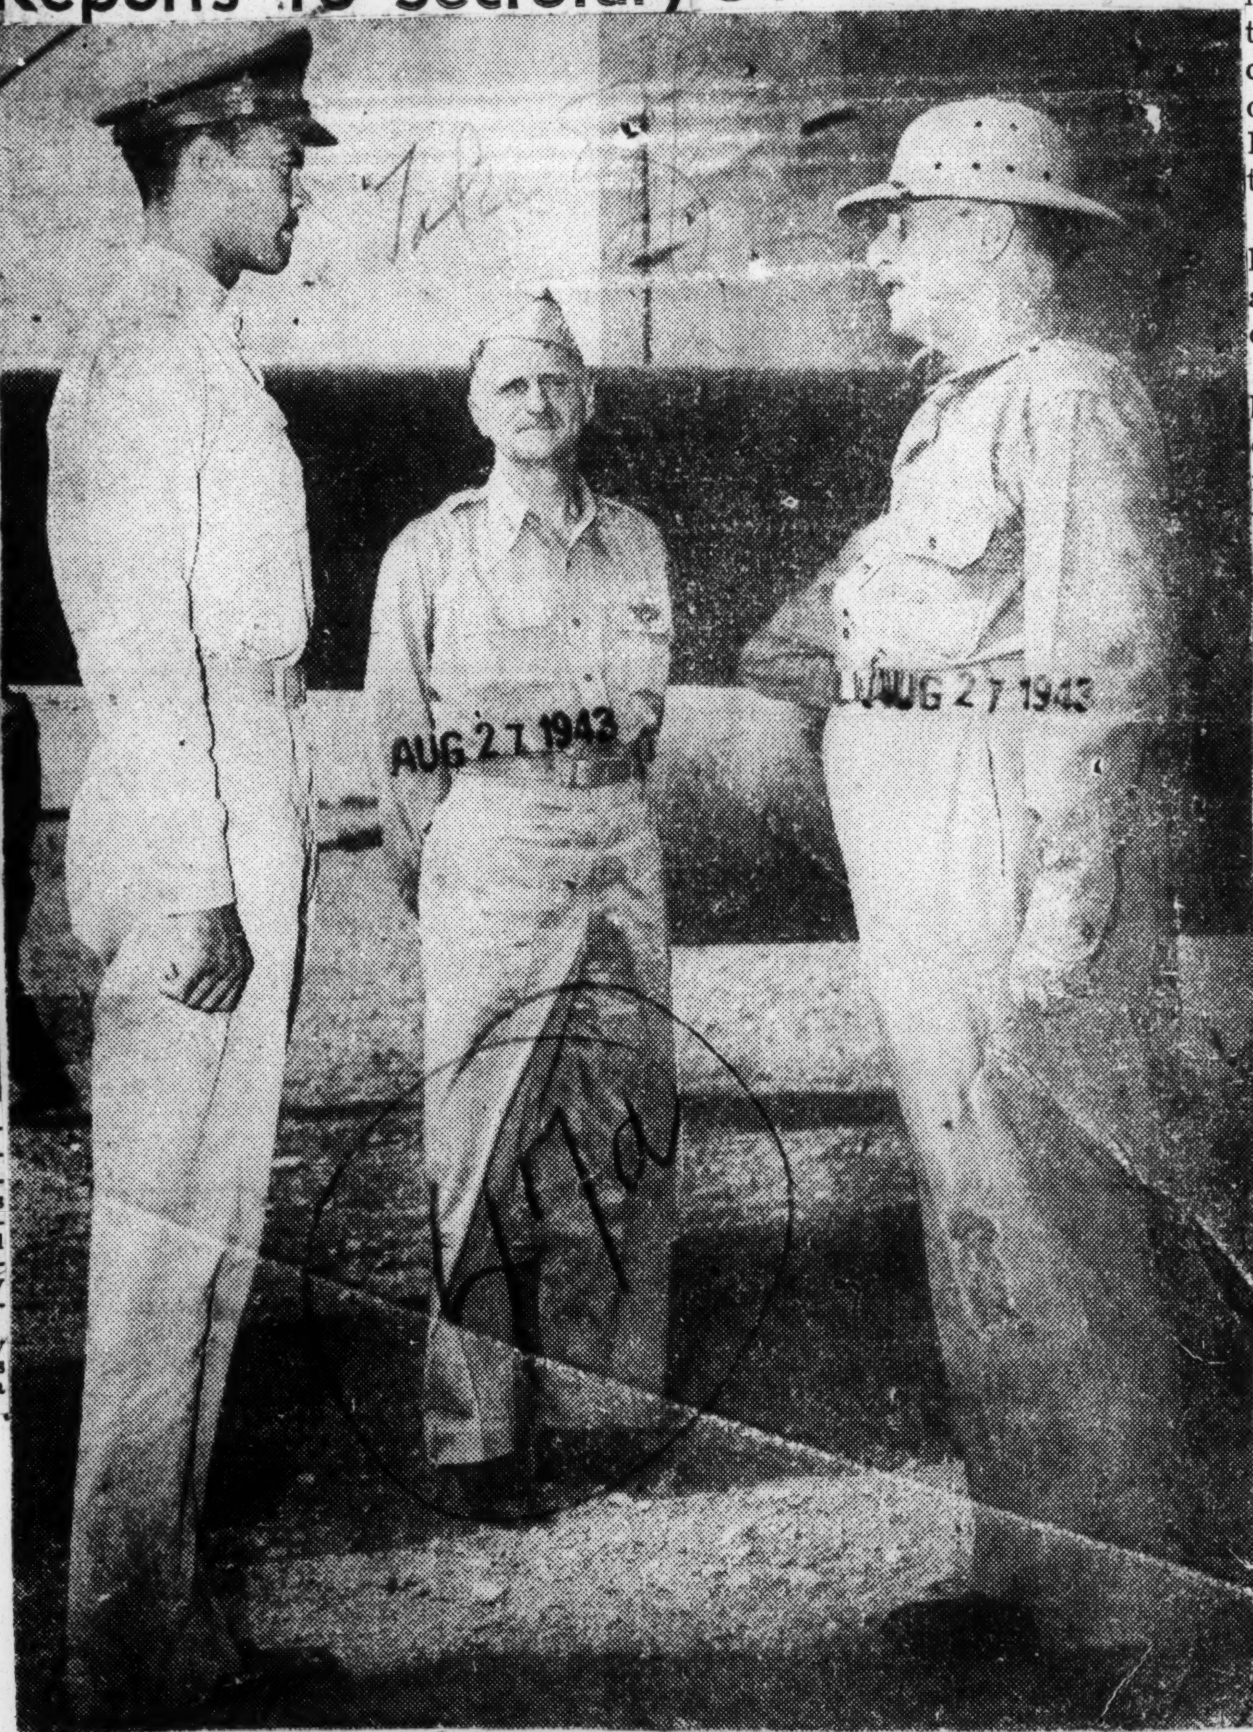
30 19

First Lieutenant Spann Watson of Hackensack, N. J., veteran member of the 99th Pursuit Squadron overseas, has earned the nickname "Life Saver," because of his sensational feat in twice rescuing fellow pilots when they were trapped by Germans flying faster Messerschmitt and Focke-Wulf planes.

Lieutenant Watson not only saved the life of one of his mates of the "99th", but that of a white Allied flier as well.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

A General's Son Reports To Secretary Of War Stimson



AUG 27 1943

AUG 27 1943

SECRETARY OF WAR VISITS THE 99TH FIGHTER SQUADRON—Mr. Stimson is pictured here talking with Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr. Commanding Officer of the unit. Lt. Gen. Carl Spaatz, Commander of the Northwest African Air Forces, is seen in the background. (Northwest African Air Forces Photo.)

We Are Gaining

Kansas City Call

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., who commanded the 99th pursuit squadron in the battles of North Africa, Pantelleria and Sicily, is back in this country. He returns a war hero—decorated along with 25 of his flyers for heroic exploits in the North African theater of war.

SEP 17 1943

His return is significant. He is not home on a leave or to be acclaimed by an admiring public. He was not favored with a trip home because he is a general's son. Col. Davis was sent back to America to take over the job of training other young pilots who in months to come also will be in action in the war zone.

He proved to be such a capable commander of a small fighter squadron that he has been given the tougher assignment of commanding a larger unit of Negro flyers. His experience in actual combat will be of immeasurable benefit to the new pilo[illegible]o are to be trained under [illegible]. He can tell them what did happen and what will happen; not what might happen.

SEP 17 1943

In leaving the war zone, Col. Davis turned over his command to another young Negro pilot, Captain George Roberts. Our pilots are making good. Uncle Sam, who was reluctant to give our boys a chance to fly, must feel gratified that he did not continue to hold back because of custom.

Flyers Make Fighters

Amsterdam-News
New York, N. Y

Many Cadets Train At Tuskegee to Earn Commissions, Wings

AUG 14 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—For the first time in history Negroes are sharing in the aerial fight for freedom. The fighter pilots who are now serving overseas are setting high standards for their successors to follow and every cadet stationed at the Tuskegee Army Air Field looks forward to the day when he can share in the responsibility of driving the Axis from the lands of once free people.

These cadets stationed here are studying hard so that they can pass missions and wings. Among the the test that will earn them com-

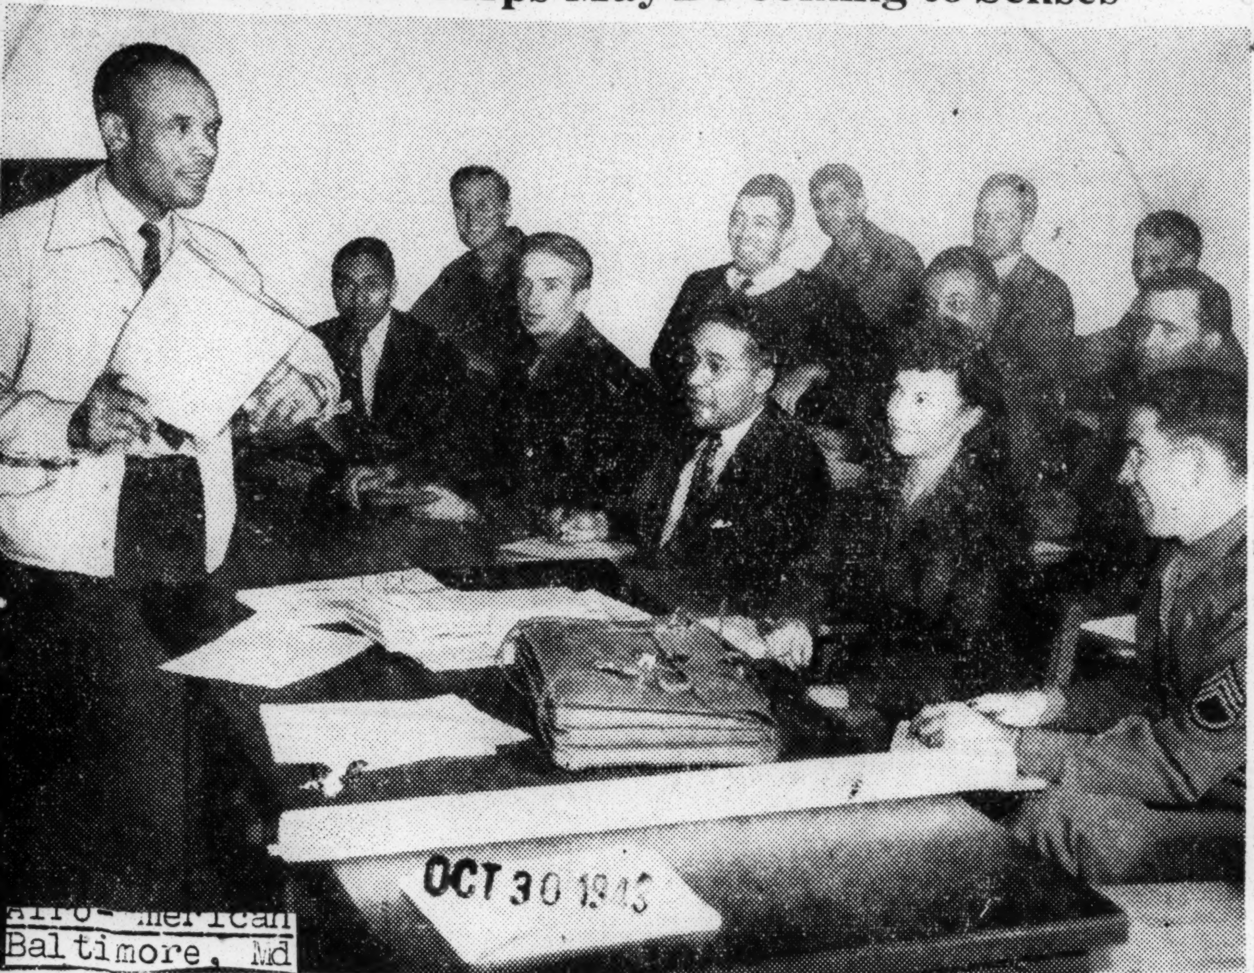
cadets training at this station are many New York youths. The men from New York who recently completed their basic flight training at this field and have been assigned to the advanced flight class are: Aviation Cadets George J. Haley, of Bath, N. Y.; Edgar L. Jones, of New York City; Sidney T. Reed, of New York City; Fenton B. Kends, of New York City; George H. Rho[illegible] of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Gen[illegible]sme, of New York City.

AUG 14 1943

Cadet Haley i[illegible]n of Mr. and Mrs. Harold P. Haley, of 19 Gene St., Bath, N. Y. Cadet Jones is f merly of 3671 Paulding Ave., York City. Cadet Reed is a so Mr. and Mrs. George Reed, of Bradhurst Ave., New York City.

47a-1943

Hint That Air Corps May Be Coming to Senses



OCT 30 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Grover C. Nash, senior instructor in the airplane mechanics' school at Lincoln Air Base, Neb., explains principles of navigation to a group of instructors who will form the nucleus for the Army's bombardier-navigator training program for training future crews of B-25 bombers. Classes for trainees, like this instructor's class, will be mixed. Nash, only civilian flight instructor at Lincoln Air Base, is a graduate of several flying schools. In 1938, he was the first and only colored pilot to fly the United States mail. He spent 16 months as instructor for the U.S. Army Air Forces Training Command, and has almost 3,000 flying hours to his credit in thirty different types of planes. His home is in Chicago, where he operated his own flying school for six years.

Pilot Returns To 99th After Chuting Down Near Messina

SEP 11 1943

Informer
Houston, Texas

By OLLIE STEWART
War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Sicily

(Copyright by the Afro-American Newspapers Syndicate and The Informer Chain. Reproduction in part or in whole strictly prohibited)

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY. — On August 17, Second Lieut. John Morgan of Cartersville, Georgia, and Tuskegee institute came back to the outfit after an absence of a week. Everybody was glad to see him because the last news was that he had been seen jumping out of his plane near Messina and parachuting down to earth. No one knew whether he had been killed or captured by the Ge[illegible]

But when he walked into camp with a few scratches, laughing and kidding as usual, a sigh of relief went up from officers and enlisted men alike. You at home can never know how a man is missed out of a small group like this, where every one knows everybody else. Morgan is the third one of the gang to jump and live. The other two are Sam Bruce of Seattle and Dick Bolling of Phoebus, Virginia. All came back uninjured.

This is significant because three other men from among us did not have time to jump. We never talk about them. Their names are never mentioned. One day they were eating and playing games and talking about post-war plans back home—then they went on a mission—and never came back. Funny thing, too, they were very quiet chaps, and I liked them a hell of a lot. Everybody did. But that's war for you—here today and gone tomorrow—it may be trite and bluntly truthful.

By his time, the War Department should have notified their next of kin, so I shall give you their names. Missing in action are Second Lieut. James L. McCullin, St. Louis, Missouri, graduate of Kentucky State; 1st Lieut. Sherman W. White, Montgomery, Alabama, and Chicago university; and 1st Lieut. Paul G. Mitchell, Washington and Howard university. May they rest in peace!

1st Lieut. Henry [illegible] Letcher and his special service group are a source of constant pleasure to the outfit. Lieut. Letcher, who taught at Howard and in the D. C. public schools, has surrounded himself with a bunch of entertainers who were professionals in civilian life and they are appreciated by us all. Buck Newsome, of Detroit; Shorty Boo, formerly of the team of Pepper and Pepper; Donald Quander, quaint master of ceremonies; Jimmy Anderson, of the Golden tenor; Peter Cobb, of Brooklyn, whose latest song, written overseas, "Why Make a Fool Out of Me?" you will probably hear after the war.

Incidentally, Cobb plays the piano and trumpet and was an arranger in civilian life; Roland Roulette sings scat songs, and the quintet of Shag Crawford, Jimmy Anderson, Bill Warner, Richard Dunlap and Joseph Taylor is as good as any I've ever heard anywhere.

Lieut. Letcher really produces, even in Sicily. The Mayor of Licata was persuaded to lend him a piano for all shows while in the neighborhood. Doughnuts and coffee were served regularly. A truck was backed up against a tree with a sheet on its side and we had two movies regularly. This is the real treat out here in an olive grove. Jerry is so understanding he never comes over to disturb the men.

Maybe you wonder how we get our hair cut? Well, some units have a barber who does nothing but clip all day. That's not true in this squadron. Our barber does a full day's work, then after chow sets up a box and goes to work. It takes him almost a week to get around to all the officers, then he and an assistant fix up enlisted men. Yes, we get haircuts, shaves now and then, and then shoe shines—though it does no good as far as girls are concerned. It merely keeps up morale, they say.

Our barber is S-Sgt. Walter E. Turner of Los Angeles. He and his tent mates call themselves the Secret Seven—for what reason I don't know. The others are S-Sgt. Hugh Holmes, Atlanta; Sgt. Arda Norman, Waco, Texas, who is a propeller specialist; Sgt. Leslie H. Devell, Port Arthur, Texas, dope and fabric department, which has to do with rudder and camouflage (is that right?); Sgt. Harold O'Neal, Vaux Hall, New Jersey; S-Sgt. Dave Wormley, Philadelphia; and S-Sgt. Eddie Hartgrove, Brooklyn.

Effective August 13, the following promotions were made:

To master sergeant—T-Sgt. Fred T. Archer, N.Y.C.

To be technical sergeants—Staff Sergeants Ralph A. Burnley, Philadelphia, and Thomas W. Downs, Seguin, Texas.

To be staff sergeants—Sgts. Elijah Coleman, Cranford, New Jersey; Geoge D. Johnson, Atlantic City, N. J.; William H. Young, Jr., Richmond, Virginia, and Edward M. Hartgrove, Brooklyn.

To be sergeants—Corporals Robert H. Ables, Brooklyn; Hubert E. Bigelow, Jr., Orange, New Jersey; Arber L. Grier, Jr., New York City; Edward R. Pryor, Lawrenceville, Virginia; Irvin L. Sharple, Philadelphia; Wardell P. Alexander, Atlantic City; Edward A. Boone, Brooklyn; James Hileyar, Raymond Scruggs, New York City; Joseph H. Spooner, New York City, and Arthur T. Williams, Pasadena, California.

To be corporals—Pfcs. Lucius Anderson, Atlantic City; Fred Munger, Brooklyn; Thomas Morris, Brooklyn; Albert Porche, Houma, Louisiana; and Roy Teague, Selma, Alabama.

To privates first class—Pvts. Russell J. Bacon, Washington, D. C.; Ernest Brown, New York City; George Grooms, Brooklyn; Joseph F. Mayers, New York City; Robert Newsome, Detroit; Napoleon B. Watkins, Memphis; Leonard R. Brewer, New York City; Harver Cain, Jr., New York City; Leo S. Holmes, Chester, Pennsylvania; Charles E. McDonald, Philadelphia, and John W. Young, Memphis, Tennessee.

I met a group of ordnance officers a few days ago. Included Second Lieuts. Charles Palmer, Atlantic City; Nolan R. Best, Johnson C. Smith college; William O. Dickerson, Cheyney; Edward D. Hudson, Wilberforce, and Clarence E. Webb, Wayne university, Detroit.

Houston, Texas
Informer
Houston, Texas

SEP 11 1943

Last Sleepin Africa

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Rolling up his bed roll for the last time, Lt. Lee Rayford of the 99th Fighter is shown in North Africa just before coming home.

unclean people. But the people were nice and came out to talk with us, many French, but more Arabs—'Rabs' we call them.

"Finally we reached our station, a small open space in the desert between mountains. 'Do they expect us to fly nere?'

Yes, they did fly there! There were times when it seemed as if each time they crossed the road they got lost. Bitter days! Finally they got on to things, then off to meet the enemy.

In the midst of the desert, with no audience except the skies and sand, Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, commander of the outfit, made the boys soldier—shine shoes, shave up, everything just right. But the payoff came when the battle was at hand. They thanked him for it all.

'Mother, I Am Home,' Says Lieut. Rayford of 99th

One of Five Flyers Detailed from Italy to Instruct Cadets Reaches Washington

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Mrs. Narka Rayford greets her son, First Lieut. Lee Rayford, upon his return to Washington from Sicily, where he has been on combat duty with the 99th Fighter Squadron.

WASHINGTON

With bits of German planes as souvenirs and the memory of many hectic encounters with enemy Focke-Wulfs and Messerschmitts, First Lt. Lee Rayford, a member of the Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron, returned home this week.

"Mother, I am home!" he told his mother, Mrs. Narka Rayford, over telephone from Union Station. "Have plenty of hot water because I want to take a real bath in a tub."

In a few minutes this youngster, who got the tail of his plane shot off during a raid over Pantelleria, stepped in the door and greeted his mother with a kiss.

Closest Call with Germans

"That encounter with the Germans over Pantelleria was the closest call that I had with the enemy," Lt. Rayford explained "It all happened before you could hardly bat an eye. I was getting my guns aimed at a plane just ahead of me when a Focke-Wulf pumped three bullets and then a bomb into the tail of my plane.

"I looked back and a part of a wing and the tail had gone. That was one of my first flights and I had a terrible feeling, but I brought the ship safely home."

"I left our camp with a number of souvenirs, clothes and other things," he stated, "but my baggage was overweight and I had to leave it in North Africa."

"Tough Days in N. Africa"

After a hot bath, then a steak and a cold bottle of beer, Lt. Rayford told of "our tough days in North Africa."

"When we first landed there," he stated, "we expected some trucks to meet us, or some other conveyance. Loaded with packs, tired to death, we were informed that we had to walk to camp—about ten miles. We fell down on the ground when we arrived and went right to sleep.

Hanker for Planes

"We traveled on the old French railroads, as slow as all out of doors, looked forward to the day when we would get a plane, fly above the poor houses and the

---

COLORED AND WHITE TRAINEES SCHOOLED TOGETHER

OCT 30 1943

Grover C. Nash, senior instructor in the Airplane Mechanics' School at Lincoln air base, Nebraska, is shown explaining principles of navigation to a group of instructors who will form the nucleus of teachers for the Army's bombardier-navigator training program with the objective command of B-25 bombers.

As announced by the War Department, Negroes and whites will be schooled together. [illegible]ash, only civiilan flight instru[illegible] at Lincoln air base, is a graduate of several flying schools. In 1938 he was the first and only Negro to fly the United States mail. He spent 16 months as instructor for the U.S. Army Air Forces Tr[illegible] Command, and has almo[illegible]00 flying hours to his credit in 30 different types of planes. His home is in Chicago, Ill., where he operated his own flying school for six years.—Photo by U.S. Army Signal Corps.

Training Instructors For Race Bombardier Program

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

OCT 30 1943

LINCOLN AIR BASE, Neb.—With the ground crews already in training for assignment to B-25 airplanes, instructors for the navigator and bombardier training program are being taken trough an orientation course here at the Airplane Mechanic's school by civilian and Army technicians and flight instructors. The Secretary of War, in his comments to newspaper representatives October 14, pointed out that there had been a slight delay in the training of Negro pilots because of the change of character of the plane designed for their equipment. The B-26 Marauder was the bomber originally planned for the all-Negro Bombardment Group.

3,000 FLYING HOURS

Grover C. Nash, of Chicago, has been assigned to orient instructors for navigation training. Nash is senior instructor in the Airplane Mechanics' School. He is the only civilian flight instructor at Lincoln Air Base. In 1938 he was the first and only Negro to fly the United States mail. He spent [illegible] months as instructor for the U. S. Army Air Forces Training Command, and has nearly 3,000 flying hours to his credit in 30 different types of planes.

Included in Nash's class in navigation are Courtland Bishop, Terre Haute, Ind. Frank O. Brown, Wilmington, N. C.; S. Sgt. William Moses, Northfork, W. Va.; T. B. Foster, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mildred Strough, Unionville, Mo.; S. Sgt. Melvin Ensign, Visalia, Calif.; Cpl. Joseph A. Hovlandw, Fergus Falls, Minn.; Gale M. Breithhaupt, Edgerton, Kansas; Lloyd Williams, Kansas City, Mo., and S. Sgt. Charles Richards, Saginaw, Mich.

ENLISTED MEN TRAINING

Many enlisted men are already in training at various special schools and installations to supply the personnel for this group. Public announcements recently made note of the wo[illegible] being done along these lines at Selfridge Field, Mich., and Keesler Field, Miss.

The first airplane mechanics' class at Sheppard Field, T[illegible] was started October 9, with an enrollment of 300, it was revealed this week by Colonel Davis W. Goodrich, assistant director of training in charge of the technical school. Members of the class were selected from the 19th Aviation Squadron and other Air Forces installations. All are attached to the [illegible] Squadron at Sheppard Field.

OCT 30

Recently General Henry H. Arnold, commanding general of the Army Air Forces, announced that the profitable results of Negro-crewed fighter and bomber outfits in North Africa justified the expanded program, a big part of which Sheppard Field has received.

'Mother, I Am Home,' Says Lieut. Rayford of 99th

One of Five Flyers Detailed from Italy to Instruct Cadets Reaches Washington

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Mrs. Narka Rayford greets her son, First Lieut. Lee Rayford, upon his return to Washington from Sicily, where he has been on combat duty with the 99th Fighter Squadron.

WASHINGTON

With bits of German planes as souvenirs and the memory of many hectic encounters with enemy Focke-Wulfs and Messerschmitts, First Lt. Lee Rayford, a member of the Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron, returned home this week.

"Mother, I am home!" he told his mother, Mrs. Narka Rayford, over telephone from Union Station. "Have plenty of hot water because I want to take a real bath in a tub."

In a few minutes this youngster, who got the tail of his plane shot off during a raid over Pantelleria, stepped in the door and greeted his mother with a kiss.

Closest Call with Germans

"That encounter with the Germans over Pantelleria was the closest call that I had with the enemy," Lt. Rayford explained "It all happened before you could hardly bat an eye. I was getting my guns aimed at a plane just ahead of me when a Focke-Wulf pumped three bullets and then a bomb into the tail of my plane.

"I looked back and a part of a wing and the tail had gone. That was one of my first flights and I had a terrible feeling, but I brought the ship safely home."

"I left our camp with a number of souvenirs, clothes and other things," he stated, "but my baggage was overweight and I had to leave it in North Africa."

"Tough Days in N. Africa"

After a hot bath, then a steak and a cold bottle of beer, Lt. Rayford told of "our tough days in North Africa."

"When we first landed there," he stated, "we expected some trucks to meet us, or some other conveyance. Loaded with packs, tired to death, we were informed that we had to walk to camp—about ten miles. We fell down on the ground when we arrived and went right to sleep.

Hanker for Planes

"We traveled on the old French railroads, as slow as all out of doors, looked forward to the day when we would get a plane, fly above the poor houses and the

---

COLORED AND WHITE TRAINEES SCHOOLED TOGETHER

OCT 30 1943

Grover C. Nash, senior instructor in the Airplane Mechanics' School at Lincoln air base, Nebraska, is shown explaining principles of navigation to a group of instructors who will form the nucleus of teachers for the Army's bombardier-navigator training program with the objective command of B-25 bombers.

As announced by the War Department, Negroes and whites will be schooled together. Nash, only civiilan flight instructor at Lincoln air base, is a graduate of several flying schools. In 1938 he was the first and only Negro to fly the United States mail. He spent 16 months as instructor for the U.S. Army Air Forces Training Command, and has almost [illegible]00 flying hours to his credit in 30 different types of planes. His home is in Chicago, Ill., where he operated his own flying school for six years.—Photo by U.S. Army Signal Corps.

OCT 1943

Training Instructors For Race Bombardier Program

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

OCT 30 1943

LINCOLN AIR BASE, Neb.—With the ground crews already in training for assignment to B-25 airplanes, instructors for the navigator and bombardier training program are being taken trough an orientation course here at the Airplane Mechanic's school by civilian and Army technicians and flight instructors. The Secretary of War, in his comments to newspaper representatives October 14, pointed out that there had been a slight delay in the training of Negro pilots because of the change of character of the plane designed for their equipment. The B-26 Marauder was the bomber originally planned for the all-Negro Bombardment Group.

3,000 FLYING HOURS

Grover C. Nash, of Chicago, has been assigned to orient instructors for navigation training. Nash is senior instructor in the Airplane Mechanics' School. He is the only civilian flight instructor at Lincoln Air Base. In 1938 he was the first and only Negro to fly the United States mail. He spent [illegible] months as instructor for the U. S. Army Air Forces Training Command, and has nearly 3,000 flying hours to his credit in 30 different types of planes.

Included in Nash's class in navigation are Courtland Bishop, Terre Haute, Ind. Frank O. Brown, Wilmington, N. C.; S. Sgt. William Moses, Northfork, W. Va.; T. B Foster, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mildred Strough, Unionville, Mo.; S. Sgt. Melvin Ensign, Visalia, Calif.; Cpl. Joseph A. Hovlandw, Fergus Falls, Minn.; Gale M. Breithhaupt, Edgerton, Kansas; Lloyd Williams, Kansas City, Mo., and S. Sgt. Charles Richards, Saginaw, Mich.

ENLISTED MEN TRAINING

Many enlisted men are already in training at various special schools and installations to supply the personnel for this group. Public announcements recently made note of the wo[illegible] being done along these lines at Selfridge Field, Mich., and Keesler Field, Miss.

The first airplane mechanics' class at Sheppard Field, Texas, was started October 9, with an enrollment of 300, it was revealed this week by Colonel Davis W. Goodrich, assistant director of training in charge of the technical school. Members of the class were selected from the 19th Aviation Squadron and other Air Forces installations. All are attached to the [illegible] Squadron at Sheppard Field.

Recently General Henry H. Arnold, commanding general of the Army Air Forces, announced that the profitable results of Negro crewed fighter and bomber outfits in North Africa justified the expanded program, a big part of which Sheppard Field has received.

47a-1943

Lt. Colonel Davis, Fliers' Commander, Enroute To U.S.; Heads Fighter Group

Next Stop Is European Mainland For Airmen; Guide's War Correspondent, Enroute to England On Special Assignment, Flies With Davis To Allied Headquarters in Algiers.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

SEP 11 1943

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent
(By Wireless and Cable. Copyright. Reproduction Prohibited)

ALLIED AIR BASE, SICILY—The proof of a battlefront assignment gloriously and bravely done by the pioneering 99th Fighter Squadron of the Army Air Forces is at hand! Twenty six of the intrepid sky warriors, first in American history, have been decorated with the Air Medal, coveted badge of meritorious achievement against the enemy . . . and in the name of General Dwight D. Eisenhower, the United States military genius who commands all United Nations forces in the North African-Mediterranean theater of war . . and by whom the might of the democracies was directed in crushing the Axis in North Africa, Pantelleria, and Sicily . . . and under whom the Allies even now are smashing up the Italian boot in the first successful invasion of Hitler's European fortress.

Meanwhile Lt. Colonel Benjamin O. Davis Jr., the squadron's West Point Military Academy and Tuskegee Army Flying School-trained commanding officer, has been ordered to return to the United States and the First Army Air Force, to take command of the Negro fighter group training at Selfridge Field, Michigan, composed of three fighter squadrons, plus headquarters and service squadrons, and give them the benefit of his fine military background and combat experience.

His transfer to this larger command is an indication of the confidence in his ability held by the Army high command. Lt. Colonel Davis immediately flew to Allied Force Headquarters in Algiers, North Africa, where he arrived on September 3 by Army Transport Command plane, enroute to the United States.

The youthful high ranking officer was accompanied in the plane to Allied Force Headquarters by this correspondent, who is enroute to Great Britain, on leave of absence from Sicily authorized by Allied headquarters to permit him to visit American Negro units particularly in the British Isles, for two or more weeks and report on their activities. It was officially announced a few days ago that another sizeable colored combat force had safely arrived in England.

(The Journal and Guide's correspondent, Thomas W. Young, the first of his race ever accredited to the U. S. Army Air Forces, was attached to the 99th Squadron before it left the United States last spring, made the trans-Atlantic trip to North Africa with them, and has been with the squadron every day during its fighting in North Africa, over Pantelleria, in Sicily, and other Mediterranean objectives, except for a 2,000 mile tour of the front lines while the fliers were getting final combat training and as the Allies were mopping up the Germans and Italians in Africa in May.)

The medals themselves have not yet been received at the 99th Squadron's Sicilian base, but will be proudly worn as soon as delivered.

SUCCEEDED BY CAPT. GEORGE ROBERTS

Lt. Colonel Davis' transfer to command of the fighter group, an aerial unit at least three times as large as his overseas command, comes as a result of his leadership of the first Negro aviation squadron ever in combat for the United States.

It was under his skillful guidance, favorably commented upon by the highest ranking American and Allied officers, that the Ninety-ninth helped to subjugate Pantelleria and Sicily, and is now poised to join the first Air Forces units to be based on the European mainland, now that Italy proper has been invaded.

He was succeeded in the leadership of the squadron by Captain George S. Roberts, operations officer, who became the commanding officer on September 2.

AWARDS FOR MERITORIOUS ACHIEVEMENT

The awards of the medal to these twenty-six Negro eagles was for "meritorious achievement while participating in ten (or more) sorties against the enemy." The formal announcement of the honoring of the fliers came from the Twelfth Air Support Command by Major General Edwin House, commanding general, and the awards were made in the name of Supreme Commander Eisenhower. The roll of honor is as follows:

First Lt. JAMES T. WILEY, 705 Woods Run avenue Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.
First Lt. GRAHAM SMITH, Ahoskie, North Carolina.
First Lt. LOUIS R. PURNELL, West Weaver street, Germantown, Pennsylvania.
First Lt. LEE RAYFORD, Ardwick, Maryland (and Washington, District of Columbia).
Captain CHARLES B. HALL, 1034 East Hendrick street, Brazil, Indiana.
First Lt. WILLIAM A. CAMPBELL, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama.
First Lt. HERBERT V. CLARK, 810 East Sixty-seventh street, Cleveland, Ohio.
First Lt. CLARENCE C. JAMISON, 2252 East Eighty-fifth street, Cleveland, Ohio.
First Lt. CHARLES W. DRYDEN, 800 Home street, the Bronx, New York City.
First Lt. WALTER I. LAWSON, Newtown, Virginia.
First Lt. JAMES B. KNIGHTEN, 1130 Mount Greenwood street, Tulsa, Oklahoma.
First Lt. SIDNEY P. BROOKS, 3709 East 142nd street, Cleveland, Ohio.
First Lt. WILLIE H. FULLER, Tarboro, North Carolina.
First Lt. ALLEN G. LANE, 205 Cherry street, Demopolis, Alabama.
Second Lt. SPANN WATSON, 122 J street, Hackensack, New Jersey.
First Lt. SAMUEL R. BRUCE, 319 Twelfth street, Seattle, Washington.
Captain LEMUEL R. CUSTIS, 67 Pliney street, Hartford, Connecticut.
Lt. Colonel BENJAMIN O. DAVIS JR., Washington, District of Columbia.
Second Lt. JOHN W. ROGERS, 1552 Linn street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
First Lt. WILLIE ASHLEY JR., 212 West Bartlett street, Sumter, South Carolina.
First Lt. GEORGE R. BOLLING, 24 Cummings avenue, Phoebus, Virginia.

Captain GEORGE S. ROBERTS, 317 Quarry avenue, Fairmont, West Virginia.

First Lt. ERWIN B. LAWRENCE, 2068 East Ninetieth street, Cleveland, Ohio.

First Lt. HERBERT E. CARTER, Amory, Mississippi.

First Lt. PAUL G. MITCHELL, 908 Howard road, S. E., Washington, D. C. (killed in action since August 13).

Second Lt. LEON C. ROBERTS, Murphy and McGee streets, Pritchard, Ala., recommended for Air Medal award but believed omitted from list announced here through a stenographic error.

CUSTIS NEW OPERATIONS OFFICER

Captain Lemuel R. Custis has been named the new operations officer, the post previously filled by Captain Roberts. The other posts in the squadron remain unchanged, with First Lt. Henry M. Letcher of Washington, D. C., as squadron executive officer; Lt. Bernard Proctor, of Philadelphia, as squadron adjutant; and First Lt. James L. Johnson Jr., of Washington, one-time Naval Academy student, as assistant intelligence officer.

Appointments of Lts. Letcher, Proctor, and Johnson were made on August 22, as previously reported in the Guide. Lt. Letcher is the first in the squadron to be executive officer, a position created by a new table of organization effective on July 1 throughout the Air Forces.

He continues his duties as transportation and special services officer for the time being, and as executive officer is second in command and directs and coordinates the work of all ground units, commanding the ground echelon in the absence of the commander.

ORDERS COME, MOVES FAST

Knowledge of the new assignment for Lt. Colonel Davis came suddenly and dramatically to members of the squadron.

Complying with instructions phoned Wednesday night, September 1, Lt. Col. Davis flew his own Warhawk plane to North African Air Force headquarters in Sicily early Thursday morning, returning before noon to his unit's base with his orders.

He was packed and ready to leave at one p. m. at the same time this correspondent was to leave on an assignment to England, and who by pure coincidence had planned his own departure on that day more than a week previously.

SAYS MODEST FAREWELL TO SQUADRON

Lt. Colonel Davis told the assembled squadron and its large complement of ground force officers and men of his new assignment, modestly disclaiming credit for its success during a review of its colorful history.

He said: "Over here we have come through a great transition. We are now seasoned veterans. No question about it. I like to feel that I've been part of that transition, but I do not claim the credit for it. It has been a matter of teamwork, and if credit is due anywhere it is to us all collectively.

"We all should feel proud to have participated in this adventure. I do. It has been a great honor to have commanded such a unit."

The officers and men heartily applauded their departing "Old Man," as he is affectionately known.

THANKS HIS ABLE CREW CHIEF

Lt. Colonel Davis then called forward his crew chief, Sergeant Vernon A. Watson, shaking his hand and thanking him for keeping his fighter-bomber plane in condition throughout its combat.

The tall, soldierly West Pointer and this correspondent were then driven to the airfield, where the transport plane awaited them, by Lt. Benote H. Wimp of Chicago, squadron supply officer, who was the last to bid farewell and godspeed to the pair.

ITALY IS FLIERS NEXT STOP

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Algiers — That the Negro fighter pilots of the 99th Squadron will be among the first units of the Allied air arm to be based on the European mainland is one of the mathematical certainties deducted from the Invasion of Italy.

That is the view expressed here Saturday by an observer who has watched carefully every development in the use of colored American fliers in combat since the history-making squadron left the United States five months ago, through its roles in the successful Sicilian campaign.

Flying P-40 Warhawks, the most used fighter-plane by the American Air Forces in the African campaign, these now veteran pilots will add protective security and dynamic striking force to Allied operations.

PERFORMANCES EARN CHANCE

That assumption is based on the part they played in the great campaign in the island of Sicily, off the "toe" of the Fascist "boot" in the Mediterranean.

In this operation they helped provide air cover for Allied troop movements and shipping, as well as bombing enemy vessels and gun positions, strafing truck convoys and troop concentrations.

47a-1943

JUN 19 1943

Tuskegee Unit Now Operates from Some N. African Airfields

Afro-American   Baltimore, Marylan

Colored Fighters Separated Like No Other Unit; Nazis Bomb Fields; Lt.-Col. Davis Puts His Men First

BY OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in North Africa

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—The colored fighter squadron now on the battlefield in North Africa is unique—different from all others.

Admittedly an experiment, this unit has operated from several fields as an autonomous body with separate but sufficient equipment and supplies. In character and organization there is no other like it in the history of aviation.

Each man does many jobs, because the main weakness is the fact that the key men have to double in brass to make up for the lack of replacements.

Davis Takes Care of Men First

Everybody works hard, sleeps little, and eats much from Commander B. O. Davis, Jr., down to the two mascots—Tony and Junior—which the outfit picked up on its trek across the Dark Continent.

Lieut. Col. Davis was the last man to erect his tent and set his cot. He slept on the ground—with no time for comfort. The men are growing beards, but the officers shave daily, even though flying suits are soiled. Discipline is good, but nobody throws rank around.

The spirit of unity is so fine that officers get results without compulsion. Every [illegible] the chow line together—privates rubbing greasy elbows against greasy captains and lieutenants.

The crew chiefs tell the pilots what to do and there is no talking back. There is so much good material here and so many interesting young men with well known backgrounds back home, it breaks my heart not to be able to tell all the things they do.

Planes Roar All Day Long

All day long, outgoing and incoming planes roar, with dust lining the long runway and pilots grinning through sweat and fatigue as they relate what they saw, heard and did in the last flight. Lieut. Bill Campbell of Tuskegee has made the most flights. A flying fool, he is always upstairs. The pilots all love their P40 Warhawks and keep yelling for a shot at enemy planes. They are not cocky, but extremely confident.

Mascot Toney is very popular because he speaks four languages. He has the honorary rank of corporal. Junior, who lost his parents in the German bombing and was wounded in the arm and head, has the grade of staff sergeant.

The boys are souvenir rich. From German and Italian prisoners they obtained medals, insignia of generals and swastikas. Others found wrecked cars and motorcycles and repaired them. There is no end of helmets, watches and cameras.

Before I joined the outfit I had a few weeks of hotel beds and French food, but now back to chow and foxholes. There is plenty to eat but no regulations can keep the lads from bartering with Arabs for chickens, eggs and occasional young beef.

Enemy Bombers Visit

Since airports are always enemy targets, we employ much ingenuity in arranging trenches and camouflage, sometimes digging into a hill and other times draping the sides of a pup tent over a ditch. If rains came we would be washed away.

Dawn patrols take off at 4 or 5 in the morning and the roar of planes awakens everybody. Pilots and crews get coffee before the takeoff, and lazy correspondents (Tom Young and I) eat breakfast with them upon their return, perhaps around 7.

Enemy planes still come back to this field like homing pigeons, because a few weeks ago Nazis lived where we now roar of planes awakens everybody. Pilots and crews get coflive. They are not all rounded up yet.

Some Arabs Hostile

Pro-Nazi Arabs keep everybody armed to the teeth except correspondents. I feel positively naked and my feet are my only protection.

Capt. Maurice Johnson, of Washington, medical officer, has little to do, we are thankful to say, as the men are in fine, physical shape. We are given regular doses of atabrine for malaria, but pilots get quinine, which is better for the nerves.

WAR DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCEMENT

WASHINGTON.

The War Department, here, officially announced today that colored flyers participated in the battle of Pantelleria, marking their first appearance in overseas aerial combat.

FLY WARHAWKS INTO BATTLE AGAINST AXIS

Chicago, Illinois

Lts. Campbell And Hall Lead N. Africa Squad On First Mission

Chicago Defender

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Negro flyers played an active part in the incessant bombing which brought the Italian stronghold of Pantelleria to its knees!

War Department sanction to the release of a detailed account of this action was given here last week, thus confirming reports that the first colored aviation unit in the history of the United States had received its baptism of fire.

Pantelleria, Axis bastion lying little less than halfway across the Mediterranean from North Africa to Italy, fell late last week. And it is a known fact now, that fighter-pilots of the Negro unit contributed to its surrender. Not less than 16 sorties were carried out by Negro flyers in the 19-day air and sea attack on the island, which culminated in its fall.

Chicago Lad In Action

A Tuskegeean, Lt. William A. Campbell, won the distinction of being the first colored man ever to drop a bomb on territory of an enemy of the United States. He and Lt. Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Ind., completed an echelon led by Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., in the initial Negro-conducted bomb-run on Pantelleria. Lt. Col. Davis, a Washingtonian, is in command of the air unit.

Following this trio into action were Lts. Clarence Jamieson of Cleveland, Ohio; Lemuel R. Custis of Hartford, Conn., and James Wiley of Pittsburgh, Pa. Later, ten others added their names to the list of flyers who engaged in combat during the Pantelleria campaign. They were:

Lt. John W. Rogers of Chicago Ill.; Lt. Graham Smith of Ahoskie N. C.; Lt. George Bolling, Phoebus Va.; Lt. Herbert Clark, Little Rock Ark.; Lt. Willie Fuller, Tarboro, N. C.; Lt. Paul Mitchell, Washington, D. C.; Lt. Sidney Brooks, Cleveland, Ohio; Lt. Spann Watson, Hackensack, N. J.; Lt. Walter Lawson, Newton, Va.; and Lt. Louis Purnell, Germantown, Pa.

Sees Negroes In Major Role

Returning to the base from the bomb run in which he became the first Negro to lay an "egg" on the Axis. Lieut. Campbell declared he was "scared but I was determined to stay on the wing of the leader even if he carried me into the front door of enemy headquarters."

His return from the initial mission was without serious incident, though he taxied his plane into a bomb crater which had been left by American bombers during an attack on the field before it fell to Allied hands. Despite the fact that he has more hours' flying time than any of the members of his unit, this was the first accident Lieut. Campbell has had. Incidentally, the crater is now marked by a sign and officers consoled him with the assertion that it could have happened to any one of the seasoned veterans in the air corps.

Lieutenant Campbell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Campbell of Tuskegee institute, Ala. Four sisters and brothers are now in the armed services. One of these, a sister, is Miss Abbie Noel Campbell, of the WAAC. A fifth child is a volunteer war worker.

Born in Tuskegee, Lieutenant Campbell is the product of the institute. He received his degree there as well as his wings and U. S. Air Corps commission.

Military observers were high in their praise of the conduct of the pilots in their first action. The results obtained were declared "highly satisfactory" and reconnaissance reports indicated that the missions were consistently successful.

Questioned on their return from the "hot" air over the island, the flyers were at first unanimous in the admission that they were "scared to hell." However, after the second and third sorties confidence was completely restored.

This action combined with reports from England, give rise to the belief that American Negroes will play an important role in the long-threatened invasion of Hitler's European fortress, when that time arrives.

The Defender's London correspondent, in a weekend filing, declared that high military officials have attached great significance to the arrival there of Brig. Gen. Daniel Noce, America's greatest expert on amphibious operations.

In these operations, the correspondent reports, Afro-Americans are destined to play an important part since they constitute Engineer and Quartermaster units, upon whom combat troops will have to depend for supplies.

Tough Job Ahead

"Wherever we invade Europe, we'll need not only landing troops and fighting troops, but we'll need a great artery of supply so we can build railroads, highways and airfields," declared Gen. Noce.

"In short," he added, "we've got not only to prevent the enemy from using his highway or seashore as protection, but we must also convert that seashore into a highway of attack.

"Then we've got to convert a hostile beach into a port of entry and secure docks, report facilities and rail connections. When you remember we must do this instantly, whereas it usually takes years to build a port, you get a glimpse of what we're doing."

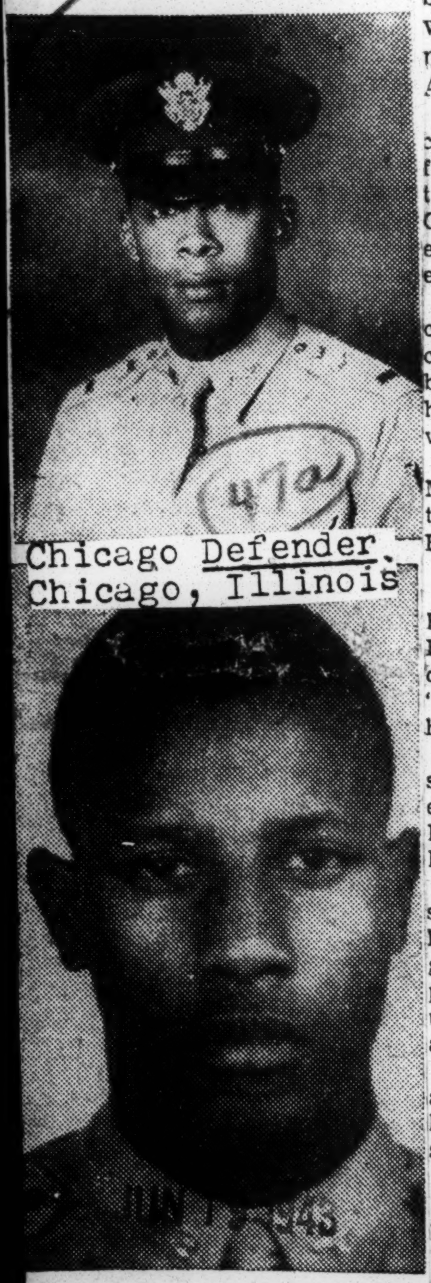
The consensus of opinion here is that the groundwork for such action is adequately laid and when the order to "go over" is given, American troops now stationed throughout the British Isles stand ready.

"I believe they are as well prepared for actual combat as any man we've ever sent into action," declared Major-Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, one of the high-ranking U. S. military observers now touring Britain.

General Gerow expressed this confident opinion after thousands of British and American troops had completed a strenuous three days' exercise "somewhere" in England this week. The mock battles represented the biggest attempt yet made to turn the two armies — British and American — into a smooth-working combined force.

JUN 1 9 1943

Lead Attack



Chicago Defender.
Chicago, Illinois

47a

JUN 1 9 1943

Honor of being the first Negro flyers to go into combat against the Axis foe went to Lieuts. William A. Campbell (above) of Tuskegee, Ala., and Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Ind. Campbell, Tuskegee-born son of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Campbell, comes from a patriotic family serving the nation. Four Campbells are in the armed service and a [illegible] is a war worker.

Defender
Chicago, Ill. 8 1943

SEP 18 1943

Nova Scotia Athlete First Race Pilot In Canada RAF

MAYOR CONGRATULATES FLYER

By MIKE RYAN
(Special to the Defender)

DARTMOUTH, N. S.—Big broad-shouldered Allan Selwyn Bundy is the first colored pilot in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Home here on leave after he received his wings and commission a few days ago at the Aylmer, Ontario, R.C.A.F. training school, Pilot Officer Bundy is looking forward eagerly to getting a crack at the enemy.

All Dartmouth is proud of the curly-haired Bundy who they recalled first as a promising school boy who sold newspapers to buy his books, then as a scholarship winner and champion athlete.

And proudest of all are Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bundy, the parents of the first colored pilot in the R.C.A.F.

Wants to Stay

After the war Pilot Officer Bundy wants to stay in the air force. His application is in and will be dealt with the same as many others. "I should have a good chance," he speculates.

He said this with a certain cocksureness that is typical of almost everything Bundy does. The reason? Bundy tells it himself. "I've been lucky all my life."

That recalled the time he was still on elementary flying. Two hundred and fifty feet off the ground he got into trouble. Bundy pulled the stick back...and woke up in hospital with a fractured skull and other injuries.

"It wasn't plane failure—not the aircraft—it was me," Bundy relates honestly. "I should have shoved the stick ahead."

Two Months in Hospital

Bundy had two months in hospital to think over his mistake which sent the plane crashing to the ground and caused him to be catapulted head first through the fabric covering of the cockpit.

"At first they thought I was going to die but I'm lucky and got completely better."

Luck has been with him since he can remember. At least Bundy calls it luck.

SEP 18 1943

Mayor L. J. Isnor of Dartmouth, N. S., is shown congratulating Pilot Officer Allan S. Bundy, Royal Canadian Air Force, who has just recently received his wings and commission, the first colored man to do so. He was a scholarship student and a champion athlete in his university days.

It was with him when it looked like he might have to leave school because he lacked money. An Imperial Daughters of the Empire scholarship he won for his work in chemistry fixed that up and he went to Dalhousie University in Halifax.

47a

He had one year to go for his science degree when he volunteered to serve in the air. His departure left a hole in the ranks of the university athletes that will not soon be filled. Bundy holds Maritime Provinces records for the mile run and pole vaulting. He also played on university basketball and football teams.

Now he's going into the biggest conflict the world has ever seen and he'll be on the greatest team ever assembled—the Allied air forces.

"I chose reconnaisance and I expect to be posted to a reconnaisance patrol soon," Pilot Officer Bundy says. He had the option of this or the fighter or bomber branches.

Reconnaisance appealed to him particularly because he was interested also in navigation. Special courses enabled him to qualify as navigator in addition to becoming a pilot.

Pilot Officer Bundy comes from a family who have their roots deep in Nova Scotia. The first Bundys were brought to Canada from the West Indies by the Duke of Kent, father of Queen Victoria, at the close of the eighteenth century to help build Halifax's fortifications.

Proud of Bundy

Among those who have paid tribute to Canada's first colored air force pilot is B. A. Husbands, president of the Halifax Colored Citizens' Improvement League. Husbands says

"Colored citizens all over Canada might well be proud of the fact that one of our own, Allan S. Bundy of Dartmouth (across the harbor from Halifax) has won for himself not only his wings but a commission in the growing ranks of the Dominion's sky fighters who are destined to play a leading role in crushing Axis barbarism.

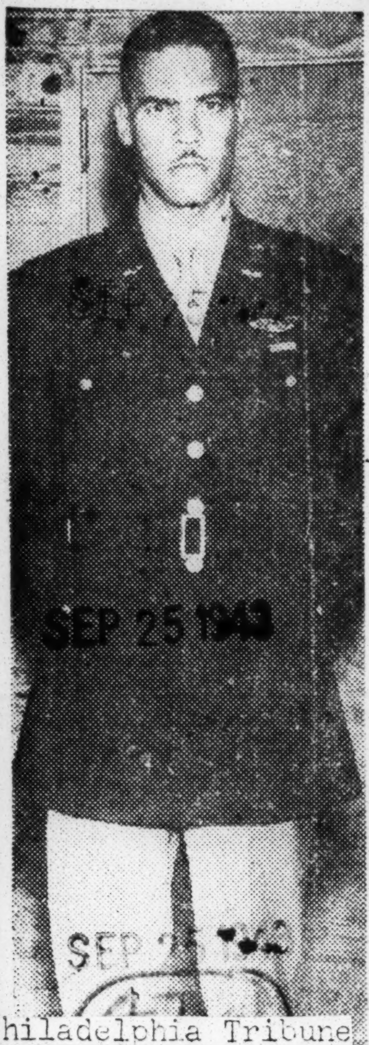
"Pilot Officer Bundy is typical of the spirit of all colored people of Canada. Each and every one who has come to know the joys of freedom is desirous of doing all in his power to see this struggle for the survival of democracy ended with unconditional surrender of the Axis as soon as possible. That same spirit, I feel, will carry our people through the post-war difficulties with greater effort than ever before displayed."

But Bundy is modest when his own achievements are talked about. The reason he'll tell you every time:

I'm lucky I tell you—I've been lucky all my life."

47a-1943

Gets Youth City Award



SEP 25 1943

Philadelphia Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

~~LT. COL. DAVIS~~

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., who will be presented the third annual Youth City award next Tuesday, at the Arena, 46th and Market streets, in conjunction with a benefit amateur boxing show which is being staged to "help save Youth City."

99th Brings Down 59 Enemy Planes

NOV 6 - 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

Fliers Have Had 700 Missions; Now With British 8th Army

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU
Accredited U.S. War Correspondent

(Copyrighted, 1943, by The Pittsburgh Courier Publishing Company. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden).

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY (Via Wireless)—After eight months' service with the British Eighth Army in the Western desert of Egypt and in Tunisia and Sicily, the famous 99th Pursuit Squadron has just finished one of the most dangerous but most successful weeks of its amazing "career" overseas. To date, the crack Tuskegee trained fighter pilots have completed nearly 700 air missions and have shot down and destroyed 59 Axis planes.

The 99th is now providing air support for the British Eighth Army here in Italy too. Composed of pilots chiefly from Hartford, Conn.; Providence, R. I.; Boston, and other parts of New England, the group has received splendid co-operation from white flying officers of the "Eighth."

HISTORY-MAKING WEEK

Our famous fighter squadron ran wild the past week in dive bombing operations which carried far to the enemy's rear. Among targets were important road junctions, bridges, supply depots and gun positions. The 99th pilots are back in action—bombing and strafing these moving and stationary targets—after a period of inactivity due to unfavorable flying weather at their previous base in Sicily.

Some of the dive attacks by the 99th have prepared the way for invaluable Eighth Army advances, particularly in the area of Castelmauro and Montefalcone and Torella, all of which were captured by our ground forces.

ENEMY SHIPS BOMBED

The crack foray of P-40 Warhawk planes of the 99th also scored direct hits on enemy ships in Guilanova Harbor and Roadstead along the Adriatic coast, 45 miles northwest of Pescara.

In one of several communiques, continually flowing to squadron bases from military chieftains at the front, our fliers were singled out for special praise after dropping three tons of bombs on a road junction which the enemy was using as an avenue of retreat.

GIVEN PERSONAL FREEDOM

This mission was led by Capt. George Spencer Roberts of Fairmont, W. Va., and, on this particular fighter sweep, Capt. Charles B. Hall, of Brazil, Ind., and the rest of the boys, had permission to pick their targets of opportunity and to use their own judgement. That was all they wanted to hear. Starting out at the break of dawn, the colored boys flew nearly 50 miles behind enemy lines and "did their dirt." Except for occasional flak hits, all 99th planes returned from these operations safely. Those whose planes were hit were, Captain Hall himself, and Lieuts. William Campbell, Tuskegee, Ala., and James T. Wiley, Pittsburgh, Pa. Hall's plane had flak holes directly under the cockpit.

IN "BIG LEAGUE" COMPANY

Since arriving in this theatre, the 99th has joined fast company and has been stepped up to the highest type of combat flying to which a squadron may aspire. Our pilots are bombing and strafing enemy targets in close proximity to our own forces—and they also bomb and strafe enemy gun positions shortly before our infantry moves into the same area for the "kill."

Many of the 99th Pursuit Squadron't missions have been on short notice. The boys are frequently dive bombing on targets within a short time after they have been assigned a mission.

Lieut. John F. Martin, of Culpeper, Va., accompanied the 99th fliers on their first mission in order to orientate them, and Lieut. Col. Charles E. Grogan of Indianapolis, Ind., acted as a squadron leaders for the second Italian mission.

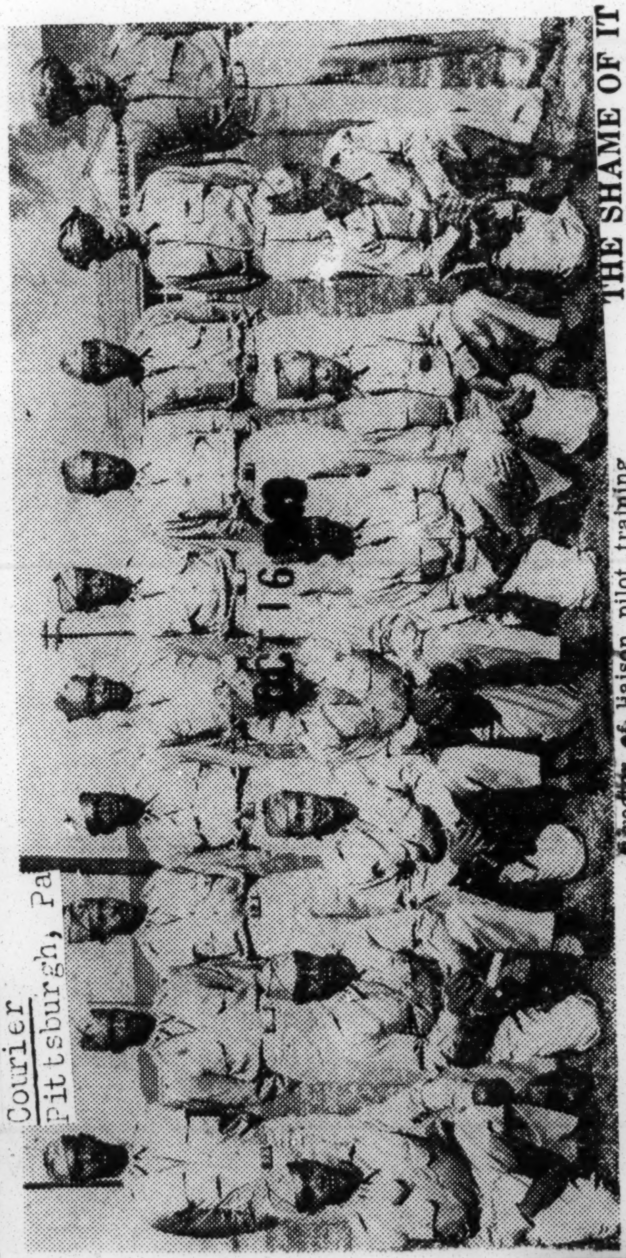
DANGEROUS ASSIGNMENTS

The type of work Captain Roberts and his pilots are now doing is as interesting as it is dangerous and his pilots are usually assigned to squadrons with a reputation for split-second timing and pin-point accuracy in bombing operations. They are operating between the Adriatic sea and Central Appenines in a terrain characterized by wooded areas, high peaks and numerous small rivers.

In recent operations four of our pilots, boasting a mere three months' service or less overseas, have put in their maiden sorties. These first mission lieutenants are Ellwood Driver, Trenton, N. J.; Henry B. Perry, Thomasville, Ga.; Price D. Rice, Montclair, N. J., and Clinton B. Mills, Durham, N. C., all of whom have been assigned to bomb enemy gun positions in this mountainous country.

CAISSONS GET WINGS AT TUSKEGEE

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa



OCT 16 1943

In keeping with expanded training facilities recently instituted at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, liaison pilot wings were presented to fledgling flyers of the Field Artillery this past week, marking the first graduation of its kind in the history of the field. Among the group of officers to receive their wings after nine weeks of intensive training are, standing, from left to right: First Lieut. James I. Minor of Washington, D. C.; Second Lieuts. James E. Woodson, Topeka, Kans.; Arnold D. Grant, Coffeyville, Kans.; First Lieut. William Y. Rose, Chicago, Ill.; Second Lieuts. Leander A. Hall, Jr., Mobile, Ala.; Lloyd R. V. Taylor, Atlanta, Ga.; Alvin J. Johnson, Chicago, Ill.; Capt. William H. Shannon, Chicago, Ill.; First Lieut. Charles T. Hood, assistant director of liaison pilot training and Capt. Errol W. Becthold, director of liaison training of the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Kneeling, from left to right: Second Lieuts. Aldrick H. Wilson, Chicago, Ill.; Benjamin F. Moore, Ocilla, Ga.; Darryl C. Bishop, Houston, Texas; Harry W. Dungil, Chicago, Ill.; Leonard E. Wilburn, Columbus, Ohio; Charles G. Dunn, Cincinnati, Ohio and First Lieut. Chauncey Eskridge of Washington, D. C. The graduating officers will receive their advance and tactical training at Fort Sill, Oklahoma.—Photo by TAAF.

OCT 6 1943

THE SHAME OF IT

OCT 23 1943

Infantry

Time Magazine, which is usually careful about its facts, had the following to say recently about the 99th Fighter Squadron in particular and Negroes in the armed forces in general:

"The question of the 99th is only a single phase of one of the Army's biggest headaches: How to train and use Negro troops. No theater commander wants them in considerable numbers; the high command has trouble finding combat jobs for them. There is no lack of work to be done by Negroes as labor and engineering troops—the Army's dirty work."

There it is—the stark, brutal truth. Shame upon our protestations that we are fighting for fair play and equal opportunity for all peoples throughout the world. Doubtless here lies the explanation for the amazingly high percentage of Negro inducted men who are rejected for alleged physical defects: the Army high command really does not want many Negro soldiers.

Houston, Texas

ORGANIZE RACE PARATROOPERS

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

DEC 25 1943

CHICAGO (ANP)—Negro soldiers are being formed into paratroop units. Those in position to know but who preferred not to be quoted, said they expected the unit to be activated about January 1. It is further reported that the unit will be the 501st Parachute Battalion and that it will be stationed at Camp Mackall, N. C., with all Negro personnel.

Paratroopers are air-borne troops and regarded among the cream of the Army.

DETROIT MAN LEADS RAID TO CAPTURE NAZIS

Anti-Aircraft Battalion Wins Plaudits For Sharpshooting

Defender Chicago. Ill

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—The first Negro combat battalion to go into action on European soil has brought down two more enemy planes, and captured four German prisoners, the War Department reported this week.

Now somewhere along the front lines in Italy, the 450th Antiaircraft Artillery (Automatic Weapons) Battalion, which received commendation recently from Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark, commanding general of the Fifth Army, for gallantry under fire, has further distinguished itself.

Sergeant Herbert C. Tyler, of 1031 Dubois street, Detroit, Michigan, is section chief of the gun crew officially credited with destruction of the two planes this week, bringing its total to four Nazi aircrafts destroyed.

47

This gun section was at its post one afternoon when an excited Italian farmer came running up to Sergeant Tyler, waving his arms wildly and pointing to a culvert about 800 yards from the position occupied by the section's guns. Sergeant Tyler quickly came around to the realization that something was in the culvert.

Snatching up his tommy-gun, and ordering three of his men to follow him with their rifles, Sergeant Tyler led the group to the culvert. In a short time they returned with four German prisoners, who surrendered without a struggle, and reported the existence in the culvert of a vast stock of lethal equipment, including mines, grenades, carbines, and TNT. It was brought out later that their mission was sabotage of army materiel.

The three men assisting in the raid on the culvert were Private Cleotha Robinson, Calvert, Texas; Private Willie Wiley, Pine Bluff, Ark., and Corporal James Austin, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Other members of the section include: Private James Robinson, Eastover, S. C.; Private William Staley, New York city; Corporal Clay Connely, Marion, N. C.; Private Fred Davis, Deberry, Tex.; Private First Class, H. D. Gober, Gainesville, Tex.; Private Booker T. Pollard, Fort Worth, Tex., and Private Simon Nixon, Palestine, Tex.

47

The 450th Antiaircraft Battalion received its basic training at Camp Davis, N. C., where the outfit was originally activated in June, 1942.

A direct descendant of the 100th Coast Artillery Regiment, the 450th was the first 40-mm unit to be created at Camp Davis, and also was one of the first to be organized in the United States Army.

The battalion received its entire preliminary training at Camp Davis, and was alerted to the port of embarkation in August, 1942—finally leaving the country about Christmas Eve, 1942.

In describing the high morale of the outfit, Major Arnold R. Johnson, assistant inspector of training for the Antiaircraft Artillery Training Center at Camp Davis and formerly commanding officer of Battery C of the 450th, recalled that one sergeant, when told he would not be sent overseas because of high blood pressure, cried and begged until he was included in the shipment order.

DEC 25 1943

---

2 Pilots Killed As Airacobras Collide In Air

Defender Chicago. Ill

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich. —(ANP)—Two Negro pilots were killed last Thursday [illegible] the mid-air crash of two single seat P-39 Airacobras.

OCT 23 1943

Their bodies were burned beyond recognition in the accident two miles northwest of Selfridge field and three miles northeast of Mt. Clemens, Mich.

The pilots were Second Lit. William H. Walker of Suffolk, Va., and Second Lt. LeRoi Shelton Williams, 221 East Harrison avenue, Roanoke, Va., both of the 199th Fighter squadron of the 332nd Fighter group, now in training here. They were on a routine training flight.

Lieutenant Walker's mother is Mrs. Braddy Walker. Suffolk, Va. Lieutenant Williams' mother is Mrs. Cordelia Shelton Williams, Roanoke, Va. Their fathers are deceased. Both were unmarried.

Lieutenant Walker was born on Jan. 20, 1919, in Keysville, Ga. He was educated in East Suffolk public schools, at Nansemond (county) institute and St. Paul college. Entering the army as an aviation cadet April 9, 1942, he took [illegible] training at Tuskegee Army Flying school. He reported to Selfridge with the 332nd on March 29.

OCT 23 1943

Lieutenant Williams was born on July 30, 1919, at Roanoke, and was educated in schools there and at Hampton institute Prior to reporting to Selfridge on August 30, he had taken nine months of flying training at Tuskegee Army Flying field.

Air Corps Segregation Hit By Time Magazine

Defender Chicago. Ill

The War Department's policy of providing segregated training for Negro airmen was criticized by the editors of Time Magazine this week who blamed the army command responsible for the segregated training and operation of the 99th Pursuit Squadron for the operational results obtained by the squadron now on active duty overseas.

OCT 23 1943

4

This criticism was made by Time editors in a note appended to a published letter written by Mrs. Agatha Scott Davis, wife of Lieut. Colonel Benjamin O. Davis Jr., who until recently commanded the 99th Fighter Squadron.

Mrs. Davis took the editors to task for an article which appeared in the September 20 [illegible] of the magazine in which they based their criticisms of the squadron on "unofficial reports," which the editors explained came from responsible sources which could not be quoted.

Her letter stated in part: "Are you justified in saying that the record of the 99th Fighter Squadron is only fair? My husband tells me that his judgment, based on comparison with the work done by six veteran P-40 squadrons in same area on the same types of missions over the same period of time, is that the record of the 99th Fighter Squadron is at least worthy of favorable comment.

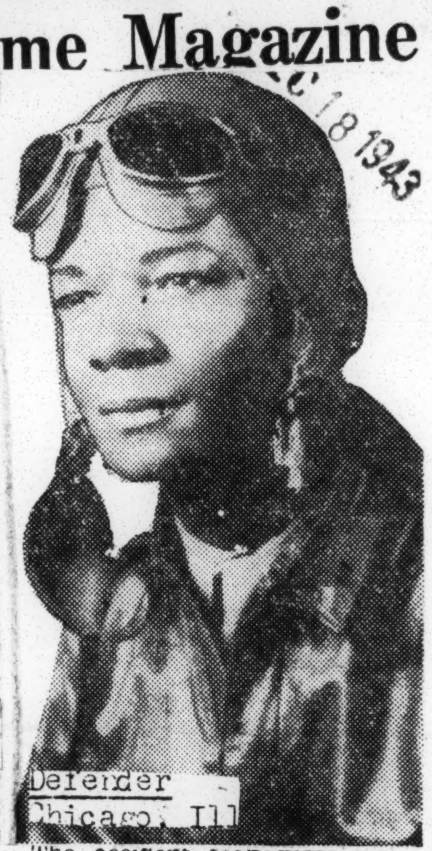
1a

"My indictment is that by publishing an article based on 'unofficial reports' you have created unfavorable public opinion about an organization to which [illegible] Negroes point with pride. You should realize that these few printed words in Time, words which may be creating a false impression, have struck at one of the strongest pillars upholding Negroes' morale in their effort to contribute to the winning of the war."

Pilot Killed as Combat Plane Dives into Lake

DEC 18 1943

DEC 25 1943



Defender Chicago. Ill

LT. NATHANIEL P. RAYBURG,

PEARL BEACH, Mich.—Second Lt. Nathaniel P. Rayburg, 26, of Washington, was killed when his plane crashed into a small lake near here Saturday.

The accident took place while Lt. Rayburg was on a combat training mission, according to an official statement from Selfridge Field, base headquarters. His plane fell into 27 feet of water and he was trapped inside, his body, however, was recovered.

Attended Howard U.

The pilot, who won his wings November 3, spent the Thanksgiving holidays visiting his mother, Mrs. Phillis Oliver, of the 3400 block of Twenty-third Street, South Arlington, Va.

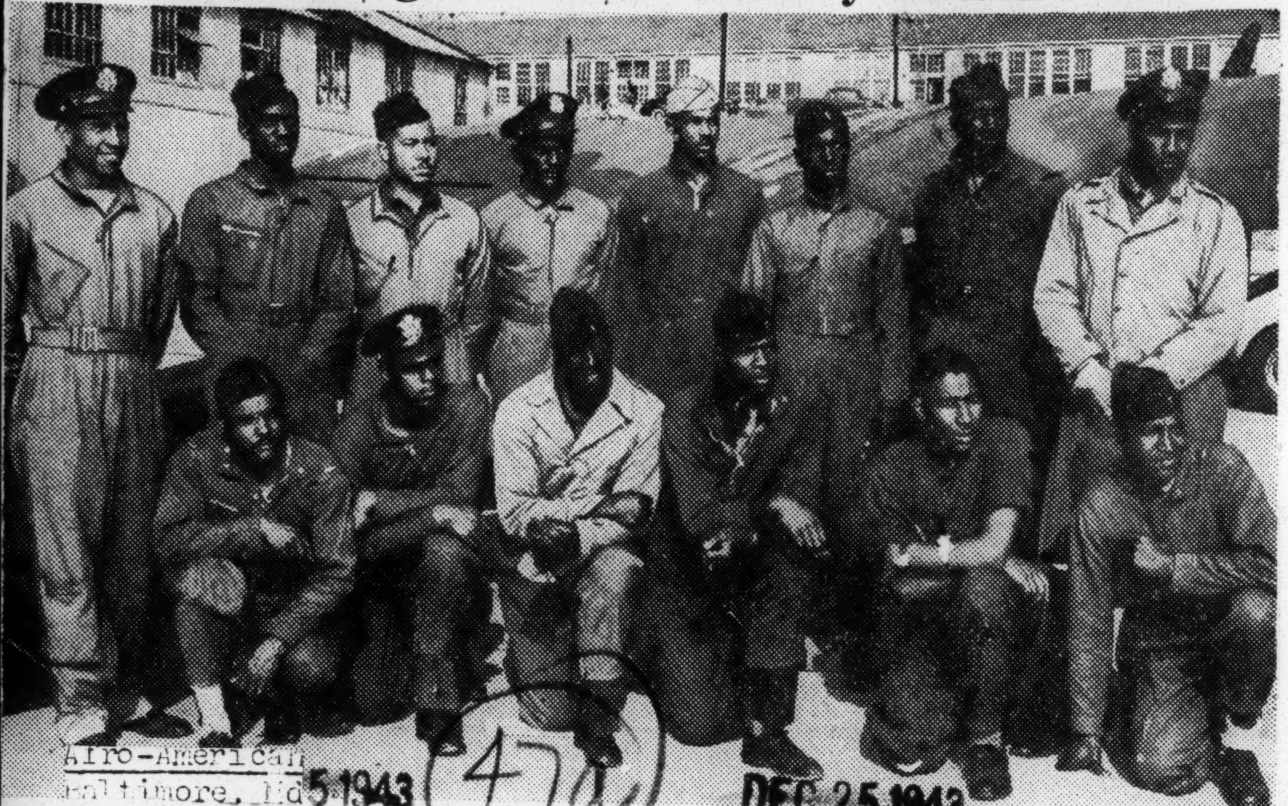
Born in Washington, Rayburg finished Armstrong High School, attended Howard University for two years and was studying engineering at the University of Illinois when he left to become a flying cadet at the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

He was a nephew of Mrs. Mildred Warner of Washington.

DEC 25 1943

47a-1943

Last Tuskegee-Trained Artillery Liaison Pilots



Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

DEC 25 1943

The final class of field artillery liaison pilots to be trained at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. They are, left to right, kneeling: 2nd Lt. Charles B. Elan, Troy, Ohio; 2nd Lt. Sterling K. Jackson, Chicago; 1st. Lt. Leo A. Baker, Fort Worth, Texas; 2nd Lt. Sherman W. White, San Antonio, Texas; 2nd Lt. George D. Conquest, Chicago; 2nd Lt. Wendell W. Long, Champaign, Ill; standing, 2nd Lt. Johnny Y. Brooks, Mineola, Texas; 2nd Lt. Maxwell Honemond, Tuskegee, Ala.; 1st Lt. Scott K. Cleage, Hamden, Conn.; 2nd Lt. George Woods, Cleveland; 2nd Lt. William H. Johnson, Tulsa, Okla.; 2nd Lt. Lemuel L. Tucker, Philadelphia; 2nd Lt. Edward W. Brice, Rock Hill, S.C.; 2nd Lt. Elwood A. Smith, New Orleans.

Nazis Bitter Over Use Of 'Non-Aryan' 99th

Defender
Chicago, Ill

NOV 13 1943

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—Infuriated and indignant, the Nazi oberleutnant complained bitterly to the American soldier as they lay in their beds in a German hospital.

The Messerschmitt pilot was angry indeed. Not only had he been shot down by an American—but by a Negro.

He haughtily asked how a nation like the United States could allow an inferior race like the Negroes to become pilots—and then to turn them against Aryans.

The American soldier, who had been captured in Sicily after his leg was seriously wounded, replied:

"Negroes are just as good as you are, and when they have education and training they make good pilots. The color of the skin doesn't make any difference."

But the German superman, downed by a member of the 99th Pursuit Squadron in Sicily, didn't understand Cpl. Rodney M. Graham of Atoka, Okla.

Corporal Graham, now back in the United States in an exchange of wounded prisoners of war, told the story this week on his return to this country. The bitterness of the Nazi airman was a tribute to the skill of the 99th pilots, who have been the butt of criticism from some sources in the air corps.

Corporal Graham, his round face very earnest, sat up on a stretcher as he told his story. Graham, who is one quarter Indian, was with a company of Paddlefoots, a company of Oklahoma Indians who landed in Sicily on July 10. He was shot in the leg by a Nazi sniper.

He was picked up 24 hours later and taken to a hospital where his leg was put in a splint. Eventually he was taken to Naples and later to hospitals in Germany and Austria.

Union
Cincinnati, Ohi

DEC 2 1943

COLORED FLYERS, FULL OF PRIDE AND GLEE, YET THEY WONDER WHAT, THEIR FUTURE WILL BE

By JOHN LARDNER

North American Newspaper Alliance

With American Fifth Army, Italy—The Negro flyers of the —— Pursuit Squadron were having a [illegible] of days off from their steady work of strafing and dive-bombing the Germans and covering Allied troops around the Sangro [illegible]. They were full of pride and glee in their work and serious and anxious about their future as flyers.

"If we can get regular Army commissions and the squadron stays a part of the Army," said Capt. Charles B. Hall, who comes from Brazil, Ind. "I think 85 per cent of us will go on as Army pilots after the war. We're all young and most of us come out of school and college to learn flying. If they give us a chance to show what we can do in this new work—all kinds of flying, combat and maybe commercial flying, too—I think it will help our people all over the United States."

This is a thought which occupies the pilots of the —— Squadron much more intimately than thoughts of death and danger. Their danger so far has come from the ground rather than the air. In the places where Capt. Hall and his fellows have flown their P-40s—at Cape Bon in Tunisia, over Pantelleria in Sicily, and now on the British Eighth Army's Italian front—German fighter-plane strength has been thin. But there is plenty of hullabaloo on the ground.

GERMANS PUZZLED

Germans [illegible] anti-aircraft guns are serious business. Other Germans on the ground are very strange and very funny.

"They fought so long," said Capt. Hall, "and here they still don't know what to do when our planes come over. They don't even know which way to go. They run or drive away from you and stay right in your gun sights."

There was the German in Italy who dashed out of doors in red pajamas and climbed a tree. First Lt. Price D. Rice of Montclair, N. J., picked him off just as he reached the topmost limb.

"What did he climb a tree for?" wondered Rice's comrade, 1 Lt. Herbert E. Carter. "That's the funniest thing I ever did hear of to get away from a plane."

Carter also had heard from a flying tutor, the celebrated Col. Philip G. Cochran, that an enemy motorcyclist was a weird phenomenon under strafing. He soon found a German motorcyclist for himself and discovered the colonel was right.

"The driver went straight up in the air for 20 feet and the motorcycle went on down the road," said Carter cheerfully.

Carter, 25, comes from a little town called Amory in Mississippi. He went to Tuskegee to learn veterinary medicine and qualify for the cavalry. Suddenly aviation in the form of civilian pilot training came to the Tuskegee campus in 1940 and Carter leaped at the chance to learn it. So did his wife and fellow student, Mildred, 21. They became licensed pilots together. Mrs. Carter now heads an Army telephone switchboard at Tuskegee. She has 150 hours in the air and wants to join the Women's Auxiliary Flying Corps.

FRIENDS OF ATHLETES

First Lt. James T. Wiley, one of the best and most successful pilots in the squadron, went through Pittsburgh University as a friend and frasort of all," says Wiley. "Flying waswill be potentially commercial which the white flyers who know ternity brother of the great Negron my mind and a career in that direc-flyers as well as killed combat fly-these men feel for them.

Olympic runner, John Woodruff. Mosttion. ers and instructors in the surviving of his closest college companions So he learned flying, became an ranks of the —— Squadron when were athletes. instructor at Tuskegee and in 1941 the war is over. There is no mistak-
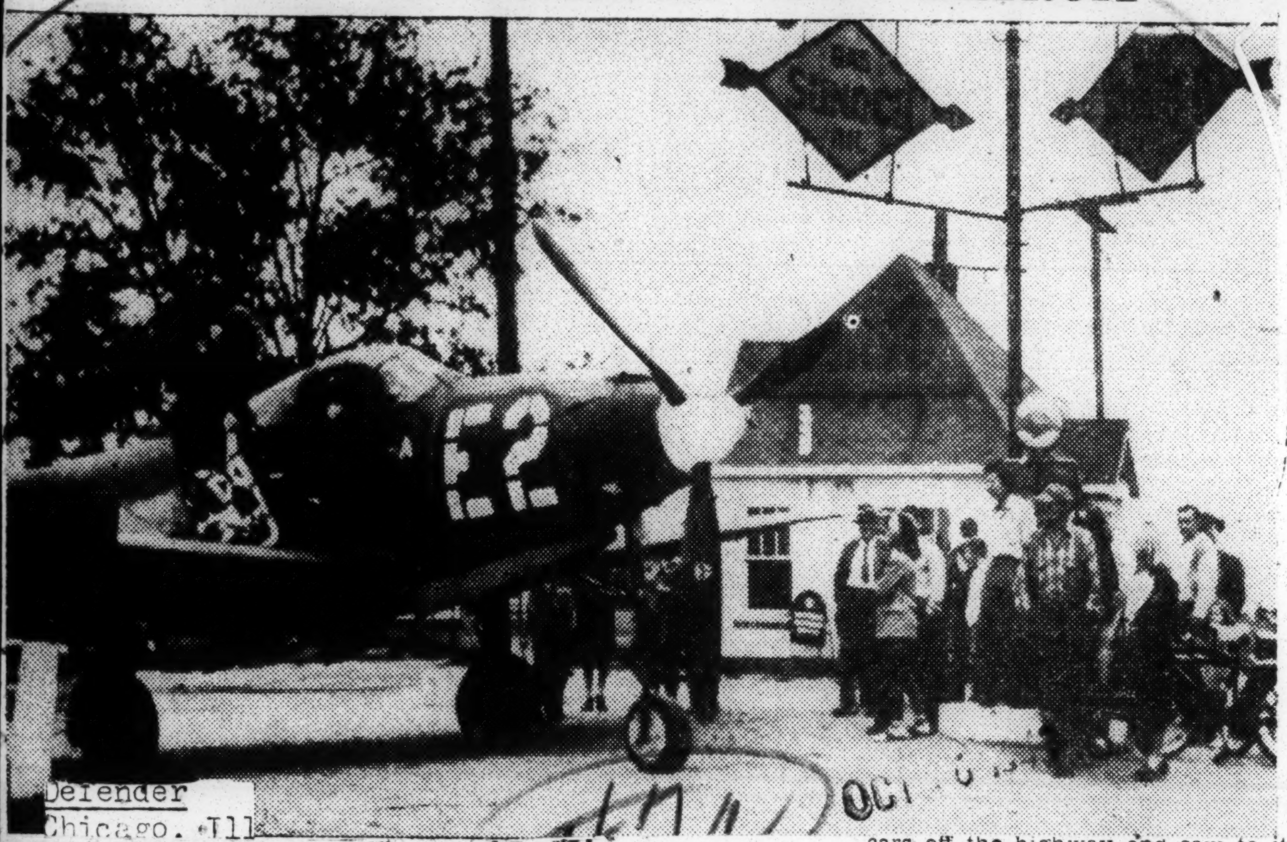
"But I didn't try anything of that joined the Army Air Forces. Thereing the respect and friendliness

LANDS ON HIGHWAY NEAR DETROIT



Defender
Chicago. Ill

After first waiting until traffic was clear, this P-39 Aircobra fighter plane from Selfridge Field, Mich., made a forced landing on the four-lane Northwestern highway near Detroit and then taxied up to his gas station to refuel. The station was unable to supply the fuel needed so a gas truck was sent from the air base. The plane was piloted by 2nd Lt. S. N. Ellington, who was on a routine flight when his fuel gave out.

OCT 16 1943

Selfridge Flyer Lands His Plane On Detroit Highway

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich. — (ANP)—That prospective post-war day when airplanes will be landed on automobile highways and taxied up to gasoline stations came Monday for Lieut. Spurgeon N. Ellington of the 100th Fighter Squadron. 332nd Fighter group, Selfridge field.

Lieutenant Ellington's P-39 Airacobra became isolated during a training flight during which his formation flew through a heavy overcast affording little or no visibility. Separated from his flight leader, he had no way of knowing where he was, so he descended through the overcast to get his bearings.

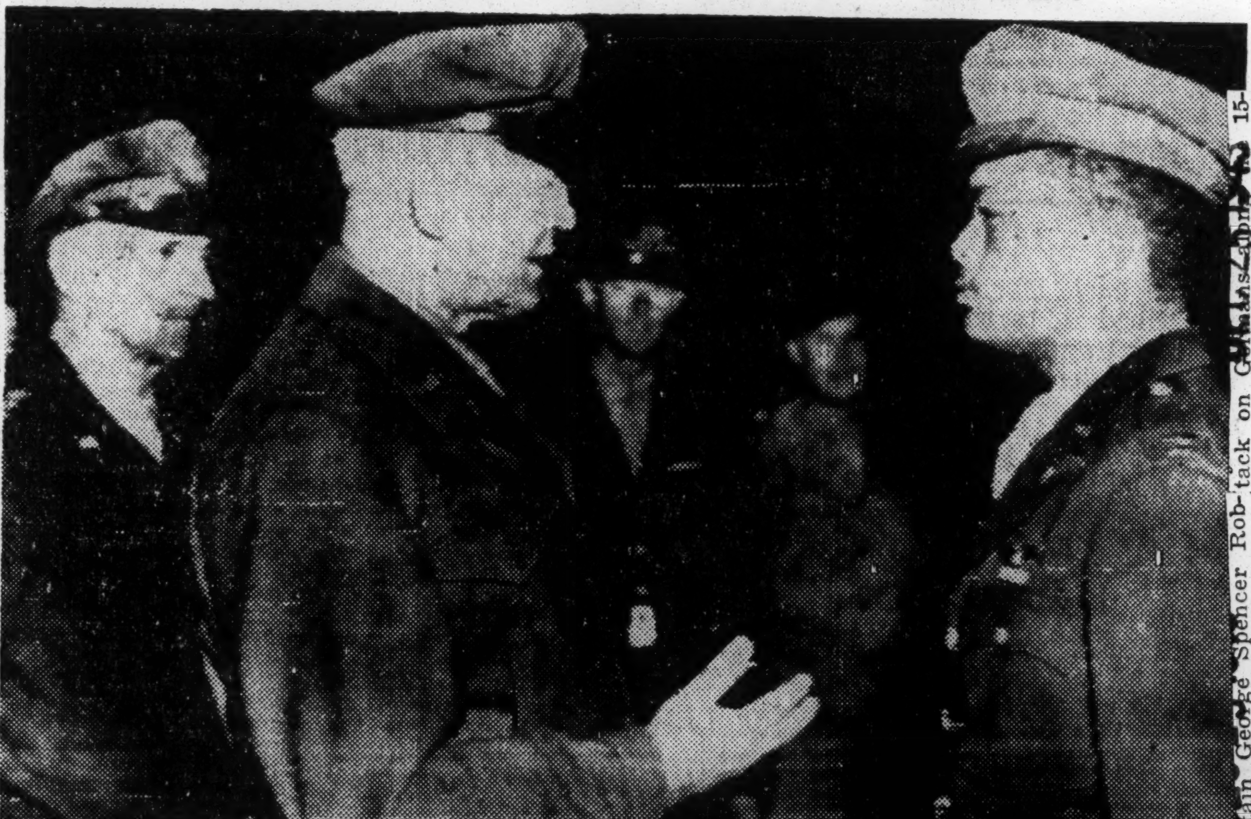
The pilot was unable to identify the terrain and his gasoline supply was running low. But he did spot a long stretch of four-lane divided highway which later turned out to be Northwestern highway in the vicinity of Nine Mile Road, Detroit. He circled the stretch enough times to catch a break in traffic then landed on the right-hand side, without injury to himself or the plane, and rolled into a corner gasoline station to get the Airacobra out of the road. All this caused some excitement among local householders and passersby, it was reported.

Borrowing a convenient telephone in the service station, Lieutenant Ellington called Selfridge Field to report and ask for orders. He was told by his group headquarters to stand by. The group dispatched a reconnaissance car bearing gasoline and Lieut. Floyd E. Lambert, an experienced supervisory pilot.

Lieutenant Lambert reported that the added fuel was unnecessary and that he was able to take off from the highway without difficulty. "There was no trouble at all," Lt. Lambert explained. "He had plenty of gasoline for the return trip. All the automobile drivers were stopping anyway, and they were very cooperative. They pulled their own cars off the highway and saw to it that traffic was stopped for a mile or so while I made the take-off."

Lieutenant Ellington's home address is 1302 North Highland avenue, Winston-Salem, N. C. Lieut. Lambert's home address is 1228 North 15th street, Birmingham.

GENERAL ARNOLD TALKS SHOP WITH 99TH LEADER



Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

Captain George Spencer Roberts, Fairmont, W. Va., commander of the famous 99th Pursuit Squadron, talks shop with General Henry H. (Hap) Arnold, chief of the U.S. Air Forces, at an Allied airport in Italy. The general visited the unit during his tour of the new Allied air fields after returning from the Middle-East conferences. Directly behind General Arnold is Lt. General Carl Spaatz, chief of the A.A.F. Mediterranean sector. Captain Roberts last week was credited with leading his 99th flyers through a successful attack on Germans 15-mile long Adriatic line.—Signal Corps Telephoto from INS.

47a-1943

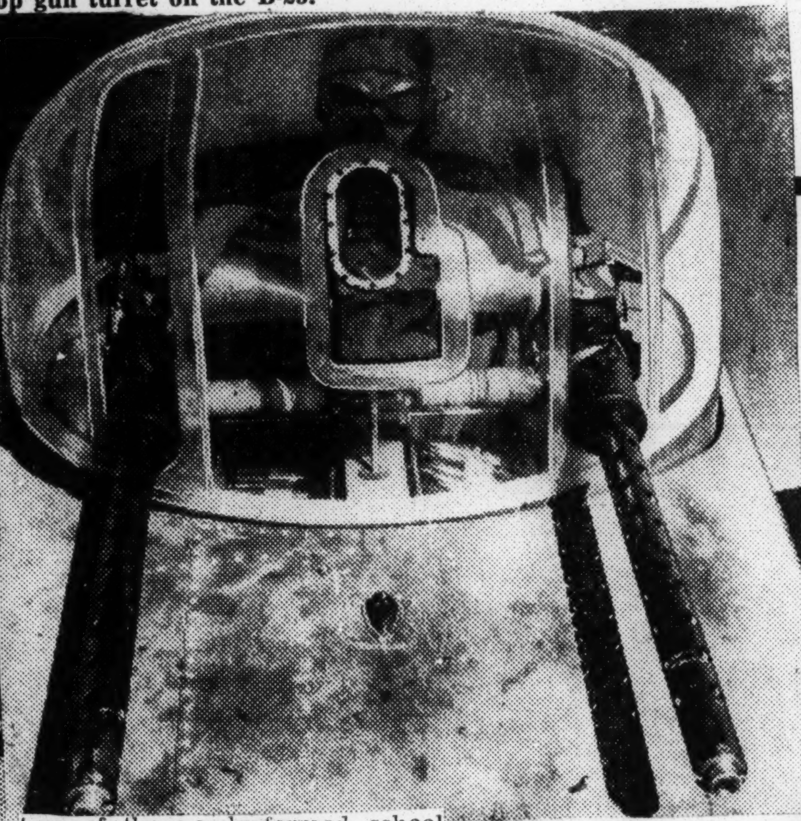
Here's the B-25 North American Bomber Our Boys Are to Flv

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

4'1a

North American B-25 Bomber in flight.   Side view of top gun turret on the B-25.

47a



Heretofore colored Army flyers have flown only fighter planes, with the pilot doing the navigating, bombing and shooting. B-25's carry a crew of five, have a range of 2,000 miles and speed of some 300 miles per hour. Armaments and calibre for the most part are military secrets. The B-25's power-operated gun turret atop a fuselage houses two .50-calibre machine guns. Some models have a tail gunner (All later models now show a tail guner). Airplane mounts special fixed forward-firing guns in addition to the swivel mounted guns on the nose. The 5-man crew consists of: pilot, co-pilot, bombadier, radio operator-gunner. armorer-gunner. Air ceiling of the plane 26,500 feet.

Twin-Engine Training Begins At Tuskegee

Bee (Magazine Section

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., Oct. 14.—The second dream of air-minded Negro youth of today materialized into a reality, as twin-engine training officially started last week at the Tuskegee Army Air field.

OCT 17 1943

With the advent of the first all-Negro Fighter squadron to combat, in single-engine P-40 Warhawks, the question immediately arose as to the possibility of an all-Negro bomber squadron.

47a

The question was answered when the War department sanctioned the training of Negro cadets in the arduous task of becoming multi-engine pilots, here at the home of the first all-Negro Fighter Pilot squadron now engaged in deadly combat over the war-torn skies of Europe.

Selected to head this new school, the first of its kind anywhere in the world, is Major Clay Albright, the man who has taught every Negro fighter pilot in the Army Air forces today, how to fly fighter aircraft. Lieutenant Milton B. Hall of Owensboro, Ky., is assisting him in an administrative capacity. Instructors of the newly-formed school are 1st Lieutenant Leonard B. Crozier and 2nd Lieutenant Robert B. Meagher.

Pilot trainees for twin-engine training here will be selected from the upper basic class of cadets. They are to receive 70 hours of advanced flying training here and then be transferred elsewhere for actual bomber pilot training.

Chicago, Ill.

The type of aircraft to be used in the twin-engine course here, is the AT-10 BH (Beechcraft). This plane is referred to as an "assimilated loaded bomber," as its altitude in flight is comparable to that of a medium bomber with a full load of bombs. All the ingenuity and skill required of a bomber pilot is necessary in flying the AT-10 trainer.

For the highly technical job of maintenance, instructors from Turner field, Georgia, have been attached here to familiarize our mechanics in the fundamental knowledge of keeping these ships aloft.

Mascot Of 99th Fighter Squadron Is A Good Soldier With Quick Wit

Journal and Guide

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

IN SICILY—(Via Air Mail, Delayed) — "Junior" turned out to be more than just a good mascot for the 99th Fighter Squadron. He became an excellent soldier.

Perhaps that is why, more than any other reason, the members of this first Negro Air Corps tactical unit have come to like him so well, and why they are so careful not to lose him. Their one serious concern now is how they can get Junior back to the United States after the war.

Norfolk, Virginia

Junior was adopted by the enlisted men in a ground echelon traveling across North Africa to Cape Bon early in June. He said both his parents had been killed by the Germans at Algiers. Outfitted with second hand clothes "requisitioned" from the squadron's smallest members, Junior has learned to be a real soldier.

HELPED INVADE SICILY

He wears a water canteen and first aid kit, and is self-appointed provist marshall (junior grade) for the dozens of native children which "infest" the squadron's camps.

Junior made the invasion of Sicily with less than a casual concern for the hazards involved, and wouldn't listen to any talk about turning back with a trip to Italy in prospect.

(Since this article was written the 99th has moved over to Italy with Air Forces supporting the Fifth Army. Presumably, "Junior" made the trip with the squadron.—EDITOR)

Quick to pick up American ways and slang, Junior has a squelcher for the boys when they tease him by calling him "Ma-look," (meaning Moroccan). He snaps back, "I got your Marook."

SOLDIER OF FORTUNE

He doesn't know what his name is so everybody calls him simply "Junior." He says he is 13 years old, but he doesn't look a day over nine.

Junior hasn't always had a monopoly on the paternal instincts of the men in the 99th. There was once another mascot whom they adopted about a week earlier and who by all Army protocol, in view of his seniority, should have been top-kick mascot.

His name was Tony, a soldier of fortune who attached himself to the unit and for a while served (when he could be found) as tent boy or orderly for Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., commanding officer of the 99th at that time.

At first everybody tried to pin the name of "Rochester" on him, but it didn't stick. His chief asset [illegible] command, in varying degr[illegible] of four languages—Arabic, Spanish, French and English.

WAS "DISCHARGED"

He claimed to know some German and Italian, too, but he didn't stay with the squadron long enough to put those languages to use. Tony was "disinherited" or "dishonorably discharged" before the group went over to Sicily.

Tony said he was 15 years old. Everybody d[illegible]ted it but nobody mad[illegible] issue of the claim. When he was five, he said, his mother and father, w[illegible]lived at Tangier, went t[illegible]ew York and left him with friends.

In a few days he had wandered into a soldier's camp and his career as a professional mascot was started. Once in the 99th, he was outfitted with sawed off and shrunken clothes by the smaller men in the squadron. His military background enabled him to become quickly acclimated to his new surroundings.

His father's name, he insisted, is Antonio Garcia, that his is Tony. It was presumed that if he had any such thing as a legal name, it was the same as his father's.

CREATED PROBLEMS

Whatever his past, nobody asked a lot of questions about it. It was obvious that he was hundreds of miles from the place he last called home.

So Tony became a "member"—honorary, ex-officio or non-participating— of this squadron.

The team of Tony and Junior created its joint and separate problems. First the boys had to stop Junior from drinking wine. Then they had to take away from both of them the Italian rifles they had found in North Africa. Next was the job of eliminating the professional jealousy between them.

The cast-off shirt that Junior got had sergeant's stripes on it while Tony's had only those of a corporal. The trouble is that Tony had seniority over Junior. So when Junior "threw his rank" on Tony and ordered him to get a glass of water only the intervention of some of the soldiers prevented a fist fight.

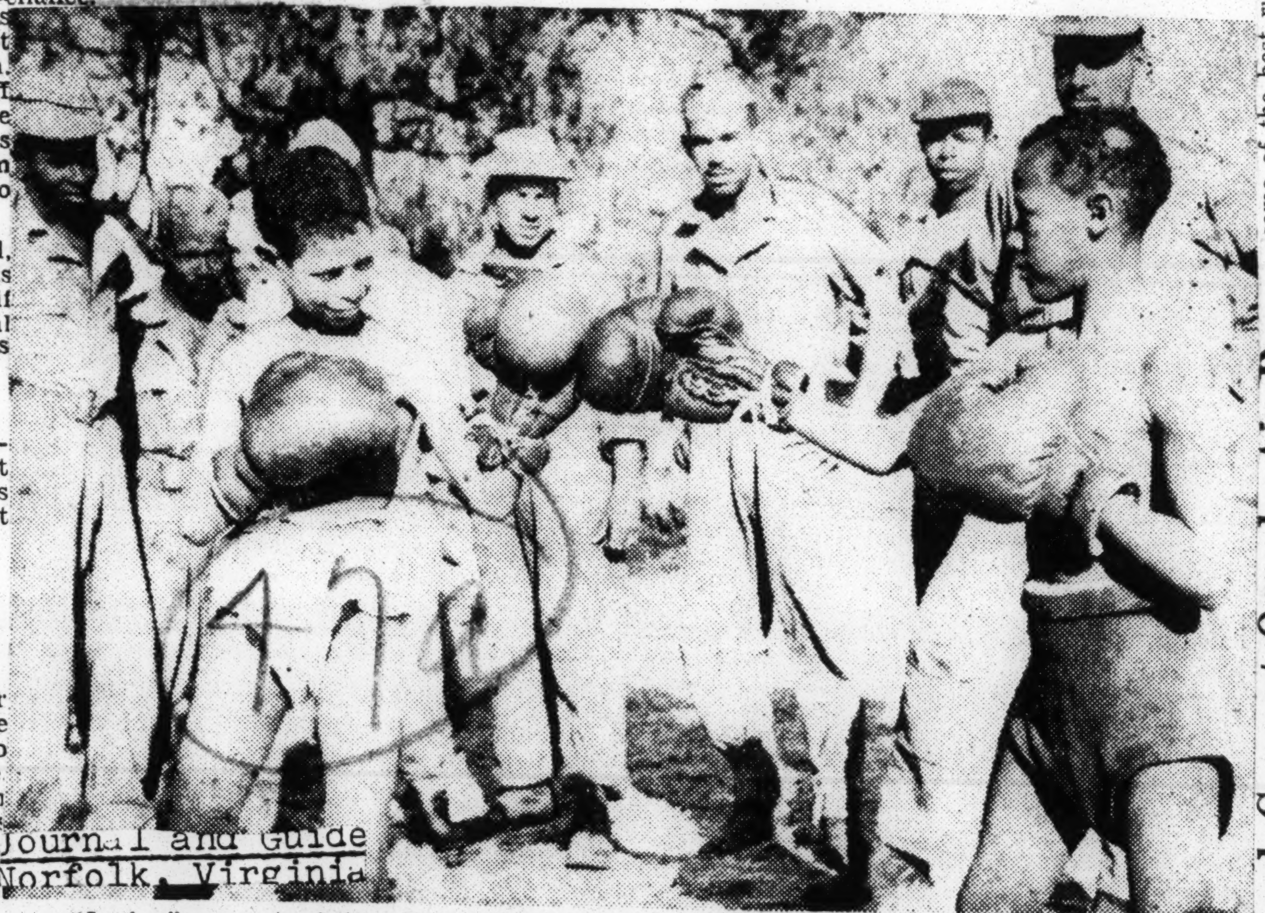
SENT HOME

Tony has the cunning, though. One Sunday afternoon Junior went to the Colonel ([illegible]hat's Col. Davis) and said [illegible]anted to go back to Algiers. Pressed for a reason, he admitted that Tony had pers[illegible]ed him to ask for his release, and had backed up that persuasion with a 100 pound note (that's two dollars).

Incidentally, on pay day everybody, almost, gave Tony and Junior money. There were few places to spend money around the camp, so it had little value. Generosity, under the circumstances, was an easy virtue. But when it was discovered that the sum collected by these kids was actually staggering, ways and means of borrowing back some of the money were found.

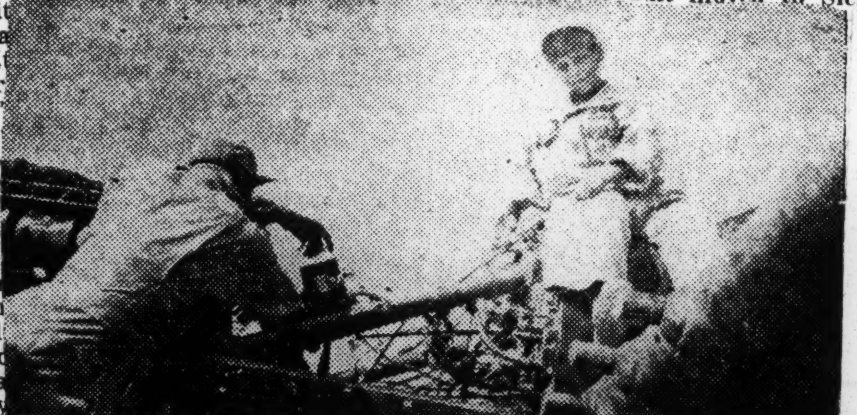
There was ample room for both mascots, but when Tony was caught with some "reefers" in his possession, Col. Davis deemed that conduct unbecoming to a soldier and sent him back to Morocco. That left the field wide open for Junior to work himself deep into the hearts of all the men in the 99th.

And Junior didn't muff that chance.



Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

"Junior," mascot of the 99th Fighter Squadron (left), boxes with Tony, another mascot who was "dishonorably discharged" before the unit moved to Sicily from North Africa.



"Junior" was in, and into, everything. Here he is perched on the cowling of a P-40 Warhawk as it is being repaired by a member of the famous squadron. (Photos by Guide war correspondent)

Planes of 332nd Get Good Care at Oscoda Air Base

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

OCT 30 1943

Members of the Ninety-sixth Service Group checkup on planes at Oscoda Field.

By DOUGLASS HALL
Staff Correspondent

OSCODA FIELD, Mich. — This is Selfridge Field's battlefront training ground. There are new planes and other equipment, most of the 96th Service Group that is attached to the 332nd Fighter group, and an ideal set-up for what they are doing.

Much of this can't be told because there are too many Axis ears open, but the group is getting instruction in gunnery, night flying, radio, camera, formation flying, etc.

Dog Fights Real

Pilots climb high into the air and put on realistic "dog-fights." They don't actually fire on each other, but when a plane gets in a position from which an "opponent" could [illegible] shot, the "enemy" is theoreti[illegible] out.

Guns Complicated

Those .50-calibre machine guns on the nose of the P-40's are blasting-away each day. The gun has about 200 parts and the pilot must learn each one of them. He must learn how to adjust and use various sights.

On the ground are models of various types of enemy aircraft and tanks, which the flyers must be able to distinguish from apparently identical American equipment.

Before coming here the boys had a little target practice with .30-calibre guns at Tuskegee. Now they learn how to be bombardiers.

Battlefront Simulated

Everything has been done here to make this as realistic a "battlefront" as possible. There is an out-door chapel, undergrowth some of the best run-ways in the States, Lake Huron, and ample space and conditions for maneuvers.

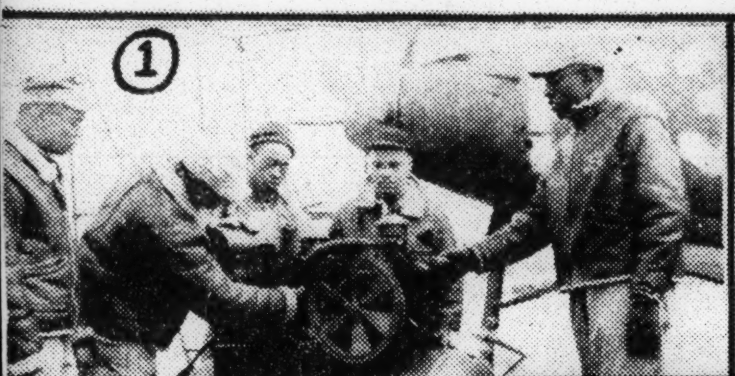
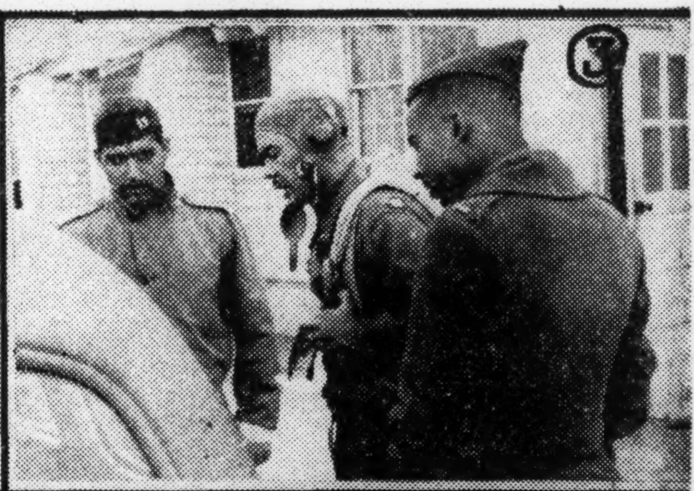
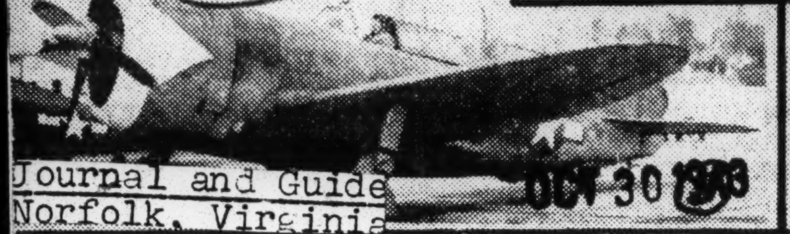
It is about 200 mile[illegible]m the main base—30 or 45 minutes by plane, depending on the wind.

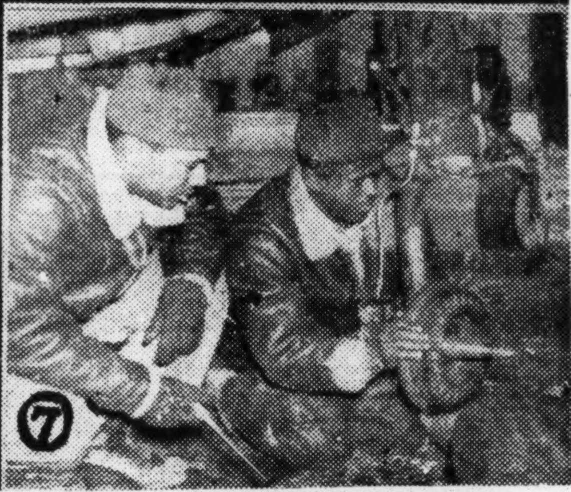
The 96th Service Group is also getting a bit of combat training in the most rustic manner. They are learning to protect the planes as well as to repair them; to defend the field as well as rebuild it.

A Day's Activities With The 332nd Fighter Group Pilots









47a

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

OCT 30 1943

LT. RAY B. WARE, Atlanta, Ga., group intelligence officer; LT. HENRY BOWMAN, Minneapolis, Minn., squadron armament officer, and LT. P. A. TOWNSEND, Kansas City, Mo., ordinance officer.

No. 1. Members of one of the ground crews repair portable air compressor. Sgt. Charley Haynes, St. Louis, Mo., is working on the engine while T/Sgt. James Jones, Montgomery, Texas line chief of the 100th fighter squadron, directs work (right). Others shown are, left to right, Cpl. John Merriwether, Sequin, Tex.; Pfc. Thomas Worsham, Detroit, Mich., and Sgt. Quentin Pettiferde, Xenia, O.

No. 2. Cpl. Elmer F. Godwin, Smithfield, Va., a radio mechanic, tests one of the sets from a P-39 Aircobra flown by the pilots.

No. 3. Top flight officers of the 332nd fig[illegible] confer with a base officer. Left to right, are Capt. George L. Knox, Indianapolis, operations officer; Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., commanding officer, wearing flying suit, and about to take off on a practice flight in one of the P-39's which his group now flies and 1st. Lt. Robert B. Tresville commanding officer of the 100th fighter squadron.

No. 4. Cpl. Willie C. Sykes, Jr., Suffolk, Va., group technical inspector, and Staff Sgt. Otis Owens, Dallas, Tex., a squadron technical inspector, examine charts on the status of aircraft repairs.

No. 5. This is one of the famed P.-47 Thunderbolts which are making such a remarkable record over Europe with the 8th Air Force. Pilots of the [illegible] received training in this type of plane also. At Selfridge and Oscoda, it is used chiefly for towing targets during gunnery practice. In the cockpit about to take off is Lt. James Y. Carter, Winston-Salem, N. C., [illegible]er student of Hampton Institute, and Bates College.

OCT 30 1943

No. 6. A close up of Lt. Carter about to climb into the P.47.

No. 7. T/Sgt. Tracy Woods, Danville, Ill., line chief of the 301st squadron looks on, at left, while Sgt. Ronnie Gray, Alliance, Ohio, repairs a landing gear wheel. (Exclusive Photos by Journal and Guide War Correspondent.)

Finished Mission; Lauded By Mates

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Lands at Field as Aviators App[illegible]handling of Ship—Gets Orders to Return to U. S.

NOV 20 1943

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU
Accredited U.S. War Correspondent)

Copyright, 1943, by The Pittsburgh Courier Publishing Co. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.)

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY—(Via Wireless)—Although the courageous bronze combat fliers of the now internationally famous 99th Pursuit Squadron have astonished the world for the past eight months with their death-defying feats on bombing missions in North Africa, Sicily and Italy, it remained for Lt. Herbert Van Allen Clark of Pine Bluff, Ark., to perform one of the most daring and miraculous feats of all recently, when he risked his life to prevent extensive damage to the expensive American P-40 Warhawk airplane he was flying.

The daring pilot—now on his way back to the United States to accept a new army assignment—negotiated a landing on a wheel and a prayer . . . a spectacular one wheel landing, one of the most difficult exploits in the science of aeronautics . . . instead of the conventional belly crash landing.

WHEEL OF PLANE RIPPED OFF

It all happened during a 99th bombing mission November 5. Clark was taking off when a plane from another squadron taxied out of the parking strip directly into his path. With mere seconds in which to act to avoid a collision, he expertly pulled the stick back and prayed that his plane had gathered sufficient speed to rise. The plane rose all right—but not high enough . . . The left landing wheel of Clark's machine became entangled with the propeller of the other plane and both the wheel and propeller were ripped off.

With his plane thus damaged, Clark, despite the episode, continued on the target mission. He dropped his bomb load and, when his work was done, turned his plane homeward to the 99th base.

With his entire array of squadron mates, all of whom had reviewed the accident, looking on in stark amazement and with an emergency ambulance, first aid and stretcher-bearing group on the scene—fearing a fatal landing was inevitable—Clark adroitly descended, his swift plane making a perfect one wheel contact and balancing it miraculously.

CHEATED DEATH

While the entire gathering stood there spellbound and unbelieving Clark stepped out of the fuselage pit of his damaged P-40, grease-stained and grim—but unhurt.

There was nothing but admiration and wonderment in the eyes and expressions of every man present, because there was not a single person present who did not realize that had the other plane's propeller hit the 500-pound bomb load attached under the belly of the fuselage of Clark's machine a disastrous explosion would have resulted.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Due to an error in the transmission of a recent cable, The Pittsburgh Courier carried [illegible] to the effect [illegible] Pursuit Squadron had accounted for 59 enemy planes. The story should have read that the fighter group to which the 99th is now attached had accounted for that number. The 99th has one "kill" (in the parlance of aviation) and seven probables to its credit.

NOV 20 1943

DRAMA INSERTED

Adding drama to the spectacular happening was the fact that, five minutes after Clark had landed and regained his normal composure, the mail clerk handed the copper-colored lieutenant his travel orders — a summons back to the United States from what had proved to be his last Italian flying mission and what, in fact, turned out to be his last flying mission of any kind.

Leaving this theatre of war with Clark were fellow Lieutenants William Campbell of Tuskegee, Ala., and Spann (Life Saver) Watson of Hackensack, N. J., the demon rescurer, of whom all were with the original fighter group of Negro pilots who went into action in North Africa. The [illegible] will be assigned with the [illegible] colored fighter group now in training at Selfridge Field, Mich. It will be remembered that Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., former commander of the 99th, was also recalled to the states recently and, at the present time, is serving as commanding officer of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field.

RAF Flyer Joins TAAF Faculty

DEC 4 - 1943

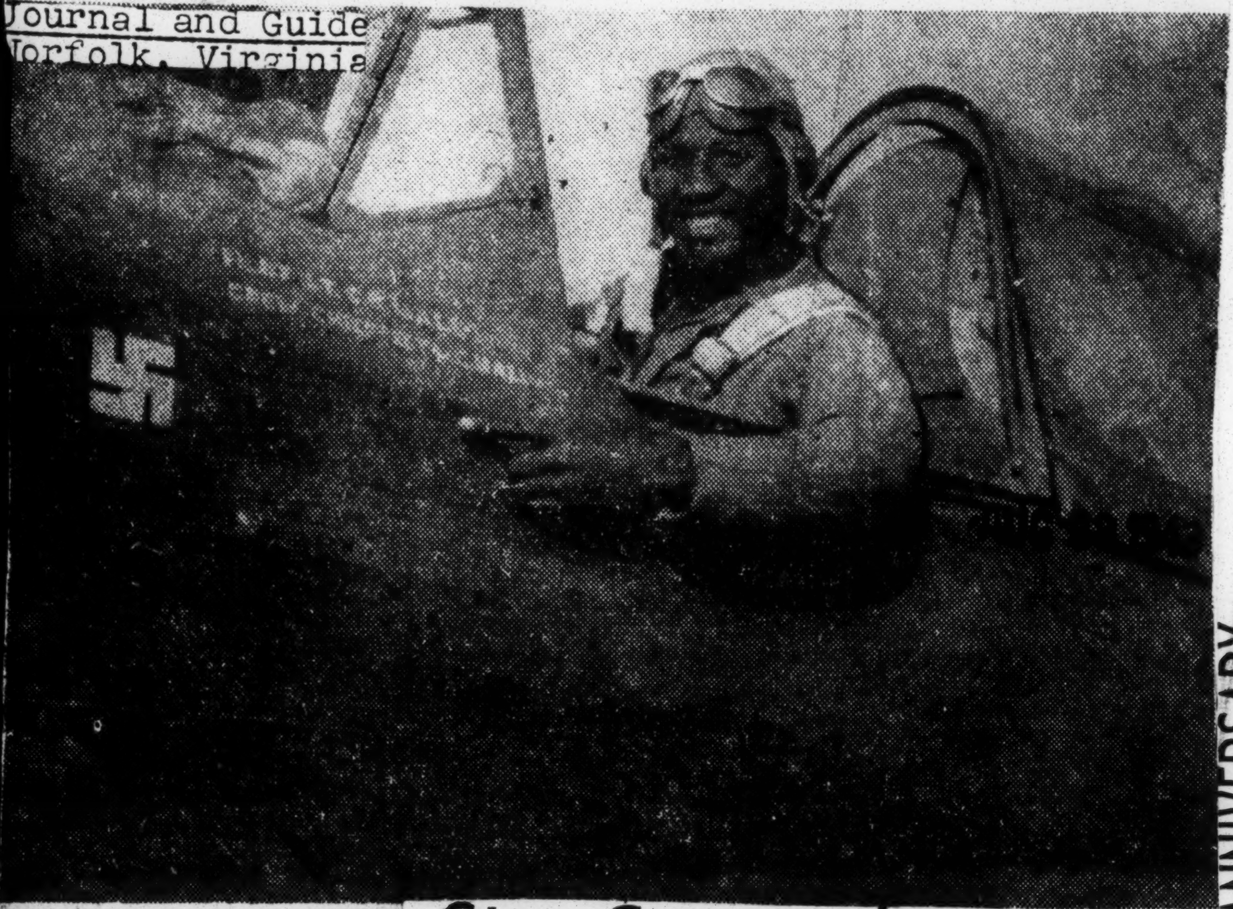
TUSKEGEE. — (ANP) — Capt. Fred Hutcherson, Jr., ace flyer and ferry pilot formerly of the Royal Air Force and the Royal Canadian Air Force, will soon assume his new duties as instructor at the Tuskegee Army Air Field according to an announcement last week. The noted aviator will pursue a refresher course at Moton Field before teaching primary flying classes.

When Great Britain entered the war in 1939, Capt. Hutcherson, who because of his color had been denied admittance in the S. Air Corps, went to Canada and entered the RCAF. He made many trips to England transporting materials of war to the mother country. Recognizing his ability the Canadians elevated him to the rank of captain and increased his salary to $1,000 per month. Later he was transferred to the RAF with the same rank.

Capt. Hutcherson is married to the former Regina Laurent of New Orleans. They have an 8-year-old son, Ford, III. The Hutchersons live in Asbury avenue Evanston, Ill.

Emblem Of 99th's First Aerial Victory

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia



The first German swastika painted on a P-40 Warhawk plane flown by the 99th Fighter Squadron, indicating an officially credited victory over an enemy aircraft, was put on the plane of Captain Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Indiana. The 22-year-old former football, basketball, and track star at Eastern Illinois State Teachers College, destroyed a German Focke-Wulf 190 on July 2. On the same day, General Dwight Eisenhower, Lt. General Carl Spatz, and Maj. General James his crew chief, S/Sgt. William Cyrus Hall, 24, of 8425 Vance avenue, Philadelphia, who is known to his buddies by that name. They are not related. The first "Knobby" was worn out in advanced training during the squadron's first month in North Africa, from where it helped batter Pantelleria into submission and then moved into Sicily for the invasion and [illegible]p there. Other pictures on pages 11 and 20. (Photo by Thomas W. Young, Journal and Guide War Correspondent)

Star Congratulates Pilots

DEC 25 1943

4.7a

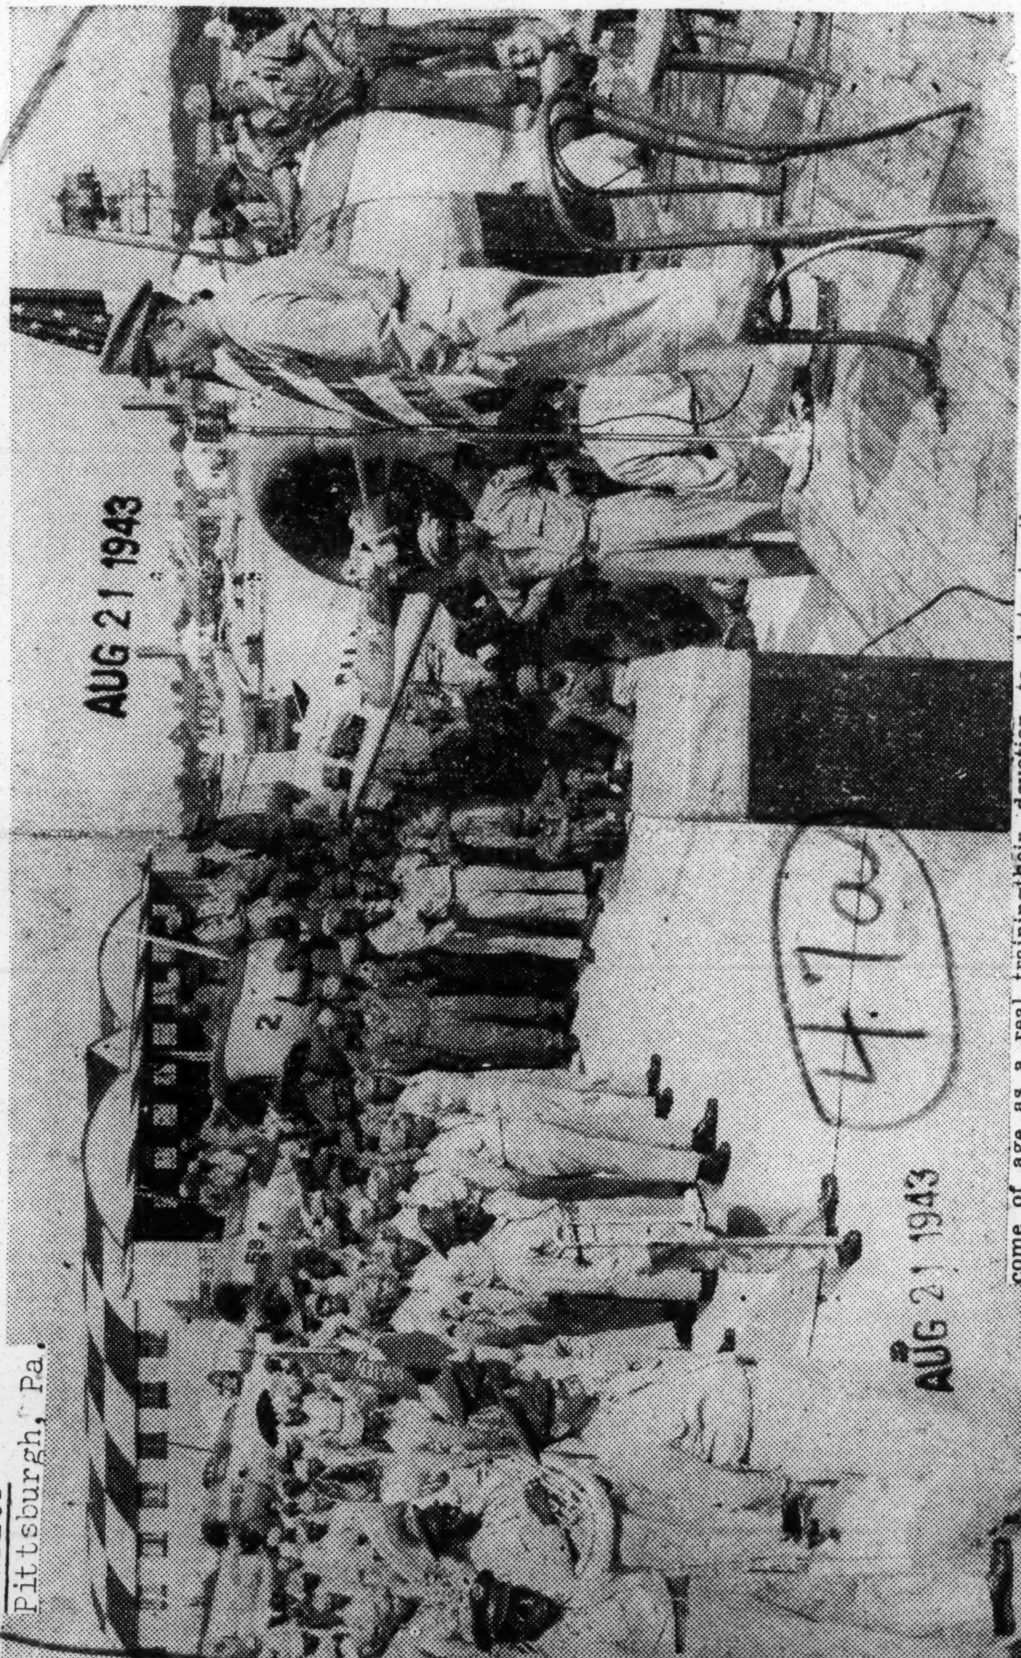
Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

PHILLIP DORN CONGRATULATES COMBAT PILOTS—The celebrated Dutch actor and MGM [illegible] Phillip Dorn, made a brief visit to the Tuskegee Army Air Field recently, just in time to congratulate two fighter pilots fresh from combat action in the Italian and Sicilian theatre of operations. The officers are left to right: 1st Lt. Herbert V. Clark of Pine Bluff, Ark., and 2nd Lt. Spann Watson of Hackensack, N. J. (Photo by AAF Training Command).

DEC 25 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD OBSERVES SECOND ANNIVERSARY

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.



AUG 21 1943

4.7a

AUG 21 1943

After two years of training Negro pilots, many of whom are at this moment blasting Axis planes from the skies over Sicily, the Tuskegee Army Air Field has come of age as a real training base.

Addressing the entire military and civilian personnel of the field on its second anniversary, Lieut. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer, commended them on their devotion to duty in the past, and implored them not to let down in the future until final and complete victory has been achieved.—Tuskegee Army Air Field photo.

47a-1943

Here s The Air Corps' Best 'Guzzler , or 'Sock-up' Artist

47a

Journal and Guide
Norfolk. Virginia

THEY MASTER TIME AND MACHINES—The engineering crew required but a little time to remove the tail section and install a new one. Shown in the process of starting to dismantle the section are Staff Sergeant Robert E. Barrow of 1348 South 46th street, Philadelphia, Pa., left, and T/Sgt Thomas J. Bills of 2601 Washington boulevard, Chicago, Ill right.

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright, 1943. Reproduction Forbibben)

NOV 1943

IN SICILY—(Delayed)—Aviation mechanics often don't have time to go through the red tape of requisitioning parts and supplies they need to keep their planes in the air and fighting the enemy.

Often they have the "guzzle" or "sack up" or "moonlight requisition" the things they need. When this work has to be done for the 99th Fighter Squadron now in Sicily, no member is more resourceful and efficient—or half as happy—at it as is T/Sgt. Thomas J. Bills, 2601 Washington boulevard, Chicago.

Give him a tool box and a cracked up plane, and he can salvage more usable parts than you can imagine the aircraft had before it was wrecked. What's more, in that role, Bills is happier than a kid in a pre-war pantry.

MAD RACE BY MECHANICS

A well known practice, when a plane cracks up near the base, and seems destined for the junk heap or for a trip back to a depot for rebuilding, is for the various mechanics to strip it of all its good parts and replace them with others on hand that are hopelessly in disrepair.

It usually results in a mad race by mechanics and radio technicians and armorers of the various squadrons stationed at the airfield. They snatch up all the no-good parts on hand and dash to the scene. First there, of course, takes what he wants and installs in its place the unusable parts he had on hand.

When all the scavengers have finished the wrecked plane has all of its parts, all right, but what parts!! It's a wise pilot who knows his own ship when these boys finish with it.

WENT TO CHANUTE FIELD

"Well, if the plane is going to be turned in as junk," Bills reasoned, "I figure we might as well make it real junk."

He was with the first group of technicians to receive training at Chanute Field where he spent the months of May to November, 1941. He is maintenance chief for the 99th.

A graduate of Lockport High School where he studied mechanical engineering, he had put his inclination to useful tasks at the Illino Carnegie Steel Corp. before he entered the Army.

After the war he wants to study aviation mechanics further and try to find a place for himself in this field.

47w

AUG 20 1943

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

KEEPS 'SKEGEE SOLDIERS HAPPY.— Mrs. Eugene V. Woods of Mound Bayou, Miss., and New York city, hostess at the new Tuskegee Service club, keeps 'on the ball' to keep TAAF's flying men in a happy frame of mind. —Photo by Tuskegee Army Air Field.

Mound Bayou Woman Directs Service Club

AUG 20 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. — Mrs. Eugene V. Woods, daughter of Mrs. Mary C. Booze, Republican National Committeewoman from the state of Mississippi, has been appointed director of the new Service club at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Mrs. Woods, whose grandfather, Isaiah T. Montgomery, founded the all-colored town of Mound Bayou, Miss., comes from New York City, but of recent years she has been teaching in the Mound Bayou high school and managing her 1,100-acre farm.

AUG 20 1943

The director of the new Service club is a graduate of Howard university and attended the Chicago School of Music and the Atlanta University School of Social Work. When questioned as to why she entered this particular type of work at the Tuskegee Service club, Mrs. Woods responded: "It's something I have always wanted to do."

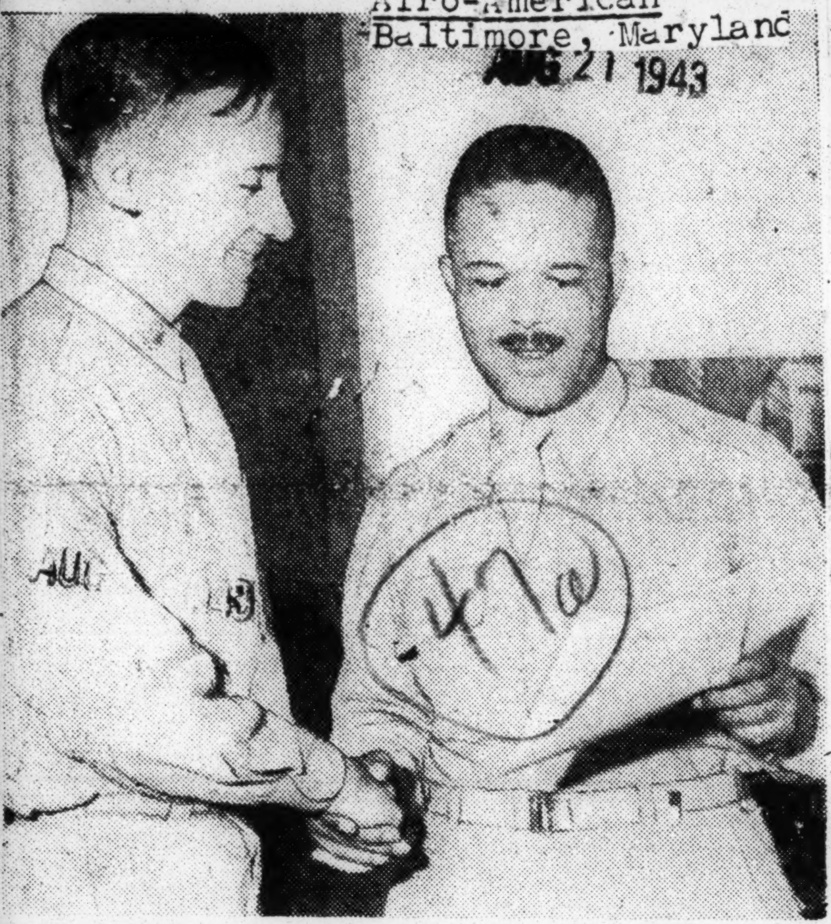
Mrs. Woods comes to the Tuskegee post with a rich and varied background of experience. Formerly a school teacher, musician, social welfare student and farm manager, she has big plans for the soldiers' social program at the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

Mrs. Woods is no stranger to Tuskegee, having lived there for over two years while her two daughters were attending Children's House at Tuskegee Institute.

In discussing her work, which includes planning and directing recreation to keep the Tuskegee servicemen in a happy frame of mind, the genial hostess stated: "I think this is about the finest group of soldiers I could ever work with. I am very well pleased and expect to do anything within my power to make the soldiers happy."

Tuskegee's V.D. Drive Commended

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland
AUG 21 1943



Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the Tuskegee Army Air Field (left) commends Major George McDonald of Baltimore, post venereal disease control officer, on the extremely low V.D. rate for the past month after an extensive campaign waged for one year. In the background is Capt. E. Brown Singleton, assistant post V.D. control officer.

Bomber Pilots at Last!

Colored Americans received with great satisfaction the War Department announcement that training of Negro bomber pilots will begin next month and that Negro navigators and bombardier officers will begin training in December.

The first round in the fight for Negro pilots was won when the training of the 99th Pursuit Squadron began two years ago at Tuskegee.

The second round is now happily concluded with the surrender of the War Department to the continued demands of an increasing number of American taxpayers that it stop the exclusion of young men from training as bombers on the spurious and indefensible ground of "race".

Unfortunately the white people who are in control of these things do not seem to be able to rise completely above prejudice and discrimination based on color and "race".

For example, instead of merely assigning colored cadets for training as bomber pilots, navigators and bombardiers at all available air schools, they have adopted the vicious, offensive and traditional policy of segregation.

So there is to be a separate "all-Negro" bombardment group trained either at Fort Dodge, Kan., or Del Rio Texas where doubtless the cadets will be segregated and humiliated as they have been at Tuskegee air school.

That this is entirely unnecessary is shown by the War Department's own announcement that "Ground crews for the bombing group are already in training at Air Force installations throughout the country. The Negroes who will make up the group are all being trained with white students."

If the ground crews can be trained together regardless of color or "race," why cannot the pilots, navigators and bombardiers be trained in the same way?

Why is it necessary to establish segregation in the case of men presumably of more education and background while not having segregation where the men are presumably of less education and background?

If such a procedure is necessary, then it is a terrible reflection on American education!

Of course every Negro knows that when the ground crews are trained they will be sent to the segregated bombardment units where bomber crews, pilots, navigators and bombardiers will also be colored.

The reason for this is simply that the War Department is fighting two wars: one against the Axis and the other against any trend toward social equality which might in any way jeopardize America's "white supremacy" set-up.

Well, the war is by no means over and has probably just begun.

Before the Axis is finally brought to its knees, we predict that the war against the Axis will have to take precedence over the war to preserve "normalcy" in race relations; as, indeed, it is doing more and more.

Before peace is established colored and white boys will be training together, flying together and using the same quarters and messes as becomes fighting men serving their country, no matter what Negrophobes may now think.

SEP 1 1943

Eisenhower, Spaatz, Doolittle, And RAF Air Marshal Praise Hall

Norfolk, Virginia
JUL 17 1943 Journal and Guide

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

JUL 17 1943

(By Cable, Delayed. Passed by Censor)
(Copyrighted. Reproduction Expressly Forbidden)

AN ADVANCED ALLIED BASE, NORTH AFRICA—"I would like to meet the pilot who shot down that Jerry!" exclaimed General Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander-in-chief of the Allied Forces in North Africa, after greeting Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., commanding officer of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, when the Allied chief and his party of several other generals landed in their transport carrier at the 99th field, following the attack on Castelventrano, Sicily, early on the morning of July 2, when Lt. Charles B. Hall, of Brazil, Ind., became the first American Negro to shoot down an enemy plane.

Among those accompanying General Eisenhower were Lt. Gen. Carl Spaatz, Brig. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle, famed for the American air raid on Tokyo, and Air Marshal Coningham of the Royal Air Force.

After congratulating Lt. Col. Davis on the "very fine reports" received on the performance of his squadron, the general was introduced to Flight Leaders Hall, Custis, Jamison, and Capt. George S. Roberts of Fairmont, W. Va., operations officers.

JUL 17 1943

After meeting the fliers, General Doolittle told Davis: "You have a very fine unit. I have been hearing good things about you."

Back at the field following the July 2 air action the full story was put together by the 12 fighter pilots of the 99th squadron who were part of 48 pursuit planes covering the B-25 Mitchell bombers which blasted the airfield in Sicily prior to the actual Allied invasion of the island.

The 99th was in the number one spot, up front. Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., commanding officer, was leading the formation of the squadron. Three other squadrons were also assigned to cover the bombers.

Observers point out that the position given the group "is indicative of the confidence, fine spirit, and cooperation manifest in joint operations of the 99th with other fighter groups." One of these squadrons had only recently arrived in the North African theatre and had gained less combat experience than the 99th.

Over Castelventrano a flock of Messerschmitt 109's and Focke Wulk 190's came up and dogfights ensued for 25 minutes, Pilots Lawson, a Newton, Va., native, and Dryden, Bronx, New York, got in [illegible]g bursts of machine gun fire. German planes were seen to smoke and dive, but were not seen to crash. The two Germans were listed as damaged and probably destroyed.

Lt. Hall went on the attack with his P-40 Warhawk fighter and with one long burst riddled a Focke Wulf which turned off and dove for the ground. The victorious pilot followed the doomed ship and saw it crash into the earth and, as Lt. Hall described the result, "he raised a big cloud of dust."

Two of our planes suffered slight damage. Two cannon shells tore through the plane of Lt. Dryden. The propeller of Lt. Sam Bruc[illegible]ship was dented. Lts. Dryden and Knighton engaged in a running fight with four Messerschmitts from Sicily to Pantelleria.

For downing the first plane Lt. Hall was honored by the squadron with a gift held in reserve for this purpose in the company safe since the arrival of the unit in North Africa. As his [illegible]rades [illegible]ered he drank the precious gift—a bottle of Coca Cola, the only one seen by members of the group since the landing.

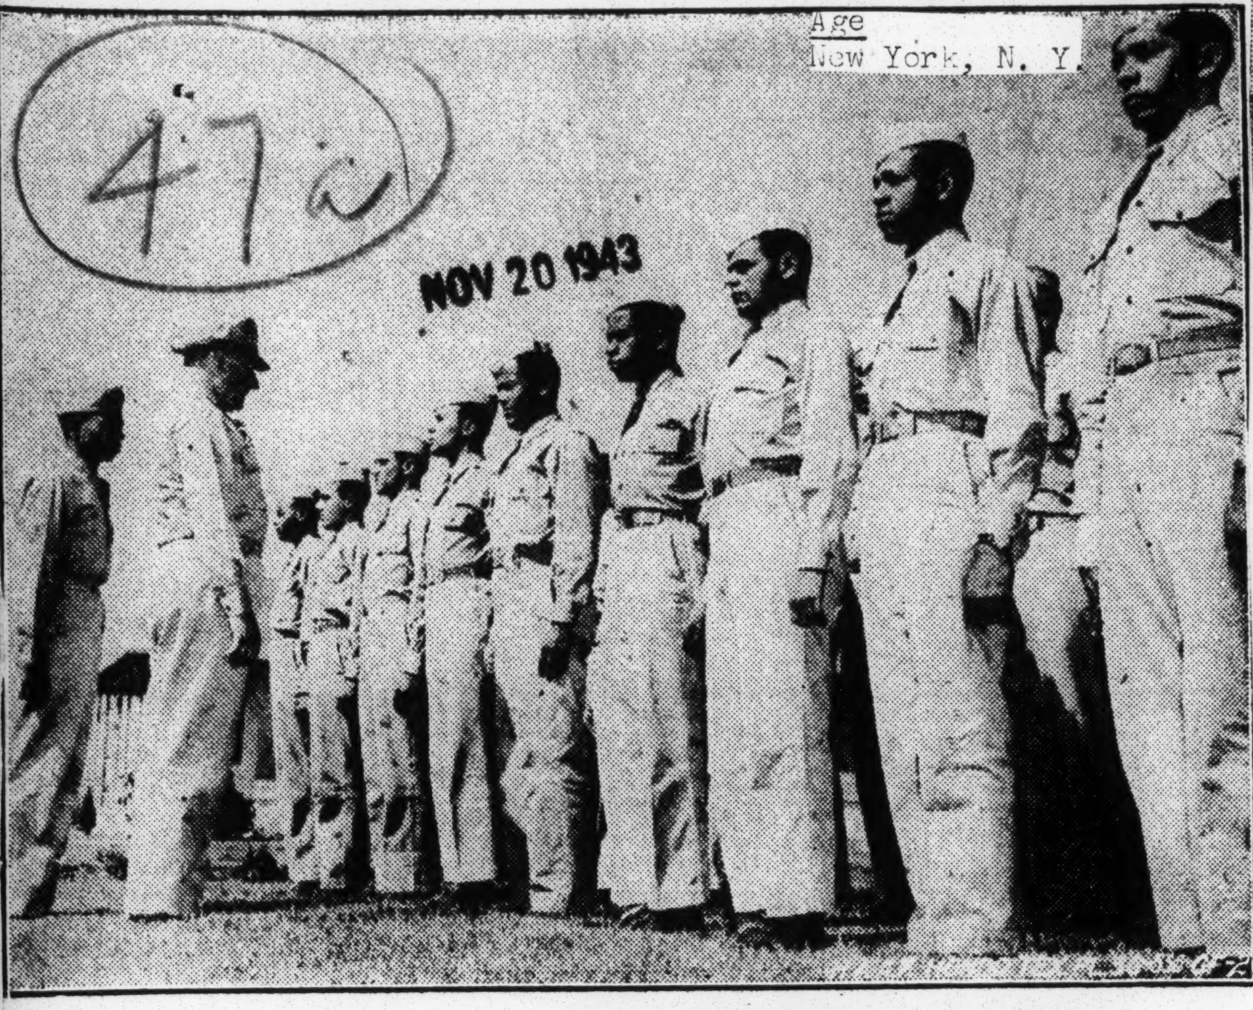
47a-1943

First Negro Unit Reports For Navigation Training In Hondo, Tex

Age
New York, N. Y.

47a

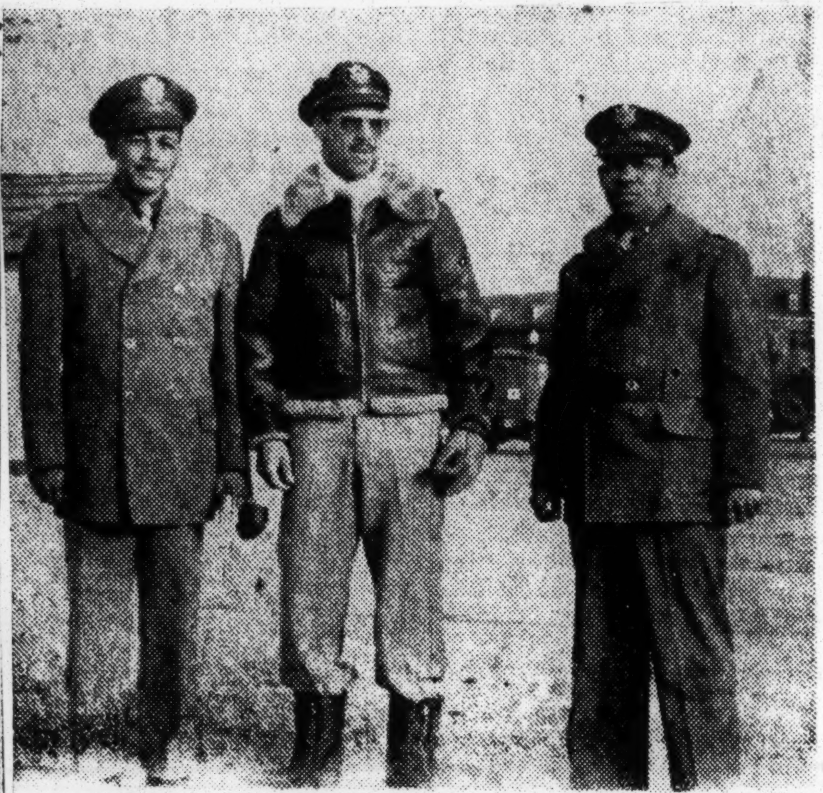
NOV 20 1943



Bureau of Public Relations, U. S. War Department

FIRST NEGRO NAVIGATORS arrive in Texas Airbase. The 30 smartly disciplined members of Squadron 10, first Negro unit to report for navigation training at Hondo Army Air Field, Hondo, Texas, are shown being inspected shortly after their arrival at the huge navigation airbase. The inspecting officer is Captain Frank H. Sheffield, senior tactical officer of the school's Group III. To Captain Sheffield's left is Navigaton Cadet Arnold W. Galimore, flight marcher for the unit. (Photo by Army Air Forces).

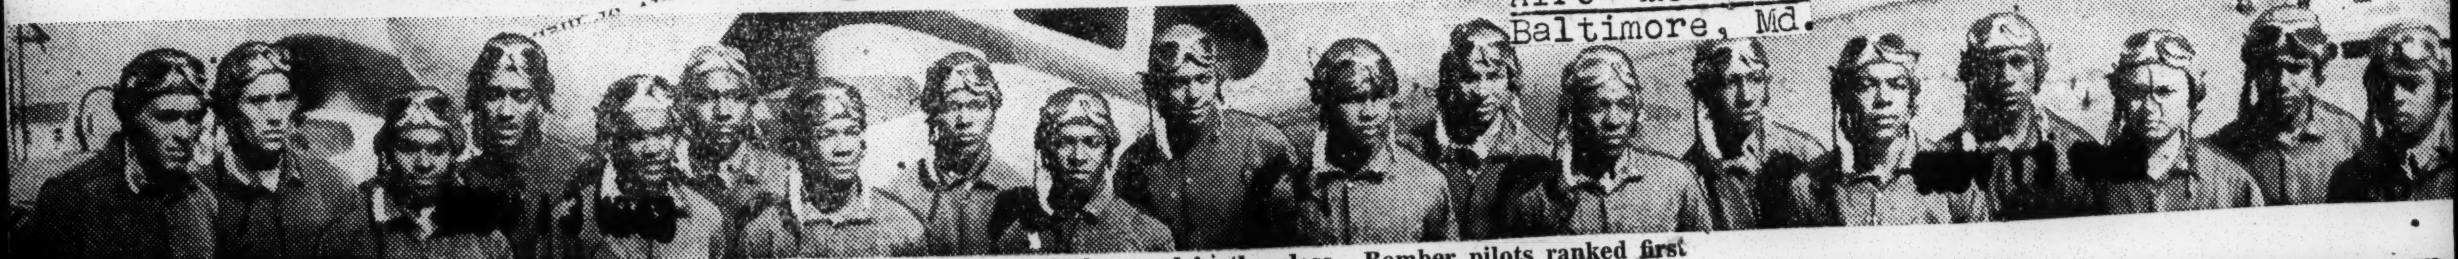
NOV 20 1943



OFFICERS AT SELFRIDGE FIELD—Three ground officers of the 332nd Fighter Group are, left to right, Lts. Ray B. Ware, Atlanta, Ga., group intelligence; Henry Bowman, Minneapolis, Minn., squadron armament, and P. A. Townsend, squadron ordnance officer, photographed by the Journal and Guide war correspondent on a recent visit to Selfridge Field, Mich.

Another Class of Fighter Pilots Graduate at Tuskegee Army Air Field

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.



Newest group of U.S. Army fighter pilots who were graduated with commissions as second lieutenants at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, Wednesday of last week, along with nine others who are to take additional training at Mather Field, Cal., as bomber pilots. In this group, left to right, are: 2nd Lts. Edward M. Thomas, Chicago; Eugene D. Smith, Cincinnati; Charles W. Dickerson, New Rochelle, N.Y.; James B. Brown, Los Angeles; William H. Thomas, Los Angeles; Nathaniel C. Stewart, Philadelphia; Carl E. Rayburg, Washington, D.C.; Edward Laird, Brighton, Ala.; Alfred W. Carroll, Washington, D.C.; Ivey L. Leftwich, Fairfield, Ala.; Clarence [illegible] Dart, Elmira, N.Y.; Oscar D. Hutton, Chicago; Earl S. She[illegible] lumbus, Ohio; Roger B. Brown, Glencoe, Ill.; Turner [illegible] Payne, Wichita Falls, Texas; Emory L. Robbins, Chicago; Gwynne W. Pierson, Oakland, Cal.; and Hugh S. Warner, N.Y.C. 2nd Lt. Paul C. Simmons of Detroit, also member of the class is not shown. Lieutenant Thomas, ex-Chicago postal clerk, ranked second in the class. Bomber pilots ranked first and third.

"BEHIND THE BOMB LINE" WITH THEFIGHTING99TH

Journal and Guide NOV 27 1943 Norfolk, Virginia

NOV 27 1943

(EDITOR'S NOTE: In the next installment the writer describes how the fighter pilots came back from a combat mission and make their report to the intelligence officer. There is also more of the brilliant work of the aviation mechanics who keep the planes flying.)

Installment II

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

IN SICILY (By Air Mail, delayed)—Down on "the line," almost a mile from the tent area where we lived, roaring airplane motors being warmed up by crew chiefs cut deeply into the pre-dawn quiet. It was 0440 hours and most of the fourteen pilots assigned to this mission, the operations staff and this war correspondent were still dressing.

But the engineering staff, some of whom had been up since 0330, already was working in blacked-out "open air repair shops" without benefit of time cards and overtime pay to get their planes conditioned for this first morning mission.

Many of them had not left their jobs until after 9 o'clock the night before when darkness forced them to abandon the effort. These aviation mechanics, the real unsung heroes of the 99th Fighter Squadron, have never failed the pilots who fly the planes they service, nor the squadron, nor the Army Air Forces.

The deepest admiration for these loyal, hard-working "grease monkeys" swelled my chest with pride as I walked over to the officers' mess kitchen where Sgt. Matthew Roberts, New York City, was already making coffee.

Synthetic Java is G .I. Coffee

The conversation was light and pleasant. The bonnie good humor of these fliers who in a short while were to take off on the most earnest missions of death and destruction, was as refreshing and stimulating as Sgt. Roberts' synthetic "java." (That's what we called G. I. coffee—the soluble powdered kind to which you add only hot water and stir. Presto! and you've got a drink as good as any percolator or drip-o-lator coffee you ever had.)

Chief fun-maker while having our spot of "java" was a nimble-wittted flier from Philadelphia. Lt. Louis R. Purnell .Things began to move along swiftly. Below is the log from my notebook:

0505—Pilots and operations staff pile on two jeeps and head for "the line." Lt. Erwin B. Lawrence Cleveland, assistant operations officer, who had been responsible for waking us up is at the wheel of one. I hop on it. Purnell, too, is a passenger, continuing his flow of good humor to keep everybody amused.

In addition [illegible] us three [illegible] are Capt. Lemuel R. Custis, Hartford. Conn., a flight leader, and Lieutenants Willie H. Fuller, Tarboro, N. C.; Graham Smith, Ahoskie, N. C.; Spann Watson, Hackensack, N. J.; Charles W. Dryden, New York City, and Paul Graham Mitchell, Washington, D. C.

Oxygen Masks, Helmets, Parachutes Claimed

0508—We are bumping merrily along the dirt road. In the east the sky begins to lighten faintly although the sun has not come up. The drone of more than a dozen airplane engines being "pre-flighted" by the mechanics almost drowns out our conversation.

0509—When we arrive at the operations tent, Sgt. George W Jackson, Pittsburgh, who slept there all night to be on hand for the early mission today, is already stirring about. The pilots claim oxygen masks, flying helmets and parachutes .By the pale glow of candlelight they study the large map of Sicily for latest advices on enemy, anti-aircraft installations which are marked on it from day to day by the intelligence officer.

0415—Second jeep-load of pilots arrives and crowd into pyramidal tent. Among them are Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer, who will lead this mission. There is also Lt. Herbert V. Clark, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Allen G Lane, Demopolis, Ala., Willie Ashley, Sumter, S. C., and Herbert F. ("Peppy Le-Moc") Carter.

0515—Col. Davis asks for attention. "One thing I forgot to mention, pilots, is that the big push in the North is beginning this morning and we are likely to see lots of Allied movement. So please be careful not to strafe anything west of Cesaro. The British are driving north; the Americans in the North are pushing east."

Last Minute Informaation Given

0550—Although takeoff time is more than a half hour away, the pilots pile again on the jeeps and are driven to their respective planes dispersed around the landing field. The crew chiefs have the Warhawks tuned to their finest flying pitch when the pilots arrive.

Last minute information on how the engines are working is passed on to the piloots by the mechanics. Windshields are wiped clean. Everything is in readiness now.

"Clear!" a pilot calls out before starting his engine. The propellor turns stubbornly, jerkily, the engine spits and coughs and then starts. The deafening roar drowns out all conversation! The "propwish" almost blows Crew Chief Staff Sgt. Julius C. Lovett, Newark, N. J., off the wing of Lt. Fuller's plane.

0600—One by one the planes, 14 of them, taxi down to the end of the runway and take their positions on opposite sides of the landing strip, facing each other.

t Hoooooo ,gtev, mt- ake

Precision Timed

0610—Most of the mechanics and crew chiefs return to the operations tent to wait for their ships to get into the air. None of them have had any breakfast, not even coffee, but they don't think about leaving until every plane is safely in the air. I notice that Col. Davis' crew chief, Sgt. Vernon Watson, Seguin, Tex., has two fingers of his right hand crossed. He is leaning against a jeep looking anxiously down the field where fourteen planes are poised for their hop over enemy territory.

0625——The pilots start their engines again, warmig them up for the take-off.

0630—"It's six-thirty on the nose," Sgt. Jackson says without looking at his watcch, as two planes tear down the runway on full throttle and rise into the sky. How could he be so positive? we wanted to know.

"That's Col. Davis leading the flight off," Jackson replied, "and he always takes off with split-second precision. You can set your watch by his take-offs"

As the first two planes bank into eastern sky, Sgt. Watson uncrosses his fingers and relaxes. The "Old Man" had gotten off again without a mishap. I later learned that Col. Davis' crew chief always crosses his fingers when the "Skipper" takes off on a mission, and keeps them crossed until he is safely in the air.

0640—All fourteen planes are in the air now, lined up in a perfect "company front" — 12 planes abreast, two "spares' 'weaving back and forth in the rear—heading north on their mission of destruction.

NOV 27 1943

47a-1943

Observers Of Battery Fire

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

Field Artillery Officers Get Liaison Pilot Training

AUG 28 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., August 26—Another phase of flying has been temporarily added to the training schedule of the busy Tuskegee Army Air Field. Joining the Basic Trainers, Advanced Trainers and P-40s that crowd the busy runways of this active air base, a grasshopper fleet of tiny "cubs," Army liaison planes, are landing and taking off from the field.

This addition to the Tuskegee field's curriculum is a course of instruction for qualified field artillery officers who are training as liaison pilots. The course lasts for nine weeks, during which time the trainee receives sixty hours in the tiny 65 horsepower airplane.

TRAIN TO OBSERVE BATTERY FIRE

After nine weks and 60 hours of flying instruction, the student officer receives his liaison pilot wings and goes to Fort Sill, Oklahoma, for advanced training and preparation for tactical work. In combat these liaison pilots serve as obsorvers of battery fire. They fly so they can see where the salvos from their batteries are hitting. Then necessary corrections are radoed from the pilot to the battery crews until the shots are striking the targets.

Among the student officers assigned to the first class are Captain William H. Shannon, Chicago, Ill., First Lieutenants James I. Miner, Jr., Washington, D. C.; William Y. Rose, Chicago, Ill.; Terry Howard Brooks, Houston, Texas; Lawrence W. Langford, Chicago, Ill.; Chauncey Eskridge, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Second Lieutenants James E. Woodson, Topeka, Kansas; Arthur Lee Parks, Kansas City, Kansas; Benjamin F. Moore, Ocilla, Ga.; Leonard Earl Wilburn, Columbus, Ohio; Charles Gilbert Dunn, Cincinnati, Ohio; Robert L. McFadden, Tallahassee, Fla.; Alvin J. Johnson, Chicago, Ill.; James F. Brooks, Chicago, Ill.; Harry W. Dunghill, Chicago, Ill.; Arnold D. Grant, Cotteyville, Kans.; Aldrick H. Wilson, Chicago, Ill.; Chester A. Jones, Atlantic City, N. J.; Lloyd R. V. Taylor, Atlanta, Ga.; and Darryl C. Bishop, Houston, Texas.

FLIERS OF '99th' BASED IN ITALY

OCT 30 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU, Courier War Correspondent

ITALY—(Via Wireless)—While our fighter pilots of the 99th Pursuit Squadron arrived in Italy last week, forming a part of the desert air forces supporting the British Eighth Army, eight new pilots—Lts. Charles B. Bailey, Punta Gorda, Fla.; Leonard H. Jackson, Fort Worth, Tex.; Wilson V. Eagleston, Bloomington, Ind.; Lewis C. Smith, Los Angeles, Calif.; Clarence W. Allen, Chicago; Wiliam E. Griffin, Birmingham, Ala.; Alwayne Dunlap, Washington, D.C., and Heber Houston, Detroit, all trained at Tuskegee, Ala., and Selfridge Field, Michigan, joined the 99th Pursuit Squadron at its Sicilian air base.

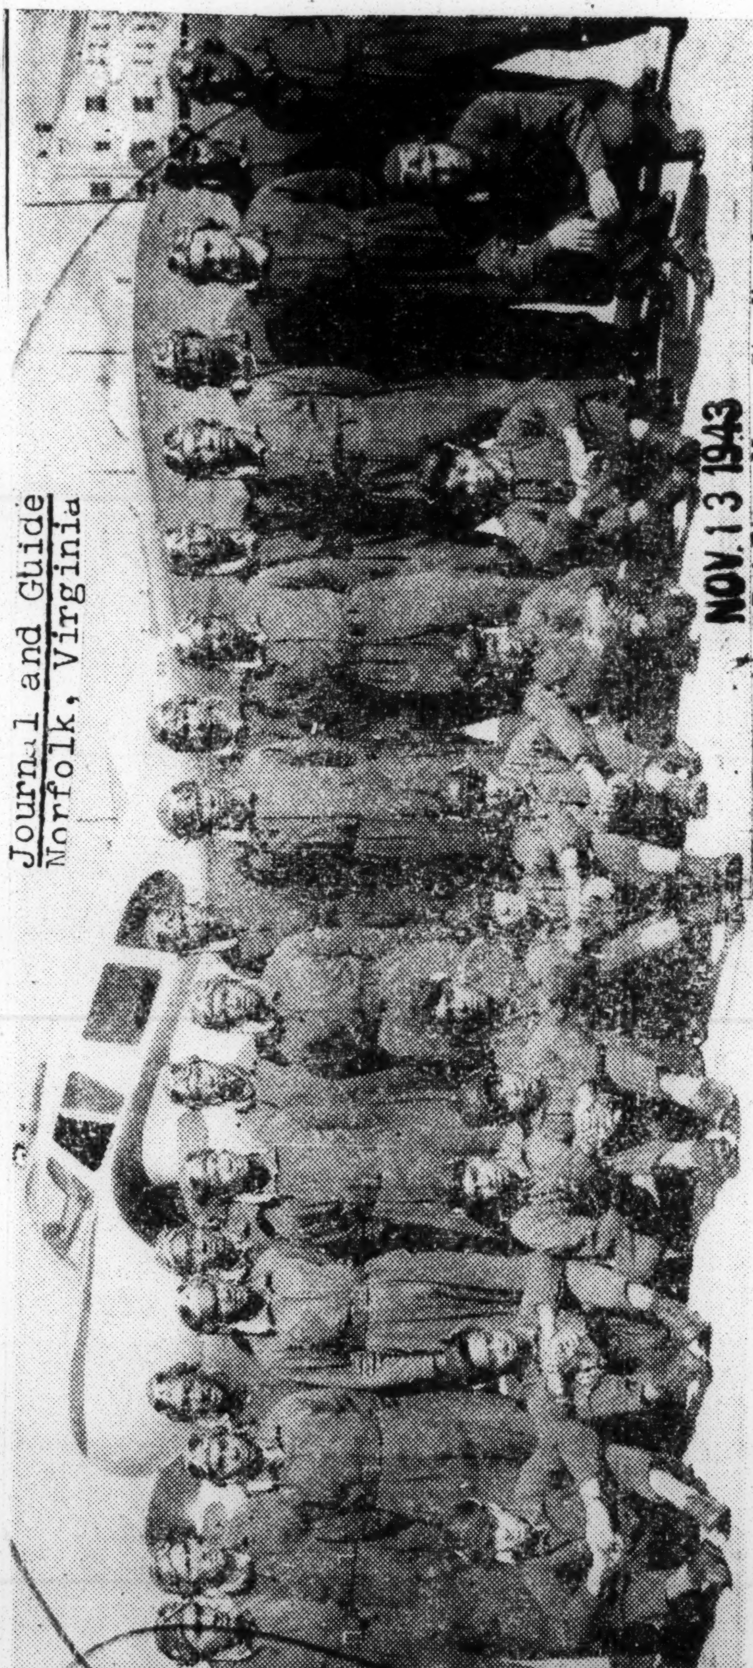
The squadron is now attached to the veteran American P-40 group, which has been overseas more than a year, and has seen much action over the Western desert of Egypt.

The 99th's new airdrome is in the corner of a huge plain littered everywhere with wrecks of Italian and German bombers and fighter planes. The airdrome was bombed, the night before the 99th's arrival, by the Germans. The first thing men of the 99th did before putting up pup tents was to dig individual foxholes. Every man is generally abed by 7 o'clock in the evening. The nights are very cold.

The squadron's ground echelon, commanded by Lt. Henry M. Letcher of Washington, D.C., has been here since early September. There was much rejoicing when pilots and echelon forces met and tales were exchanged of narrow escapes from bombs and shells. T/Sgt. Ralph Burnley, former professional boxer from Philadelphia, said his landing in Italy 24 hours before the American infantry was the geratest experience of his life. The Germans were only [illegible] yards away from the beach and the British took him and others for work on anti-tank guns, he said, and explained that the Germans have spread rumors that they are cannibals recruited from Africa by the Americans.

OCT 30 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia



NOV 13 1943

FUTURE BOMBER AND FIGHTER PILOTS GET WINGS—In the first graduation of its kind at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, fighter and bomber pilot trainees completed the prescribed course at the same time. The fighter pilots will go through a transition period on the P-40 Warhawk (as in the past) whereas, the twin-engine graduates will leave for Mather Field, Calif., where they will be the initial group of Negro pilots to undergo Medium Bomber training in B-25's.

The Twin-Engine graduates, seated on the runway are: 2nd Lieutenants Perry E. Hudson, Atlanta, Ga.; Herman R. Campbell, New York, N. Y.; [illegible] N. Pinkney, Baltimore, Md.; Henry F. Fletcher, San Antonio, Texas; Haldane King, Jamaica, N. Y.; Les[illegible] Williams, San Mateo, Cal.; Jerome D. Spurlin, Chicago; Ill.; Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N. J.; and William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass. Standing from l. to r. are: Fighter Pilots 2nd Lts. Edward M. Thomas, Chicago, Ill.; Eugene D. Smith, Cincinnati, Ohio; Charles W. Dickerson, New Rochelle, N. Y.; James B. Brown, Los Angeles, Cal.; William H. Thomas, Los Angeles, Cal.; Nathaniel C. Stewart, Philadelphia, Pa.; Carl E. Rayburg, Washington, D. C.; Edward Laird, Brighton, Ala.; Alfred W. Carroll, Washington, D. C.; Ivey L. Leftwich, Fairfield, Ala.; Clarence W. Dart, Elmira, N. Y.; Oscar D. Hutton, Chicago, Ill.; Earl S. Sherrard, Columbus, Ohio; Roger B. Brown, Glenco, Ill.; Turner [illegible] Payne, Wichita Falls, Texas; Emory L. Robbins, Chicago, Ill.; Gwynne W. Pierson, Oakland, Cal.; and Hugh S. Warner, New York, N. Y. At the far right in the first row is 2nd Lieutenant Paul C. Simmons, Detroit, Mich., also of the fighter pilot group.

NOV 13 1943

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

"THE EEL" TAKES HIS FRIENDS FOR A RIDE—This German car, equivalent of the American "jeep," but far less serviceable, was one of the early acquisitions of "The Eel," as 1st Lt. James B. Knighten, Tulsa, Okla., is known to his officer friends in the 99th Pursuit Squadron now based in Sicily. It raced madly about the camp and airfield of the fighter squadron for several days until it disintegrated. Last seen, it was loitering around a junk pile.

Seated beside Lt. Knighten, who is at the wheel, is S. Sgt. Samuel F. Parks, crew chief. Sitting majestically on the rear seat like conquering generals are three flying officers, 1st Lt. Sherman W. White, Montgomery, Ala.; 2nd Lt. Samuel M. Bruce, Seattle, Wash., and 2nd Lt. Louis R. Purnell, Germantown, Pa. (Photo by Thomas W. Young, U. S. War Correspondent).

Celebrated First TAAF Chapel Anniversary

OCT 9 1943

CELEBRATION OF THE first anniversary of the Post Chapel at the Tuskegee Army Air Field took place September 19 when Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, Commanding Officer, addressed the officers, men and civilians assembled there. Posing for this group picture after the service are Mrs. Alfreda Hamil[illegible]t. Theodore Randall of the Tuskegee College Training Detachment; L. W. Kranerd, Montg[illegible], Ala. [illegible]haplain Douglas L. T. Robinson, Post Chaplain; Mrs. Fay S. Robinson, wife of Chaplain R[illegible]n; Lt. Col. Parrish, Mrs. F. A. Bolders, Tuskegee, Ala.; Mrs. B. B. Walcott, Tuskegee Inst., Ala.; Maurice Hastie, War Time Minister, Christian Science Church; Lt. Rosetta E. Cannon, WAC stationed at Ft. Benning, Ga.; Mrs. Frederick Mack, Tuskegee, Ala., and S|Sgt. George D. Thompson, chapel organist. —TAAF Photo

OCT 9 1943

47a-1943

"The Eel" Of The 99th Squadron Takes To The Air--And Likes It

Journal and Guide Norfolk, Virginia

The Incredible Story Of 23-Year-Old Lieutenant James B. Knighten

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
U. S. War Correspondent

AT AN ADVANCE BASE IN NORTH AFRICA — You have to see and heard "The Eel" to really believe in his existence. No description this reporter could compose would adequately portray the sprightly character of 1st Lt. James B. Knighten, [illegible] of the flying officers of the 99th Fighter Squadron now in active combat service on the Sicilian front.

In olden days every court had its jester to amuse the lords and nobles. This squadron has "The Eel"—which is the name his close friends know him affectionately by—who serves the same purpose when he is not flying the very paint off his trim fighter plane.

ENJOYS BEING ALIVE

The boys in this outfit tell me he has been acting rather tame since he came overseas. That might be true, in a relative sense, but without any prior acquaintance to measure his antics by I'd say he is a likeable, witty, able, adorable clown who enjoys being alive more thoroughly than most individuals I've known.

At 23 years he has a fairly full life behind him. In Tulsa, Oklahoma where he was reared, he never played football in high school because his mother thought he was too young and too small. But after he had finished high school his father, James A. Knighten of 1130 Greenwood street, who is a prosperous business man with a variety of investments, sent him to Dillard University in New Orleans.

In college he played quarterback on the football team for four years and in the spring took his exercise on the tennis court. Although he had twice won the Missouri Valley junior championship, in 1937 and 1938, he wasn't varsity tennis team material during his stay at Dillard. These were the years when Ric[illegible] Cohen and Co. [illegible] winning not only intercollegiate titles for Dillard but national championships as well.

After receiving an A. B. degree, he spent a year around Chicago getting his bearing and saving a little money of his own so that he could go to law school. By the skin of his teeth he avoided the horrible fate of becoming a newspaperman.

CUB REPORTER IN CHICAGO

For about two months he spent his spare moments in the city between runs on a dining car to Washington as a cub reporter for the Chicago Defender under Enoch Waters and David Orro, both of whom are now war correspondents with U. S. troops abroad.

Then one September day in 1941, everything happened all at once. He (1) received notice of a scholarship to study law at Howard University, (2) was given a permanent run on the B. & O. dining car between Chicago and Washington, and (3) received appointment as a cadet at the Tuskegee Army Flying School.

All of those good tidings came to Knighten the same day. He chose Tuskegee. Thus into the ranks of the squadron went this young man who [illegible] never even been [illegible] of an airplane before. Ground training completed, he went up with an instructor for the first time.

Lt. Knighten says now that if he could have quit after that ride, he most certainly would have that very day. That a fighter pilot who is now almost every day flying combat missions could ever have felt so insecure in the air is hard to believe. But, he says, when he looked down on the ground and saw how far away it was, and how helpless he would be if anything happened to his ship, he was sure that the sky was a place for birds and other people,—not for him.

THINKS FLYING IS FUN

That's the funny thing about flying — how it gets a hold of you like a habit. It got "The Eel," after a bit, too, and now he confesses he likes it.

"You can make flying fun, just like anything else," he says.

And there you may have the explanation that makes sense of the story of "The Eel."

When we moved recently to a new location in the combat zone, the pilots flew their own ships cross-country. Some of the ground crew and administrative officers had come along in transport planes with their tools, essential machinery [illegible] personal equipment.

Enr[illegible] some minor trouble developed in Lt. Knighten's ship and he had to lay over at an intermediate stop while it was being repaired. We had been at the field, and operating, for several days when "The Eel" landed his ship and taxied it over to one of the far corners to park it. A jeep was sent out to bring him into headquarters.

SALVAGED GERMAN VERSION OF JEEP

Lt. Knighten used the opportunity to have some fun. I think we enjoyed it even more than he did. As he rode down "the line" past the ground crew and others who were hanging around on the field, he was standing in the front seat, holding the windshield with his left hand and waving and saluting with a broad grin on face, like a conquering hero ing past his admiring subjects.

"The Eel" hadn't been here day before he was out in countryside looking for trophies on the erstwhile battlegrounds. He came back with an abandoned German car which would be the equivalent of our jeep. Now noboby crosses a road without looking carefully in both directions. That missing object that looks like a comet just might be "The Eel" driving by.

Next day the flight schedule had Lt. Knighten in the first mission. It was a bombing sortie but "The Eel" would be flying with pilots from his own squadron who had had one or more prior missions.

Eight planes went out from our field. Seven returned . . .

The pilots were all huddled around the intelligence officer making their report. There was awe and dismay in the crowd, although nobody became excited. It was a solemn moment.

"When's the last time you saw Knighten?" the commanding officer, Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., Washington, D. C., asked one of the pilots flying on his wing.

"Just before we dived to release our bombs, Sir."

"Did anybody else see him after that?" the C. O. asked.

LIGHT FLAK OVER TARGET

Nobody had. "The Eel" would have been the last to dive and any number of things might have happened to him. There was light flak over the target, although there were no enemy fighters; at least, the others had not seen any. Maybe "The Eel" had.

It was a sad moment. This squadron had operated many a sortie in the brief time it had been in combat but always its planes and pilots had returned sa[illegible]. It was just a little ironical . . . , Knighten's first mission was also his last. Such damned luck. Can't figure it out. . . .

Wait! There's a plane circling our field—one of our type, too. Could be "The Eel." . . . It IS "The Eel." No mistaking about that. There was a sigh of relief, and then, right in the midst of that tense moment, a good, wholesome hearty laugh.

Everyone was anxious to learn what happened. Lt. Knighten explained that his motor acted lazy from the start, knocked completely out over the target. He adjusted his mixture, nursed the ailing motor back up to flying speed.

A FRIGHTFUL MOMENT

It was a frightful moment. Below was enemy territory. Between that and friendly soil was a lot of sea, too darned much to swim, thought Lt. Knighten, even with his May West life preserver on. He circled the island a couple of times to see how his engine would act. He might even have to put his ailing ship down on that unfriendly island.

Just then he heard a voice over his radio.

"Any strange aircraft in your area?" he heard a voice ask.

~~"No," the answer came back.~~

"Well," said the first voice, "we've got one up here."

It was an instantaneous mental process by which "The Eel" reasoned that he was the subject of the conversation he had just heard and he knew that the next number on their program was fireworks.

"Hell, no, (Horse!)" he shouted back just as quickly, "this is Knighten."

PILOTS FROM DIFFERENT SQUADRON

The pilots he had heard were from an entirely different squadron which also was carrying out missions against nearby targets. They were, of course, Americans, but they probably were surprised by this entirely different kind of voice over their radios.

And yet they probably quickly concluded that this must be a member of that new squadron about which everybody up this way seems to have heard in advance, and, that the use of the name ("Horse") had nothing at all to do with equestrian matters but was, instead, one of the terms of friendship and endearment employed by members of this squadron.

In any event, "The Eel's" engine was humming again and he took a direct road home. That was enough excitement for one day.

MAY BE THROUGH WITH FLYING

Lt. Knighten says he will be through with flying when the war is over and wants either to go to law school to prepare for the practice of law, or to find a career in journalism. He even declares he is going to stop speeding in automobiles.

That might be a perfectly normal ambition here in the thick of this serious business of flying for your life, because it's you or the other fellow's. But when he gets back it's a 100-to-1 chance that "The Eel" will be looking for some place in the aviation industry's parade of progress.

If he quits flying because no opportunities to stay in it come his way, or because flying for fun is too expensive, his charming personality and nimble with ought to make him succeed in either of the preferred professions to which he aspires.

LOOK FORWARD TO REJOINING WIFE

In the meantime he can look forward to rejoining his wife, the former Lana Robinson of Wichita, Kansas., whom he married on November 5, 1942. She is now a clerk in the quartermaster division at Tuskegee Army Flying School.

Lt. Knighten has one brother who is already in the Army somewhere in India, and a sister who is studying at Oberlin College. His mother is living now in St. Louis, Mo., where he spent his last two years in high school.

Incidentally, his marriage last fall climaxed a romance that started in high school. "The Eel" recalls that it was just a short while after pay day, but he was extremely broke at the moment. So broke, in fact, that he had to borrow a half-dollar from Lt. Sherman W. White Jr., of Montgomery, Ala., another flying officer with this squadron, to buy a marriage license.

Lt. White was standing nearby at the moment. Just to prove he wasn't spoofing about borrowing fifty cents to get married, he called to Lt. White and asked him if it wasn't true.

STILL OWES HALF-BUCK

"Yes," Lt. White replied without hesitation, "you did." Then, after a moment's thought he added:

"And that reminds me, Eel, you owe me fifty cents. You never did pay me back that half-buck!"

AUG 7 1943

urnal & Guide
rfolk, Va.

AUG 14 1943

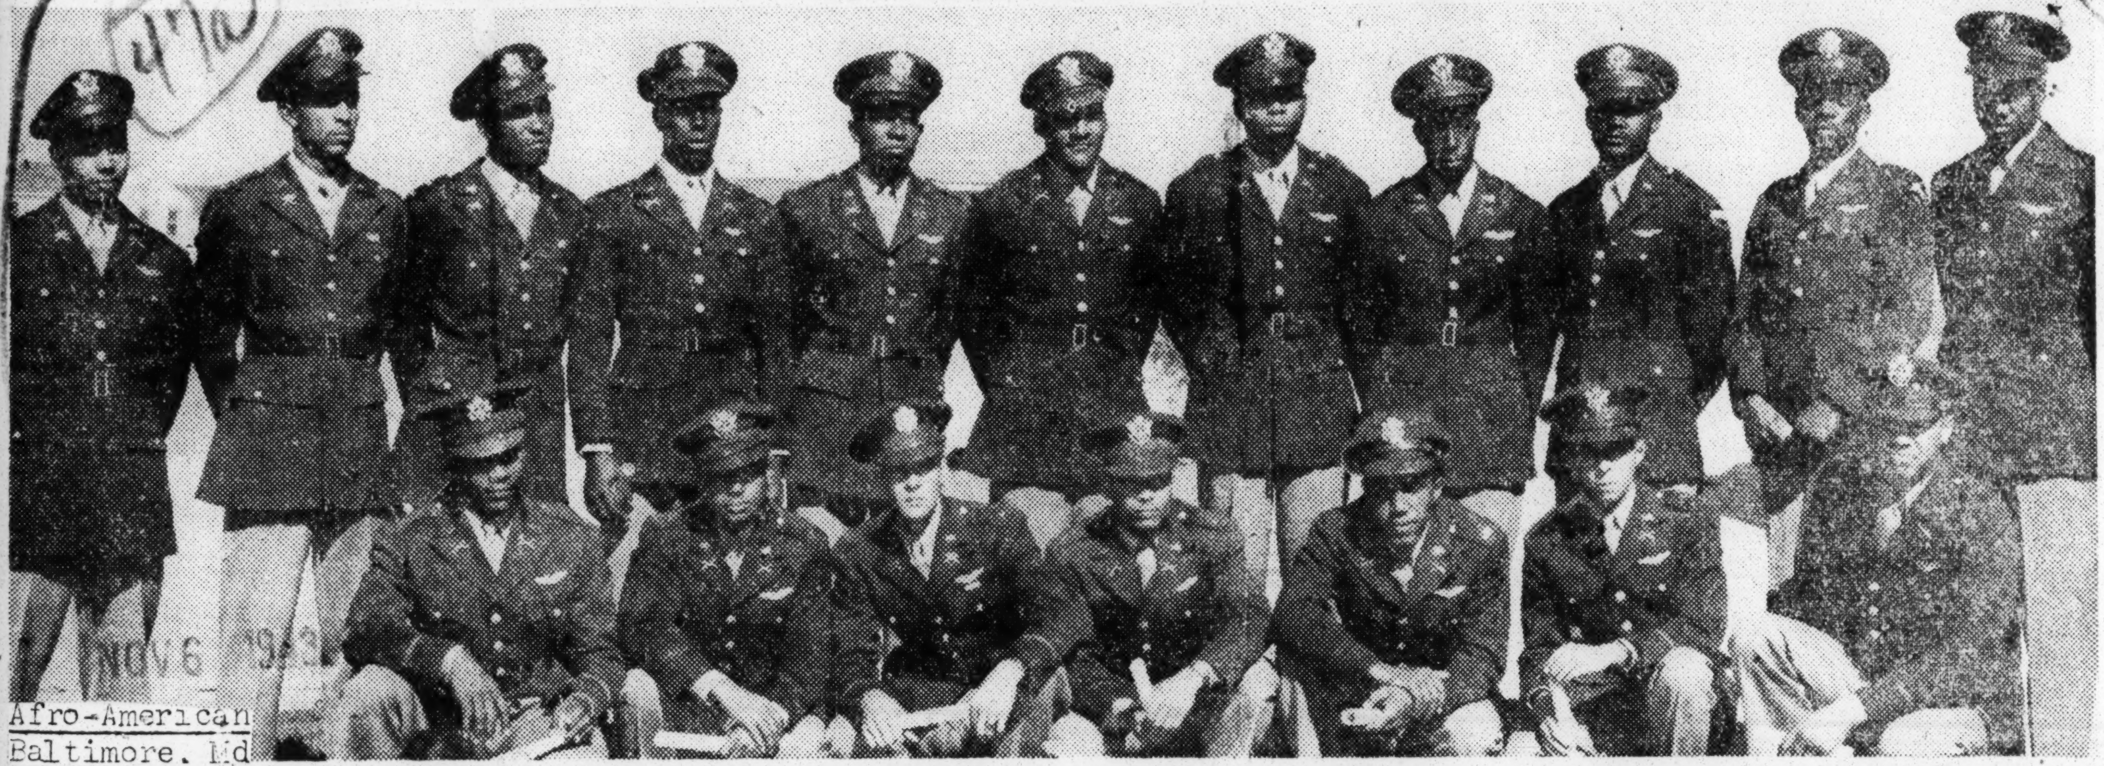
47a

FIGHTING COMMANDER OF A FIGHTING SQUADRON—This is how the commanding officer of a fighter squadron looks just before taking off, and just after completing a combat mission. Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., commanding officer of the 99th Fighter Squadron now in active combat service on the Sicilian front, is shown, bottom, as he tightens a shoulder strap on his parachute just before the takeoff. At top he reposes in the cockpit of his P-40 Warhawk fighter plane with a satisfied smile after completion of his mission. (Photo by Thomas W. Young, U. S. War Correspondent)

47a-1943

47a

More Flying Artillery Officers Get Wings at Tuskegee



NOV 6 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Members of the most recent class of field artillery liaison pilots who completed their training at the Tuskegee Army Air Field October 22. They are, left to right: kneeling, 2nd Lt. John E. McCode, Houston, Texas; 1st Lt. John B. Dudley, Brooklyn, N.Y.; 2nd Lt. George F. Bizzell, Lancaster, Ohio; 2nd Lt. John O. Cunningham, Kokomo, Ind.; 2nd Lt. William J. Cleveland, Warren, Ohio; 1st Lt. Robert L. Wrenn, Cincinnati, Ohio, and 2nd Lt. John M. Franklin of Toledo, Ohio; standing, 2nd Lt. Louis K. Hanks, Toledo, Ohio; 1st Lt. Gaines C. Farley, Paducah, Ky., 1st Lt. Terry H. Brooks, Houston, Texas; 2nd Lt. Richard C. Chatman, Chicago; 2nd Lt. Henry Bennett, New Orleans, La.; 1st Lt. Fred E. Howard, Chicago; 1st Lt. Leroy Stephens, Jr., Chicago; 2nd Lt. Daniel C. Thomas, Akron, Ohio; 2nd Lt. Thurston Mason, Chicago; 2nd Lt. Paul Weathersby, Chicago, and William M. Jordan, Chicago.

WINS AERIAL GUNNERY AWARD

Aviation Cadet Othel Dickson of Tuskegee Army Air field led all flying cadets in the Eastern Flying Training Command and finished third in the national ranking of all cadets in the AAF Training Command at a recent [illegible] meet held at [illegible] [illegible] His accurate gunner [illegible] calibre death dealing weapon on the AT-6, which he flew in a recent competition. He hails from Coffeyville, Kans.—Photo by AAF Training Command.

Another Dream Comes True As Tuskegee Begins Bomber Training

DEC 5 1943

Courier

TUSKKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—The second dream of airminded Negro youth of today materializzed into a reality, as twin-engine training officially started last week at the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

With the advent of the first all-Negro Fighter Squadron to cambat, in single engine P-40 Warhawks, the question immediately arose as to the possibility of an all-Negro bomber squadron.

The question was answered when the War Department sanctioned the training of Negro cadets in the arduous task of becoming multi-engine pilots, here at the home of the first all-Negro Fighter Pilot Squadron now engaged in deadly combat over the war-torn skies of Europe.

MAJOR ALBRIGHT HEADS SCHOOL

DEC 18 1943

Selected to heed this new school, the first of its [illegible] anywhere in the world, is Major Clay Albright, the man who has taught every Negro fighter pilot in the Army Air Forces today, how to fly fighter's aircraft. Lieut. Milton B. Hall of Owensboro, Ky., is assisting him in an administrative capacity. Instructors of the newly formed school are 1st Lieut. Leonard B. Crozier and 2nd Lieut. Robert B. Meagher.

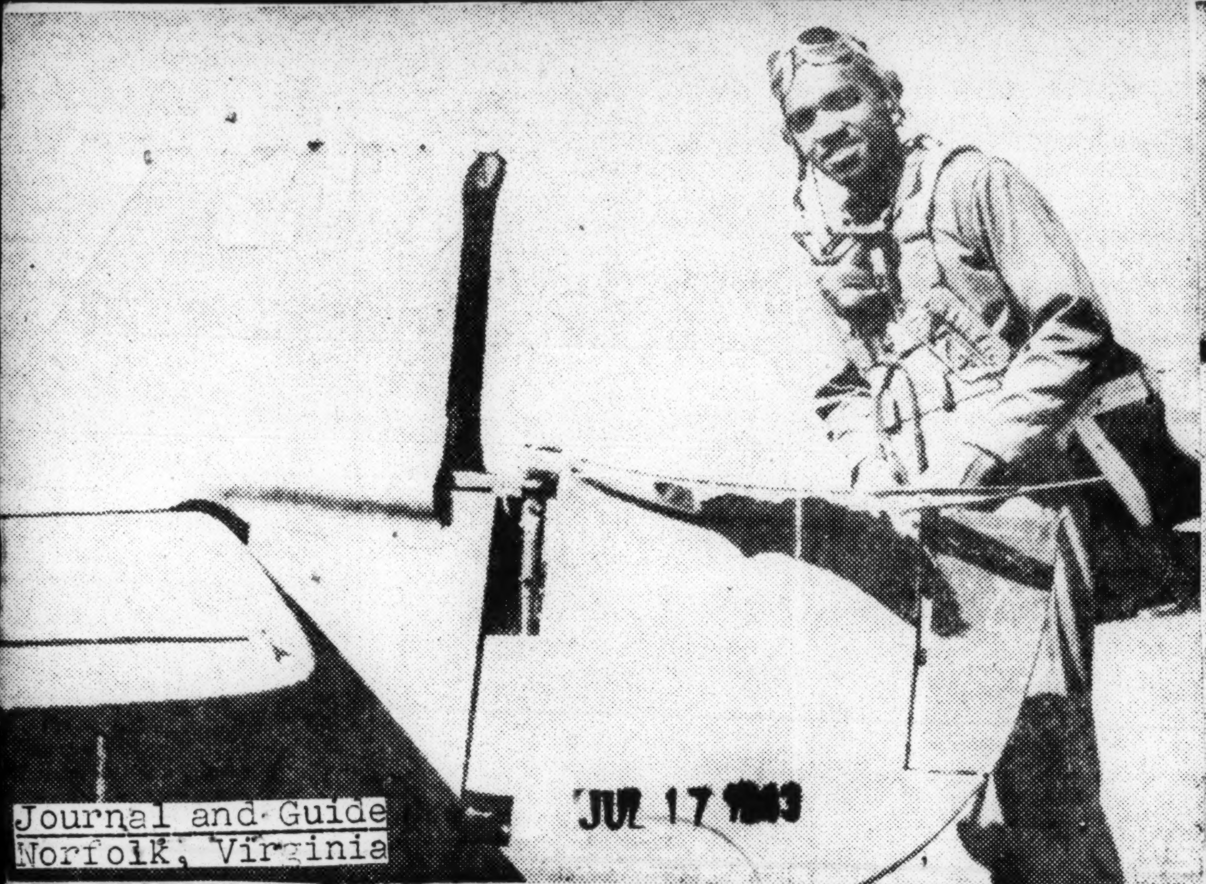
Pilot trainees for twin engine training here will be selected from the upper basic class of cadets. They are to receive 70 hours of advanced flying training here and then be transferred elsewhere for actual bomber pilot training.

The type of aircraft to be used in the twin engine course here is the AT-10 BH (Beechcraft). This plane is referred to as an "assimilated loaded bomber," as its altitude in flight is comparable to that of a medium bomber with a full load of bombs. All the ingenuity and skill required of a bomber pilot, is necessary in flying the AT-10 trainer.

For the highly technical job of maintenance, instructors from Turner Field, Georgia, have been attached here to familiarize our mechanics in the fundademtal knowledge of keeping these ships aloft.

"Once you get the hang of it, it's easy," says Lieut. Leonard B. Crozier, seated in co-pilot's seat, to Cadet Vincent Mason of Orange, N. J., in answer to a query concerning the myriad instruments and controls found in the cockpit of an AT-10 twin-engine trainer. The trio of cadets peering over the canopy, are, from left to right, Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, Calif.; William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass., and Henry Fletcher of San Antonio, Texas. The cadets are members of the initial group of Negro pilots in twin engine training at Tuskegee Army Air Field, in preparation for medium bomber training.—Photo by TAAF.

4



Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

JUL 17 1943

HE BROUGHT IT DOWN SAFELY—Lt. Leon C. Roberts, Montgomery, Ala., 21-year-old pilot in the 99th Fighter Squadron, amazed everybody on the ground by bringing back his plane with this all-but-torn-off tail assembly after hitting high tension electric wires during ground-strafing practice prior to going into action against the enemy.

Experienced pilots who saw the condition of his ship before it was repaired declared that they would have "left it upstairs" and parachuted to safety. Lt. Roberts, youngest pilot in the outfit, handled his plane cooly as long as it was in the air, but after he got out and saw what a wreck he had flown to a landing, he was quite nervous. He escaped without a scratch. (Exclusive Journal and Guide Photo by Thomas W. Young.)

JUL 17 1943

JUL 17 1943

MUST BUILD HOUSE FIRST—Transforming fields in North Africa into attractive living quarters is one of the first jobs of units arriving at a base. In above photos members of the 99th Pursuit Squadron are shown chopping up weeds, leveling walkways, and laying marker stones around their pyramidal tents. Air Corps stars and victory "V's" were the most popular designs for front yards. Four officers live in each tent. Enlisted men are sheltered six to a tent. (Exclusive Journal and Guide photo by Thomas W. Young).

JUL 17 1943

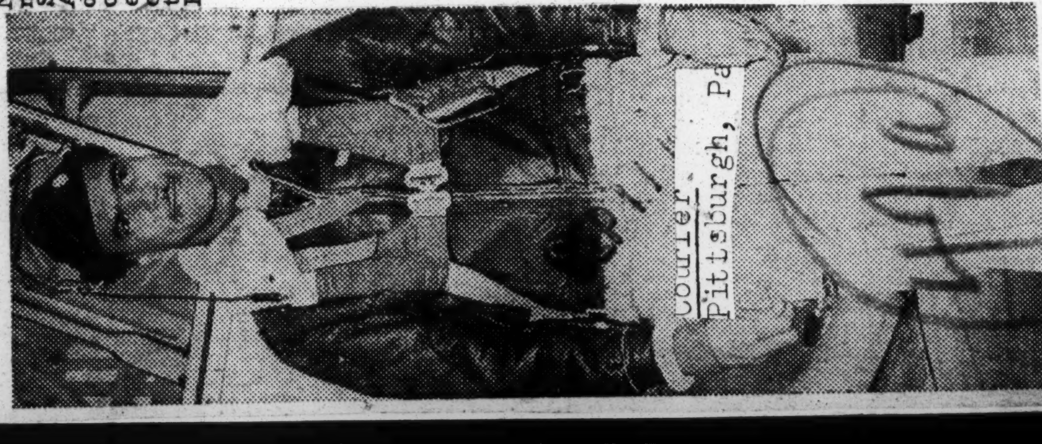
Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

AUG 14 1943

AUG 14 1943

"THERE'S NOTHING TO IT"—The cameraman couldn't find out whom Capt. Lemuel R. Custis, Hartford, Conn., pilot, was writing, but it's a safe bet he was saying, "I've just returned from combat mission, and there's nothing to it—nothing at all." For this photo was made a few minutes after the Howard University graduate got back to his base after participating in combat activities with the 99th Fighter Squadron, (Photo by Thomas W. Young, U. S. War Correspondent).

COMING HOME!



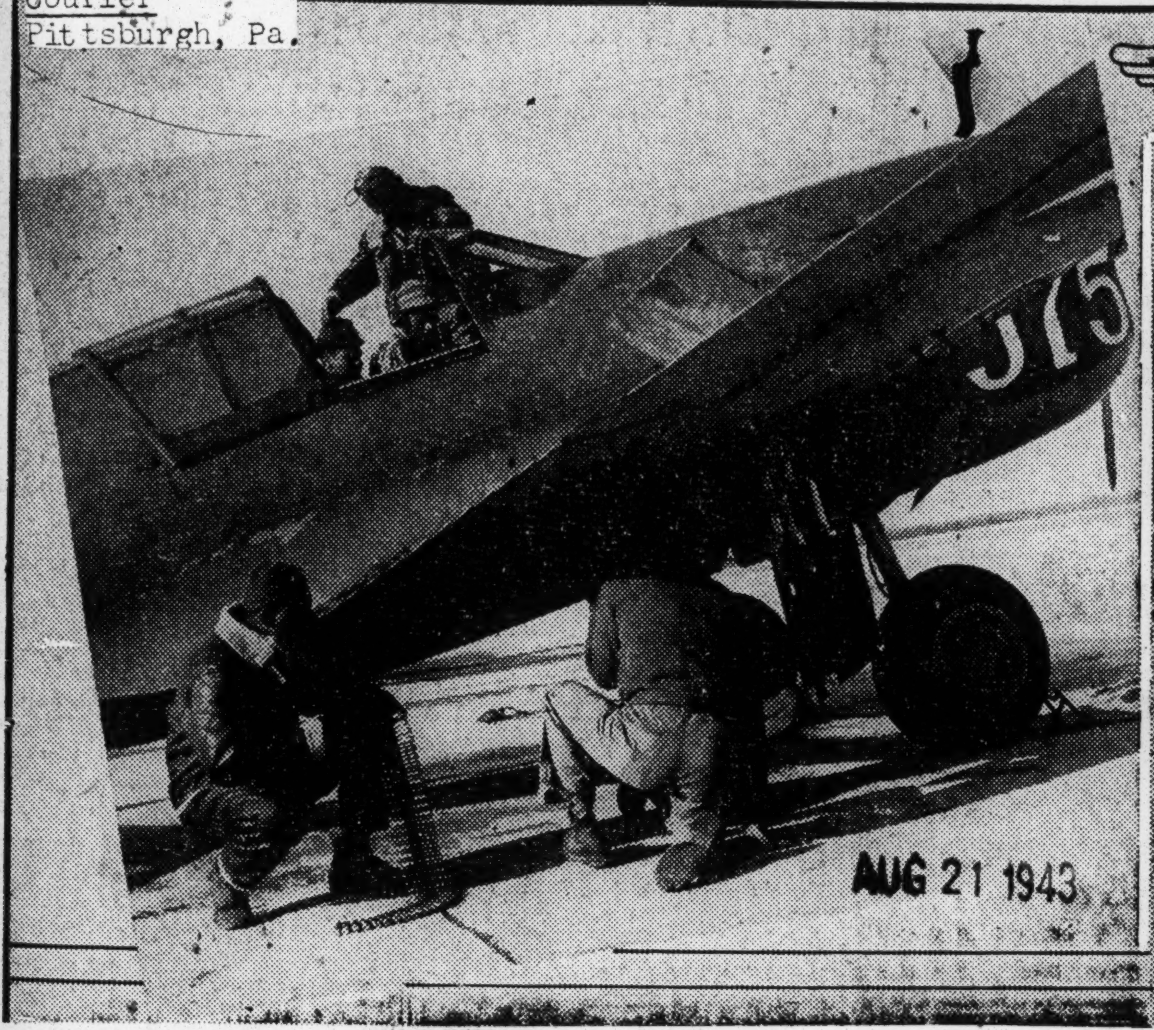
Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., was met by Courier War Correspondent Edgar T. Rouzeau in North Africa as the former commander of the 99th Pursuit Squadron was heading back to America. Recalled for other duties, Colonel Davis was succeeded by Capt. George S. Roberts of Fairmont, W. Va., also colored, as new commander of the famous "Tuskegee Black Eagles."

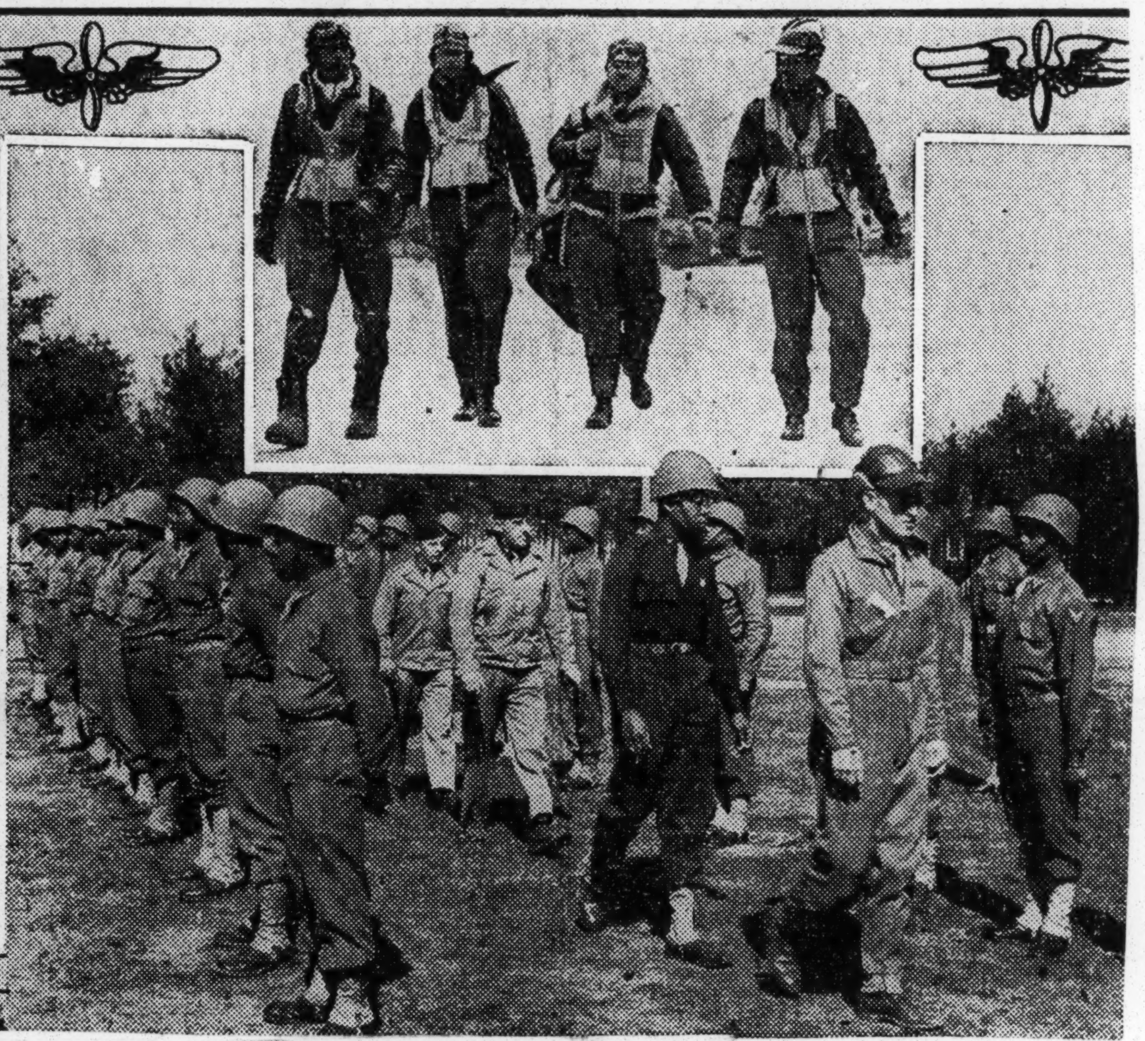
47a-1943

MEMBERS OF THE 332ND FIGHTER GROUP TRAIN DILIGENTLY FOR ACTION AGAINST THE ENEMY

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.



AUG 21 1943



Day by day members of the 332nd Fighter Group, stationed at Oscoda, Michigan, Army Air Field, go about the task of achieving A-1 efficiency in flying, shooting, mechanics and theory, so that they will be ready to take their places beside flying comrades already in the thick of the battle on fighting fronts. Above are photos taken at the training base recently.

Left—Six soldiers at the 332nd Fighter Group work on a P-40 at the base, a sub-base of Selfridge Field. Atop the plane, l to r: Cpl. John McCray, New York, N. Y.; T. Sgt. Eugene Poindexter, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Cpl. John Cosby, Tanna, Ala.; on the ground, holding the ammunition belt prior to arming the gun is Pvt. Harry H. Haile, of Washington, D. C.

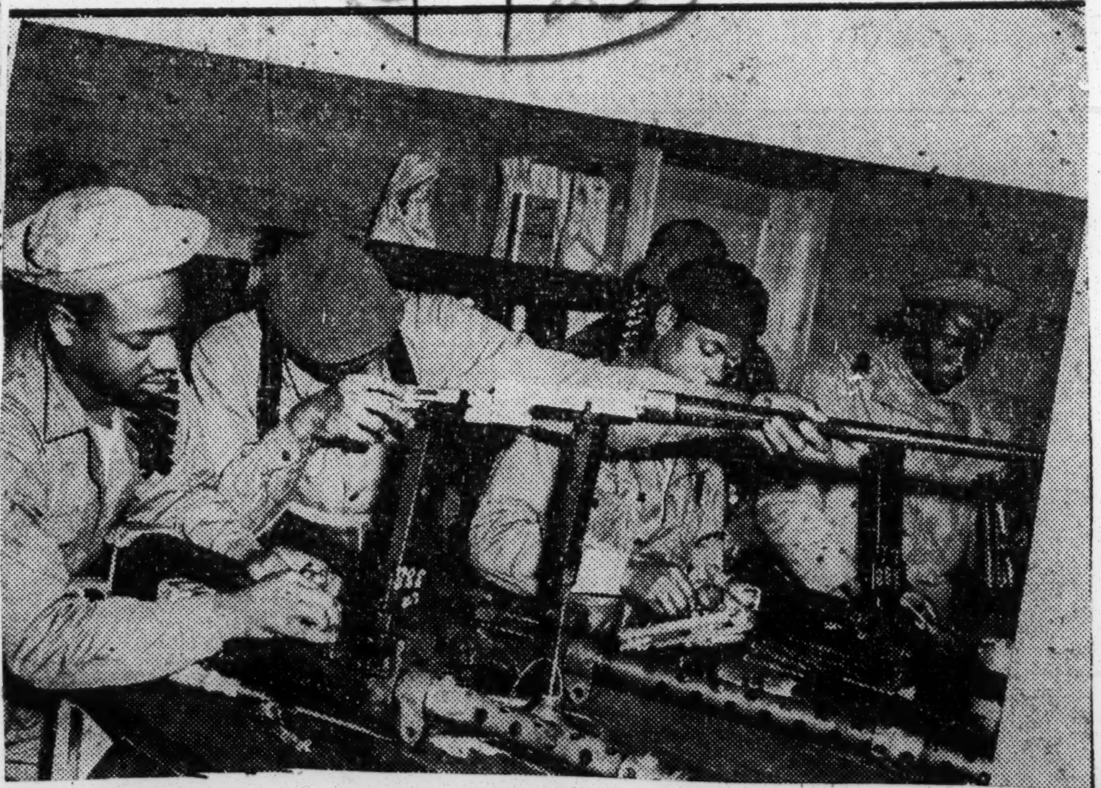
Top photo over center—Pilots of the 332nd Fighter Group ready for gunnery practice head from their Warhawk (P-40) fighter planes for a fight over the range. L. to r in the photograph are: Lts. Wendell O. Pruitt, St. Louis, Mo.; Andrew Maples, Jr., Orange, Va.; John A. Gibson, Chicago, Ill., and N. Milton Hill, Washington, D. C.

Center photo—The 100th Fighter Squadron of the 332nd Fighter Group [illegible] at inspection. The inspection is made by Captain James Hunter, right, and 2nd Lt. Theodore G. Lumpkin, second from right. Lieutenant Lumpkin's home town is Los Angeles, Calif.

Right photo—Four soldiers of the 332nd Fighter Group's Ordnance section are shown maintaining .50 calibre machine guns, used by pilots of the Group in P-40 Pursuit ships at the base.

The four in row, l to r: Cpl. L. A. Moy, Washington, D. C.; Cpl. Wade Fite, Dallas, Texas. Pfc. Azell Hawkins, Kansas City, Kan., and Pvt. Benjamin Mills, Cincinnati, Ohio. The armorer in the rear whose face is obscured is Cpl. Thomas Page of Indianapolis, Ind.

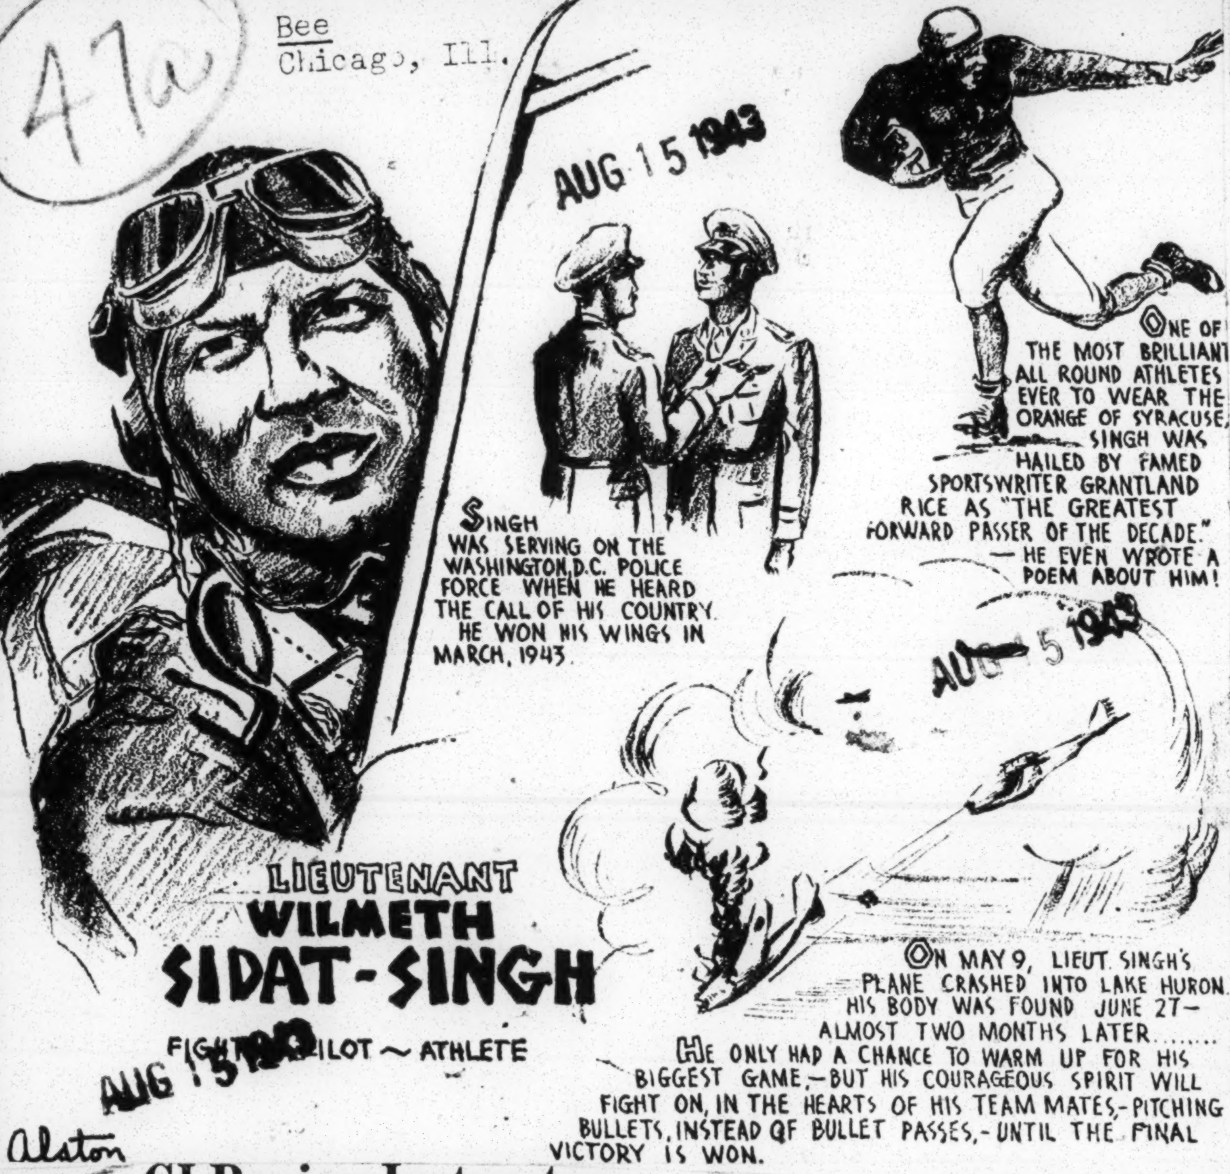
47a



47a

Bee
Chicago, Ill.

AUG 15 1943



LIEUTENANT
WILMETH
SIDAT-SINGH

FIGHTER PILOT ~ ATHLETE

SINGH WAS SERVING ON THE WASHINGTON, D.C. POLICE FORCE WHEN HE HEARD THE CALL OF HIS COUNTRY. HE WON HIS WINGS IN MARCH, 1943.

ONE OF THE MOST BRILLIANT ALL ROUND ATHLETES EVER TO WEAR THE ORANGE OF SYRACUSE, SINGH WAS HAILED BY FAMED SPORTSWRITER GRANTLAND RICE AS "THE GREATEST FORWARD PASSER OF THE DECADE." — HE EVEN WROTE A POEM ABOUT HIM!

ON MAY 9, LIEUT. SINGH'S PLANE CRASHED INTO LAKE HURON. HIS BODY WAS FOUND JUNE 27 — ALMOST TWO MONTHS LATER.......

HE ONLY HAD A CHANCE TO WARM UP FOR HIS BIGGEST GAME, — BUT HIS COURAGEOUS SPIRIT WILL FIGHT ON, IN THE HEARTS OF HIS TEAM MATES, - PITCHING BULLETS, INSTEAD OF BULLET PASSES, - UNTIL THE FINAL VICTORY IS WON.

Alston

GI Boxing Instructors

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

DEC 4 - 1943

47a

DEC 4 - 1943

Pvt. Chuck Jackson, top, and Pvt. Jimmy Stenson, bottom, members of the 37th Aviation Squadron at Grenier Field, N.H., who have been named boxing instructors for soldiers stationed at that post. Jackson, only 24, has six amateur titles under his belt, while Stenson is a Golden Glove winner from Philadelphia. A third instructor is Pvt. Freddie Breedlove of Baltimore.

3 Soldiers Named Boxing Instructors

By CPL. JACOB HUTCHINSON

GRENIER FIELD, N.H.—Three members of the Aviation Squadron here have been named by Lt. Myer Fisher, base physical training officer, as boxing tutors for the GI's stationed at this local air base.

It is the plan of the athletic director to have these outstanding ring gladiators instruct all enlisted men who are anxious to learn or be trained for the post's boxing team. In commenting on the selection of the trio, Lt. Fisher stated, "I believe that the experience and knowledge these soldiers have will add much to the possibility of our having a boxing team to represent this field."

The three chosen were Pvt. Chuck Jackson, New England Golden Gloves champion; Pvt. Freddie Breedlove, of Baltimore, former sparring partner with McLarnin, Barney Ross and Tony Canzoneri, and Pvt. Jimmy (Mexico Kid) Stinson.

Jackson Golden Glover

Jackson, who is 24 years old, is a former three sports athlete at the Schenley High in Pittsburgh. He has engaged in 136 bouts in four years and collected four titles.

Breedlove has fought some of the leading fighters in the Middle Atlantic area, including engagements with Sammy Daniels and Tiger Sullivan.

Only 23, Stinson has achieved a remarkable fistic record. In 1936, he won the CCC bantamweight title at Gettysburg, Pa., and the following year won the AAU title of the same division in Baltimore. Two years later, he was crowned Golden Glove lightweight king in Philadelphia.

47a-1943

Lts. Mitchell, DC, White and McCullin Missing in Action

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Lt. John Morgan Who Bailed Out over Messina Turns Up with Squadron; 35 Promotions

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Sicily

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY — (By Mail, Delayed)—On August 17, 2nd Lieut. John Morgan of Cartersville, Ga., and Tuskegee Institute came back to the outfit after an absence of a week. Everybody was glad to see him because the last news was that he had been seen jumping out of his plane near Messina and parachuting down to earth. No one knew whether he had been killed or captured by the Germans.

But when he walked into camp with a few scratches, laughing and kidding as usual, a sign of relief went up from officers and enlisted men alike. You at home can never know how a man is missed out of a small group like this, where everyone knows everybody else. Morgan is the third one of the gang to jump and live. The other two are Sam Bruce of Seattle and Dick Bolling of Phoebus, Va. All came back uninjured.

Three Missing in Action

This is significant because three other men from among us did not have time to jump. We never talk about them. Their names are never mentioned. One day they were eating and playing games and talking about post-war plans back home—then they went on a mission—and never came back. Funny thing, too, they were very quiet chaps, and I liked them a hell of a lot. Everybody did. But that's war for you: here today and gone tomorrow—if I may be trite and bluntly truthful.

By this time, the War Department should have notified their next of kin, so I shall give you their names. Missing in action are: 2nd Lieut. James L. McCullin, St. Louis, Mo., graduate of Kentucky State; 1st Lieut. Sherman W. White, Montgomery, Ala., and Chicago University; and 1st Lieut. Paul G. Mitchell, Washington and Howard University. May they rest in peace!

Lieut. Letcher Special Service Officer

1st Lieut. Henry M. Letcher and his special service group are a source of constant pleasure to the outfit. Lieut. Letcher, who taught at Howard and in the D.C. public schools, has surrounded himself with a bunch of entertainers who were professionals in civilian life, and they are appreciated by us all. Buck Newsome, of Detroit; Shorty Boo, formerly of the team of Pepper and Pepper; Donald Qander, quaint master of ceremonies; Jimmy Anderson, of the golden tenor; Peter Cobb of Brooklyn, whose latest song, written overseas, "Why Make a Fool Out of Me?" you will probably hear after the war.

Incidentally, Cobb plays the piano and trumpet and was an arranger in civilian life; Roland Roulette sings scat songs, and the quintet of Shag Crawford, Jimmy Anderson, Bill Warner, Richard Dunlap and Joseph Taylor is as good as any I've ever heard anywhere.

Lt. Letcher really produces, even in Sicily. The Mayor of Licata was persuaded to lend him a piano for all shows while in the neighborhood. Doughnuts and coffee were served regularly. A truck was backed up against a tree with a sheet on its side and we had two movies regularly. This is a real treat out here in an olive grove. Jerry is so understanding he never comes over to disturb the men.

Selling a Haircut

Maybe you wonder how we get our hair cut. Well, some units have a barber who does nothing but clip all day. That's not true in this squadron. Our barber does a full day's work, then after chow sets up a box and goes to work. It takes him almost a week to get around to all the officers, then he and an assistant fix up enlisted men. Yes, we get haircuts, shaves now and then and then shoe shines — though it does no good as far as girls are concerned. It merely keeps up morale, they say.

Our barber is S/Sgt. Walter E. Turner of Los Angeles. He and his tent mates call themselves the Secret Seven — for what reason, I don't know. The others are: S/Sgt. Hugh Holmes, Atlanta; Sgt. Ardra Norman, Waco, Texas, who is a propeller specialist; Sgt. Leslie H. Devall, Port Arthur, Texas, dope and fabric department, which has to do with rudder and camouflage (is that right?); Sgt. Harold O'Neal, Vaux Hall, N.J.; S/Sgt. Dave Wormley, Philly, and S/Sgt. Eddie Hartgrove, Brooklyn.

Lieut. Mitchell

Effective August 13, the following promotions were made:

To be master sergeant: T/Sgt. Fred T. Archer, NYC.

To be technical sergeants: S/Sgt. Ralph A. Burnley, Philadelphia; and S/Sgt. Thomas W. Downs, Seguin, Texas.

To be staff sergeants: Sgt. Elijah Coleman, Cranford, N.J.; George D. Johnson, Atlantic City, N.J.; Sgt. William H. Young, Jr., Richmond, Va., and Sgt. Edward M. Hartgrove, Brooklyn.

To be sergeant: Cpl. Robert H. Abies, Brooklyn; Cpl. Hubert E. Bigelow, Jr., Orange, N.J.; Cpl. Arber L. Grier, Jr., NYC; Cpl. Edward R. Pryor, Lawrenceville, Va.; Cpl. Irvin L. Sharpe, Philadelphia; Cpl. Wardell P. Alexander, Atlantic City, N.J.; Cpl. Edward A. Boone, Brooklyn; Cpl. James Hileygar, NYC; Cpl. Raymond Scruggs, NYC; Cpl. Joseph H. Spooner, NYC; and Cpl. Arthur T. Williams, Pasadena, Cal.

To be corporal: Pfc. Lucius Anderson, Atlantic City, N.J.; Pfc. Fred Munger, Brooklyn; Pfc. Thomas Morris, Brooklyn; Pfc. Albert Porche, Houma, La.; and Pfc. Roy Teague, Selma, Ala.

To be privates first class: Pvt. Russell J. Bacon, Washington, D.C.; Pvt. Ernest Brown, NYC; Pvt. George Grooms, Brooklyn; Pvt. Joseph F. Mayers, NYC; Pvt Robert Newsome, Detroit; Pvt. Napoleon B. Watkins, Memphis, Tenn.; Pvt. Leonard R. Brewer, NYC; Pvt. Harvey Cain, Jr., NYC; Pvt. Leo S. Holmes, Chester, Pa.; Pvt. Charles E. McDonald, Philadelphia; Pvt. John H Turner, NYC; and Pvt. John W. Young, Memphis, Tenn.

IN ORDANCE GROUP

Met group of ordnance officers a few days ago. Included Second Lieuts. Charles Palmer, Atlantic City; Nolan R. Best, Johnson C. Smith College; William O. Dickerson, Cheyney; Edward D. Hudson, Wilberforce; Clarence E. Webb, Wayne U. of Detroit.

SEP 11 1943

Army Flying Prepares Men for Post War

Afro-American

Aviators Will Be the Key People When Peace Comes

Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK TO CHINA TRIP TAKES 38 HRS

No Spot on Earth Over 62 Hours from Local Airport

WASHINGTON.

"Things move so fast over there that the boys hardly have time to plan 24 hours ahead," Col. B. O. Davis, former commander of the Ninety-ninth Fighter Squadron in North Africa, stated recently.

Whether or not the flyers have time to realize it, it is quite clear that they will be among the key people after this war—as they are in it.

Aviation Geography

A recent World Atlas, published by Rand McNally, places emphasis on what they call "aviation" geography and how it is creating a new world—"a world of shrinking distances and changing perspectives."

Today planes cross the Atlantic in 7 hours and an air trip from New York to Moscow takes less time than a train trip from New York to Miami. By the popular air routes Detroit is nearer to Russia than New York is by sea.

Commercial Transport

By commercial tr[illegible]t (average spe[illegible] [illegible] miles per hour), no spot on earth is more than 62½ hours' flying time from your local airport.

From New York to Chungking, China, by air, is 7,500 miles or 38 hours; from New York to Chungking by train and ship is 11,300 miles or 30 days.

There are about 27 flyers and 250 service men with the Ninety-ninth in North Africa, consisting of a single squadron. [illegible] are three squadrons and [illegible] men at Selfridge Field, Mich., and a large number of flyers at Tuskegee Institute.

All these men are getting definite training that will fit them directly for the new Aviation World that is to be after the war.

OCT 2 1943

Mrs. Rivers Holds Home Line When Husband Is Campaigning

By LULA JONES GARRETT

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

MRS. FRANCIS E. RIVERS

NEW YORK CITY. — This week Mrs. Francis E. Rivers, wife of the newly-elected $17,500-per-year city co[illegible]justice, [illegible]ed a sigh of rel[illegible]d pl[illegible] brief respite from telephone and mail, which she has handled during her husband's campaign.

Strictly a "lieutenant on the home front," Mr. Rivers confines her aid to affairs which may be handled in their Convent Avenue apartment. Here, covering the telephone was her chief assignment. Mr Rivers dislikes even one call to go unanswered.

In Secretarial Role

In addition she sorts letters, making notations calling his attention to essential points, and follows his instructions in drafting answers. All of this, of course, is in a non-professional role. For, though her stenographic experience prior to their marriage enables her to fill a post as secretary, the bulk of her husband's mail went to his downtown office to be attended to by the staff in the campaign office.

Old Stuff to the "Mrs."

The last campaign was [illegible] old stuff to Mrs. Rivers. She has been "in politics" for thirteen years. Her husband was elected to the assembly in 1929, and has been manager of a division of the Republican National Committee during three presidential campaigns, those of Hoover, Landon, and Willkie. He served as assistant district attorney for six years and had held the present post by appointment since September. Prior to his entrance into politics he enjoyed a lucrative law practice.

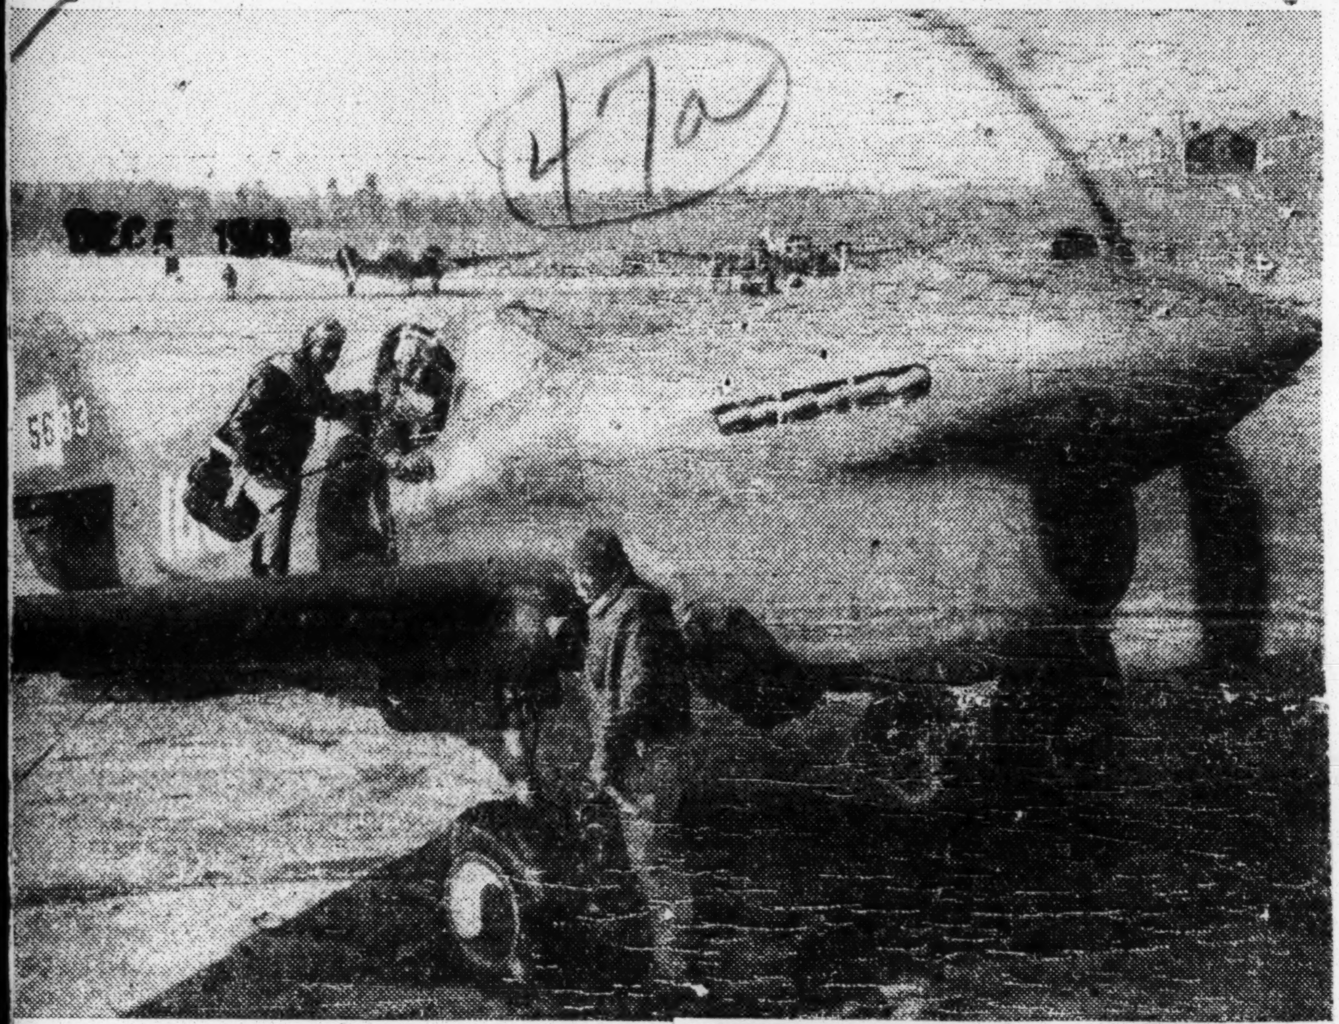
Live Simple Life

The Riverses live a very conservative life. She is justly proud of being a fine cook. Without the aid of regular servants she cares for their five-room apartment. They see an occasional serious movie, and while he reads the more se[illegible] materia[illegible] keeps up with [illegible] fiction for the family. They go to her childhood home in Saratoga for the summer, where he plays golf.

Incidentally, she was a war bride, having been married to Mr. Rivers a week before he sailed for France during World War I.

NOV 13 1943

New War Birds Sharpening Their Claws



Second Lieutenant Alfred Q. Carroll, extreme left, and Flight Officer Nathaniel P. Rayburg, seated in cockpit, talk over aeronautical points, prior to the latter's initial flight in [illegible]ter plane at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. These pilots were recently commissioned [illegible] Tuskegee Army Air Field, and are now experiencing fighter pilot training. The crew chief, Technical Sergeant Robert L. Brown of Lincoln, Nebraska, has just given the plane a final check. Lieutenant Carroll, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Q. Carroll of 325 61st Street, N. E., Washington, D. C., is a former Howard University student. Flight Officer Rayburg, son of Mrs. Phillis Oliver of [illegible]54 South 23rd Street, Arlington, Va., is a former Washington Post Office employee. — (Photo by AAF Training Command).

DEC 5 1943

DEC 5 1943

Tuskegee Fliers Begin Training As Bombardiers

NOV 24 1943

Former Pursuit Aspirants Get A New Chance

Atlanta, Georgia
Daily World

KESSLER FIELD, Miss.—(ANP)—More than 100 former aviation cadets from Tuskegee Army Air field arrived here last week to begin training as bombardiers. The men were scheduled to go through psychological testing this week before being assigned to regular training schedules.

NOV 24 1943

All of the men have flying experience because all of them formerly were aspirants to become pursuit pilots. Failing because of academic requirements or some little quirk which prevented their winning the coveted wings of a pursuit pilot, the boys have a new opportunity as they strive to become "air marksmen" and take their places in bombing crews. It is understood they will also receive navigation training, the jobs of navigator bombardier being combined in the future.

Practically every ex-cadet on the Tuskegee field except those were eliminated because of some physical-ly was eligible and eager to join this [illegible] group of Negro cadets to get bombardier training. In giving the men who had sought to be pilots an opportunity to become bombardiers the air corps is following the same procedure used with white flying students.

NOV 24 1943

At the same time a dozen cadets who had finished training at Tuskegee in twin engine flying, left for Mather field for further training as bomber pilots.

These movements indicate that bomber crew training is deinitely on its way. The men will get their first training at Tuskegee field and then be assigned to other bases for further training. Half of the classes at Tuskegee in the future will be twin engine trainees for bombers. The balance will specialize on the single engine jobs and [illegible] used to form replacements for the men of the 332nd group now training at Selfridge field, Mich.

NOV 24 1943

Tuskegee Air Field To Get Negro Instructors?

Birmingham, Ala
Weekly Review

SEP 25 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 23,—(ANP)—Negro pilots, members of the last class to graduate from the Tuskegee Army Air Field are to be returned there as instructors, according to rumors current her They will replace white instructors who are to be assigned elsewhere.

There have been previously no Negro instructors at the Army Air Field, although flying teachers are used in primary training and at Moton Field, Tuskegee, where secondary training is given.

SEP 25 1943

It has also been learned that the 332nd Fighter Group, in training at Selfridge Field, Michigan, has been assigned to the First Army Air Corps based in New York. This unit, composed of three squadrons, is understood to be complete w th a full complement of ground crew. All the pilots are graduates of the Tuskegee Army Air School and Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., recently recalled from Sicily, where he commanded the 99th Pursuit Squadron will command the 332nd.

SEP 25 1943

99TH BASED IN SICILY NOW, SAYS STIMSON

Defender
Chicago, Ill

AUG 14 1943

Secretary Holds Parley With Lt. Col. Davis During Visit

AUG 14 1943

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.—The 99th Pursuit squadron is now based in Sicily and in the middle of the hot battle to clear the Axis armies off the Mediterranean island at the tip of the Italian boot, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson revealed this week.

Stimson also announced that Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officeer of the all-Negro squadron, flew from the Sicily base to North Africa for a conference with him during the Secretary's recent tour abroad.

What was discussed Stimson did not reveal.

The presence of the 99th in Sicily and the conference with Lt. Col. Davis were disclosed during a discussion by the Secretary of War of his trip abroad. He said he had made the trip for a double purpose — to see the troops at first hand and to confer on the ground with leaders of the war effort. He declared he wanted the troops to know that those responsible for their welfare had not forgotten them.

In England, Stimson said, he saw ground troops, both white and Negro, in a training program that never lets up.

"The men have fitted in very well," he declared. "Everywhere, I saw evidence of allied unity."

He said he inspected one of the Negro units in England with General Lee. "I found a very interesting situation. The units are working very vigorously and were cooperating and getting along very well with all other units," he said.

When asked by a Negro press representative whether this meant he had expected that they would not be getting along well with other troops, he reddened, raised his voice, and answered: "I've been asked that question many times before by you gentlemen, and I thought I would anticipate it."

In Africa, where Stimson said he conferred with air generals in Tunisia, he said he saw an engineering unit of Negroes which had first been stationed in Liberia. They had performed a very valuable work in construction and repair jobs on airports for the Sicily invasion, he declared.

He indicated there were some Quartermaster troops with the landing forces in the Sicily invasion, and that there are now some Negro anti-air-craft units in Sicily.

47a-1943

99th's Word for Gossip in Italy Is 'Spratmore'

DEC 18 1943

Afro-American

Off Duty and at Night, U.S. Fliers Outtalk a Sewing Circle

DEC 25 1943

Baltimore, Md

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY—In small towns they call it gossip. In political circles they refer to this plentiful commodity as propaganda. With the man in the street it is known as a rumor. But in a certain fighter squadron everybody calls it "spratmore."

Spratmore is something you heard from somebody, somewhere; and everybody who repeats it seems bound to add one or two embellishments. Spratmore may be founded on fact, but more often it is the product of a fertile imagination.

Wish Father to Thought

The best spratmore around camp here is that engendered by wishful thinking. Last summer, when this squadron was at Cape Bon in North Africa, the best liked and most often repeated spratmore said that the entire squadron was going back to the States after three months of combat.

Nothing anybody could say could withstand the belligerent arguments that proved beyond all doubt that after a short experimental period, the whole caboodle was to return. I shall never forget the withering looks and stern remarks directed my way when I suggested, timidly, of course, that perhaps the squadron might stay overseas for the winter.

"You're nothing but a kill-joy," a certain pilot snapped at me. "You newspaper guys don't give a damn about a man's life; all you want is to get a story for your so-and-so paper."

Home by Christmas?

The next choice bit of spratmore had the outfit back home by Christmas. That lasted several weeks—until the colonel went home and replacements began to arrive. Holiday parties were planned in New York and other cities, and a few optimistic souls wrote letters that had folks at home preparing for a Christmas homecoming.

Many [illegible] Rumors

Spratmore, however, is not confined to going home. This sotto voce information has had numerous strange rumors. Turkey has been in the war two or three times. Germany has been wiped from the face of the earth on several occasions. All rationing has disappeared from the States. The WAC will soon be over here to hold hands with the enlisted men. Soldiers will get another raise in pay. Whiskey is now permitted to come through the mails. And men are so scarce at home that women are raiding homes for aged males.

Off duty and at night, soldiers are more gossipy than any sewing circle. They argue about anything for any length of time. And they always have inside dope straight from the orderly room—or the latrine. They're not particular about the source.

Argue About Anything

Somebody said the British are better ack-ack gunners than the Americans! Somebody quotes figures to prove it could not be so. Certain fighter planes are no longer manufactured. They are so, another contends; a new shipment has just arrived. Is North African wine better than Italian? Who can drink the most: British, Americans or Canadians? Spratmore answers, and spratmore proves its point.

But correspondents are regarded as the last source for reliable spratmore. Often with the latest news from headquarters ringing in your ears, you have to keep mum. After two days with the President at Casablanca, I had to deny knowledge of his visit, to discourage the spread of the rumor. My spratmore is for home consumption.

Pilots Strafe Enemy's Front Lines in Italy

Afro-American

Baltimore, Md

DEC 25 1943

Tuskegee Products Working in Mixed Eighth Army Group

SOME MAKE THREE FLIGHTS IN A DAY

Capt. Roberts Leads Third of Missions; No Planes Lost

DEC 25 1943

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in North Africa

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ADVANCED AIR BASE IN ITALY—(By Cable, Censored)—Nine successful missions in a single day's activity of less than ten hours was the record established by the 99th Fighter Squadron in its busiest day of strafing enemy front lines last week.

Working with a fighter group attached to the British Eighth Army, the squadron, led by Capt. George Roberts, commanding officer, made aerial history, handling without mishap one third of the group's record run of missions for the day.

The squadron is giving close support to the work to the Allied forces bombing enemy pin-point targets, helping knock out German resistance whenever called upon, and has won high praise from the group commander for the record day's achievement.

Passes 1000-Sortie Mark

In chalking up this record, the squadron passed its 1000-sortie mark. Since June, when it first went into action against an enemy squadron, it has completed 231 missions with a six-month record of 1100 sorties as of December 10.

On the day the nine missions were made, all planes returned safely, although much enemy ack-ack was encountered. The pilots stated: "Jerry was hot on our trail, but we managed to get home safely."

2 Planes Hit

Two planes were partially damaged. One had a bullet hole in a wing and its windshield shattered; another was hit by [illegible] calibre shell.

Pilots participating in three missions on the day of the record run were Capts. Roberts and Charles B. Hall; First Lts. John W. Rogers, Herbert E. Carter, Price D. Rice, Erwin B. Lawrence, James T. Wiley, Leon C. Roberts; Second Lts. Charles Bailey, William E. Griffin.

Those participating in two missions were First Lts. Edward L. Toppins, Allen G. Lane, Henry B. Perry, Howard L. Baugh; Second Lts. Clinton B. Mills, Herman A. Lawson, Elwood T. Driver, Lewis C. Smith, Leonard Jackson.

Other pilots involved in the record were First. Lt. John H. Morgan, Second Lt. John A. Gibson, George T. McCrumby, William C. Allen.

Wins Gen. Arnold's Praise

A signal honor was given the squadron several days later when Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Allied Air Forces, visited the group and congratulated the men on their achievements. Accompanying Gen. Arnold were Lt. Gen. Carl Spaatz and Maj. Gen. Cannon.

Squadron Commander Roberts of Fairmont, W.Va., First Lt. Henry M. Letcher, executive officer of Washington, and twenty-five enlisted men represented the squadron at a group review.

Gen. Arnold shook hands with Capt. Roberts and gave the squadron a message.

Enlisted men representing the squadron at the review included Sgt. Roscoe B. Smith, Washington; Sgt. Irvin L. Sharpe, S/Sgt. Irvin Weir, T/Sgt. Ralph A. Burnley, Philadelphia; Cpl. Leo Holmes, Chester, Pa.; S/Sgt. Percy C. Corbin, Pulaski, Va.; Sgt. Morris S. Beavers, Atlanta; Cpl. Robert E. Singleton, Cleveland; Sgt. Will Etheridge, Grove Hill, Ala., and Sgt. Robert T. Howard, Jr.

Tuskegee Army Band In Parade

SEP 11 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—It was a great day for a parade. The sun beamed down on the thousands of spectators who lined the sidewalks of Peachtree Street in Atlanta, Ga.

Six bands were to lead a gigantic display of the armed might of the United States Army. The occasion, graced by many high ranking officials, proposed to impress upon the countless milling spectators the new regional premiere of the much publicized motion picture, "This Is the Army" at the Fox Theatre the following night in Atlanta.

The parade was a huge success. Armored cars, small amphibian tanks, jeeps, Red Cross conveyances, and giant-sized staff cars rolled slowly and majestically at the tempo of marching men in khaki and Marine blue.

Far down the sun-baked concrete street was heard the pealing, spirited strains of "This Is the Army, Mr. Jones." The applause for the all-WAC band from Fort Oglethrope, Ga., continued down ahead at the reviewing stand. But there was something new about this other band rapidly approaching in perfect cadence and piston-like motion from the rear of the parade. The band was in full view now and the 60 pieces of band and bugle corps identified itself as the 313th Air Force Band from the famed Tuskegee Army Air Field. The applause commenced stubbornly, then grew and grew as the rising sound of bugles blared out the tune "This Is the Army, Mr. Jones." Cold chills scurried the spines of the sedulous throng of spectators who glued their eyes to marching musical excellence.

At the parade's finish, First Lt. Frank L. Drye, the director of this band, was seen shaking hands with the stubby little Marine Major who marched directly behind his band. The Major was congratulating the band leader and former member of Tuskegee Institute's music department for 20 years. He said, "I've marched down Peachtree Street with many bands during the last ten years but never before have I marched to a band that sets a good a marching cadence as yours."

Perspiration rolled down the cheeks of the TAAF bandmaster. We was proud of his boys as he looked on them, weary of the scorching heat and long march. He would like to have said, "Well, you were pretty good boys," but instead he realized that he was a soldier and that he had only carried out his orders. His mission was accomplished. He had heeded Major Morrison's invitation, as head of the Army Emergency Relief Fund of the Fourth Service Command. He and his organization who aided in selling over a million dollars in bonds this year, had stitched new honors on the scroll o great unit achievement at TAAF.

332nd Gets P-39's As Davis Takes Over

OCT 16 1943

Defender

Chicago, Ill

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—With a smart array of new equipment, the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field is fast attaining their training peak, the War Department announced this week.

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr. has assumed command of the group.

Included in the new equipment are P-39's (commonly called the Airacobra), P-47's and P-40's. The P-40 will be remembered as the tough air arm that brought much recognition to Lt. Col. Davis' 99th Fighter Squadron in the African campaign. The 99th Fighter Squadron is presently serving in Italy.

New camera equipment has been provided for use in firing practice to step up accuracy with the .50 calibre machine gun. The Army has also provided improved installations on the firing range at Oscoda, sub-base of Selfridge Field.

Many pilots of the 332nd Fighter Group have been referred to as "naturals" by instructors and superiors when describing the manner in which they operate the P-39. The Airacobra, with its 1150-horsepower Allison engine mounted behind the pilot, has established an enviable reputation in combat.

There has also been a step-up in flying hours at the field. Formerly reported as between 400 and 500 hours a week, the flying time now accomplished by pilots in training totals above 2,000 hours a week.

Confusion over the status of Lt. Col. Davis was cleared up by the War Department. Lt. Col. Davis is now in command of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field, Mich. He had been previously reported as second in command, as executive officer.

According to the War Department, Lt. Col. Davis was sent to Selfridge with intention of placing him in command. He was temporarily assigned as executive officer for a few days in order that he might catch on to his new duties. The order officially naming him commander became effective on October 7.

Davis is the first Negro officer ever to command an Air Force combat unit. He was honored last week in the presence of some 400 guests at a reception held in the Post Officers' club at Selfridge. Among high ranking army officers in attendance were Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis Sr., his father; Maj. Harriet West of the WACs, one of the two highest ranking Negro women in the army; and Capt. Homer Roberts, one of the two Negro officers assigned to the Bureau of Public Relations of the War Department in Washington.

Lt. Col. Davis returned early last month from Sicily where he commanded the 99th Fighter Squadron. His new command is a fighter group, which is composed of four units such as the 99th. According to the army's table of organization, he is now in line to become one of the army's youngest colonels. The commander of a fighter group, according to the table of organization, should be a full colonel. Davis is 30 years old, and a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Lt. Col. Davis relieved Col. Robert R. Selway Jr., who was designated as officer in charge of training of all First Fighter Command units stationed at Selfridge Field and at the Oscoda, Mich., Army Air Field, a sub-base of Selfridge Field. Col. Selway remains on detached service at Selfridge Field for the purpose of performing this duty, and is attached to the 403rd Fighter Squadron.

Both Col. Davis and Col. Selway are graduates of the United States Military Academy at West Point, Col. Selway in the class of 1924 and Col. Davis in the class of 1936.

The 332nd Fighter Group was transferred from Tuskegee to Selfridge Field on March 28, 1943, at which time the group was commanded by Lt. Col. Sam W. Westbrook. Col. Selway assumed command upon his arrival here on May 17.

Component units of the 332nd Fighter Group are the 100th Fighter Squadron, 301st Fighter Squadron, 302nd Fighter Squadron and the headquarters and headquarters squadron.

Last "All Fighter" Group Graduate At Tuskegee

OCT [illegible] 1943

Houston Informer

By ALBERT ANDERSON

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD—(ANP)—Perhaps a situation surrounding fliers should always be more or less "up in the air." Certainly such a position has characterized much of life as it has surrounded the doughty airmen being trained at this post. Probably the fundamental cause is that teaching Negroes to fly and making them an integral part of the army air corps was not envisioned at the start and always has been a sort of carbuncle on the corps' n[illegible].

OCT 16 [illegible]

No So with Negroes

All of the white pilots being trained for the army are fitted in accordance to a stated plan which is related to combat needs. Not so with the Negro pilots. Despite the fact that the government has spent nearly $4,000,000 in the development of this fine field; even though colored fliers have proven beyond doubt that they could fly with the best, as Lt. Col. Ben Davis said when he returend from North Africa, "Negro pilots are no longer an experiment," still they are an extra something, on the outside so far as the air corps [illegible]oncerned.

Originally there [illegible]s no plan to use Negroes. The pressure exerted by Negro public opinion and the effective planning and cooperation b[illegible]r. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee, plus the influence of many other racial factors finally got the field located and started. It sounds fantastic to say so today but it is reported that even though they were building the field, there were many higher-ups in the air corps who never felt it would be a success.

So the 99th Pursuit Squadron was trained and after it had completed its normal work they did not know what to do with it. To make it an inegrated part of a regular fighter group would defeat the ideas of those who felt that even in the highly individualistic pursuit planes where a man flies to his glory or his death all alone, Negroes could not be made part of white units. So the 99th stayed at Tuskegee and practiced until they became the most expert fliers still on this side.

Developed Fighter Group

Meanwhile it was decided to develop an all Negro fighter group. This would call for several squadrons to make up the group. With the hundreds of men necessary for ground crews and the perhaps hundreds or two pilots which replacements would require, it was felt that despite the fact that the United States has trained 50,000 white pilots in the last two or three years the couple of hundred would suffice to satisfy Negro public opinion, so that Negro fliers are still outside the "regular" army air corps plan.

Then came the anxiety upon the part of Negroes to be included in more than just the pursuit plane groups. They wanted to be part of the highly publicized bomber-fighters too. They began to exert pressure. Directed at the office of the civilian aide, the pressure was felt. Slowly the air corps responded. All right, it will train bombers, men who will fly two engined jobs instead of the single engine pursuit planes along.

The air corps could have sent a group of colored youth on to school just as it sends whites. Instead, the emphasis is being shifted from pursuit flying. This class which graduated from TAAF last week is the last "all-fighter" group which will probably graduate at Tuskegee. This doubtlessly means there will be no more fighter units after the 332nd. A crew, perhaps half of the students at TAAF, will go into pursuit flying so as to make up replacements for those put out of action with the 332nd. The rest of the pilots will be trained in two engine bomber flying, leaving Tuskegee afer they get their preliminary phase for training in one of the bomber-pilot schools, probably Fort Worth, Texas.

Perhaps we did not carry our pressure far enough. It looks as though we are getting half a loaf and that there is danger in hashing up the fine job Tuskegee field has been doing in its specialized field when all we will get out of the bomber angle is a token representation. The army [illegible] dies hard the howls and protests which we raise are [illegible]times not intelligently directed to secure the best overall results for which we all pray.

First Bomber Pilot Class Graduates At Tuskegee

Defender
Chicago. Ill

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — The first Negro pilots in the history of the U. S. Army Air Forces to receive the coveted silver wings of twin engine pilots were commissioned second lieutenants at the graduation exercises held in the Post Chapel at the Tuskegee Army Air Field last Wednesday [illegible]ning.

Included among [illegible]nitial group of Negro bomber pilots, who represent eight states are Second Lt. Henri F. [illegible]tcher, San Antonio, Texas; Second Lt. Perry H[illegible]son Jr., Atlanta, Ga.; Second Lt. Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N. J.; Second Lt. Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore, Md.; Second Lt. Jerome D. Spurlin, Chicago, Ill.; Second Lt. William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass.; Second Lt. Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, Calif.; Second Lt. Herman R. Campbell Jr., New York City; and Second Lt. Haldane King, of Jamaica, N. Y.

This group of flyers will report to Mather Field, Calif., where they will undergo transitional bomber training in B-25, Mitchell bombers.

Address By 99th Pilot's Father

T. M. Campbell, Field Agent, U.S. Department of Agriculture, and father of First [illegible] William Campbell, first of [illegible] all-Negro fighter squadron to bomb the Axis, delivered the main address to one of the largest audiences ever to witness a graduation at this base.

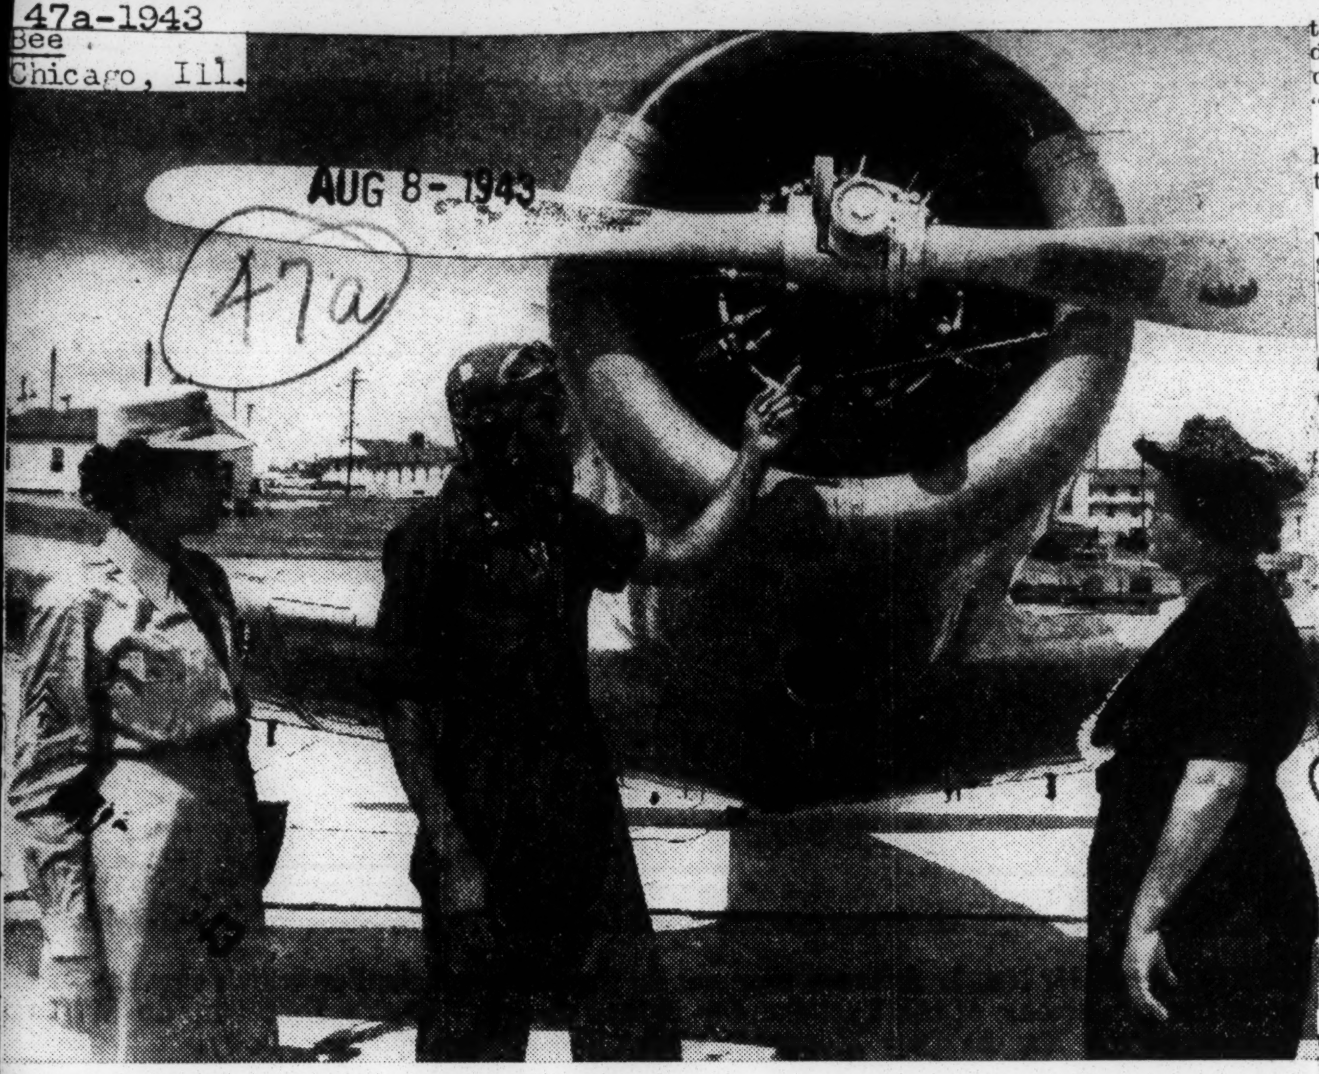
In his speech, Mr. Campbell, who has two sons in the armed forces and a daughter in the WAC, pointed out to the new flying officers that, "The courage, skill and precision, which you have exhibited during your period of training here will not only be of great inspiration to those following in your footsteps but will command the respect and admiration of both races of people in this immediate community, this state, this region, this nation and other parts of the world where you may chance to go."

The three top-ranking cadets of the class were awarded prizes emblematic of their all-around excellence as potential officers in the Air Forces. First honors were [illegible]ded to Second Lt. Leslie A. [illegible]ms, former student at the University of California. Second honors went to Second Lt. Edward M. Thomas, former Chicago postal clerk, while Second Lt. Harvey N. Pinkney, who attended Morgan college, won third prize.

Cadets completing their training and commissioned as single engine fighter pilots comprised a majority of the class and included representatives of eight states and the District of Columbia.

Listed among the single engine graduates are the following second lieutenants: Gwynn W. Pearson, Oakland, Calif.; James B. Brown and William Thomas, Los Angeles, Calif.; Roger B. Brown, Glencoe, Ill.; Oscar D. Hutton, Emory L. Robinson and Edward M. Thomas of Chicago, Ill.; Alfred Q. Carroll, Washington, D. C.; Clarence W. Dart, Elmira, N. Y.; Charles W. Dickerson and Theodore H. Mills of New Rochelle, N. Y.; Hugh St. Clair Warner, New York City; Edward Laird, Brighton, Ala.; Ivey L. Leftwich, Fairfield, Ala.; Turner W. Payne, Wichita Falls, Texas; Earl S. Sherard, Columbus, Ohio; Lugene D. Smith, Cincinnati, Ohio; Nathaniel C. Stewart, Philadelphia, Pa.; and Paul C. Simmons Jr., Detroit, Mich.

47a-1943
Bee
Chicago, Ill.



AUG 8 - 1943

PILOT EXPLAINS HOW IT WORKS TO FAMILY — Second Lieut. Robert H. Wiggins of Brooklyn, N. Y., is shown explaining the "whys' and hows" of the trainer plane to his bride, the former Miss Lillian Williams, and her grandmother, Mrs. Nellie Holt of Baltimore, Md. Miss Williams is a corporal in the WAC. She obtained a leave in order to become the bride of the fighter pilot.—Photo by the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

Twenty New Flying Officers Addressed By Dr. Patterson

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, delivered the address to the graduating class of single engine fighter pilots at the Tuskegee Army Air Field on October 1.

OCT 8 1943

TWENTY CADETS

After the address by Dr. Patterson, commissions as 2nd Lieutenants in the Air Corps were awarded to the 20 new fighter pilots by Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer.

Among the cadets receiving wings and commissions were William Noel Alsbrook, Kansas City, Kan.; Cecil L. Browder, Wilmington, N. C.; Gene Cole Brown, New York City; Purnell J. Goodenough, Birmingham, Ala.; George [illegible], Bath, N. Y.; Maceo A. Harris Jr., Boston, Mass.; Carl E. Johnson, Charlottesville, Va.; Charles B. Johnson, Philadelphia, Pa.; Edgar L. Jones, New York City; Carroll M. Langston Jr., Chicago, Ill.; Cornelius F. May, Indianapolis, Ind.; Woodrow F. Morgan, Omaha, Nebr.; Neal V. Nelson, Chicago, Ill.; George M. Rhodes, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Washington D. Ross, Ashland, Ky.; Norman W. Scales, Austin, Texas; Henry B. Scott, Jersey City, N. J.; Alphonso Simmons, Jacksonville, Fla.; Robert H. Smith, Baltimore, Md.; and Edward W. Watkins of Freeman, W. Va.

William Cross Jr., of Cleveland, Ohio, became the first Tuskegee Army Air Field graduate to be commissioned as flight officer. Flight Officer Cross is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Cross Sr., of 2201 E. 82nd street, Cleveland, Ohio.

HONOR MEN

Cadet honors for outstanding excellence as officer candidates were awarded to Carl E. Johnson of Charlottesville, Va., first; Carroll N. Langston Jr., Chicago, Ill., and Gene C. Browne of New York City. Lt. Browne, in addition to winning cadet honors 19 year old flyer, became the youngest Negro pilot in the Army Air Forces.

OCT 8 1943

Tuskegee Airmen To Be Honored On National Day

Journal and Guide

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Army air crew men in training in this country as [illegible] and ground forces will be honored August in a National Aviation Day celebration at the UO Club here it has been announced by E. L. Raiford, USO Director.

Norfolk.

Men in the air force uniform will be guests of honor at a public meeting to be held in the afternoon which will feature an address by Col. N. F. Parrish, post commander. He will speak on "Air Power and the War."

Tributes will be paid to air heroes of the United States and the United Nations.

An exhibition of model planes will be on display at the club. The general public as well as the military personnel have been invited to attend the celebration.

AUG 21 1943

Virginia

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

ARMY TO FORM IT[illegible]EGRO PARACHUTE UNIT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 30 (AP).—The first Negro parachute unit in the American army is to be activated at Fort Benning, Ga.

Serving under Brig. Gen. Leo Donovan, commanding the airborne command, the unit is designated as the 555th parachute infantry company.

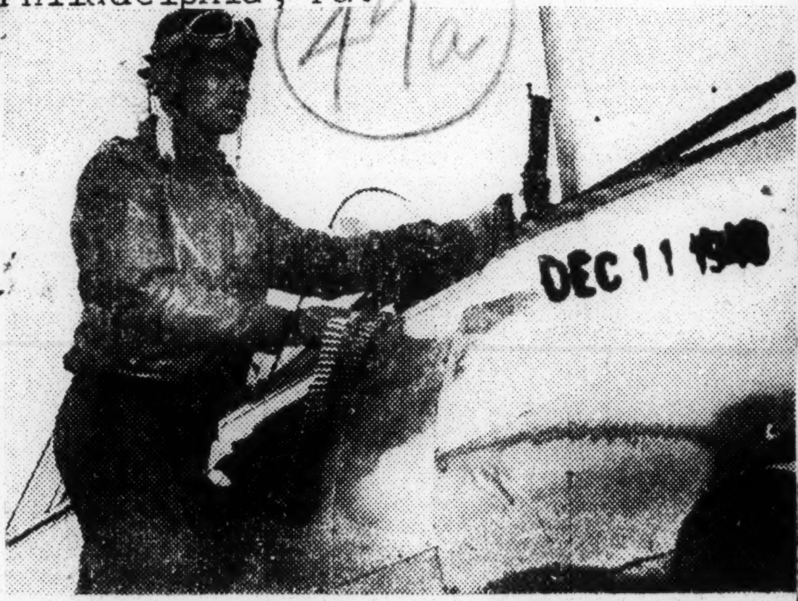
The war department has authorized Gen. Donovan to select volunteers from the 92nd infantry at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

After the first month's training those qualifying will receive $50 monthly additional

DEC 31 1943

Expert Gunner

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.



DEC 11 1943

Aviation Cadet OTHEL DICKSON, of the Tuskegee Army Air Field led all flying cadets in the Eastern Flying Training Command and finished third in the national ranking of all cadets, irrespective of race, in the AAF Training Command at the recent National Fixed Gunnery Meet held at Eglin Field, Fla. The shooting young airman is shown loading the thirty calibre cowl gun on the AT-6 which he flew in the recent competition. A/C Dickson hails from Coffeyville, Kansas.—Photo by AAF Training Command.

COUNT BASIE'S POPULARITY SOARS; DOES SIX PICTURES IN SINGLE YEAR

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

AUG 28 1943

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—Before leaving Hollywood for an Eastern tour, Count Basie and his orchestra completed "Choo Choo Swing," a Universal picture. Coincidentaly, the featurette has the Basie band choo-chooing out of Hollywood with the "One O'Clock Jump." The picture is exclusively Basie, and will soon be released. The Count and his band also completed starring roles in "Top Man," featuring the new kid star, Donald O'Connor, and "Crazy" featuring Olson and Johnson for Universal. He keynotes a big block-party scene in the latter. The studio is so sold on Basie's music that they arranged for several future productions before the "Jump King of Swing" left town.

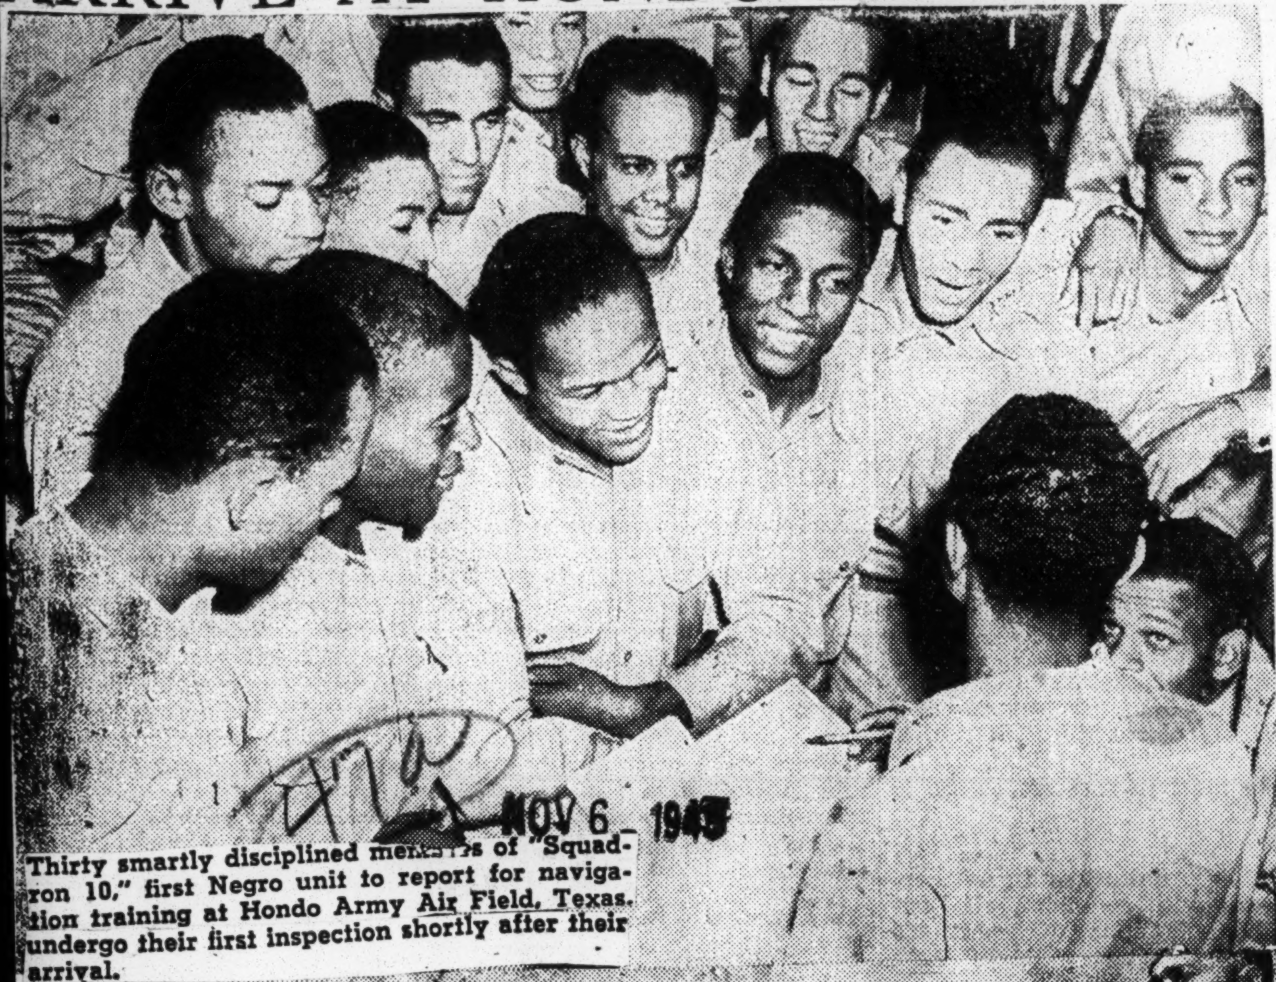
GREAT RHYTHMS

Basie's famous rhythm section, featuring one of the nation's greatest drummers, Jo Jones, Guitarist Freddy Green and Bassist Walter Page, with Basie at the piano, magnetized the camera for close-ups on all three pictures. Vocalist Jimmy Rushing also gets a lot of screen time for his stellar song delivery.

"Stage Door Canteen," the United Artists picture, features the Count as one of the top six bands in the country. Also current on the screen are Columbia's "Reveille with Beverly" and Republic's "Hit Parade of 1943"—both featuring long Basie sessions. Picture exhibitors report that the Basie band is the top drawing card for both pictures in many theatres, and in most cases they are featuring the Count's name above those of all the other stars—including Frank Sinatra.

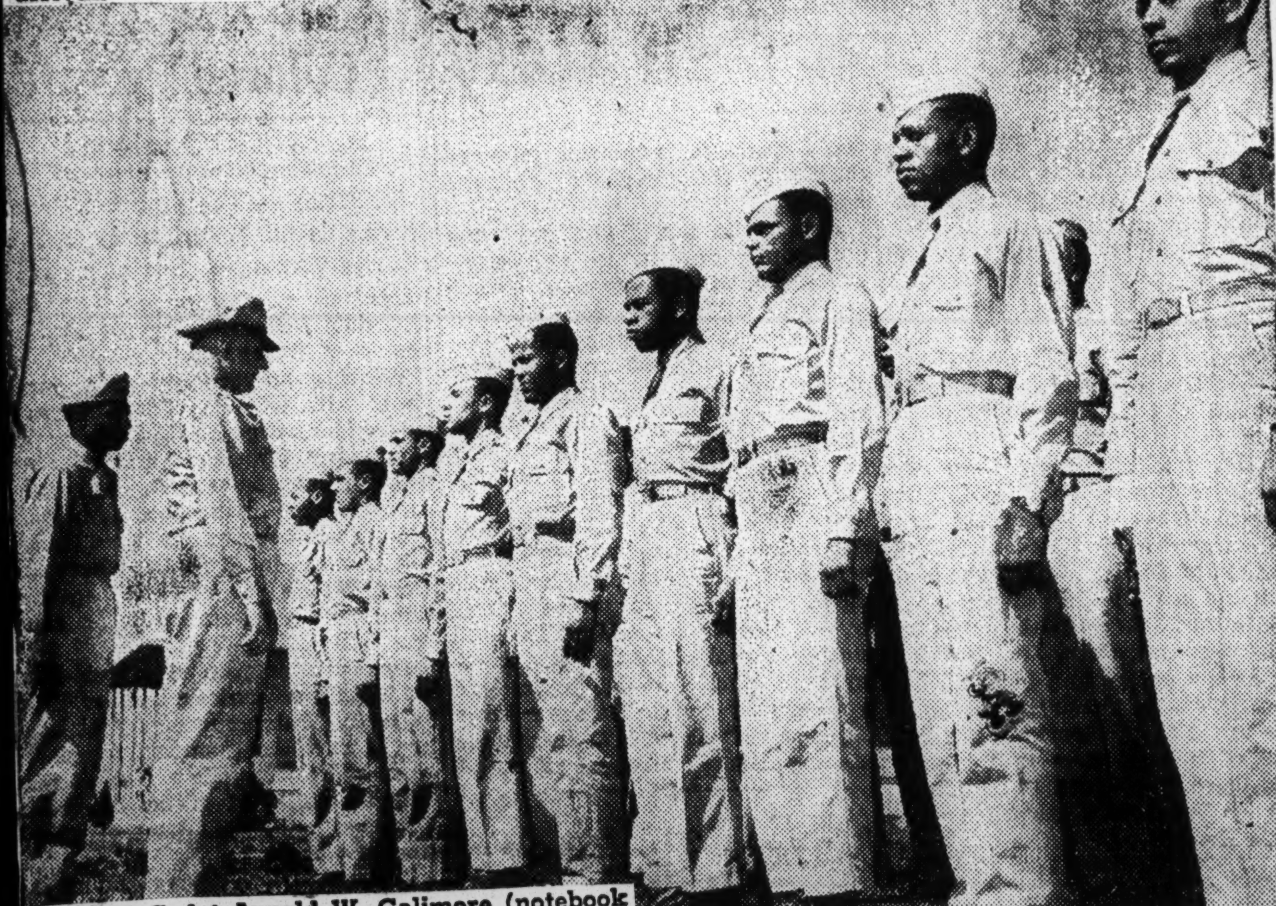
During his three-month Hollywood stay, the Count and his band appeared on three "Command Performances" and three "Jubilee U.S.A." broadcasts. These repeated short-wave appearances were results of a request bombardment from overseas.

NEW NAVIGATION CADETS ARRIVE AT HONDO FIELD



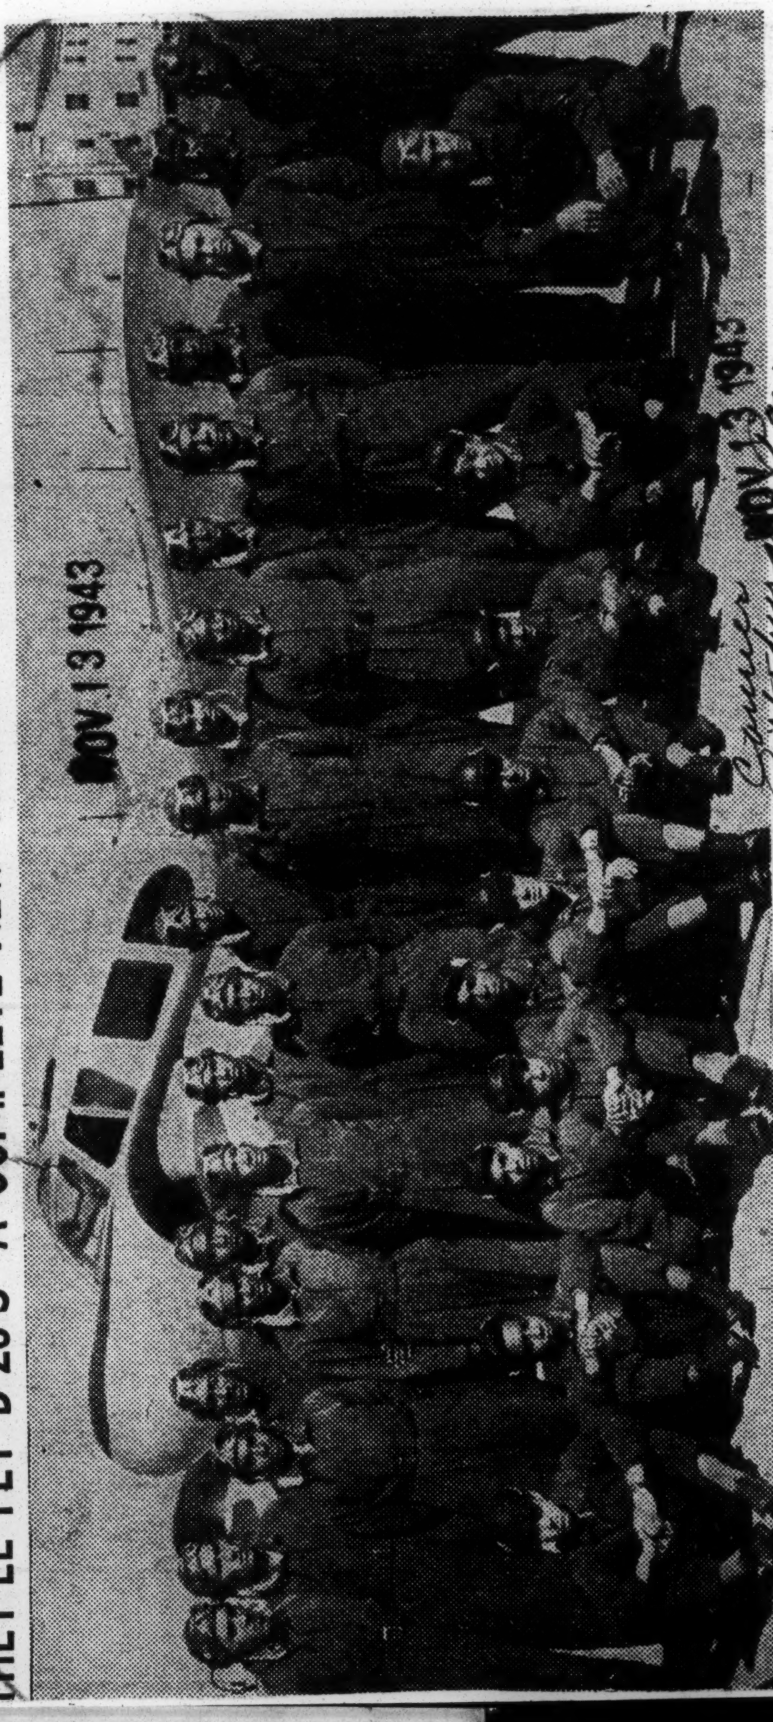
Afro NOV 6 1943

Thirty smartly disciplined members of "Squadron 10," first Negro unit to report for navigation training at Hondo Army Air Field, Texas, undergo their first inspection shortly after their arrival.



Aviation Cadet Arnold W. Galimore (notebook in hand) announces the day's schedule of training events to his buddies at the Hondo Army Air Field. Cadet Galimore is flight marcher for unit.

THEY'LL FLY B-25'S—A COMPLETE NEW THREAT TO HITLER, TOJO



NOV 13 1943

Courier Pittsburgh NOV 13 1943

In the first graduation of its kind at Tuskegee Army Air field, fighter and bomber pilot trainees completed the prescribed course at the same time. This event marks the first time in history th[illegible] pilots have received win[illegible] other than fulfilling requirements of fighter pilots. The bomber trainees will go to Mather Field, Calif., for further instruction on B-25's.

The Twin-Engine graduates, seated on the runway are second Lieutenants Perry H. Hudson, Atlanta, Ga.; Herman R. Campbell, New York, N. Y.; Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore, Md.; Henry F. Fletcher, San Antonio, Texas; Haldane King, Jamaica, N. Y.; Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, Calif.; Jerome D. Spurlin, Chicago, Ill.; Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N. J., and William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass.

Standing from left to right are: Fighter Pilots Second Lieutenants Edward M. Thomas, Chicago, Ill.; Eugene D. Smith, Cincinnati, Ohio; Charles W. Dickerson, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Ja[illegible] B. Brown, Los Angeles, Ca[illegible] William H. Thomas, Los Angeles, Calif.; Nathaniel C. Stewart, Philadelphia, Pa.; Carl E. Rayburg, Washington, D. C.; Edward Laird, Brighton, Ala.; Alfred W. Carroll, Washington, D. C.; Ivey L. Leftwich, Faifield, Ala.; Clarence W. Dart, Elmira N. Y.; Oscar D. Hutton, Chicago Ill.; Earl S. Sherrard, Columbus Ohio; Roger B. Brown, Glenco, Ill.; Turner W. Payne, Wichita Falls, Texas; Emory L. Robbins, Chicago, Ill.; Gwynne W. Pierson, Oakland, Calif., and Hugh S. Wa[illegible], New York, N. Y. At the far right in the first row is Second Lieutenant Paul C. Simmons, Detroit, Mich., also of the fighter pilot group.

NOV 13 1943

47a-1943

Lieutenant of 99th Is Burned to Death in Plane after Crash

Afro-American Baltimore, Maryland
OCT 16 1943

By OLLIE STEWART
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Sicily
[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

FROM ADVANCED AIR BASE, Sept. 19—(By Mail, Censored)—Today we are burying First Lieut. Sidney P. Brooks of Cleveland, a member of the 99th Pursuit Squadron who burned in his plane after a crash.

It was just like losing a brother to have Lieut. Brooks die.

In one of the squadron's first aerial combat tests back in June, it was Lieut. Brooks who first sighted the enemy fighters above his formation and warned the other members of his unit just as the German Focke-Wolfes dived to attack.

Family Notified Three Weeks Later

CLEVELAND—The family of Lieut. Sidney P. Brooks, flyer with the 99th Pursuit Squadron who died in action in Sicily, received word of his death on Saturday (three weeks after the funeral, Ed.), they told the AFRO.

His bride of seventeen months, the former Miss Luci[illegible] Miller, said she had a cheerful letter from him two days before the fatal crash.

He was a senior at Ohio State University when he joined the army two years ago and has been on overseas duty for the past five months.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Brooks, and a brother, William Flint Brooks, also reside here. Both father and brother are wire drawers at a local steel mill.

His wife until recently was a shipping clerk in a local war plant. There are no children.

Brilliant 99th Airman Attended Naval Academy

Journal and Guide Norfolk. Virginia
DEC 11 1943

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

AN ALLIED AIRFIELD IN SICILY—(By Air Mail, Delayed)—If any man in the whole 99th Fighter Squadron has that rare "passion for anonymity," he is 1st Lt. James L. Johnson.

That happens to be an unfortunate virtue in this case because far too few people really know him well. We had gotten all the way over in Sicily on this overseas junket before I had a good opportunity.

We happened to pitch our tents about 25 feet apart. During the ensuing month I think there emerged that side of James L. Johnson which the average acquaintance rarely sees.

It is not claimed that any considerable part of the success of this pioneer fighter squadron resulted directly from the efforts of Lt. Johnson. In fact his story can best be written without reference to the organization.

CALLED GENIUS

Thomas A. Edison probably would not have made a very good shop foreman or production boss in the Ford plant. Nor would Alexander Graham Bell likely be able to run American Telephone and Telegraph Company today. Those men were geniuses. Their greatest contributions were made in the laboratories where they worked as individuals, and according to their own plans.

In a restricted sense James L. Johnson is a genius. In the prosecution of a war across the world's battlefields, there is totally inadequate opportunity or facilities for utilizing creative genius. So it has not been difficult for this Washington, D. C. youth to satisfy his passion for anonymity.

A 1938 graduate in mechanical engineering from Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, he was among the six young Negro men selected by the Air Corps for technical training and commissioning when the ranks first opened for members of their race.

ORDNANCE ENGINEER

Two were to be experts in aviation engineering, two in communications and two in armament. One of the armorers was unable to meet physical requirements for a commission after successfully passing in all his work. One of the communications officers is now with the Fighter Group to which Col. B. O. Davis Jr., returned in September to the United States to command. The other four, including Johnson, are with the 99th.

After graduation from college he had been employed as a civil ordnance engineer, designing and loading shells for two years. Earlier he had worked as junior engineering draughtsman, drawing pipe installations.

So he and the other five cadets who were officer candidates along with nearly a hundred enlisted men, went off to Chanute Field in the spring of 1941 to blaze the trail for colored youth in the Air Corps. Six months later he had met the requirements for an aircraft maintenance engineer and received his commission as a 2nd lieutenant.

NOT QUITE PERFECT

Use of the word genius a few paragraphs back might seem reckless. Well, consider this incident. Lt. Johnson owns one of those fancy self-winding wrist watches. Inside is a tiny pendelum mechanism which operates as the arm swings back and forth in walking.

Theoretically, this should keep the watch wound up at all times so that the wearer really has to give it no attention at all other than an occasional glance when he wants to know the time of day.

But, as the reader doubtless already has supposed, Johnson's self-winder fell something short of perfect. He wanted to get this automatic gadget out of his watch and a conventional stem winder installed.

REMOVED SELF-WINDER

So Lt. Johnson sat down and, with a few tools that were crude for such delicate work, opened up the watch, removed the self-winding mechanism and installed a stem winder which he had fabricated. It has operated perfectly ever since.

Lt. Johnson is a very studious person. Every man in the squadron brought overseas some distinctive or peculiar item of personal luggage. Johnson brought along a case containing three or four dozens technical and scientific books on subjects ranging from simple mathematics to aircraft engineering.

In the leisure hours of the day when other men were playing or resting, Johnson always could be found occupied with his books or some problem he was trying to work out.

When it became known on shipboard that our destination was North Africa, Lt. Johnson got out his French text book and gave himself the most intensive review course imaginable, including both oral and written exercises.

VISITED MUSEUMS

Around Fez and Mecknes, near which the squadron spent about a month in advance combat training, the members gained some of their fondest and certainly most lasting memories. These two Moroccan cities were beautiful, vastly interesting and surprisingly hospitable to these colored pilots and their ground staffs.

The things that the men looked for when they went into town varied with the individual. But Lt. Johnson was the only one who spent most of his time in the museums, libraries and historical landmarks.

James L. Johnson has another distinction. During the time that Col. Davis was at West Point from which he graduated as the first Negro to go through the U. S. Military Academy in almost 75 years, James L. Johnson made some history himself by passing all the examinations and getting himself admitted to the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis.

HARRASSED BY MIDDIES

It is not one whit to Johnson's discredit that he was able to stay at Annapolis only eight months. Before either Davis or Johnson entered these service schools, the odds against a Negro's graduating from the Naval Academy were definitely longer than against his finishing West Point.

One of the standard bits of lore about Johnson and his experience with the Navy is a story he neither denies nor admits. He only smiles when you ask about it. It seems that he was being harrassed by some of the Middies one day.

He was prudent enough not to tackle the whole bunch at one time, but he did invite them outside one at a time for a showdown. According to the legend, there were no acceptances of his challenge.

Single, he makes his home with his father, James L. Johnson Sr., at 1737 S street, N. W. Like so many other Washingtonians, he went through Garnett Patterson School and Dunbar High, graduating in 1933. He had participated in fencing at Dunbar, and in college he was on the track team.

TECH SUPPLY OFFICER

This 27-year-old officer tips the beam at 170 pounds and stands 5 feet 11½ in height. He is assistant supply officer in charge of technical supplies. Recently he was appointed assistant intelligence officer as well, to learn that phase of the work under 1st Lt. Cornelius Vincent, Boston, Mass.

The supply section is so efficiently run by 1st Lt. Benote H. Wimp, Chicago, that not many problems are left for Lt. Johnson's attention. He should be able to devote a considerable amount of time to intelligence work in the weeks to come.

Yet, when you know and understand Lt. Johnson you feel certain he won't be entirely happy and contented until he can lose himself in complex mechanics and engineering problems.

For him it is unfortunate, therefore, that the engineering section is already so very capably and efficiently run by 1st Lt. Herbert E. Carter, Amory, Miss., that nobody ever thinks of his being replaced. After all, "Gene" Carter not only can supervise the maintenance of aircraft used by the squadron, but afterwards he test-hops them himself. If they come through the "wringing out" that Lt. Carter gives them as he goes through almost all the maneuvers in the book, they'll hold together through the hottest hour of combat.

Chicago Bee

Mrs. Davis Hits Time Article On 99th Record

Chicago, Illinois
OCT 24 1943

In a letter to the editors of the internationally-known and widely-read Time magazine, Mrs. Agatha [illegible] Davis, wife of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., former commander of the 99th Pursuit squadron, sharply scored the magazine's September 20 article which criticized the 99th record as a fighter squadron.

Time defended its story based on "unofficial reports" by launching a broadside at the War department's policy of segregated air corps training. The magazine's defense was appended to the published letter written by Mrs. Davis, and blamed separate army training programs for the operational results obtained by the squadron now on active duty overseas.

Blow to Morale.

Charging that Time's article was a blow at "one of the strongest pillars upholding Negro morale," Mrs. Davis' letter asked:

"Are you justified in saying that the record of the 99th Fighter squadron is only fair? . . ." She referred to her husband's evaluation of the squadron's participation as "at least worthy of favorable comment."

"My indictment is that by publishing an article based on 'unofficial reports' you have created unfavorable public opinion about an organization to which all Negroes point with pride," Mrs. Davis' letter charged.

"You should realize that these few printed words in Time, words which may be creating a false impression, have struck at one of the strongest pillars upholding Negroes' morale in their effort to contribute to the winning of the war."

OCT 24 1943

First Negro Air Navigation Cadets Fly

Journal & Guide
Norfolk. Va.

Shaw "Marked Proficiency," Says Commander

HONDO ARMY AIR FIELD, HONDO, Texas — The pioneer class of 44-3-10, known here as "Squadron 10," first class of Negro navigation cadets in the history of the Army Air Forces, has completed four flying missions over West Texas terrain with "marked proficiency," according to their Hondo Field flight commander, First Lieutenant George F. McInerney.

Hondo Field, a navigation airbase of the Army Air Forces Training Command, received this first Negro navigation group on October 22, and immediately launched the men on an intensive 18 weeks' navigation training schedule.

After comprehensive indoctrination for two weeks, the Negro cadets made their first training hop. Each now has 18 hours in the air on pilotage, dead reckoning and air plot training missions.

They have made excellent progress in the preliminary courses — accenting straight dead reckoning, pilotage, air plot, compasses, drift-meters and swinging of the airman's compass.

Upon successful completion of their course at Hondo Field, members of this pioneer Negro navigation squadron will receive commissions as flight officers or second lieutenants in the AAF, and will wear the silver wings of rated AAF navigators. They will have qualified to guide the course of American bombers to enemy targets anywhere on earth.

BOMBARDIER COURSE NEXT

It is understood that the Negro graduates will be given a 12-weeks' bombardiering course when they leave Hondo Field, and then will be fully trained for their objective —completing America's first Negro bombardment squadron. Incidentally, but of extreme importance to the AAF, the advent of this class opens a new source for navigation cadet manpower.

WERE ELIMINATED PILOTS

All of these 30 cadets, (11 cadets and 19 aviation students) are eliminated pilots who were reclassified at various stages of single engine pilot training at Tuskegee, Alabama

After being eliminated they reverted to enlisted men's status and were assigned to various duties at Tuskegee for a while. They were subsequently given an opportunity to take examinations for navigation and bombardiering. Approximately 100 eliminated Negro pilots took the test at Tuskegee in September of this year, and the 30 members of Hondo Field's "Squadron 10" are the handpicked group resulting.

As are all new things, the Negro cadet squadron is looked upon as a sort of "guinea pig" class at the airbase, and the progress of each man is being closely watched by officers charged with their training.

The officers are optimistic. By Flight Commander Lieutenant McInerney and Lieutenant J. Onebane, two officers most directly in charge of the Negro class, the members of Class 44-3-10 have been characterized as " . . . a darned good bunch of men—extremely capable."

As for the men themselves, they appear to be determined to prove they have the same stuff that has made other units of their race justly famous in the annals of the United States Army.

Class 44-3-10 is being given the same course, and the same daily routine all other navigation cadets get at Hondo Field. They have the same classroom hours, regular calisthenics, and drill and retreat ceremonies. They are not being let out of anything and nothing is being made more rigid for them. They are good at drill, and, as might be expected, highly proficient in athletics.

DEC 18 1943

Gen. Arnold's Visit To 99th Had Precedent

Journal and Guide
Norfolk. Virginia

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

NORFOLK—The visit by Gen H. H. Arnold, commander of the American Army Air Forces, to the airfield in Italy occupied by the 99th Fighter Squadron, as announced at Allied Force Headquarters Sunday night, is not the first call paid these pioneer Negro pilots by high ranking military officials.

Gen Arnold is inspecting Allied air bases in this theatre before returning to the U. S. after attending the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin-Chiang conferences.

In fact, the men in the 99th had gotten quite accustomed to pop calls at their base by dignitaries of world renown even before this reporter parted company with the unit in Sicily on September 2 to return to the United States.

A parade of "rank" that might have been a sensation at some other camp aroused much less than reasonably justifiable excitement among the ground crews and fliers of the 99th.

FIRST VICTORY

Everybody was excited, however, last July 2 when all in one day so much of importance happened. First Capt, (then Lt.) Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Ind., went out on a morning mission and engaged a Nazi fighter plane in a fight to the finish. Hall came home triumphant with the honor of having been the first Negro pilot in history to score a victory in the air over an enemy plane.

That same day, the squadron suffered its first combat losses when Lts. James B. McCullin of St. Louis, and Sherman White of Montgomery, Ala., failed to return from the same mission.

The pilots had escorted a flight of bombers from Africa to Sicily and were attacked by 20 Focke-Wulf-190's and Messerschmitt-109's. Dog fights ensued for the next twenty minutes with twelve fliers of the 99th having chances to shoot down a Jerry.

CONGRATULATED HALL

Then, that afternoon, as per schedule announced a couple of days earlier, General Dwight D Eisenhower, commanding the Northwest African theatre of operations; Lt. General Carl Spaatz, commanding the Northwest African Air Forces; Major General James H. Doolittle, commanding the strategic air forces in the same theatre, and several other generals and colonels flew into the 99th Fighter Squadron's airbase.

These officers talked with Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the 99th, and with other leaders in the squadron, as well as congratulating Capt. Hall. This correspondent was the only photographer present for that historic meeting and the pictures recording it appeared exclusively in the Journal and Guide.

Earlier, in May, while the squadron was still engaged in advanced combat training in French Morocco, General Spaatz and a party of other high-ranking Air Force officers had visited the 99th's base on an inspection tour.

FLAT TIRE

Marshal of the Royal Air Force, the Viscount Trenchard, GCB, GCVO, DSO, a member of the British House of Lords and founder of the Royal Air Force, spent some time with Col. Davis one afternoon in June when the car he was riding in had a flat tire near the Squadron's base on Cape Bon.

Just before the invasion of Sicily, Air Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham spent an entire afternoon with the 99th. He commanded the Northwest African tactical air forces under General Spaatz.

He had come to tell the officers of the impending action and to acquaint them generally with the part they would be expected to play in the operation.

"OLD BLOOD AND GUTS"

After the squadron reached Sicily, Col. Davis was called back to Africa to see Secretary of War Stimson who was making an inspection tour of that theatre. Davis was accompanied by Lt. Herbert E. Carter, Amory, Miss., engineering officer. They flew their own P-40 Warhawk planes.

A few of the men got a look at General George S. Patton, too, one day when the famed 7th Army commander's plane landed at the field from which the 99th was operating in Sicily. "Old Blood and Guts" was on his way to inspect a division of his Army bivouaced near the squadron's airbase.

So, as welcome as General Arnold might have been when he visited the 99th recently, it was no new experience for the men in that famed unit to see officers of very high rank in their midst.

DEC 18 1943

Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Negro Flyers Shown In Click Magazine

AUG 20 1943

NEW YORK. — Click magazine for September has a three-page picture story on the "Black Panthers," Negro fighter group, now finishing training at Oscoda, Mich.

The men in this group finished their first training at Tuskegee Institute, Ala. The article declares the group is "tough, smart and rarin' to go," and declares the instructors of the squadron say the members fly and fight "intelligently, bravely and skillfully."

One squadron trainer at Tuskegee—the 99th under command of Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr.,—is already in combat overseas, having taken part in the Sicilian campaign.

99th Gets A New Squadron Commander

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 16.—The 99th, famed Negro Pursuit squadron which earned the plaudits of the nation as the first Negro flying unit to participate in active combat in the history, has a new commander.

He is Capt. George S. Roberts of Fairmont, W. Va. Capt. Roberts was named last week to succeed Lt.-Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr. Lt.-Col. Davis, who led the unit through the North African and Sicilian campaigns, was recalled to this country to assume command of the 332nd Fighter Group soon to be graduated from training at Selfridge field, Mich., air base it was reported.

SEP 18 1943

Captain Roberts was formerly operations officer and second in command of the 99th. He is regarded as one of the most capable aviators in the North African theatre. Almost simultaneous with the announcement came word that Gen. Dwight Eisenhower has approved decorations for 26 pilots of the 99th, all of whom are slated to receive the air medal, coveted army award for meritorious achievement against the army.

The BEE's October pictorial will carry photos suitable for framing of the 26 flyers who distinguished themselves as the first Negro aviation combat unit in the nation's history.

47a-1943

99TH SQUADRON PILOTS WIN MEDALS FOR SICILY HEROISM

Defender
Chicago, Ill.
SEP 18 1943

LT. CHARLES B. HALL
Brazil, Ind., pilot who shot down the first Nazi plane among the pilots of the 99th. He was congratulated by Gen. Dwight Eisenhower on his return to his base.

LT. CHARLES W. DRYDEN
Born in New York, he attended the City College of New York for three years and was graduated a pilot and received a commission as second lieutenant on April 29, 1942.

LT. ALLEN GASTON LANE
Born in Demopolis, Ala., he attended Tuskegee institute for three years and was graduated a pilot and received a commission as second lieutenant on July 3, 1942.

LT. JAMES T. WILEY
Born in Evansville, Ind., he graduated from the University of Pittsburgh in 19

post graduate work at Carnegie Institute of Technology.

LT. SPANN WATSON
Born in Johnston, S. C., he attended Howard university in Washington, D. C., for three duated a pilot and received a commission as second lieutenant July 3, 1942.

LT. SAMUEL M. BRUCE
Born in Crockett, Texas, he attended Agriculture and Technical college in Greensboro, N. C., and graduated a pilot and received his commission as second lieutenant on Sept. 6, 1942.

LT. HERBERT E. CARTER
Born in Armory, Miss., he attended Tuskegee institute for two years and graduated a pilot and second lieutenant on July 3, 1942.

LT. GEORGE R. BOLLING
Born in Hampton, Va., he was graduated from the Hampton institute, and graduated as a pilot and received a commission as second lieutenant on July 3, 1942.

Tuskegee Aviation Cadet Wins Nat'l Gunnery Meet

Top Marksman In East; Wins Third Place In Nation

DEC 11 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—(SNS)—Aviation Cadet Othel Dickson of the Tuskegee Army Air Field led all flying cadtes from the Eastern Flying Training Command in the National Fixed Gunnery held on he AAF gunnery ranges along the Florida Gulf Coast near Elgin Field last week end.

In addition to becoming the top ranking aerial gunner among Eastern Flying Training Command cadets, the Tuskegee sharpshooter finished third among all AAF Training Command students.

'FLYING GUN PLATFORMS'

Fixed gunnrey is the term applied to the process of teaching fighter pilots how to use their airplanse as 'flying gun platforms." The armament on all fighter planes is mounted in the wings and noses in fixed positions, and in order to bring the guns to bear on the target, the airplanes must be aimed.

DEC 11 1943

U. S. fighter pilots are taught that their planes are actually 'flying engines" with guns tied on. They are taught that they must learn to shoot their planes as well as fly them.

When Aviation Cadet Dickson rained down his shower of thirty calibre bullets in competion for the "Buzz Wagner" trophy, he was shooting against the best marksmen from the graduating classese of each of eleven Army Air Forces fighter pilot schools. The eleven schools represented in the national meet the Craig Field, Ala., Napier Field, Ala., Spence, Field, Ga. Marinna Field, Tuskegee Army Field, Ala., Foster Field, Texas, Aloe Field, Texas, Moore Field Texas, Eaglepass Field, Texas, Luke Field, Arizona and Williams Filed, Arizona.

DEC 11 1943

Each field sent the top marksman of its current graduating class, and it war against this array of sharpshooters that Cadet Dickson, a native of Coffeyville, Kan., shot it out for the trophy named after one of America's first aces of World War II, Lt. Col. Boyd D. "Buzz" Wagner, who after a colorful combat career in the Phillipine, Australian and New Guinea campaigns, died in a crash near Elgin Field, Fla., on a routine flight.

Dec. 11, 1943

AWARDS BY MRS. WAGNER

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd M. Wagner, parents of the late Lt. Col. "Buzz" Wagner, flew from Johnstown, Pa., to Elgin Field, Fla., last Thursday to be guests of honor of the First Single Engine Fixed Gunnery Training Group, hosts for the national meet. Mrs. Wagner made the initial presentation, personally handing the trophies to A-C. T. C.

Hill, Aloe Field, Texas, and Lt. V. S. Brokaw of Foster Field, Texas, who won top national gunnery honors for aviation cadtes and instructors respectively.

DAVIS TELLS 99TH EXPLOITS TO D. C. NEWSMEN

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

While his father, Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis listens with justifiable pride, youthful Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., tells Washington reporters on the work the 99th Pursuit Squadron did in conquest of North Africa and Sicily. He has returned to this country to take over a post with the 332nd Fighter Group.

SEP 18 1943

Extending a welcome to young Lt. Col. B. O. Davis on his arrival in Washington were Major General A. D. Surles (left), director of the War Department Bureau of Public Relation, and his father, Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, both of whom congratulated him on his fine work in directing the 99th Pursuit Squadron in North Africa.

Celebrate TAAF Chapel Anniversary

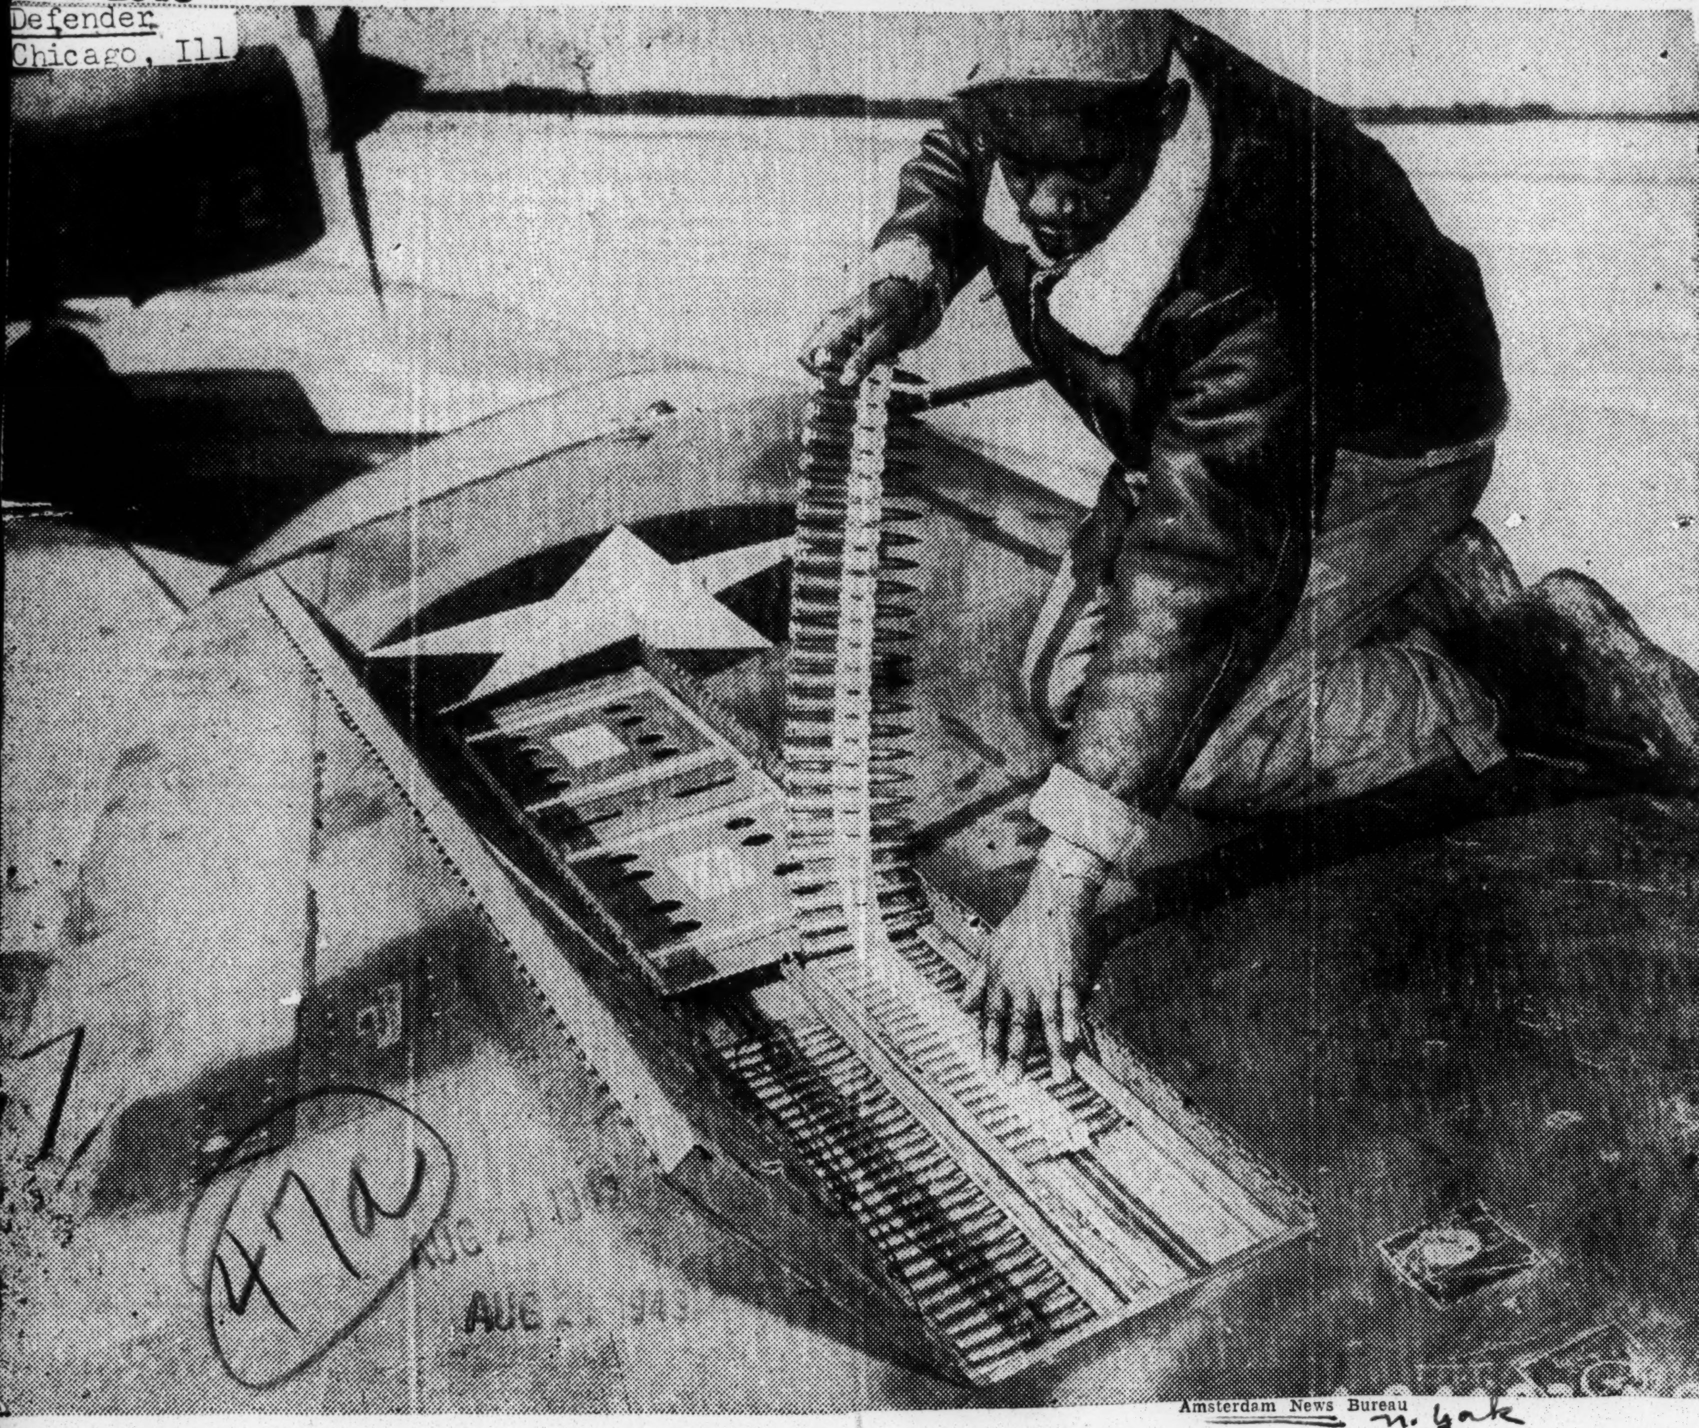
SEP 27 1943

The celebration of the first anniversary of the Post Chapel at the Tuskegee Army Air Field took place last Sunday, September [illegible] when Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, Commanding Officer, addressed the officers, men and civilians assembled there. Pictured after the service are Mrs. Alfreda Hamilton, Lt. Theodore Randall of the Tuskegee College Training Detachment; Mr. L. W. Kranerd, Montgomery, Ala.; Chaplain Douglas L. T. Robinson, Post Chaplain; Mrs. Fay S. Robinson, wife of Chaplain Robinson; Lt. Col. Parrish; Mrs. F. A. Bolders, Tuskegee, Ala.; Mrs. B. B. Walcott, Tuskegee Institute, Ala.; Mr. Maurice Hastie, War-Time Minister, Christian Science Chaplain; Lt. Rosetta E. Cannon, WAC, stationed at Fort Benning, Ga.; Mrs. Frederick Mack, Tuskegee, Alabama, and Staff Sgt George D. Thompson, chapel organist.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgi

47a-1943
Defender
Chicago, Ill

47a



AUG 21 1943

Cpl. Gray Washington of Franklin, La., spreads a belt of .50 calibre ammunition and gets a P-40 pursuit plane's machine gun ready for action at the Oscoda, Mich., Army Air Base, a sub-base of Selfridge Field. The 332nd Fighter Group, only all-Negro fighter group in the Army Air Corps, and the 96th Service Group are in training at Oscoda's gunnery range in preparation for action overseas soon.

99th Commander Says Experiment Is Ended

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

Officer Tells Dramatic Story of Exploits of Men in War Theater; Declares Men Who Fly Work Together

Amsterdam News Bureau

N. York

WASHINGTON (Special) — Back from his triumphs in North Africa where he commanded the 99th Fighter Squadron in its operations over Sicily and other islands in the Mediterranean, Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis held his first press conference Friday at the War Department where he told the dramatic history of the 99th to a distinguished group of editors and publishers who had come here at the request of Major General A. D. Surles, director of the Bureau of Public Relations, to discuss the pooling of news of activities of Negro troops overseas.

SEP 18 1943

One of the Army's youngest lieutenant colonels, Davis may be elevated to the position of a full colonel when he takes over as head of 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field, Mich., in the near future.

May Be Full Colonel

Col. Davis, in speaking of his new assignment said the table of organization calls for a full colonel to head the group, which is a unit consisting of three squadrons. He will go to Mitchell Field, N. Y., before continuing to his new assignment.

Col. Davis' lengthy talk presented some rather interesting facts both on the lines and between the lines. Veteran reporters regarded it as a fine speech, in some places approaching the standard of a masterpiece.

One of the highlights of the talk was Col. Davis' admission that the 99th Squadron was an experiment, that it was a matter of conjecture in the minds of some of the high-ranking officers in the AAF just what a Negro pilot in a P-40 would do when anti-aircraft fire burst about his ship or when an enemy aircraft was strewing cannon spells and machine gun bullets about his cockpit, and his conclusion that the 99th squadron, in his opinion is no longer an experiment, that the men, instead of being the fledglings that went over in June are now seasoned veterans of a combat experience that all of us may well be proud.

47

Negro Fliers Were On Trial

Col. Davis said members of the 99th realized that the unit was a test to determine whether the Negro pilot was physically, mentally and emotionally suited to the rigors of combat flying. They, therefore, understood that the future of the Negro in the air corps probably would be dependent largely upon the manner in which they carried out their mission. Hence, the importance of the work done by this squadron, the responsibility of every man be he ground crewman or pilot, meant that very little pleasure was to be had by anyone until the experiment was deemed an unqualified success.

LT. COL. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS

The colonel said the outfit was hurt by the adverse publicity is received during its training period at Tuskegee. The men had the good sense, he said, to realize that the best means they had to defeat the cult of supporters and philosophers who relegated them to a subsidiary role in the life of the United States, was to do their job in such a way that the world would know that they were capable of performing a highly specialized and technical piece of work in a creditable manner.

Col. Davis and his squadron left the United States April 15, 1943. Aboard ship, he was the senior line officer with jurisdiction over some 4000 troops, less than 15 per cent of whom were Negroes. The entire eight-day voyage passed without a single circumstance or incident that could be regarded as discriminatory by the most rabid race leader, he said.

The most cordial relations between members of his squadron and of other groups, the colonel said. The pilots of the 99th and those of a fighter bomber group nearby would engage in impromptu dogfights to determine the relative superiority of the P-40 and the A-36, with the result the P-40 was adjudged to be vastly superior in that phase of aerial combat. The men also participated in all types of athletic contests and other means of recreation.

The Town of Fez was described as one of the most delightful spots any of the men visited. One unusual feature of the stay there, was that members of the 99th and members of other organizations visited town every night for a period of over a month, and not one single unpleasant incident arose.

The officers and men of the squadron were visited by Josephine Baker who introduced several different groups of officers to the prominent French and Arab families in the town.

Colonel Davis said that while they were at Fez, four P-39 pilots whom they had met on the boat on the way over came to visit them. They had been ferrying some P-39's from Oran to Casablanca and enroute they, of their own accord, simply stopped over to pay a visit. The Colonel said he made the observation to indicate that a considerable bond exists among those who fly regardless of color or race.

"Our equipment was of the best," said Col. Davis. "We ferried in 27 brand new P-40's and all of us experienced for the first time the thrill of flying a brand new airplane. Lieutenant Colonel Philip Cochran —the Flip Corkin of "Terry and the Pirates"—was our most capable instructor. We all remember with a smile his opening commentary on the slowness of the P-40. The P-40 pilot never yet ran away from a fight—because he couldn't.

"Yet we all know that the P-40 has a more remarkable combat record in this war than any other fighter airplane except possibly the British Spitfire," Col. Davis coninued. "The P-40, we jokingly say has three important characteristics The first one is turn, which enables you to present a very difficult target to an enemy fighter; the second one is turn and the third one is also turn," he added significantly. "In aerial fighting this characteristic is naturally of great importance," the flier said.

"On the 31st of May we took off for the Cape Bon peninsula and the final phase of the experiment. I personally believe that no unit in this war has gone into combat better trained or better equipped than the 99th Fighter Squadron. We were weak in one respect only, and that was simply that the squadron commander, myself and the flight commanders had had no actual combat experience. That is a very desirable feature because it gives a good bit of confidence to those who are led that the man who is in charge of the formation knows what he is doing and frankly I didn't know initially, nor did my flight commanders. On the other hand, this deficiency was balanced by the fact that my pilots averaged about 250 hours in a P-40, and a young pilot in these days who has 250 hours in a P-40 before he goes into combat is a hard man to find.

"All of us were a little on edge because we were going into something that we hadn't experienced before. This transition was eased by Colonel William Momyer, who commands a very famous fighter group which is now located up at the front. We were attached to his group for operations and attached for operations means just one thing and that alone, simply that every night the group operations officer telephoned to my operations officer the missions set up for next day."

Got Fourth of Missions

'Colonel Momyer, in giving us missions, treated is exactly as one of his squadron. He had three of his own and we had one, that being four squadrons. We got one-fourth of the missions given by his air support command. Colonel Momyer suggested initially that my flight commanders and myself fly as wing men on one of his missions so that we might get some experience initially before attempting to lead our own men into combat. He also advised me very completely on the details of running a squadron in a combat zone."

"At that time, shortly after the first of June, the Pantelleria show was going on and our first missions were over that island. We dive-bombed objectives on the island every day until its fall on the 11th of June. Six of our pilots had their first brush with enemy aircraft during this show but the remainder of us experienced only some of the very inaccurate brand of flank that the Italians throw up. After Pantelleria. Colonel Momyer's group moved to the island and we received our operational control from a fighter group commanded by Colonel McNorris."

"From the first of July to the 9th we escorted bombers to Sicily and these were our most active days. On every trip we were attacked by superior numbers of enemy fighters. The tactics employed by the enemy fighters were to draw off the escorts so they could get to the bombers. Actually they were not particularly interested in shooting down enemy fighters, so we had to take somc action to prevent them from shooting us down."

Speaking of the German air force, the colonel said, "Its tactics have changed quite a bit since the Tunisian campaign. Its pilots are not as eager as they used to be; they have undoubtedly lost the best of them and they no longer press their attacks, as I hear they did in the past. Whereas formerly they would stay down and lap it up, they now make one ineffective pass and head for home. On the other hand, the pilots of my squadron who were initially uncertain of themselves, had now developed a very strong fighting spirit and were eager for an opportunity to meet the German and really fight it out.

Sought Our Germans

"After the middle of July", Colonel Davis explained, "we had a squadron of pilots whose fondest dreams were no longer about the girls back home. Instead they dreamed about a German pilot who would be foolish enough to slug it out in aerial combat. At our chosen altitude we had the better airplane, but the German has learned his lesson and now makes his pass from out of the sun, coming down at 350 or more miles an hour and get on out. We get a fleeting shot as he passes by.

"The most interesting engagement took place on a bomber escort mission. The leader of the bomber formation couldn't get his bomb bay doors open on the first run over the target. This necessitated his going around two more times and it gave enemy fighters who didn't know we we're comnig, the opportunity to get off their airdrome and come up and get us. We actually saw enemy fighters scramble and climb, and they really do climb.

Praised by Eisenhower

"Our ships were close escorts for the bombers that day and we were right with them. The bottom, medium and top covers was provided by another group of fighters, so we absorbed all of the attack of this 20-plus ME-109s, Macchi 202s, and FW-190s and on that day we lost a couple of aircraft. We definitely destroyed one of the enemy, probably destroyed a couple more and damaged three. We believe that one of our pilots is a prisoner of war. Incidentally, on that day General Eisenhower visited our field and during his stay congratulated Captain Hall, one of our flight commanders, on his and our first confirmed victory.

We provided cover for the landing beaches on southeastern Sicily. We escorted C-47s which moved the air echelon of the various units to new bases on the island. On the 19th of July we moved to a base on the southern coast and we provided air support for the ground troops by dive-bombing. We strafed strong points holding up their advance, trucks that were bottled up on the very few roads on the northern part of the island

Men Train Replacements.

"After the fall of Sicily we devoted our time to training replacements that reached us from the States. We got new combat crews and the men in charge of the training got a good bit out of the new responsibilties of the responsible places in the formations which they had to fly."

The Colonel concluded with an appeal to Americans to "Back the Attack" with War Bonds. Brigadier General Davis, father of Colonel Davis, and the Colonel's wife, attended the press conference. Asked if he would like to make any comment about his son, General Davis said, "He's my son, he has always been my son. Certainly I am proud. As to the Negro flyer making good, the General said there was never any question in his mind that they wouldn't.

After posing for pictures with General Surles, General Davis and Mrs. Davis, Colonel sat in for a picture with the newspaper men.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

AUG 21 1943

Keeping the .50 calibre machine guns used by the pilots of P-40 pursuit ships in good shape is the job of these four soldiers of the 332nd Fighter Group's Ordnance section at the Oscoda air base. The four are (l. to r.) Cpl. L. A. Moy of Washington, D. C.; Cpl. Wade Fite of Dallas, Texas; Pfc. Azell Hawkins of Kansas City, Kans., and Pvt. Benjamin Mills of Cincinnati, Ohio.

47a-1943

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

Presenting The Members Of The

CATERPILLAR CLUB

Of The 99th Fighter Squadron

(This is the last of three articles relating the experiences of pilots in the 99th Fighter Squadron who gained membership in the mythical Caterpillar Club by parachuting from their planes. In the first two installments Lt. George R. Bolling, Phoebus, Va., was hit by flak while patroling the coast of Sicily on D-1 day and spent 24 hours in a rubber dinghy on the Mediterranean Sea before being rescued by an American destroyer. This article tells how two others were initiated. —Editor.)

OCT 2 - 1943

47

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

PART III

AN ALLIED AIRFIELD, Sicily [illegible] Air Mail—Those football fans who have had the t[illegible] watching Sam Brice, erstwhile A. and T. College h[illegible] in action will more easily appreciate the quick-thinking and coordinated action that enabled him to get out of his plane which was plunging toward the earth, out of control.

First Lt. Samuel M. Bruce, as the Army knows him now, is one of the most remarkable developments of this excursion overseas for the first Negro fighter pilots to see combat action. That is belief of several competent observers who have followed the 99th Squadron's evolution carefully. This correspondent concurs in that opinion unqualifiedly.

He was in a flight of planes on a patrol mission over the northern coast of Sicily, where the American ground forces were then pushing the enemy back into the pocket around Messina.

Five minutes after take off, while the planes were maneuvering into their formation, one of the aircraft evidently began giving trouble and the pilot dropped out to return home.

He didn't clear the formation entirely and the two planes momentarily came in contact with each other. Bruce's plane got out of control and its nose pointed toward the ground 1,500 feet below.

NO TIME TO WASTE

At that height there is no time to be wasted when abandoning a heavy P-40 Warhawk. Lt. Bruce knew this and he went immediately about the business.

Like Lt. Bolling he was unable to open his cockpit canopy with the automatic emergency release. So during those precious few seconds he cranked the cockpit cover open by hand and climbed out. Because the aircraft was [illegible] control he cou[illegible] easy way by turning it over on its back and falling out.

TELLS HIS THOUGHTS

As he later described it, he was plenty busy. Somebody asked what he was thinking during those moments.

"I was working too hard trying to get out of there to think about anything," Bruce replied. "And it was pretty hot inside, too."

But he did get out, and as soon as he was clear, he yanked his ripcord. Several white soldiers in another ground unit nearby saw all this action and one of them later described it to this correspondent.

"The parachute had no sooner opened up than it collapsed again," the soldiers related. "If he had jumped three seconds later or from 100 feet lower he surely would have hit the ground before his 'chute opened up."

NEVER GAVE UP

Sam Bruce is too good a competitor to stop trying even when all the odds are against him. And its a good bet that in those few seconds he cooly and deliberately freed himself from the disabled plane with never a thought of giving up.

There were two or three minor scratches on his leg, evidently sustained when it hit the canopy as he bailed out. But other than that he was none the worse for the experience. He threw his parachute over his shoulder and started walking.

OCT 2 - 1943

Incidentally, he hit the ground not 25 feet from his wrecked plane. That gives you some idea of how close he was to the ground when he jumped. Fortunately, he fell on the leeward side. Otherwise he might have been dragged right into the flaming wreckage.

READY TO FLY AGAIN

Before he had walked very far a couple of officers picked him up in a jeep and carried him back to his base. There the wounds on his leg were dressed and he was given the rest of the day off.

"I want you to stay quiet and take things very easy for a few days until you are all right again," the flight surgeon, Capt. Maurice E. Johnson, Washington, D. C., told him about a couple of hours after the crash.

"Oh, I'm all right now," he shot back. "I'm ready to fly again."

There you have Sam Bruce, who started flying in the CPT course at A. and T. during the summers between college terms. In the autumns of 1938-39-40 he cavorted about the gridiron and won all-CIAA and all-American selections.

A TEAM MAN

A triple-threat halfback. Bruce has always been a man for teamwork. In his college days he was especially valuable as a blocking back—clearing the path for and helping the other fellow to gain ground, and, incidentally, the headlines.

Modest and unassuming, no one ever hears him discuss his past exploits on the football field or in the ring, where he won the CIAA (155-lb. class) championship in 1940. Over here he spends his time chiefly forgetting what a hell of a mess this war is.

His almost ravenous appetite is hard to satisfy on GI rations alone. So he has turned out to be one of the most spirited and successful hunters in the outfit. Almost every evening he tops off his supper with a dish of salad made up from the variety of native vegetables available.

FRIED CHICKEN

Particularly in North Africa one of the choicest and most frequently consumed delicacies was fried chicken. The birds were purchased from the Arabs at first for 50 francs (one dollar) and later for 100 francs.

There we tried to peg the price to prevent the natives from committing legalized larceny on the guillible Americans.

One day Sam Bruce came back to camp with a duck in his hands. The poor bird's body was still warm although he was dead as a dodo from a bullet wound. Sam was unarmed—except for his .45 calibre automatic pistol strapped in a holster under his shoulder. But I never did learn what cruel fate overtook the duck.

OVERSEAS BEFORE

Foreign lands were not a new experience for Lt. Bruce as they were with the great majority of men in this outfit. After finishing Garfield High School in his native Seattle, in 1933, he plied the Pacific as a crew member of the passenger liners. He made four trips to the Orient, touching Japan, China, the Philippines and Alaska.

Between then and 1938, when he went off to college, he played football every fall with the West Seattle (Wash.) Athletic Club team. His high school coach was also mentor for that famed amateur outfit and he made it possible for colored boys who had been under him to continue playing on the club team.

WIFE IN GREENSBORO

While a student at A. and T., Bruce married the former Miss Grace Foy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Foy of Greensboro, N. C., who was also a student at the college. While he is overseas, she is making her home with her parents in Greensboro.

Flying is more than just his work for the duration. It is great fun to Sam Bruce, as well. After the war he hopes to get into the Regular Army and continue flying in the Air Corps.

Lt. Bruce's development into one of his squadron's courageous and exemplary pilots (in the eyes of those who conceive of flying in the Air Corps as more than just a bid for notoriety and glory) is all the more remarkable when you consider how he got into the unit.

HOW HE JOINED 99TH

He had been put into a newly formed fighter group which was about to go up to Selfridge Field, Mich., for further training when he was transferred to this squadron to fill a vacancy, just about a week before it left Tuskegee Army Flying School for combat duty abroad.

OCT - 1943

At first he found it a little bitter dose to take, but soon accepted the new assignment in stride and made the most out of it. And that is no more, nor any less, than you would expect of Sam Bruce.

NEW RECRUIT JOINS

SELECT GROUP

Three days after Lt. Bruce got into the "Caterpillar Club," it gained its third member, this time one of the replacement pilots who had come overseas to the squadron just over a fortnight before.

Tall, slightly built, humorous, and noisy Lt. John H. Morgan was off with a flight of P-40 Warhawks to provide protective cover for shipping along the northern coast of Sicily. During the patrol the engine of his plane went rough. Soon it seemed to be throwing parts through its sides.

HAS DIFFICULTIES

Enemy armies were still holding out in the northeast corner of the island, but fortunately Morgan was on the fair weather side of the line, so his hasty decision to abandon the aircraft did not involve his possible capture and imprisonment.

OCT 2 - 1943

He was at 3,000 feet so he started climbing over the side. But the plane began pointing its nose upward. This forecast for him a stall and then a spin. To avoid that he sat back down and rolled the plane over on its back. He already had disconnected his earphones in the flying helmet he wore and unfastened his safety belt.

Simply falling out of the cockpit was relatively simple, but he, too, remembers well the severe jerk his parachute gave him when he yanked the ripcord and it fluttered out into the wind.

SPRAINS A LEG

Morgan landed with his left foot on a small mound of earth, thus throwing his full weight on that leg. He suffered a sprain and limped noticeably for the next five or six days. He came down on a hill about a mile from a large field hospital.

Soldiers down on the beach had seen him bail out and two of them started driving up the hill in a jeep. Meanwhile two Sicilians had picked him up in a mule-drawn cart and were taking him to the hospital when the jeep reached them.

Apparently he had struck his nose in getting out of the plane, because it was bleeding when he hit the ground. His appearance led hospital attendants to believe he was a serious case. But they soon found that a few days rest was all he needed and they sent him back to his squadron in a tiny plane (used by Infantry units for reconnaissance) five days later.

FORT VALLEY GRADUATE

A product of the high school at Fort Valley (Ga.) N. and I. Institute (now a state college) in 1938, Morgan entered college at Tuskegee and played in the institute band 3½ years until he became a cadet in the Air Corps on February 24, 1942.

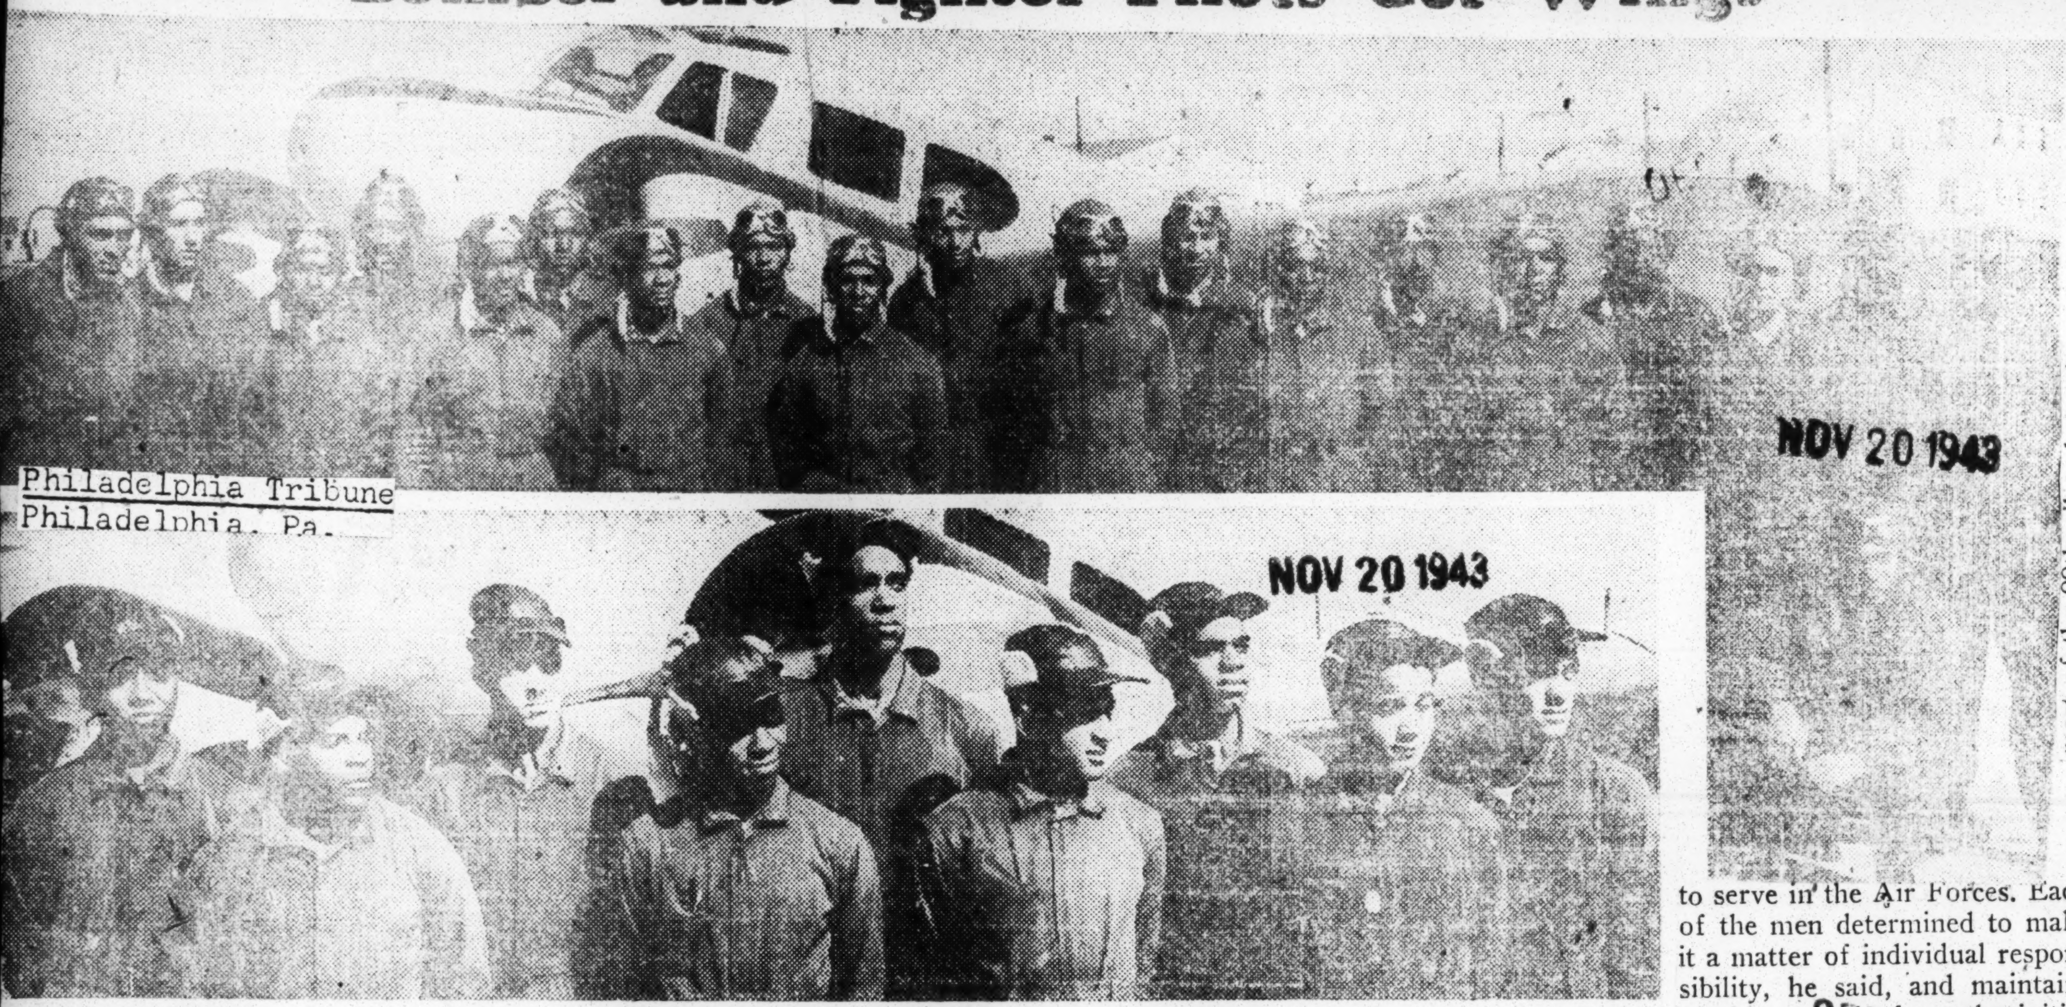
His flying also was started in the CPT course while he still was a student two [illegible] earlier. He was training with the [illegible] Fighter Group at Oscoda, Mich., when he was transferred and sent overseas to the 99th Squadron.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Morgan, 407 Jones street, Cartersville, Ga., with whom he makes his home. His father is principal of the local high school.

Bomber and Fighter Pilots Get Wings

Philadelphia Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

NOV 20 1943



In the first graduation of its kind at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, fighter and bomber pilot trainees completed the prescribed course at the same time. It marks the first time in history that colored pilots have received their wings for other than fulfilling the rigid requirements of fighter pilots. The fighter pilots will g g through a transition period on the P-40 Warhawk (as in the past; whereas, the twin-engine graduates will leave for Mather Field, California, where they will be the first group of colored pilots to undergo Medium Bomber training in B-25's.

The Twin-Engine graduates, bottom picture, left to right, are: 2nd Lieutenants Herman R. Campbell, New York, N. Y., Henry F. Fletcher, San Antonio, Texas; P[illegible], Jr., Atlanta, Georgia; Vincent J. Mason, Orange, New Jersey; Haldane King, New York; Jerome D. Spurlon, Chicago, Illinois; Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore, Md., William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass.; Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, California.

The Fighter Pilots, top picture, left to right are: 2nd Lieuts. Edward M. Thomas, Chicago, Illinois; Eugene D. Smith, Cincinnati, Ohio; Charles W. Dickerson, New Rochelle, New York; James B. Brown, Los Angeles, California; William H. Thomas, Los Angeles, California; William H. Thomas, Los Angeles, California; NATHANIEL C. STEWART, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Carl E. Rayburg, Washington, D. C.; Edward Laird, Brighton, Ala.; Alfred W. Carrol, Washington, D. C.; Ivey L. Leftwich, Fairfield, Alabama; Clarence W. Dart, Elmira, New York; Oscar D. Hutton, Chicago, Illinois; Earl S. Sherrard, Columbus, Ohio; Roger B. Brown, Glenco, Illinois; Turner W. Payne, Wichita Falls, Texas; Emory L. Robbins, Chicago, Illinois; Gwynne W. Pierson, Oakland, California; Hugh S. Warner, New York, N. Y., and, at the far right, Paul C. Simmons, Detroit, Michigan.—TAAF Photograph.

Colored Flyers Beat Germans In Combat

Philadelphia, Pa.
Philadelphia Tribune

SEP 18 1943

Commanding the nation's first all-Negro Army Air Force Unit, the 99th Fighter Squadron, now in the European theatre, Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., today called on everybody to back the Third War Loan.

His comment was made at a War Department press conference arranged in Washington for him.

Just back from the fighting fronts, Colonel Davis said that "all of us would like to feel that everyone back in this country is supporting the war effort to the utmost. One way we can do this is buying War Bonds."

"I can tell you that the men of my squadron and my other comrades at the front are just as interested in what you are doing back here, as you are in what they are doing over there. They are hit[illegible] hard—all of them, of all races, colors and creeds. To follow through, there is one big thing those at home can do. That is to "Back The Attack" with War Bonds. I earnestly hope every Negro in America will do his part in the Third War Loan to keep the faith with our fighting men over there."

Representatives of more than a score of Negro newspapers were present to greet, listen to, and question the young commanding officer of the pioneer Negro air unit.

Accompanied by his wife and his father, the Army's highest ranking Negro officer, Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, Sr., Col. Davis, who has seen action in North Africa, Sicily, and Italy, spent nearly an hour commenting on the experiences, morale and accomplishments of the officers and men who sailed from the United States with him on April 15.

He said that the personnel of the 99th realized the great responsibility they bore to prove that Negro fliers are physically, psychologically and morally fit to serve in the Air Forces. Each of the men determined to make it a matter of individual responsibility, he said, and maintained this attitude from the initial training stages through subsequent actual combat assignments. The Colonel expressed his belief that these pioneer combat fliers have now firmly established the Negro's ability as a competent aerial fighter.

Colonel Davis said the 99th received the best training, care, and equipment that could be given. He said criticisms from some sources regarding the segregated training school at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, where the 99th was activated, were heard. But, he pointed out, as an individual airfield and training unit, Tuskegee provided the men of the 99th with a calibre of training which enabled them to pave the way for colored fliers and prove to the world that they are capable of doing a highly technical job in a competent and satisfactory manner.

The 99th was described as an "experiment." Every man was imbued with the philosophy that he would "go through any ordeal to insure the successful conclusion of the 'experiment'."

Treatment accorded the squadron here and abroad was excellent, according to the commanding officer.

After further training in Ca
ablanca and other African st tions, the unit was given its fir combat assignment — a di bombing mission over Pantel
ria. Each 99th pilot went on t first trip with an average of 2 flying hours in a P-40 [illegible] ha plane. This was an advan ag
Other missions followed with minimum of losses. Col. Dav named First Lieut. Sherm
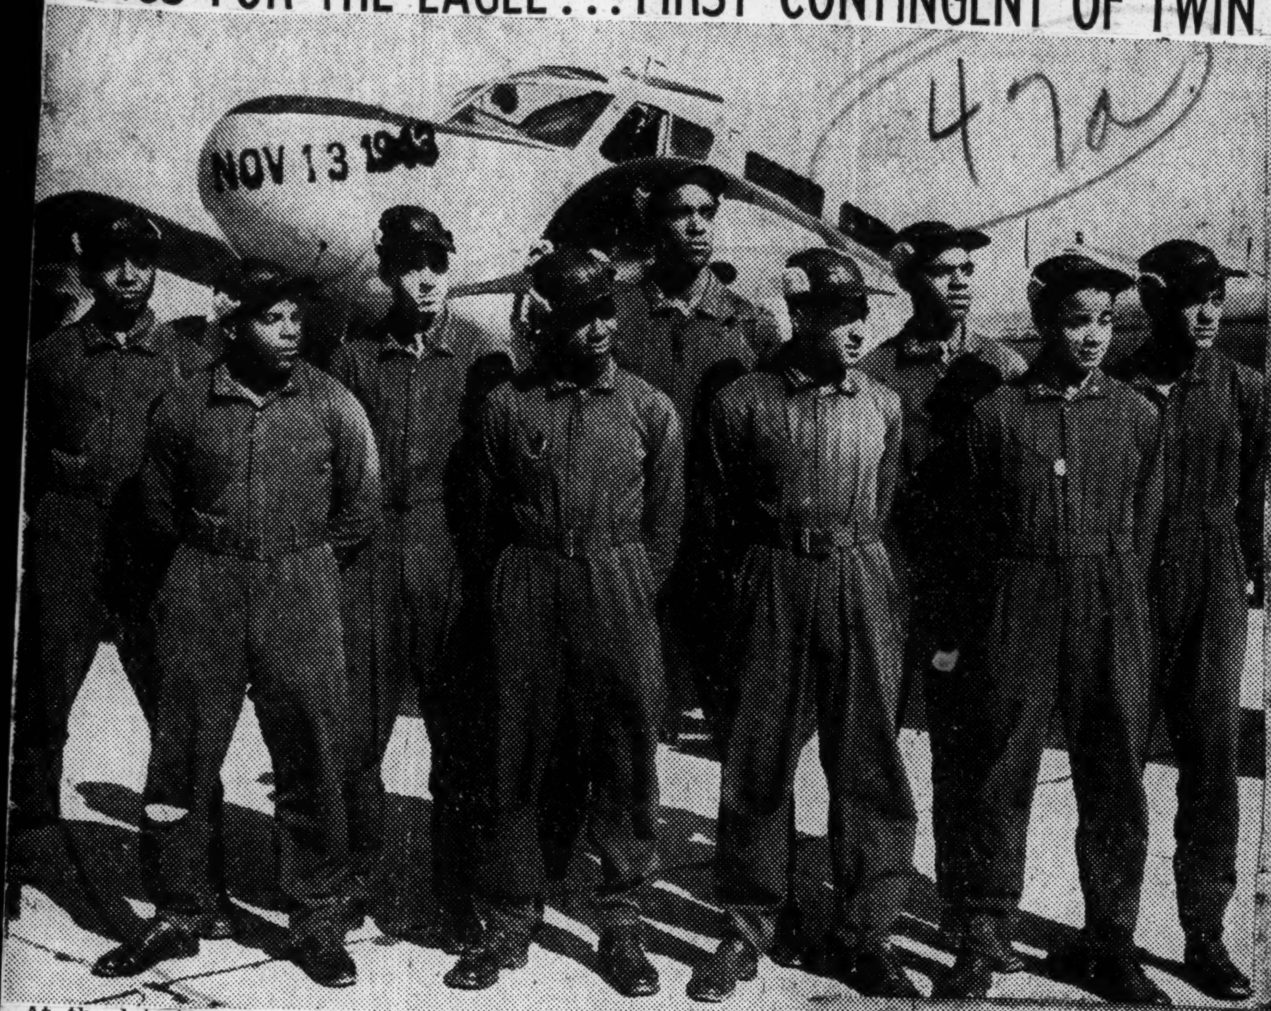
White of Montgomery, Ala.
and Second Lieut. James L. McCullough of St. Louis, Mo., among the men missing.

His unit is credited with having destroyed 1 enemy plane, scored three probables, and damaged three others. The 99th has engaged in over 800 sorties since going abroad.

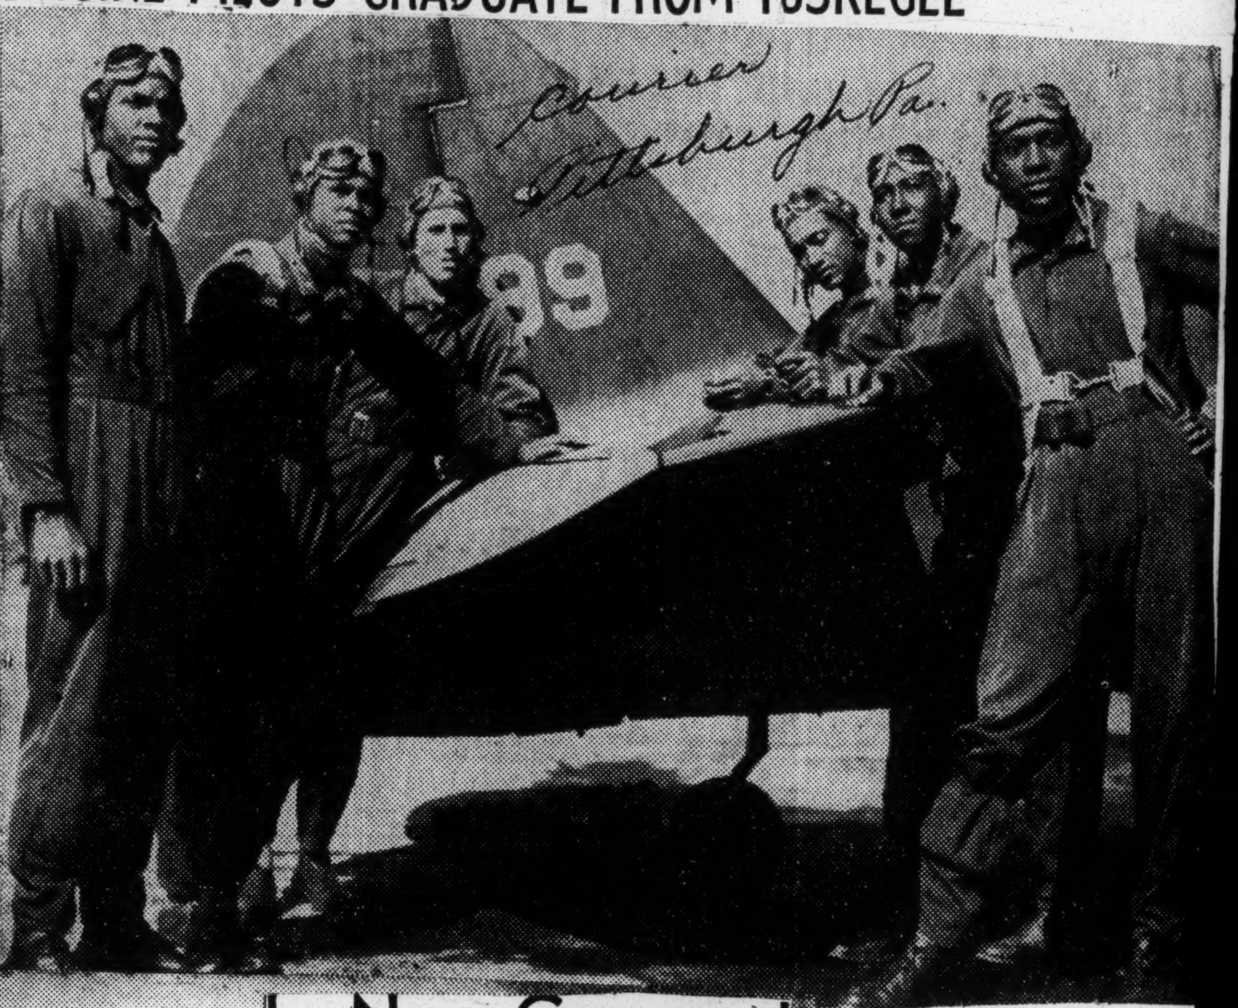
In explaining the Oak Leaf Air Medal he wears, Col. Davis pointed out that it is given to all pilots who go on a specified number of missions. He said most of the 99th pilots have the medal.

47a-1943

WINGS FOR THE EAGLE... FIRST CONTINGENT OF TWIN ENGINE PILOTS GRADUATE FROM TUSKEGEE



47a



Courier Pittsburgh Pa.

At the latest graduation exercises held last Wednesday morning, November 3, at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, the first class of twin engine pilot trainees received their wings and commissions signifying completion of the first phase of their training toward becoming bomber pilots. After a short leave of [illegible] they will en[illegible] for Mather Field, Calif., to undergo transitional training in B-25 (Mitchell) medium bombers.

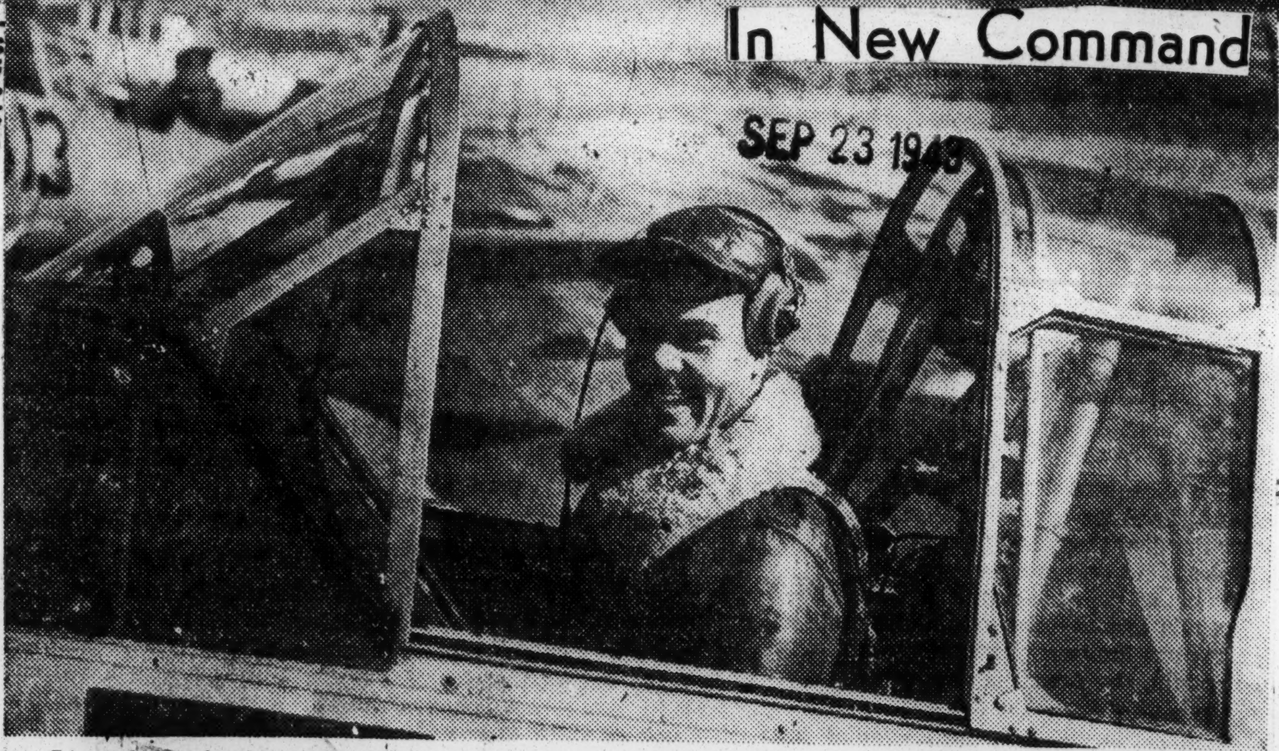
NOV 3 1943

The recently commissioned second lieutenants, reading from left to right, are: Herman R. Campbell, New York, N. Y.; Henry F. Fletcher, San Antonio, Texas; Perry Hudson, Jr., Atlanta Ga.; Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N. J.; Maldane King, Jamaica, N. Y.; Jerome D. Spurlon, Chicago, Ill.; Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore, Md.; William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass., and Leslie A. Williams of San Mateo, Calif.

Grouped around the tail assemblage of a P-40 Warhawk are six recently commissioned second lieutenants, graduates of the Tuskegee Army Air Field. The youthful flying officers were snapped as they awaited their turn to solo the famous single-seater fighter.

The officers, reading from left to right, are: Second Lieuts. Edward Laird, Brighton; Ala.; Ivey L. Leftwich, Fairfield, Ala.; Eugene D. Smith, Cincinnati, Ohio; Earl S. Sherrard, Columbus, Ohio, and Turner Payne, of Wichita Falls, Texas.—Photo by TAAF.

In New Command



Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., who assumes command of the 332nd Fighter Command, Selfridge Field, Mich., after having trained the 99th Fighter Squadron at Tuskegee, Ala., and taken it into combat in North Africa and Sicily. This photo was made when he was a captain in training at the Alabama airfield.

Air Service Command Dispay At The "Back The Attack Show"

SEP 25 1943

Weekly Review
Birmingham, Ala

Press Photo Service
SEP 25 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.— Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War visits Army Show in Washington. Photo shows: left to right, Mrs. Ruth A. Corbin, of the Middleton, Pa., Air Depot demonstrating the repair of aircraft instruments, Truman Gibson, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War and Miss Doris J. Walker of the Middletown Air Depot, who is demonstrating Gyro instrument repair as a part of the Air Service Command display at the War Show. —(Press Photo Service)

SEP 25 1943

'Airplane Hospital' Is Manned By Our Boys

Courier Pittsburgh Pa NOV 13 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU, Courier War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—Attached to our famous fighter squadron is an "airplane hospital" manned by Negroes. It is the first of its kind in American military history. Although its work is of a highly important nature, it has been all but obscured by the success and glam[illegible] of the [illegible]er flying outfit. The "hospital" is officially known as a service detachment. It uses the same numerical designation as the squadron and is atatched to it for orders. But it is a complete self-sustaining unit with a commander of its own, Capt. Elmer D. Jones, Jr., of Washington, D. C.

The service detachment acts as the squadron's clearing house for airplanes, supplies, spare parts and takes care of major repairs which the squadron's engineering department is not equipped to handle. It also does salvage work on wrecked planes.

Captain Jones is also engineering officer of the squadron's service detachment. Its technical supply officer is Ist. Lt. Thomas N. Malone, of Detroit, Mich.

HOWARD GRADUATE

Captain Jones holds a B.S. degree in electrical engineering from Howard university. He was one of the two Negro engineering cadets to be graduated in October, 1941, at Chanute Field, Ill. He was then assigned to the Tuskegee Army Flying School where he was commissioned in December[illegible]

NOV 13 1943

Lieut. M[illegible], te[illegible] supply officer for the detachment, was formerly a Detroit school teacher. He is a 1941 graduate from the Air Corps Administration School at Miami, Fla.

THREE SECTIONS

The detachment is organized into three sections, administrative, engineering and supply. The first section, under Staff Sgt. Edward M. Hartgrove, of New York City, prepares and maintains all records.

The detachment engineering section takes up where the flying squadron's engineering section leaves off. This section is under Tech. Sgt. William E. Surcey, of Jacksonville, Fla.

The technical section, under Tech. Sgt. Charles D. Minor, Jr., of Wheeling, W. Va., handles flying equipment. airplane parts, tools, hardware and greases. It maintains a constant stock from which the flying squadron draws.

PERSONNEL ROSTER

The personnel roster includes the following m[illegible]

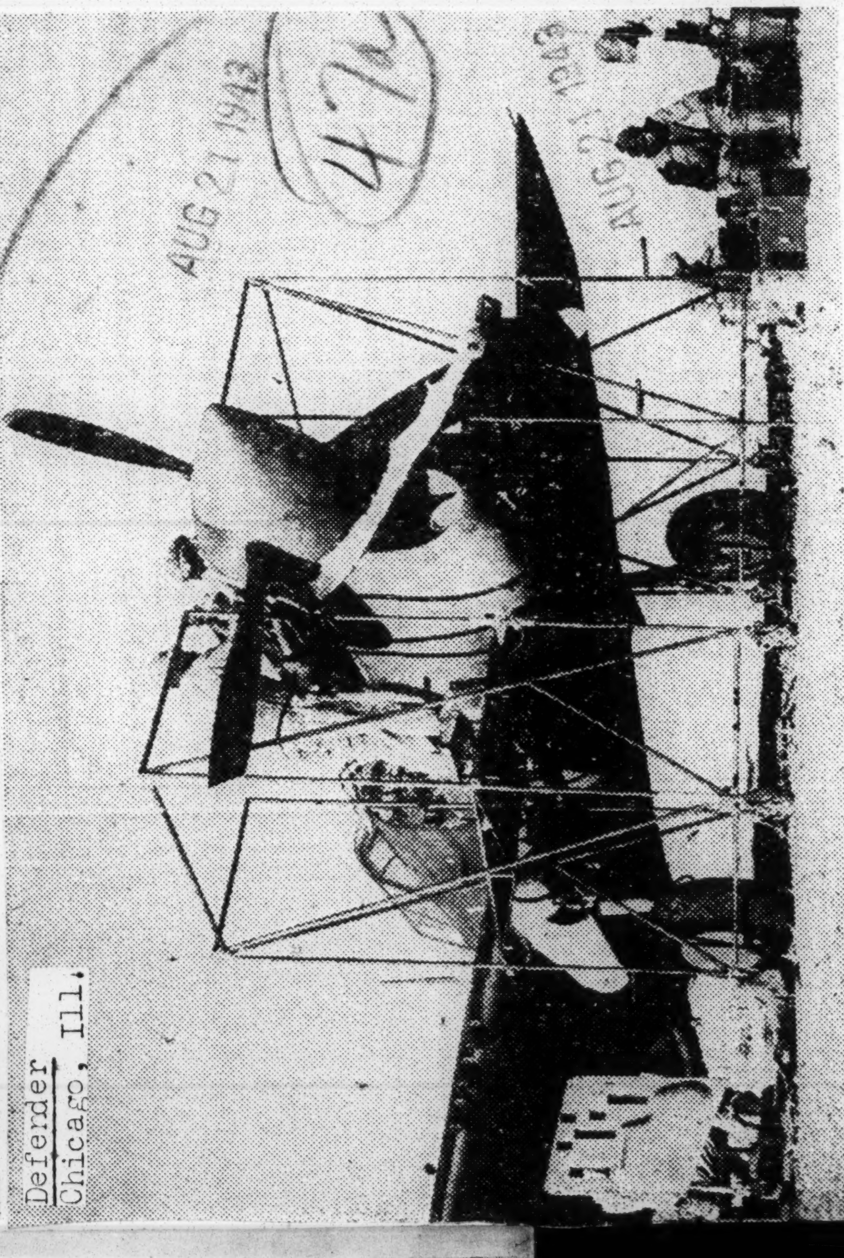
NOV 13 1943

STAFF SERGEANTS—Hugh H. Holmes, Atlanta, Ga.; Ernest Nelson, Champaign, Ill.; Walter E. Turner, Los Angeles, Calif.; James A. Webb, Champaign, Ill.; David D. Wormley, Plainfield, N. J.

LINE SERGEANTS—Edgar T. Brown, Philadelphia, Pa.; Leslie H. Devall, Port Arthur, Texas; Nathan Mumford, Cliffwood, N. J.; Ardra Norman, Waco, Texas; Harold O'Neal, Vaux Hall, N. J.; Eddie Phillips, Kern, Texas; Robert O. Scott, Newark, N. J.; Perry M. Tucker, New Rochelle, N. Y., and Walter E. Vaughn, New York, N. Y.

CORPORALS—John V. Borders, Brooklyn, N. Y.; John J. Randolph, Orange, N. J.; Roland R. Roulette, New York City; Fritz A. Squires, Brooklyn, N. Y., and John M. Laguna, New York City.

PRIVATES (all grades—Herbert H. Boston, New York City; Edward Bush, Lakewood, N. J.; Brew O. Graham, Columbus, Ohio; James E. Green, Gadsden, Ala.; Lloyd F. Thompson, Brooklyn, N.Y.; William Hill, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Aaron B. Loggins, Chicago, Ill.; Louis W. Skinner, New York City, and Richard Trollinger, Tuckahoe, N. Y.



AUG 21 1943

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Between sorties against the enemy, the 99th's sturdy P-40 planes get a going-over by the expert ground crews. Here are mechanics tuning up a plane after a flight.

47a-1943

Lt. Lawson Came Home on Half Wing and a Prayer

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Former Tuskegee Flyer Says Germans Don't Stand and Fight Any More

NOV 6 1943

By DOUGLASS HALL

NEWTON, Va. — "Coming Home on a Wing and a Prayer" is a pretty safe business, but what happens to a flyer when he has only a prayer and half a wing left? Lt. Walter Lawson, member of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, knows the answer because he had that experience in North Africa. While escorting a bomber on a mission over enemy territory, Lieutenant Lawson was attacked by a group of German planes. He dived into them! When it was all over, he had only half a wing left and a plane whose motor was not running none too well.

Lt. Lawson

His Closest Call

"I headed for home," Lieutenant Lawson stated, "flying low. The plane did not have the power to climb very high. I had my fingers crossed and I prayed — hoping that I would not meet the enemy flyers again. I did not and arrived home safe."

That was Lieutenant Lawson's closest call. Soldiering was no bed of roses for the boys in North Africa, he said, but he wouldn't take a million dollars for his experiences.

Germans Hit and Run

"Never at any time were the boys afraid," the lieutenant added, "they like to engage the enemy planes in dog fights, but that is almost something of the past. The Germans no longer stand and fight; they strike hard and run.

"But when one sails through the skies en route to a target," he stated, "there is a terrible feeling that comes over him. Behind every roll of cloud enemy planes seem to be lurking. It is the unknown that bothers us — not the known.

"Let them come out and fight—man to man, plane to plane — and the war will soon be over. But, no, they lurk in the clouds and fall down when you least expect."

332nd Air Group Said Near Peak

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

OCT 16 1943

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—With a smart array of new equipment, elements of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field are fast attaining their training peak, the War Department announced this week.

Lieutenant Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., Air Corps, has assumed command of the group.

NEW EQUIPMENT

Included in the new equipment are P-39s (commonly called the Airacobra), P-47s and P-40s. The P-40 will be remembered as the tough air arm that brought much recognition to Lieutenant Colonel Davis' 99th Fighter Squadron in the African campaign. The 99th Fighter Squadron is presently serving in Italy.

New camera equipment has been provided for use in firing practice to step up accuracy with the .50 calibre machine gun. The Army has also provided improved installations on the firing range at Oscoda, sub-base of Selfridge Field.

Many pilots of the 332nd Fighter Group have been referred to as "naturals" by instructors and superiors when describing the manner in which they operate the P-39. The Airacobra, with its 1,150-horsepower Allison engine mounted behind the pilot, has established an enviable reputation in combat.

There has also been a step-up in flying hours at the field. Formerly reported as between 400 and 500 hours a week, the flying time now accomplished by pilots in training totals above 2,000 hours a week.

CROWNED TUSKEGEE QUEEN

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

MRS. ROSE LYNN LANE

Wife of Lieut. Allen Gaston Lane, now stationed with the Negro fighter squadron in North Africa, was recently crowned "Miss Tuskegee Army Air Field" by popular acclaim of the entire personnel of this station. Mrs. Lane is a graduate of the latest class of Tuskegee institute where she received her B.S. degree. At the prsent time she is employed in the Post Signal office. She is the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. J. T. Williamson of Tuskegee institute, Ala.

99th Flyers Make Post-War Pledge In Italy's Mud

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

DEC 29 1943

Absence Of Race Friction Between Squadrons There

ARMY FIGHTER BASE, ITALY — (ANP)— With 1,156 misions to their credit members of the 99th pursuit squadron made a group resolution recently to remain with the army air force after the war if their services were wanted, a report from the Italian front revealed.

Despite bad flying weather in Italy, 20 members of the fighting 99th, who were in readiness to make an immediate take off on an assignment of destruction, are reported to have pledged their post-war services to the army in the sticky mud of the Italian mainland.

ABSENCE OF FRICTION

An absolute absence of race friction exists between members of the 99th and other squadrons, reported Capt. Charles B. Hall, of Brazil, Ind. America's first colored flyer to down a Nazi plane.

"They invite us to come over and fly with them," he said, "and we invite them to fly with us." Capt. Hall revealed that white and colored flyers get together just for bull sessions."

That the 99th is an experimental air arm of the army air force was brought out by Capt. Rodney Curtis, 25, ground operations officer of Hartford, Conn., and a graduate of Harvard University.

PART OF EXPERIMENT

"This has been a great opportunity for us," he declared. We knew it when they opened up the air forces to us back in July, 1941, before Pearl Harbor. We knew that we were an experiment, that the future of colored men who thought they should be permitted to fly for their country depended upon us.

"We think we've proved ourselves, We've fought in Africa, in Sicily and now in Italy. We've carried out every assignment given to us.

Poised within eight minutes by air from the Nazi lines, the 99th has engaged in divebombing and strafing; has served as bomber escort and patrol and has supported ground troops on 1,156 missions of battle.

College Group Rated "Very Satisfactory"

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa

NOV 20 1943

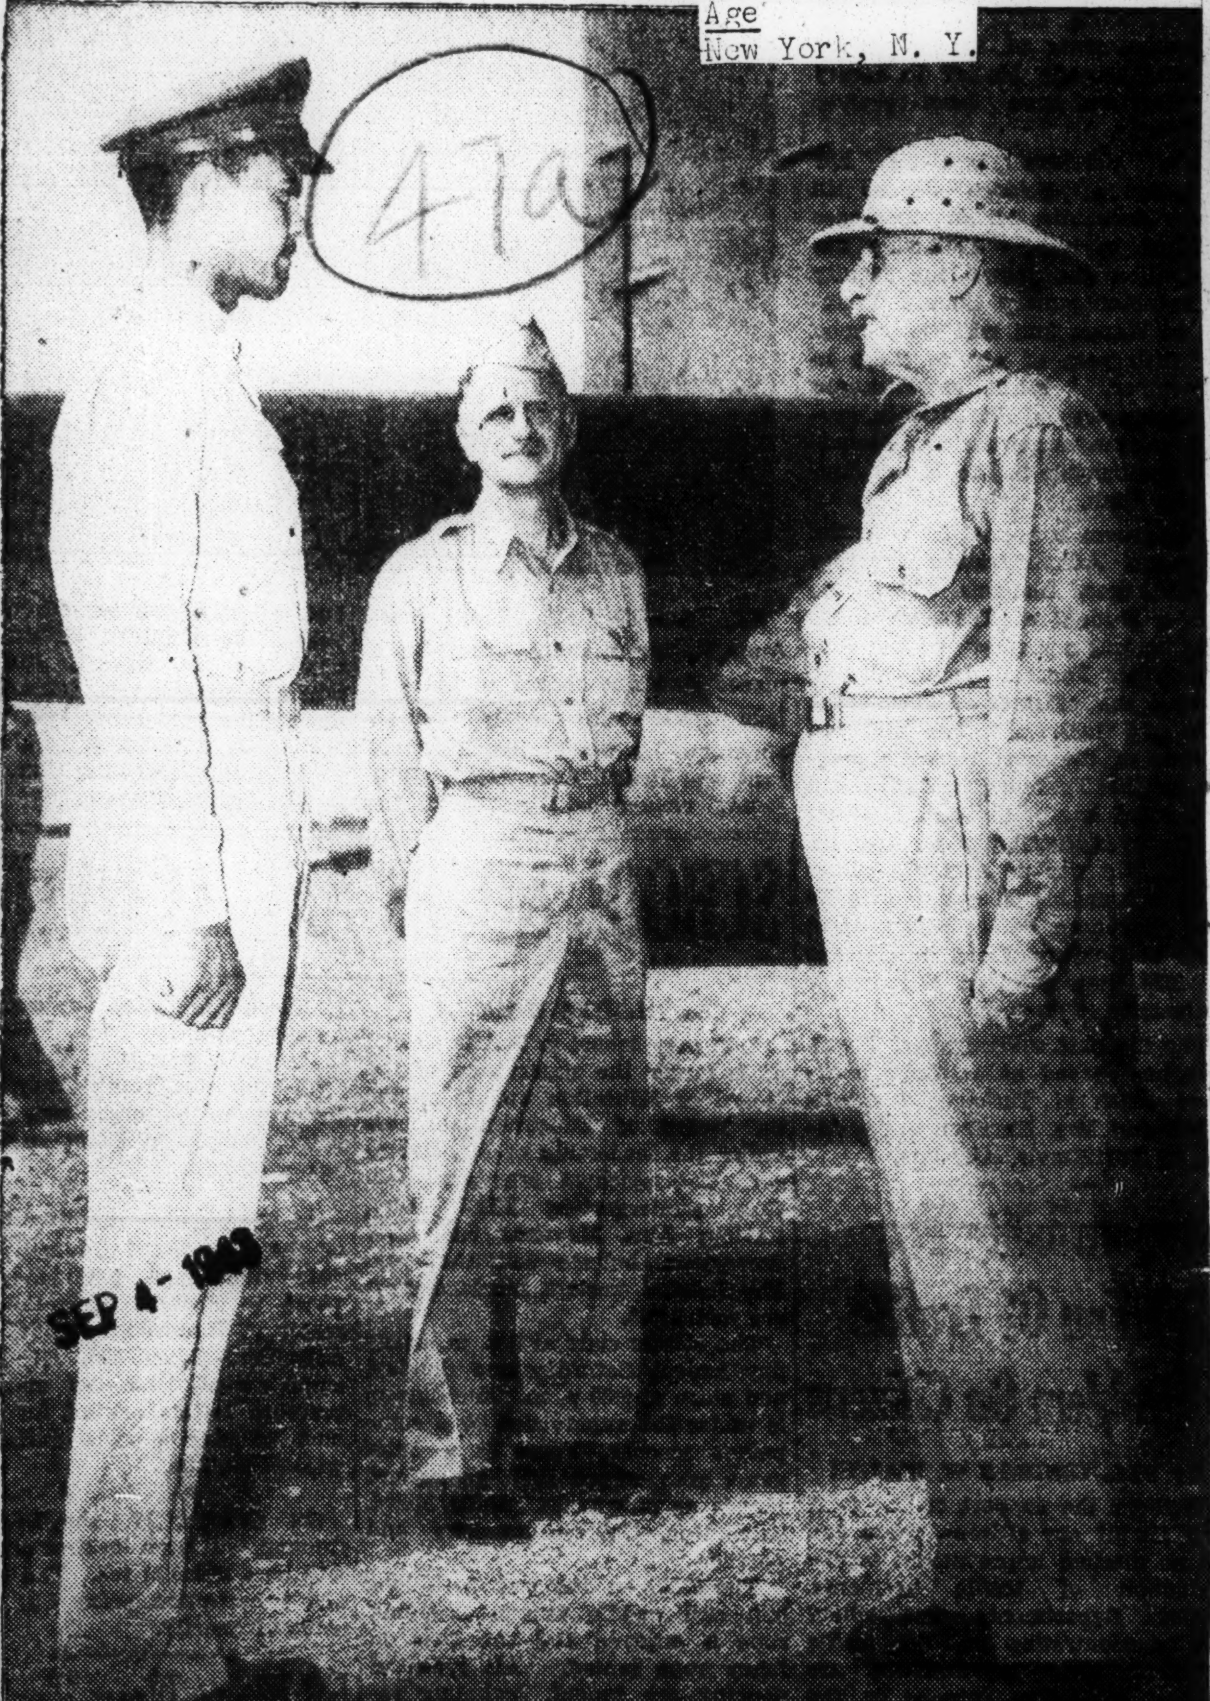
TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. — Following the annual inspection by the Inspector General's representatives, the 320th College Training Detachment (Aircrew), located at Tuskegee Institute Alabama, received a rating of very satisfactory.

This inspection was but the first of a series of surprises in a period of unexpected developments in the history of the organization. The next day, two of the junior officers, Lt. Walter H. English, Adjutant, Washington, D. C., and Lt. Eugene P. White, Nashville, Tenn., tactical officer, received their promotion to the rank of first lieutenant. A few days later the commanding officer, Capt. Theodore H. Randall, just as he was leaving headquarters for a short leave to his home in Indianapolis, Ind., was greeted with his promotion to captain.

Secretary Of War Visits 99th Fighter Squadron

Age
New York, N. Y.

47a



SEP 4 - 1943

Bureau of Public Relations U. S. War Department

SECRETARY OF WAR VISITS THE 99TH FIGHTER SQUADRON—Mr. Stimson is pictured here talking with Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., Commanding Officer of the unit. Lt. Gen. Carl Spaatz Commander of the Northwest African Air Forces, is seen in the background. (Northwest African Air Forces Photo.)

SEP 4 1943

SEP 4 1943

Age
New York, N. Y.

Directs Physical Training

AUG 7 1943
AUG 7 1943

FIRST LIEUT JOHN T. BRACKEN

Lt. John T. Bracken Physical Coach At Army Air Base

47b

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. — First Lieut. John T. Bracken, director of Physical Training, Army Air Forces, 66th Army Primary, Moton Field, Tuskegee, Alabama.

Lieut. Bracken is a graduate of Tuskegee Institute, having received his Bachelor of Science degree in Physical Education in 1938. From 1934 to 1937 he played tacke on the Golden Tiger football team and figured conspicuously in many of the most thrilling games during that period.

AUG 7 1943

For two years after his graduation he taught General Science and Biology and served as director of athletics and physical training at the Tuskegee Institute High School.

AUG 7 1943

In July, 194[illegible] received [illegible] civil service appointment as assistant director of physical training, Southeastern Air Corps Training Center, being the first Colored appointee in the Air Forces training program and was assigned to duty at Tuskegee Institute where he has been stationed since date of appointment. In June, 1942, he was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Air Forces and assigned to duty as physical instructor. Lieut. Bracken was promoted to the rank of First Lieutenant in April, 1943.

He is the son of Mrs. Nettey Bracken, [illegible] California Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

AUG 7 1943

Ex-Northwestern Star Gets Air Corps Wings

Philadelphia, Pa.

Philadelphia Tribune

SEP 18 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. —Far removed from the scenes of his past athletic prowess, Aviation Cadet Bernard Jefferson, former Northwestern University grid star, returned to the limelight August 30, at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Instead of cavorting before a stadium-filled mass of pigskin fans, he stood on the stage of the Post Theatre calmly awaiting the presentation of gold bars and silver wings, emblematic of a flying officer in the Army Air Forces.

SEP 10 1943

SEP 18 1943

As Lt. Jefferson walked off the stage, the thoughts of many persons in that audience must

---

Earns Commission

2nd LT. LOUIS BALLARD

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, ALA.—Second Lieut. Louis C. Ballard, who was commissioned from the Air Corps Administration Officers' -Candidate School of Miami Beach, Fla., on July 24, 1943, was recently assigned to the Tuskegee Army Air Field. He was inducted into the Army on October 31, 1942.

Lt. Ballard, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Ballard of 3918 north Smedley street, burg, Va., is married to the Philadelphia, Pa., received former Miss Ruth N. Book-his Bachelor of Science de- er of Atlantic City, N. J. He gree from Virginia State Cal- is a member of the Omega ege in 1939, and his Master Psi Phi fraternity. of Science degree from the University of Michigan in 1940.
The former physical education instructor of Bruton
Height School, Williams-

47a-1943

Force Pilots To Fly Contrary To Rules

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

OCT 2 1943

(Editor's Note: There are those in authority in the United States Army who are doing all in their power to disrupt the morale of colored servicemen. Even colored commissioned officers have no rights which white enlisted men are bound to respect. We publish below in full a letter to the editor received from a Lieutenant at Selfridge Field, Mich., where a court martial recently demoted from Colonel to Captain an officer who had shot a colored private while a Lieutenant Colonel was ordered dismissed for being drunk.)

I want the public t know the problems that confronts me and every other fighter pilot in the 332nd Fighter Sq. now training at the Selfridge and other Air Bases n Michigan.

All of us were originally trained at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, Tuskegee, Ala., and much of the South "nigger discipline" has been carried over into the groups by men (white) appointed as supervisors of the fighter training, but who in reality do nothing more than put in their required hours for flight pay and make life miserable for the Negro personnel of this "all Negro" fighter Sq. Throughout we have had an extremely trying time bringing this group out as a worthwhile fighting body, because of the many newborn and further unheard of "administrative" restrictions placed on our activities without regard for our personal feelings or morale.

For example Here, as no where else in the army, we, a group of officers, are required to be in our beds at 10 o'clock each night for a bed check and report each morning for a roll call (another enlisted men's process) in the company street to determine if everyone is present. This is done when a sheels on the flying line would suffice.

White enlisted men pass us by with smiles on their faces as we stand in these formations. We couldn't walk to the line as they do, so we must go in formation. No white officer on the field would submit to such treatment, but we dare not object.

If we wish to leave the flight line between the hours of 0730 and 2030 we must ask our white "supervisors" if we can leave. Generally we average 4 1-2 to 6 hours a day flying, but yet we are required to spend the rest of our hours in the ready rooms, on some supervised activity when we could use those hours to advantage in the conduct of little personal things. The little inconveniences in themselves don't even mean so much, but it's the ever present underlying inference that we are children, incapable of governing ourselves on our time without their fatherly guidance.

For most of us who, like myself, are aggressive individuals, capable of living competitive, free lives, this southern aggression theory is infuriating and is only serving to retard the progress of the groups and lessen our desire for any contact with the enemy.

We have flown in every type of weather, fogs and hazes so thick that you could hardly see all the ships in the formation; yet we were required to fly because our "white supervisors," who show utterly no regard for our safety, have said the weather was O. K. Lieutenant Hill and Blakenly (Editor's note: Both killed flying) are no longer with us because of just such a thing. We have been brought up under a different set of rules from that governing White Air Force Cadets.

We have been forced to take up ships when sometimes we didn't feel we could bring them back. White pilots aren't so forced. We have been forced to fly when we as pilots, feel that the ship's maintenance record (Form A) didn't guarantee a safe flight, but when a white line Sergeant has said that the ship's O. K. White pilots aren't so forced, regulations state it shouldn't be done, unless a pilot feels he cares to accept the responsibility of the plane. Regardless of how we feel, after putting in 4 1-2 to 6 hours a day, we haven't the privilege extended Army Air Force Pilots to refuse another flight. For us there is no such privilege. We can never say, as white pilots can, "I just don't feel like going up." Now we as Negroes have never advanced beyond the slave stage. We just never appreciate life unless we are being dogged to trampled on, I suppose

The thing I am writing you about today is something that arose because one of our pilots wished to make use of his rights as laid down in Army regulations, but who was made, or is rather being made, an "example" of by our good white fathers.

Every pilot in the Army Air Forces is given a PIF (Pilot's Information File) for his information and guidance.

It specifically tells him to refuse to take any ship into the air if, either because of mechanical, or physical reasons, he feels he can't bring it back. Evidently this doesn't apply to us because we have just recently had 2nd Lieutenant Leroy Bowman of the 332nd Fighting Sq. court martialed and awarded a dishonorable discharge and federal confinement for refusal to take up a P-40 back into the air on a night flight for 20 more minutes after he had flown 5 1-2 hours that same day.

Lieutenant Davis is not with us now because he went back around "just one more time," for one of our dead supervisors when he didn't feel like it

Lieutenant Bowman did not feel like going back up again, but his personal feelings weren't to be considered in a matter of this nature; he would have to fly the other twenty minutes. Lieutenant Bowman refused to fly and now he finds a verdict imposed on him that has been positively unheard of in the history of the Army Air Forces. The case is now before the First Air Force Reviewing Authority at Mitchell field, New York, with the approbation of that worthy and just body of army officials all that is needed to make the findings of this court effective.

A case of similar nature, for a white pilot, whom never have been referred to any court, but rather placed before the Flying Evaluation for decision. The thing is naturally important to each of us as fighter pilots in the Air Force. We can't sit idly by and see this man crucified, his whole life wrecked, especially when we know it's all to "keep us in line."

You as a Negro leader know what thought plague us all, you know what desires fill our breasts. You know what a thing of this type will do, in the wake of all the other indignities we-ve had to suffer. You know how devastating a factor these consistent assaults against us can be to our fighting efficiency, and in our more sober moments we know that we don't want that. We wan.t and are trying as best we can, to prevent a rupture of our fighting effectiveness. We know their aim is to make it appear that we weren't worth a damn after this thing is over. We don't want that. But if these things persist mayb their effort will be telling.

In our inabilities to act as a potent striking force we appeal to the N.A.A.C.P. through you, as our only means of combating this miscarriage of justice. We We know that the NAACP has met more prejudice Boards of Reviewers with success; and we feel confident and pray that your efforts in our behalf will be met with equal success. We find it hard to fight against Tyranny in the midst of Tyranny.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Americans and British Cheer Unhurt Pilot

Motor and Propeller Undamaged, Only Wing Tip Is Bent

3 FLYERS OF 99th ORDERED HOME

Two Others Earn Promotion to First Lieutenant

NOV 20 1943

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in North Africa

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ALLIED AIR BASE, Italy (By Cable) — In his last flight before departing for the United States, Lt. Herbert V. Clark, Little Rock, Ark., symbolized the spirit of the entire 99th Squadron during its seven months overseas by landing his crippled plane on one wheel without harm to himself and only minor damage to his ship.

Displaying unusual coolness and skill in the dangerous maneuver, Lt. Clark had pilots, mechanics and the ambulance crew on their toes as he returned from a dive bombing mission with one wheel dangling and the other so securely folded that it could not be lowered. The pilot had a choice of retracting the dangling wheel so that a crash landing might be made on the ship's belly. Instead, he chose the seldom-seen one-wheel landing.

Circling the field twice, he came in low at reduced speed and gently set the ship down on one wheel in the center of the runway. He held the ship upright until it had almost stopped, then let it flop on one wing and turn slowly around like a wounded bird. When Lt. Clark walked away from his plane, a shout went up from the Americans and British.

Trying to Save Motor

The motor and propeller were unhurt; only a wing tip bent.

Said Clark:

"I decided to try it on one wheel to save the motor. It's a sweet running ship, and every plane and motor counts around here. I had never tried it before but I figured it could be done."

Next morning, Lt. Clark informed me that he and two others had been ordered back to the States to join Colonel B. O. Davis. The others are Bill Campbell, Tuskegee, and Spann Watson, Hackensack.

Said Lt. Clark: "I had a feeling something wonderful was about to happen; that's why I had to be careful with my one-wheel landing. I could not go home all bandaged up."

Two in Squadron Promoted

Promoted from second to first lieutenant are P. D. Rice, 45 Elmwood ,Avenue, Montclair, N.J. and Henry B. Perry, Thomasville, Ga.

NOV 20 1943

Perry, son of the Rev. Robert Perry, has a brother overseas and was teaching at Littleton, N.C., before entering the air corps.

Rice has three brothers, Capt. Deval Rice, chaplain in the Pacific area; Robert Rice, at Me harry; and James Rice, teacher at Salem, N.J. His wife is the former Harriet Salter of Atlantic City. His father is Converse Rice, and he has two sisters, Dura Rice, Y secretary at Portland, Ore., and Mrs. Delabien Blacken, 827 Avenue A. Norfolk, Va.

Americus, Ga. Recorder
November 15, 1943

Great Rally Of Negroes To Be Held Thursday

The greatest rally of negroes ever held in Sumter county is scheduled for this Thursday when the Tuskegee Army Air Base band comes to Americus in the interest of the War Bond sale. County schools will close for the day Negro city schools will close at 11 o'clock in order that the students may take part in the parade and the bond rally.

The band and visiting negro leaders will be entertained at a barbecue to be held at the baseball park. The bond rally and concert is scheduled for 3 o'clock in the afternoon at the ball park.

Committees were appointed at a meeting of negro county teachers and negro farmers board Saturday afternoon. Final arrangements will be made at a meeting to be held Wednesday evening at 7:30.

D. R. Burleigh, chairman of the finance committee is urging the captains who worked in the community chest drive to make a house to house canvass in the bond campaign. Charles Brown is chairman of the parade committee.

Committees appointed Saturday to serve with the Central Planning committee follow:

Steering Committee—Jury Clarke, Bonnie Harris, Tom Broner, E. D. Simpson.

Entertaining Committee—Henry Harris, J. H. Corley, Eli Foster, Bouie Paschal, Lewis Limbrick, J. S. Nelson, Lonza Ware.

Parade Committee—J. T. Dowdell, Essie Perry, Emory Williams Ernest Wiggins, Lenzie Wiley.

Program Committee—Reed Hosten, Oscar Bell.

Finance Committee—Emory Williams, Oscar Bell, Eli Foster, Tom Broner, Reed Hosten, J. T. Dowdell, Henry Harris, Jury Clark J. H. Smith, Willie West.

Decorating Committee — Jury Clark, J. R. Jackson, Pearl Jackson. Angeline Smith.

The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan.

99th. Squadron In Big Sicily Battle

Washington.—The 99th Pursuit squadron is now based in Sicily and in the middle of the hot battle to clear the Axis armies off the Mediterranean island at the tip of the Italian boot, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson revealed this week.

Stimson also announced that Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the all-Negro squadron, flew from the Sicily base to North Africa for a conference with him during the Secretary's recent tour abroad.

What was discussed Stimson did not reveal.

The presence of the 99th in Sicily and the conference with Lt. Col. Davis were disclosed during a discussion by the Secretary of War of his trip abroad. He said he had made the trip for a double purpose—to see the troops at first hand and to confer on the ground with leaders of the war effort. He declared he wanted the troops to know that those responsible for their welfare had not forgotten them.

In England, Stimson said, he saw ground troops, both white and Negro, in a training program that never lets up.

"The men have fitted in very well," he declared. "Everywhere, I saw evidence of allied unity."

He said he inspected one of the Negro units in England with General Lee. "I found a very interesting situation. The units are working very vigorously and were co-operating and getting along very well with all other units," he said.

When asked by a Negro press representative whether this meant he had expected that they would not be getting along well with other troops, he reddened, raised his voice, and answered: "I've been asked that question many times before by you gentlemen, and I thought I would anticipate it."

In Africa, where Stimson said he conferred with air generals in Tunisia, he said he saw an engineering unit of Negroes which had first been stationed in Liberia. They had performed very valuable work in construction and repair jobs on airports for the Sicily invasion, he declared.

He indicated there were some Quartermaster troops with the landing forces in the Sicily invasion, and that there are now some Negro anti-air-craft units in Sicily.

49a

Dignitaries At Tuskegee V. D. Graduation

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

DEC 7 1943

One of the most far-reaching and "vital to victory" graduation exercises yet to be held at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, was that of the last Venereal Disease Control Class which recently finished the prescribed course at this station.

Great significance may be attached to this graduation as it was the climax to months of hard work done by Lt. Col. George McDonald, founder of the V. D. Control program now used throughout the Army Air Forces.

In recognition of the importance of the occasion, Col. D. D. Fitzgerald, Chief of Staff, Eastern Flying Training Command, the personel representative of Maj. General T. E. Hanley, Commanding General of the EFTC, delivered the principal address to the graduates.

Discussing Lt. Col. McDonald's work are (l. to r.) Capt. E. Brown Singleton; Lt. Col. McDonald, Dir. of the V. D. Control School; Lt. Col. Richard Cumming, Post Surgeon; Col. Noel F. Parrish, Commanding Officer, TAFF; and Col. D. D. Ftiz Gerald, Chief of Staff, EFTC.

Photo by AAF Training Command

DEC 7 1943

Hint Negro Instructors For Tuskegee Air Field

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON—(A N P)—Negro pilots, members of the last class to graduate from the Tuskegee army air field, are to be returned there as instructors, according to rumors current here. They will replace white instructors who are to be assigned elsewhere.

There have previously been no Negro instructors at the army airfield, although flying teachers are used in primary training and at Moton field, Tuskegee, where secondary training is given.

It has also been learned that the 332nd fighter group, in training at Selfridge field, Mich., has been assigned to the first army air corps based in New York. This unit, composed of three squadrons, is understood to be complete with a full complement of ground crew, etc. All the pilots are graduates of the Tuskegee Army air school and Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., recently recalled from Sicily where he commanded the 99th Pursuit squadron, is expected to command the 332nd.

Cadets Learn To Fly Twin Engine Craft

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

Get Some Training At Tuskegee; Then To Be Transferred

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—The second dream of air-minded Negro youth of today materialized into a reality, as twin engine training officially started last week at the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

OCT 16 1943

With the advent of the first all-Negro fighter squadron to combat, in single engine P-40 Warhawks, the question immediately arose as to the possibility of an all-Negro bomber squadron.

The question was answered when the War Department sanctioned the training of Negro cadets in the arduous task of becoming multi-engine pilots, here at the home of the first all-Negro fighter pilot squadron now engaged in deadly combat over the war torn skies of Europe.

ALBRIGHT HEADS SCHOOL

Selected to head this new school, the first of its kind anywhere in the world, is Major Clay Albright, the man who has taught every Negro fighter pilot in the Army Air Forces today, how to fly fighter aircraft. Lieutenant Milton B. Hall, Owensboro, Ky., is assisting in an administrative capacity. Instructors of the newly formed school are 1st Lieutenant Leonard B. Crozier and 2nd Lieutant Robert B. Meagher.

Pilot trainees for twin engine training here will be selected from the Upper Basic class of cadets. They are to receive 70 hours of advanced flying training here and then transferred elsewhere for actual bomber pilot training.

The type of aircraft to be used in the twin engine course here, is the AT-10 BH (Beechcraft). This plane is referred to as an "assimilated loaded bomber," as its altitude in flight is comparable to that of a medium bomber with a load of bombs. All the ingenuity and skill required of a bomber pilot is necessary in flying the AT-10 trainer.

For the highly technical job of maintenance, instructors from Turner Field, Ga., have been attached here to familiarize our mechanics in the fundamental knowledge of keeping these ships aloft.

47a-1943

Text Of Lt. Col. Davis' Statement

Journal and Guide Norfolk, Virginia

I put down a few notes here simply for the reason that I would like to present some facts in as orderly a manner as I can. I am not prepared to make any set speech here this morning, but I would prefer to refer to these notes so that the story will be told in a comprehensive manner.

I have had the honor and the pleasure of commanding the 99th Fighter Squadron from August 27, 1942, until September 2, 1943. During that period I saw 27 pilots and 250-odd enlisted men develop from a relatively untrained state to a combat team of which anyone serving with the organization could justly be proud. I said that I had the pleasure to command this unit—actually that pleasure was realized only when it became apparent that the 99th Fighter Squadron had taken and could maintain its proper place in the Northwest African Theater of Operations. Very little pleasure existed prior to that time.

Just what a Negro pilot in a P-40 would do when antiaircraft fire burst about his ship or when an enemy aircraft was strewing cannon shells and machine gun bullets about his cockpit was a matter that was really conjecture in the minds of some of these high-ranking officers in the AAF. The 99th Fighter Squadron therefore was an experiment to determine whether the Negro pilot was physically, mentally and emotionally suited to the rigors of combat flying. It is a very significant fact, I believe, that all members of this organization were impressed at all times with the knowledge that the future of the Negro in the Air Corps probably would be dependent largely upon the manner in which they carried out their mission. Hence, the importance of the work done by this squadron, the responsibility carried by every man be he ground crewman or pilot meant that very little pleasure was to be had by anyone until the experiment was deemed an unqualified success.

The 99th is a unique organization in the AAF. A large percentage of the enlisted corps was specially recruited from Negro colleges all over the United States and sent in a body to Chanute Field for training. The pilots, while not specially selected, had the advantage of going through all the stages of training with the best instructors, equipment and facilities that our Air Corps could provide. Outstanding officers of the Air Corps kept close and constant touch with the programs made by pilots and ground crews. Every effort was made by all concerned to insure that this unit would leave the zone of the interior equipped with every advantage that the Air Corps could provide.

In the meantime, the squadron received the attention of the press. When was the unit going to the combat zone? Why the delay? Much attention was directed toward the segregated aspects of the Tuskegee Airfield. This publicity had a profound effect upon the individual member of the 99th. The eyes of the nation were upon this organization. It was true that he felt hurt to find that his training station at Tuskegee Army Airfield was being regarded by some persons outside the military establishment as being a discriminatory setup. However, he had the good sense to realize that the best means he had to defeat the end of supporters and philosophers who relegated him to a subsidiary role in the life of the United States was to do his job in such a way that the world would know that he was capable of performing a highly specialized and technical piece of work in a creditable manner.

The fact that his unit was an experiment became a challenge to him, a challenge which he has answered, and one which would set up tendencies to many things that were unpleasant to him and others of his race. If any single spark could be credited with the measure of success so far achieved by this squadron, it is this philosophy which exists explicitly in the minds of this organization. Every man in the 99th will go through any ordeal concocted by combat or garrison existence to assure the successful completion of the experiment. At all times every man realizes that the pleasures and relaxations that are available to men in other organizations are not available to him because his task is far greater, his responsibility is much heavier and his reward is the advancement of his people.

Now it is necessary that I invite your attention to this philosophy in order that you may better understand the reactions of the individual officer and soldier of this organization.

I shall now relate to you our experience overseas. These same experiences would be indeed commonplace if they were related about a white fighter squadron. For this squadron every step was a dramatic one. I should like to state at the outset, and I consider this very important, that from the time this squadron left the continental limits of the United States, and that was on April 15, 1943, to the present time, there has not been a single circumstance or incident which could be regarded as discriminatory by the most rabid race leader.

The first of the drama began the day before we sailed. The passenger list showed the transport commander that I was to be the senior line officer on board the transport. I was directed to pick a staff consisting of an adjutant, mess officer, police and prison officer, a provost marshal and then report to the transport commander as executive officer. This staff of colored officers carried out the orders and policies of the transport commander despite the fact that of the 4,000 troops on board, less than 15 per cent were colored. After the first 24 hours or so of curiosity and wonder at this unusual staff of the transport commander, everything proceeded smoothly and without incident for the remainder of the 8-day voyage.

During all this time the members of the squadron basked in the awe of the attention paid them by other soldiers on board and succeeded admirably in creating the impression that the colored pilot and colored soldier are not so very different after all.

It was here also that the entertainment section, which isn't in any Table of Organization, was born. This section, under the capable direction of the Acting Special Services officer, Lieutenant Letcher, went a long way toward effecting cordial public relations for the squadron. This entertainment section provided an excellent show for units within traveling range of all of our bivouac areas from the port of debarkation in Africa clear on through Sicily. Again the impression created in the minds of the audiences was that these men who were giving these shows are just about the same as the men in "my outfit," and this was not by accident because the men who participated in that show are intelligent men and they realized that at all times instead of just giving a show they were doing a job for the 99th.

Upon landing in Casablanca we were met by the Assistant A-3 of the Northwest Training Command, Colonel Allison, Air Corps. This officer, who is now on his way back to the States for a well-deserved rest, assured me that he would be available at all times for the solution of any problem that might arise.

The following day he took me and my operations officer, Captain Roberts, in to see General Camp who informed us that we would remain in the area until we would be satisfactorily equipped for combat and that we would not move into the combat zone until I felt that everything possible had been done in the way of preparation. He sent us on a preliminary reconnaissance of our new station, located about 150 miles inland. This station was located in French Morocco. Nearby was a service command station and the Commanding Officer of this station, Colonel Phillips, now in Sicily, was most cordial in his offers to ease any supply problems that might arise. There was also at this station a fighter bomber group commanded by Colonel Stevenson, whom I had the pleasure to know at the Academy. We moved to this station by a French train and covered 150 miles in about [illegible] hours, and when we com[illegible] about the slowness [illegible] train we were informe[illegible] we were lucky to move at such a fast rate of speed.

Our stay there was probably our most pleasant stay overseas. We were there about a month. Most cordial relations existed between the members of the squadron and the members of the fighter bomber group nearby. The pilots of the two organizations engaged in impromptu dogfights to determine the relative superiority of the P-40 and the A-36, and we were very happy to verify our belief that the P-40 was vastly superior in this phase of aerial combat. Enlisted men of the two groups got together very well in all types of athletic contests and other means of recreation.

The town of Fez was found to be one of the most delightful spots that any of us had ever visited. One unusual feature of our stay there was that members of my organization and members of these other organizations visited the town of Fez every night for a period of over a month and not one single unpleasant incident arose.

The officers of the squadron were made socially secure in the town by the visit of Josephine Baker. Miss Baker insisted on presenting several different groups of our officers to the prominent French and Arab families in the town. All in all, Miss Baker was very largely responsible for our most pleasant social relations in the town of Fez.

It was during our stay here that four P-39 pilots whom we had met on the boat [illegible] way over, came to visit us. They were ferrying some P-39s from Oran to Casablanca and en route they, of their own volition, simply stopped over to pay us a visit. I mention this simply to indicate that a considerable bond exists among those who fly regardless of color or race.

Our equipment was of the best. We ferried in 27 brand new P-40s and all of us experienced for the first time the thrill of flying a brand new airplane. Lieutenant Colonel Philip Cochran—the Flip Corkin of "Terry of the Pirates"—was our most capable instructor. He imbued all of us with some of his own very remarkable fighting spirit, and in addition to that he taught us what to do and what not to do in aerial combat. We all remember with a smile his opening commentary on the slowness of the P-40. "The P-40 pilot never yet ran away from a fight—because he couldn't." Yet we all know that the P-40 has a more remarkable combat record in this war than any other fighter airplane except possibly the British Spitfire. The P-40, we jokingly say, has three important characteristics. The first one is turn, which enables you to present a very difficult target to an enemy fighter; the second one is turn, and the third one is also turn. In aerial fighting this characteristic is naturally of great importance.

We had two other instructors who were with us until we left for Tunisia. A Major Keyes and a Captain Fachler. Both of these officers had had extensive combat training, one in England and one in the African campaign, and both had just been returned to the training command for instructional purposes. These officers worked unceasingly to make us ready for the real test and all of us felt very grateful for their efforts.

On the 31st of May we took off for the Cape Bon peninsula and the final phase of the experiment. I personally believe that no unit in this war has gone into combat better trained or better equipped than the 99th Fighter Squadron. We were weak in one respect only and that was simply that the squadron commander, myself, and the flight commanders had had no actual combat experience.

That is a very desirable feature because it gives a good bit of confidence to those who are led that the man who is in charge of the formation knows what he is doing and frankly I didn't know initially, nor did my flight commanders. On the other hand, this deficiency was balanced by the fact that my pilots averaged about 250 hours in a P-40, and a young pilot in these days who has 250 hours in a P-40 before he goes into combat is a hard man to find.

All of us were a little on edge because we were going into something that we hadn't experienced before. This transition was eased by Colonel William Momyer, who commands a very famous fighter group which is now located up at the front. We were [illegible]ed to this group for operations and attached for operations means just one thing and that alone, simply that every night the group operations officer telephoned to my operations officer the missions set up for the next day. I might explain that a little bit differently—the setup in the African theater consists of the strategical air force and the tactical air force. We were members of the tactical air force. Under the tactical air force headquarters there is an air support command and this air support command doles out the daily missions to the groups.

A squadron, although it is the basic fighting team in an air force, is actually a small unit, and consequently it would be much better for a single squadron to get its missions from a group headquarters rather than a large air support command headquarters. Colonel Momyer, in giving us the missions, treated us exactly as one of his squadrons. He had three of his own and we had one, that being four squadrons. We got one-fourth of the missions given by his air support command. Colonel Momyer suggested initially that my flight commanders and myself fly as wing men on one of his missions so that we might get some experience initially before attempting to lead our own men into combat. He also advised me very completely on the details of running a squadron in a combat zone.

At that time, shortly after the first of June, the Pantelleria show was going on and our first missions were over that island. We dive-bombed objectives on the island every day until its fall on the 11th of June. We had our first bomber escort, B-25s, B-26s, A-20s and some British Baltimores, to the island. Six of our pilots had their first brush with enemy aircraft during this show but the remainder of us experienced only some of the very inaccurate brand of flak that the Italians throw up. After Pantelleria, Colonel Momyer's group moved to the island and we received our operational control from a fighter group commanded by Colonel McNorris.

From the first of July to the 9th of July we escorted bombers to Sicily and these were our most active days. On every trip we were attacked by superior numbers of enemy fighters. The tactics employed by the enemy fighters were to draw off the escorts so they could get to the bombers. Actually they were not particularly interested in shooting down enemy fighters, so we had to take some action to prevent them from shooting us down.

I would like to say just a word about the German air force. Its tactics have changed quite a bit since the Tunisian campaign. Its pilots are not as eager as they used to be: they have undoubtedly lost the best of them and they no longer press their attacks, as I hear they did in the past. Whereas formerly they would stay down and lap it up, they now make one ineffective pass and head for home. On the other hand, the pilots of my squadron who were initially uncertain of themselves, had now developed a very strong fighting spirit and were eager for an opportunity to meet the German and really fight it out.

An interesting sidelight in this connection is perhaps the growth of religious feeling among the pilots. Toward the end of the Sicilian campaign I had very little trouble getting together an audience for the visiting chaplain, Colonel Pinnel. He always had a nucleus of pilots to speak to. Lieutenant Bowling, one of my pilots, was shot down by flak in the Mediterranean and forced to sit in his dinghy for 24 hours and he said to me: "You know, Colonel Davis, when you sit out there that long, shivering from cold at night and trying to hide from the heat of the sun by day and always hoping against hope that somebody is going to see you and pick you up, you just pray automatically."

After the middle of July we had a squadron of pilots whose fondest dreams were no longer about the girls back home. Instead they dreamed about a German pilot who would be foolish enough to slug it out in aerial combat. At our chosen altitude we had the better airplane, but the German has learned his lesson and now makes his pass from out of the sun, coming down at 350 or more miles an hour and gets on out. We get a fleeting shot as he passes by.

The most interesting engagement took place on a bomber escort mission to Sciacca, Italy. Actually, it probably shouldn't have been as interesting as it turned out to be. The controlling factor is that the leader of the bomber formation couldn't get his bomb bay doors open on the first run over the target. This necessitated his going around two more times and it gave enemy fighters who didn't know we were coming the opportunity to get off their airdrome and come up and get us. We actually saw enemy fighters scramble and climb, and they really do climb.

Our ships were close escort for the bombers that day and we were right with them. The bottom, medium and top cover was provided by another group of fighters, so we absorbed all of the attack of this 20-plus ME-109s, Macchi 202s, and FW-190s, and on that day we lost a couple of aircraft. We definitely destroyed one of the enemy, probably destroyed a couple more and damaged three. We believe that one of our pilots is a prisoner of war. Incidentally, on that day, General Eisenhower visited our field and during his [illegible]y congratulated Captain Hall, one of our flight commanders, on his and our first confirmed victory.

Our field was often visited by high-ranking officers of both the British and American army. Among the visitors were such men as Air Marshal Cunningham, in command of the Tactical Air Forces; Lord Trancher of the last war; General House, Commanding General of the 12th Air Support Command; General Doolittle, who is in command now of the Strategic Air Force; General Spaatz, Commanding General of the Northwest African Air Force, and many others which I won't name.

After ditto for the Sicilian attack the 10th of July, we provided cover for the landing beaches on southeastern Sicily. We escorted C-47s which moved the echelon of the various units to new bases on the island. On the 19th of July we moved to a base on the southern coast and we provided air support for the ground troops by dive-bombing. We strafed strong points holding up their advance, trucks that were bottled up on the very few roads on the northern part of the island.

After the fall of Sicily we devoted our time to training replacements that reached us from the States. We got new combat crews and the men in charge of the training got a good bit out of their new responsibilities of the responsible places in the formations which they had to fly.

On September 2, I received orders assigning me to the 332nd Fighter Group and left for the States. I believe that the men that I left behind instead of being the fledglings they were on the first of June are now seasoned veterans of a combat experience that all of us may well be proud.

That concludes the statement which I planned to make, except for the following remarks: I can tell you that the men of my squadron and my other comrades at the front are just as interested in what you are doing back here as what they are doing over there. They are hitting hard — all of them, of all races, colors, and creeds. To follow through, there is one big thing those at home can do. That is to "Back the Attack" with War Bonds. I earnestly hope every Negro in America will do his part in the Third War Loan to keep their faith with our fighting men over there.

---

35 Enlisted Men Promoted In 99th

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By T[illegible]AS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

(By Air Mail, Delayed. Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

AN ALLIED AIRFIELD IN SICILY, AUGUST 13—Promotion of thirty-five enlisted men in a Negro Fighter Squadron which participated in the Sicilian campaign was announced here today by 1st Lt. Bernard S. Proctor, Glen Olden, Penna., acting adjutant.

Ranks one grade higher than those previously held for the following men were authorized by Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., (then) commanding officer of the squadron, Proctor said:

MASTER SERGEANT: Fred Archer.

TECHNICAL SERGEANTS: Ralph A. Burnley, Thomas W. Downs.

STAFF SERGEANTS: Elijah Coleman, George D. Johnson, William H. Young Jr., and Edward M. Hargrove.

SERGEANTS: Robert H. Ables, Hubert E. Bigelow Jr., Arber L. Crier Jr., Edward R. Pryor, Irvin L. Sharpe, Wardell P. Alexander, Edward A. Boone, James Hileygar, Raymond Scruggs, Joseph E Spooner, Arthur T. Williams.

CORPORALS: Lucius Anderson, Fred Munger, Thomas Morris, Albert Porche, Roy Teague.

PRIVATES FIRST CLASS: Russell J. Bacon, Ernest Brown,

George Grooms, Joseph F. Mayers, Robert Newsome, Napoleon B. Watkins, Leonard R. Brewer, Harvey Cain Jr., Leo S. Holmes, Charles E. McDonald, John H. Turner, John W. Young.

OFFICERS PROMOTED

These promotions of enlisted men followed by a few days the announcement by Col. Davis that nine second lieutenants had been advanced to the rank of first lieutenants. They were:

Willie H. Fuller, Tarboro, N. C.; Samuel M. Bruce, Seattle, Wash.; Louis R. Purnell, Philadelphia; Paul G. Mitchell, Washington, D. C.; George R. Bolling, Phoebus, Va.; Graham Smith, Ahoskie, N. C.; Willie Ashley, Sumter, S. C., and Walter I. Lawson, Newtown, Va., all pilots, and George R. Currie, Los Angeles, Calif., ordnance officer.

Ed. Note—These officer promotions were first announced in the Guide with the publication in the issue of the week ending August 28, of a cabled dispatch from our correspondent.)

3 PROMOTIONS RECOMMENDED

Three other second lieutenants were recommended for promotion at about the same time, the Journal and Guide learned, and their orders are expected momentarily, making them also first lieutenants.

With these the squadron will have the unique distinction of carrying on its roster only the four replacement pilots, who have joined the ranks since the original unit came overseas as second lieutenants.

(Ed. Note—Since this air-mailed was filed, cabled dispatches to the Guide from its correspondent revealed the arrival by plane of eight addtional replacement pilots, making a total of 12 new second lieutenants.)

Other than those replacements, every flying officer in the squadron will be a first lieutenant or higher.

Such a situation results from the long training period which the squadron had in the United States after it was activiated, durwhich n[illegible] of the second enants were recommenda-

m of their commanding officer for promotions.

The other twelve won their promotions under actual combat conditions.

---

mestic scene and charged the church with aiding the fight to remove the poll tax to give southern Negroes the right to vote; girding for passage of Senate Bill 637 which will provide a federal fund of $300,000,000 for elementary and seconadry schools principally in the south where the heavy Negro populations is centered; joining with the progressive forces in the ranks of labor to attain economic security; and securing membership on government post war planning boards to present the demands of Negroes for full participation in the peace.

Although Dr. Logan emphasized the home front problems he pointed out that there were Baptists in other parts of the world, and even if this were not true the churches should be concerned about the welfare of Negroes everywhere, he said. He stated that after learning something about the real conditions of Negroes outside the United States the foreign mission board of the church was obligated to work out a helpful program for its members overseas.

47a-1943

Tuskegee Field Graduates Its First Artillery Liaison Pilot Officers

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

OCT 16 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—The first class of field artillery officers trained as liaison pilots at this field received their wings in the Post Theatre, September 30.

Captain Errol W. Becthold, director of liaison training, in addressing the class, pointed out that, "Liaison training is nothing new. It was used in the last war. However the methods and procedures of the effectiveness of their operation have changed considerably with the expansion of mechanized warfare."

He further told the flying artillery-men that, "With the use of camouflage against artillery installations, liaison pilots have a prominent role to play in the present crisis in the firing of heavy guns."

Colonel Noel F. Parrish, Tuskegee commanding officer, presented the graduates with letters of appointment, and commended them on their ability to master the primary stage of flying in nine weeks of intensive training.

NEW OFFICERS

Lt. Charles T. Hood, assistant director of liaison training, presented the new pilots with their liaison wings. Among the group completing the course of flying training at Tuskegee included: Capt. William H. Shannon of Chicago, Ill.; 1st Lts. James I. Minor, Washington, D. C.; William Y. Rose, Chicago, Ill.; and Chauncy Eskridge, Washington, D. C.; 2nd Lts. Darryl C. Bishop, Houston, Texas; Alvin J. Johnson, Chicago, Ill.; Charles G. Dunn, Cincinnati, Ohio; Benjamin F. Moore, Ocilla, Ga.; Leonard E. Wilburn, Columbus, Ohio; Harry W. Dungill, Chicago, Ill.; Lloyd R. V. Taylor, Atlanta, Ga.; Leander A. Hall, Mobile, Ala.; Arnold D. Grant, Coffeyville, Kans., and Aldrick H. Wilson, Chicago, Ill.

These graduating officers will report to Fort Sill, Okla., for advanced and tactical training.

Some such officers were previously trained at Fort Sill and participated in the Louisiana maneuvers several months ago.

OCT 15 1943

These liaison pilots do a variety of jobs. They spot enemy emplacements, direct artillery fire, and then correct, by radio contact, the accuracy of the fire. They also do some emergency air ambulance duty and act as observers. They fly unusually light and very maneuverable craft.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

99th Squadron Joins Ground Crew in Italy

Helped Hold Nazis for Two Days; Rogers and Roberts Now 1st Lts.

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in North Africa

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden]

ADVANCED SICILIAN AIRBASE (By Cable, Censored)—The 99th Fighter Squadron on Thursday began operations against the enemy from the Italian mainland.

The first group taking off for patrol duty from an air base near Salerno, included Captains George Roberts and Lemuel Custis; First Lieutenants Clarence Jamison, Herbert Clark, Herbert Carter, William Campbell and Willie Fuller; Second Lieutenants Morgan,

Meet Old Buddies

This first mission from Italy Herman and Walter Lawson. also meant the reunion of pilots with the advance ground echelon which has been two weeks with the Fifth Army and had many weird tales to tell of fierce battles before the British Eighth Army arrived.

Although a part of the air corps, our boys saw service as quartermasters, infantry and engineers when the Germans drove to within five miles of their air base and lobbed mortar shells into their foxholes.

Blasted Day and Night

For weeks the Stukas and JU-88s bombed and strafed them, morning, noon and night. Even the tanks in nearby towns joined with 88mm guns in blasting the American positions.

Members of the ground echelon were overjoyed to see pilots and service planes again.

M/Sgt. Shag Taylor and tobacco-chewing Joe Howard went into an Indian war dance. They said: "Tell the folks that we stopped the German division cold for two days but that we never want to see two such days again."

On the other hand, until the pilots landed, no news had come to the men of this echelon since their departure for Italy.

Announcement has just been made of the promotion from second to first lieutenant of John Rogers of Chicago and Leon Roberts of Pritchard, Ala.

OCT 9 1943

The Soldier's Psalm

The Sarge is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me pick up burnt matches: he leadet me through mud puddles.
He guideth me on the course of obstacles for my health's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valleys, I must run up the hills.
He anointeth my head with abuses; my cup runneth over.
Surely cadence and K.P. will follow me all the days of my army life: and I will dwell in the hair of my sergeant forever.

Camp Swift, Texas.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Meet the Drivers' Son, A 99th Flyer

Prayers Follow Pre-War Pilot in Raids over Italy

By CLAY CLAIBORNE

TRENTON, N.J. — Meet the Drivers—a son who fights in the air over Italy; a mother whose tears have changed to prayers; a father who is happy because when his son left for war he got what he wanted, the air corps.

This is the story behind one of America's fighting sons, Second Lieut. Elwood Driver, of 30 Fountain Avenue, now on active duty with the 99th Pursuit Squadron. Lt. Driver last wrote:

Last Letter Home

"Dear Mom, We were all sitting around waiting to go on a raid, when Italy gave up over the radio.

"I lie awake about 2 o'clock in the morning—it's 8 o'clock at home, imagining what you are doing listening to the radio, talking with dad on Sunday going to church. I can imagining Barbara arguing about washing dishes, Earl getting ready to step out and dad reading the papers. Smart dad, he always did follow the news.

"Home will always be where you and dad are, even though Imogene and I may have a house some place else.

"Give my regards to all. Take care of Barbara. Does she still get those bonds?—Elwood."

TAFS Graduate

The Drivers delight in telling about Elwood's record:

October 9, 1942 — graduated Tuskegee Army Flying School, (TAFS); January 3, 1943 — Test Pilot, 99th Pursuit Squadron; February 15, Flight Commander, 100th Fighter Squadron; March 6, Operations Officer, 100th Fighter Squadron; March 23, Instrument Check Pilot; May 22, 332 Group Tactical Inspector; June 26, Commanding Officer, 100th Fighter Squadron; July ?, 1943—called to oversea duty."

Lieut. Driver is 22; has a wife, Imogene, 20, a sister, Barbara, 14, and two brothers, Earl 17, and Warren, [illegible] now training in the army air corps.

Mrs. Mary Driver, mother, admits that whenever she reads or hear war news, she becomes worried—but believes that Elwood has had enough background experience to take care of himself. She remarked:

"Elwood had his pilot license before the war broke out, and I am confident that he is as good, if not better than the average flier.

Faith in Prayer

"Too, constant prayers are for the safe return of my son.

"Elwood has renown faith in prayer. His grandmother had two sons in the last war, and she always insisted that 'her prayers brought them safely home.' So when called to oversea duty, Elwood wrote to pray for a successful completion of his mission and his safe return home.

"I am sure that with the constant prayers of our family, friends and his faith, my son will surely come back to us."

Father Robert Driver is quite plain spoken. "I told Elwood, long before the war that he need not be too anxious about flying, because by the time that he was 21, his country would give him all of the flying he could do.

"Elwood wrote me after his enlistment in the air corps that my words had come true. He said he was happy that I had made him complete his college studies, which now greatly favored him."

Designed Model Planes

He added, "That boy was always interested in flying. As a kid he designed plane models. When he was last home before sailing, he couldn't sit still. He would jump and run outside whenever he heard a plane, and if he couldn't hear planes, he would spend most of his time looking at the sky.

"I know he is in a great fight, but the one thing I am sure about is that, Elwood is doing a thing that makes him happy."

The Drivers dislike hearing people make plain gossip out of war news. Her's how Mr. Driver explains it, "Don't run your mouth about war news or movements. Help the government win the victory and let Uncle Sam run the war. Our family believes only what we hear on the radio or read in newspapers."

"We know that Ollie Stewart, AFRO's war correspondent can tell us more about what Elwood is doing than any other person," he said.

OCT 9 1943

TUSKEGEE GRADUATES ANOTHER CADET CLASS

Bee
Chicago, Ill.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., Aug. 5.—In perfect cadence to the stirring notes of the "Air Corps Songs," Class SE 4'-G filed into the New Theatre building Wednesday, July 28, at Tuskegee Army Air field to receive their wings and commissions as single-engine fighter-pilots in the Army Air Forces.

Address by Red Cross Director.

This contingent of airmen became Tuskegee's most recent group of flyers to complete the arduous pilot training course and become flying officers in the Air corps. They were addressed by Mr. Roger F. Gordon, field director of the American Red Cross at the Tuskegee Army Air field who advised them to "Meet the next stage of your training and the trials that are to follow with the same purposeful determination, the same optimism and the same faith that have to this point crowned your efforts with success.

Mr. Gordon, who proved to possess a keen insight into human nature, further admonished the graduating cadets that, "Yours then is a dual responsibility. Your nation expects of you a stellar performance; and because of its peculiar situation with that nation your race demands it. For as you raise the wings of your P-40 into the flame-infested sky of some foreign land, the fate, the future and the prayers of thirteen million Negro Americans ride with you."

AUG 8 1943

Wings Presented.

Immediately following the

Bee
Chicago, Ill.

47a

main address by Mr. Gordon, the graduates were presented commissions as second lieutenants in the Army Air Forces by Lt.-Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the field. Wings were awarded the graduates by Major Donald G. McPherson, director of training at the post. Student officers receiving wings were Second Lieutenants John Daniels of Chicago, Ill., and William B. Ellis of Washington, D. C.

Among those receiving wings and commissions were: Second Lieutenants Lee Andrew Archer, New York City; Harry L. Bailey, Chicago, Ill.; William R. Bartley, Jacksonville, Fla.; Samuel Lee Curtis, Yeadon, Pa.; William W. Green, Staunton, Va.; George B. Greenlee Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Richard W. Hall, Albany, Ga.; Jack D. Holsclaw, Spokane, Wash.; Daniel James Jr., Pensacola, Fla.; John Howard Leahr, Cincinnati, Ohio, Claybourne A. Lockett, Los Angeles, Calif.; James W. Mason, Monroe, La.; Eddie A. McLaurin, Jackson, Miss.; William R. Melton Jr., Los Angeles, Calif.; Robert H. Nelson Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Maurice R. Page Los Angeles, Calif.; Cornelius G Rogers, Chicago, Ill.;

Edward N. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa.; Lowell C. Steward Los Angeles, Calif.; Elmer W. Taylor, Pittsburgh; Pa.; Alva Newte Temple, Carrollton, Ala.; Walter D. Westmoreland, Atlanta, Ga.; Robert H. Wiggins, New Cork City; Leroy Shelton Williams, Roanoke, Va., and Beryl Wyatt of Independence, Kas.

Haitian Wins Wings.

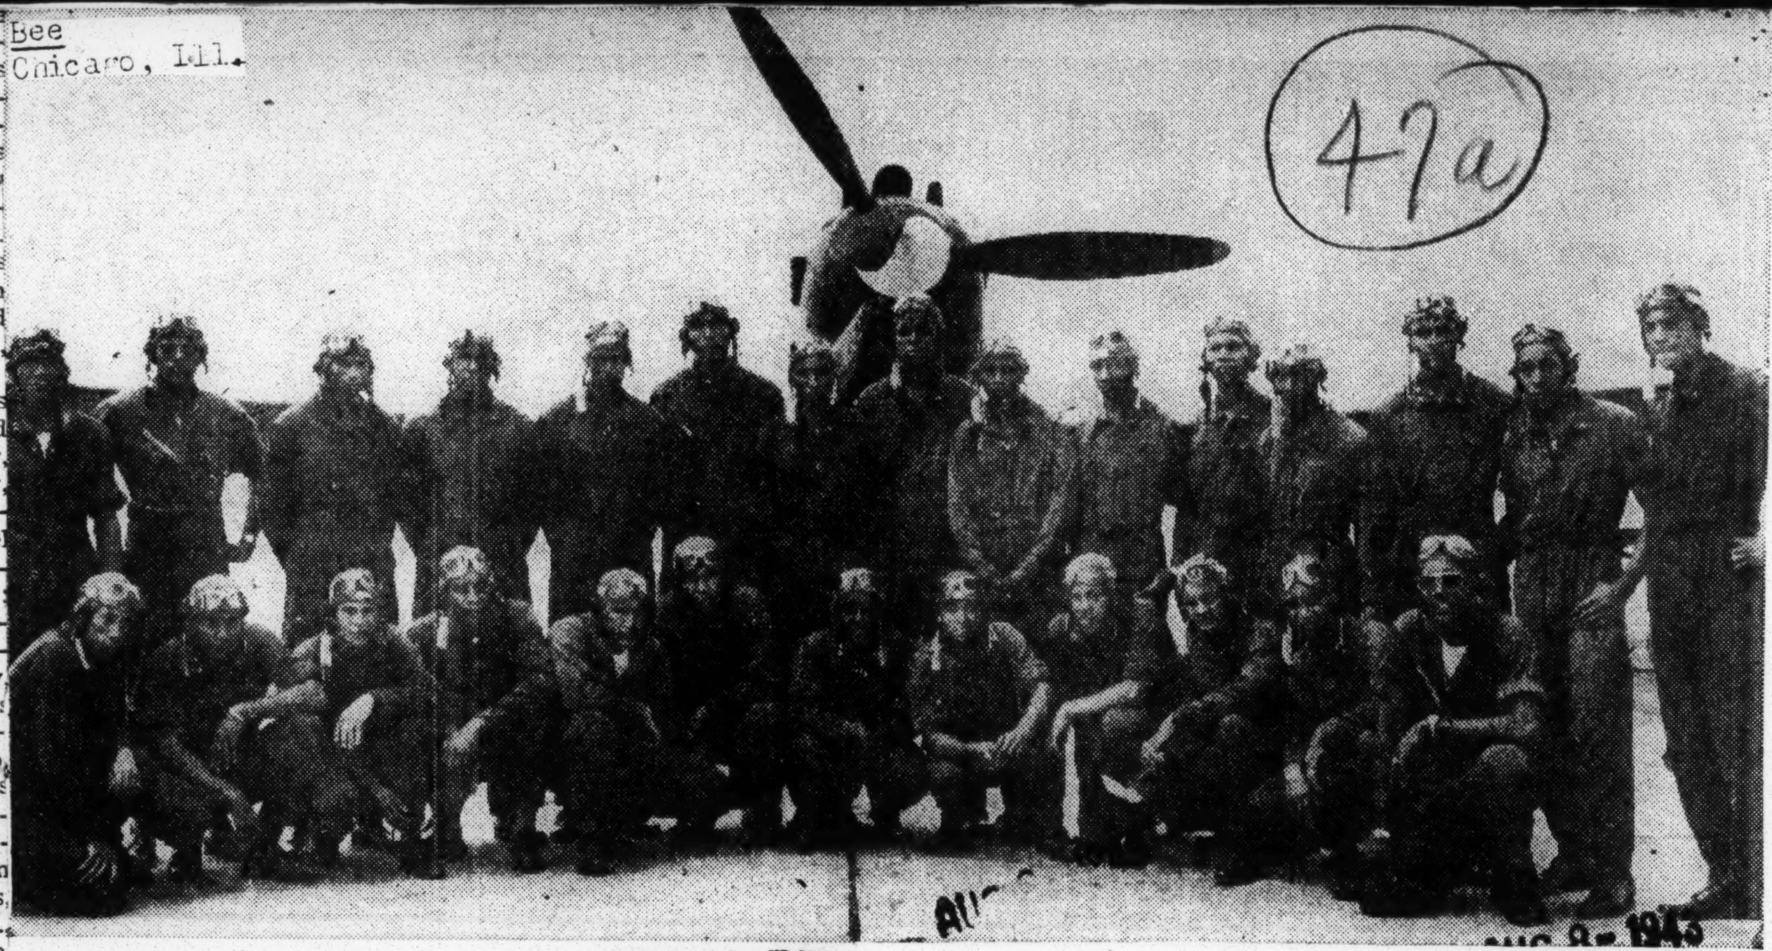
Also completing the pilot training course and receiving wings and a certificate was the first foreign student at Tuskegee, Sgt. Raymond Cassagnol, Haitian Air Force, Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

AUG 8 - 1943

Honor Students.

Cadet honors for all-around excellence as cadets were Lee Andrew Archer of New Mork City, Claybourne A. Lockett, Los Angeles, Calif., and Daniel James Jr., of Pensacola, Fla. Lt. James was a flight instructor at the Primary Flying field, Tuskegee Institute, Ala., prior to accepting appointment as an aviation cadet.

The graduating class will undergo a short period of transitional instruction and then be assigned to a tactical organization for further combat training.



AUG 8 - 1943

NEW TUSKEGEE BIRDMEN — This group of young men were among the latest single engine fighter pilots graduated from the Tuskegee Army Air Field. All are second lieutenants in the Army Air Forces. They are from left to right: (kneeling) Lowell C. Steward, Los Angeles, Calif.; William R. Melton, Los Angeles, Walter D. Westmoreland, Atlanta, Ga.; Maurice R. Page, Los Angeles, Calif.; Elmer Taylor, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Jack Daniels Holsclaw, Spokane, Washington, Eddie A. McLaurin, Jackson, Miss.; Cornelius G. Rogers, Chicago, Ill.; William W. Green, Jr., Staunton, Va.; George B. Greenlee, Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Claybourne A. Lockett, Los Angeles, Calif., and John Daniels of Chicago, Ill. Standing: Lee A. Archer, New York City; William B. Ellis, Washington, D. C.; Alva N. Temple, Carrollton, Ala., William R. Bartley, Jacksonville, Fla.; Le Roi S. Williaims, Roanoke, Va.; James W. Mason, Monroe, La.; Beryl Wyatt, Independence, Kans.; Daniel James, Jr., Pensacola, Fla.; Edward N. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa.; Robert H. Nelson, Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa.; John Howard Leahr, Cincinnati, Ohio; Harry D. Bailey, Chicago, Ill.; Richard W. Hall, Albany, Ga.; Robert H. Wiggins, New York City and Samuel L. Curtis of Yeadon, Pa.

47a-1943
Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

How Operations Of 99th Squadron Are Coordinated And Recorded At Battlefront

SEP 4 - 1943

LEFT—S. Sgt. Wendell D. LaFleur of Chicago, chief operations clerk, makes a report to Captain George S. Roberts, W. Va., operations officer of the 99th Fighter Squadron (seated, center), while 1st Lt. Erwin B. Lawrence, Cleveland, Ohio, assistant operations officer, receives a telephone message (in background), during the squadron's executions of combat missions in Sicily. RIGHT—Sgt. LaFleur types out one of the many daily operational reports made and filed by the squadron, now in combat in the Mediterranean area. Lt. Lawrence is the officer at left (back to camera).

SEP 4 - 1943

LEFT—Lt. Lawrence tallies up flying time and other essential statistics on a specially made adding machine which both adds and subtracts hours and minutes. CENTER—Captain Roberts watches the progress of operations around his field with binoculars from a window of the operations tower, while Cpl. George W. Jackson, Pittsburgh, Pa., assistant clerk, answers the telephone. RIGHT—Captain Hayden C. Johnson, 33, of 1842 Vermont avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C., was adjutant of the squadron at the time the picture was made. He has been transferred from the squadron to other duties not specified in censored dispatches from the front. Pictures on his desk are of his wife and daughter. (Photos by Thomas W. Young, Journal and Guide war correspondent).

Bombing And Strafing Needed To Drive Axis From Mountain Line

Norfolk, Virginia
Journal and Guide

Germans, Cornered In Northeast Sector, Give Ground Inch By Inch Along Paths In Mountains; Allies Outflanking Enemy

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent
(By Cable. Passed by Censor)

ADVANCED ALLIED AIRFIELD — Opportunity still knocks at the door of the 99th Fighter Squadron —and Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., and his gallant men have not, and are not, letting slip the chance to write a glorious first chapter in the story of the American Negro in war aviation.

AUG 7 1943

Early this week the "final push" to drive the Germans and Italians out of Sicily began, and the air command was quick to call upon the 99th to play a cooperative role with the ground forces and the Allied Navy. The commanders have no doubts that the fighting pilots of the squadron will again live up to the strikingly brilliant record displayed in June and July, its first two months of active combat.

After participating in the Sicilian invasion operations, which began July 10, the squadron is now executing a variety of missions from the island itself.

When the Sicilian campaign is won, the squadron will have recorded important chapters in the two historic assaults providing stepping stones for the invasion of the European continent.

These assaults—the subjugation of Pantelleria by air power alone and the first successful water bourne invasion against Sicily—furnished the background for the opportunity the squadron wanted and needed.

The command opened opportunity's door wide—and the squadron was found not wanting.

At Pantelleria the fighting pilots got their first taste of battle when they were called upon to drop 500-pound missles in the all-out attack. In the invasion of Sicily they helped pave the way by escorting bombers during the softening up forays. In carrying out such an assignment Lt. Charles B. Hall shot down the first Nazi credited to a colored flyer.

AUG 7 - 1943

Now the 99th is striking the enemy with short, hard jabs in a variety of missions like dive bombing, strafing, reconnaissance, and patrolling—operating from an airfield in Sicily.

The North African campaign was over before the squadron completed its advanced combat training, but the fliers moved into the Tunisian theatre in time to help write the death warrant for Pantelleria.

The opportunity to participate in the Sicilian campaign is indicative of the high regard and confidence in the squadron which is held by the high command.

There has been remarkable cooperation and support from authorities since the arrival of the squadron which is taken as positive evidence of the sincere desire to have the squadron succeed rather than fail.

Nothing required by the group to do a topnotch job has been denied.

Unsung heroes of the performance of the group are the mechanics. They rise at the crack of dawn and are on the line preflighting the planes before the rest of the unit are awake. It is nothing unusual for them to work until midnight keeping the planes in perfect flying condition. All of this is done cheerfully by the men whose motivation is love of their work and pride in the squadron.

In the United States the mechanics had one of the best maintenance records and here they are continuing the good work. They still pull engine changes in a day, while most other [illegible]ps require two or more days. Key man is Sgt. Ensworth H. Dansby, 29, of 524 South Haworth street, Decatur, Ill., himself a pilot many years, having been licensed in 1939. Pleasant, intelligent, and personable, he is known as "Danny."

Utan kommentar

— Ur ~~DEC 16 1943~~

DEC 6 1943

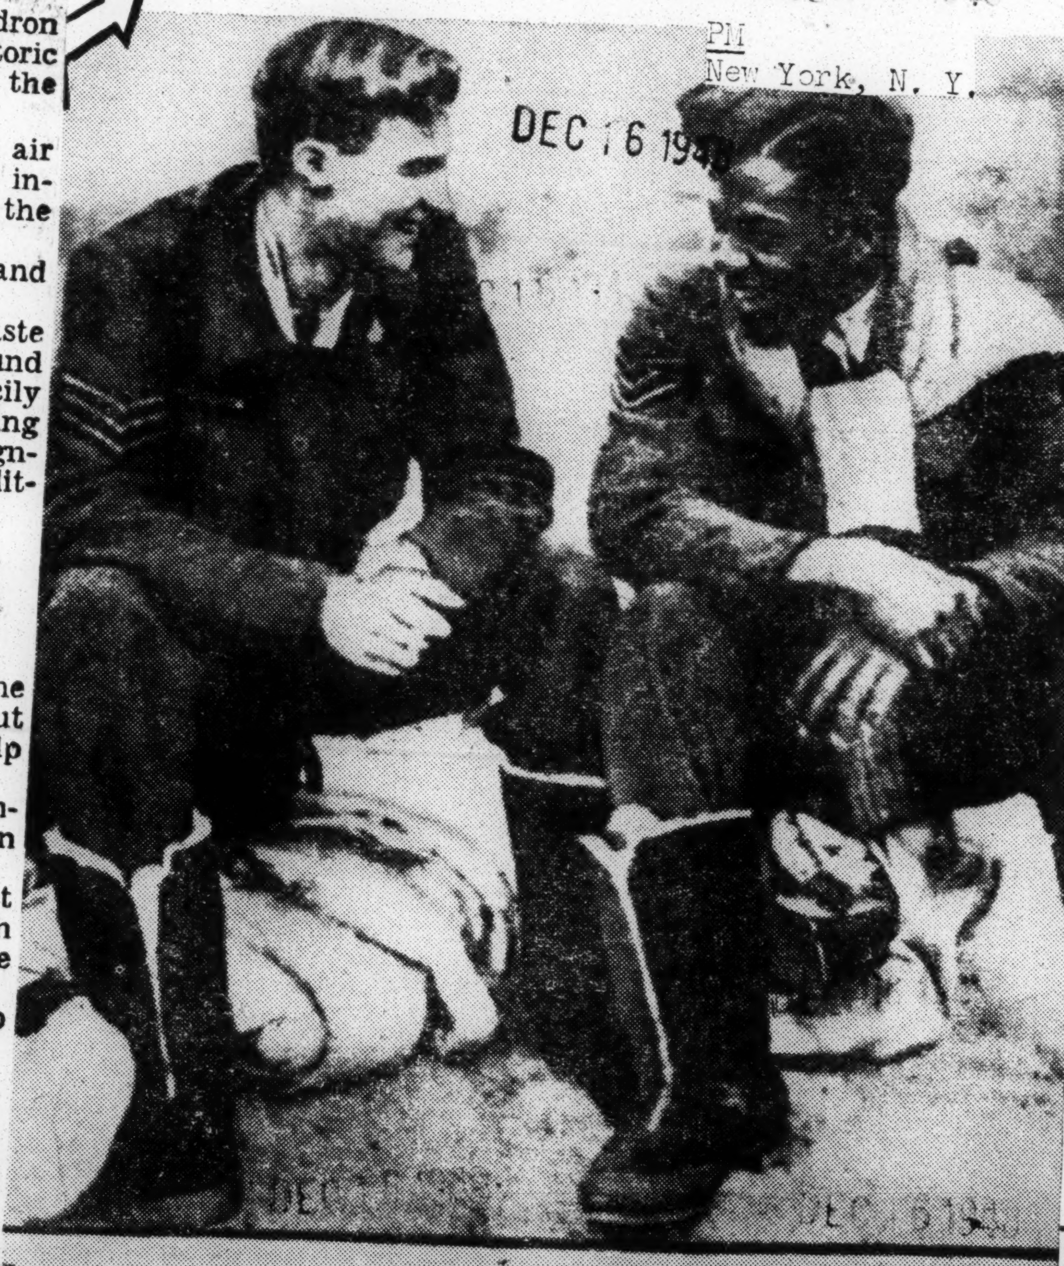
The Daily Sketch, London

för den 31. juli 1943 återge vi nedanstående bild av — enligt den engelska underskriften — "två som deltogo i R. A. F:s stora raid mot Hamburg på torsdag natt — sergeant J. C. Dickinson (till vänster), en kanadensare, och sergeant F. L. Gilkes från Trinidad — i väntan på avfärd till fördelningscentralen".

DEC 6 1943

PM
New York, N. Y.

DEC 16 1943



Two who took part in the great R.A.F. raid on Hamburg on Thursday night—Sergt. J. C. Dickinson (left), a Canadian, and Sergt. F. L. Gilkes, from Trinidad—waiting to go to the dispersal centre.

WITHOUT COMMENT
From
THE DAILY SKETCH, LONDON

of July 31, 1943, we reproduce the picture below, showing—according to the English caption—"two who took part in the great RAF raid on Hamburg on Thursday night—Serg. J. C. Dickinson (left), a Canadian, and Serg. F. L. Gilkes from Trinidad—waiting to go to the dispersal centre.

Missing 99th Flyer Back; Tells Of Rescue From Sea

Chicago, Illinois
Chicago Defender

PHOEBUS, Va.—The family of Lt. George R. Bolling, fighter pilot attached to the 99th Pursuit Squadron, was notified this week that the youth had returned safely to his outfit after having been shot down over the Mediterranean and missing for six days.

AUG 7 1943

While details of his nerve-wracking experience were few, it is reliably reported that Lt. Bolling's plane was struck by flak from anti-aircraft guns during the second day of Allied landings in Sicily. He immediately banked and headed back for his base in North Africa.

He had gone only a short distance though, when the machine burst into flames and he was forced to abandon ship. Lt. Bolling jumped, pulled the ripcord and started his 4,000-foot drop. A fellow-pilot, said to be Lt. Sam Bruce, former A. and T. college football star, circled him and fought off Axis planes which appeared bent on machine-gunning the unfortunate Bolling.

Kept Long Vigil

The rest of that day and through the night, Lt. Bolling drifted about helpless in his rubber life raft. Despite the fact that aid seemed to be a remote possibility, Lt. Bolling refused to give up hope. When the next day dawned he resumed his vigil for a ship which may prove his rescuer.

Whenever he saw a ship on the horizon, the flyer would begin waving in an effort to attract attention. Finally, on his second day in the water, Lt. Bolling was picked up by a destroyer and carried to safety. Within a few days he was back with his comrades and relating his experiences over and over to them.

AUG 7 1943

Lt. Bolling was one of two flyers knocked out of formations of the 99th on the invasion of Sicily. The other pilot, Lt. James L. McCullin, of St. Louis, Mo., is still missing.

Defender Washington correspondents report that no word has been forthcoming from the War Department concerning Lt. McCullin.

47a-1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Prejudice Runs Wild At U.S. Tuskegee Airfield

By JOHN LAKE CAUTION

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Discrimination in its ugliest form is undermining the morale of the commissioned officers and ground crews of the 99th and the commissioned officers of the 100th pursuit squadrons at the United States Army Flying school at Tuskegee, Ala., about 45 miles from here.

JAN 2 1943

Investigation bears out the fact that the Axis powers have no better friend in breaking down the morale of the personnel of the 99th and the 100th than the commanding officer of the airport, Colonel Frederick Von H. Kimble. He is retained as commander by the war department although a committee of prominent citizens waited on Secretary Stimson in Washington and told him of the conditions they found at the flying school and of the insistence of Colonel Kimble in carrying out his jim crow policy.

The first sign of segregation seen at the supposed all-Negro flying school is when the Negro commissioned officers file into their mess hall and the white commissioned and non-commissioned men eat to themselves. They work together but eat separately.

The next disturbing sign was the appearance of the signs on the wash rooms in the new technical building. These signs read "for white officers" and "for colored officers." These signs were torn down. They were replaced. Again they were torn down. Colonel Kimble, not to be outdone, is said to have called the commissioned officers together and told them that the signs were "there to stay, that they represented the policy of the post and if they were torn down again, he would place a guard there to see that they remained in place."

The writer recalls a visit to the post in November when the signs designating race were on the wash rooms of other buildings. Later it was learned that an order had been issued by the war department saying that "there were to be no Negro or colored or white toilets on any army post." A few days later the signs were still there. When confronted with the war department order, Colonel Kimble is said to have fumed a bit then ordered the signs down the following day. Since then the new technical building has the signs which violate the army order.

JAN 2 1943

Officers Have Jitters

It is no secret around the town of Tuskegee, Ala., about six miles from the flying school that all is not well between the white town folk and the Negro personnel of the flying school, and those cadets at the Tuskegee institute flying school where the eight weeks of basic training is taught.

There are several reasons. The first is that Colonel Kimble is working "hand and glove" with the town people to have the Negro soldiers and commissioned officers humiliated. The result is that there is curfew law for Negroes in Tuskegee. Another thing is the absence of military police in the town of Tuskegee. A captain of the state highway police, an ordinary Alabama "cracker" represents Colonel Kimble in all police matters in Tuskegee. This "cracker," as he is referred to by some of the soldiers, is of the belief that most of the commissioned Negro personnel at the flying school belong to the Communist organization and that most of the teachers at Tuskegee institute are Communists.

Not only is the Negro soldier at the mercy of the town constables and the representative of Colonel Kimble, but he is subject to insults by citizens who do business with the flying school and army air base.

One reason for some of the hatred on the part of white people is the United States army uniform on Negroes. Any non-commissioned Negro officers or Negro commissioned officer is looked upon with scorn. Any white non-commissioned officer, although working at the U. S. flying field, is more respected by the majority of Tuskegee town whites than a Negro commissioned officer. The bank employes, officers and proprietors of business houses are upset because Negro commissioned officers are paid more than non-commissioned white men.

The general feeling among the white townsfolk is the money Negro officers are paid is too much money for Negroes to be making.

Officers Can't Mingle

There are any number of white officers at the flying school who would like to associate with the Negro officers. Colonel Kimble is accused of having called meetings at the post and warned the white officers that they were "not to socialize with Negro officers on the post or off duty."

All white commissioned and non-commissioned officers immediately leave the post as soon as they finish their daily work. All social activities at the post are for Negroes only because Colonel Kimble has decreed that no white officer can attend the post theatre.

The organizing of the Officers' club brought out Colonel Kimble's anti-Negro attitude. The white officers asked him for his ruling on membership. He ruled that an application blank should be sent to all officers on the post. The next morning he then ordered Captain Compton to gather all the application blanks in the hands of the white officers who were individually informed that they should not join the Officers' club.

Lieut.-Col. Hazzard, called a tyrant and a rabid, cursing officer, is executive officer to Colonel Kimble. Lieut.-Col. Hazzard started as a lieutenant in a CCC camp and within a year was lieutenant colonel at the Tuskegee field. Yet, Colonel Kimble is quoted as having said that no Negro commissioned officer will be promoted above the rank of captain as long as he is commander of the post.

JAN 2 1943

The promotion of Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., from major to lieutenant-colonel was not the work of Colonel Kimble and he didn't dare go contrary to orders from Washington. However, young Davis—his father is General B. O. Davis,—is leader of the 99th pursuit squadron with no executive powers. He has the name of being the head of an outfit which has finished its training but "has no place to go." He is the head of an outfit but "hasn't any orders to give out."

The most flagrant case of an officer without any duties is that of Capt. Lloyd M. Sparks, finance officer who was sent to the Tuskegee flying school five months ago. He is considered one of the brainiest, best equipped and trained finance officers in the entire United States army. He has been in the regular army 25 years and has been stationed in the Philippines and Hawaii most of the time. But the finance work is done by white non-commissioned officers. Capt. Sparks is finance officer without any work to do—because Colonel Kimble through his executive office sees fit to have nothing for him to do.

Capt. Arthur Hayes, brilliant thinker from the old 369th Infantry in New York and one of the first colored officers to study aviation, whose tenure of service in the army rates him a grade above that of a major, remains a captain.

Capt. Roy Morse, former national sprint champion back in 1906 to 1910 remains a captain although he spent years with the 369th in New York city.

JAN 2 1943

The best yet is Capt. Harold Martin who was commissioned and sent to Camp Lee in Virginia supposedly as an athletic officer but put in charge of the Negro officers' mess there. Recently he has been transferred to the Tuskegee flying school but is in charge of the canteen.

Police Beat, Drug Nurse

Montgomery is still incensed over the brutal treatment of a Negro nurse who was stationed at the Tuskegee flying school with the rank of lieutenant. She attempted to board a bus here but was hit in the mouth by a driver when she insisted on getting on.

The local police arrested her and "gave her the works." She was beaten about the head and kicked in the stomach. When she screamed the police beat her some more.

When the police searched her pocketbook they found her credentials as an army nurse. The woman is well known here and at Tuskegee flying school. She does not drink alcoholic liquor. The police are said to have secured whiskey, poured some down her throat, poured some on her dress and pocketbook and then put her out on the sidewalk.

JAN 2 1943

A prominent Negro happened to notice her plight, stopped and in so doing recognized the nurse. She was given medical attention. Colonel Kimble is said to have declared he would investigate. The nurse won't talk. The guilty police officers are still on the Montgomery police force. They haven't lost a day's pay.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Tuskegee Air
Base Hotbed Of Race Bias

Cadets Trained Only As Combat Pilots

JAN 2 - 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Race segregation is being practiced to the utmost extent at the Army Basic and Advanced Flying School here despite its bad effect on the morale of colored cadets who are being trained for combat duty with the Army Air Forces.

JAN 2 - 1943

The intolerant and patronizing attitude of southern white officers, who are in command, is said to be particularly irksome.

Incidentally, the Army Air Forces is the only branch of the Army which maintains and operates a separate officer-training facility for the training of colored officer candidates.

In all ohter branches, colored officer candidates are trained in the same schools with white officer candidates. But colored flying cadets are trained only at Tuskegee and are excluded from all other Army flying schools.

ARMY REGULATIONS VIOLATED

JAN 2 - 1943

Responsibility for Jim Crow signs placed on toilets and other facilities is placed upon Colonel Frederick von H. Kimble, the commanding officer. These Jim Crow signs are said to be an express violation of Army Regulations, but Colonel Kimble is reported to have told an officers' meeting that he intends to run this school not in accordance with any circular from Washington but in keeping with the policy of the Army.

JAN 2 - 1943

The attitude of Colonel Kimble is explainable. It is in harmony with the attitude of the Army Air Forces. It took Congressional pressure to compel the Army Air Forces to establish this separate training school for the training of colored flying cadets.

Only pursuit pilots are trained at Tuskegee. This program in itself is discriminatory. Colored flying cadets must meet the stringent requirements as to height and weight for pursuit pilots. Pursuit piloting is the most difficult branch of flying.

Colored cadets are not accepted by the Army Air Forces for the relatively easier bombardment pilot training course, the observer-pilot training course, the navigator courses, the bombardier courses, and other necessary branches of the Air Forces for which men have been sought so zealously.

COLORED PILOT MUST PROVE HIMSELF

The whole attitude of the Army Air Forces on the question of colored pilots was expressed in a letter recently made public by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. It is that the colored pilot must prove himself.

Only a directive from the Secretary of War or public pressure can compel the transfer of Colonel Kimble or a correction of the abuses which are being practiced at Tuskegee.

Argus
St. Louis, Missouri

1st Commissioned At Jeff Barracks Army Air Force

JAN 22 1943

Left to right, the first Negro commissioned officers to be stationed at the basic training center of the Army Air Forces Technical Training Command at Jefferson Barracks, Mo. are Lt. Forrest E. Pritchett of Tulsa, Oklahoma, Lt. William Neal Brown of Aliquippa, Pa., and Lt. James B. Garrett of Hopkinsville, Ky. ,Army Aid' Force Tech Training Command.)

Chicago Tribune
Chicago. Illinois

Anti-Negro Stand Hit By Press

JAN 16 1943

Biased Commander Out After Many Protests

By JOHN LAKE CAUTION
Copyright, 1943. Reproduction in whole or part forbidden)

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Under heavy fire for his biased, discriminatory stand against colored flyers, Colonel Frederick Von H. Kimble has been ousted as commanding officer of the 99th and 100th Pursuit Squadrons at the Army flying school here.

News of the removal of Colonel Kimble because of his enforced segregation and anti-Negro attitude has been kept quiet by the army up to now because it would seem a victory for Negro organizations and newspapers which demanded his ouster.

The Chicago Defender learned exclusively that the transfer of Colonel Kimble from his Tuskegee post was accomplished through the device of having him "kicked upstairs" to a higher army position. This move was considered an appeasement step by the War Department because of Kimble's friendship for prejudiced whites in the town of Tuskegee.

Colonel Kimble has received orders for his transfer to an air field at Macon, the Defender learned.

Now in acting command at the Tuskegee airport is Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, a white officer who was elevated from a major to lieutenant colonel at the same time as Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr.

Colonel Kimble has not yet left Tuskegee. He is said to be "cleaning up" his affairs.

Actually the removal of the anti-Negro commandant at Tuskegee will be a token victory for Negro groups protesting his policy.

The Defender learned that the whole southeastern air district is being reorganized and Kimble will be in charge of the district. He will possibly be made a brigadier general. Tuskegee will be a part of the district and therefore nominally still under his supervision.

See Changed Policy

But members of the 99th and 100th squadrons who long resented his attempts to enforce Jim Crow at the airport feel that his being stationed at another airfield will go a long way in changing policy at Tuskegee.

Protests against Colonel Kimble's policy were carried right to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson by a group of prominent Negro citizens who cited a number of objectionable practices enforced by Colonel Kimble. These included:

1. Setting of segregated sections, in the mess hall for commissioned officers.
2. Posting of signs "for colored officers" and "for white officers" on wash rooms.
3. Kimble's working "hand and glove" with townspeople to have Negro commissioned officers humiliated through unnecessary curfew laws and the like.

Bar Social Contact

4. Orders to white officers "not to socialize with Negro officers on the post or off duty.
5. Barring of all white officers from Officers Clubs because there were Negroes in the club.
6. Barring of white officers at the post theatre because Negroes are in attendance.
7. Alleged statements by Colonel Kimble that no Negro commissioned officer will be promoted above the rank of captain as long as he is commander of the post.
8. Refusal to allow high Negro officers to take active jobs. They are kept on the shelf confined to barracks.

New York Age
New York. N. Y.

Army Air Forces Technical Training School To Admit Negroes As Officer Candidates

JAN 2 - 1943

JEFFERSON BARRACKS, Mo.—The first Officers' Candidates School for Negro soldiers in the Army Air Forces Technical Training Command will open here on January 15, according to an announcement my Col. Thomas J. J. Christian, commanding officer of the historic Army Post.

First contingent of soldier students selected from the ranks of Negro troops throughout the United States will arrive for the 11 week course on January 15, said the Colonel.

The opening of an Officers' Candidate School at Jefferson Barracks is one of several new functions the Post will take on, augmenting its already well established program as the first Basic Training Center of the Technical Training Command, under Major General Walter R. Weaver.

Negro troops at the Barracks will have equal treatment and equal facilities as all soldiers stationed there, said Colonel Christian, who announced that plans were already underway for th econstruction of a new service club, a Chapel, Post Exchange, an Officers' Club and Bachelor Officers' Quarters for Negroes.

A Cooks and Bakers school for Negro soldiers will open on January 15, said the announcement.

There is also planned, at a later date, to open an Officers' Training School for Air Corps specialists who have received preliminary training at Yale University. This school will open to a select group of Negro officers for intensive six weeks courses.

Graduates of the Officers' Candidate School will be trained as supply officers, adjutants, personnel officers, military intelligence officers and statistical officers. Many will be sent to other schools upon graduation to do further work in the field of their specialization.

It is understood that the graduates will serve as administrative and technical officers for the fighter squadrons being prepared for combat at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama.

The Barracks has been an Army Air Forces Technical Training Command basic training since September 1, 1940. Prior to that its history goes back to 1826, making it one of the oldest Army posts west of the Mississippi. Colonel Christian took command of the Post on December 5, 1942.

Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
January [illegible] 1943

To Train Negro Officers

St. Louis, (U.P.): The first officers' candidate school for negroes in the Army Air Forces Technical Training Command will open at Jefferson Barracks, on January 15. Col. Thomas J. J. Christian, commanding officer of the post, said it also planned to open an officers' training school for negro air force specialists who have received preliminary training at Yale university.

Constitution
Atlanta, Georgia

Negro Assistant To Stimson Quits

FEB 1 - 1943

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP)—William H. Hastie, Negro civilian aide to Secretary of War Stimson, said today he had resigned in protest against "discriminatory practices" of the Army Air Forces in matters affecting Negroes."

He recalled in a statement that a training center for Negro pilots had been established at Tuskegee University in Alabama over his protests against segregation. Since then, he said, adequate provisions have not been made for ground troops to work with qualified Negro pilots.

"The simple fact," he commented, "is that the air command does not want Negro pilots flying in and out of various fields, eating, sleeping and mingling with other personnel, as a service pilot must do in carrying out his various missions."

47a-1943

Was Curtiss-Wright to Blame for Crashes of Our Flyers?

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Truman Report Charges Company Produced Imperfect Planes of Type Used by Tuskegee Pilots

By MARGARET LEWIS

JUL 17 1943

Is it possible that pursuit planes produced by the Curtiss-Wright Aircraft Corporation, alleged to be defective by the Truman Committee, could be responsible for the death of eight colored pilots from Selfridge Field and Tuskegee Air Bases within the past two months?

A spokesman for the press section of the War Department on Monday admitted, "There are some Curtiss-Wright planes in use at these fields," but added, "a wide variety of planes are used in training at all air bases."

Flyers killed in unexplained crashes of P-40 planes at these two bases since early in May were Lts. Wilmeth Sidat-Singh, Washington athletic hero; Nathaniel Hill, also of Washington; Luther L. Blakeney, Sanford, Fla.; Jerome T. Edwards, Steubenville Ohio; Osiar Kenney, Tuskegee James E. Brothers, Chicago; and Sidney J. Moseley of Norfolk, and Cadet Ross C. Stewart of Baltimore, Md.

Denial Issued

The Curtiss-Wright president, in a statement issued in New York Sunday, denied specifically that his company "has at any time sold or delivered to the government, or anyone else, products known to the company to have contained defective or sub-standard parts."

On the other hand, the New York newspaper PM labelled the Truman Committee's charge the "most shameful story of the War."

This account stated that the committee report revealed that the corporation was allegedly defrauding the government by the following means:

JUL 17 1943

Falsification of tests, destruction of records, improperly recording results of tests, forging inspection reports, failing to segregate substandard and defective material, failing to destroy promptly or mutilate such defective and substandard material and other dangerous practices.

Safety Champion Moved

Reports that Lt. Singh was flying a defective plane at the time of his death could not be verified, but Col. Samuel Westbrooks [illegible] to Ralph Matthews, editor of the Washington AFRO-AMERICAN, at the time of the investigation of this crash, that he had been relieved of command and replaced by Col. Robert Selway, a native of Florida.

At that time some sources stated that it was Col. Westbrooks's fight to get the finest equipment for his flyers which got him into difficulty with his superiors. It was said that he refused to send men up in inferior planes.

Doubts Increase

Although new equipment was issued to the fliers, speculation at that time was rife among Detroit leaders as to whether or not the change of commanding officers meant the new official would force the aviators to use whatever planes were given them.

JUL 17 1943

Josiah Hill, on his return from a futile search for his son's body some two weeks ago, told of reports that the motor fell out of Lt. Hill's ship.

Mr. Hill stated that the commanding officer said the boys were flying a new plane (Lts. Blakeney and Hill were together), and the official insisted that he could not account for the accident, unless it was because of the fog and the boys "crashed before they knew it."

The Justice Department and the FBI have been investigating the Truman charges, and the Justice Department has filed three separate suits against the Wright Corporation, naming eight officers of the company in a suit for damages for the alleged sale of defective equipment to the government.

Lieut. Kenny Killed In Crash

Weekly Review

JUL 24 1943

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., — July 22, 1943 — Funeral service for Lieut. Oscar Armstrong Kenny who was killed in an airplane crash while on a routine flight near here Friday, were held in the Institute Chapel Monday afternoon with Harry V. Richardson, Chaplain of Tuskegee, officiating.

Lieut. Kenny was the son of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Kenny. Dr. Kenny is Medical Director of the John A. Andrew Memorial Hospital at Tuskegee Institute, and is widely known because of his affiliation with the National Medical Association and other organizations.

Lieut. Kenny's death brought many fine tributes and comforting messages to the bereaved parents from all sections of the counrty. Col. Noel F. Parrish, Commanding Officer of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, paid a touching tribute to Lieut. Kenny, stating that he exempliifed the fine qualities of an officer and a gentleman, and that no finer tribute could be made when it was said that he laid his life on the altar of freedom.

A mesage of condolence from Dr. F. D. Patterson, President Tuskegee Institute, expressed for the faculty, student body and the community deep sympathy to the bereaved family on the untimely death of their son.

JUL 24 1943

Chaplain Richardson was assisted in the service by Lieut. James D. Morris, assistant to the Chaplain at the Tuskegee Army Air Base; Rev. Charles W. Kelly, and Rev. R. D. Crockett. The Tuskegee Quartet, composed of Messrs Alvin J. Neely, Leroy Brown, Nathaniel R. McCray and William Wiley, sang "Remember Now Thy Creator." Musical selections were rendered by Sgt. Otis D. Wright of the Tuskegee Army Air Field and the Girls' Chorus of the Tuskegee Choir.

In his message Rev. Richardson urged that the sadness of the hour be replaced with the thought of the beauty of young Lieut. Kenny's life and the nobility of his sacrifice. In these, he declared, we will find the strength and inspiration needed to achieve the hopes for which Lieut Kenny died.

Lieut. Kenny was born at Tuskegee Institute, August 3, 1917. He went with his parents when they moved to Newark, New Jersey in 1924, and later to Montclair, New Jersey, where they lived for several years.

Oscar Kenny was graduated from the South Side High School in Newark. During his high school years he was active in tennis and track and was affiliated with several high school organizations, taking an especial interest in the musical groups. In Montclair he was an active member of Troop No. 20, Boy Scouts of America.

JUL 24 1943

He attended the Julliard School of Music in New York City and later entered the Conservatory of Music, Oberlin College, at Oberlin, he was active in campus organizations. He had a large campus acquaintance and a wide cricle of friends. He organized and became president of the Oberlin chapter of the Metropolitan Guild, an organization which was later especially honored by the Metropolitan Opera Company for its work during the organization's nation-wide radio program two years ago. Also at Oberlin he was a prominent member of the Shansi Committee, a campus organization sponsoring Obes-Chinese Relief. He was named chairman of a staff committee of the Oberlin Year Book.

After two years in training in voice and music at Oberlin, he entered a period of training at the Art Students' League in New York City, and did work in flower arrangement and decoration, showing special proficiency in the wax flower production. While studying in New York he passed examination for the Army Air Corps and was sent to Tuskegee for training in November, 1942. He received his wings and was commissioned a Second Lieutenant on June 30, 1943.

The messages of condolence received by the bereaved family came from all sections of the country and the numerous floral offerings beautiful beyond description were banked high around the altar.

Comrades of the deceased flyer served as a guard of honor at the bier during the funeral service. Also during the hour of the service several of his classmates flew over the Chapel and dipped their planes in tribute to their departed comrade.

At the conclusion of the impressive service the casket, draped with an American flag, was carried outside of the chapel to the funeral car for further military honors which included the firing of three volleys by a specially selected group of comrades from the Tuskegee Army Air Field, and the sounding of taps by a burler.

Missing 99th Squadron Pilot With Members Of Unit

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia
JUL 24 1943

99TH FIGHTER PILOT MISSING IN ACTION — This informal picture of members of Flight "C" of the 99th Pursuit Squadron now based somewhere in North Africa was taken before one of the most popular members of the group was reported "missing in action." He is 2nd Lt. James L. McCullin of St. Louis, Mo., indicated by arrow, who failed to return to his base after a combat flight on July 2. On that same day, however, 1st Lt. Charles B. Hall, of Brazil, Indiana, was officially credited with shooting down an Axis plane.

Shown kneeling, are 1st Lt. James B. Knighten, Tulsa, Okla. (left) and 1st Lt. Sherman W. White Jr., Montgomery, Ala. Standing, left to right, are 1st Lt. William A. Campbell, Tuskegee Institute, Ala.; 2nd Lt. Samuel M. Bruce, Seattle, Wash.; Lt. McCullin; 2nd Lt. George R. Bolling, Phoebus, Va.; Lt. Hall, flight leader, and 2nd Lt. Walter I. Lawson, Newtown, Va. (Exclusive Journal and Guide Photo by Thomas W. Young)

The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan.

D. C. PILOT OF "99TH"

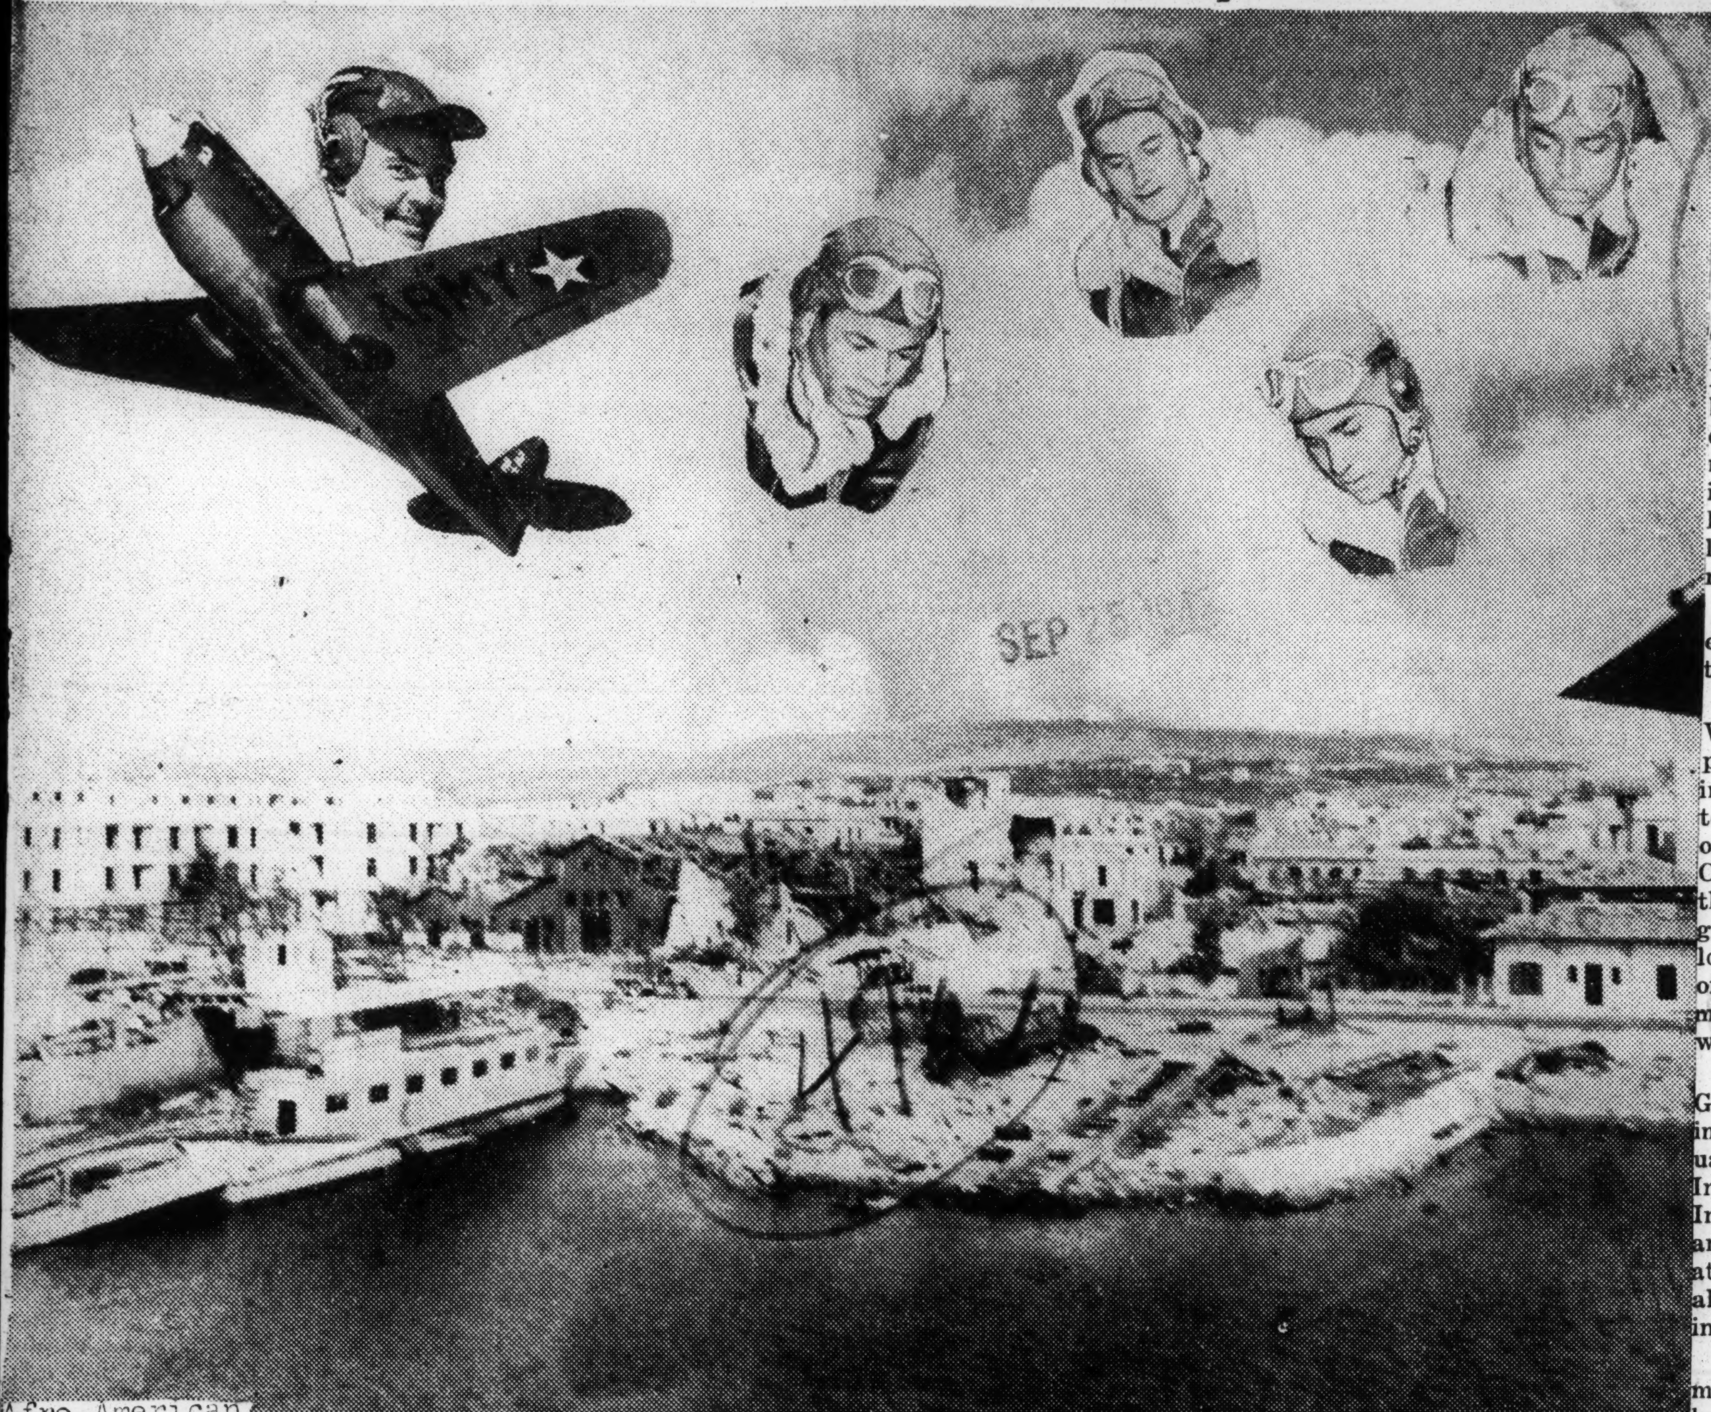
KILLED IN ACTION

Washington. — The report that Lt. Paul G. Miller, a flier, was killed in action in the Nirth African area, August 11, was confirmed by the War Department Saturday. He was a pilot with the 99th Pursuit Squadron, now based in Sicily. The details of the action in which he was killed were not made known.

Lieutenant Miller was a resident of the District of Columbia and a graduate of Howard university.

Also confirmed was the death of Charles S. Chisholm, Jr., also of Washington. He, too, was killed in action in the North African area. His death occurred August 21.

Our Flyers in Air Blitz that Knocked Sicily Out of the War



SEP 25 194

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

View of damage which our flyers helped bring about in Sicily to open the way for invasion of Italy. Inserts show some of the 99th Fighter Squadron who participated and a plane of the type they fly. Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, former commander of the unit, told at a press conference in Washington recently how our boys "dropped out of the clouds and helped to bomb Sicily out of the war."

LT. COL. DAVIS REPORTS HIGH MORAL FOR 99TH

The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan.
1943

Newark, N. J., Sept. 25.—Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., one of the heroes of the Sicilian campaign and organizer and first commanding officer of the famous all-Negro 99th Fighter Squadron, brought word to Newark yesterday that a big factor in the high morals of the men at the front is the knowledge that their families are receiving their family allowances and allotments of pay regularly each month.

Colonel Davis has returned to employ his battle experience in training a larger fighter group.

Stopping in for a visit at the War Department Office of Dependency Benefits to authorize an increase in his allotment of pay to his wife, Mrs. Agatha S. Davis of 97 Carmel St., New Haven, Conn., Colonel Davis declared that the "efficiency of the ODB in getting family allowances and allotments of pay to the dependents of our men in the service, is a major factor in the high morale which prevails."

Colonel Davis is the son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, now living in Washington. He was graduated from West Point in 1936. In 1941 he transferred from the Infantry to the Army Air Corps, and in 1942 organized and trained, at Tuskegee, Alabama, the first all-Negro air squadron, the Fighting 99th.

SEP 24 1943

Apprised of Colonel Davis' commendation, Brig. Ben. H. N. Gilbert, USA, Director of the ODB pointed out that the millions of letters received by this activity of the Army Service Forces from soldiers and their families have brought to the employes a realization of their reseponsibility toward the army and the nation. "But," he stated, "when returning heroes like Colonel Davis tell us that their men are better fighters because the ODB is doing its job well here at home, it is an added incentive to GET 'EM PAID."

SEP 24 1943

The ODB does business with more than four million soldiers, administering monthly family allowances and allotments-of-pay on behalf of more than eight million dependents of Army men. By cable and radio the ODB receives authorizations for these benefits for the families of men stationed all over the world. And day and night, on two shifts, and on every holiday except Christmas, the employes of the ODB work to GET 'EM PAID.

'Time' Reveals Army Stand On the 99th

SEP 20 1943

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 23. (ANP)—Outspoken "Time" magazine gives the lowdown on the actual position of the Negro in the war effort in its current issue. Speaking of the 99th pursuit squadron, the magazine avers that the high command of the air force is not pleased with the work of the squadron, regardless of glowing reports from the front and that the same command has in mind placing the squadron on convoy duty aboard instead of permitting the men to develop as normally they would if given additional combat work. This does not interfere with plans for the organization of other units, however.

Speaking of combat units, the article continues and says that few area commanders abroad want Negro troops; those that do accept them, want them only in small numbers compared with the whites; and then they do not want combat troops, they want engineers and laborers to do the "dirty work" for the army of which there is a plenty.

Criticism is levelled at the War department policy of separate training and units for Negroes. The article is of the opinion that no real value can be placed on the Negro's worth as a soldier unless he is trained side by side with white troops. It ends with the question still unanswered—"which is the better soldier, the white or Negro?"

First Negro Navigators Begin Training in Texas

OCT 30 1943

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Thrity Negro air cadets today began the first phase of navigation training at Hondo Air Field, Texas, the War Department announced.

These students, the first contingent in the Army's program for the training of navigators for the Medium Bombardment Group, arrived at Hondo Air Field, Friday, October 22, from Tuskegee Army Air Field, Alabama.

Originally planned to begin in December, the training of Negro navigators was pushed forward to October. They will use B-25 Mitchells.

OCT 30 1943

Ground crews for the Medium Bombardment Group have been in training for some time at Selfridge Field, Michgan; Keesler Field, Mississippi; Sheppard Field was started October 9 with an enrollment of about 300.

Walter A. Arrington, 2508 Shannon Place, Northwest, is one of the 30

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

NEGRO OFFICER HEADS AIR FORCE FIGHTER GROUP

OCT 6 1943

Washington, D. C. Oct. [illegible]—Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., the first Negro officer to command an air force combat unit, has taken command of the 332d fighter group at Selfridge field, Mich., the war department announced today.

Davis formerly commander of the all-Negro 99th fighter squadron in North Africa and Sicily, and that squadron is now in action in Italy.

The department said that Davis a West Point graduate, will be honored with a reception at the officers club at Selfridge field tonight. Among the 400 guests will be a number of high ranking officers, including Davis' father, Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis.

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

FLIGHT INSTRUCTOR KILLED IN [illegible]ASH

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Aug. 19—Norman DeWitt Gray, Jr., of Natchez, Miss., civilian instructor of the 66th Primary Flying school, was killed instantly here recently when the plane in which he flew (with one of his students) collided with another flown by a lone pilot, it has been officially announced by George L. Washington, general manager of the flying school.

47a-1943

F 47a

INSIDE THE ARMY

Expert Negro Teachers Rank High At Chanute 'Ground Crew' School

JAN 30 1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

By ENOC P. WATERS JR.

CHANUTE FIELD, Ill. — Pioneering in the youngest branch of our military services—the U. S. army air corps —is a small but highly trained group of Negro civilian men and women whose contribution to the war effort is way out of proportion to their number.

Their work is perhaps the most significant of that being done by any group of similar size within our race.

These men and women are an integral part of the huge faculty assembled here from all parts of the nation to train technicians and specialists whose roles are as important as pilots in "keepin' 'em flyin'."

At frequent intervals—for the courses here are streamlined—they turn out large classes of expertly trained aviation machinists, sheet metal workers, welders, parachute riggers, propeller experts, electricians, instrument repair and servicemen, teletype operators, Link trainer repairmen and weather observers and forecasters.

This is the last of the series of articles written by Enoc P. Waters Jr., of the Chicago Defender staff, on his observations and experiences while visiting the army camps.

Negroes Teach Whites

Attached to air corps units in all parts of the world these highly trained mechanics overhaul every plane shot down and put it in the air again, while at the same time servicing the others so that they operate with maximum efficiency.

What Randolph field—the West point of the air—is to the pilot, the Army Air Forces Technical School at Chanute is to the men who work on the ground.

With the exception of the teacher candidates, some of whom are Negroes, the almost two score colored instructors here teach whites. This is unique in our bi-racial army.

It is a shining example of interracial cooperation and of the type of democracy it is hoped will rise from the ruins of this global holocaust. While integration here is not as complete as it is in the officers' candidate course, it is the closest approach the air corps has made in the direction of real Americanism.

The story of how this set-up came into being is fraught with mystery and is being observed with interest by race leaders, for in the whole process the War Department has been mute and strangely unresponsive to questions concerning the set-up here.

99th Ground Crew

As a part of the establishment of the all-colored 99th Pursuit Squadron near Tuskegee institute in Alabama, several hundred Negro troops were sent here for training as the ground crew complement.

It was a hand-picked group of well educated, highly intelligent and alert young men who breezed through their training here leaving in their wake a record etched deeply on the memories of their instructors and administrative personnel.

Shortly after their transfer to the South where they joined the rest of the 99th, the United States Civil Service Commission launched an intensive campaign for Negroes meeting certain qualifications to train as technical instructors in the air corps.

Chicago, which because of men like Col. John Robinson and Cornelius R. Coffey and women like the late Bessie Coleman and Willa Brown is regarded as the Negro air capital of the world, provided the majority of the more than one hundred Negroes here now.

Mixed Classes

In the three hangars in which 90 per cent of the activity of the school is carried on and each of which is large enough to build a couple of blocks of three-story houses, there are scenes, which had they seen them, that would have extended the life of fiery Monroe Trotter and killed, through a stroke of apoplexy the race-baiting Cole Blease.

Here and there throughout the huge institution are Negroes instructing mixed classes, or supervising a white student instructor, or himself being supervised by a member of the other race. A group of five or eight students for the moment unaware of the differences of color because of their common interest in their subject bend over a piece of equipment which has been purposely put out of commission.

A white soldier from Texas pauses in the corridor between classes to discuss with a fellow student, a Negro civilian, a point which has them both scratching their heads.

In All Departments

At one time or another since their arrival here, Negroes have been in every department and every division of every department of the school whether as student or as instructor.

Courses range from five to 20 weeks in length and in the case of prospective instructors an additional 30 days is spent in learning the fundamentals of teaching.

Though the white students, both the civilian and the enlisted men come from all sections of the country, many of them from the South, none of the Negro instructors with whom we talked reported any unpleasant experiences.

One of them named McElrath of Atlanta, Ga., said the southern whites with whom he had come in contact had either been emancipated from the provinciality of the South, or had been able in a very short space of time to orient themselves to the interracial arrangement. This view is shared by many of the instructors here.

Women Too

In addition to Minor Payne, senior instructor who is highly regarded by officials at the school, Colonel Robinson is looked upon with pride. On two of the field's radio broadcasts over national hook-ups, Robinson has been featured.

In the last several weeks, the first Negro women have been added to the list of student instructors. They are Celestyne Miller of St. Louis; Odelia Wesley, Champaign; Ella W. Murray, Ada Harney and Evelyn Ganns,, all of Chicago.

The civilian staff at the school does not constitute all of the Negroes on the post. Three outfits of Negro enlisted men commanded by white officers are stationed here.

Approximately 300 in all, they are the 933rd Quartermaster company; a medical detachment attached to the station hospital here and the 8th Aviation Squadron.

The quartermaster outfit is a transport unit and services, maintains and drives most of the vehicles at the station ranging from jeeps to huge prime movers.

Hospital Help

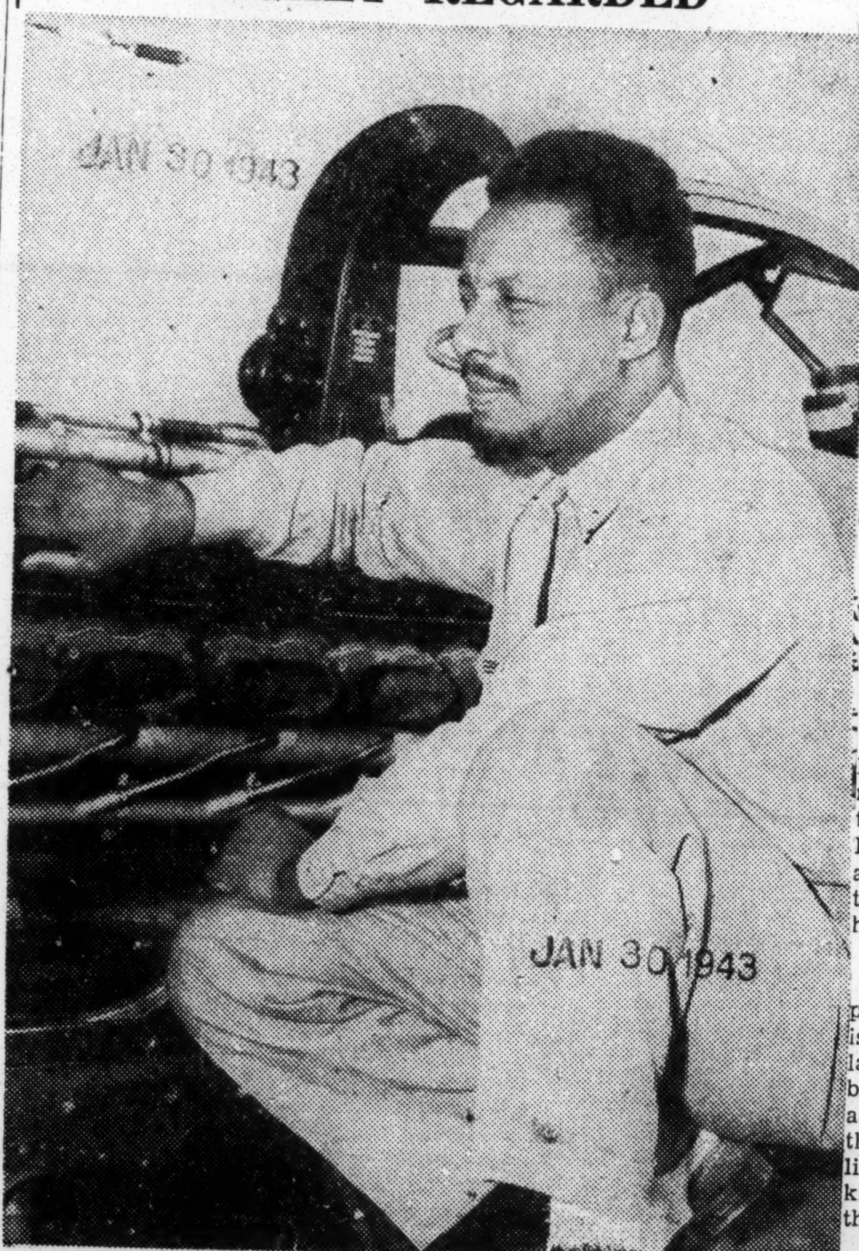
The medical detachment provides unskilled and semi-skilled personnel for the hospital, while the aviation squadron, at present a mere cadre is principally a service unit sed in the school. Presently undergoing training, the men in this outfit will be prepared to train others when the organization is brought up to full strength.

The three outfits are housed in the same area in a recently developed section of the field and aside from living quarters do not have all of the facilities provided at posts where larger numbers of Negro troops are stationed.

The only element to mar what is an otherwise bright picture has been the setting up of a separate Negro air corps technical training school at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Exactly what will happen to the Negro instructors at Chanute Field under this new setup is still not determined—at least for publication. If they are pulled out and all sent to Missouri under the new jim crow setup, army democracy will suffer a bad setback.

HIGHLY REGARDED



COL. JOHN ROBINSON

Chanute Field instructor who was featured twice in national broadcasts from the "West Point" of the Air Corps ground crews.

News
Birmingham, Ala.

JUN 14 1943

Tuskegee-Trained Fliers Hit Island

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(AP)—The only Negro aerial unit in foreign service was among the Allied forces that bombed Pantelleria, it was disclosed Monday.

They flew P-40 Warhawks and were under the command of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, a noted cavalry officer.

The all-Negro squadron trained at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., before coming overseas.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

Soldiers Ask Why Colonel Davis Does Not Command Flying School

FEB 20 1943

TUSKEGEE, Feb. 18—(ANP)—Why is it that Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., is not commanding officer of the army air school located here near Tuskegee?

That question is being asked by Negro soldiers attached to this base which has recently been receiving considerable publicity because of the strict policy of segregation inaugurated by Col. Kimble.

LOOK ASKANCE AT SET-UP

These soldiers point out that a squadron consists of 13 to 28 planes, a group from 61 to 121 planes and a wing from 125 to 250 planes. Lt. Col. Davis is in command of only a squadron, the 99th, while Maj. Sam Westbrook, white, has charge of a group and Lt. Col. Noel Parrish, white, of the same rank as Davis, heads the Tuskegee Army Flying school.

"Four years at West Point, plus months of training a squadron should be enough to qualify Lt. Col. Davis for the post of commanding officer of the 322nd fighter group or post commander of the Tuskegee Army Fyling school,' these soldiers point out. "Why isn't Davis getting what is due him?"

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

Editor's Daughter Describes "Retreat" At Tuskegee Post

MAR 26 1943

Beulah Anne Williams, daughter of Editor L. D. Williams of The Globe and former student columnist of The Globe, is now holding a responsible position in the office of the Tuskegee Flying School. She is a graduate of both Pearl High School (1938) and Fisk University (summer 1942). She describes "retreat" at the Tuskegee Army Post in a letter to her "Dad," received last week as follows:

"The most thrilling sight of all is 'retreat' every evening at 5:15. Everybody stands at attention, the band plays the "Star Spangled Banner" and all the soldiers salute as the flag is slowly lowered. Except the band-playing, nobody makes a sound. The band marches all over the post with four or five companies following and it is a beautiful sight.

"There are about 200 boys in the band and they are all good. The boys out here call me 'Private Williams' and I want to march behind the band but none of the Sgts. will let me. Ain't that mean?

"A Private out here is a rare thing. There are a few Sergeants and a 'million' commissioned officers—most of them Second 'Looies'. There is a big bomber flying overhead now and it really is a thrilling something to think everytime I see one of those things overhead that it is piloted by one of our colored boys. They are really good pilots, too. You know the course they take is very rigid and they have to be good. Only about two of every ten make it."

Battles Axis On Home Front

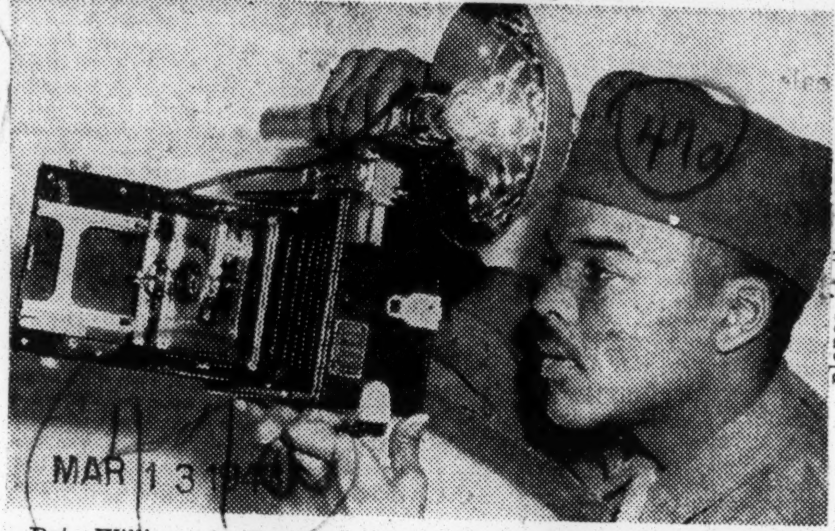
MAR 7 1943

47a

Women are sharing in the defense of America. Here at the Tuskegee Army Flying School, Miss Naomi Polkinghorne, of Pensacola, Fla., is battling the Axis on the home front. She is shown in the Fabric Department of this base. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Polkinghorne, reside at 523 Reus Street, Pensacola, Florida.

AT TUSKEGEE

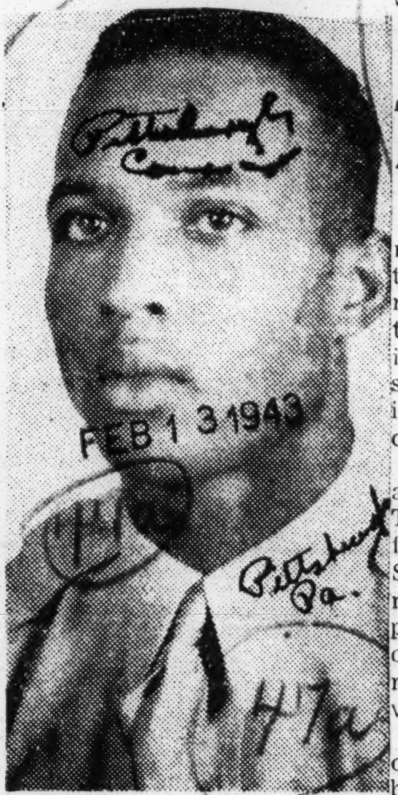
Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.



MAR 13 1943

Pvt. William A. Scott of Atlanta, Ga., the son of the founder of the Scott's Syndicate, was recently assigned to the Tuskegee Army Flying school. His father, who has since deceased, founded the printing association that has aided many small towns in their quest for a hometown paper.

KILLED IN CRASH



Pittsburgh Courier

FEB 13 1943

Pittsburgh Pa.

47a

While on routine flight last Saturday, Second Lieut. Richard Davis, former Hampton institute student, was accidentally killed as his plane crashed a short distance from the Tuskegee Army Flying School Field.

To determine the cause of the accident a special board of examiners were appointed to make a thorough investigation.

Lieut. Davis was an experienced flyer before entering the Cadet Corps. He was a flying instructor for the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, Lambert Field, Robertson, Missouri. At one time he was owner of a plane in which he barnstormed throughout the United States and South America.

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

TWO NEW SQUADRONS FOR 'KEGEE

FEB 7 1943

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Announcement here Saturday that the army air corps is forming two new squadrons of flyers to be trained at Tuskegee institute, is interpreted to mean that greater speed is to be developed in forming the unit which has its headquarters there.

The announcement came shortly after President F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee institute had a long conference with Secretary of War Stimson. Rumors have it that many bottlenecks which have impeded the rapid training of mechanics and ground crews in connection with the Alabama base will be speedily corrected.

For a time it was felt that the original 99th squadron which has been on the alert and which was reported absent for several weeks was perhaps on its way to more active fields but it is reported that it returned to headquarters last week. Some doubt exists as to whether the two additional squadrons referred to mean the 100th and 101st which were activated some time ago or two entirely new units.

Aviation squadrons work in units of three. Apparently it has been decided to make an entire unit before sending the men to combat rather than attaching the 99th to a white unit.

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

THE TUSKEGEE FLYERS.

Maj. Donald G. McPherson, director of the army air training base at Tuskegee, Ala., says of the men of the 99th pursuit squadron, "They are ready." This is the first squadron of colored flyers in the history of the army and all of the nation impatiently awaits a demonstration of its skill in combat against the country's enemies.

The 99th squadron began training July 19, 1941, and its continued detention at its original base after the passage of 21 months has provoked much criticism of war department policy. Every one who is familiar with the remarkable records of colored athletes has the utmost confidence that colored air men will prove second to none. The Tuskegee flyers should be given the opportunity to prove their worth by an immediate assignment to a fighting front.

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.

Nazi High Priest Shocked By U.S. Negro Air Aces

JUL 3 1943

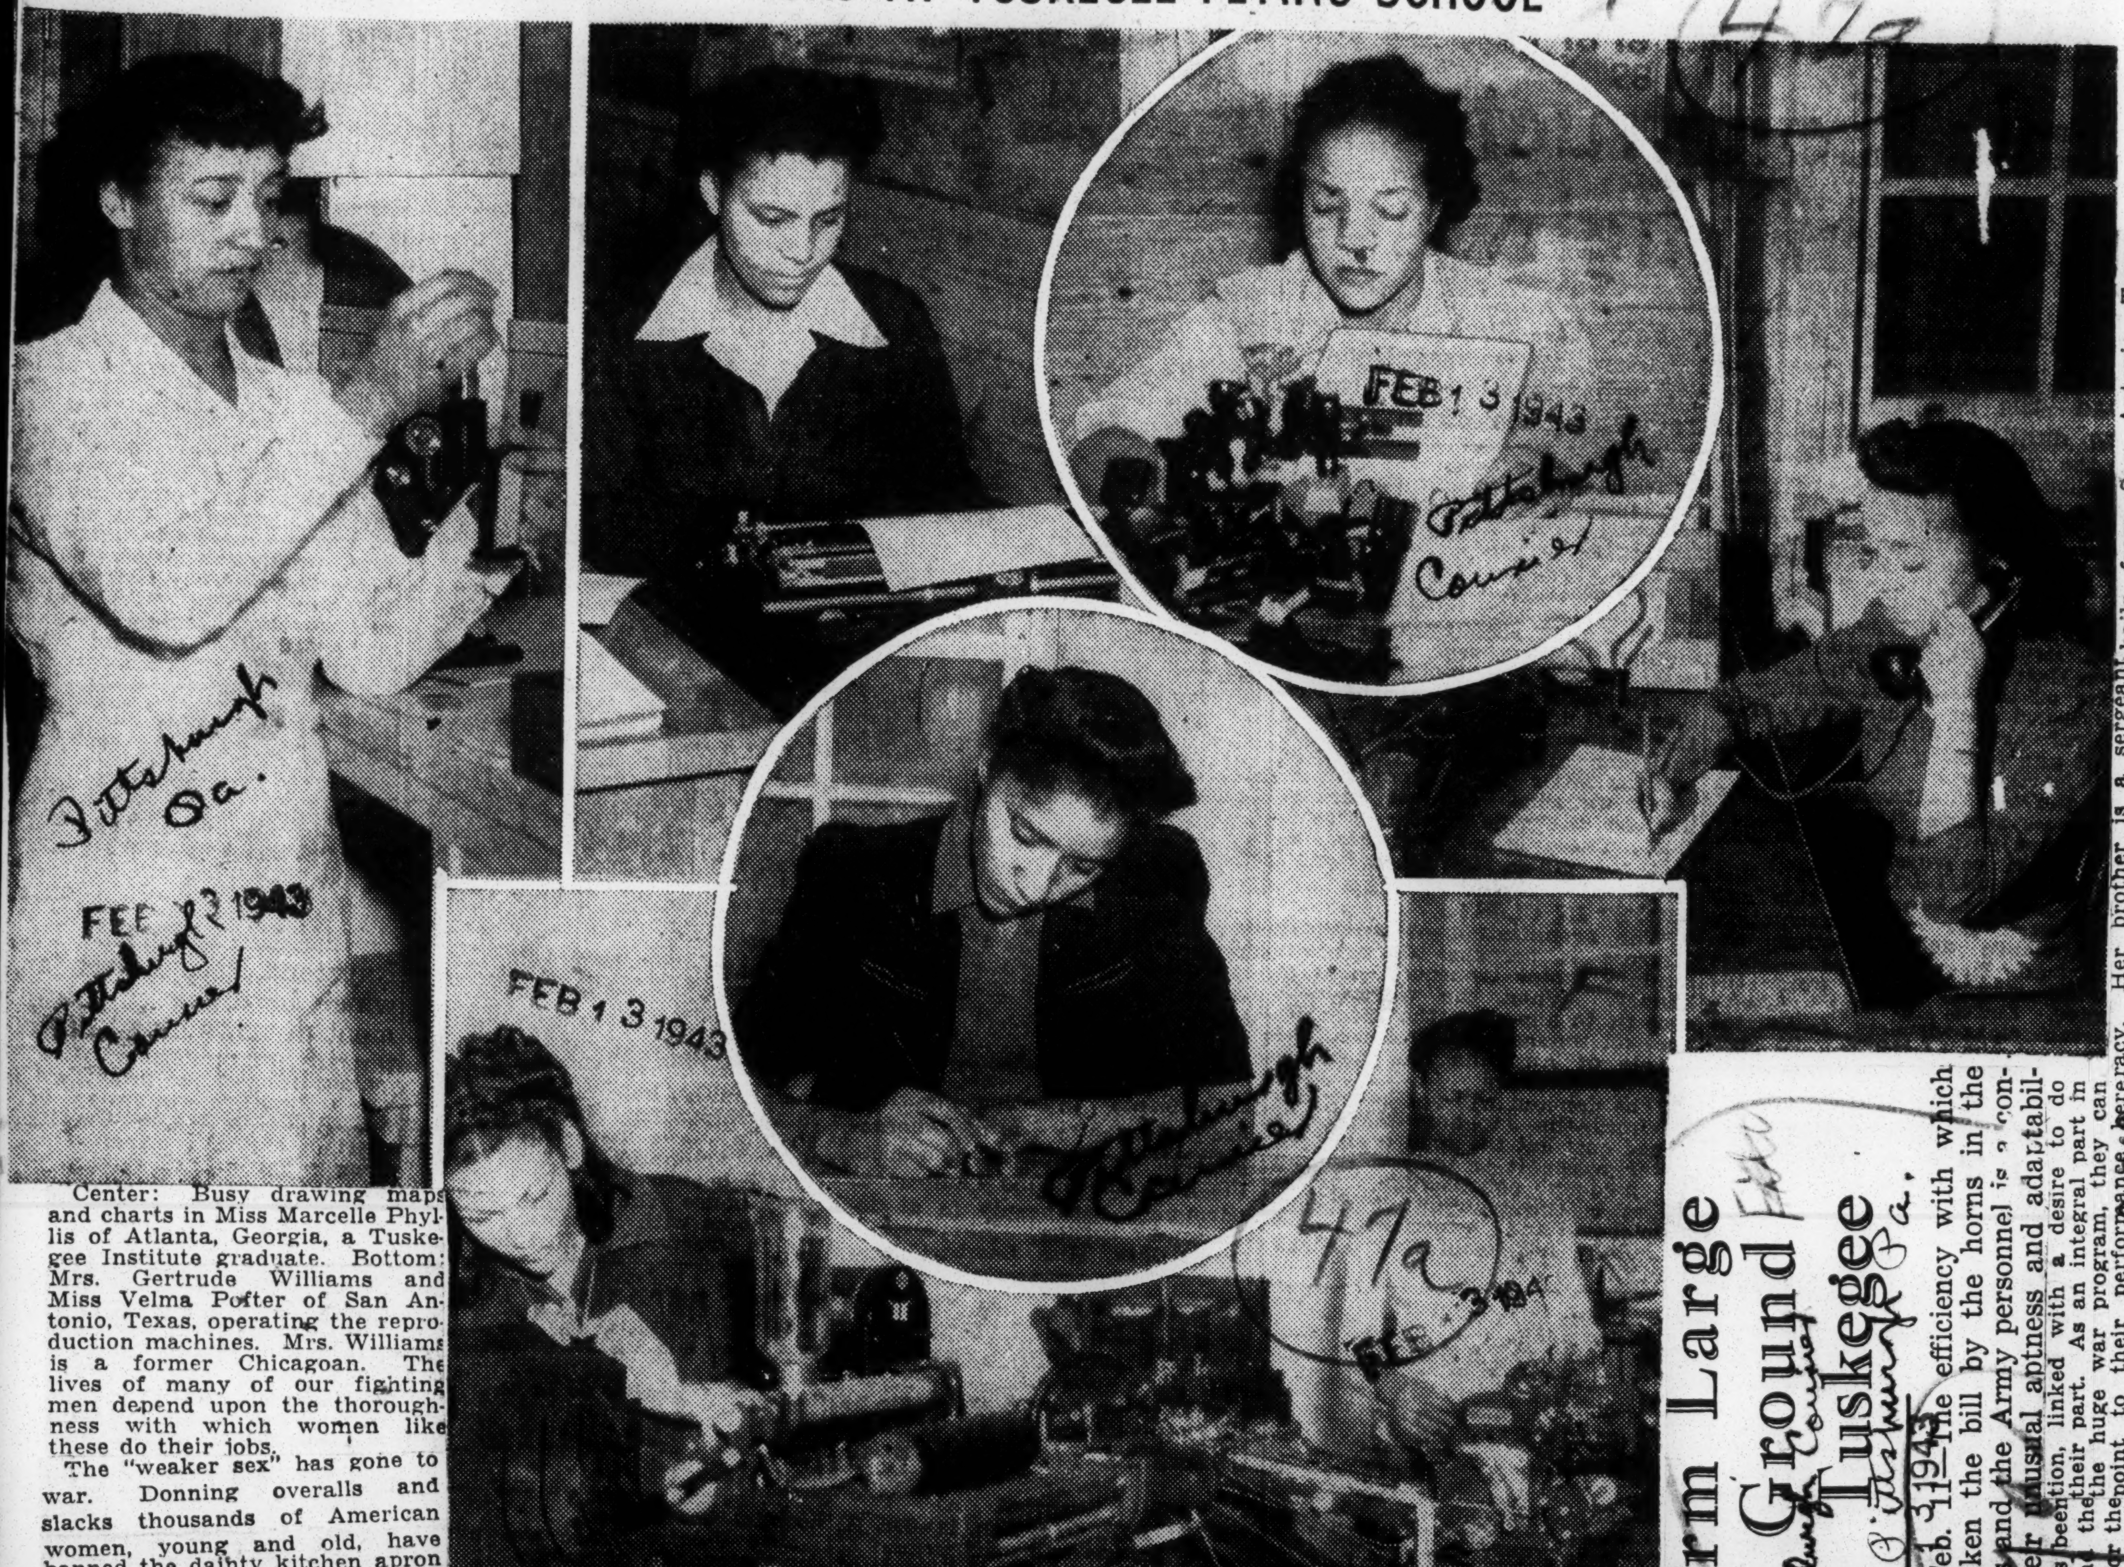
NEW YORK.—Alfred R. Rosenberg, high priest of the Nazi racial creed, expressed consternation last week over the audacity of American culture permitting Negroes to fly planes in the war against the Axis.

In an address before 400 newspapermen in Vienna, picked up by the Columbia Broadcasting system, Rosenberg referred disparagingly to use of colored airmen in Allied attacks on Pantelleria. He said:

"The Yankees even fly their bombers with Negroes sitting in them. This shows to what a low level American culture has fallen.'

47a-1943

WOMEN PERFORM IMPORTANT TASKS AT TUSKEGEE FLYING SCHOOL



Center: Busy drawing maps and charts in Miss Marcelle Phyllis of Atlanta, Georgia, a Tuskegee Institute graduate. Bottom: Mrs. Gertrude Williams and Miss Velma Porter of San Antonio, Texas, operating the reproduction machines. Mrs. Williams is a former Chicagoan. The lives of many of our fighting men depend upon the thoroughness with which women like these do their jobs.

The "weaker sex" has gone to war. Donning overalls and slacks thousands of American women, young and old, have banned the dainty kitchen apron and rolled up their sleeves to do a big job in this man's war.

At Tuskegee Army Flying School invaluable aid is given by women. The scenes above show at left: Miss Helen E. Allie, laboratory technician, at work. In the next photo at top: One of the many outstanding clerks of the field, Miss Violet Brown, attached to the Quartermaster Corps. Miss Brown is formerly a resident of New York. Miss Lillian Register of Pensacola, Florida, is shown at her desk going through her daily routine as requisition clerk. At right: The first woman aircraft dispatcher, Miss Cecelia Dixon of Columbia, S. C.

Girls Form Large Part Of Ground Crew At Tuskegee

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh Pa.
FEB 13 1943
File
47a

TUSKEGE, Ala., Feb. 11—The efficiency with which the weaker sex has taken the bill by the horns in the numerous war industries and the Army personnel is a convincing revelation of their unusual aptness and adaptability. The "red bandanna" has been discarded for ear phones and the kitchen apron packed away for the leather rubber aprons for the duration.

The Tuskegee Army Flying School presents one of the first opportunities by which the Negro woman has found opportunity to serve in skilled jobs that are a part of the many tasks in "Keep 'em Flying" at a wartime flying field.

Only a few of the women working at this station were technically trained in their respective jobs, butt hey have succeeded by their courageous spirit and determination, linked with a desire to do their part. As an integral part in the huge war program, they can point to their performance here with pride.

The majority of these unsung heroines who "Keep 'em Flying" are under 21 years of age and spend their spare time in supporting the activities of the USO. They come from New York, Los Angeles, and from the smaller cities of the South.

Take for example, Mrs. Gertrude Williams of Chicago. She attended Sumner high school in St. Louis, Mo., and later the University of Illinois for two years. Her entire family typifies the spirit of democracy. Her brother is a sergeant at Camp Lee, Virginia. Her mother is a director of a USO branch in California, and her father is an examining physician at Lambert Field, near St. Louis, Missouri.

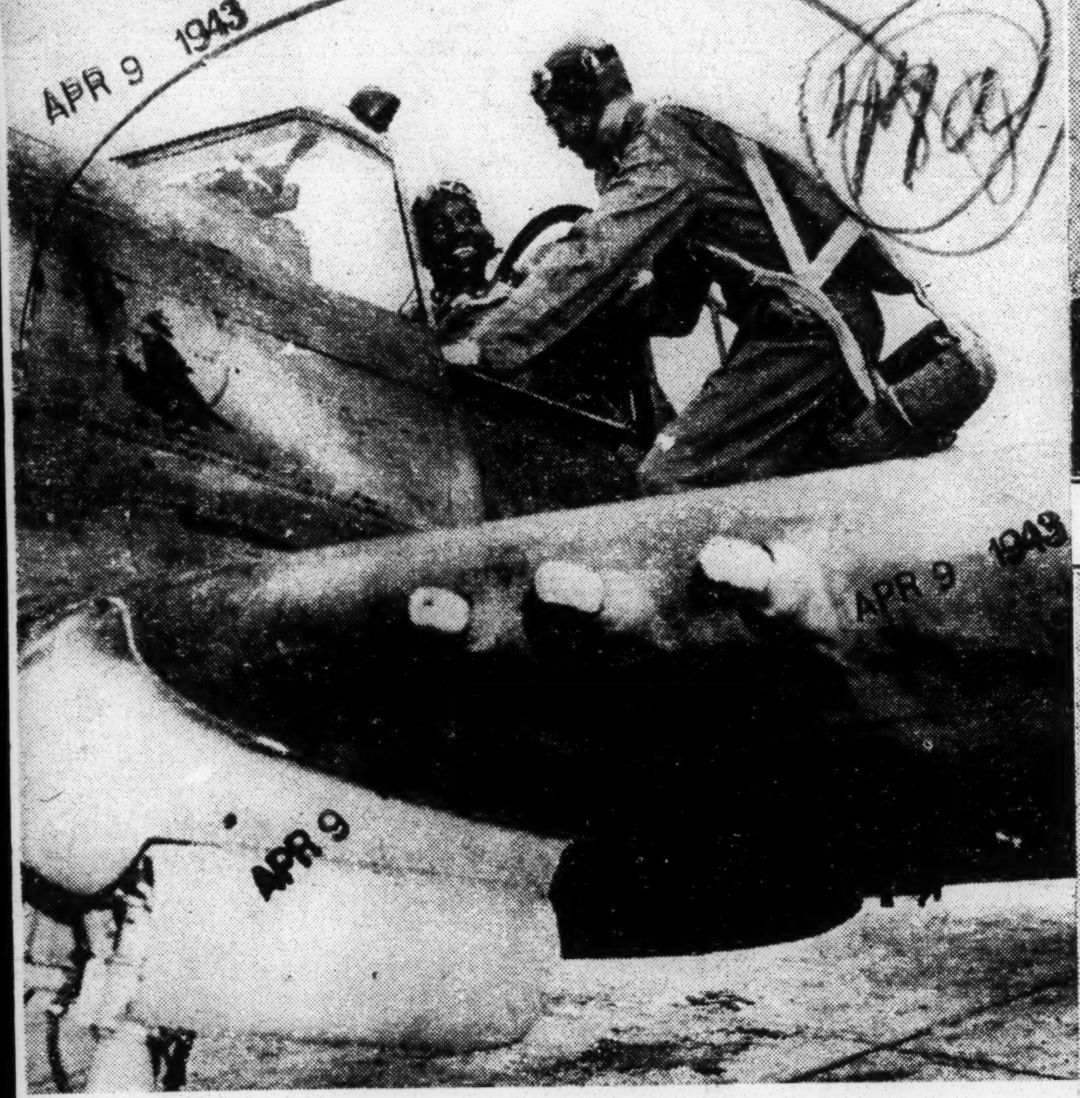
Only 20, and the mother of a baby boy, she operates the intricate reproduction machinery at the Sub Depot here. She and her coworker are specialists in the handling of the lithograph, multigraph, multilith and addressograph machines that furnish circulars, bulletins and other reading matter to thousands on this Post. Miss Velma Porter, her co-worker, hails from San Antonio, Texas, where she received her certificate as aircraft electrician when only 16 years old. Miss Porter received training at Tuskegee Institute.

From the Quaker City comes charming Miss Helen E. Allie to take over the highly skilled business of laboratory technician at the Base Hospital here. She finished the Mount Sinai Laboratory School and later earned the nurse's certificate at the Mercy Hospital in Philadelphia. She is a resident nurse in Tuskegee, Alabama, and rides twenty miles each day to fill her job as a technician.

They're Earning Wings in Army To Battle for a Better World

PM
New York, N. Y.

APR 9 1943



Lt. Col. Benjamin Davis (on wing), son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin Davis, gives some final advice to Lt. Charles W. Dryden, of New York, before Dryden takes off in a P-40 fighter on a mission at the Army Air base at Tuskegee, Ala

HAS RESPONSIBLE JOB

Probably the first Negro woman aircraft dispatcher is lovely and petite Miss Cecelia Dixon of Columbia, S. C. A former West Virginia State coed and dancing star she claims the A. K. A. as her sorority. Miss Dixon shelved her social duties for war duties, and now gives the all clear signal to incoming and outgoing air craft at this field. Her job is probably one of the most responsible ones on the field.

Pittsburgh Courier

In the fabric repairing department down on the line, patching up damaged wings, ailerons and rudders, is Mrs. Adelle McDonald of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, classified as a mechanic learner. The friendly, plump housewife is a former Stillman Institute Junior College student.

Two of the most proficient clerks on the Post are two charming young office workers at the Quartermaster Corps. They are Miss Violet Brown and Miss Lillian Register. The requisition clerk, Miss Register, hails from Pensacola, Fla., and boasts of her brother in the service who is stationed at Camp Lee, Virginia. She attended Tuskegee Institute while Miss Brown comes from Harlem in New York, N. Y. She also has a brother in the Army. Miss Brown, athletic and nineteen, is the chief clerk at the Quartermaster Office at this station.

FEB 13 1943

WOMEN IN GROUND CREW

Last but not least of the versatile group of skilled ground crew personnel is Miss Marcelle Phyllis Reid of Atlanta, Georgia. Miss Reid, although on the ground, is to the pilot what the navigator is to the chief pilot in the large bombers. She plots the cross-country courses that our flying officers take in their routine flights. Holding a degree from Tuskegee Institute, Miss Reid is so thoroughly trusted by the officers that they seldom check behind her accuracy that makes her an artist in the field of navigation

These young ladies form part of the ground crew that make it possible for the pilots here to undergo their training. They are proud of their jobs that indirectly will send down to earth in flames the planes of our enemies.

Some of our enemies give medals to their women for their most bountiful baby crop. American women receive no medals for their service to their household. But they are rewarded as they gaze into the futtile and picture the new world for which they strive. They know that the "Keep 'em Flying" slogan down here at Tuskegee Army Flying School will keep 'em fling in lands where a man's world is a slave world and a woman's world is a slave dungeon.

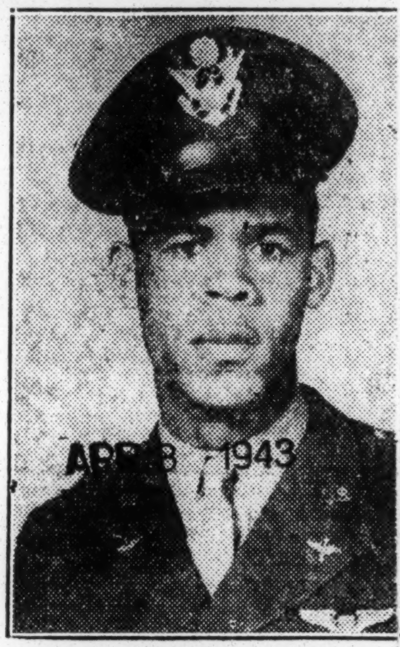
FEB 13 1943

Officers On Duty At Tuskegee

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

APR 3 1943

2nd Lt. Andrew S. Morse



2nd Lt. William E. Griffin

1st Lt. Hayward Burns

2nd Lt. Walter M. Downs

Lt. Morse, former communications officer with the 369th at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., has been recently assigned to the Tuskegee Army Air Flying School, as a finance officer attached to the 96th Air Service Group. Lt. Morse served as an account clerk in the U. S. Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., prior to his induction. Lt. Griffin of Birmingham, Ala., is a recent graduate of the Flying School. Before entering the Cadet Corps he was a member of the Sumter County Board of Education, Livingston, Ala.

APR 3 1943

Lt. Burns of Dawson, Texas, promoted from master sergeant to his present rank, was recently assigned to the Flying School. He has been in the regular Army for 13 years. Lt. Downs is a member of the most recent graduating class to receive the silver wings and gold bars. He is a graduate of Alcorn A. and M. College, Miss.

APR 3 1943

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

THE 99TH SQUADRON.

In the rotogravure section of today's TRIBUNE there is a photograph of American airmen who are eager for the opportunity to prove themselves against the enemy. They are members of the 99th pursuit squadron—the first Negro aerial combat unit in history. More than 100 Chicagoans are numbered among the pilots and ground crews.

The 99th pursuit is a fully trained squadron. Its instruction began in July, 1941, and the completion of training was formally observed more than six weeks ago when commissions were awarded. The pace of training set by the army air force, which held back the squadron for 21 months, would seem to have been leisurely in the extreme, when the eagerness and aptitude of the flyers might suggest that the work could have been completed much sooner.

The fact that six weeks later the squadron is still at its original base at Tuskegee, Ala., awaiting orders, indicates that it is high time to light a fire under somebody in Washington. A source of strength to the nation is being neglected, and there will be no patience with that.

APR 2 1943

News
Birmingham, Ala

Search For Flier's Body Temporarily Abandoned

Search for the body of 2nd Lt. Earl Eugene King, Bessemer Negro, flier, whose Army airplane crashed into Martin Lake, 30 miles north of here March 24, has been abandoned temporarily due to high water, the public relations office of the Tuskegee Army Flying School announced Wednesday.

E. E. KING

Lt. King took off from the Tuskegee field on a training flight the afternoon of Wednesday, March 24, in a P-40 plane. Reports that he had crashed into Martin Lake were not confirmed until Sunday, March 28, when salvage operations recovered a propeller identified as being from the plane King was flying.

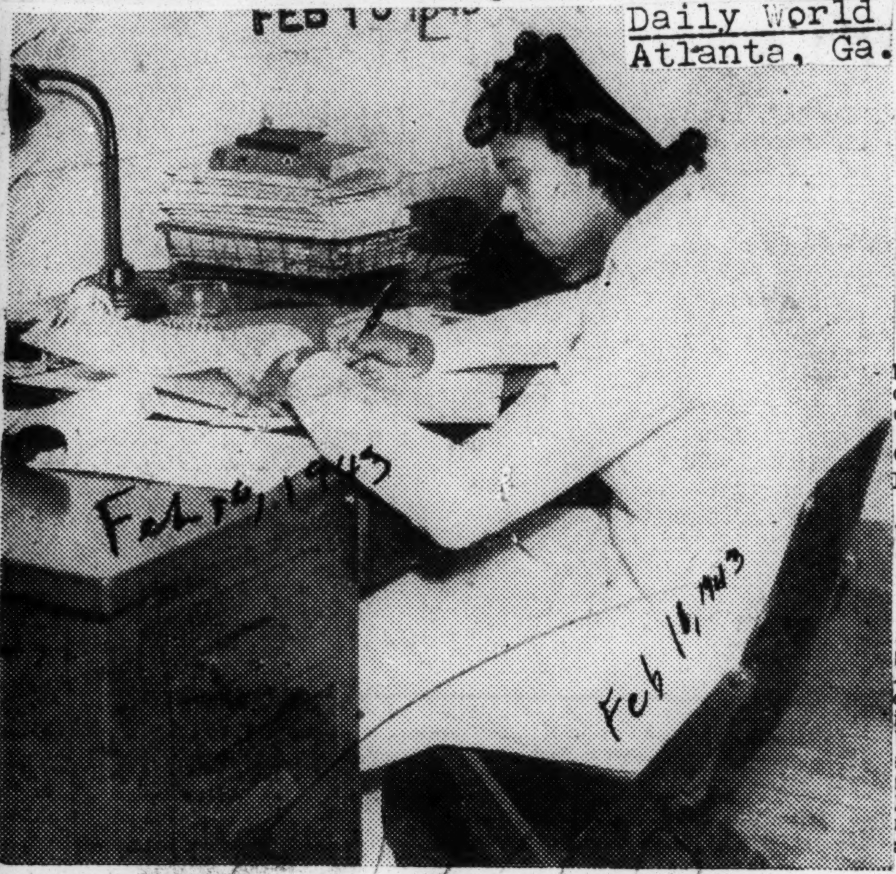
King attended Tuskegee Institute from 1939 to 1940. While attendig the institute, he completed the primary and secondary civilian pilot training courses. He enlisted as an aviation cadet in 1941, and received his wings and commission on Aug. 5, 1942. He was the son of William P. King, of Bessemer.

MAR 31 1943

47a-1943

Makes Final Report For Day

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.



FEB 1 0 1943
Feb 14, 1943
Feb 18, 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(SNS)—Before leaving for off-duty following a busy day, nurses on ward duty at the Tuskegee Army Flying School hospital must make out their final report for the day. Pictured is Lt. Abbie Voorhees of New Orleans. After having observed the patients the entire day she compiles all of her observations concerning each patient. This report goes to the head of the medical services and then to the flight surgeon. (Photo by Tuskegee Army Flying School.)

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

ONLY ONE BRANCH IS OPEN TO US

FEB 20 1943

(Editor's Note—In the following statement, William H. Hastie, who recently resigned as Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War in protest against the shortcomings of the military aviation program as it affects Negroes, discusses some additional aspects of racial discrimination and segregation in the Army Air Forces.)

By WILLIAM H. HASTIE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—It was not until March, 1941, that the Army Air Corps began accepting applications from Negroes for aviation cadet training. The actual instruction of Negroes to be flying officers did not begin until several months later. But even then, and to this day, there was and is only one type of combat aviation namely, pursuit flying—for which the Air Command will train a Negro.

Why Can't They Serve As Pilots?

Last week William H. Hastie, resigned Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, charged the Army Air Force with refusal to use the services of capable and experienced colored aviators. Here is the list:

JAMES L. H. PECK, veteran civilian and military flier, writer and authority on aviation, fighter pilot in the Spanish Civil War, volunteer for the U.S. Air Corps. Still on the waiting list.

FRED H. HUTCHERSON, American pilot, who was in command of a white crew ferrying U.S. bombers from Canada to England. Applied for a commission in the Army Air Corps last spring but landed as a victim of red tape and run-around. Returned to Canada as an instructor and ferry command pilot with the rank of captain.

GILBERT CARGILL and ROBERT ASHE, civilian pilots, received telegrams from the Army Air Forces to report to Maxwell Field for service pilot training. On reporting were told bluntly no provisions were made for training Negroes.

ROBERT TERRY, commercial pilot, rejected by the Air Command as an Army service pilot.

MOST DIFFICULT AIR COURSE

How did it happen that the training of Negro aviators was started in the field of pursuit flying? It is common knowledge that grave doubts were expressed from the beginning as to whether the Negro was capable of making good as a combat aviator. The Air Command described and still describes the training of the Negro in aviation as an "experiment." Yet, in face of this expressed skepticism, the Air Command saw fit to begin with the training of Negroes for pursuit flying, the most difficult type of combat aviation.

The single pilot in his pursuit ship has the most exacting of air tasks, handling his fast plane, maneuvering it at terrific speed in actual combat, mastering the technique of accurate and properly directed fire in aerial dog fights, and exercising split second judgment in unexpected situations and emergencies. Why was the Negro, whose ability was in doubt, not started off with observation flying or in bombardment where co-pilots and other crew members assist each other and share and divide responsibility?

Only the men who made the decision know the answer. They may have reasoned that through pursuit flying Negroes would demonstrate their ability to perform any air combat task. Fortunately, it seems to be working out that way. They may also have reasoned that Negroes were less likely to succeed in pursuit flying than in somewhat less exacting work. Yet, in all fairness it should be said that the best of facilities and thoroughly competent instructors were provided for the segregated training program for Negro pilots. And the men in the field who started this training did so with enthusiasm and determination to make it a success.

OTHER COURSES OPEN TO WHITES

FEB 20 1943

Statistics already released by the Air Command show that, during the first year of Negro pursuit pilot training, 42 per cent of the Negro trainees successfully completed their courses and earned their wings as pilots. During the same period 59 per cent of white aviation cadets who entered training qualified as flying officers. Of course the number of Negroes was small and the statistics are therefore not conclusive. More important is the fact that Negro candidates have no opportunity at any stage of training to be assigned to some other branch of combat flying, if they seem not to be well adapted to pursuit work.

The Negro cadet must become a pursuit pilot or nothing. White cadets are sorted out and placed according to their apparent aptitudes. Under these circumstances, the fact that 42 per cent of the Negroes who had the physical and educational qualifications for aviation made the grade in the most difficult asplishment.

Beyond the fact that the Negro must have the ability for pursuit flying, or else not fly at all, he must meet the special physical specifications of the pursuit pilot. If he is too tall or too heavy for pursuit flying, he cannot be an Army flyer, however competent he may be for some flying job other than pursuit work.

In wasted manpower, it is difficult to say how much is being lost by imposing such restrictions upon the Negro. It seems probable that some 200 Negro pursuit pilots will earn their wings in 1943. But the Air Command has never undertaken a campaign of publicity or promotion designed to get young Negro men with superior training into flying training.

NO NEGROES FOR COLLEGE RESERVE

When the Air Forces set up their college reserve program, no Negroes were wanted. The small "Negro quota" was already filled for a year in advance. So, while the Ground Forces were welcoming Negro college men into their college reserve, the Air Forces refused to accept them. Even earlier the Air Corps had undertaken the recruiting of groups of men from the individual college campus who would go into training as a unit with the group spirit and enthusiasm developed through their association at college. The Negro was excluded from this also. Thus, only the Negro who went forward on his own initiative, determined despite hell and high water to be a combat flyer, ever became an aviation cadet. Even then, he was accepted only within limited quota restrictions and for one type of training.

Within the past two months, restrictions upon the acceptance of volunteers in the army have been extended to aviation cadets. Apparently, aviation cadets will be chosen almost exclusively from men already in the Army. A new problem faces the Negro. He must apply for aviation cadet training through his commander and his papers must survive a journey through military channels. It remains to be seen whether his application will be encouraged and facilitated to the same extent as the application of the white soldier.

FEB 20 1943

In this connection, one recent experience is disturbing. For more than a year the Air Command has been selecting young soldiers, high school graduates, to be taken from the ranks and trained to become enlisted pilots. They become master, staff and technical sergeants with flying rating. So far as I have been able to discover, Negro enlisted men have not been accepted in this program. How different will the situation be now that both prospective flying officers and prospective enlisted pilots will be enlisted from the ranks of the army?

Two hundred Negro pursuit pilots a year is something more than token representation. Certainly, 200 pilots can make a big difference in almost any of the present theatres of war. Yet the failure of the Air Command to encourage or even permit the full participation of the Negro in flying training and service prevents the number of Negro pilots from being several times 200 per year. If the Air Command should decide to use Negro flying officers and enlisted men without racial restrictions, .000 pilots would be a conservative estimate of annual production.

Of course there would be serious practical difficulties in developing segregated training fields and segregated organizations of many various types in such an expansion. From a military point of view all of this new segregated set-up probably would not be worth the time, expense and diversion of personnel.

INFLUENCE MAY STILL BE FELT

Criticized For Discriminatory Practices

TUSKEGEE, Ala.-Colonel Frederick von Kimble, commander of the Army Basic and Advanced Flying School here, where colored flying cadets are being trained, has been transferred to a wing command of the southeastern division.. His headquarters will be in Macon, Ga..

The transfer, it is believed, puts him in line for promotion to the rank of brigadier general and places him in position to continue to wield considerable influence in the shaping of policies and practices at Tuskegee, since the flying school here will be under his command administratively.

Colonel Kimble has been severely criticized for Jim Crow practices which have been in effect here under his command.

He is said to have been responsible for the placing of Jim Crow signs on various facilities on the post together and requiring complete segregation of colored and white commissioned personnel, except where their duties compelled their working

Blame Command For Low Morale At Tuskegee Base

(Editor's Note—Immediately after William H. Hastie, recently civilian aide to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, made his militant expose of narrow U. S. Army policy at the Tuskegee Army Flying school, The Pittsburgh Courier rushed one of its ablest traveling reporters to the scene to make a first-hand study of present conditions at the much-discussed air base.)

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

FEB 20 1943

By Special Correspondent

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Feb. 18—Judge Hastie's resignation and his accompanying statement exposed the outline of the major grievances of the Negro's position in the U. S. Army Air Forces. There is, in addition, a multiple of minor grievances at the Tuskegee Army Flying school which prevent this one and only instance of the Negro's participation in the Air Forces from being the splendidly functioning unit it ought to be.

Each separate complaint regarding the situation at Tuskegee is relatively unimportant, but the total adds up to dangerously lowered morale. Both officers and enlisted men are smoldering with resentment, when a few bold strokes by way of eradicating the evils would leave them bursting with pride. They are proud of the field, of its orderly rows of new buff buildings, the bright green winter grass, the breath-taking stretch of the apron—all lying flat and shining under the intense blue of the southern sky.

But they are soul-sick over the relentless impact on their lives of the hatred of white Alabama in general and the little town of Tuskegee in particular. Their morale is low because they feel that the Command at the post has tried to placate the hatred of a poor, insignificant, little Southern town like Tuskegee, rather than assert the authority of the United States Army and protect the men at any cost. If a soldier has got to feel that his is the best army in the world, how is he going to feel that way if his army can't lick a Tuskegee, Alabama?

Aside from the initial fact that there should be no segregated flying school, nor segregated units at all is the com-plaint that a handful of white men run the whole show, It is contended that segregation, if it must be endured, ought to work all the way to the top as well as it does on the lower levels.

Let's have a look at the Command at the Tuskegee air base. The infamous Colonel Frederick V. H. Kimble has not yet gone. He departed February 5, but returned on February 9 and everyone has begun to fear that he is going to establish his new office at Tuskegee. It is said that he "likes" it there. However, while his promotion to Brigadier General is pending in Congress, he has checked over to Cochran Field near Macon, Ga., where he will command a wing. Whether the group allegedly being formed at the Tuskegee post of the 99th, 100th and the 301st squadrons will be part of that wing is a matter of conjecture. Actually, Colonel Kimble, in commanding the area, is still in control at Tuskegee, whether he moves or not.

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

RACE AND COLOR NO BAR TO FLYING FOR ENGLAND IN ROYAL AIR FORCE, AFRICAN OFFICER REVEALS

By Rudolph Dunbar

LONDON-- Africans and West Indians whose academic, technical and physical capacities fit then for the rank of Officer in the Royal Air Force are given commissions. Recently commissioned is Adeniyi Peter Thomas from Nigeria proud possessor of a pair of wings signifying that he is a qualified pilot.

Ten years ago he and some youthful companions set out from Kakawa st, Lagos, to see the "miracle" of Sir. Alan Cobham's flying boat in the Lagos Lagoon. These african boys were so keen on flying that later they saved their pocket money for short flights in Mr. Carpenter's private airplane at the A papa Airfield.

1-7-43

Young Adeniyi in far away Nigeria was so much moved by the stories of the exploits of the RAF in the Battle of Britain that he sailed for England determined to become a pilot Mr. Carpenter was one of the first instructors he met in Britain and he thus received his training from an old friend at an English air training school.

"There has been much hard work, and there have been many difficulties to overcome, but I have enjoyed every minute of it," he said.

Pilot Officer Adeniyi Peter Thomas strange sounding Christian name -- Adeniyi -- meand "Crowned with Glory." He is 27 and was educated at Lagos Grammar school and King's College.

His father, Peter J. C. Thomas is one of the most prominent merchants in Lagos.

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

COLORED AVIATION MECHANICS GIVEN WORK BY AIR CORPS

MAR 12 1943

Men Trained at Canute Field Sent to Several Southern Posts

CHICAGO, Mar. 4—(ANP)—The aviation mechanic instructors, trained at Chanute field during past year, have been placed. The men have been transferred to several different schools in squads of 16 to make up a unit for the most part. The stations or depots to which they have been sent are Wichita Falls, Tex., Amarillo, Tex.; Gulfport, Miss.; Biloxi, Miss.; Goldsboro, N. C.; Lincoln, Neb., and a few are still left at Chanute Field.

This distribution gives some inkling in part of the future plans of the air corps regarding the training of Negro aviation mechanics. About a year ago 60 Negro men were assembled at Chanute field, one of the finest aviation mechanic centers in the country, and trained to be instructors. The rumor at that time was that these men were to go to Tuskegee airfield where a great training center was to be set up to school the men who were to replace the mechanics who were serving with the 99th squadron and were expected to be moved out momentarily when that outfit went into active duty.

These mechanics finished their training working along with white men who were being trained in the same skills. The men came from every walk of life. There were two or three graduates in engineering, one Phi Beta Kappa from Iowa, one or two who had aeronautical training at a college here in Chicago, lawyers, students and what not. The whites came from a similarly diversified group, though on the whole the Negroes were slightly superior in training. The whites finished in four months and moved out. The Negroes finished but remained. They took refresher courses, they loafed, they merely reported. Nobody knew what was to be done with them.

The Tuskegee mechanic school faded into thin air. Critics still claim that adequate replacements for the mechanics who will go out when and if the 99th ever moves, have not yet been trained. Finally word came that the Negro aviation mechanic school was to be set up at Jefferson barracks in Missouri. This met a storm of protest because it became apparent that instead of training men at Chanute or one of the fields already set up, an attempt was being made to set up an entirely Negro school in the north. The men at Chanute marked time again

A month ago however they were moved out in squads to the six depots mentioned above. Reports show that they fared differently in different places. At Goldsboro, N. C., men were not given instructional duties at first but were assigned to various mechanical tasks, moving planes out of hangars and the like. Finally a group went to the commandant and told him they would like to do the job they were sent there for and they are now instructing. At Wichita Falls, Tex., the men were immediately sent to instructing soldiers. They found living conditions most agreeable and are said to be especially happy over their work and environment. The same report comes from Lincoln, Neb.

These instructors train soldiers in what are known as aircraft maintenance schools. The instructors are presumed to have overall knowledge with a specialty. The soldiers, enlisted men, specialize in some one phase propellers, inspection and maintenance; instruments, testing and repairing. If the planes need a major job these men merely report it and the plane goes to a repair depot. The soldiers who show aptitude are sent to Chanute for a special 42 day course and the instructors remaining at Chanute give that course. A group of 100 soldiers are there now, the first soldiers who have been trained at Chanute since the mechanics of the 99th who were turned out some two or three years ago.

1943

The men at Chanute get along splendidly except for adequate recreation. They go to classes with white soldiers but eat in a separate mess. It is said they do not use the USO house. Champaign, the nearest town, is some few miles away. There are about 300 men stationed regularly at Chanute, quartermaster corps, medical detachment, etc. These men drive officers' cars, trucks, cut grass, clean streets, clean the hospital and similar duties.

MAY 8 1943

Pittsburgh
Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

NATIVE JAMAICAN FLYER PROVES HEROIC DAREDEVIL FOR BRITISH RAF

MAY 8 1943

MAY 8 1943

MAY 8 1943

By RANDY DIXON
(Accredited U. S. Army War Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, May 6—(Censored)—When Prime Minister Winston Churchill spoke his immortal words, "Never before in history have so many owed so much to so few," one of the "so few" to whom he referred was Flight Sgt. Vincent Bunting. Now 23, Bunting three years ago left his post as customs officer in his native Jamaica and came to England to volunteer for King and Country, in the air service.

He was apt and eager and earmarked as a great pilot of the future. Many other candidates were shipped off to Canada for training but Bunting was kept in England and in an incredibly short span of time, had won his silver wings, RAF emblem, and was taking to the skies in the battle of Britain to stymie the hell-tossers "Jerry" had strewn aloft.

He flew with the regular squadron and soon became known thruout Britain and in the enemy camp as well, as one of the most daring and accurate shooting among the immortal "so few."

MAY 8 1943

BUSY CAMPAIGNER

Later, Bunting participated in the battles of Egypt and Libya and always he returned with his battle-proven Spitfire fighter, to the dismay of the Huns and the delight of the Britishers.

Bunting has escaped injury so far, but once they almost got him—through a cleverly conceived trap. Returning from escorting American Fortresses on a devastating sortie over Occupied France, he espied two Messerschmitts flying over the Channel at low level. He swept down and was coming onto their tails when some intuitive force commanded him to glance around, and there right behind him were three additional enemy planes. The two flying at low level had been the bait.

He made a quick arc with his plane skimming the water by a few feet, and hastened on to safety. On another occasion, he has been out on a sortie and was returning to his base near Tobruk when the radio flashed that Toburk 'had fallen and for pilots to proceed to another landing field. His petrol tank was nearly empty but with the aid of a benevolent tail-wind that sprung up from nowhere, he just did manage to make it behind his own lines. Bunting is an affable, likeable chap, and as you read this little piece is probably up there. That's the credo of the "so few."

NEW YORK POST
Circ. D. 219,363 S. 164,785

JUN 14 1943

U. S. Negro Flying Unit Helped Bomb Pantelleria

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 14 (AP)—The only American Negro aerial unit in foreign service was among the Allied forces that bombed Pantelleria, it was disclosed today.

They flew Warhawks and were under the command of Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, a noted cavalry officer.

The all-Negro squadron trained at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., before ~~coming overseas.~~

Guardian
Boston, Mass.

APR 24 1943

COLORED AIR PILOTS WILL AMAZE CRITICS

FIRST U. S. FLYERS TO CHALLENGE AXIS PLANES IN SPAIN, AFRICA

Recent transfer of Colored aviation units from Alabama to Michigan and New York has again focused national (and international) attention on the possibilities of Colored pilots "shattering the Axis" with medium and light bombers, heavy flying fortresses, fighters, interceptors and pursuit, coastal patrol and vital observation aircraft.

APR 24 1943

"It can't be done" is the dogmatic dirge from certain political and prejudiced brass-hats within our nation.

"It can be done", says Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, American flying ace of world war one, high executive of the popular Eastern Airlines, and unquestionably an authority on air-warfare, if there ever was one.

APR 24 1943

"It's all a big joke," laugh the (superior) critics, "Colored men can't fly. Colored men haven't the fast mental and physical reactions to become airmen . . . The Colored race is too dumb for scientific marhines. Colored aviators will never see action in this war."

APR 24 1943

Judge Hastie Disgusted

The wise counsel of American aviation ace, famous Eddie Rickenbacker has been completely lost in the "jumble of prejudice," some of which unfortunately emanates from Washington, D. C. An aroused American Colored citizenry, led by democratic organizations including the colored press, has only thus far succeeded in breaking the ice to a limited extent. A few "colored" aviation units have been established an doriginally all of them were in the deep south. The first units were seemingly "ground crew" affairs not withstanding the very attractive news photos of "colored airmen" in your favorite weeklies. The supposition is that until Mr. Hastie got busy, the plan was to make colored "airmen" mostly ground crews and hanger laborers. Even Dr. William H. Hastie, Civilian Aid to the War Department quit in disguest.

APR 24 1943

Col. Robinson, Hero

The funny part part of all this foolishness, ladies and gentlemen, is the already recognized (and published) fact that colored aviators were among the first Americans to challenge Axis planes in this war.

APR 24 1943

Four days after Benito Mussolini of Italy opened the present conflict with the criminal October 1935 attack on defenceless Ethiopia, an American air hero was acclaimed in the U. S. daily papers.

The American air hero so widely acclaimed in the world wide news dispatches was Col. John Robinson, a Chicago flyer who volunteerd to fight the Axis (EIGHT YEARS AGO), before America entered the war, and who fought off FOUR Italian planes singlehanded while flying a comparatively ancient "crate." Robinson had tried in vain to enlist in the U. S. Air Corps and had been turned down like so many others. Colored pilots also fought in Spain against the Franco Axis regime. The colored air heroes in Spain were active long before we declared war.

APR 24 1943

Col. Julian Helped

Eight years ago, Colonel Robinson was foremost among American war pilots and was honored by the name of the "Brown Condor."

APR 24 1943

France and Britain both had colored war pilots in action before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. The Jap attack was the concrete clincher to our War Department that "other nationalities" can fly battle planes. The Japs were tragically under-rated as war pilots and we paid heavily for our mistake. The non-aryan Japs have proved better and more effective air-pilots than the "aryan" Italians.

For years, Colonel Hubert Julian, the so called "Black Eagle of Harlem" tried futily to convince this nation that all nationalities should be encouraged to serve the U. S. Air Corps. In spite of Julian's flair for showmanship, he kept the colored air pilot question before the American public, the press and radio. While people laughed at the "Black Eagle" his pioneer efforts were causing serious thought.

GUARDIAN — JACK Apr 23 ..
Roving Along—Continued 2 ..

APR 24 1943

Locals In Airforce

While numerous misinformed persons were still contending that Colored Americans were incapable of flying planes, I was exchanging aviation columns with Ben Hunter the first class colored aviation editor of the Washington, D. C. Tribune.

Years before Pearl Harbor there were as many as 70 licensed colored air pilots in America. There was a national colored air club centered at Chicago. There were colored licensed commercial pilots, one of them being Johnny Green of Boston's Third Battalion, 372nd Infantry. Other licensed pilots included Ross Wheeler of Springfield, and Walter Hareld Jr., both of East Providence. Recent reports indicate that Lieut. Alvin Williams of Boston, formerly Technical Sergeant of Boston's 372nd is now one of more than 100 colored commissioned officers with the 332nd Fighter air force Selfridge Field, Michigan. Many New England boys have cast their lot with the Army Air Corps.

APR 24 1943

Boston Plane Engineers

Judge Hastie's resignation was for the purpose of assuring the best possible training of colored pilots in the best available planes, in the most up-to-date surroundings and possessing all of the equal chances and opportunities of other air cadets. Is this too much?

A half-trained pilot can not enter combat in any airforce and Mr. Hastie knew that half trained colored boys absolutely had no future in the air. Modern planes can be made faster than good pilots.

The Army has finally decided to become serious in the training of colored pilots. The Navy (as expected) is still unconvinced. Two local boys, Joseph Dunning of Milton, MIT honor graduate; and Eddie Dugger of Medford, famous Tufts School track champion were both called to serve at Army air plants in California and Ohio respectively. It is the Army which is undertaking the training of colored air pilots mechanics and administration officers. So why the fuss?

APR 24 1943

Colored Told To Wait

Present "Blitz" wars will not tolerate the exceelingly slow and stupid progress that has been made regarding colored air pilots, a progress that has already been exposed by Mr. Hastie and requires no further explanation here. Suffice it to say that if our nation had had to wait for the completion of training of colored pilots before launching air offensives in the Far East, Europe and Africa there is no doubt that our armies would be in a mighty ba dway.

APR 24 1943

Training of war pilots begins before hostilities begin or as early thereafter as possible. Yet, at a time when the nation was shouting for more pilots, I know of many fine colored chaps angrily inactive on long unnecessary "waiting lists" and some, I am told, had to wait so long they were finally drafted into the Army.

Chicago Bee

TRIBUNE HITS 99TH'S INACTIVITY

Chicago, Illinois

MAY 9 1943

Its editorial on April 25 indicates that the Chicago Tribune is aware of the harm of segregation. The editorial points out that in the rotogravure section of that day's issue of the Tribune there were pictures of American airmen who were "eager for an opportunity to prove themselves against the enemy." The photographs were of the 99th pursuit squadron.

The editorial states that the 99th pursuit is a fully-trained squadron. Its instruction began in July, 1941.

MAY 9 1943

The Tribune laments that six months after the completion of the training period, needlessly stretched into 21 months as attested by the eagerness and aptitude of the flyers the squadron is still inactive as a combat unit.

"A source of strength to the nation is being neglected," the Chicago Tribune concludes, "and there will be no patience with that."

MAY 9 1943

Bowling at Tuskegee

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

FEB 20 1943

FEB 20 1943

A group of bowling fans are shown at the new Tuskegee sport center ready for action. The bowling alleys were recently opened to the officers and enlisted men of the Tuskegee Army Flying School

---

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Pre-Flight Trainees Go To Tuskegee, Ala.

June 5, 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., June 3—Recently, the first group of aviation students (Air-crew) to complete six weeks of intensive study at the College Training Detachment on the campus of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., were transferred to the Tuskegee Army Air Field, Ala., where they will commence the pre-flight stage of aviation cadet training with the rank and pay of Aviation Cadets.

This class represents the newest method adopted by the Army Air Forces for the training and selection of men prior to their being designated as Aviation Cadets.

The following are a list of the aviation students, cadet training in the preflight phase:

Sgt. Wise, Henry A. Jr., Cpl. Bailey, Buford, Cpl. Roderick, John J., Pfc. Brooks, George T., Pvts. Adkins, Winston A., Alers, Arturo

E., Anderson, Robert D., Bell, Rual
W. Boykin, Arsene, O., Calhoun
James A., Chandler, Robert, Col-
ins, Joseph W. Jr., Diggs, Charles
W., Dunn, Andrew T. Jr., Dunn,
Charles W., Gaiter, Roger B., Gay,
Thomas L., Gordon, Joseph E.,
Gorham, Alfred M., Hall, John J., Harder, Richard S., Harrison, William, A., Haves, Reginald W.,
James, David F., Long, Wilbur F.
Macon, Richard D., Mason, Alvin
F., Matthews, George B., Moody,
Frank H., Pouncy, Hilliard Warren, Rhodes, Samuel E., Robnett,
George A. Jr., Rodgers, Marion R.,
Turner, Davidson V., Westbrook,

Shelby F., White, Charles L., White, Cohen M., Willette, Leonard R., Williams, Kenneth I., and Dilson, Charles E.

The Northwest
Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

The Tuskegee Flyers

From Chicago Tribune

APR 28 1943

Major Donald G. McPherson director of the army training base at Tuskegee, Ala., says of the men of the 99th pursuit squadron of colored flyers, "They are ready." This is the first squadron of colored flyers in the history of the army and all of the nation impatiently awaits a demonstration of its skill in combat against the country's enemies.

The 99th squadron began training July 19, 1941 and its continued detention at base after the passage of months has provoked much criticism of war department policy. Every one who is familiar with the remarkable records of colored athletes has the utmost confidence that colored air men will prove second to none. The Tuskegee flyers should be given the opportunity to prove their worth by an immediate assignment to a fighting front.

47a-1943

Stimson's Aide Says Negro Fliers Shunned

"Courier-Journal" Louisville Ky.

FEB 1 - 1943

By the Associated Press.

Washington, Jan. 31.—William H. Hastie, Negro civilian aide to Secretary of War Stimson, said today he had resigned in protest against "discriminatory practices of the Army Air Forces in matters affecting Negroes."

He recalled in a statement that a training center for Negro pilots had been established at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama over his protests against segregation. Since then, he said, adequate provisions have not been made for ground troops to work with qualified Negro pilots.

FEB 1 - 1943

Says Views Disregarded.

"The simple fact," he commented, "is that the Air Command does not want Negro pilots flying in and out of various fields, eating, sleeping and mingling with other personnel, as a service pilot must do in carrying out his various missions."

Hastie, dean of law at Howard University here, said that when he took office "the Secretary of War directed that all questions of policy and important proposals relating to Negroes should be referred to my office for comment or approval before final action.

"In December, 1940, the Air Forces referred to me a plan for a segregated training center for Negro pursuit pilots at Tuskegee. I expressed my entire disagreement with the plan, giving my reasons in detail. My views were disregarded. Since then the Air Command has never on its own initiative submitted any plan or project to me for comment or recommendation. Whatever information I obtained, I had to seek out. Where I made proposals or recommendations, I volunteered them. . . .

FEB 1 - 1943

Asserts Negroes Not Wanted.

"But the reactionary policies and discriminatory practices of the Air Forces are much more serious than the matter of ignoring my office. It should be understood that from the beginning the Air Command did not want Negro personnel. Resistance bred of that attitude has been met ever since."

He described Negro ground troops assigned to aviation as "so-called 'aviation squadrons (separate)'" and said they "have never had a defined function." They are assigned, he reported, to "odd jobs of common labor which arise from time to time at airfields. The units," he continued, "would never have come into existence except for the necessity of making some provision for Negro enlisted men in the Air Forces."

FEB 1 - 1943

Calls Program Unbalanced.

Hastie said that "a few" Negroes were accepted for ground force technical training at Chanute Field, Ill., and "did excellent

Negro Protests Discrimination In Air Forces

Stimson's Aide Quits, Says Views Ignored

FEB 1 - 1943

Continued from First Page

work," but that training stopped with the first group.

"The Air Forces," he continued, "then made efforts to set up segregated technical training 'at Tuskegee or elsewhere. Difficulties were encountered. Meanwhile, successive classes of Negro pilots were being trained, but no technical schooling of supporting ground crew members was in progress. Thus, even the segregated program got badly out of balance in the effort to effect its extension.

FEB 1

"The prospect is that in 1943, even with a tardy resumption of technical ground training, Negro pilots will be ready before and faster than adequate numbers of trained ground crews are available."

FEB 1 - 1943

He asserted also that Negro applicants for assignment as weather officers or officers in other highly specialized technical fields were rejected although the Air Forces need "large numbers of additional weather officers so badly that white volunteers are being solicited and accepted, despite a general policy against voluntary enlistments in the Army."

P. M. Daily
"New York N.Y."

FEB 1 - 1943

Negro pilot officers at Tuskegee Army Flying School after getting their wings last July. They are watching classmates in the air.

Washington Post
Washington, D. C.

Negro Aide to Stimson Quits; Charges Army With Race Bias

FEB 1 - 1943

William H. Hastie, Negro civilian aide to Secretary of War Stimson, said yesterday he had resigned in protest against "discriminatory practices of the Army Air Forces in matters affecting Negroes."

He recalled in a statement that a training center for Negro pilots had been established at Tuskegee University in Alabama over his protest against segregation. Since then, he said adequate provisions have not been made for ground troops to work with qualified Negro pilots.

"The simple fact," he commented, "is that the air command does not want Negro pilots flying in and out of various fields, eating, sleeping and mingling with other personnel, as a service pilot must do in carrying out his various missions."

FEB 1 - 1943

Hastie, dean of law at Howard University here, said that when he took office "The Secretary of War directed that all questions of policy and important proposals relating to Negroes should be referred to my office for comment or approval before final action."

"In December, 1940, the air forces referred to me a plan for a segregated training center for Negro pursuit pilots at Tuskegee," he said. "I expressed my entire disagreement with the plan, giving my reason in detail. My views were disregarded. Since then, the air command has never on its own initiative submitted any plan or project to me for comment or recommendation. Whatever information I obtained, I had to seek out. Where I made proposals or recommendations, I volunteered them ...

"But the reactionary policies and discriminatory practices of the air forces are much more serious than the matter of ignoring my office. It should be understood that from the beginning the air command did not want Negro personnel. Resistance bred of that attitude has been met ever since.

FEB 1 - 1943

He described Negro ground troops assigned to aviation as "so-called 'aviation squadrons (separate)'" and said they "have never had a defined function." They are assigned, he reported, to "odd jobs of common labor which arise from time to time at air fields. "The units, he continued, "would never have come into existence except for the necessity of making some provision for Negro enlisted men in the air forces."

Hastie said that "a few" Negroes were accepted for ground force technical training at Chanute Field, Ill., and "did excellent work" but that training stopped with the first group.

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

Tuskegee Fliers Twiddle Thumbs; White Commander Ignores Order

JAN 9 - 1943

With the opening of a New Year came the plea via radio news bulletin, last Saturday, of a high official of the Australian government for the United States to send more men and planes to the South Pacific and not concentrate too much of its armored strength in the battle against Germany. Japan has been girding its forces while the United Nations have centered their main attention on Hitler, the official warned. Meanwhile, both radio and press continue to ask for more American fliers.

JAN 9 - 1943

In spite of the urgent need for more air strength, the situation at Tuskegee Army Flying School at Tuskegee, Ala., shows signs of becoming worse. Negro flyers are still officially "grounded" as far as any real combat action is concerned, and last week's revelation by the Associated Negro Press of appalling discrimination fostered by the Tuskegee white commanding officer, Colonel Frederick Von H. Kimble. The ANP story revealed the following:

- segregation in mess hall, with Negro commissioned officers and white commissioned and non-commissioned men eating separately;
- appearance of signs in the new technical building wash rooms, "for colored officers" and "for white officers." This in spite of the fact the War Department has allegedly issued orders against such discrimination;

JAN 9 - 1943

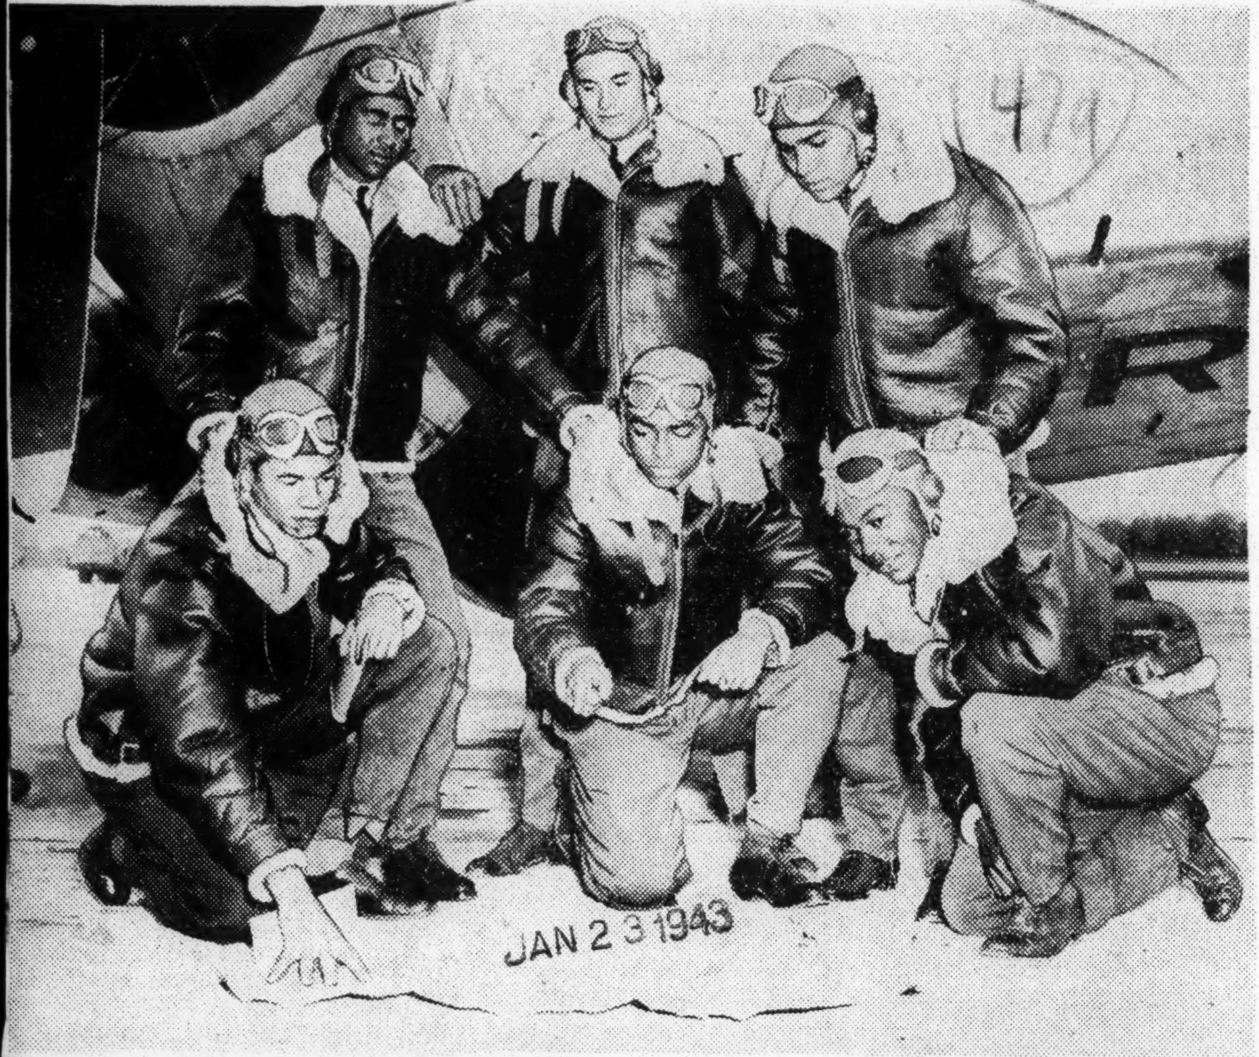
- Colonel Kimble is accused of cooperating with prejudiced white townspeople in the humiliation of Negro flying cadets and commissioned officers and instead of military police, the Colonel is represented in such affairs by a captain of the state highway police;
- social activities and Officer's Club on the post closed to white officers who are actively discouraged by Kimble in any attempt to mix with their Negro brother officers;

JAN 9 - 1943

- executive officer to Colonel Kimble is Lieut.-Col. Hazzard, white, who started as a lieutenant in a CCC camp and within a year had reached position of Lieut.-Colonel at Tuskegee; while qualified Negro officers merely "twiddle thumbs";

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

All Part of Earning Their Wings



JAN 2 3 1943

474

These Tuskegee Army Flying School pilots, members of the class receiving silver wings and commissions as second lieutenants January 14, are shown charting ..r course for a routine flight. ..ey, left to right, kneeling, are: Andrew Maples, Jr., Orange, Va.; George T. McCrumby, Fort Worth, Tex.; Clinton B. Mills, Durham, N.C.; standing, Quitman C. Walker, Indianola, Miss.; Charles R. Stanton, Portland, Oregon; Armour C. McDaniel, Martinsville, Va.

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Air Forces to Get 2 More Negro Units

JAN 29 1943

Washington, Jan. 28. (U.P.)—Two new squadrons of Negro combat fliers will be added to the one now in training, Secretary of War Stimson announced today. Negroes are receiving instruction not only in the technical training command of the Army Air Forces, Stimson said, but also at the air ..ficers' training school in Miami.

Columbia ... State
January 29, 1943

APPRECIATION TOLD

Negro troops at Columbia Army Air base yesterday expressed deep appreciation for courtesy of Negro citizens of Columbia in entertaining them.

Approximately 200 Negro soldiers were guests in private homes Sunday. They attended church services in the morning and then enjoyed dinner with their hosts. In the afternoon the troops engaged in games at the Benedict college gymnasium.

The program was arranged through the co-operation of Chaplain Rual Perkins, Lieut. Oscar E. Patterson and Lieut. James G. Major.

47a

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

PROTESTS TUSKEGEE OUSTER OF NEGROES

47a

Please accept our thanks for your efforts and fine article in your paper on the Tuskegee Army Flying school. However what you have said is just a sample of what the truth really is here.

I have been asked by several of the employes to write this letter to you and ask you to continue to help to remove all these vultures of democracy who are trying their very best to drive us out of this base. We have been subjected to all kinds of mistreatments and abuse.

Jan 16, 1943

Several civil service jobs here are held by whites while qualified colored men are denied their rightful jobs and promotions. Some departments that are headed by whites are the machine shop, paint and dope shop, electrical shop, instrument shop sub depot, office civil service superintendent office and several others.

The superintendent who is by name Henneckes, who is one of the lowest, most evil and unqualified type of southerners, has said from time to time that he will not stop until every "nigger" is out of here.

Jan 16, 1943

We are appealing to you and other tax payers who are able to bring pressure on the war department and the civil service commission to remove these men and replace them with qualified colored men.

We need your help NOW, NOW. Please don't fail us now. If the employment of whites continues at the present rate, all the colored will be out in a very short time. We want to keep this base and our jobs for colored. We had a hard time to get it as you know, and now to have it taken away before our very eyes is a hard thing to take, even in the South. If we continue to sit by and do nothing, we won't have it very long. Our fight is at home as well as abroad.

--Tax-paying citizens, Tuskegee Army Flying school.

47a

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga

Ask Why Davis Is Not Commanding Air Base

FEB 16 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(SNS)— Why is it that Lt. Col. Benjamin Davis Jr. is not commanding officer of the army air school located here near Tuskegee?

That question is being asked by Negro soldiers atttached to this base which has recently been receiving considerable unfavorable publicity because of the strict policy of segregation inaugurated by Col. Kimble.

FEB 16 1943

These soldiers point out that a squadron consists of 13 to 28 planes, a group from 61 to 121 planes and a wing from 125 to 250 planes. Lt Col. Davis is in command of only a squadron, the 99th, while Maj Sam Westbrook, white, has charge of a group and Lt. Col. Neol Parrish, white, of the same rank as Davis, heads the Tuskegee Army Flying school.

FEB 16 1943

"Four years at West Point plus months of training a squadron should be enough to qualify Lt Col. Davis for the post of commanding officer of the 322 fighter group or post commander of the TTuskegee Army Flying school," these soldiers point out. "Why isn't Davis getting what is due him?"

Negro Teachers Transferred

MAR 22 1943

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BILOXI, Miss., March 21.—A group of Negro civilian instructors of the Army Air Corps, who have been teaching ground crew work to white students here and at Gulfport for the past several weeks, have been relieved of duty, despite their admittedly excellent job, and transferred to posts north of the Mason-Dixon line.

MAR 22 1943

47a

News
Birmingham. Ala.

Crash Kills Flying Officer

MAY 11 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.— (AP) —Second Lt. Sidney James Mosely, Jr., of Norfolk, Va., a flying officer at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, was injured fatally in a plane crash Monday while engaged in a routine training flight in the vicinity of the field.

Lt. Moseley received his commission and wings April 29. Prior to his entrance into the service he was employed in the Norfolk Navy Yard, Portsmouth, Va.

47a-1943

COMBAT IN AIR IS SINGLE AIM OF ALL TUSKEGEE

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

Colored Pilots Look to Big Test.

APR 4 1943

This is the first of three stories describing the training of army flyers at Tuskegee, famous colored educational center.

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Tuskegee, Ala., April 3.—Flying—this is all that matters at Tuskegee's huge army establishments for the training of colored pilots.

Here is everything, and everything first class, for eager young men of the air; everything save one—combat. And that, in the opinion of the commanding officer, Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, Kentucky born and Texas reared, will not long be postponed.

APR 4 1943

Promise of action comes from a confident commander. "Simply say for me," Col. Parrish says, "that our boys will win when engaged. Nothing eles counts in war."

Ready for Great Test.

Many of the best from Tuskegee's army flying school are considered fully ready for the test. The plea of one young pilot-fighter defined the spirit of this amazing place.

"We want to prove to you, and all, sir," he said, "that we have fighting hearts."

This is the spirit today of Tuskegee, the famous institute and the air schools built around it, now gone to war; Tuskegee, a pioneer experiment in education wholly dedicated to serving America in an emergency.

Here it was that Booker T. Washington, American educator born in slavery, let down his celebrated bucket. He drew it up from a well of faith and it was filled to overflowing with living waters for his people.

APR 4 1943

Army Turns to Tuskegee.

Almost from the beginning of Tuskegee institute under Washington, thru all the genius of the years of the late George Washington Carver, the [illegible] watched this venture, an [illegible] in education and in the [illegible] field of teaching people of different shades and bloods how to live in peace with one another.

It was to this scene that the United States army turned when it sought a place to establish a flying school in which young men, elsewhere not always pleasantly placed, might learn to fly and fight as they fly, and learn also the construction of every type of flying artillery.

It was in 1939 that the government joined Tuskegee as partner in a civil aeronautics school, the first of its kind. That venture was inching along without fuss when war came and war's decree that other issues and problems must wait or become asides to the main task.

Frederick Douglass Patterson, president of Tuskegee, and foremost figure in the education of colored youth, offered his institution as a place with "every necessary facility for teaching flying fighters."

Unique Among Flight Schools.

Despite arguments and recriminations, and doubting Thomases, the war department broke ground in mud and water in 1941 for the Tuskegee army flying school, the last of the three units here. It is unique among all army flying schools; up to the standard, yes; in many things above the standard.

"It is ours," said Col. Parrish, commanding officer, "and as such we mean to make it second to none." A preacher's son, his faith in human nature crops out all over [illegible]

There are three flying schools at Tuskegee, distinct, but each a part of the whole training program.

They are the civil aeronautics school, first training school established here; the 66th army air force primary training school, the second to be opened, and third, the army flying school proper, where the flyer receives his "wings."

Looks Like Tough Fort.

Coming up on the West Point route you see the first army flying school. It is situated nine miles from the Tuskegee campus. From a train window it resembles a tough, stout fort. Riding back from Tuskegee institute by automobile you are on high ground and the school resembles a citadel guarded by an ever moving winged army.

The school stretches over 1,600 acres of valleys and hills and back water from the lazy Tallapoosa river. It is a busy rallying point of the heart of a colorless, raceless American youth. All things are not as all people would want them, but as for flying, there is nothing to tempt the critic's pen.

Maxwell field, noted air base at Montgomery, is but 30 miles away. The Tuskegee flying school is wholly under control of the war department and is its property. The crack 99th fight squadron is here. Its record is one of great discipline and loyalty. Its flights are pride of the command.

The 66th air forces primary training school is five miles away. It is a partnership school, the war department having the commanding officer and Tuskegee institute the civilian director. The buildings were erected by Tuskegee students, and the 640 acres of land it occupies is owned by Tuskegee institute.

Feeder for Flying School.

It was the first school of its kind established by the war department and is feeder and ally of the flying school. The war department maintains the cadets and their barracks are on the Tuskegee campus five miles away.

The civil aeronautics school, also a partnership venture, is eight miles from the town of Tuskegee, 11 from both Tuskegee institute and the army flying school. It was established to provide a course in flying at Tuskegee.

It occupies 160 acres of land under lease to Tuskegee institute, much of it unimproved, but fit for teaching flying. Its graduates are instructors at the primary school, and represent 90 per cent of the flying instructors there.

APR 4 1943

Praise from Chaplain.

Flying visitors, even from foreign lands, come in to ride with the boys. They wonder at the progress made in the air and likewise the progress exhibited on the ground where all colors are joined in a great task.

Chaplain Douglass Robinson, son of Dr. J. G. Robinson, editor of the Methodist Review, had a word to say. "If," he said, "the war had done no more than open the way here that we might show what we could do, it would be an all right war."

At the primary school the commanding officer is Maj. W. T. Smith, who took over when Col. Parrish was transferred to the advanced school. The civilian director is G. L. Washington, Massachusetts Tech graduate and superintendent of the mechanical departments at Tuskegee, an aviation specialist.

At his school the mechanics are colored, with one exception, and he whistled at his work. The clerks are white and colored, young men and women at ease with one another. The instructors, colored and white, work together at the 66th primary with noticeable enthusiasm.

At the civil aeronautics school Director Washington is in complete charge and instructors and crews are entirely colored. "I was entrusted," said Washington, "with the beginning of all you see."

APR 4 1943

Cites Huge Growth.

From a handful—a small hand—of bold, venturesome young men with headquarters in a dilapidated house built before the Civil war he has seen young men troop this way by hundreds, some to fly, some to teach, and others yet to mend and repair.

But one complaint breaks upon the air. It is that combat, however close, seems too far removed. "If I can get up there," said one young man, "I'll help change things down here."

APR 4 1943

"If, left unannoyed by lip artists," said President Patterson, chief patron of these schools, "from among these young men, of whom any people would be proud, will come heroes as daring as the great Rickenbacker."

FLYERS READY AT TUSKEGEE; WANT TO FIGHT

APR 11 1943

Display Easy Skill Handling Planes.

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

(This is the second of three stories on the training of colored flyers at Tuskegee.)

APR 11 1943

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Tuskegee, Ala., April 10.—"Go next door," said Maj. Donald G. McPherson, director of training at the Tuskegee advanced flying school. "Go over and see the 99th squadron, as finely trained as any fighter flyers anywhere."

The major, a Californian, and air combat with every breath, said that he would put his bottom dollar on the 99th. "They are ready," he declared.

It seemed so with each class of young men, busy either on flight or with the endless equipment of an American flyer.

Everything Ready.

The 99th, or at least part of it, made ready with warlike impatience for an afternoon drill in the sky. The drill would sweep territory in Alabama, Tennessee, and Georgia, all within an hour or two. Maj. McPherson was right—everything, everybody was ready.

The flight was to be made under command of Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., commander of the 99th, warrior faced, strong knit; West Point in manner and carriage; tall, and son of the only colored general in the United States army.

The way those flyers arose into space—ease, precision, formation, timing, leveling out for the run—they might have been headed for Africa.

APR 11 1943

The ground crew, white and colored, had been trained by the best that the ground command affords. The crew watched the 99th move upward and away, then quickly turned to the ships left behind. Ships seemed everywhere, all fighters, and the army's best.

Show Fighting Stuff.

One crack unit, having completed the tasks here, has left to get acquainted with bombers and all their allies in destruction. This outfit had shown fighting stuff, aptness, pride in duty.

The army has held back nothing from them and when this is published this outfit may be over the ocean.

The air school is big—two or three plantations thrown together—with shops and hangars as far as eye can see, yet the enthusiasm and anxiety for combat of the boys have already overrun it.

Capt. Clay Allbright is superintendent of fighter training and the big fighters, arranged in formation on the ground, their long, heavy noses poked out and turned up, seemed to know Allbright.

When the boys get here Capt. Allbright can soon determine if they are flyers likely to fight it out in the air, or merely sky rockets, quickly up and soon down.

Thirteen flying and flight instructors are on the ground at the advanced school. They deal only with problems of the air. All other issues they leave to decisions of superiors.

"Wings" Is Magic Word.

At army flying school, cadets are received and assigned for training. Back and forth they move between the advanced and primary schools. "Wings" is the magic word, but only the flying school may bestow them; so every heart is set this way.

White and colored mechanics are working side by side, all of one mind; all in step. Civilians by the hundreds move over the vast acreage; they sit at desks in the corridors. Even the civilians are all war and flying.

The instructors in both basic and advanced training were chosen for the Tuskegee flying school because of capability, and also because they possess the intelligence to deal with big undertakings.

Tension Not Visible.

There have been reports of tension here, but it was not visible to this eye during a visit of a week. And this reporter had free run of all schools. Quick movement, handling of the involved regalia of flight, unaffected alertness and petting of the big planes—these things filled a morning and afternoon of close examination. And the flyers in talking among themselves and to outsiders spoke of nothing but of learning and getting away to have it out with the enemy in the sky.

Humor and philosophy and army poetry abound when day is done, for here are many lettered young men, some from the best colleges, south and north. One flyer poet tried his hand, risking court martial for crime against verse, with this result:

"They say we're off for Tokyo,
"Then Tokyo let it be;
"But Tokyo or Africo,
"This waiting—it's killing me."

Downed Three Times.

A foreign flyer, one with a name for feats in the air, reported that he had been "downed" three times by a Tuskegee "adversary." The story of this place is a chapter in the annals of American aviation.

There seemed too many buildings to count; too many shops to inspect under a week's time. The course provides two months in the elementary school; thence to the big school for a test; months more for the secondary period; then the final steps.

Meanwhile discipline is at work, not hard or tough, but discipline that develops self-control and fortitude, prime requisites for success with an air ship.

As for discipline, the story is a short one. Nothing too sensational has clouded routine.

The trial judge advocate is a well known Chicago lawyer, Capt. Fleetwood M. McCoy, U. S. air corps.

TUSKEGEE TAKES FLYER TRAINING IN EAGER STRIDE

april 13, 1943

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

Colored School Is Used to Accomplishment.

(This is the last in a series of articles on the training of colored pilots at Tuskegee, Ala.)

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Tuskegee, Ala., April 17.—The army flying schools were located here because of Tuskegee institute and the illustrious works of its founder, Booker T. Washington, and the things Tuskegee could provide.

Tasks entrusted by the war department to Tuskegee got on faster here than elsewhere. For 60 years the air of achievement, of loyalty, of patient intelligence had distinguished the place. Then, too, Tuskegee townspeople were ready for the venture.

Projects still considered experiments elsewhere had met with success at Tuskegee. Tuskegee townspeople, descendents of the men who saw Booker T. Washington thru dark, hungry days more than half a century ago, have pride in the school. They refer to it as "our school."

April 13, 1943

Flying School Welcomed.

For two generations they had been used to colored youth looking into books, handling tools, erecting great structures, and they were prepared for aptness with scientific instruments and airplanes. And the townspeople were ready to welcome the flying school. Tuskegee residents are accustomed to important visitors and important events at the institute.

Tuskegee institute is the largest, wealthiest, most successful business among American colored people. It was established, built, and administered by them. More educated colored people are found here than at any other single enterprise. Tuskegee's efficiency and thoroness are by-words, whether in office, class room, shop, or laboratory.

From the beginning of the flying schools army and civilian workers have labored together without fuss or friction. "I could ask for no better help," said Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer. In the air or on the ground people are getting on, going ahead to win the war.

Tuskegee Was Ready.

Tuskegee had the jump on other flying centers. Five schools were picked to open up training of colored flyers. Four were for elementary training—Hampton, Va.; Howard, Washington, D. C.; Negro Agricultural and Technical, Greensboro, N. C., and West Virginia State—and one, Tuskegee, was for advanced training. Before this, with its civil aeronautics school a success, Tuskegee had added flying to its course, a part of its vast extension work.

G. L. Washington, director of mechanics at Tuskegee, had impressed the war department when he was coördinator and civil administrator of the first air school. A Massachusetts Tech background fitted him for study of aviation. His school and its achievements had become talk of the industry.

When the government and Tuskegee opened the civil aeronautics school with Washington in charge, the faculty was mixed as to race. Today it is all colored, and all its graduates are instructors at the 66th primary school, forming 90 per cent of that school's faculty.

Praises White Friends.

"I would like only to say," said Mr. Washington, "that my success, a small one, is due to the confidence of the war department, the support of Tuskegee's President Patterson, and the unfailing loyalty of our southern white friends."

Back across the hills are two great hospitals, the veterans and John A. Andrew hospital, seat of the famous Tuskegee clinic for which hundreds of doctors, colored, and white, gather yearly.

4-13-43

But the hospital of the army flying school is one to remember, too. The great array of buildings, spotless inside and out, is staffed with men notably competent in medicine. Its apothecary contains every healing substance.

Lt. Col. Richard C. Cumming, a graduate of Johns Hopkins university, and intimate friend of the men who made Johns Hopkins famous, heads the staff. "We deal here," he said, "only in health."

Autographed photographs of the builders of Johns Hopkins adorn the walls of his office. Hanging there, also, larger than any, is a picture of George W. Carver. "Science," said Dr. Cumming, "is universal."

Seven Doctors on Staff.

There are 13 nurses, the pick of the best nurses training schools, all colored young women. The nurses are under the direction of 1st Lt. Della Raney, a graduate of Lincoln nurse training school in Durham, N. C. Every nurse is a commissioned officer.

Seven doctors, all officers, are on Dr. Cumming's staff. Six are products of Howard and Meharry medical colleges, and one, of Pennsylvania. Maj. Richard King heads the dental clinic.

The war early depleted the Tuskegee campus. Thru its miles of grounds and buildings it looked as if only girls were to be educated. But a new step changes the scene.

Happy Changes Brought.

"Tuskegee is asked to help in the only way it can help; we will do what we can to win this war and continue in our way," says President Patterson. "The exigencies of war, as observed at Tuskegee have wrought happier changes than halls of state."

No history of American aviation can be written without the story of the Tuskegee air schools. Here in the atmosphere of Booker T. Washington, George W. Carver and their illustrious associates, old things are passing and new things rise everywhere.

Capt. McCoy enjoys the respect of superiors and the esteem of officers and men. His office is a show place and his work is praised.

Don't Think of Color.

No one mentions that Capt. McCoy is colored; no one seems to think about it. But one look at him adds a chapter to the book of progress.

On the grounds the several hundred officers—only 60 of whom are white—move about in freest communion and the urbanities are strictly observed.

The command seems to think any previous civilian or military grievance will be numbered with things of the past when these boys start moving in the air.

"We overcome by doing at Tuskegee," said President Patterson. "Such is our history since the beginning under Booker Washington."

Lt. Singh Is Ready To Go

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Sports fans who are accustomed to seeing him in the togs of an All-America football hero or in the uniform of a star basketball player may not recognize this pursuit squadron lieutenant as Wilmeth Sidat-Singh, Syracuse University football and basketball immortal. Lt. Singh, who achieved national fame as the passing genius of the Syracuse elevens and then rose to even greater acclaim as a collegiate and professional cage star, operating for the now world's pro champions, the Washington Bears, is a native of Washington. He recently received his silver wings and his commission as a second lieutenant at the Tuskegee Army Flying School, graduating as the second ranking student in the class. Lt. Singh was one of six fighting pilots to get a medal for aerial sharpshooting. He is getting ready to taxi one of the fighter planes down the runway at the Tuskegee Army Flying School.

APR 3 1943

Negro Students Finish Army Air Forces Photo Training

MAY 1 1943

Journal and Guide Norfolk, Virginia

47a

DENVER, Col.—Graduation diplomas were presented Saturday to members of the first class of Negro students to complete the Army Air Forces Technical Training Command photo course at Lowry Field here, authorities at the field said Saturday.

The Negro section, part of a class of students which attended school on a 'round the clock schedule and a seven-day week, included men from all parts of the country, and academically was one of the highest-ranking in the history of the school.

MAY 1 1943

46 STUDENTS

The section, officers said, totaled 46 students and attended classes during "A" shift — from 5:30 a. m. to noon. One of its men, Sgt. Richard S. Monclova, from Brooklyn, N. Y., led his section in honors, as well as ranking highest in grades for the whole graduating photo class comprised of three sections, of which the Negro group was one.

Sgt. Monclova's diploma, given for completing with honor and distinction the course of photography prescribed by the Technical Training Command of the A. A. F., was signed by Maj. Gen. Walter R. Weaver, commanding general of the vast network of technical schools comprising the A. A. F. T. T. C., headquartered at Knollwood Field, N. C.

Of the seven distinction diplomas given the class—awarded to students whose grades were slightly below the honor graduate — three went to Negro students, including Pfc. Thomas M. Miller, Boston, Mass., Pfc. William L. Kydd, New Bedford, Mass., and Pvt. Garrett H. Fernell, from Seguin, Tex.

THE COURSE

MAY 1 1943

The course given the Negro students was the same as that given the other two sections of white students comprising the class. Of 12-weeks duration, it included seven weeks of technical training in theory and operation of cameras and films, plus five weeks of advanced lab work.

1943

The 46 Negro students, who will be assigned to tactical squadrons manned by members of their race, came to the field several months ago, Lowry officers said. Many were on detached service, or sent here because of their aptitude and ability along technical lines.

JUNE 19, 1943
HOUSTON, TEX. DEFENDER

BLACK BIRDS FIGHTER UNIT ESCORT BOMBERS

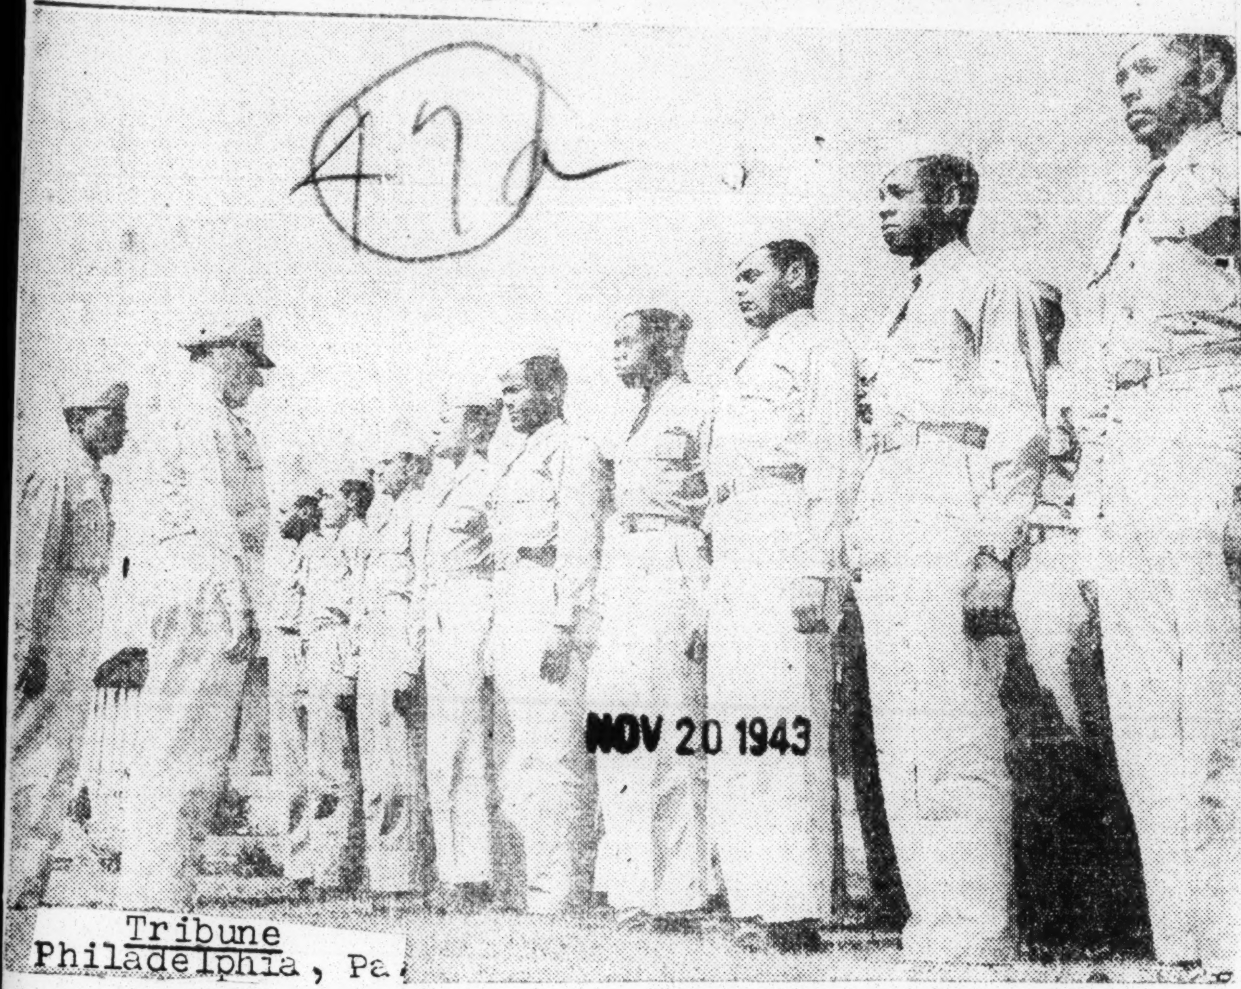
LIED HEADQUARTS IN NORTH AFRICA—(Special)—Sooner than expected, the Tuskegee trained flyers received their baptism in battle when Pantelleria was bombed by the Allied forces recently, it was disclosed this week by OWI.

Under the command of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., (whose father is the highest ranking Negro officer in the American Army, Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis) flying P-40

47a

47a-1943

Air Navigators Welcomed



47a

NOV 20 1943

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Bureau of Public Relations, U. S. War Department

FIRST NEGRO NAVIGATORS arrive in Texas Airbase. The 30 smartly disciplined members of Squadron 10, first Negro unit to report for navigation training at Hondo Army Air Field, Hondo Texas, are shown being inspected shortly after their arrival at the huge navigation airbase. The inspecting officer is Captain Frank H. Sheffield, senior tactical officer of the school's Group III. To Captain Sheffield's left is Navigaton Cadet Arnold W. Galimore, flight marcher for the unit. (Photo by Army Air Forces).

NOV 20 1943

Leads 99th Squadron

SEP 25 1943

Philadelphia Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

George Spencer Roberts

George Spencer Roberts was born in London, W. Va. on September 24, 1918. He graduated from West Virginia College, Institute, W. Va., with a Bachelor of Science degree in 1938. He received a commission as second lieutenant (temporary in the Army United States) on March 6, 1942 and was assigned to the 99th Fighter Squadron.

SEP 25 1943

He was promoted to first lieutenant (temporary) on August 18, 1942 and to captain (temporary) on March 16, 1943, and has been placed in charge of the 99th Squadron, the North African theatre, since Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., was ordered home.

Negro Youths Taking Aerial Careers At Tuskegee Air Field

Age
New York, N. Y.

OCT 30 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD Ala. — Many Negro youths are starting aerial careers at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. They are learning to master the art of flying under the watchful eyes of capable officers.

The men from New York that recently completed their pre-flight training at the Tuskegee Army Air Field and have been assigned to the 66th A. A. F. Flying Training Detachment at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., where they will begin actual flying are: Aviation Cadets Woodrow J. Huff of Lackawanna N. Y.; Thomas P. Rock of Brooklyn. N. Y.; Lloyd R. Goldson of New York City; Egbert A. Craig of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Alfred M Kinloch of New York City.

Cadet Huff, son of Mrs. Della Huff of 83 Dona street, Lackawanna, N. Y., was employed by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, prior to entering the armed forces.

Cadet Rock, son of Mr. and Mrs Thomas P. Rock of 1614 Emmers lane, Brooklyn, N. Y., was an apprentice jeweler, prior to entering the armed forces.

Cadet Goldson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred B. Goldson of 287 Edgecombe avenue, New York City, attended New York University from 1940 to 1943.

Cadet Craig, son of Rev. Egbert A. Craig of 5211 Franklin avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., attended Brooklyn College from 1940 to 1943. He was a junior checker at the Port of Embarkation, prior to entering the service.

Cadet Kinloch, son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Kinloch of 246 West 138th street, New York City, attended City College of New York from 1942 to 1943. He was employed as a clerk in the Army Transportation Service, prior to entering the armed forces.

OCT 30 1943

A Message That Holds Hope:

People's Voice
New York, N. Y.

Negro Pilots 'Naturals' Italian Pilots Say Of 99th Thunderbirds

NOV 6 - 1943

By NELL DODSON RUSSELL

A few months ago, high above the African city of Bizerte, a formation of P-40's escorted a squadron of American bombers. On the ground below in a prison camp, Italian and French soldiers, and a few American merchant seamen who had brought cigarettes to the prisoners, watched the planes as they droned steadily into the distance then disappeared in the direction of the Italian coast.

"The colored fliers!" one of the Italian prisoners exclaimed excitedly, "indicating the formation of P-40's. "They are good fliers those boys! Always they stick right with the bombers no matter how bad it is up there. We didn't know America had colored fliers, but they are good!"

There was quick , enthusiastic assent from the other Italians and the French soldiers.

The fliers of the 99th Pursuit Squadron have proven themselves, according to William Henry Sigmon, 856 Metcalf ave., East Bronx, member of the United States Merchant Marine. He was one of the seamen who looked skyward that day in Bizerte and heard foreign prisoners of war commend the courage and flying ability of the handful of Negro pilots helping this country to battle the Nazi sky scourge.

NOV 6 - 1943

NATURAL PILOTS

"I can't explain how I felt when I saw the 99th escorting the bombers and those fellows started telling me about the way they'd flown straight into hell in the battle of Pantelleria and stuck with the bombers even when they were catching cross fire from all directions, including anti-aircraft. The Italians said they were naturals as combat pilots!" (Ed. Note Sigmon's story bears out the eyewitness account of the air battle as printed in the August edition of Yank, the Army magazine and reprinted in a subsequent edition of PV.)

NOV 6 - 1943

Sigmon also verified the reports, which in spite of brush-off by the daily press, are finding their way back to the States from overseas battlefields, reports of American Negro soldiers not only seeing actually combat service but going into battle with steel nerves and a don't give-a-damn for their own lives. There was one prize tale of a colored lad in the battle of Bizerts who fired a gun so fast he sent a nest of Nazi supermen scrambling for safety and solitude.

NOV 6 - 1943

Sigmon, who has been with the merchant marine for over eight years and has seen practically every port in the world, can speak Italian, French and a few other foreign languages all enough to make out pretty well in a conversation. In talking with Italian prisoners he found them more than satisfied to be in an American prison camp.

"Come to think of it," he said, "they seemed to like American ideas from start to finish. And they all hated Mussolini!"

LIKED IN THE BRONX

A German prisoner with whom he swapped a package of cigarettes for a souvenir miniature plane talked good Eng[illegible] the is-a-small world angle came when he found the fellow used to live on Ward ave in the Bronx and had been an employee of Consolidated Edison. According to Sigmon, he'd landed in this country about eight years ago as a deck-hand on a German liner, had taken out naturalization papers and was about to become an American citizen when the war broke out and he returned to Germany.

NOV 6 - 1943

Seaman Sigmon pointedly brought out that in almost every port in which his ship dropped anchor, the people themselves treated Negro soldiers with open hospitality, the only trouble coming from the Dixie white soldiers who resented the gracious reception their darker brothers were getting.

---

8 Pilots In Group Promoted

Journal & Guide
Norfolk. Va

Lts. Letcher, Proctor, Johnson, Get Key Posts

AUG 28 1943

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

(By Censored Wireless and Cable)
(Copyright. Reproduction Prohibited.)

ALLIED AIRFIELD, Sicily—In recognition of their courageous roles in the conquest of Pantelleria, Sicily, and other Mediterranean islands and in the softening up of the Italian "boot," as well as their battle-proved qualities of leadership, nine officers of the celebrated 99th Fighter Squadron, including eight combat pilots, have just been promoted from second to first lieutenants.

Those el[illegible]in rank were:

AUG 28 1943

Lt. George R. Bolling, Phoebus, Va.

Lt. Walter I. Lawson, Newtown, Va.

Lt. William H. Fuller, Tarboro, N. C.

Lt. Graham Smith, Ahoskie, N. C.

Lt. Willie Ashley Jr. Sumter, S. C.

Lt. Samuel R. Bruce, Seattle, Wash.

Lt. Louis R. Purnell, Germantown, Pa.

Lt. Paul G. Mitchell, Washington, D. C.

Lt. George R. Currie, Los Angeles, Cal.

All but Lt. Currie are combat fighter-bomber plane pilots, flying the famous P-40 Warhawk. Lt. Currie is ordnance officer for the squadron.

Burns To Death

Defender
Chicago. Ill

LT. SIDNEY P. BROOKS

* * *

Cleveland Air Ace Killed In Action In Italy

OCT 23 1943

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—Mrs. Lucille Brooks, newly-wed wife of Lieutenant Sidney Brooks, was saddened this week when she received confirmation from the War Department announcing the death of her husband in Europe.

The lieutenant was a member of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, formerly commanded by Lt. Colonel Benjamin O. Davis Jr. Brooks, along with Lts. Clarence Jamison and Erwin Lawrence had received the coveted air medal for meritorious service in ten or more sorties against the enemy in the African-Sicilian-Italian areas. Brooks is said to have been knocked out of the skies by enemy planes a month or so ago.

At the Brooks home, [illegible] East 142nd street, where Brooks' wife resides with her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Brooks, Lieut. Col. Benjamin Davis had occasion to lend further praise to Brooks when he heard of his fate. Davis said, "Sidney was positively one of my best men. He was one of very best flyers, well liked, in fact, he was admired and loved by every one."

OCT 23 1943

Welcome, Bombardiers

Kansas City, Mo

The Midwest welcomes the news that Negroes will be trained as bombardiers either in Del Rio, Texas, or at Ft. Dodge, Kas. Our pilots have received training in the deep South at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., and in the North at Selfridge Field, Mich. The Southwestern states are glad of the opportunity to play host to another group of aviation experts.

SEP 1943

Even more welcome is the news that there will be no separate training center for the bombardiers. American youth of all colors will be trained together how to drop the deadly bombs on enemy targets. This is the American way for which our boys are fighting.

Kansas City Call

SEP 17 1943

Tuskegee Field Cadet Is Third Ranking Gunner, East's Best

Norfolk. Va.
Journal & Guide

DEC 11 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala. —Aviation Cadet Othel Dickson of the Tuskegee Army Air Field led all flying cadets from the Eastern Flying Training Command in the National Fixed Gunnery Meet held on the AAF gunnery ranges along the Florida Gulf Coast near Eglin Field the last weekend in November.

In addition to becoming the top ranking aerial gunner among Eastern Flying Training Command cadets, the Tuskegee sharpshooter finised third among all AAF Training Command students.

"FLYING GUN PLATFORMS"

Fixed gunnery is the term applied to the process of teaching fighter pilots how to use their airplanes as "flying gun platforms." The armament on all fighter planes is mounted in the wings and noses in fixed positions, and in order to bring the guns to bear on the target, the airplane must be aimed.

U. S. fighter pilots are taught that their planes are actually "flying engines" with guns tied on. They are taught that they must learn to shoot their planes as well as fly them.

When Aviation Cadet Dickson rained down his shower of thirty calibre bullets in competition for the "Buzz Wagner" trophy, he was shooting against the best marksmen from the graduating classes of each of eleven Army Air Forces fighter pilot schools.

The eleven schools represented in the national meet were Craig Field, Ala., Napier Field, Ala., Spence Field, Ga., Marianna Field, Fla., Tuskegee Army Air Field, Ala., Foster Field, Texas, Aloe Field, Texas, Moore Field, Texas, Eaglepass Field, Texas, Luke Field, Arizona, and Williams Field, Arizona.

The trophy is named after one of America's first aces of World War II, Lt. Col. Boyd D. "Buzz" Wagner, who after a colorful combat career in the Philippine, Australian, and New Guinea campaigns, died in a crash near Eglin Field, Fla., on a routine flight.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd M. Wagner, parents of the late Lt. Col "Buzz" Wagner, flew from Johnstown, Pa., to Eglin Field, Fla., last Thursday to be guests of honor of the First Single Engine Fixed Gunnery Training Group, hosts for the national meet. Mrs. Wager made the initial presentation, personally handing the trophiesto A/C T. C. Hill, Aloe Field, Texas, and Lt. V. S. Brokaw of Foster Field, Texas, who won top national gunnery honors for aviation cadets and instructors respectively.

Better Times Ahead

Kansas City Call

Another indication of the disposition to apply to Negroes the same measuring stick used for others is the comment of TIME news magazine on the 99th pursuit squadron, which has been fighting in the North African theater of operations. The return of its commander to this country, was the occasion of the magazine "damning' these Negro flyers "with faint praise."

OCT 22 1943

, Mo.

Its comment drew comment, to which it made a reply which we are happy to quote, because of its universal application. TIME said: "TIME'S unofficial reports . . . . raised no question about the Negro's fighting ability. If the 99th's record has been only fair, the blame must be shared by the Army Command responsible for the segregated training and operation."

There in a nutshell is the case against segregation and discrimination. Knowledge is a pool to which all men in all ages have contributed. They should be free to draw from it equally. They are not when through segregation, the blind must lead the blind. So long as Negroes buy in the same market at the same price they must be given the same training so that they can earn at the same rate. Anything less is rank injustice!

47a-1943

Concert Artist Drops Violin For Airplane

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

JUN 18 1943

47a

CADET EVERETT A. LEE, outstanding young Cleveland concert artist, completed a tour of the south and returned to Cleveland to find orders to report to Tuskegee to begin training as an aviation cadet.

Above is shown Cadet Lee with his favorite Stradivarius. His father, Mr. E. A. Lee Sr., is a prominent Cleveland OPA executive.

Concert Violinist Learning To Be Sky Fighter For U. S.

JUN 18 1943

47a

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—(A N P)—Everett A. Lee, Jr., well known Cleveland concert violinist, like many other American youths has put aside his civilian profession for the duration in order to go into the armed service of the U. S. A. Lee is now an aviation cadet at the Tuskegee Army Air field.

The [illegible]-year old musical prodigy began his study of the violin at the age of eight and made his first public appearance one year later in Cleveland. Since that time Cadet Lee has appeared in concerts in various cities throughout the country, and has become widely known as one of the more popular young artists.

While enrolled in the Cleveland Institute of Music, the musician-flyer was awarded the Ranny Fund scholarship for outstanding work in music and the institute scholarship which was awarded by the Cleveland Institute of Music from which institution he was graduated with a bachelor's degree in 1941.

Receiving the coveted appointment as an aviation cadet a little over a month ago after completing a concert tour of the south, Lee was ordered to report to the Tuskegee air base for aviation training. Now instead of studying courses familiar to him such as counterpoint, harmony, violin, and the theory of music, Cadet Lee is confining his attention to subjects made more important by present day conditions. His schedule now includes air navigation, physics, mathematics, pistol, chemical warfare, theory of flight, customs of the service and a host of other subjects designed to fit the needs of future officers and pilots in the army air forces.

JUN 18 1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

LT. MC CULLIN WROTE LETTER TO HIS COACH

Tells Mentor He Flies So Others Might Be Free To Enjoy Life

By HOWARD B. WOODS
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

AUG 7 1943

ST. LOUIS. — The Mound City stands at her window tonight holding a lighted candle as she peers anxiously out into the blackness of the raging battle in Sicily seeking further news of her favorite son and hero, Lt. James L. McCullin, who for more than a week now has been reported by the War Department—missing in action.

As if the crack pilot of the 99th Pursuit Squadron realized impending misfortune, the former Kentucky State gridiron ace wrote W. H. J. Beckett, who coached Lt. McCullin during his days at Sumner high school:

"If you hear from Uncle Sam, before you hear from me, you will know they got me.

"I was flying that others might be free to live and enjoy life."

Steve Glass, proprietor of a barber shop at Vandeventer and Cook avenues who for many years trimmed the hair of the missing lieutenant, stated that on his last furlough here, he came in to visit him.

"He talked of his post-war plans," Glass said, "but he always added 'If I come back.'" Apparently Lt. McCullin had the matrimonial path in mind, according to the statements he made to his barber.

Edward Dawkins, driver for a local beverage company, told the Defender that McCullin had worked with him several summers on the truck during his time at Kentucky State. Dawkins said he was quite an energetic type who had an abundance of ambition.

George D. Brantley, principal of Sumner high school, said his first knowledge of the lieutenant's reported missing was when he saw it in the Chicago Defender. "Lt. McCullin was an outstanding citizen," he said, "with an impressive personality and a sterling character. He was very businesslike at Sumner and ranked among the best students at the school. As long as he is missing, it is a decided loss to the alumni of Sumner; the city and to the country."

Former classmates of the lieutenant constantly call the Defender headquarters asking for further information.

DOGFIGHT OVER SICILY BRINGS CASUALTIES

Defender
Chicago Ill

Pilot Who Downed Nazi Wins Sole Coca Cola In African Camp

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Two of our planes are missing in action.

JUL 24 1943

That curt, cryptic message from North African Allied headquarters told this week of the initial loss by the 99th Pursuit Squadron of two of its fighter aircraft in a dogfight against superior Nazi forces over Sicily.

Although outnumbered, the Negro flyers got credit for positively bagging one Nazi, and probably damaging and destroying two others.

This was the battle in which Lt. Charles Hall of Brazil, Ind., was credited with getting a Focke Wulf 190, the first enemy plane downed by the 99th flyers.

Believe One Pilot Safe

The identity of the two missing pilots was not revealed by the War department, the practice being to notify their kin first.

At least one of the aviators of the missing planes is believed to be safe.

Disclosure of the first losses by the 99th came with additional details of the enthusiastic reception which the flyers received on their return from the bomber-escort mission designed to soften up Sicily for the Allied invasion which began last week.

JUL 24 1943

Present on the flyers return besides General Dwight Eisenhower, were General Spaats, British Air Marshal Cunningham and General Jimmy Doolittle, the man who led the American raid on Tokio.

Gets Coca-Cola

Lt. Hall and Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the squadron were warmly congratulated by the visitors.

Eisenhower asked Lt. Davis about his father, Brig. General Benjamin O. Davis, highest ranking Negro army officer. The Allied supreme commander in North Africa expressed general satisfaction over the work being done by the 99th.

He questioned Lt. Col. Davis on the rations his flyers have been getting, and Davis said that there was enough but not enough variety.

JUL 24 1943

Lt. Hall was given a party by the other pilots and was awarded possession of the only bottle of Coca-Cola in the outfit—a prize which had been saved for the first pilot to down an enemy plane.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

TECHNICIANS OF AIR CORPS

END TRAINING

FEB 6 1943

300 Sent To Army Flying Fields To Instruct Ground Crews

CHANUTE FIELD, Ill.—More than 100 of the young Negro civilians have completed their training as instructors in aviation mechanics at Chanute Field here, and have been assigned to various flying fields of the Army Air corps, it was learned this week.

Comprising six units of 17 men each, these young men although without army status and in civilian clothes, will act as technical instructors in the air corps, and train enlisted men in the many duties required of ground crews in the servicing, repair and maintenance of the various types of U. S. Army aircraft.

Some of the civilian instructors have been here at the Army Air Forces Technical school for periods up to eight and nine months and have mastered the courses which now enable them to impart this technical aircraft knowledge to the enlisted men who will act as ground crews to keep our fighting planes in the air and in tip-top condition.

FEB 6 1943

It was explained that every large bomber requires from 12 to 14 men in the ground crew to service and maintain it, and the smaller planes about six men. Each Pursuit Squadron has its own ground crew, and, as in the case of the 99th Pursuit Squadron at Tuskegee, scores of men are needed to service and repair the big ships.

FEB 6 1943

Col. John Robinson, veteran airman and an instructor for some time here at Chanute field, has been assigned to the field at Gulfport, Miss., it was reported, and with him will be about 16 other civilian instructors. One of the Chicago instructors, Joseph Howard, is a carburetion specialist.

Other fields where the graduate instructors have been assigned, include, Goldsboro, N. C.; Biloxi, Miss.; Lincoln, Neb.; Amarillo, Texas, and Wichita Falls, Texas. Assignment of well known young Chicagoans who have completed their training, is as follows: S. M. Davis, Biloxi; Leonard Evans, Gulfport; Joseph Howard, Amarillo; Radcliffe Woolford, Gulfport; Lloyd Wheeler, Amarillo; Clifton Pierce, Amarillo; Tom Watson, Lincoln and Robert Taylor and William Reed, both at Wichita Falls. Reports from the men in the south indicate they are being well treated and find great interest in their work.

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Recover Body Of Lt. Hill D. C. Flyer

47a

EXCLUSIVE

The body of Lt. Nathaniel Milton Hill, 24, 1717 Ninth Street, Northwest, was recovered from Lake Huron this week and returned to Washington where funeral services were conducted today (Friday) at the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church.

JUL 3 1943

Lt. Hill, who enlisted in the Air Corps February 25, 1942, was graduated from the Army Flying School at Tuskegee October 1942. He was sent to Selfridge Field, Michigan, where he was attached to the 332nd fighting unit and a member of the 100 fighter squadron.

According to information received from Hill's mother, Mrs. Irene Hill, her son and Lt. Luther Blackeney, of Sanford Florida, went up on a routine flight on the morning of June 9th, in the midst of a heavy fog.

JUL 3 1943

Flying a Two Place Basic Training plane, the officers were never able to get the plane high enough in the air to bail out. The crash occurred just 50 feet from Hill's home at Oscoda, Michigan.

Hill was the second District flyer to become lost from the Selfridge Field. The other was Lt. Wilmeth Sidat-Singh, whose body was recovered from Lake Huron a few weeks ago and buried here at Arlington Cemetery.

A former Tribune newsboy, Lt. Hill was a graduate of Cleveland, Phelps and Armstrong High School. He later entered Hampton Institute, and was matriculating there when he enlisted in the Army Air Corps.

He was married to Miss LaVerne G. Lee, 1514 First Street, Northwest, January 1 of this year.

His mother visited him while he was at Tuskegee and was with him at his new home in Oscoda.

Burial was in Arlington Cemetery, with military honors.

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Says P-40 Warhawks Defective

Senator Claims Ships Are Not Up to Standard

JUL 16 1943

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON —(ANP) — A Truman investigating committee says that the P-40 Warhawk, the type of plane being used by the 99th Pursuit squadron in North Africa, is exhibit "A" of its charge against the Curtis-Wright corporation that the company "was producing and causing the government to accept defective and substandard material."

The sensational charge, made public Saturday in the report of the sub-committee headed by Sen. Mon C. Wallgren (D) of Washington, also carried the accusation that the army air force had a hand in palming the materials off on the government.

Planes Obsolete

So serious are the charges, the report says, that the matter has been turned over to the war frauds division of the department of justice for action against the Curtis Wright corporation.

JUL 16 1943

The report revealed that not only was the army using these planes widely which it had earlier said were "relatively obsolete when we entered the war," but that the company had had "spectacular and unprecedented success" in obtaining the second greatest amount of war contracts for the construction of airplanes.

The army has since agreed to cease the production of P-40s and to substitute a better type plane, one which has not yet been selected.

P-40 fighters, however, will be used for replacements and for training purposes.

Inspectors Removed

The committee charged further in its report that falsification of tests, destruction of records, improper recording of tests, the forging of inspection reports, failure to segregate substandard and defective material, failure to destroy such material promptly, all had been some of the methods employed. Army inspectors who had the temerity to report these defects, the report said, were subsequently transferred to other assignments. Leaky engines were reported but the inspectors were generally removed.

JUL 16 1943

The report admitted that an army board of investigation had investigated the matter and had "made the same findings of fact as the committee," although their findings, so the Truman report says, tended to minimize the seriousness of the situation at the Wright plant. Charges against the army officers, the report stated, were not investigated by the army probers.

Meanwhile G. W. Vaughn, president of the Curtiss-Wright corporation, took issue with the Truman report here in Washington, and charged the latter with making over-statements.

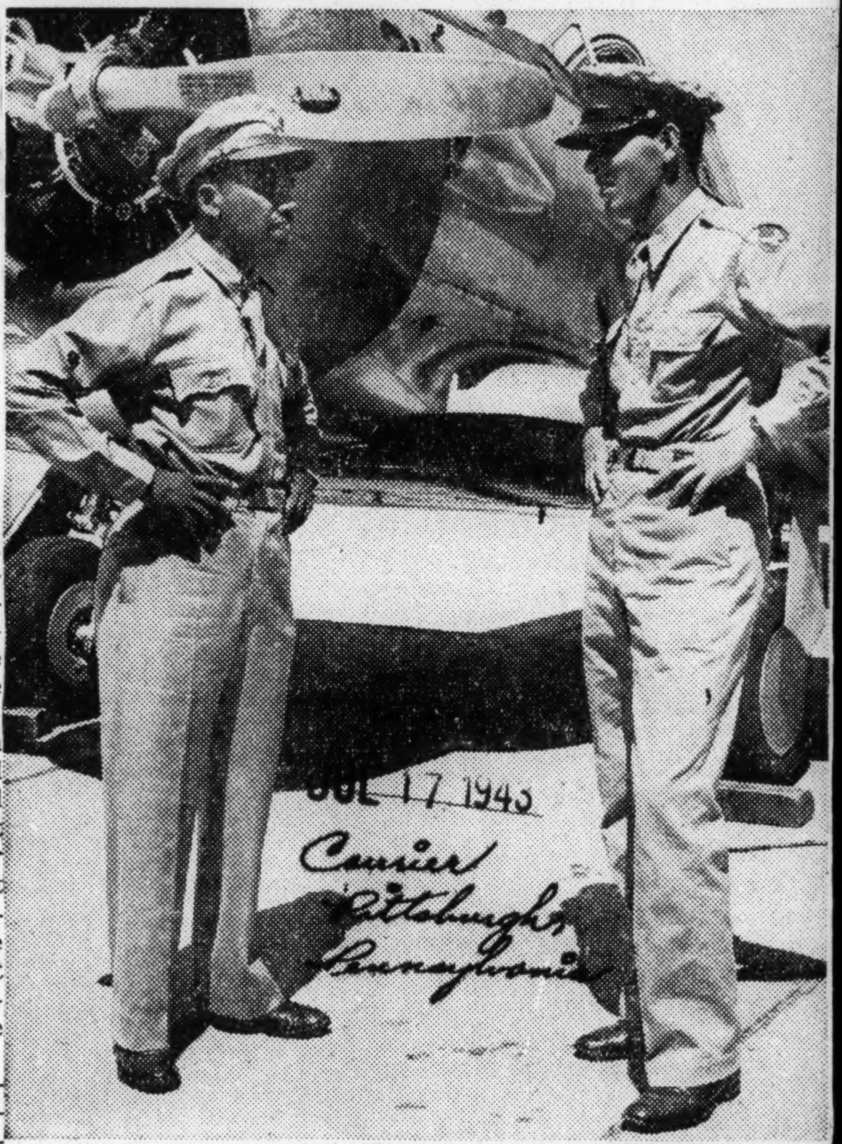
Performed Valuable Work

"In its report the Truman committee referred to the Curtis P-40 fighter planes as follows," says the Vaughn statement: "These planes were usable and have performed valuable work on the various fronts but were really obsolete at the beginning of the war and of much more limited value than other fighting planes produced by other American companies and by the British."

"Yet the P-40 has been continually modernized since our entry into the war and it has been the backbone of the United States army fighter squadrons, with a very successful record in every theatre of the war, having shot down from three to 20 enemy planes for every P-40 lost.

"We believe that this criticism serves a useful purpose in calling attention to things which can and have been remedied in the ever-pressing task of producing military equipment of the quality and quantity which the war demands."

LIEUTENANTS RECEIVE SILVER BARS



JUL 17 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh,
Pennsylvania

Second Lieutenant Cassius A. Harris, III (left) and Second Lieutenant Donald M. Conkley, who were recently promoted to the rank of first lieutenant, discuss the many problems that confront them on the flight line at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Lt. Harris, son of Mrs. Evelyn V. Harris, Philadelphia, Pa., attended Temple university from 1938 to 1939, and West Virginia State college from 1939 to 1941. He is an engineering officer of one of the basic flight training squadrons at this base.

JUL 17 1943

Lt. Conkley of 362 Somer street, Leetonia, Ohio, is also an engineering officer at this base. He received his commission at the Air Corps Administration Officers' Candidate school of Miami Beach, Fla.

Montgomery, [illegible] Advertiser
October 4, 1943

Worker Is Honored

TUSKEGEE, ALA., Oct. 3.—(AP)—Commendation from a high Army officer came to R. C. Daniels, negro civilian worker at Tuskegee Army Air Field, today.

Maj. Gen. T. J. Hanley, Jr., commanding general of the Eastern Flying Training Command, cited Daniels for saving the life of a negro pilot from a burning plane.

General Hanley said Daniels risked his life to rescue the pilot, Lieut. Andrew H. Doswell, "in keeping with the best traditions of the American spirit of unselfish sacrifice."

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

4 Fighter Group Men Study P-39's

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—Four officers of the 332nd Fighter Group, which uses P-39 Airacobras in instruction at the Bell Aircraft Corporation's engineering schoil at Buffalo, N.Y.

OCT 16 1943

They are Lieut. Robert L. Smith of Houston, Texas; Second Lieuts. William M. Gordon, Jr., of Mobile, Ala.; Elmer L. Gordon of Portsmouth, Va., and Quitman C. Walker of Indianola, Miss.

47a-1943

Fails To Return From Air Battle In Sicily

Journal and Guide Norfolk, Virginia

Missouri Flier Took Part In Mission

Lt. Hall Shot Down First Enemy

JUL 24 1943

By THOMAS W. YOUNG

Journal and Guide War Correspondent

(By Cable, Passed by Censor)

(Copyrighted. Reproduction Expressly Forbidden)

WITH THE 99TH FIGHTER SQUADRON, NORTH AFRICAN BASE—Lt. James L. McCullin of St. Louis, Mo., has been identified as one of the fighter pilots of the 99th Pursuit Squadron reported missing in action following action against an air field in Sicily. The Missouri flier failed to return from the same mission on which Lt. Charles B. Hall, of Brazil, Ind., shot down the first enemy plane credited to a Negro pilot of the United States Army Air Forces. Operational reports, taken from briefs reported by the fliers, listed both planes as lost, with one pilot probably safe. Returning from a mission to Castelventrano airfield in Southwestern Sicily, to which target the 99th Squadron, led in flight by Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., commanding officer, the planes were attacked by German Messerschmitt 109's and Focke-Wulf 190's. Lt. Hall blasted one plane, which hurtled to the ground and crashed into the Sicilian earth. The plane was reported as not bursting into flames. "It raised a big cloud of dust," Lt. Hall reported.

YOUNG

The Germans pursued the Warhawk fighters from Sicily to Pantelleria. Two of our planes suffered slight damage, according to first reports. Later it was announced that two planes out of the 12 did not return to base and had not been reported downed on friendly territory. It would not have been difficult for a pilot to slip from the sight of his comrades since the action, which took place on July 2, lasted for 25 minutes, during which violent dogfights ensued.

Three other squadrons also took part in the attack on the airport. The 99th was given the number 1 spot in the protection for a flight of Mitchell twin-engined bombers.

The 99th took an active role in the preparatory softening up of Sicily for the invasion which got underway on July 11. At last reports the American-Canadian spearhead was within sight of Enna, communications center and a major objective, while the British, with its immortal Eighth Army, victors in the African desert, neared Cantania, vital seaport.

Reports from the front showed that Axis resistance was crumbling on both fronts. Italians were surrendering in droves. In some sectors, it was reported, only the Germans put up a fight.

Meanwhile on Monday morning Rome, capital city of Italy, was bombed for the first time by a large formation of American bombers, which attacked in waves. A Rome statement said the attack was "of great violence" and that "numerous victims" were counted. American airmen, who encountered no fighter opposition reported only inaccurate anti-aircraft fire from the defenders of the city.

Orders to the fliers, who were long and specially trained for the mission, instructed that church sites and religious institutions in the Eternal City "must on no account be damaged." Vatican City, and the churches, St. John Lateran and Santa Maria Maggiore were given bombing sanctuary. Many airmen of the Catholic faith were picked for the expedition.

Army Air Force Policy Defended

Courier

Pittsburgh Pa.

Under Secretary Patterson Answers Charges Made by Judge Hastie Regarding Use of Negro Personnel in Aviation Units

APR 10 1943

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 8—The status of the Negro in the Air Force, spotlighted several months ago by the resignation of Judge William Hastie from the War Department, was pushed into the limelight again this week as Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson issued a detailed statement of army policy on the question.

The Undersecretary's statement was issued in reply to a number of questions submitted by Wilbur La Roe Jr., (white), chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Most of the questions submitted by Mr. La Roe were based upon the same Air Force policies which prompted the Hastie resignation.

FOLLOWS PATTERN OF POPULATION

In his reply the Undersecretary indicated that army policy affecting induction was to have a proportion of Negroes in the army in proportion to their representation in the national population as required by the Selective Service and Training Act.

The questions and their answers follow:

Q. What is the policy of the Air Corps in this respect?

A. Negro organizations are being established in each major branch of the service, combatant as well as non-combatant. Assignment to the air and ground forces must be in the same proportion as stated above.

Q. Has the army made special effort to provide modern facilities for the training of colored personnel for the Air Corps?

A. The same modern facilities have been provided at the Tuskegee Air Force Flying school for the training of Negro pilots as are provided at the schools which train white pilots. At the Officer Candidate school and the technical schools Negroes attend the same schools as white candidates.

MAJORITY FAIL TO QUALIFY

Q. Is there any truth in the allegation that colored soldiers are assigned to menial jobs and that they are not given an opportunity to be trained for the manning of fighter planes?

A. The army follows the general principle that it can attain its maximum strength only if its personnel is properly placed in accordance with the capabilities of individuals. All enlisted men on their entry into the service are graded by the army general classification test and the mechanical aptitude test.

Because of the proportionately larger number of highly technical duties required of men in the Air Force, War Department policy provides that 55 per cent of them qualify by passing the G. C. test with a grade of 100 or better.

The remaining 45 per cent assigned to the Air Forces who do not meet this qualification are assigned to comparatively unskilled jobs.

Experience to date has shown that while 47 per cent of all white enlisted men meet this qualification, the same minimum standard is met by less than 10 per cent of the Negroes inducted.

As a consequence, in order to absorb the same proportion of Negroes as exists in the total population, a small percentage of them who enter the Air Corps are qualified for entrance into the technical school, the large majority must be assigned to unskilled tasks.

LIMITED TO FIGHTER GROUPS

Q. Will you comment on the allegation that Negro soldiers in the Air Corps are given an opportunity to rise as high as the command of a single engine pursuit ship, but not permitted to man heavy bombers?

A. It is true that Negroes are so far being given the opportunity for training on single engine pursuit ships. It was believed wise to start by training a fighter group, where only one air man per plane is involved, namely the pilot.

To train a heavy bomber group, it is necessary to train in addition to the pilot, a navigator, a bombardier, an aerial gunner, a radio operator, an additional mechanic and several other technicians.

Because of the technical and other features present in flying, it was decided to proceed toward the formation of the more complicated units after having gained experience with the simpler units.

TO GET COMMANDS WHEN QUALIFIED

Q. It is alleged that at Tuskegee the Negro men in training for the Air Corps are commanded by white officers and that no attempt is made to provide colored officers. Will you kindly advise whether colored officers are available and, if so, why are they not used?

A. While white officers have charge of training at Tuskegee, Negroes will be given command duties as soon as they qualify for them. (The Undersecretary then cited instances where this is being done.)

Q. It is alleged that at Tuskegee separate mess arrangements for the white officers and colored men and a very undesirable segregation of the races.

A. There is one officers' mess at Tuskegee, to which all officers are eligible. However, it is customary for the white officers, when they do not eat at home, to use the facilities of the Post Exchange. These facilities are available to all military personnel on the post.

NO SEPARATE WHITE SQUADRONS

Q. It is alleged that certain squadrons, known as "Aviation Squadrons (Separate)" have been established for the colored soldiers but that they serve no specific military need and have never had a defined function. It is further alleged that these men perform odd jobs of common labor and that there are no equivalent white organizations in the Air Corps.

A. The reason for establishment of Aviation Squadrons (Separate) is given above. They provide a place for men in the Air Forces who do not have the qualifications for more technical work. The duties they perform are to a large extent labor and housekeeping jobs that have to be done at every Air Force base.

While there are no white units actually named "Aviation Squadron (Separate)", there are many white headquarters squadrons which perform the same type of duties at Air Force installations.

STUDYING USE OF SERVICE PILOTS

Q. It is represented that the Air Corps is rejecting Negro applicants for weather officers, though the army admits a need of a large number of weather officers.

A. A sufficient number of qualified Negro applicants have been secured and are in training to support the Negro flight group now in training. When new Negro units are organized, there will be opportunity for additional weather officers.

Q. It is alleged that a number of well qualified applicants for appointment as army service pilots have been rejected; that two were requested to report for training and sent home as soon as it was discovered that they were Negro.

A. No Negroes qualified to be service pilots have yet been used by the Air Forces. To date there have been few applicants for this duty, but this number will increase as individuals now attending school become qualified. The use of qualified Negro service pilots is now under study.

DROPS BAN ON MEDICAL OFFICERS

Q. It is stated that Negro medical officers are not admitted to the principal school of aviation medicine at Randolph Field.

A. Until February 1, Negro medical officers at Tuskegee were not in residence at the School of Aviation Medicine at Randolph Field, but since that date Negro medical officers have been assigned to residence study there. This schooling was originally covered by extension courses and commutation to Maxwell Field. When this situation was called to the attention of Air Force headquarters, the change was made in order that Negro medical officers might have the same opportunity as white medical officers.

OTHER BRANCHES UNDER STUDY

Q. Will you be so kind as to indicate what the policy of the army is with respect to the future induction and training of Negro soldiers for service in the Air Corps?

A. The Air Forces are now bringing the Negro fighter squadron to strength, including ground crew, personnel, and will train them to carry out their combat mission.

The question of training additional units, including a bomber group, is now under study. The Air Force will continue to use Aviation Squadrons (Separate). These squadrons will be constantly screened to secure personnel for technical training.

TACTICAL AIR UNITS BEING TRAINED

The units above described will not fill the complement of Negro personnel assigned to the Air Forces. In addition to the units being supplied to the Air Forces by the arms and services, others are being organized into air base security battalions, which are trained by the ground forces.

These battalions have important tactical duty of guarding air bases. They will perform this duty not only in the continental United States, but also in overseas theaters.

You may be assured that the War Department will exert every effort to safeguard the interests of the white and Negro personnel alike and that full use will be made of the capabilities of each individual in furtherance of our war effort.

Sincerely yours,
Robert P. Patterson,
Undersecretary of War.

99th Ready To Leave For Combat After Farewell Talk By Commander

Chicago Illinois Defender

(Special to the Chicago Defender)

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — The famous all-Negro 99th Air Squadron will go into combat soon — probably in North Africa!

New indications that the ace colored pursuit pilots based here will soon be on their way overseas came this week from several sources.

FEB 27 1943

Virtual corroboration was given by the new commandant of the Tuskegee air field here, Lt. Col Noel F. Parrish, when copies of his farewell speech to the 99th were released to the press.

It was also learned that African tropical equipment has been issued the flyers in the 99th. (From London, too, the Chicago Defender's Bureau reported reliable reports from unimpeachable sources that the 99th was due for action.)

Farewell Talk

Lt. Col. Parrish's talk to the officers and men of the 99th told them openly: "All of you know that any time you may be sent into an active combat zone. Since none of us can foretell the day of your departure from this station and this command I shall take this occasion to speak a few words of farewell."

It is believed that Judge William Hastie's recent resignation in protest against discrimination in the U.S. Army and especially in the Air Corps spurred the decision to ship the men of the 99th into a combat zone.

Another factor leading to the decision to put the 99th into action has been the creditable manner in which colored engineer battalions of aviation units are carrying on in front line service in the North African sector against formidable Nazi opposition.

General At Field

Lt. Col. Parrish's speech, made in the presence of General Benjamin O. Davis, on a visit to the air field, and Davis' son, Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., who commands the 99th, is a remarkable statement of the status of the Negro in the aviation arm of the U.S. army.

It is especially significant since Lt. Col. Parrish is a Southerner.

The field commander, who replaced Col. Frederick Von Kimble, told the men of the 99th:

"You have a double responsibility. As a squadron of the Air Corps, you are responsible to the army of your comrades and to the nation which shelters those you love. As the first flying Negro fighting unit in history, you are responsible to all the darker people of America who look upon you with pride.

"Some of you may feel that you do not wish to carry this double responsibility, that you do not wish to represent any group other than the whole nation. You may say, and with some justification, that you do not care for the extra attention and publicity you receive because you are Negroes, and that you prefer to be considered simply as pilots or mechanics or technicians or whatever your military classification may be.

Sees Handicap

"But whether you like it or not, you are already well known and you will become famous. Some of us have tried to protect you from too much notice and from too much uninformed criticism or praise. But we have only partially succeeded. Whether you, or anyone, likes it or not, you will soon be the most widely discussed Squadron in the entire Army Air Forces.

"Of the handicaps you have suffered, this will perhaps be the greatest of all. For reasonably, or unreasonably, there are great differences of opinion as to yourselves and your equipment, and how well you can stand up to enemy bombs and machine guns. Whatever you do will encourage some and discourage others.

"Whatever you do badly, will encourage those who hate you, and that includes the Germans and Japanese who hate you most of all, because your mere existence is some proof of the sincerity of this nation in trying to provide opportunity for all people. Whatever you do well will encourage those who have fought for a square deal for you who have insisted, sometimes against great odds, that the chance you are given should be a fair chance.

Fair Chance

"I know personally that the pilots, in their training, have received a fair chance, and I know that the determination to give you a fair chance meant a great deal of extra effort by all concerned. I do not argue that all Negroes everywhere in this country are given a fair chance at everything, and you are not expected to try to prove any such thing. Many people, white and colored, who speak and write about the problem of race in this country, become very indignant about a great many situations, sometimes about situations which involve you.

"It is not my purpose here to dispute with them or to say their indignation is not justified. But it is my purpose to advise you that for you to allow such agitation to seriously disturb you and to destroy your efficiency and your concentration on the job you have to do, would be tragic for everyone, including yourselves.

"For the job you have is one of the biggest jobs in the world. It is the job of proving, against a mass of opposite opinion, that you are capable of doing the best that is expected of you. You still have many handicaps to overcome. There are still many complications to be ironed out by those officers who must plan for you, and you must yet master many problems which will make the problems of the past seem simple.

Some Will Die

"Because of lack of opportunity in the past, you may have come to think of success in terms of opportunity. You have been told that all you need is a chance. But you must have more than that. Having the opportunity, you must come to think of success in terms of effort. You must realize most of all, that the road to glory is not easy.

"I read somewhere today how well-meaning friends have complained that white boys have been flying and fighting and winning medals while you have had to keep on training. That is true, but they failed to mention that white boys have been sweating, bleeding, and dying while those medals are being won. You know that, and you know that if you get into combat some of you will die. You know also that far too many people honestly think you are not capable of dying bravely when you are on your own.

"I must face with you the fact, that you, as Negroes, have not been particularly encouraged to be heroic in the past. You have been more often taught to be patient and to endure misfortune. Those are excellent abilities, and I hope you can continue to cultivate them and keep them. But there is a time to keep quiet and a time to fight, and the time for you to fight may come soon. Not to fight for me, for the Air Corps, for Negroes or even for yourselves. I hope you will think of yourselves as fighting, first of all, for this nation, not because it is a perfect nation, from your standpoint, but it is our nation, an improving nation and the best nation of all.

For All Mankind

"I hope you will think of yourselves as fighting for more, even, than a nation. I hope you will remember that you are fighting for all mankind. This is more than a war between nations. It is a war of a march toward freedom against a march toward slavery. All of humanity is involved in this war, regardless of color or creed. And most of humanity will be grateful to those who play a major part in winning it, regardless of color or creed.

"It is your privilege, for the first time, as Negroes, to play a part that is by no means a low or subservient part. You now have a top role. And you must win in that role just as any other group of men must win, by unselfish vigorous effort and determination.

"I can only remind you in the midst of all these problems of race that seem so serious now, and that seem so much less serious when we are hard at work or in the presence of more fundamental things like death or heroic living—I can only remind you that we must not forget the human race, to which we all belong, and which is the major problem after all. The fate of all of us is bound up with the fate of humanity, and the fate of humanity is still, and perhaps always, in the balance. You are, first of all and most important of all—MEN. No one can ask more than that you acquit yourselves like men. Each of you, and all of us, must prove, first of all, that we are capable of the dignity and the nobility of manhood; that we can, when the occasion calls for it, fight and die for a cause that is greater than any one life, or any one man, or any one group of men.

Hard Work

"You cannot expect to be one hundred percent successful. Air Corps squadrons have run into serious trouble before and will do so again. For this squadron to fail in any mission would be doubly unfortunate but it could happen through no particular fault of your own.

"There is only thing you can make certain beyond any doubt, and that is, that any failures, however serious or slight, occur through no fault or your own. And certainly you must prove, for your own pride and consciences, that you do not let each other down, through any lack of serious, concentrated effort.

"War is worry, as well as heroism, and a monkey wrench is just as much a weapon as a machinegun. No pilot, who is worthy of the name, will fail to fight for a loyal and efficient crew, and no real crew will neglect anything which will give a fighting pilot faith in his fighting plane. It must be one for all and all for one. It must be work and study and more work. And then, whatever happens, you can always hold up your head anywhere in the world and say quietly and with no necessity for boasting,

---

"I WAS A MEMBER OF THE 99TH."

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

SPAULDING PRAISES TUSKEGEE

DURHAM, N. C.—(ANP)—After a recent visit to the Tuskegee Army Air field, C. C. Spaulding, Durham, insurance executive and banker, expressed great satisfaction with the unit and its commanding officer, Col. Saul Parrish.

JUL 3 1943

Nazi Broadcast Reveals It!

GERMANS FEAR NEGRO AIRMEN

Pittsburgh Pa. Courier

By RANDY DIXON

LONDON, July 1—(Via Cable)—Nazi sources are expressing great alarm over the presence of colored American pilots in Africa. Warnings reveal an eloquent confession of one aspect of Nazi morale with their cautioning that colored airmen are ferocious and bloodthirsty.

JUL 3 1943

Nazi-controlled radio, broadcasting by way of Hilversum June 17—in the Dutch language—told Holland listeners:

AMOUNTS TO HIGH PRAISE

"The first Negro pilots have arrived in French North Africa. Extremely ferocious and cruel, they will be entrusted with the most risky and dangerous of the Allied Air Force."

High Allied sources regard the broadcast as a precious tribute to the fighting qualities of Negro Americans. Some recalled Negro heroics against the Germans in the first World War and opine that, since then the Nazis have maintained the greatest respect for and fear of them as soldiers and fighters.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

5 Pilots Of 99th Back In U. S. From Combat War Zone

NORFOLK—Five pilots recently transferred from the 99th Fighter Squadron in Italy to new duties in the United States have all arrived in this country, the Journal and Guide learned Tuesday.

Three of them—Lieuts. Charles W. Dryden of New York City, Louis R. Purnell of Philadelphia and Graham Smith of Ahoskie, N. C.—arrived by plane over the South Atlantic route last week.

VISITS NORFOLK

The other two—Lieuts. Walter I. Lawson of Newtown, Va., and Lee Rayford of Washington, D C.—came by ship early this week They had been put on a boat at a North African port along with a number of others awaiting air transportation when plane facilities became over-taxed.

Lieut. Smith was a visitor in Norfolk last weekend. He was granted a three-week leave before taking up his new duties. It is presumed that the other had been granted like furloughs.

Lieuts. Rayford and Lawson were in Newport News Tuesday. Rayford went on to Washington to visit his mother, and Lawson to Blackstone, Va., to see his wife who is teaching there. Both will report to Mitchell Field this week before starting their furloughs.

ON ALL-AMERICAN

The exact nature of assignments for these five fliers who went overseas with the 99th last April and fought with it through from June 2 to October 2 was not learned.

Two possibilities are assignment to either the 332nd fighter group as flight leaders or the instructional staff at Tuskegee Army Flying School or Selfridge Field.

Transfer to posts in the United States was regarded, however, as a promotion or reward for these five fliers. Dryden, Rayford and Lawson were named two weeks ago on The Journal and Guide's "All-America Flight of Negro Fighter Pilots" by War Correspondent Thomas W. Young who was attached to the 99th until September 2

47a-1943

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

Alabama Runs Tuskegee Air Base, And, Brother, It's Really Awful!

Special

JAN 2 3 1943

47a

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—"Tuskegee" Air Base.—It was the name that fooled us—connoting as it does "opportunity for Negroes." Had this military reservation been called "Alabama" Air Base we would have known just where we stood. It's miles from Tuskegee Institute campus, over very bad dirt roads and so far as any possible connection with the Institute is concerned might just as well be in Alaska!

The location is important because the South has vigorously resurrected the main issue of the Civil War—state rights. And today, the South is winning out on that issue. Over anything the War Department or Commander-in-Chief of Army and Navy might say—Alabama is dictating the policies at Tuskegee Air Base. As proof we offer:—

Colonel Frederick Von H. Kimble has not been "ousted as commanding officer of the 99th and 100th Pursuit Squadrons at the Army flying school here." Colonel Kimble has carried out the wishes of Alabama. Every paper in this section is ringing with his praises. Letters have been written by "prominent citizens" and sent to Washington. He has been promoted to the rank of Brigadier General, commanding the entire army wing in this area with Tuskegee Air Base part of that wing.

His successor at Tuskegee Air Base, Lt. Colonel N. F. Parrish, serves under him. Not one step can Colonel Parrish make without Brigadier General Kimble's approval. Men sometimes are "kicked upstairs," but this doesn't happen to be the case here. And Lt. Colonel Hazard, reported to be his henchman, is still Executive Officer at the Base. A former Commander of Tuskegee Air Base was "ousted." At one time he placed certain soldiers to guard supplies waiting shipment in a nearby village. Upon it being reported to him that these soldiers had been molested, he sent out orders that "these soldiers of the United States army are stationed on guard duty with orders to shoot anyone who, in any manner, interferes with them."

Such a statement concerning Negro soldiers offended the powers of Alabama, and shortly after this incident, the Commanding officer was "removed" to a distant state.

WHITE OFFICERS WILLING

It is true that Captain L. M. Sparks, finance officer, has not been permitted to function in this capacity. Captain Sparks is one of the senior men in the United States Army Finance Department. For twenty-five years he has served, handling the Army's money. Because of his long record of efficiency and extensive experience, Captain Sparks was sent to take charge of the finances at this new air base.

The United States Army Finance Department could not assign Captain Sparks to a desk on the Post. Only the Commanding Officer of the Post could do that. White junior officers in the department were perfectly willing to work under Captain Sparks. Post authorities told him to stay away from the Finance building. Alabama had spoken!

Every young Negro lad admires Lt. Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr. When the War Department sent him to Tuskegee all of us felt a thrill of pride. As a matter of course he operated from the regular Headquarters. But, not for long. Lt. Colonel Benjamin Davis was placed "way out on the outskirts of town." He commands exactly thirty-three flyers, their mechanics and—that's all! So far as the Air Base goes, the superior of this West Point graduate—son of a General—is the Post Executive, Lt. Col. Hazard, whom, I am told, is a CCC Camp graduate.

There are certain very definite army regulations regarding the line between officers and enlisted men. For reasons of its own, Alabama doesn't like this line and so in this state it is erased and the "color line" substituted.

JAN 2 3 1943

COL. DAVIS HAD TO WIN

Some time ago Louis Armstrong played at Tuskegee Air Base. The huge hangar was packed. Directly down center was a roped-off section of seats. To these seats were escorted the few white officers who attended. Also in this section sat white enlisted men and other people. The seats, however, were not filled. Colored officers arriving with their wives sat wherever they could find places with the soldiers. It is said that when Lt. Colonel Davis arrived, he stood until a soldier seeing him, rose and gave him his seat. All this time there were vacant seats in the reserved section. Here, as in the matter of "white" and "colored" signs, Army ruling was broken, but Alabama rules upheld.

Negro M.P.'s in Alabama do not carry arms. White Military Police all over the country are armed. According to martial law, only an M.P. has jurisdiction over a soldier. He cannot be arrested by a policeman or state trooper. Instead, I have it on good authority that every white man in the village of Tuskegee is deputized, therefore authorized to carry arms. This is Alabama's way of avoiding "trouble." Regarless of what happens, the Negro soldier has not the slightest protection. He knows the M.P.'s are not armed.

It is well for us to be rudely shaken out of our complacence. We all read about these things, but since being in the "deep" south I've experienced the "feel" of it. The other day, while walking down a street, strictly attending to my own business, I approached an intersection and paused, uncertain which way to go. A rough voice said "Move on, nigger!" I looked up. The man was talking to me. Something exploded inside my head! Across the street were several soldiers, among them an M.P.

Under any other sky in the world I would have called that M.P. and he would have come. But, in this case, I simply "moved on," thanking God the soldiers hadn't heard. Had I been in real trouble, anyone of those soldiers would have crossed the street to have helped me and he would have been shot down like a dog.

JAN 2 3 1943

USO CLUB MILES AWAY

The soldiers at Tuskegee Air Base prefer staying inside the army reservation. In spite of their very large number they have no Service Club. Last week, the basement of the dining hall at Tuskegee Institute was turned over to the U.S.O. that they might use it for a recreation center. This, however, is many miles from the base.

The two Special Service officers (colored) are alert and do all they can. A moving picture theatre has just been completed. Dances are held in the recreation hall. The hall may be small and the floor not so good, but the orchestra, composed of soldiers, can hold its own anywhere. It's decidedly tops! The men, as a whole, are tops. They know the eyes of the country are on them and in every phase of their work they are determined to make good.

JAN 2 3 1943

Fortunately, the soldiers bear no ill will towards officers because of conditions which are obviously imposed upon them. And this feeling extends to the white officers. Several colored officers who have been here many months told of how, when they first arrived, there was open and pleasant fraternalizing between colored and white officers. Alabama doesn't like that sort of thing. So, it stopped. The matter of the "Officers' Club" needs a little clarifying. There is no real Officers' Club

---

Memphis Tenn. Commercial Appeal
February 7, 1943

NEGRO GETS RECOGNITION

Lieut. W. D. Casto Praised For Efficiency System

47a

Lieut. William D. Casto, formerly of Memphis, and once an employe of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., here, recently has taken over command of the 40th Aviation Squadron, an all-negro detachment at the Myrtle Beach Bombing Range, Myrtle Beach, S. C. According to Sergt. Bert Cumby, negro, also of Memphis, Lieutenant Casto has instituted a system of squadron efficiency regarded by visiting inspectors and finance officers of the base as one of the best in the Third Air Force.

Memphis Tenn. Commercial Appeal
February 14 1943

Error Was Made In Casto Story

In a story in The Commercial Appeal last Sunday detailing the advancement of Lieut. William D. Casto, former Memphian and commander of an all-negro detachment at Myrtle Beach, S. C., the headline incorrectly stated that "Negro Gets Recognition."

Lieut. Casto, former employe of Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., is not a negro, and The Commercial Appeal regrets the error.

Lieutenant Casto is in command of an aviation squadron and his work in instituting a system of squadron efficiency has been praised by visiting inspectors.

The Union
Cincinnati, Ohic

ARMY EXPANDS PROGRAM!

FEB 1 1 1943

47a

The War Department announced today expansion of the program for training Negro combat fliers. A Group will be formed composed of one Squadron now being trained and two new ones which are in the process of organization. It will be provided with all the supporting services not only those of the Air Corps, but of other arms and services such as Signal Corps and Quartermaster Corps.

FEB 1 1 1943

Negroes are being trained throughout virtually the entire Technical Training Command of the Air Forces, as well as at the Air Forces Officers' Training School at Miami.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Pilot Is Killed While Training

FEB 1 3 1943

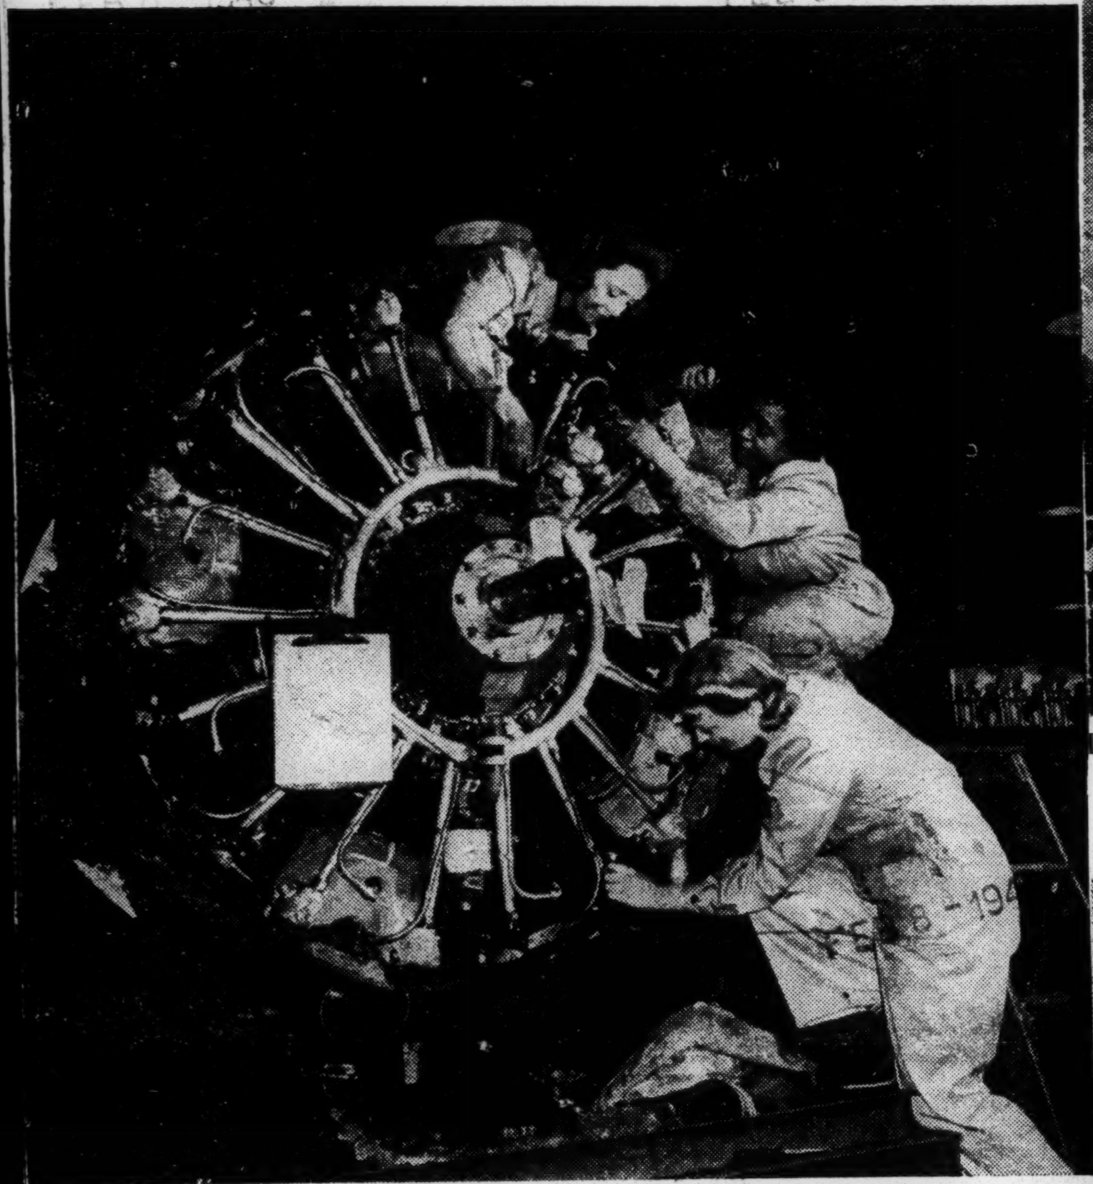
TUSKEGEE, Ala., Feb. 11—(By Capt. Nugent E. Brown for ANP)—Lt. Richard Davis, 25, pilot, was instantly killed in an accident here Saturday night. The accident occurred on a routine flight with a pursuit airplane. A board has been appointed by the commanding officer to investigate the cause of the crash.

Davis, whose home was Fort Valley, Ga., was a former student of Hampton Institute. Also, he was a pilot before entering the army, having been an instructor for the Robertson Aircraft corporation at Lambert Field, Mo. The deceased pilot is survived by his father, Henry Davis, farmer, of Fort Valley, and a brother, Moses Davis, civilian mechanic on duty at the primary flying school, two brothers at Fort Valley, one brother at Coconut Grove, Fla. Burial was at Fort Valley.

PM
New York, N. Y.

Girl Mechanics, White and Colored, On the Job for American Airlines

FEB 8 - 1943



Working on a motor in an American Airlines hangar at La Guardia field, top-to-bottom—Lillian Flekenstein, Jeannette White, and Jane Price. American keeps 'em flying with the help of whites and Negroes, men and women, working together. Their policy contrasts with other war plants, which turn away skilled Negroes. Negroes are accepted on equal footing into Air Lines Mechanics Association, collective bargaining agent for Air Lines.

In American Airlines' engine accessory department, Louise Williams and Christian Kroner are skilled employes.

Birmingham Post
Birmingham, Alabam

NEGROES SENT INTO AIR CORPS BY RATIO

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson said today that Negroes are being assigned to the Army Air Forces in proportion to the total number of Negroes inducted into the Army.

In a letter to Wilbur La Roe Jr., chairman of the Committee on Civic Affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, Patterson answered questions dealing with alleged discrimination against Negroes in the air forces.

"It is the policy of the Army, as required by the Selective Service and Training Act, to have a proportion of Negroes in the Army in proportion to the Negro population of the country," Patterson said. "... assignment to the air and ground forces must be in the same proportion. . . ."

APR 2 1943

New Warrant Officers at TAFS

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

JAN 30 1943

These nine enlisted men of the Tuskegee Army Flying School personnel have qualified to become warrant officers, the first to be selected direct from the ranks at this station. They took the oath of office on January 20. Warrant officers wear bronze shoulder bars and are addressed by other soldiers as "mister." The men and their former ranks, left to right, are: Tech. Sgt. Edward Edgehill of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Technical Sergeant Hollis T. Arnold of Muskogee, Okla.; Corporal Glenn L. Head of Madison, Ga.; Master Sgt. William H. Johnson of North Woodbury, N.J.; Staff Sgt. Richard Rutledge of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Staff Sgt. Robert R. Snead of Cleveland, Ohio; Sgt. Burks Esaw of Detroit; Master Sgt. Timothy Calder of Waterville, Maine, and Master Sgt. Chalmers P. Smith of Bentonia, Miss.

World-Telegram
New York, N. Y.

Negro Fighter Unit Bombed Pantelleria

By the United Press.

ALLIED HQ., North Africa, June 14.—An American Negro fighter unit participated in the battle of Pantelleria, marking the first appearance of their race in overseas aerial combat, it was announced today.

The Negroes, who flew P-40 Warhawk fighter-bombers, arrived in North Africa only recently and went through a month of special training.

Lt. Col. B. C. Davis, Jr., of Washington, son of Brigadier General Davis, is commander of the squadron. The ground crews also are Negroes.

1943

47a-1943

NEW MORALE SPURS NEGRO AIR TRAINEES

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

Give West Pointer Credit for Spirit.

[This is the second of two articles by Roscoe Simmons on the training of Negro airmen at Selfridge field, Mich.]

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Selfridge Field, Mich., Oct. 30.—No greater transformation has marked the preparation for war than that at Selfridge field, where as late as April of this year talk had it that training for air fighters, particularly colored trainees, had broken down.

The story of the revolution in both training and morale which is on at Selfridge is the story of a new spirit which now animates the base command, but it is particularly the story of the vision and heart of one man, Col. Robert R. Selway Jr., a West Pointer, who was called in to do a job of morale engineering.

"Time and Understanding."

Col. Selway came to Selfridge in May. "Nothing is wrong," he said, "nothing that a little time and understanding can't right." Col. Selway, a professional soldier, brought patience and discipline with him.

Within five months a dispirited, almost aimless set of men became so alert for training and action that to assist Col. Selway in hurrying his program Col. B. O. Davis Jr., ranking colored combat officer in the United States army, has been called from overseas to become executive officer at Selfridge and to assist in strengthening teamwork hard to duplicate in the war.

At Selfridge is the 332d fighter group of colored fighters and the 332d headquarters group. Embraced in the group are the 100th, the 301st, the 302d, and the 99th squadron. The 99th is in Italy, where it covered itself with glory.

Here also is the 44th aviation squadron, commanded by Capt. Joseph A. Murphy, said by army officers to be as dashing an outfit as aviation has produced.

High Praise for 44th.

It was the 44th of which Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis Sr. said his travels and inspection had failed to show him its superiors anywhere. Its Irish captain has infused into his men a resolute spirit that crops out in all they do.

Hidden away at Selfridge and a few miles away at Oscoda, the gun range grounds, are outfits but slightly known, but all a part of the new spirit of the command. "All in all," said Col. William Boyd, base commander, "I will put them up against any and all comers."

But an important unit here, the supervisory unit, is the 403d fighter squadron, composed of fighters returned from the front. Many of them are heroes, some wearing citations for bravery, and all of them noted for skill in the air. It is this unit that has been assigned the task of lending personal supervision to the development of the 332d. The 332d considers the presence of the 403d, composed entirely of white comrades of the air, a rich opportunity in their military career.

Progress in Teamwork.

At Selfridge there is a teamwork which indicates the kind of progress going on beyond common knowledge of the country. War alone seems to be the problem here.

"There is no absence of technical capacity in the colored flyer," said Col. Selway, "but having had no parent unit to give birth to a program, it was necessary to start from scratch."

Col. Selway went back to scratch. When he got to Selfridge he held a meeting with his men. "If you have the heart," he said to them, "show it. If you wish to fly and shoot as you fly, I will go all the way with you. If you wish to play on my team, you will have to go to bed nights, rise early, and give all you have to flying."

The sleepy woke up, talkers got quiet, and the race problem went out of the window. Until June the average aviation group flew around 500 miles per month. That was flying on the ground.

Knows His Men.

"Now," said Col. Selway, "we average around 2,000 hours per week."

From room to room he walked and showed every instrument known to flying. He knew every name among the flyers and he knew who among his men was all there and who was struggling to reach the standard.

In two days during the week flying reached 660 hours. It was as if the entire 332d meant to take off for Italy or Japan the next day. "I cannot tell you," said Lt. James Pughlesy, adjutant of the 332d, "what a change has come over our men within two or three months." Lt. Pughlesy is a veteran of the regular army, having served 25 years in the famous 25th infantry. He seems the invaluable figure of the group.

"I told the men," said Col. Selway, "that where there had been no background we would have to make up for it, and we would have to do that scientifically." He then began to assemble at Selfridge the latest and finest equipment.

"Nothing," he said, "was ever so bad with the material end here that it could not be remedied within a week, once aptitude and willingness showed on the field. I don't know when I shall be called elsewhere, but if I should go, I will leave behind me potential fighters worthy of the sky."

Equipment, Men Ready.

The hangars, the concrete runways, the great array of planes stretching the field, the crowded shops and classrooms filled with flyers who sit glued to their seats, together with every device produced to increase the qualifications of trainees, plus a personal touch from every authority on the field, all indicate that, long war or short, flyers from Selfridge will be ready for the test of combat.

"Accidents at Selfridge," said Col. Selway, "are almost things of the past." As he spoke the telephone rang. "Where did you land?" he asked. "No wires, no trees! Of all things!"

One of his men had run out of gas and settled his ship on the highway. "He wants no help," he said to Lt. Pughlesy. "All he wants is some gas."

Old aircraft at Selfridge are off the field for repairs, and the hangars and runways are lined with the latest models, all new, and almost all of them P-39s, sparkling beneath the October sun.

Some 90 planes are moving or about to move and alert young men are keen for the lift. A part of the 403d had been withdrawn to Oscoda so that the trainees could try it alone for a day or two.

"Keep Eyes on Guns."

One hundred and twenty-seven flyers had made Col. Selway's "team." Above every classroom door and on the fields is found Col. Selway's motto for his men: "Keep your eyes on the damned guns!"

This thought, and thoughts similar to it, and the language of war, brought in to Selfridge, has stirred the flyers. Asked where he was born, a flyer, not more than 20, answered:

"Born in Alabamy; raised on the pecan;
Not goin' back to 'bamy 'till I've seen Japan."

In honor of his air boys Col. Selway wrote a song, "The Air Corps Roar." Both the words and music are his. "I wrote this song," said Col. Selway, "before I reached Selfridge, but like all good music, it will do anywhere." Lt. Pughlesy said one of the flyers had taken the song up with him and called it "Music in the Air."

SICILY VETERAN

HEADS COLORED SELFRIDGE UNIT

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

Trains More Negro Combat Pilots.

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Selfridge Field, Mich., Oct. 23—It was more silver lining than cloud for Selfridge field when Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr. was inducted as executive officer of the 332d fighter group.

Lt. Col. Davis.

All Selfridge put on its best for the occasion, glad that the more pleasant hour had struck for a place harassed by a chain of circumstances that got out of hand.

Talk of Sicily Action.

Visitors who had come in for the event dwelt on the recent exploits of Col. Davis in the Sicilian campaign, but there were those who felt that the war department was anointing him with an authority new to the customs of the army.

But the day was not entirely one for Col. Davis, regarded by many as the model West Pointer. A father stepped into the scene, and that father went back to the Spanish American war. It was for that conflict that Col. Davis' father, Gen B. O. Davis Sr., enlisted as a private from Washington, D. C.

Now he was present as a brigadier general on the staff of the inspector general of the army, an official witness to the induction of his only son as an executive officer in one of the great air fields of the country, this beginning a new era for the American Negro soldier.

Star in His Eyes.

At dinner a Negro soldier, waiting on the officers and their party, had fixed his eyes on the star which decorates the expensive shoulders of Gen. Davis. He seemed blind to all else about him. He tipped a cup of coffee, which spilled over two officers.

"Excuse me, please do," he said, a great smile playing a chubby countenance. "But I was just looking. I heard talk of the colored general. I have seen him; now I'm ready for any questions either Hitler or the Japs want to ask me," is the way he put it to comrades.

A dozen officers' hands went up in forgiveness and he went his way rejoicing.

Col. Davis was ordered home from Sicily to undertake the training of American flyers. He had led the 99th squadron in a campaign nothing short of an eye-opener to the command in Africa. Within four months the 99th had proved all talk of unreadiness of the American trained Negro flyers for combat against any foe was but dumb doubt.

Win Fellows' Respect.

The conduct of the 99th in the air won the admiration of their fellow American flyers and the surprised respect of the British.

"They were the gallant boys," said Col. Davis, "alert under fire, brave enough, holding back nothing. Americans thru and thru, and I hated to leave them, but I'll be seeing them soon again, I hope."

Of his own exploits Col. Davis would say nothing, with him it was "we" for even the little he would consent to tell of the conduct of his comrades.

"We landed at Casablanca in April," he said, "and we were busy with the enemy until we reached Sicily. We undertook every mission assigned to us and it is said we failed in none."

Daily Deadly Task.

Engagements took the 99th from Tunis to the Italian boot, and for 11 days over Pantelleria the 99th fighters threw their ships thru the air in ceaseless combat. Dive bombing, the deadliest warfare in the air, became a daily dask. "They didn't miss and they didn't flinch," said Col. Davis.

"Every opportunity was afforded us," he said, "to show what we could do, and we stand on the record." Col. Davis was sent home to ready other colored flyers for air war in both the Atlantic and Pacific.

From the hard engagement over Pantelleria the 99th moved to defensive routine patrol, but soon began to provide escort of protection for the movement against Sicily. It became a major air support unit, and as such participated in the battle of Salerno.

For 13 days Col. Davis and his fighters covered the movements and landings of the troops bound for Sicily. "Those are days we can never forget," he said. "We had 37 pilots, and every pilot was an American soldier.

"We saw all the soldiers engaged with us, the French, the British, and the utterly fearless Gourmerllers, but we had every reason to be proud of the boys in the uniform of the United States," said Col. Davis.

When early in September the allied forces began its movement on Italy the 99th was called on to cover. "It was the highest hour for our fighters," said Col. Davis

---

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

DAVIS HOME, LAUDS '99th'

SEP 18 1943

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., until September 2 commanding officer of the 99th Pursuit Squadron—which saw action against the enemy over Pantelleria, Sicily and Italy—came back home last week. He is now at Mitchell Field, N. Y., headquarters of the First Army Air Corps, on temporary duty, prior to assignment to the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field, Mich., which is soon to be sent into active combat duty. There it is reported, he will become commanding officer with the rank of full colonel.

At a War Department press conference—attended by leading Negro publishers—Colonel Davis, accompanied by his father, Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis and Truman K. Gibson, Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, gave for the first time, a complete running account of the experiences of the

They were up in the thickest of the conflict. They knew that they had done well and had won the attention of Gen. Eisenhower's command.

When the 5th army effected its crossing and moved into Italy the 99th moved in with them. The American command gave every evidence of pride in the skill and faithfulness of its daring colored fighters in the air.

New Col. Davis is back as chief executive to Col. Robert Selway Jr., commander of fighter units at Selfridge field. He will train the 332d fighter group, which is the heart of men at Selfridge getting ready for air combat.

"Two things," said Col. Davis, "I would like to speak of. First, the morale of our boys both as exhibited in Africa and in Italy; then, the comforting gallantry and kindness of Josephine Baker, a great American girl, who took us to her heart and became our friend, our monitor, and our comrade. Our country will owe much to her, and in Africa she was all the world to us."

The entire base at Selfridge, without race or color distinction, gave Col. Davis a soldier's reception, the warmest yet seen at this field.

No one, not even Col. Davis' soldier-father, seemed happier than base commander Col. William Boyd and Col. Selway.

overseas.

SEP 18 1943

NOW SEASONED FLYERS

Wearing the Air Medal with an Oak Leaf Cluster—awarded him August 20 for more than 20 flying missions over enemy territory—Colonel Davis said: "The men I left behind are seasoned veterans. After the middle of July, we had a squadron of pilots whose fondest dreams were no longer about the girls back home. Instead, they dreamed about a German pilot who would be foolish enough to slug it out in aerial combat."

The "99th," Colonel Davis told the press conference, had had more than 800 sorties over enemy territory and had demonstrated the ability of the Negro pilot to live up to highest standards of the Army Air Forces.

Describing what he termed the "most interesting engagement" experienced by the squadron, which took place when it was on a bomber escort mission to Sciacca, Italy, he said: "Our ships were close escort for the bombers that day and we were right with them . . . We absorbed the attack of the Me-109's, Macchi 202's and FW-190's and, on that day, we lost a couple of aircraft. We definitely destroyed one of the enemy, probably destroyed a couple more and damaged three. Incidentally, on that day, General Eisenhower visited our field, and during his stay congratulated Captain Hall, one of our flight commanders, on his and our first confirmed victory."

NO LONGER "EXPERIMENT"

Davis pointed out that both the men in the squadron and high ranking officials of the Army Air Forces looked upon the "99th" as an experiment to determine whether the Negro flyer was mentally, physically and emotionally fitted for the rigors of combat flying. He said: "Just what a Negro pilot in a P-40 would do when anti-aircraft fire burst about his ship or when an enemy aircraft was strewing cannon shells and machine gun bullets about his cockpit, was a matter that was really conjecture in the minds of some of these high ranking officers in the AAF."

REALIZED RESPONSIBILITY

"It was a very significant fact," the younger Davis declared, "that all members of this organization were impressed at all times with the knowledge that the future of the Negro in the Air Corps probably would be dependent largely upon the manner in which they carried out their mission.

ACCEPTED CHALLENGE

"The fact that his unit was an experiment became a challenge to him . . . Every man in the '99th' will go through any ordeal concocted by combat or garrison existence to assure the successful completion of the experiment."

With his description of the record of the "99th" in combat, Davis left no doubt of his conviction that the 27 Negro pilots in the squadron and the ground crew personnel supporting them had fully justified the experiment.

GROWTH OF RELIGION

Davis declared that, with an increase in their experience as fighter pilots, there developed among the men a "growth of religious feeling." "Toward the end of the Sicilian campaign," he stated, "I had very little trouble getting together an audience for the visiting chaplain, Colonel Pinnel. He always had a nucleus of pilots to speak to. Lieutenant Bowling, one of my pilots, was shot down by flak in the Mediterranean and forced to stay in his dinghy for 24 hours, and he said to me: 'You know, Colonel Davis, when you sit out there that long, shivering from cold at night and trying to hide from the heat of the sun by day—always hoping against hope that somebody is going to see you and pick you up—you just pray automatically.'"

MEMORABLE EXPERIENCE

Tracing the experiences of the "99th" from the time it left New York April 15, Davis painted a vivid picture of the growth of the combat team from inexperienced flyers to seasoned veterans. He said that as senior officer aboard the transport which carried the squadron to North Africa, he had responsibility not only for his unit but for some 4,000 Negro and white soldiers aboard ship. The squadron landed at Casablanca and then later was sent to the town of Fez in French Morocco where they stayed a month in intensive combat training under the guidance of Colonel Philip Cochran—famed in the comic strips as the "Flip Corkin" of "Terry and the Pirates."

ENTERTAINED BY "JO" BAKER

Describing Fez as "one of the most delightful spots ever visited by us," and as containing "everything a young man away from home a young man could wish for," Colonel Davis said: "The officers of the squadron were made socially secure in the town by the visit of Josephine Baker. Miss Baker insisted on presenting several different groups of our officers to the prominent French and Arab families in the town. All in all, Miss Baker was largely responsible for our most pleasant social relations in the town of Fez."

On May 31st the squadron took off for Cape Bon peninsula and shortly after the first of June were engaged in their first combat over the Mediterranean islands of Pantelleria and Lampedusa, he said. "Every man in the squadron," said Davis, "went into action with more than 250 hours' flying experience in a P-40 plane."

After the Pantelleria show, the squadron had nine days of active combat as bomber escort over Sicily, in strafing enemy communication lines and in dog fights with enemy fighters. After the middle of July they moved up to Southern Sicily and engaged in combat work over Italy. Now the squadron is engaged in training replacements prior to new combat assignment.

NO BIAS SHOWN

"From the time this squadron left the continental limits of the United States to the present time, there has not been a single circumstance or incident which could be regarded as discriminatory by the most rabid race leader," said Davis.

"Our field," he said, "was often visited by high ranking officers of both the British and American army. Among the visitors were such men as Air Marshal Cunningham, Lord Trenchard, General House of the 12th Air Support Command, General Doolittle, who led the mission over Tokio, and General Spaatz, commanding general of the Northwest African Air Force."

An Opportunity Well-Earned

Daily World Atlanta, Georgia

AUG 8 1943

News of the sky-rocketing success of the P-40 Warhawks, piloted by the first Negro fighter squadron in the history of the world, is eloquent testimony to the fact that Negroes can, if given the opportunity, make a valuable contribution in all phases of modern warfare.

Blasting down death and destruction in one of the heaviest air operations in the history of warfare, these colored fighting men of the air attacked heavily fortified Pantelleria, and from this island off the coast of Sicily they brought the Tuskegee Army Air Field out of the experimental stage to prove the true worth and value of Negro pilots in the present war.

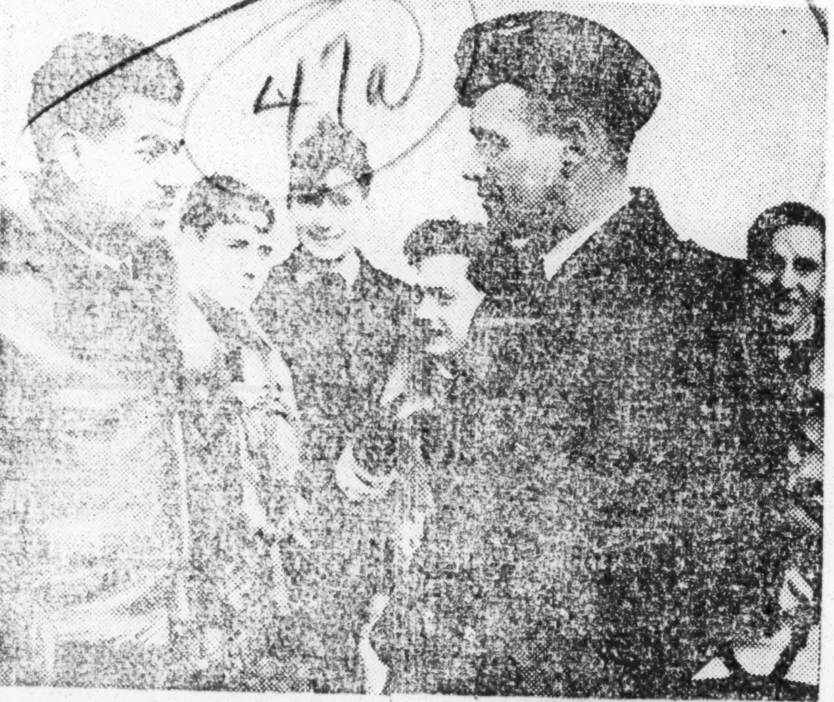
On many previous occasions we have directed attention to the ability of Negroes to advance and profit in the skills and techniques in all fields of endeavors, and that their only obstacle is man-made, rather than inherent and native. We contend, as we always have, that proscription and circumscription based on color and racial origin not only serves to stifle and discourage initiative, but weakens the whole frame-work upon which social progress is built.

We congratulate these valiant fighters and plead for the further advantages to which other Negroes are justly entitled, not merely in the air operations, but in all phases of American life. True ability and devotion to ideals and to country deserve no less.

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

THE LUFTWAFFE'S NEMESIS

47a



With the record of 32 Axis planes knocked out of combat, many of them being from the vaunted Luftwaffe, Group Captain A. C. Malan was elevated to wing commander at his fighter station somewhere over there last week. He holds the Distinguished Service Order and the Distinguished Flying Cross and bar. The 32-year-old South African is shown chatting with Flight Sgt. V. Bunting of Kingstown.

TRAINING

Chicago. Ill Time

Experiment Proved?

SEP 20 1943

To Washington last week came tall, lath-straight Lieut. Colonel Benjamin O. Davis Jr., until recently commander of the 99th Fighter Squadron, the Air Forces' first all-Negro fighter outfit. At a press conference West Pointer Davis, who led the 99th in Tunisia and Sicily, said that in his opinion Negro pilots had made the grade, and training them should no longer be regarded as an experiment.

In one of their first encounters, Colonel Davis said, the 99th had two planes shot down, but got one German fighter definitely, two probables and three damaged. On every bomber escort mission his men met superior enemy forces and managed to break a little better than even. His conference finished, Colonel Davis, son of the Army's only Negro general officer, Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis Sr., departed. His new command: the 332nd Fighter Group, to be formed of three Negro squadrons.

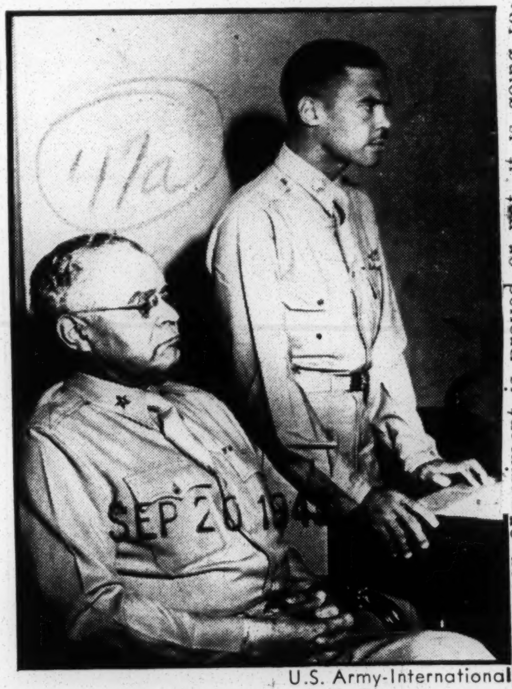
So little operational data on the 99th had reached Washington that it was impossible to form a conclusive opinion about its pilots. It has apparently seen little action, compared to many other units, and seems to have done fairly well; that is as far as anyone would go. But unofficial reports from the Mediterranean theater have suggested that the top air command was not altogether satisfied with the 99th's performance; there was said to be a plan some weeks ago to attach it to the Coastal Air Command, in which it would be assigned to routine convoy cover.

In any case, the question of the 99th is only a single facet of one of the Army's biggest headaches: how to train and use Negro troops. No theater commander wants them in considerable numbers; the high command has trouble finding combat jobs for them. There is no lack of work to be done by Negroes as labor and engineering troops—the Army's dirty work. But the American spirit of fair play, which occasionally devotes some attention to Negro problems, would be offended by a policy of confining Negroes to such duty, and the Negro press has campaigned against it. There are plenty of Negro combat troops, but almost none of them have been tested under fire.

Most thoughtful Army officers probably would agree that the Negro will never develop his potentialities as an airman or any other kind of soldier under the system of segregation in training. But the Army is convinced, rightly or wrongly, that any major effort to break up the system now would touch off outbreaks of race prejudice and hobble the war effort.

Whether the Negro pilot-training experiment is proved or not, it is going to continue. Negro cadets will begin medium-bomber training next month in classes with white cadets. But their squadron, to be activated on July 1, 1944, will be all-Negro, the first in the Air Forces. This squadron, too, is an experiment, and will be one until the question as old as U.S. independence is answered: is the Negro as good a soldier as the white man?

47a



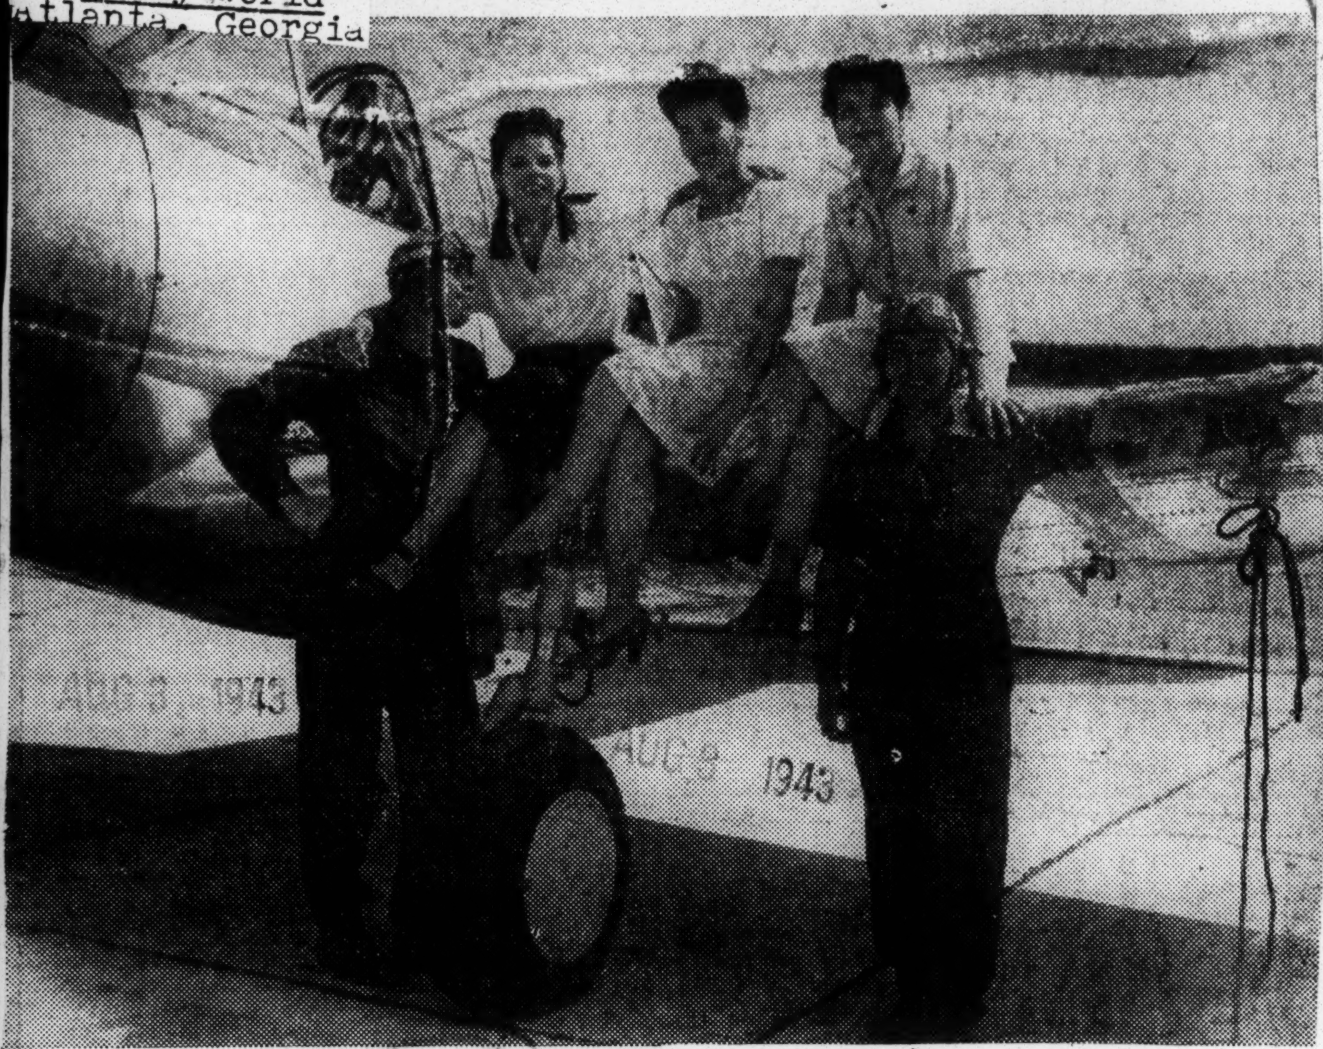
U.S. Army-International

DAVISES, FATHER & SON
The Army's head still aches.

47a-1943

Beauties And New Birdmen At Tuskegee

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



AUG 9 1943

Pictured above are two of Tuskegee's latest pilots and a bit of feminine pulchritude. Shown from left to right are 2nd Lt. Jack Daniels, Holsclaw, Spokane, Wash.; Mrs. Celestine Monclova, New York City, Miss Gwendolyn Norman, Chicago, Ill., Miss Marian Hervey and 2nd Lt. Cornelius G. Rogers of Chicago, Ill. Miss Hervey is the fianecee of Lt. Rogers . . . which probably accounts for the smiles.—(Photo by the Tuskegee Army Air Field)

47a

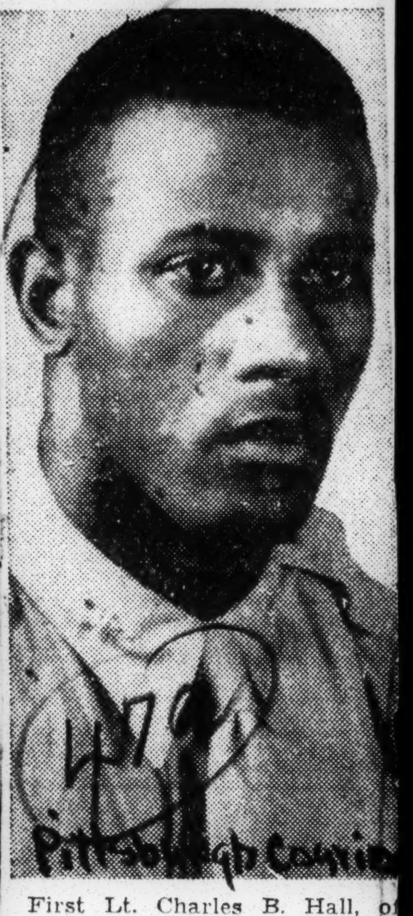
AUG 9 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

JUL 3 1943

SINGH'S BODY FOUND—The body of Wilmeth Sidat Singh, former Syracuse University football and basketball star shown above just after he received his wings at Tuskegee Arm Flying School, was discovered in Lake Huron by Selfridge Fiel (Mich.) authorities, according to a radio announcement Sunday night. Singh bailed out from his plane, while on a routin training flight over Lake Huron in early May. He was seer leaving the ship but he apparently got trapped in his parachute gear and did not get out in time to avoid drowning in th lake. He was an outstanding grid passer, a stellar cage ac who performed professionally for the Rens and for the Lichtmai Bears. He was a police officer in Washington before enlisting.

DOWNED NAZI



47a

Pittsburgh Courier

First Lt. Charles B. Hall, o Brazil, Ind., has the distinctio of being the first colored Ameri can airman to get an enem plane in combat. Lieutenan Hall scored his triumph las Thursday, while protecting a group of Mitchell bombers, tha were blasting the Italian bas on the island of Sicily. H downed a German Focke-Wul fighter that tried to intercep the bombers over the target.

JUL 10 1943

West Indian Ace Missing After Raid On Germany

Pittsburgh Pa. Courier

47a

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Courier War Correspondent)

MAR 20 1943

LONDON, Mar. 18—(Via Cable)—London's West Indian community feels grea anxiety concerning the news that the ace West Indian pilot, Flying Officer H. S. Etienne had failed to return after an offensive operation over Germany.

The 19-year-old airman was a native of the island of St. Lucia, where he had a brilliant academic career at St. Mary's college before entering the local Civil Service.

AMONG FIRST CONTINGENT

Shortly after the British Air Ministry decided to recruit pilots among the colored Caribbean population, dozens of young Negroes arrived in this country to undergo intensive training at Air Force training quarters. Among the first contingent was Etienne, who distinguished himself so much that he was selected for a fighter pilot and awarded the much coveted Royal Air Force "wings."

After a number of flights as a Spitfire pilot against the Luftwaffe over Britain, Etienne was assigned to a bomber squadron and participated in several attacks upon Germany and enemy occupied territory.

Etienne recently was given the King's Commission as a flying officer, the first West Indian Negro to receive the distinction. Etienne who was a slim, dashing fellow was exceedingly popular with his fellow officers and a man who was highly respected and esteemed as a fearless pilot.

He was also very popular among his fellow West Indian compatriots in London.

MAR 20 1943

Army To Expand Its Program For Training Negro Fliers

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta. Ga.

47a

FEB 2 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—The War Department announced this week expansion of the program for training Negro combat fliers. A group will be formed composed of one Squadron now being trained and two new ones which are in the process of organization. It will be provided with all the supporting services, not only those of the Air Corps, but of other arms and services such as Signal Corps and Quartmasters Corps.

Negroes are being trained throughout virtually the entire Technical Training Command of the Forces, as well as at the Air Forces Officers' Training School at Miami.

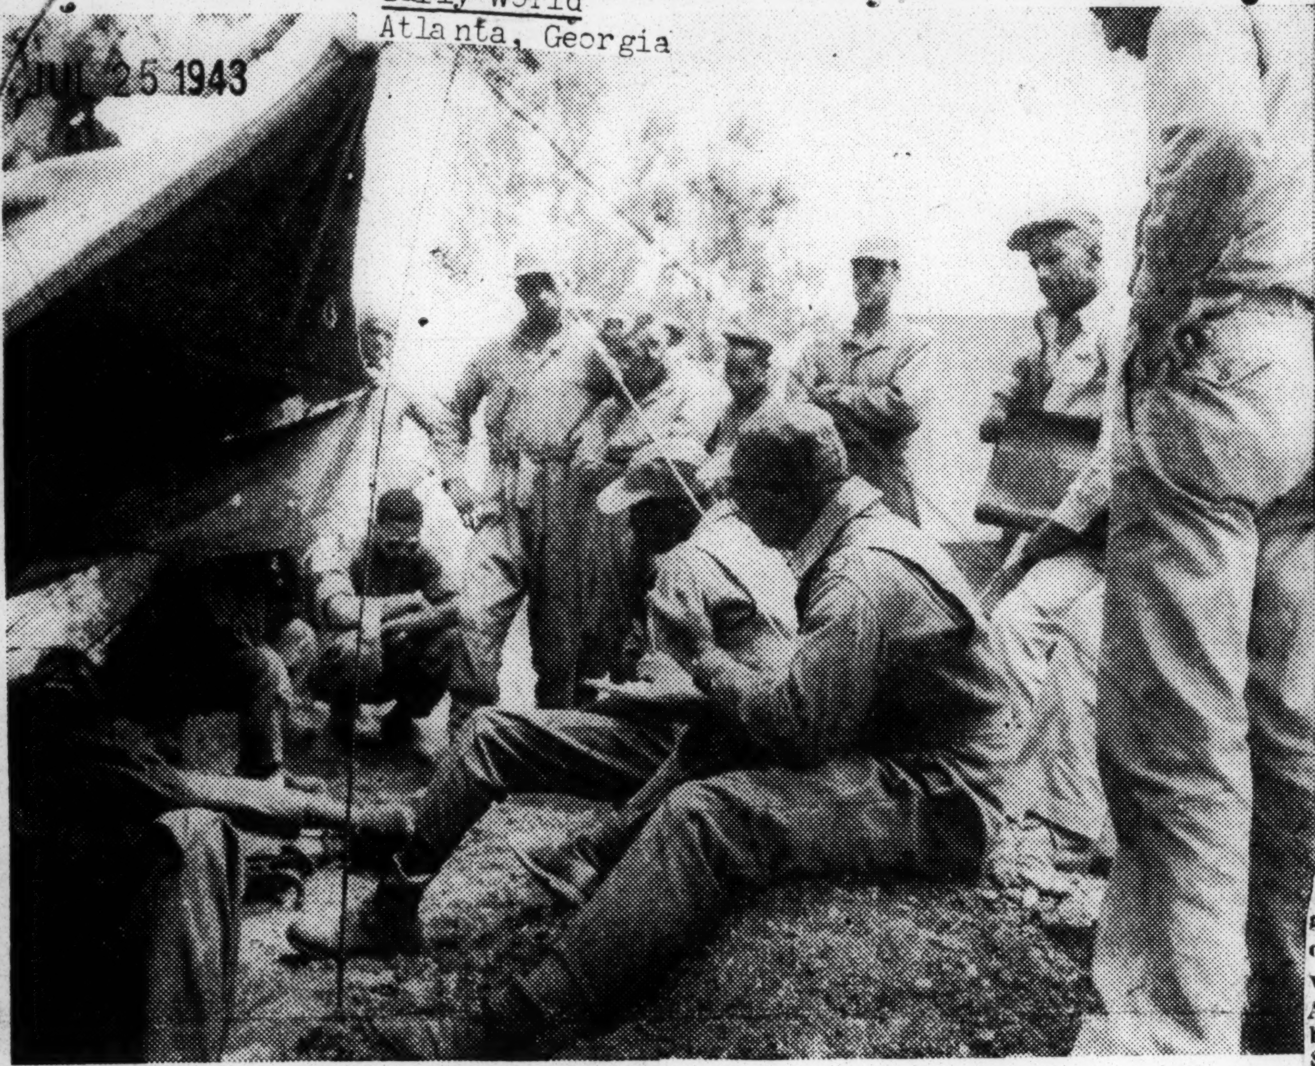
The Army now has a number of large Negro units, including several Negro Infantry and Cavalry regiments; tanks and tank-destroyers battalions; and important units of Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, Anti-arcraft, Engineer Medical Corps, Chemical Warfare Signal Corps and Quartermasters troops. In addition to the units here are innumerable smaller ones of great aggregate importance Substantial Negro contigents are to be found in all arms and services of the Army at home, in all major Expeditionary Forces abroad, and in almost all the technical and service schools, military and civilian, run by the Army or under contract to it.

The role of the Negro in civilian War Department employment is also an importment one. Statistics from the field installations are not available, but figures of the Department Administrative Services show that of a total of 47,644 civilian employees at the present time, 9,569 are Negroes.

As Captain Briefs Heroic Black Warhawks

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

JUL 25 1943

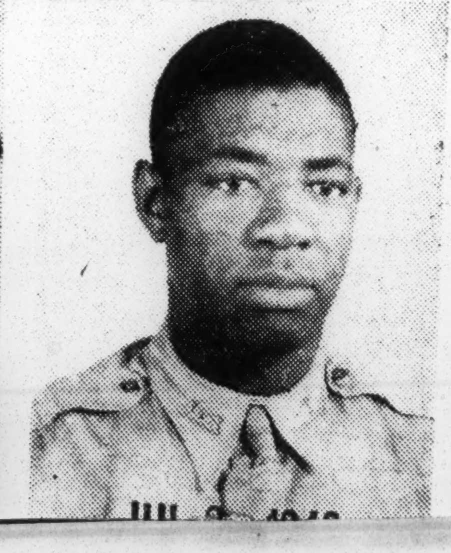


SOMEWHERE IN NORTH AFRICA—(SNS)—Captain George S. Roberts of Fairmount, West Virginia, seated in foreground wiwth two-bar insignia on shoulders is shown here as he "briefs" pilot members of the 99th Fighter Squadron before they depart on their mission of protecting American bomber squadrons and attacking enemy bomber formations. The 99th is an integral part of The North Africa Tactical Air Forces

JUL 25 1943

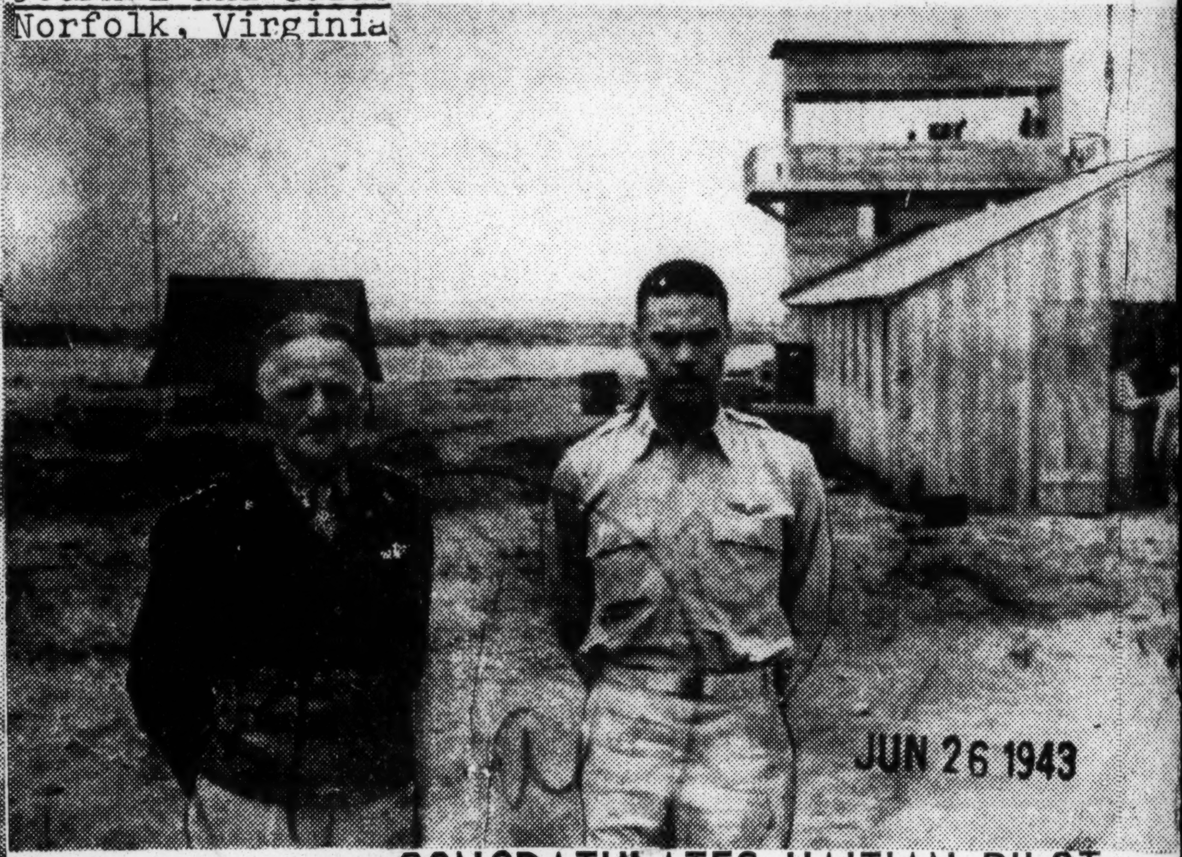
GERMAN FIGHTER PILOTS SWOOPED DOWN ON THEM—A flight of six pilots of the 99th Pursuit Squadron were the first members of the squadron to engage in dogfights with German fighter planes. The action took place above Pantelleria, which the American fighters were defending. The date was June 18. They engaged a formation of 22 enemy fighters

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia



Allied Air Chief Talks With Lt. Col. B. O. Davis

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

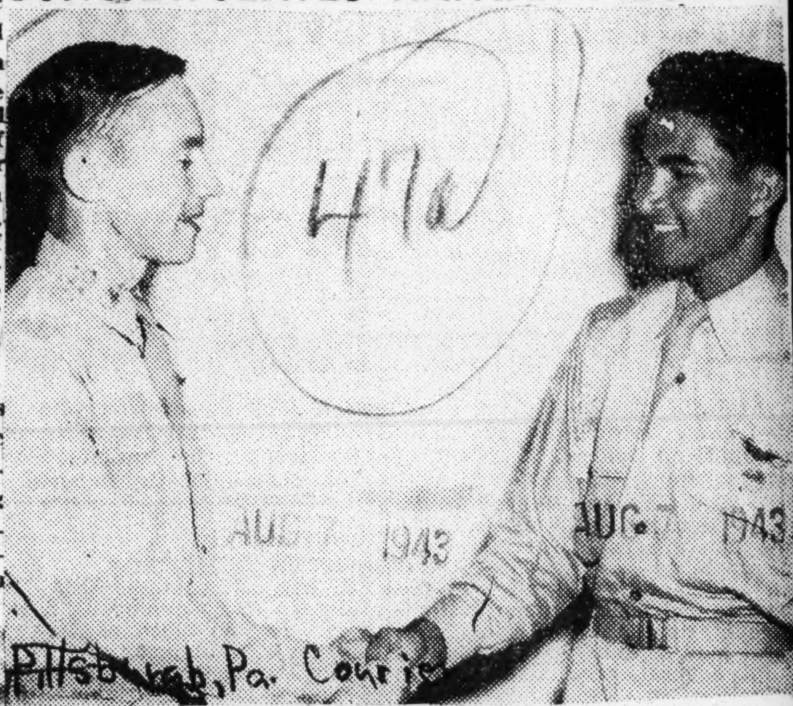


JUN 26 1943

Heading a party of distinguished United States Air Force officers who paid an unexpected visit to the airfield in North Africa where Negro fliers are based was Lt. General Carl Spaatz, commanding officer of the Northwest African Air Forces, photographed here with Lt. Colonel B. O. Davis Jr., right, commanding officer of the squadron. In the background other members of the party are entering the pilots' room adjoining the operations tower.

Lt. Col. Davis is sharing equally combat duties and has already led four missions. He has been commended for "showing remarkable understanding of tactical details and exhibiting inspiring leadership." (Exclusive Journal and Guide Photo by Thomas W. Young.)

CONGRATULATES HAITIAN PILOT



47a

AUG 7 1943

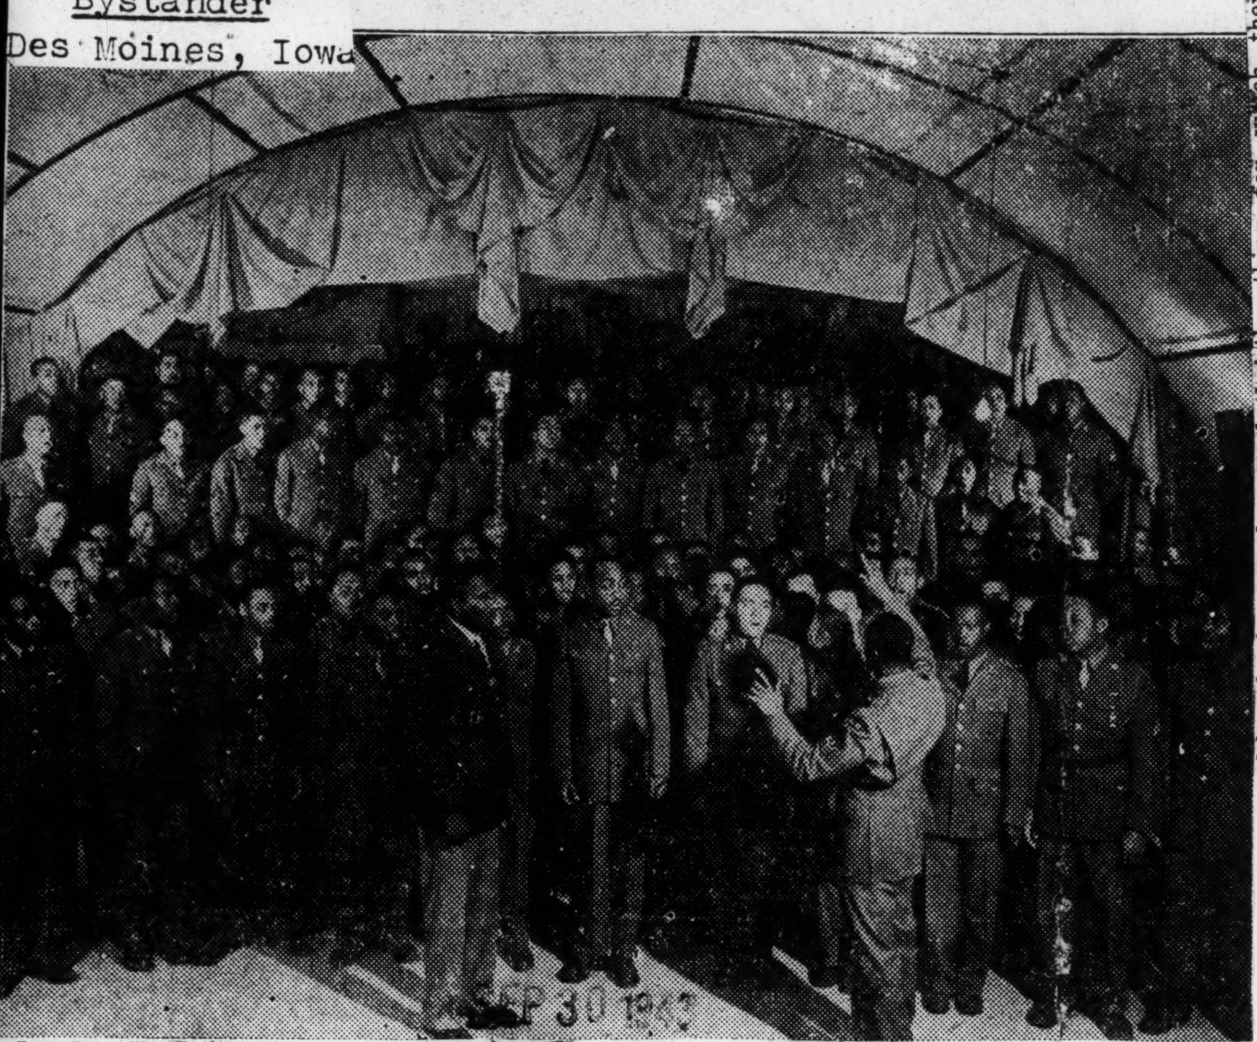
Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, congratulates Sgt. Raymond Cassagnol of the Haitian Air Force on his recent accomplishment at this base. Sgt. Cassagnol received his wings as a polit at the Tuskegee Army Air Field recently. He is a native of Port au Prince, Haiti.—Photo by the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

47a-1943

SOLDIERS A BIG HIT IN LINCOLN CONCERT

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa



SEP 30 1943

London, England—Lords and ladies, generals and admirals, shopkeepers and civil servants, Allied servicemen and women witnessed Tuesday night in London's famous old Albert hall an event unparalleled in British annals.

On the vast stage where the world's greatest musicians have played and sung, 200 American Negro soldiers from the United States army aviation and engineering units put on a two-hour program of spirituals, narrative ballads, and sycopated tunes such as only American Negroes know how to sing.

Roland Hayes, distinguished American tenor, came over from the United States especially to appear with these G. I.'s but the enthusiastic reception he received after his long absence from the London concert platform was overshadowed by the way the distinguished audience reacted to the soldiers themselves. Above is shown First Sergeant Alexander B. Jordan, St. Paul, Minnesota, as he directed the choir during rehearsal held in one of the Nissen hut theaters in rural England.

Twin-Engine Pilot Training Started At Tuskegee Field

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga

OCT 8 1943

Trainees to Be Selected From Upper Basic Class of Cadets

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. — (SNS) —The second dream of air-minded Negro youth of today materialized into a reality, as twin engine training officially started last week at the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

With the advent of the first all-Negro Fighter Squadron to combat, in single engine P-40 Warhawks, the question immedately rose as to the possibility of an all-Negro bomber squadron.

The question was answered when the War Department sanctioned the training of Negro cadets in the arduous task of becoming multi-engine pilots, here at the home of the first all-Negro Fighter Pilot Squadron now engaged in deadly combat over the war torn skies of Europe.

Selected to head this new school the first of its kind anywhere in the world, is Major Clay Albright, the man who has taught every Negro fighter pilot in the Army Air Forces today, how to fly fighter aircraft. Lieutenant Milton B. Hall of Owensboro, Kentucky, is assisting him in an administrative capacity. Instructors of the newly formed school are 1st Lieutenant Leonard [illegible] Crozier and 2nd Lieutenant Robert [illegible] Meagher.

Pilot trainees for twin engine training here will be selected from the Upper Basic class of cadets. They are to receive 70 hours of advanced flying training here and then be transferred elsewhere for actual bomber pilot training.

The type of aircraft to be used in the twin engine course here, is the AT-10 BH (Beechcraft). This plane is referred to as an "assimilated loaded bomber," as its altitude in flight is comparable to that of a medium bomber with a full load of bombs. All the ingenuity and skill required of a bomber pilot is necessary in flying the AT-10 Trainer.

For the highly technical job of maintenance, instructors from Turner Field, Georgia, have been attacched here to familiarize our mechanics in the fundamental knowledge of keeping these ships aloft.

Commanding Officer Tells Of Combat Experience; To Train More Flyers

The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan.

SEP 17 1943

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

Washington, Sept. 17. (ANP)—A hero, proudest of the lot, returned home from the war to receive the plaudits of an admiring people, [illegible] himself and for his fighting men.

He is Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., until recently commander of the famous 99th Pursuit Squadron, the first unit of Negro fliers to be trained by the army air forces, and the only one to see action in the fighting in North Africa, Sicily and Italy.

Col. Davis is here to take up a new but undisclosed assignment with the 332nd Fighter group at Selfridge Field, Mich.

Tanned and toughened from exposure to heat, sun and unrelenting enemy, Col. Davis stood beside his equally famous father, Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, Sr., and told a press conference last Thursday of the war experiences he and the squadron that comprised 27 pilots and 250 enlisted men have had up to his departure from the front.

He had praise for officers who completed their instruction in combat, for the comradeship that has been established with white airmen, for the courage and eagerness of his buddies, the fighting ability of the P-40 Warhawks which they piloted, and finally the skill and prowess of British fliers.

From the day the squadron left continental United States on April 15, Col. Davis declared in measured tone, "every step of the way was dramatic." Further, "there has not been a single circumstance or incident which could be regarded as discriminatory by the most rabid race leader." By qualification, the experience here at home was not quite so qualified.

The 9-year-old West Pointer was the senior line officer on the transport that carried he and his men across to North Africa although the squadron and their complement of ground crew were only 15 per cent of the total passenger list of 4,000 men.

Everything proceeded smoothly and without incident throughout the eight-day voyage. They landed at Casablanca and were greeted by Col. Allison of the army air force who in turn presented Gen. Campbell. The latter explained to Col. Davis that the 99th would not go into combat until he, Davis, considered that they had been adequately schooled in combat training.

The colonel told something of the type of "post-graduate" training they were given in several stations in North Africa, and at all of which they met with a friendly reception both by white officers and enlisted personnel. At one time they were based near the town of Fez, which he described as a "delightful" spot, visited almost nightly for a month, and at no time was there friction with the white soldiers they met. "A considerable bond exists between those who fly," Col. Davis declared, "regardless of color or race."

It was here that the 99th met Josephine Baker, noted actress, who entertained them. La Baker not only received the officers, but also presented them to prominent French and Arab families of Fez who added to the pleasantness of their stay there.

On May 31 the squadron took off for Cape Bon, Tunisia for the final phase of their experience, the thing for which they had spent months in preparation beginning at Tuskegee and ending with the battlefields of North Africa.

"No unit in this war has gone into combat better trained or better equipped than the 99th squadron," the colonel declared. "We were weak in one respect only, and that was the squadron commander and the flight commander. Neither of us had had any combat experience. It is this quality that gives confidence to those who are led that the men in charge of the formation know what they are doing. Frankly, I didn't know."

He judged, however, that this deficiency was adequately counterbalanced by the fact that his pilots had had an average of 250 hours in the P-40s. There are not a lot of pilots around who can point to such flying time before entering combat.

The men were all on edge. They were assigned to the group commanded by Col. William W. Monyer for operational purposes only, meaning, that they received flight instructions for each succeeding day from Col. Monyer. Otherwise, they maintained separate identity.

The fliers went as swingmen over Pantelleria on their first mission, about the first of June, and returned every day until June 7 to dive bomb enemy positions until the island fell. It was during this "show" that six of the squadron had the first real brush with the enemy, while the others merely encountered the flack of anti-aircraft.

About the first of July they began escorting bombers to Sicily, and everyday they were attacked by enemy fighter craft, the purpose of the latter apparently being to draw off the escort the better to reach the fortresses.

He related the experience when on an escort mission over Chiaco, the bombardier couldn't get his bomb door open promptly and so had to circle over the target twice before releasing the explosives. This permitted the enemy craft to get off the ground and climb up to meet them, "and they really do climb."

That day they provided close escort, the bottom, medium and top cover being given by other units. "We lost a couple of craft, destroyed one enemy and possibly damaged three others," he said. The lost pilots were 1st Lt. Sherman W. White, Montgomery, Ala., and 2nd Lt. James L. MacCullum of St. Louis. Both have previously been reported officially missing in action.

Soon after [illegible] engagement the squadron was visited by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of all allied forces in the North African Theatre of Operations. Others who visited the unit on various occasions were Air Marshal Cunningham, and Lord Trenchard, both of the Royal Air Force and among the best air tacticians in the world. Gen. Spotts, commanding general for the Northwest African Air force, also made calls on the squadron.

July 10 was "D Day" for the Sicilian invasion. The squadron gave cover for bombing attacks, itself dive bombed installations and strafed retreating axis forces that ultimately succeeded in breaking down resistance to the drive. The unit was later based on the southern coast of the island.

Training replacements began to come in about this time, new combat crews, new responsibilities, he said. The new men had to be shown the ropes, and they were. On Sept. 7, Col. Davis was ordered to report for assignment to the 332nd fighter group, and so picked up his hat and was homeward bound.

"The men I left behind," he declared, "instead of being the fledglings we were on June 1, are now seasoned veterans of a combat experience of which all of us may well be proud."

Col. Davis commanded the 99th Squadron from Aug. 27, 1942, to Sept. 2, 1943, when he was relieved of command. While in the course of training and since, the squadron developed a certain feeling about matters which have been very much to the fore. They realized, for example, that they had to show just what American Negro pilots could do in a P-40 when faced by an enemy. To high officials of the army air force it was admittedly a matter for conjecture. They realized that it was up to them to prove that Negro pilots, "mentally, physically and emotionally" could meet the requirements of fighter pilots. They were "extremely conscious" over the fact that the future of Negroes insofar as the air force was concerned, depended upon how they comported themselves. Hence, the colonel said, when he took over the command it was a real "pleasure," but he was ever mindful of [illegible] things.

The 99th also was aware of the publicity that had been given the question of putting them into combat, as well as the idea of a segregated field. He said tha some of these things hurt. Th men felt that the people outsid believed they "were not being given a square deal." All of thi presented them more strongl with the "challenge" to disprov false impressions.

To answer critics on both side of the fence there is the evidenc of the ability of the pliots as ex emplified by the clusters wor by all of the men for the num ber of sorties they had made The colonel himself has the ai wedal and cluster. The squadron while in Africa, made about 80 sorties for an average of 25 to 2 for 26 pilots. The difference is accounted for by a few who were layed up for sickness.

Repeatedly in his remarks he referred to the cordiality that existed between the 99th and the members of other units they came in contact with beyond the shores of the United States. This was generally construed as a rebuttal to those who espouse segregated training for Negroes and whites.

Further, he had this to say:

"I definitely regard the record of Negro pilots as proof that it is no longer an experiment, and to those who are working with us, the experiment is finished."

Col. Davis had something to say about the P-40s they were using. Asked what they could do in a dog-fight, he said "Three things—turn, turn and turn." He added that "they never run away from a fight because they can't." In effect he said that if the German fighters came down where they were—and not too fast—they might be able to do something with them so long as it didn't require a chase.

The British Spitfires, however, he considered superb. The British fliers, he declared, "are good very good; they know the story—the whole story. The axis fighters, he said, don't have the enthusiasm they once did. "Our boys," he declared, "no longer dream about the girl back home but rather getting into a good fight with the enemy."

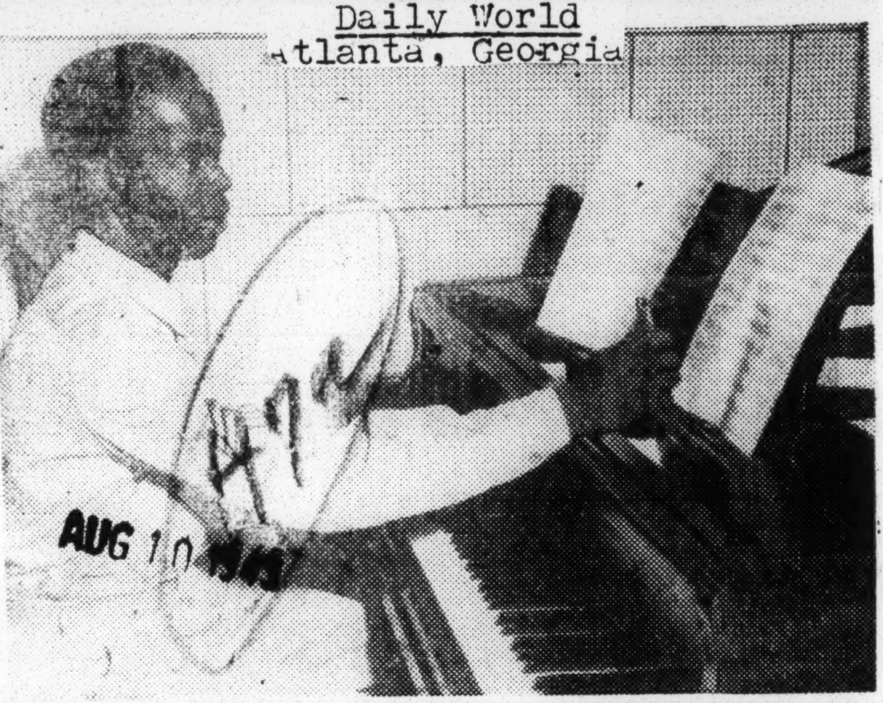
Their experiences have made them religion conscious. They have no particular thoughts abou the future since thinking abou the 24 hours ahead takes up to much time. As for commercia flying, he did not believe man of the men had given much attention to the subject. The colonel intends to continue his caree as a part of the army air force.

Col. Davis' next move will b to Mitchell Field, New York, headquarters of the First Army Ai Force of which the 332nd fighte group is a part. His stay ther will be temporary. He is expecte to convey his fund of battle ex perience to the three squadron that comprise a group. The grou has been in training for sometime and there is speculation that Davis will ultimately be their com mander with the rank of full colo nel.

SEP 17 1943
SEP 17 1943
SEP 17 1943
SEP 17 1943
SEP 17 1943
SEP 17 1943
47
47a

Leads Tuskegee Orchestra

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. — Youthful leader of the "Imperial Wings of Rhythm" dance orchestra of the Army Air Forces Band at the Tuskegee Army Air Field is Sergtant Claude Garvey of New York City. As the leader of the musical aggregation at this base, the trombonist not only plays a neat horn, but also is a capable arranger. — PHOTO BY TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD.

AUG 10 1943
AUG 10 1943
AUG 10 1943
47a

Negro Bombers to Train In Mixed Units in Texas

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

WASHINGTON—(FP)—A step in the breaking down of the army's jimcrow policies was revealed Sept. 2. Acting Secretary of War John J. McCloy told a press conference that within the next 30 days Negro cadet pilots will be sent to Fort Dodge, Kan., or Del Rio, Tex., to start training, with white students, for the army's bomber forces.

They will start training in B-26 transition units, "with the objective of the command of B-26 planes." In December, moreover, Negro cadets will be trained as bombardiers and navigators [illegible] 18 weeks, then sent to gunnery school. All of the training will be with white students, whereas the air force heretofore has segregated Negroes in jimcrow fighter squadrons, training them in jimcrow schools.

Negro bombardiers were promised by War Department officials last spring, but the matter had remained dormant until the announcement of last Thursday. Some quarters feel that the excellent showing of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, trained at Tuskegee Airfield and commanded by Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, jr, in the recent invasion of Sicily, gave impetus to this new program for Negro airmen.

The consensus, however, seems to be that the incessant hammering of the Negro press and public, plus the resignation of former Federal Judge William H. Hastie, who left his post as civilian aide to the Secretary of War in protest against jimcro in the air forces, undoubtedly hastened, and perhaps caused, the creation of Negro bombing units.

SEP 11 1943
SEP 11 1943
SEP 11 1943
SEP 11 1943
47

332nd Fighter Group Anxious to Meet Axis

Baltimore. Md.
Afro-American

By Staff Correspondent

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—Perhaps Hitler has tucked away somewhere in his files flying fighters who can outwit and out "dog fight" the pilots here, but members of the 332nd Fighter Squadron simply don't believe it and nobody can tell them such a thing; they want to find it out for themselves.

Asked whether or not he wanted to go overseas, each flyer's reply was, "Yes, why not?"

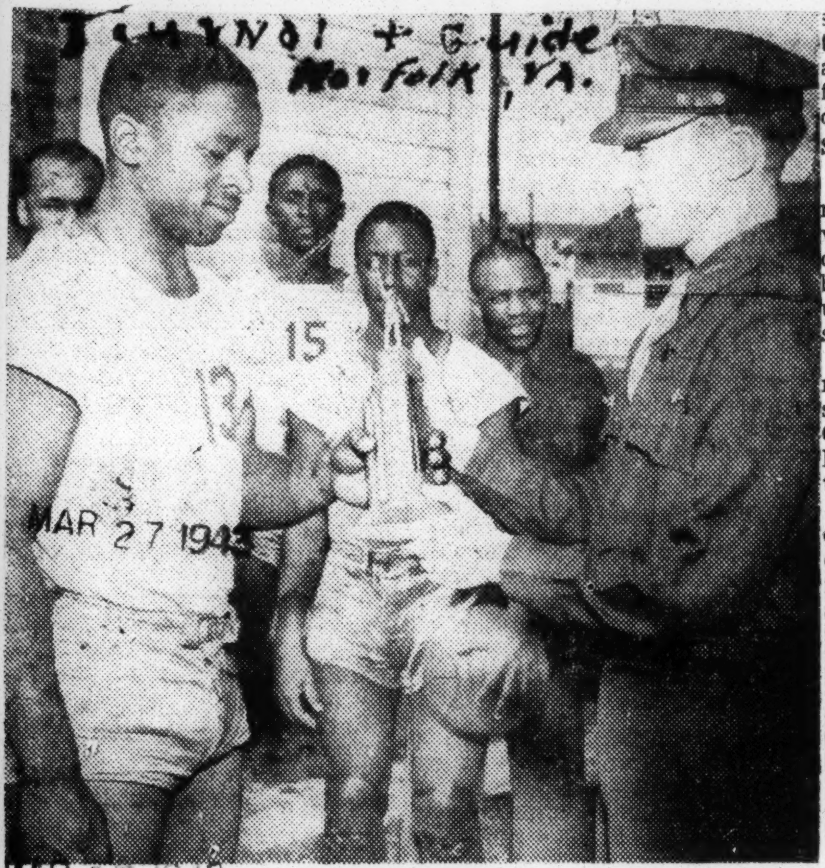
First Lieut. Daniel (Chappie) James, Jr., commander of the unit, who was with the first outfit that graduated at Tuskegee Army Flying School and also has about 1,560 flying hours, stated:

"Sure we want to get overseas. That is what we have been training for and this is no newspaper talk.

We have some of the best flyers in the country here and all of them want to try out their training and experience on the Germans. They want to match wits with the enemy in the air."

OCT 15 1943
OCT 15 1943

47a-1943



Journal + Guide
Norfolk, VA.
MAR 27 1943

The Tuskegee Army Flying School basketball team won the Southeastern Servicemen's tournament conducted recently in Logan Gymnasium, Tuskegee Institute, Ala. This team defeated the Camp Wheeler five from Macon, Ga., in the finals, 40-35. The final game was a thriller throughout and it went into an extra period after being deadlocked four times in the last half. The score was tied at 30 all when the regular period ended. Estill Mukes tallied 16 points for the Flying School.

Shown in the top picture are the members of the team. Left to right, kneeling, are: Pvt. Arthur Johnson of Hartford, Conn.; Sgt. William Byron of New York, N. Y., captain; Pvt. Primus Bowers, ex-Smith star, of Orange, N. J., and S/Sgt. S. Wesley Henderson of New York, N. Y. Standing: Cpl. Raymond E. Byrd of New York, N. Y.; Capt. George W. Webb of Gettysburg, Pa., Officer-in-charge; Pvt. Estill Mukes of Newcastle, Ind.; Cpl. Joseph Spooner of New York, N. Y.; Lt. William Farrow of Chicago, Ill.; Pvt. Chester Burris Institute, W. Va.; Cpl. J. C. Lovett of Orange, N. J.; Warrant Officer William Johnson of Woodbury, N. J., and Cpl. John McLeese of Washington, D. C.

MAR 27 1943

Sgt. William Byron of New York, N. Y., is shown, below, receiving the championship trophy presented by Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the Tuskegee Army Flying School.

LOUISVILLE, KY., TIMES
Circ. D. 140,389
JUN 14 1943

2 Plane Nests Near Italy Burned.

Pictures in magazine.

Allied Headquarters In North Africa, June 14 (AP)—U.S. Heavy bombers of the Middle East Air Command smashed again at Eastern Sicily airdromes at Catania and Gerbini, carrying the Mediterranean offensive to the island gateway to Italy, Allied communiques announced today.

Three other island stepping-stones for invasion already were in the hands of Allied forces—Pantelleria, Lampedusa and Linosa—and Sicily, at the toe of the Italian boot, appeared a logical target in the next phase of the offensive.

A Cairo communique said that at least eight planes were destroyed in the raid on Gerbini, three which ran into bomb bursts as they attempted to take off and five Messercchmitt-109s shot out of the air in an ensuing battle.

SMOKE BILLOWS UP.

At Catania, a port thirteen miles to the east, serious damage was done to hangars and aircraft on the ground, with dense black smoke reported billowing up from hangars hit on the west side of the airdrome.

It was announced that approximately 250,000 pounds of explosives were dropped upon the Gerbini and Catania fields by large formations of liberators of the ninth U. S. Air Force.

Malta-based Spitfires again escorted the four-engined bombers on the last leg of the approach from the middle east, during the attacks, and on the first part of the return trip. Both the targets lie about 125 miles north of Malta.

Yesterday's daylight attack on Catania followed a Saturday night assault by R.A.F. heavy bombers which left large fires that could be seen for miles. Catania has been heavily punished before by Allied bombers in the campaign to obliterate Axis air force nests.

MESSINA ATTACK TOLD.

(The Italian communique said that formations of four-engined bombers also attacked Messina, with two planes brought down by anti-aircraft fire. It asserted also that three planes were shot down over Sicily and two over Pantelleria in air duels.)

Fliers of the Northwest African air forces confined their operations to patrols.

The third island to fall to the Allies, Linosa, was spared aerial attacks or naval bombardment by a swift, bloodless yielding. It is twenty-eight miles northeast of Lampedusa, captured twenty-four hours earlier.

Axis planes took a battering in the thrusts at Sicily's airdromes on Saturday. Nearly 150 planes were caught on the ground at Milo, Castelvetrano and Bocca di Falco airports and Allied headquarters said "large numbers" were riddled by fragmentation bombs.

ENEMY VESSELS FLEE.

Axis naval vessels provided a short-lived show of activity Friday night, firing torpedoes at light coastal craft covering Pantelleria operations, "but on being engaged, fled at high speed," a headquarters communique said.

The only American Negro aerial unit in foreign service was among the Allied forces that bombed Pantelleria. They flew P-40 Warhawks. They were trained at Tuskegee Institute, Ala.

Warhawks and American-flown British Spitfires performed spectacular operations in shattering the Axis air forces during the last days of the battle for Pantelleria, authoritative quarters said.

The Yankee-manned fighter planes downed a total of seventy-eight German and Italian aircraft for a loss of twelve Allied planes.

The Spitfires, under the command of Lieut. Col. Fred M. Dean of St. Petersburg, Fla., erased twelve enemy ships from the skies last Thursday and came back to get thirteen more on Friday, the day Pantelleria surrendered.

A veteran Warhawk unit from the former Desert Air Force, led by Col. Earl Estates, Jr., of Winnetka, Ill., shot down twenty Axis planes on Thursday while other Warhawk groups under Col. Arthur G. Salisbury of Sedalia, Miss., and Col. William Momyer of Seattle, Wash., played considerable roles in clearing the way for the big Allied bombers.

PM New York
JUN 15 1943

Negro Fliers

A U. S. Negro fighter unit took part in the battle of Pantelleria. Lt. Col. B. C. Davis, Jr., commands the squadron, the first of its kind to take part in overseas combat. The squadron flies P-40 Warhawk fighter-bombers.

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

ANOTHER CLASS GRADUATES AT TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR SCHOOL

APR 4 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Apr. 1.—In a graduation exercise spiced with the brilliant wit of Lt.-Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the Tuskegee Army Flying school, the latest contingent of Negro birdmen were elevated to the station of flying lieutenants in the army air force on Thursday, March 25.

Among the impressive sights of the ceremonies was the drilling of the stately underclassmen as they swung snappily around the cadet area to the martial strains of the army air force band, under the leadership of 1st Lt. Frank Drye. Parents and visiting friends gathered to witness the procession of stalwart fledglings as they filed past to take their places within the new post theatre, where the exercises were held.

Class Outstanding.

This particular class is, indeed, outstanding in view of the many "firsts" which characterize it. It is the first class to graduate under the new expansion policy at this field. It is the first class in which medals for "expert aerial gunners" and "aerial sharpshooters" have been presented. And lastly it constitutes one of the largest classes to complete flight training here.

The graduates were summoned to the platform by Capt. Roy F. Morse, director of ground school training, and presented with their commissions as second lieutenants by Lt.-Col. Noel F. Parrish. Silver wings were pinned to the flyers' blouses by Maj. Donald G. McPherson, director of flight instruction.

Athlete Medal Winner.

The presentation of gunnery medals was made by Lt. James L. Wrathall, gunnery instructor. Those officers rated as expert aerial gunners included Lts. Walter L. McCreary, Woodrow W. Crockett, Lawrence E. Dickson, Lloyd G. Singleton and Alfonzo W. Davis.

APR 4 1943

Aerial sharpshooter medals were presented to Lts. Clarence W. Allen, Elmer L. Gordon, Wilmeth W. Sidat-Singh, Leroy Bowman, Charles F. Jamerson, and Pearlee E. Saunders.

Capt. John G. Cooke, commandant of cadets, presented cadet honors to the three highest ranking graduates. The highest award was received by Lt. Alfonzo W. Davis, the second by Lt. Wilmeth W. Sidat-Singh and the third award was presented to Lt. Walter L. McCreary.

Among the members of this class which mark the first anniversary of cadet graduations, are included: Lts. Clarence William Allen, of Mobile, Ala.; Elmer L. Gordon of Portsmouth, Va.; Lloyd G. Singletary of Jacksonville, Fla.; Woodrow W. Crockett of Texarkana, Ark.; Lawrence Everett Dickson of New York; Alfonzo W. Davis, of Omaha, Neb.; Leroy Bowman of Sumter, S. C.; Wilmeth W. Sidat-Singh, Washington; Walter L. McCreary of San Antonio, Texas; Peralee E. Saunders, Bessemer, Ala.; Charles F. Jamerson of Pasadena, Cal.; Alwayne M. Dunlap, Washington, and William Murray Gordon Jr., Mobile, Ala

---

Soldiers Get Merit Awards

People's Voice
New York N.Y.
JUN 26 1943

Four Negro soldiers who fought at Guadalcanal received the Legion of Merit award from the War Department last week for "exceptionally meritorious services."

The men were Ben W. Pettis, Pfc., Infantry of Senatobia, Mississippi; Jessie Harris, Pvt., Infantry, of Tuskegee, Ala.; Verna C. Neal, Pvt., Infantry, of Ruleville, Miss.; and Henry Smith, Jr., Pvt., Infantry, of Good Pine, La.

The text of their citation read: "For exceptionally meritorious conduct in performance of outstanding services on March 27, 1943 at Guadalcanal, by leaving the comparative safety afforded by a slit trench and advancing some 250 yards over open terrain, exposed to bombing from an enemy air raid, in order to assist in evacuating casualties."

Nineteen Pilots in This Record TAFS Graduating Class

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

47a

Members of the largest class of pilots to be graduated from the Tuskegee Army Flying School, who received commissions of second lieutenants on Thursday. They are, left to right, standing: Second Lieuts. U. S. Taylor, Jr., Kaufman, Tex.; H. E. Sawyer, Columbus, Ohio; Luke J. Weathers, Memphis, Tenn.; L. C. Smith, Los Angeles, Calif.; L. M. Jackson, Fort Worth, Tex.; C. C. Robinson, Orangeburg, S.C.; V. V. Haywood, Raleigh, N.C.; J. Y. Carter, Winston-Salem, N.C.; W. T. Foreman, Washington, D.C.; C. P. Bailey, Punta Gorda, Fla.; C. I. Williams, Lima, Ohio; kneeling: Second Lieutenants H. C. Houston, Detroit; J. E. Brothers, Chicago; A. W. Cisco, Alton, Ill.; Paul Adams, Greenville, S.C.; W. J. Faulkner, Nashville, Tenn.; Fred Hutchins, Donalsonville, Ga.; W. V. Eagleson, Bloomington, Ind.; and S. J. Moseley, Norfolk, Va.

Record Class Gets Wings at Tuskegee

MAY 8 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—The largest class of flyers in the history of the Tuskegee Army Flying School received the traditional silver wings and commissions as second lieutenants in the U.S. Army Air Corps on Thursday.

Graduation exercises were held in the post theatre before an overflowing audience of parents, friends and fellow soldiers.

First Goal Reached

Following the invocation by the post chaplain, Capt. Douglas L. T. Robinson, Lieut. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, introduced Major Donald G. McPherson, director of flight training, who delivered the principal address. He said in part:

"No longer can you consider the graduation and winning of one's wings as the achievement of our ambition. Rather you should consider it merely as a stepping stone for the greater ultimate goal, namely, the coming to grips with the enemies of our country and destroying them completely in battle.

May 8, 1943

"On one hand, you must maintain the traditions that have been made in the past by members of the air corps all over the world, and on the other hand, you will make traditions to which members of your race who follow you, may emulate and aspire to."

3 Get Special Honor

Major John G. Cook, commandant of cadets, awarded silver identification bracelets for outstanding academic and military bearing to Second Lieuts. Vernon V. Haywood, Raleigh, N.C.; Ulysses S. Taylor, Kaufman, Texas, and Charles I. Williams, Lima, Ohio.

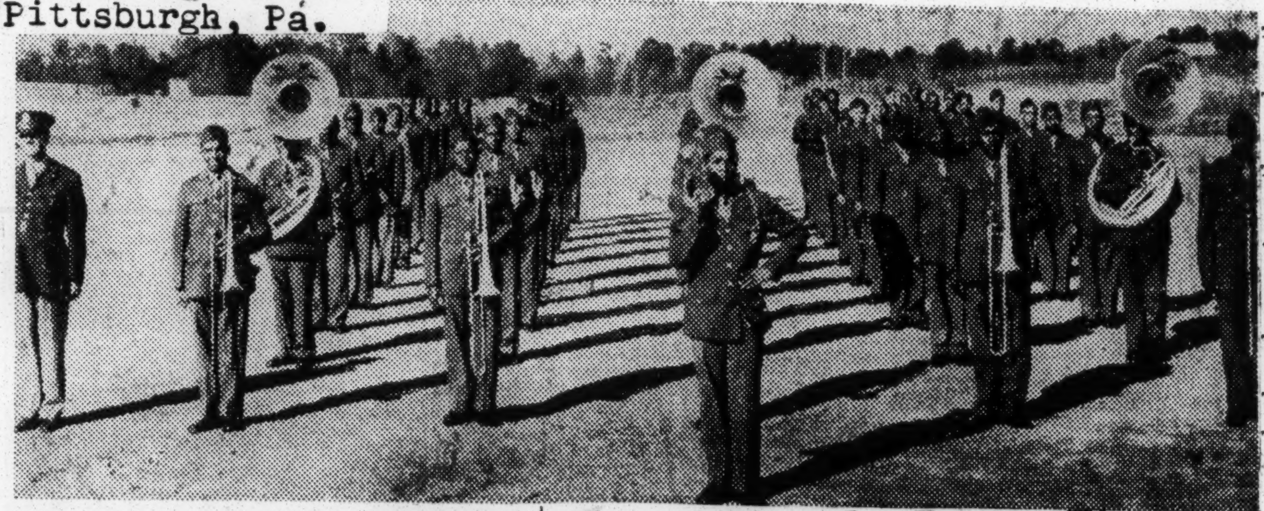
Other members of the graduating class were Second Lieuts. Paul Adams, Charles P. Bailey, James E. Brothers, James Y. Carter, Arnold W. Cisco, Wilson V. Eagleson, William J. Faulkner, Jr., Walter T. Foreman, Herber C. Houston, Freddie E. Hutchins, Leonard M. Jackson, Sidney J. Moseley, Jr., Curtis C. Robinson, Harold E. Sawyer, Lewis C. Smith and Luke J. Weathers. Jr.

47a

ARMY AIR FORCE BAND ONE OF FINEST

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

June 9, 1943



One of the first Army Air Force bands to be formed in the armed services was the famed 313th Army Air Force Band at Tuskegee, Alabama. The band under the direction of First Lieut Frank Dye, pictured on the extreme left, is composed of 65 talented musicians. Formed in April of last year by Captain Clyde Bynum, Post Adjutant, the band since its organization has been engaged in extensive "War Bond" sales throughout the state.

Negro Squad Knocks Down First Enemy Plane in Fight Over Sicily

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN

(©. 1943, by The Chicago Tribune)

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 4. — The American Negro air fighter squadron flying Warhawks in support of Mitchell bombers knocked down its first enemy plane Friday in a fierce combat above Castelvetrano air field in Sicily, probably destroyed a second and damaged a third.

47a

The honor of being the first Negro pilot to score a victory went to First Lieutenant Charles B. Hall, 22 years old, of Brazil, Ind.

When the Negro fliers returned to their base, General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander in North Africa, greeted them. He congratulated the squadron commander, Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., of Washington, D. C., son of the brigadier general, who is the highest ranking Negro officer in the United States Army.

The haze above the target limited observation, but the Mitchell crews reported bomb bursts on buildings near the Castelvetrano railway yards. More than 20 Focke-Wulf 190s and Messerschmitt 109s came in to attack and Hall downed a Focke-Wulf, while his mates believe they most likely des[illegible] a Messerschmitt and also damaged another plane of this type.

"It was my eighth mission," Hall related, "but the first time I had seen the enemy close enough to shoot at. I saw two Focke-Wulfs following the Mitchells just after the bombs were dropped. I headed for the space between the fighters and bombers and managed to turn inside the Jerries. I fired a long burst and saw my tracers penetrate the second aircraft. He was turning to the left, but suddenly fell off and headed straight into the ground. I followed him down and saw him crash. He raised a big cloud of dust."

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

U. S. Negro Flyers Helped Allies Bomb Pantelleria

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, June 14 (AP).—The only American Negro aerial unit in foreign service was among the allied forces that bombed Pantelleria, it was disclosed today. They flew P-40 Warhawks and were under the command of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, a noted cavalry officer. The all-Negro squadron trained at Tuskegee institute, Alabama.

JUN 15 1943

47a

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Negro Squadron In First Air Fight Turns Back Nazis

JUN 25 1943

Washington, June 24 (AP)—War Secretary Stimson reported today the Air Forces first squadron of Negro pilots, the 99th Fighter Squadron, has "weathered its first aerial combat test very creditably."

The squadron, commanded by Lieut. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., a son of the first Negro general officer in the Army, is in North Africa and participated — as an escort and fighter bomber outfit—in the siege of Pantelleria. The group was fired on only once and when it turned to engage the enemy fighters fled.

JUN 25 1943

47a

On the afternoon of June 18, however, a flight of six P-40's led by First Lieut. Charles W. Dresden, Bronx, N. Y., was attacked over Pantelleria by twelve German FW 190's escorting enemy bombers trying to raid the island. Ten more German fighters hovered above the bombers.

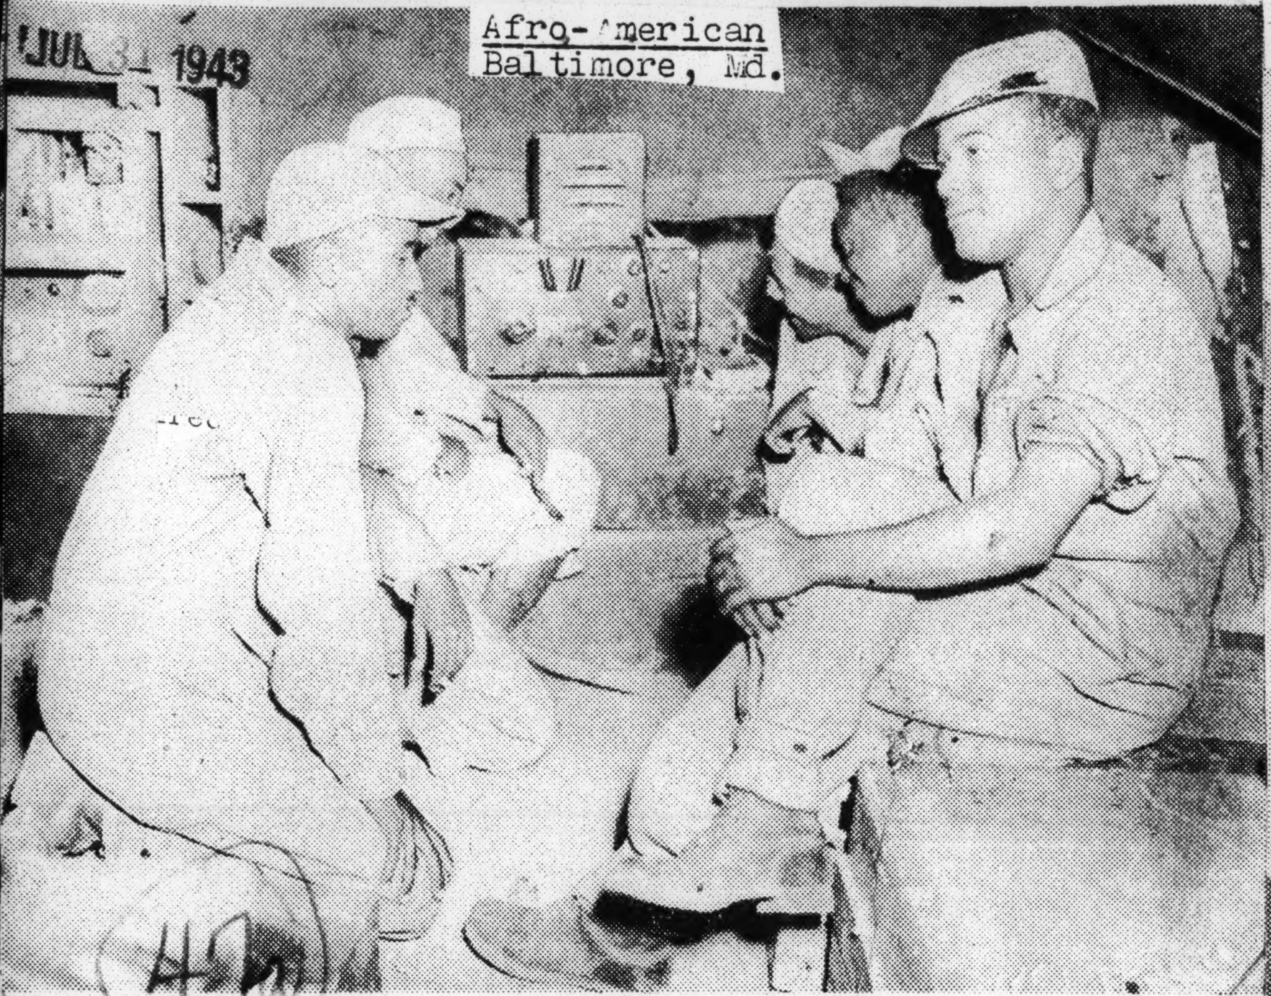
The American Negro pilots damaged two of the German fighters and forced the remainder to retreat.

47a-1943

Air Fighters' Aides Relax in North Africa

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

JUN 31 1943



A group of enlisted men attached to the 99th Fighter Squadron enjoy a radio broadcast in their ten somewhere in North Africa. Chess and checkers are among their other diversions while not busy with the P-40's flown by the Tuskegee-trained fighter pilots.

47a

Spends One Day In Sea; Other Pilot Still Missing

Informer
Houston, Texas

By OLLIE STEWART

(Copyright by the Afro-American and Informer chain of newspapers. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited)

Censored From Stewart, Advanced Air Base—Having his P-40 Warhawk plane shot from under him, being forced to jump and parachute four thousand feet into the sea close to the coast of Sicily and returning uninjured to fighter squadron to tell about it is an experience that few people can boast of. But Lt. George R. Bolling, Pheobus, Virginia, is one of that few. (Note: No word has been received of Lt. McCullin the other missing flyer.)

Graduate of Hampton, Bolling quietly related his story Friday to happy fellow pilots after six harrowing days away from the outfit. His plane was hit by flak July eleventh, the day after the initial landing in Sicily by Allied troops, while on patrol duty. His plane began to burn as Bolling [illegible] headed [illegible] the base across the Mediterranean, so he bailed out and floated down to the water.

JUL 31 1943

Another Pilot Protects

Lt. Samuel M. Bruce, of Seattle, who graduated from A. and T. college, circled the parachute to fight off enemy planes that might have machine-gunned the helpless Bolling. Striking the water, Bolling inflated his Mae West life belt and unstrapped the rubber dinghy.

That was early afternoon. He tried to attract attention all afternoon but failed and in wet garments had to cover himself with part of his parachute to keep warm through the night. He had chills and siept but little.

Said Bolling,, "It was dark and lonesome and I thought I might drift out into the middle of the Mediterranean and be run down by boats. However, daylight found me still sitting in the dinghy waving whenever I saw a ship on the horizon.

JUL 31 1943

Picked up by Destroyer

"About noon I was picked up by a destroyer and given blankets, and a stiff drink. Given clothes and food, I was treated swell, just like a navy officer. They put me ashore later and I had my first walk on Sicilian soil.

"The Allies were taking thousands of prisoners, both German and Italian, and many dead soldiers were lying along roads as the fighting continued for air ports and bridgeheads."

47a

Bolling spent the next four days on a small coastal boat resting and eating pie and ice cream, which he had not tasted for a long time, and was finally delivered to his unit by plane.

JUL 31 1943

He is one of the quietest men in the squadron and almost every man had a handshake for him when he returned. He does not smoke and the Mediterranean dip has not cooled off his fighting ardor.

Crew Chief Worried

His crew chief, S-Sgt. John Hargraves, New York, wandered around like a lost sheep while Bolling was away. With no pilot to fuss over, Hargraves kept insisting Bolling would come back. Day by day my respect for these pilots grows as I watch for them, watch them take off for certain dogfights with the enemy and possible death.

A few months ago they were mild young men studying and attending frat dances in Washington, Tuskegee, or New York, Ordinary hazards of flying they take for granted—their worry is how to keep FW-190's off their tails or dodge ack-ack fire from the ground. Every mission my be their last but they have learned tricks that make them confident that they can fight with the best. Not one of them fears Goering's circus boys.

It is significant that these lads worry more about getting jobs in commercial aviation atfer the war than in combat with the Luftwaffe. War for freedom will not be won unless America gives these men equal privileges with other men who have risked their lives so America may continue to prosper.

Led Flyers Over Pantelleria

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

JUN 3 1943

FIRST LIEUT. Charles W. Dryden, Bronx youth attained the distinction of leading the first flight of Negro pilots to engage the enemy in actual combat. On June 18, Lieut. Dryden led a flight of six P40's over Pantelleria and were attacked by twelve German 190's escorting enemy bombers trying to raid the island. Ten more German fighters flew above. The American pilots forced the German to retreat after damaging two of their craft. Secretary of War Stimson said, "the 99th Fighter Squadron has weathered its first aerial combat test very creditably." The squadron is commanded by Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis.

47a

Tuskegee's Chief Nurse

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

AUG 3 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. — (SNS) — Miss Kathryn Y. Bough, operating room supervisor at the Tuskegee Army Air Field became the fifth colored woman in the Army Nurses Corps to get promoted to the rank of Chief Nurse. Miss Bough, with a rich background in the nursing profession, came to the Tuskegee Station Hospital after having served as head nurse at the Harlem Hospital in New York City. The new First Lieutenant in the Nurse Corps was at one time supervisor of nurses at Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn, Lt. Bough, a graduate of the Lincoln Hospital in New York City, did graduate study in advanced nursing at New York University. She was one of the first five nurses at Tuskegee Army Air Field hospital. Nurse Bough is a native of Portsmouth. Va.

---

4 Fighter Pilots

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

JUL 10 1943

Second Lieutenants Robert Alexander, William G. Wilkerson,, Herbert S. Harris and Joseph A. Lewis are shown standing before one of the fighter planes at the Tuskegee Army Air Field prior to taking off on a formation flight.

They are all members of the latest class of fighter pilots to be graduated from the Tuskegee Army Air Field. —Tuskegee Army Air Field Photo.

THE 99TH'S FIRST MISSING AIRMAN

Courier
Pittsburgh
Pa.

One of the 99th Pursuit Squadron's flyers who participated in the brilliant foray against Pantelleria is reported missing in actioin. Second Lieutenant James L. McCullin of 3901 Enright avenue, St. Louis, Mo., is the first member of the famed fighting outfit to go down for the American way of life.

'Forgotten Heroes'

GROUND CREW SHARES IN AIR EXPLOITS

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

JUL 17 1943

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., July 15—"Tuskegee's program for the training of Army Air Force combat pilots is being rapidly improved and expanded to meet the needs of present requirements," said William C. Curtis, acting director of the school of mechanical industries at the institute, in an interview here recently. "As is generally the case," Curtis continued, "publicity is given the pilots to such an extent that the patriotism and the very necessary work of the ground crew members are 'masked.'"

Turning to point out a very important piece of work that two highly skilled workmen were doing on a plane recently received at the institute, Mr. Curtis stated that one need not know a great deal about aviation to realize that no aircraft, especially combat ships, can fly without careful maintenance and repair by ground crew members, and for every piloted plane in the air, there are many highly trained technicians required for these services.

The Army Air Force's expansion program, calling for 100,000 pilots per year, has necessitated the setting up of training fields here in America, and, due to the need of enlisted personnel in combat areas, these training fields must be manned by civilians. To meet the demand for civilian aircraft mechanics, the Civil Service Commission, in co-operation with the Army Air Forces and the U. S. Office of Education, has set up a Mechanics Learners' program. Under this program, civilians who can meet the draft, intelligence and aptitude requirements are certified by the Civil Service Commission as mechanics learners, and are assigned to a training school for aircraft mechanics. These persons receive $75 per month during the training period. Information concerning this program may be secured at any first or second-class post office.

TUSKEGEE SHOPS USED

When the need for highly trained technicians became apparent the government turned immediately to Tuskegee institute as a training area. President F. D. Patterson said he and other school officials would be glad to place the facilities of the institute at the disposal of the government and would at the same time proceed with the regular program of the school. Several shops in the William G. Willcox Trades school have been converted into shops for training aircraft mechanics.

JUL 17 1943

Two More Missourians Near Air Wings Goal

Argus St. Louis, Missour

JUL 16 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., July 26— America's flying officers are raining bombs and bullets of terror on the Axis powers on all fronts. As have the men that are now serving their country over seas, youths at the Tuskegee Army Air Field are learning the art of flying so they too can participate in destroying the Axis. Here at this base Missouri men are learning to fly the Army way.

The aviation cadets from Missouri that recently completed their basic flight training at the field and have been assigned to advanced flight class are: Aviation Cadets Norvell Stoudmire of St. Louis, Mo., and Everett A. Bratcher of Popular Bluff, Mo.

Cadet Stoudmire son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stoudmire of 4448 St. Ferdinand ave., St. Louis, Mo., is a former student of Stowe Teachers College. He was a service station operator, prior to entering the service.

Cadet Bratcher of 1200 Alice St., Poplar Bluff, Mo., is a former student of Lincoln University. He was employed by the Missouri Workman Compensation Commission, prior to entering the viation Cadet Corps.

JUL 15 1943

47a-1943

Texan Pilots Plane That Fires On German Center

MAY 1 1943

Dallasite Continues Fire Despite Wounds

Houston Texas
Informer

A United States Army Air Forces navigator guided a B-17 Flying Fortress to the target over France dropped the bombs, attended wounded crew members, manned the guns and then plotted the course for the return flight to a base in England, the War Department has been informed. May 1, 1943

The navigator. who was wounded while performing these multiple duties, is Second Lieutenant Raymond W. Rahner, of 1720 Grove street, Ridgewood, Queens, New York City, New York.

Lieutenant Rahner acted as navigator for the big plane on its way to Renness, a railroad center for German naval installations in Brittany, France. First Lieutenant Albert R. Kuehl, of Riesel, Texas, was the pilot.

47

The plane was just beginning its bombing run when a German Focke-Wulf 190 attacked. One 20 mm cannon shell burst in the plane's nose where Lieutenant Rahner and Second Lieutenant Arthur T. Spatz. of 711 Pyramid Way, Sparks, Nevada were stationed. One burst in the top turret, another in the radio compartment and one in the waist. More than 50 machine gun bullets also hit the plane.

Other members of the crew also were busy. Staff Sergeant Dealfred W. Collins, of 3308 Carl street, Dallas, Texas, was wounded when a 20 mm. shell exploded near his top turret. He continued firing his guns until the enemy fighters fled.

The tail gunner, Staff Sergeant Malcolm B. Johns, of Kissimmee, Florida, told how Sergeant Collins kept the German planes from coming in too close by keeping a steady stream of bullets pouring from the top turet.

Lieutenant Spatz, who was busy with his bombsight, was hurled backwards 8 feet by the explosion of the shell. Although seriously wounded, he shouted to Lieutenant Rahner to "get the bombs off."

Lieutenant Rahner jumped into the bombardier's position, toggled the bomb-off switch and sent the load into the center of the target area, as later reports established. After closing the bomb bay doors, he gave first aid to the wounded crew members.

A[illegible]d MAY 1 1943

A swarm of German planes then attacked the crippled Fortress. For 15 minutes Lieutenant Rahner was kept busy moving from one gun position to another. He and the gunners in the plane kept the Germans at bay until a squadron of British fighters drove the German planes away.

" didn't do much navigating during those 15 minutes," Lieutenant Rahner said.

He failed to mention that he was wounded by a shell fragment during the battle.

"Sergeant Johnson got one," Sergeant Johns said. "I followed the spinning plane all the way down until it hit the water."

He was referring to Staff Sergeant Theron E. Johnson, of 217 B Street, Salt Lake City, Utah, right waist gunner, who had been wounded also when one of the 20 mm shells exploded amidship. After he had been hit by a fragment of shell that tore away the rudder cables and punctured his oxygen line, Sergeant Johns shot down a Focke-Wulf 190.

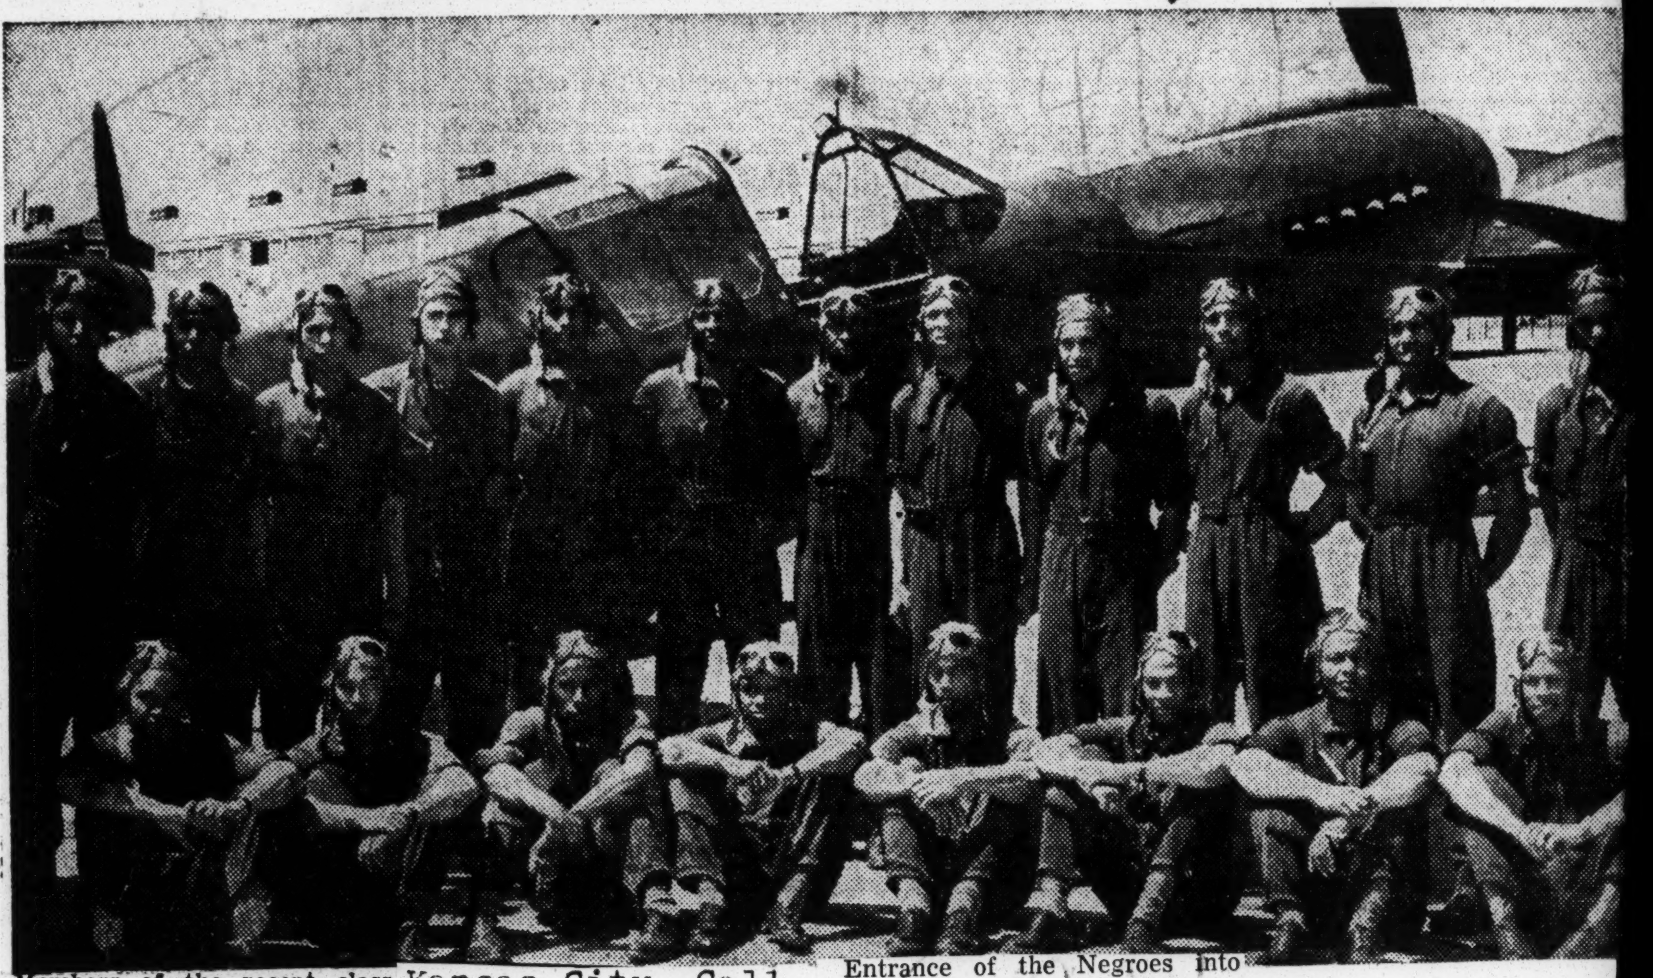
Although hardly able to breathe he stuck to his guns until he had poured a direct burst into the belly of the enemy fighter plane. As the plane started its downward plunge, Sergeant Johns plugged in the intercommunication system and reported to the co-pilot, Second Lieutenant Floyd H. Truesdell, of Anchorage, Alaska, that he was passing out.

MAY 1 1943

Two other crew members, Technical Sergeant Joseph H. Delaney of 66 Myrtie Avenue, Fitchburg, Massachusetts, the radio operator and Sergeant William T. Humberstone of Box 136, North Jackson Ohio, waist gunner, remained at their posts in spite of leg wounds.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
June 5, 1943

TAAF'S NEWLY COMMISSIONED FLYING OFFICERS



Members of the recent class that received their wings and commission at the Tuskegee Army Air Field are shown standing beside one of the pursuit planes they are soon to fly.

They are, from left to right Standing, Second lieutenants Joseph P. Gromer of Iowa Fall, Iowa; Felix J. Kirkpatrick of Chicago, Ill.; George E. Gray of Hemphill, W. Va.; Dempsey W. Morgan Jr., of Detroit, Mich.; Spurgeon N. Ellington of Winston-Salem, N. C.; Albert H. Manning Jr., of Hartsville, S .C.; Dudley M. Watson of Frankfort, Ky.; Milton H. Brooks of Glassport, Pa.; Harry A. Sheppard of Jamaica, N. Y.; Charles M. Bussey of Los Angeles, Cal., and John F. Briggs Jr., of St. Louis, Mo.

Sitting, Laurence D. Wilkins of Los Angeles, Cal.; Maurice V. Esters of Webster City, Iowa; Oliver O. Miller Jr., of Battle Creek, Mich.; Luther H. Smith Jr., of Des Moines, Iowa; Langdon E. Johnson of Rand, W. Va.; James A. Walker of Manning, S. C.; John J. Suggs of Terre Haute, Ind., and Clemenceau M. Givings of Richmond. Va.

JUNE 14, 1943
ST. PAUL, MINN. DISPATCH

All-Negro Air Unit Helped Bomb Island

47a

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(AP)—The only American Negro aerial unit in foreign service was among the Allied Forces that bombed Pantelleria, it was disclosed today.

They flew P-40 Warhawks and were under the command of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, a noted cavalry officer.

The all-Negro squadron trained at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., before coming overseas.

Kansas City Call
Kansas City. Mo.

Air Force Trains Men In Radio

FEB 19 1943

FEB 19 1943

FEB 26 1943

Operators And Mechanics Made At Scott Field

FEB 19 1943

47

SCOTT FIELD, Ill.—A training program for radio operators and mechanics for the Army Air Force Technical Training Command began recently at Scott Field, parent radio school of the AAFTTC, Brig. Gen. Walcott P. Hayes, commanding general, announced this week.

Entrance of the Negroes into the radio school here marks the second Negro contingent to come to Scott Field. Recently, the 46th Aviation Squadron, a ground outfit, reported here. Additional recreation and study facilities are contemplated for the new men.

Among teachers training the newcomers will be Negro soldier-instructors, who have been studying at Scott Field during the past few months.

FEB 19 1943

For three months or more a prospective radio operator studies six days a week, seven hours a day. During the first few weeks he delves into fundamentals and theory, and learns basic code principles.

FEB 19 1943

Half of the total of 588 hours of study is spent in the International Morse Code, and students advance by successive stages from four words per minute until they reach the required 16 words per minute, although, some are capable of speed as high as 50 words per minute.

FEB 26 1943

The remaining hours of the course are spread over such subjects as circuit analysis and theory, radio telephone technique, instrument maintenance and how to improvise repairs if the transmitter or receiver is damaged, aircraft and surface vessel identification, radio compass use, visual signalling by blinker, and telegraph procedure.

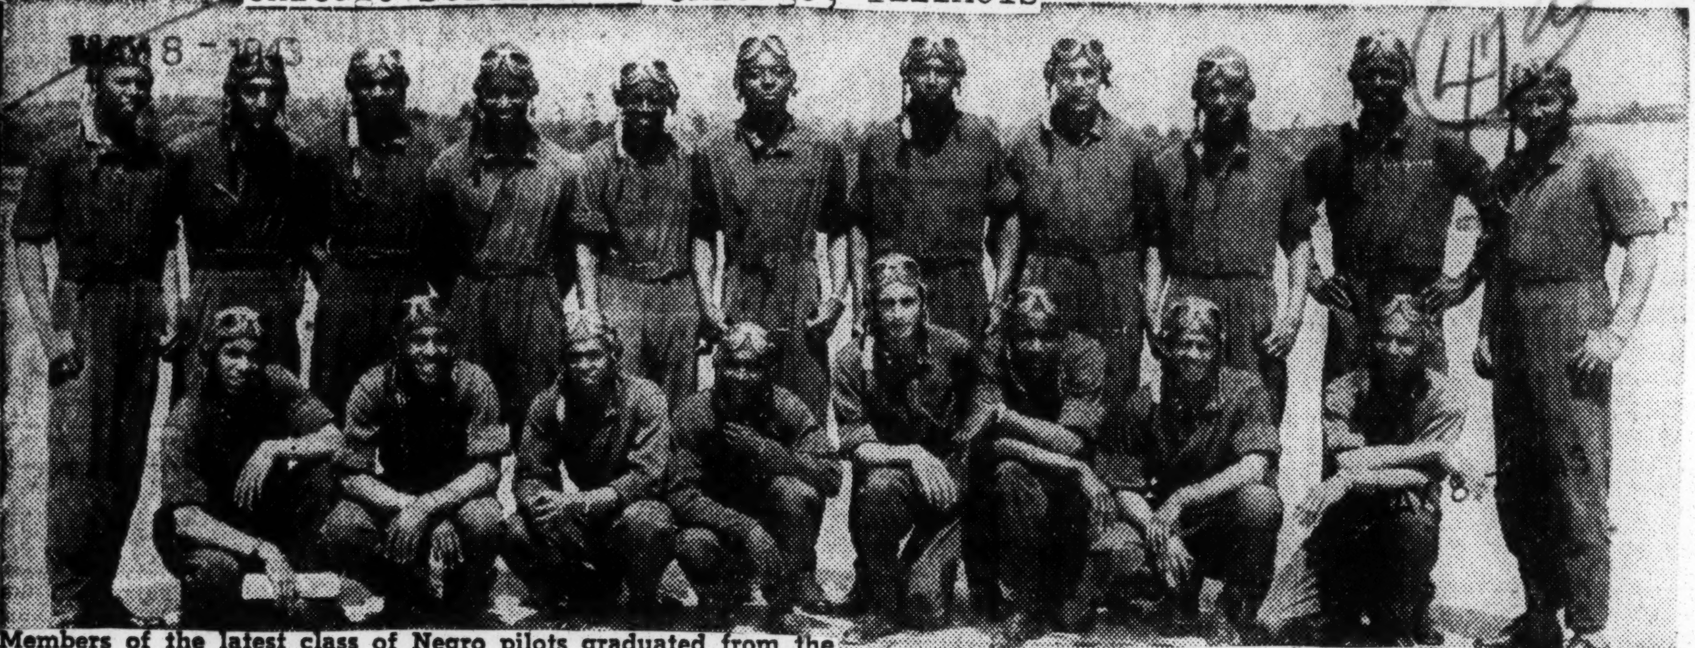
FEB 19 1943

Instruction takes place not only in the classroom of the school but in mobile units, and for the more advanced students, in "Flying Classrooms" which circle high above the field.

NEWEST CLASS OF TUSKEGEE GRADUATES

Chicago Defender   Chicago, Illinois

MAY 8 - 1943



Members of the latest class of Negro pilots graduated from the Tuskegee Army Air Field last week. Standing from left to right are: Second Lieuts. U. S. Taylor Jr., Kaufman, Texas; H. E. Sawyer, Columbus, Ohio; Luke J. Weathers, Memphis, Tenn.; L. C. Smith, Los Angeles, Calif.; L. M. Jackson, Fort Worth, Texas; C. C. Robinson, Orangeburg, S. C.; V. V. Haywood, Raleigh, N. C.; J. Y. Carter, Winston-Salem, N. C.; W. T. Foreman, Washington, D. C.; C. P. Bailey, Punta Gorda, Fla.; C. I. Williams, Lima, Ohio; kneeling from right to left are Second Lieuts. H. C. Houston, Detroit, Mich.; J. E. Brothers, Chicago, Ill.; A. W. Cisco, Alton, Ill.; Paul Adams, Greenville, S. C.; W. J. Faulkner, Nashville, Tenn.; Fred Hutchins, Donalsonville, Ga.; W. V. Eagleson, Bloomington, Ind.; S. J. Moseley, Norfolk, Va.

Abandon Search For Body Of Ala. Flying Officer

Atlanta Daily World

Lt. Earl King Missing Since Training Flight On March 24

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(SNS)—Search for the body of Lt. Earl Eugene King of Bessemer, Alabama, has been temporarily abandoned due to high water, the Public Relations Office of the Tuskegee Army Flying School announced Saturday.

APR 1 1943

Lt. King took off from the Tuskegee Army Flying School on a local training flight the afternoon of Wednesday, March 24, in a P-40 airplane.

Reports that he had crashed into Martin Lake, 30 miles northwest of the field, were not confirmed until Sunday, March 28, when salvage operations recovered a propeller, identified as being from the plane King was flying.

APR 1 1943

A board of qualified Air Force Officers will be appointed to determine the exact cause of the accident.

Lt. King attended Tuskegee Institute, Alabama from 1939 to 1941. While attending the Institute, King completed the primary and secondary Civilian Pilot Training courses.

He enlisted as an aviation cadet in 1941, and received his wings and commission on August 5, 1942.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William P. King, 16 Center St., Bessemer, Alabama.

Body Not Found

LT. EARL KING

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — (SNS) — Lt. Earl Eugene King of Bessemer, Ala., whose body is still missing after the P-40 plane in which he was flying on March 24 crashed into Martin Lake, 30 miles northwest of the Tuskegee Army Flying School field. A propeller, believed to have been from Lt. King's plane, was recovered Sunday, March 28.

APR 1 1943

Birmingham, Ala., News
June 13, 1943

What Negroes Are Doing

BY OSCAR W. ADAMS

In Washington during last week, President F D. Patterson, of Tuskegee Institute, expressed the hope that the Army Air Corps will soon begin training Negroes as bomber pilots.

Said Dr. Patterson: "Not only would this give Negroes entrance into another desirable unit in the armed forces of the nation but it would serve to make the most effective use of the young men who while failing to secure their wings as fighter pilots, may be qualified to serve as bombardiers.

"Approximately 50 per cent of the men who go in training for fighter pilots fail to complete that course," Dr. Patterson continued, "this should not be a stigma upon these young men who are the very finest of Negro youth. They are well educated, fine specimens physically and only because of some little defect in coordination or some minor failure to fulfill all the rigid requirements for fighter pilots, many find themselves 'washed out' and at present ineligible to other phases of flying in the air corps.

"White flying cadets are 'washed out' at approximately the same rate that Negro cadets are. Out of every class which starts, approximately 50 per cent get through. White pilots, however, are often transferred to bomber schools where they have opportunity to qualify as bomber plane pilots, as bombardiers, navigators or some other phase of aviation. Negro cadets who are 'washed out' have not had this opportunity because no bomber schools have been opened to Negroes. They have, it is true, been frequently given the privilege of training as officers in some other branch of the service.

President Patterson expressed himself as being exceedingly gratified with the fine progress being made by Negro cadets at Tuskegee, and said he felt confident that every Negro will thrill with pride when the 99th and other Negro fighter pilots have an opportunity to demonstrate their worth.

49a

First Time

The first Negro fighter squadron in the Army Air Forces has seen action. This week Allied Headquarters in North Africa announced that among those present for the bombardment of Pantelleria was the outfit which began training at Tuskegee Institute (Ala.) in July 1941.

JUN 2 1943

Between then and Pantelleria, the squadron had been the subject of many a row over its segregation from white outfits. Its officers, headed by the C.O., slim, tea-colored Lieut. Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., joined in none of the debate, plugged hard and long at their training. By the time West Pointer Davis led his P-40s into battle, white airmen were ready to admit that the outfit was good, that in aerial marksmanship (at which it had had an unusual amount of training) it was one of the best.

Time
Chicago, Illinois

Gabriel Benzur

LIEUT. COLONEL DAVIS
Squadron specialty: marksmanship.

JUN 5 1943

Negro Airmen Arrive at African Kuarters

Weekly Review Birmingham

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA — American Negro combat fliers have arrived in North Africa to take their place in th aerial war against the Axis, it was officially announced Wednesday.

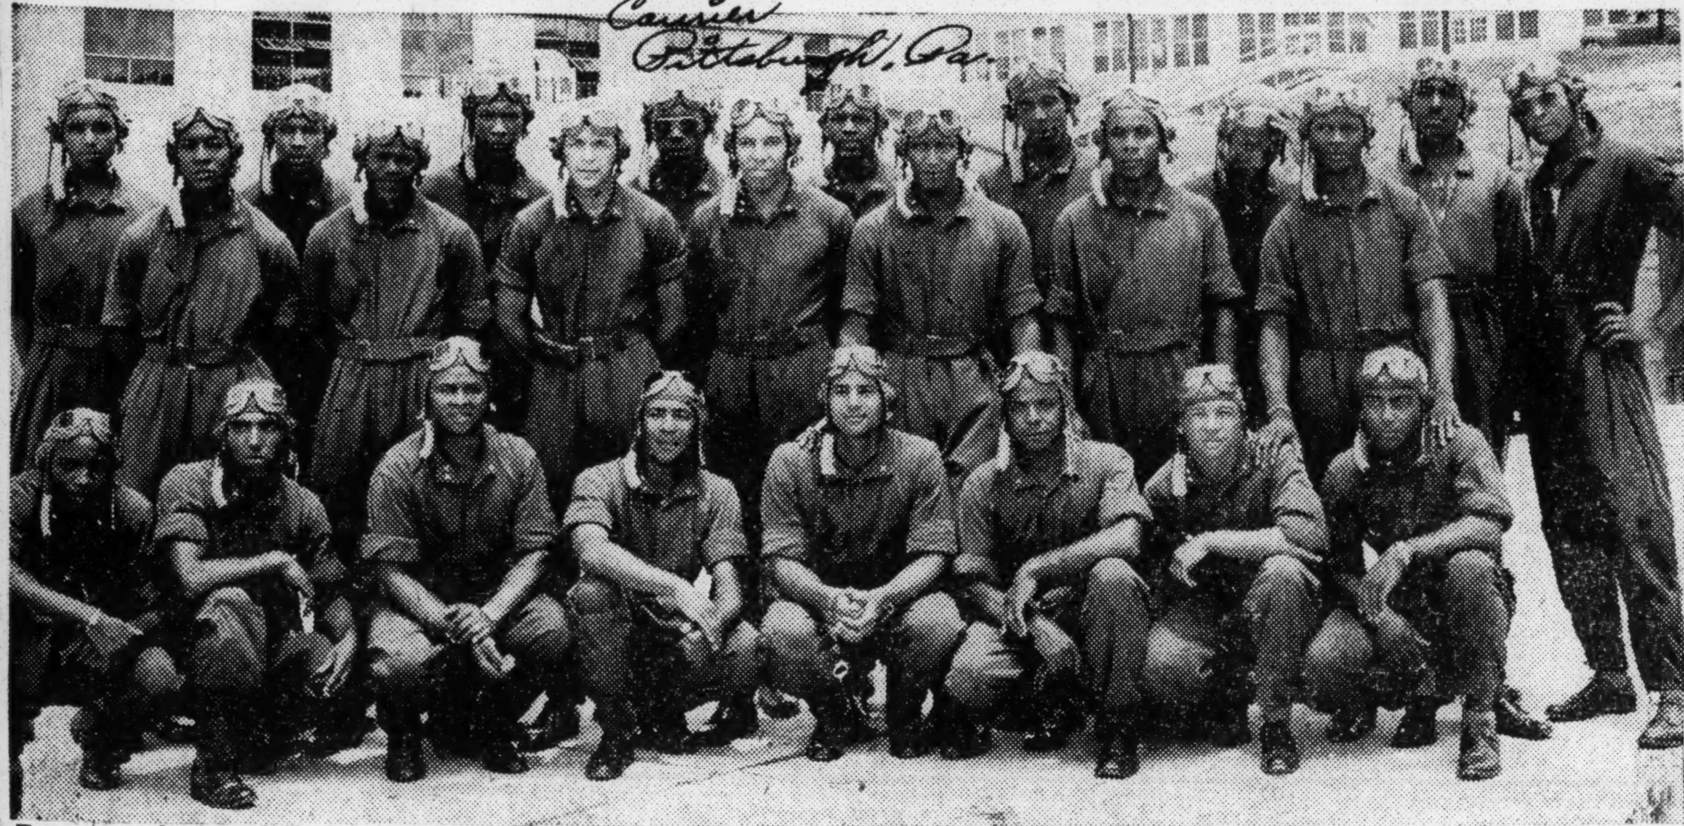
The Negro aviators compose a fighter squadron equipped w i t h P-40 Warhawks. Veteran pilots of the Tunisian campaign instructing the newcomers in the latest fighting tactics.

"Upon completion of this advanced traning the squadron will be sent into action" the statement said.

47a-1943

TUSKEGEE'S GRADUATE AIRMEN HOPE TO SOAR OVER ENEMY TERRITORY

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.



JUL 17 1943

Recent graduates of Tuskegee Army Air Base at Alabama, having received their commissions and wings, are anxious to join their flying comrades on the fighting front. They are now full-fledged Army Air Force pilots. Above they are pictured on the grounds.

Front row, left to right, 2nd Lieuts. Willie S. Hunter, Wayne V. Liggins, Hezekiah Lacy, Jr., Theodore A. Wilson, Charles A. McGee, Oscar A. Kenney, Richard H. Harris, Jr., and Weldon K. Groves.

Second row, left to right, 2nd Lieuts. Frank D. Walker, Johnson D. Wells, Joe A. Lewis, William H. Johnson, William F. Williams, Leonard F. Turner and William G. Wilkerson.

Third row, left to right, 2nd. Lieuts. John S. Sloan, Walter J. Palmer, Theopolis D. Moore, Virgil J. Richardson, Wyrie S. Seldon, Robert H. Alexander, Herbert Harris, Milton R. Henry and Alexander M. Wright.—Tuskegee Army Air Field Photo.

JUL 17 1943

47a

JUL 30 1943

47a

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

PURSUIT SQUADRON OFFICERS AT 'MESS'.—Somewhere in North Africa, this scene takes place every day. At this outdoor table, officers of the Negro fighter squadron eat their meals to fight the enemy. Lt Col. Benjamin O. Davis commands the fighter squadron.

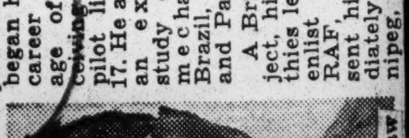
RAF Flying Demon, Pilot At 17, Now At Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

47a

JEFFERSON BARRACKS, Mo., July 1—Cpl. Norman Randall Bradshaw, who saw 14 months of active, hard-fighting service in the RAF, and is rarin' to get back into combat again as a ground man, is now stationed at Jefferson Barracks, basic training center of the Army Air Forces Technical Training Command.

Born the son of an English airman in Gama City, Bagon Providence, Brazil, Corporal Bradshaw began his flying career at the age of 14, receiving his solo pilot license at 17. He also made an extensive study of plane mechanics in Brazil, Mexico and Panama.



Corp. Bradshaw

A British subject, his sympathies led him to enlist in the RAF, which sent him immediately to Winnipeg, Canada, for basic training as a ground man. After arduous training there and at Fairbanks and Yuna, Alaska, he was ferried to England for action.

He became an RAF ground crew chief and master sergeant. For 14 months he fought on land, sea and in the air, and had a number of close brushes with death. He was on hand at Tobruk, where he received shrapnel and bayonet wounds, and was blasted out of the air while flying over the English Channel during a stay in London when he helped defend the city against the Luftwaffe.

JUL 3 1943

TASTED VARIED WARFARE

Of the unit to which he was attached, 274 went over as utility men—men who tasted every phase of modern warfare. Only 84 are alive to tell about it today. The corporal's own battle scars testify to a varied fighting experience. Besides shrapnel and bayonet wounds he carries two scars from trench knife stabs.

NOT UNSUNG

His exploits didn't go unnoticed by those in high places. Cited time and again, he has a host of medallions for bravery on the field, craftsmanship, marksmanship in the air, and gratitude awards from the Red Cross for transporting the wounded.

Ferried back to the States with a group of wounded soldiers, the corporal enlisted with Uncle Sam at Fort Benjamin Harrison on October 22, 1942. Before he arrived at Jefferson Barracks, he did duty at Tuskegee Flying School and the Lincoln, Nebraska, Air Base.

JUL 3 1943

Civilian Instructor Dies In Tuskegee Plane Crash

Chicago, Illinois Chicago Defender

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—Norman DeWitt Gray, 21, of Springfield, Ill., for two months a civilian instructor here, was killed Saturday when his plane crashed near the air field while apparently on a routine flight.

AUG 7 1943

47a

Gray was popular here with both the flyers and members of the ground crews. In 1940, when the civilian pilot training program was started in Chicago at the Harlem Airport, Gray registered for the course, along with his friend and companion, Simeon Brown, brother of Willa Brown, famed aviatrix and instructor for the civilian program at Harlem Airport.

So enthusiastic was Gray to take the Civil Aeronautics Administration course that he hitch-hiked to Chicago from Springfield, soon as the school was opened.

After completing their first studies at Harlem, Gray and Brown were the first two students to be awarded government scholarships in aviation training.

They pursued their advanced work at Knox college, Galesburg, Ill., and after graduation, Gray accepted an assignment here at the Tuskegee Air Field, while Instructor Brown returned to Harlem Airport in Chicago, to train civilian air students.

AUG 7 1943

Surviving Gray are his father in Springfield, and his sister, a trained nurse, who came to Tuskegee to accompany the body back to Springfield for burial.

JUL 31 1943

Informer
Houston, Texas

47a

TEXAN IS CREW CHIEF OF 99th

Col. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS, Jr., in command of the 99th Fighter Squadron in North Africa is shown with his crew chief Staff Sgt. VERNON A. WATSON of Seguin, Texas, standing beside a P-40 used in the battle on Sicily.

Lieut. Hall First Negro to Shoot Down German Plane

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

JUL 10 1943

47a

Allied Headquarters, North Africa.—First Lieutenant Charles B. Hall, 99th Pursuit Squadron, Tuskegee, Ala., whose home is in Brazil, Ind., won the praises of General Dwight Eisenhower, supreme commander of the Allied Forces in North Africa for being the first of the Negro race to shoot down Focke-Wulf 190, finest and fastest of the German fighter planes.

Lt. Hall is the first Negro to paint a swastika on his ship. "It was my eighth mission," Hall said, "but the first time I had seen the enemy close enough to shoot at him. I saw two Focke Wulfs following the Mitchells just after the bombs were dropped. I headed for the space between the fighters and bombers and managed to turn inside the Jerries.

"I fired a long burst and saw my tracers penetrate the second aircraft. He was turning to the left, but suddenly fell off and headed straight into the ground. I followed him down and saw him crash. He raised a big cloud of dust."

JUL 10 1943

General Eisenhower was at the base when the squadron returned. He was accompanied by Lt Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr. Both congratulated Lieut. Hall and the squadron for carrying out its mission.

JUL 10 1943

LIEUT. C. B. HALL

Eastern Nigeria Guardian

APR 2 1943

APR 2 1943

Port Harcourt, Nigeria

AMERICAN TROOPS

American forces are now reported to be less than 50 miles from the Eighth Army in Tunisia, and are fast driving the Germans along the road from El Gettia. This picture of American troops at exercise gives an idea of the type of men who are fighting the Germans in Tunisia

APR 2 1943

47a

Historic Occasions

99th LIVES UP TO BATTLE PROPHECY

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

By JAMES EDMUND BOYACK
(Special Correspondent)

47a

NEW YORK, July 5—(Exclusive)—Sunday, July 4, the 167th anniversary of our Declaration of Independence, was celebrated . . an historic occasion! But July 2, 1943 will henceforth take its place in our military annals as the day that 1st Lt. Charles B. Hall, of the famed 99th Pursuit Squadron, shot down a Focke-Wulf 190. The Focke-Wulf is Germany's fastest fighter plane; has a maximum speed of 370-mph and flashes eight machine guns.

The writer knows that in his office in the Pentagon Building in the Nation's Capital, General Henry H. "Hap" Arnold, Commanding General of the U. S. Army Air Forces, today must be wearing a smile. For he had faith in these Negro flyers. He was the one who answered their urgent request for combat duty.

JUL 10 1943

The race revels in them.

At the Olympic games in Germany in 1936, Jesse Owens vanquished all Nazi opposition, right under the Fuehrer's nose.

That hot June 22 night of 1938, Joe Louis hit the Nazi champion, Max Schemmling so hard, he was carried out of the Yankee stadium to a hospital.

These were historic occasions, when Nazi athletes fell before the onslaught of colored Americans.

FLYERS ON KEEN EDGE

On July 2, 1943, the 99th Pursuit Squadron covered itself with glory and lived up to the prophesy of Lt. Col. Philip G. Cochran, Army Air Force, hero of 61 aerial missions over North Africa. His last assignment before coming home was to teach the latest "tricks" of aerial combat to the 99th.

At the Waldorf-Astoria hotel here he told the writer:

"I have lived and worked with Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, and I can tell you that when that time comes, when he and his men meet the enemy . . .the Nazis had better look out. For those Negro officers and men are on a keen edge. They are like race horses champing at the bit.

JUL 10 1943

"Keep your eye on the headlines from North Africa. For sooner or later that's just where you'll find the 99th."

AIR VET GREETS GENERAL DAVIS

After our conversation, the 33-year-old veteran of the aerial wars, his chest covered with medals and service ribbons, came with me upstairs to meet Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, U.S.A., at that time assigned by the War Department as Military Aide to President Edwin Barclay, of Liberia.

The conversation was intimate and strictly "off-the-record." Col. Cochran thought good news, and the 60-year-old Negro veteran of the Spanish-American war swelled with pride.

As I left with Col. Cochran, and midst the adieus, the general told us smiling:

"I know my boy is preparing for big things. His letters are cheerful. He is working hard. I somehow have a feeling that the 99th will be heard from soon now."

JUL 10 1943

47a-1943

3 Richmond Youths Play Big Part In Success Of 99th Fliers

Journal and Guide Norfolk, Virginia

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
(U. S. War Correspondent)

(By Air Mail Delayed. Passed by Censor.)

AN ADVANCED ALLIED BASE IN TUNISIA — Three youthful sons of Richmond, Va., are daily contributing heavily to the success of the 99th Fighter Squadron although their work is on the ground and therefore seldom brought to public attention.

MR. YOUNG

They are Cpl. Kenneth C. Freeman, 21, 411 W. Marshall street; Corp. Augustus W. Gayles 22, 7 South Beech street, and Sgt William H. Young, 22, 107 Birch avenue.

Cpl. Freeman is an aviation mechanic and until recently was crew chief for Lt. James L. McCullin who has been missing in action since July 2.

GRADUATE OF ARMSTRONG HIGH SCHOOL

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Freeman of the same address, he finished Armstrong High School in 1939 and started a course in dental mechanics. But when the new program embracing Negroes in the Air Corps was announced, he and his buddy, Cpl. Gayles volunteered at Bolling Field and on May 8, 1941, shipped off to Chanute Field for six months of intensive training in aviation mechanics. Afterwards he went to Tuskegee where he joined this famed Fighter Squadron.

He is a member of St. Joseph Catholic Church and is better known by the younger set of Richmond as "Ken" or "Daddy."

Cpl. Gayles finished Armstrong two years ahead of Freeman and put in a year at Virginia State College before the Army got him.

JUL 31 1943

TRANSFERRED TO COMMUNICATION

He too studied aviation mechanics but when he went to Tuskegee he was transferred to the communications section in which he was trained to plot the courses of aircraft by means of radio equipment of a highly secret and complicated nature.

He is a member of Fifth Street Baptist Church and is best known at Second and Leigh as "Gus."

Sgt. Young graduated from Armstrong High in 1938 and worked at Thalheimer's department store until drafted in August, 1942. He is a member of Third Street Methodist Church and was active in the YMCA.

ARMAMENT INSPECTOR

His job for Uncle Sam is the inspection of armament, particularly the .50 calibre machine guns mounted in the wings of the P-40 Warhawks which transact most of their essential business.

JUL 3

He boasts a large number of nicknames, among them "Junie" and "Turf."

Our Men at Pantelleria

Union
Cincinnati, Ohio 1943

The participation of Negro Army aviators in the battle of Pantelleria is a significance deserving of more than passing notice.

It represents the first time Negro flyers have been sent on a combat mission for the United States, which mission gave them an opportunity to participate in the Allies' first test of a new type of aerial warfare.

Under the command of Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., a Washington lad, whose father is our only Army General, the boys handled their new P-40 Warhawks with excellent ability and all of their planes were returned to their base without incident, according to War Department reports.

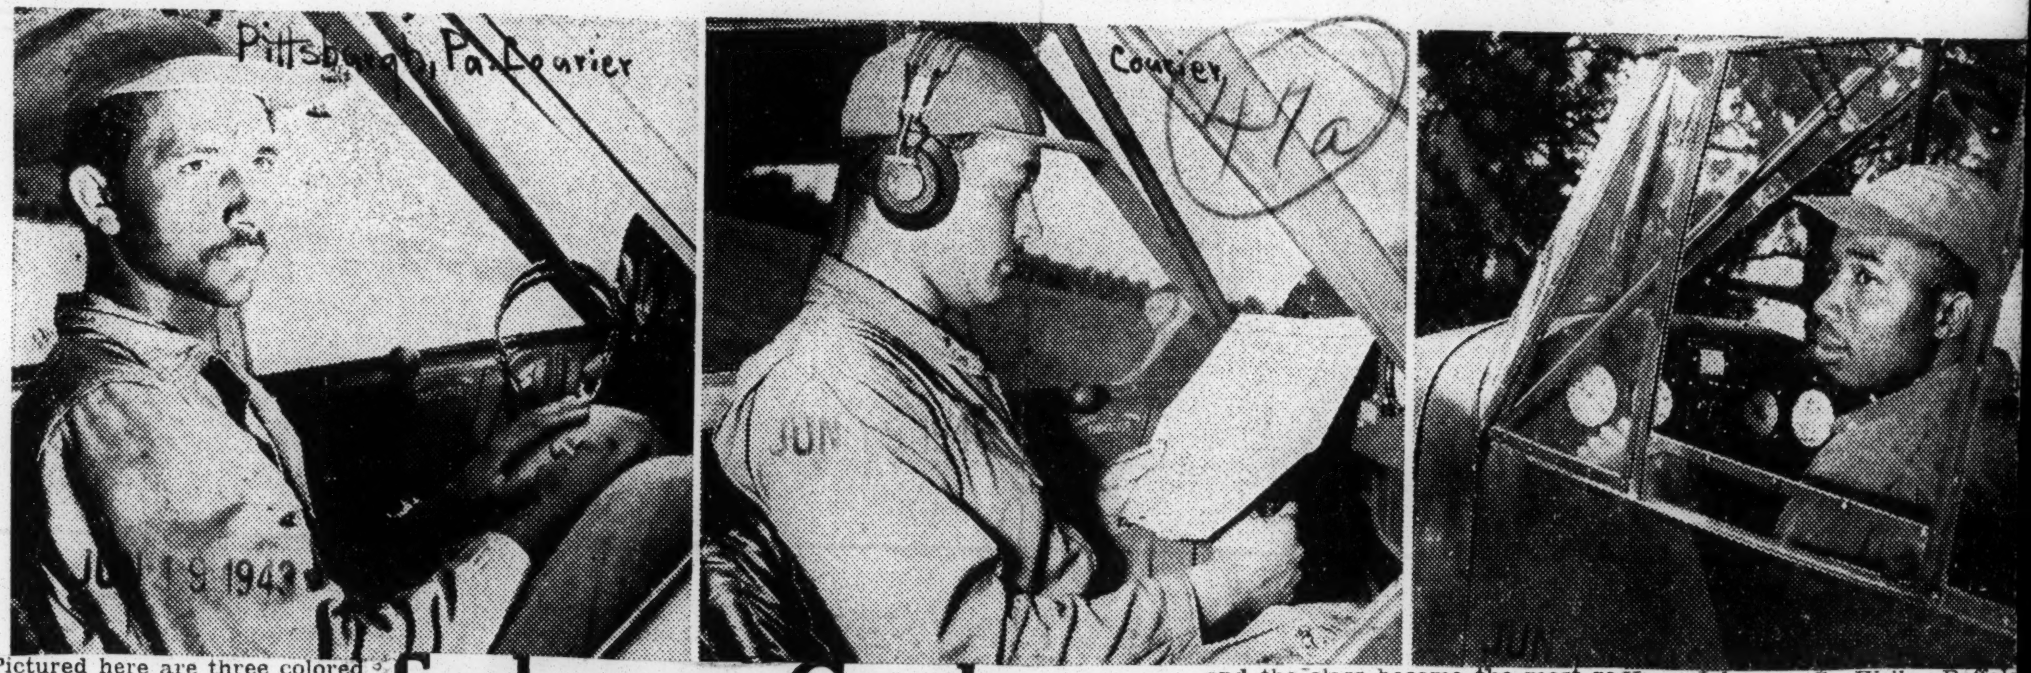
JUN 19 1943

47a

This is the type of participation in the war these Negro aviators have been clamoring for. They wanted an opportunity to take a crack at our common enemy the same as any other American. The War Department has granted them their wish, and as was to be expected, they came through with flying colors. No doubt they are now engaged in the battle for the occupation of Sicily.

Negro soldiers want the opportunity to make the same sacrifices in the war as other Americans are doing. They are willing to sacrifice their lives as well. By the same token we want to be considered as full-fledged Americans, and enjoy all the bounties that will come with the peace for which we are dying.

NEGRO PILOTS FLYING HIGH IN THE LONE STAR STATE WITH WHITE BUDDIES



Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier
Courier
47a
JUN 19 1943

Pictured here are three colored pilots who are participating with an artillery unit in the maneuvers being held in Texas and Louisiana.

On the left is S. Sgt. Octave J. Rainey, artillery liaison plane pilot, who resides in New Orleans. In the center is S. Sgt. Langston H. Caldwell of Denver, Colo., pilot of an artillery liaison plane. The other is S. Sgt. Elvatus C. Morris Jr., who hails from W. Monroe. La

---

Tuskegee Graduates Largest Pilot Class

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., July 8—With the North African achievements of the great all-Negro fighter squadron, commanded by Lt. Col. Benj. O. Davis, Jr., still ringing in their ears, Brig. Gen. Frederick V. H. Kimble told the largest class of fighter pilots—each class gets larger—ever to graduate from the Tuskegee Army Air Field, that, "With the receipt of your wings today, but a short while remains at Tuskegee for transition to combat craft, then you, too, join the Fighter squadrons."

JUL 10 1943

47a

The impressively brief ceremonies were opened with the invocation by Rev. H. V. Richardson, Tuskegee Institute chaplain. After the main address by General Kimble, commissions were presented to the graduating cadets by Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

Cadet honors were won by Cadets Joe A. Lewis, Denver, Colo., first; Theodore A. Wilson, Roanoke, Va., second, and Charles E. McGee, Champaign, Ill., third.

AWARDED WINGS

In culmination of the hardest nine months of their lives, the new fighter pilots were awarded their "wings" by Major [illegible] G. McPherson, [illegible] director of training, and the class became the most recent addition to the ever-growing number of Negro fighter pilots in the Army Air Forces.

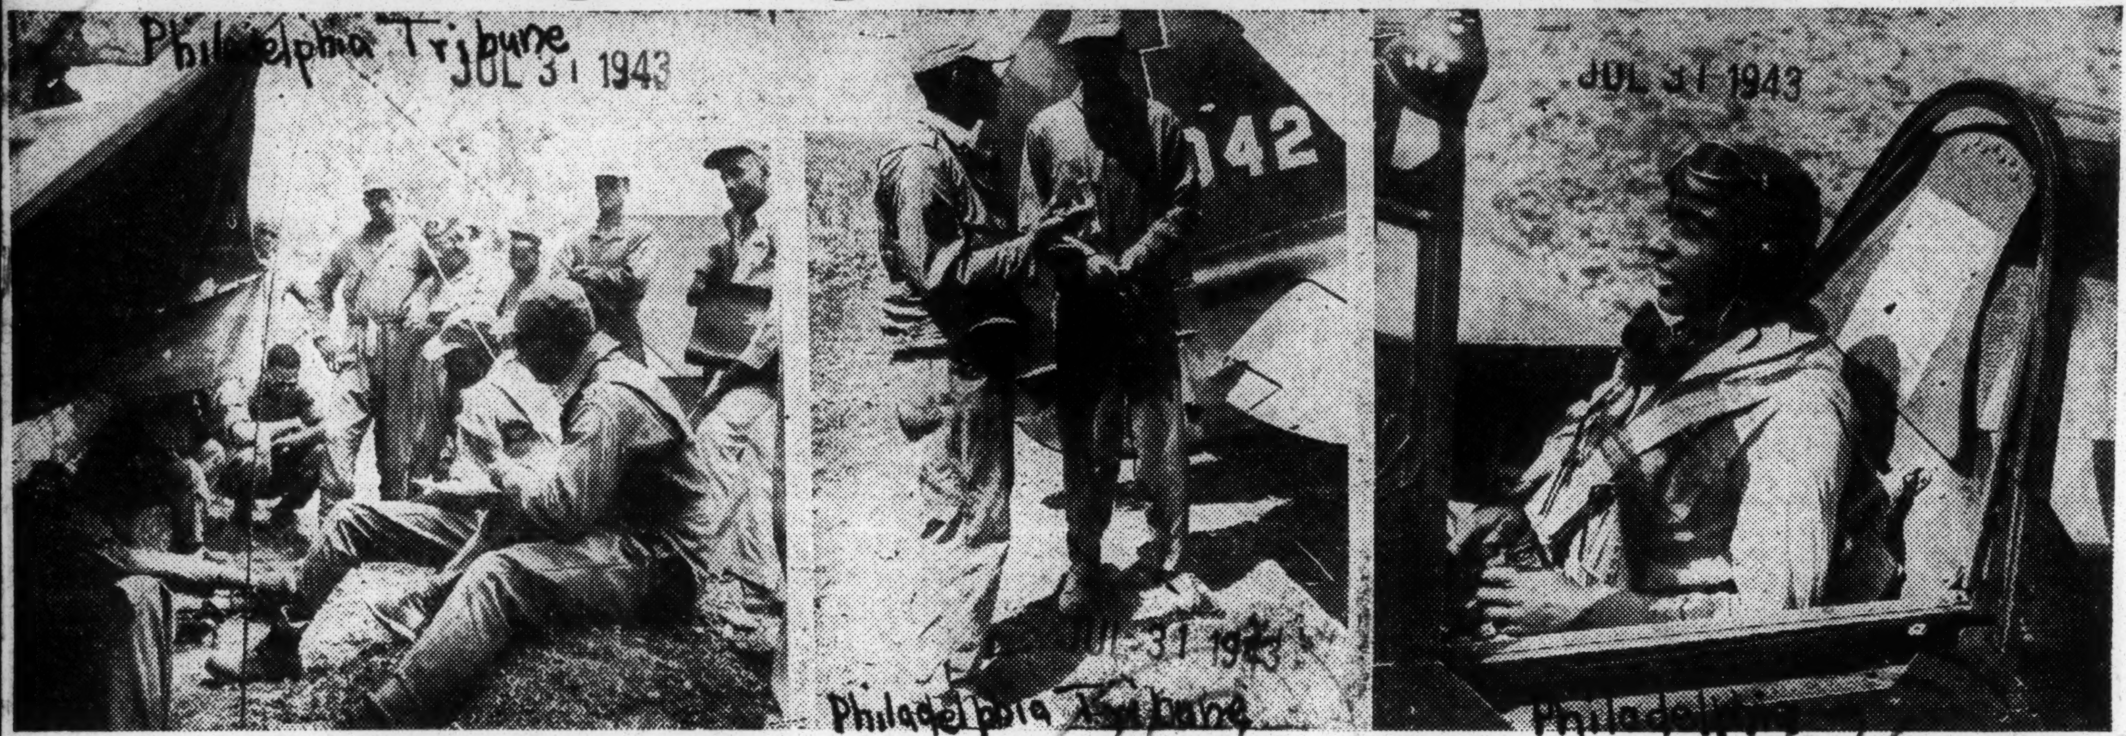
JUL 10 1943

Receiving wings and commissions were:

Second Lts. Milton Henry, Philadelphia; Robert M. Alexander, Harrisburg, Pa.; Alexander M. Bright, Chicago; Weldon K. Groves, Edwardsville, Kans.; Herbert S. Harris, Philadelphia; Richard H. Harris, Montgomery, Ala.; Wilbert H. Johnson, Los Angeles, Calif.; Willie S. Hunter, Albany, Ga.; Oscar A. Kenney, Tuskegee institute; Hezekiah Lacy, Jr., River Rouge, Mich.; Joseph A. Lewis, Denver, Colo.; Wayne V. Liggins, Springfield, Ohio; Charles E. McGee, Champaign, Ill.; Theopolis D. Moore, St. Louis; Walter J. Palmer, New York; Virgil J. Richardson, New York; Wylie W. Seldon, Norfolk, Va.; John S. Sloan, Louisville, Ky.

Leonard F. Turner, Washington, D.C.; Frank D. Walker, Richmond, Ky.; Johnson C. Wells, Buffalo, N.Y.; William G. Wilkerson, Camden, N.J.; William F. Williams, Cleveland, Ohio, and Theodore A. Wilson, Roanoke, Va.

99th Fighter Squadron In Thick Of Battle



Philadelphia Tribune JUL 31 1943

JUL 31 1943

Philadelphia Tribune

The 99th Fighter Squadron, first all-colored unit of the U. S. Air Forces, is in Africa and attached to the Northwest African Tactical Air Force. Above are three pictures of members of the squadron. Left, Captain George S. Roberts, of Fairmount, W. Va., "briefs" the pilots just before they go out to battle the Nazis. Center: Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commander of the squadron, is talking to his crew chief, Staff Sgt. Vernon A. Watson, of Seguin, Texas. Right: Lieut. Spann Watson, of Hackensack, N. J., is in the cockpit of his P-40.

JUL 31 1943

99th Squadron Based In Sicily To Protect Invasion Forces

JUL 31 1943

Pittsburgh, Pa.

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU
(Courier War Correspondent)

Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa.

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 29—American Negro fighter pilots are now based in Sicily on one of the airfields U.S. forces have captured from German and Italian defenders. They are presumably taking part in present operations against Axis held objectives in Sicily and the boot of the Italian mainland.

Use of these fighter pilots in the hottest sector of the Sicilian front is regarded here by Headquarters' flight offices as a distinct tribute to the courage and skill these fliers have shown in previous action. Having undergone their baptism of fire, this colored squadron, under the command of Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., is now regarded as veterans and capable of handling any tough assignment.

The squadron is using P-40 Warhawks which are noted for ruggedness and easy maneuverability but are heavier and slightly slower than most new type fighter planes being used by the Allies. The Warhawks are armed with six 50-calibre machine guns in the wings on each side of the fuselage. The firepower is so arranged that it will form 24 letters of the alphabet. The guns use armor piercing and tracer bullets.

JUL 31 1943

PRAISE FOR GENERAL EISENHOWER

You can be sure colored troops are in on the invasion of Sicily if General Ike Eisenhower has anything to do with it, and he has, because he bosses the show.

General Ike gives the colored boys a square deal, no jim crow. As they constitute 10 per cent of the people, he looks for 10 per cent of them in his outfit, and the boys like to fight with him.

Afro American, Baltimore, Md.

Ollie Stewart's cable from a North African Advanced Base is typical of the beautiful piece of reporting he has been doing for nearly a year.

He tells how the Ninety-ninth Squadron of colored flyers is helping furnish the air umbrella over Sicily as it did over Pantelleria. And when later word comes, we will hear for a certainty of the excellent invasion job Ike Eisenhower's engineers, quartermasters and air base security units are doing too.

JUL 24 1943

'Stars and Stripes' Hails Valor of Negro Aviators

Daily Worker, New York, N.Y.

"Stars and Stripes," American soldiers' paper, published overseas, has a refreshing editorial in its July 1 issue on the Negro aviators, who are squashing the Nazis "like bugs."

It follows:

"Addressing the 'congress of the International Union of Journalism' at Vienna recently, Rosenberg, one of Hitler's thugs, stated in quivering accents that the airmen on some American bombers were Negroes.

JUL 30 1943

"Apparently this man is so 'sensitive' that he is unable to bear the thought of Negroes squashing Nazis like bugs.

"The Nazis have maintained that the art of flying is the privilege of the Nordic 'superior' race because it requires courage, and now low and behold a great many of their flaxen-haired Aryans are being killed by bombs dropped by Negroes who appear to have mastered the art of aviation.

"The humiliation of it leaves Rosenberg stuttering; but is nothing to the humiliation he will suffer when black, brown, red, yellow, and white men—all Americans and all serving with equal courage and distinction—march down the streets of Berlin in the victory parade that will follow the complete destruction of Nazi tyranny."

JUL 30 1943

Tuskegee Band Helps Raise Million In Bonds

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—Making over 52 personal appearances in the last 30 days, the military band of the Tuskegee army Air Field is probably the busiest band in the army.

JUN 5 1943

Aside from local obligations on this field, First Lieutenant Frank L. Drye, of Tuskegee, director of the band, and his sixty-five musicians, have aided in raising more tha na million dollars in the state bond rally through civic organizations, schools, colleges and various institutions.

This bond rally began last October, when the stirring music of the TAAF band swelled out and down the streets of Luverne, Ala., and stimulated the purchase of $10,000 worth of bonds. This was merely he beginning. At Selma, the bond urchase soared to $25,000, and in Montgomery it went to $50,000.

Having traveled more than 3,000 niles throughout the state, there s hardly any city or town that the and has not visited on the "bond selling campaign." From this aggregation the Post Orchestra, known as the Imperial Wings of Rhythm, under the direction of Sgt. Claude Garvey was organized; carrying the bond rally into schools, social organizations, clubs and numerous municipal institutions.

JUN 5 1943

Working in connection with, and under the auspices of the National Division, War Saving Staff for Alabama, of which Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, is chairman, the TAAF band has enjoyed state-wide popularity.

T. M. Campbell, consultant, and Jesse O. Thomas, national organizations division director, both on the War Savings staff for the State of Alabama, have aided in the success of this state-wide campaign.

The Tuskegee Army Air Forces Band, known officially as 313th Army Air Forces Band, has the distinction of being the first Negro Air Forces band; having been activated April 21, 1942, by Captain Clyde H. Bynum, post adjutant. It already has established a reputation of having one of the best set of musicians in the armed forces. The TAAF military band's personnel is made up entirely of enlisted men.

JUN 5 1943

47a-1943

Army Nurses Prepare For Any Emergency

MAR 1 1943 MAR 1 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia
MAR 1 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—The Army Nurses must travel along with the fighting units. Quick medical aid often means the difference between life and death to a wounded soldier. It's necessary, therefore that the nurses learn military tactics. The fundamentals of drilling, saluting, adjusting the gas mask and other equipment is a part of their daily activity at the Tuskegee Army Flying School. They must be prepared for any emergency.

Captain Nathaniel Freeman, their supervisor, is shown instructing the nurses how to adjust their equipment. They are, left to right: Second Lieuts. Ruth Faulkner, Della Bassett and Ruth Speight.

'Mistake' Puts Negro Cadets In White Air Squad; Bounced

Peoples Voice
New York, N.Y.

MAR 1 3 1943

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—Can a man be a private in the Army air force reserves at the same time he holds an honorable discharge from the United States Army? That's a $64 question that might be asked of Pvt. Stewart B. Fulbright, Lincoln University alumnus and a French instructor here until his Jan. 31 entry into Flight "B" of the 1166th Technical School Squadron at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Off the campus only ten days and then back again, Pvt. Fulbright said, when interviewed here last week, "I thought it strange that I was the only Negro in a group of over 2,000 aviation cadets and I later found out that there were three of us there by mistake."

The others to whom he referred were Pvt. Wendell R. Smith, of Des Moines, and Pvt. Charles L. Smith, of St. Louis.

MAR 1 3 1943

"I can sincerely say that during this processing (mental, physical and orientation tests, interviews and drilling) no discrimination was shown toward me," said Fulbright. He says his white companions accepted him in their conversation and in horseplay and that the flight sergeant was especially kind.

INSULTED BY KP

Pvt. Fulbright ate in a Negro mess hall at his own request, not on orders, but one of his Negro confrerees who ate in the general mess was alleged to have been told by a kitchen police officer that "We don't allow n——s to eat in here."

The day following that incident, according to Fulbright, Pvt. Wendell Smith was transferred from Squadron 1167, which is an aviation cadet unit, to Squadron 917, a Negro unit of enlisted men. Unlike the Lincolnite, he had not been permitted to go through the processing, but on Feb. 8 he, too, was notified that he would be discharged.

The third Negro soldier, Pvt. Charles Smith, was on a 10-day convalescent furlough at that time but the day Pvt. Smith reported for duty he was given an honorable discharge also.

MISTAKE MADE

MAR 1 3 1943

When informed on Feb. 8 that he was discharged, Fulbright was told, "the Omaha office (headquarters of the Seventh Area command) made a mistake." He was given the honorable discharge and permitted to keep his uniform, but he's still subject to the air reserves, according to a notation typed in on his discharge. It took two more days to complete the Army routine of issuing the three discharge papers.

47a

Tuskegee Flyers Praised In House

APR 24 1943

Congresswoman Takes Issue With Downey Bill — Says Criticism Was "Ill-Advised"

~~Pittsburgh Courier~~, Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON, April 22—For a second time in two weeks, the bitter fight between the advocates of jim crow and non-jim-crow training of Negro Army flyers reached the floor of Congress this week when Congresswoman Frances Bolton, just returned from a meeting of the board of trustees of Tuskegee institute, told members of the House of Representatives last Friday that criticism of the Army's jim crow aviation base at Tuskegee was "ill-advised."

The position of the congresswoman from Ohio was at sharp variance with that taken two weeks ago in the Senate by Senator Sheridan Downey (D., Calif.), who demanded a sweeping investigation by the Senate Military Affairs Committee of practices of segregation by the Army.

LEADERS SUPPORT EARLY HEARING

While this debate was going on in Congress, interest in the Downey-Hastie resolution (S. Res. 132), drafted by Judge William Hastie and sponsored by Senator Downey, which would institute a Senate investigation of Army jim crow, was steadily mounting. Members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee had received this week a number of communications from Negro editors and organization leaders urging them to hold speedy hearings on the resolution.

In her defense of segregation of Negro aviation cadets, the Ohio congresswoman declared: "Now, there are those among our colored people who stand belligerently against any form of what they call segregation. Criticism of this aviation school has been voiced, I think, very ill-advisedly. To my mind, Tuskegee saw with a very real vision that the first step towards wings for our colored boys are best taken in a completely colored school, where they are not subjected to the attitudes which drive them in upon themselves and give them a sense of inadequacy. In the air men must feel themselves gods, or like Icarus, they lose their wings and fall to earth."

APR 24 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh PA

47a

Tuskegee Sends Out Largest Air Class

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

MAY 8 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., May 6—In keeping with the War Department's program to expand its quota of pilots this year, the Tuskegee Army Air Field graduated the largest class of flyers in its history last week. They received the traditional coveted silver wings and a commission in the Army of the United States, as a result of their untiring efforts and excellent ability in attaining the ratings of pilots.

THREE WIN SPECIAL AWARDS

MAY 8 1943

Following the invocation by the Post Chaplain, Captain Douglas L. T. Robinson, Lieutenant Colonel Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, introduced Major Donald G. McPherson, director of flight training, who delivered the principal address.

MAY 8 1943

Immediately following the address, Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish presented the graduates their commissions. Presentation of the silver "wings" to the candidates was made by Major McPherson. Special honors were awarded to three of the cadets by Major John G. Cook, commandant of cadets. The three honored men receiving silver identification bracelets for outstanding academic and military bearing were Second Lieutenants Vernon V. Haywood, Raleigh, N. C., Ulysses S. Taylor, Kaufman, Texas and Charles I. Williams of Lima, Ohio. Other members of the graduating class were Second Lieutenants Paul Adams, Charles P. Bailey, James E. Brothers, James Y. Carter, Arnold W. Cisco, Wilson V. Eagleson, William J. Faulkner Jr., Walter T. Foreman, Herbert C. Houston, Freddie E. Hutchins,

47a

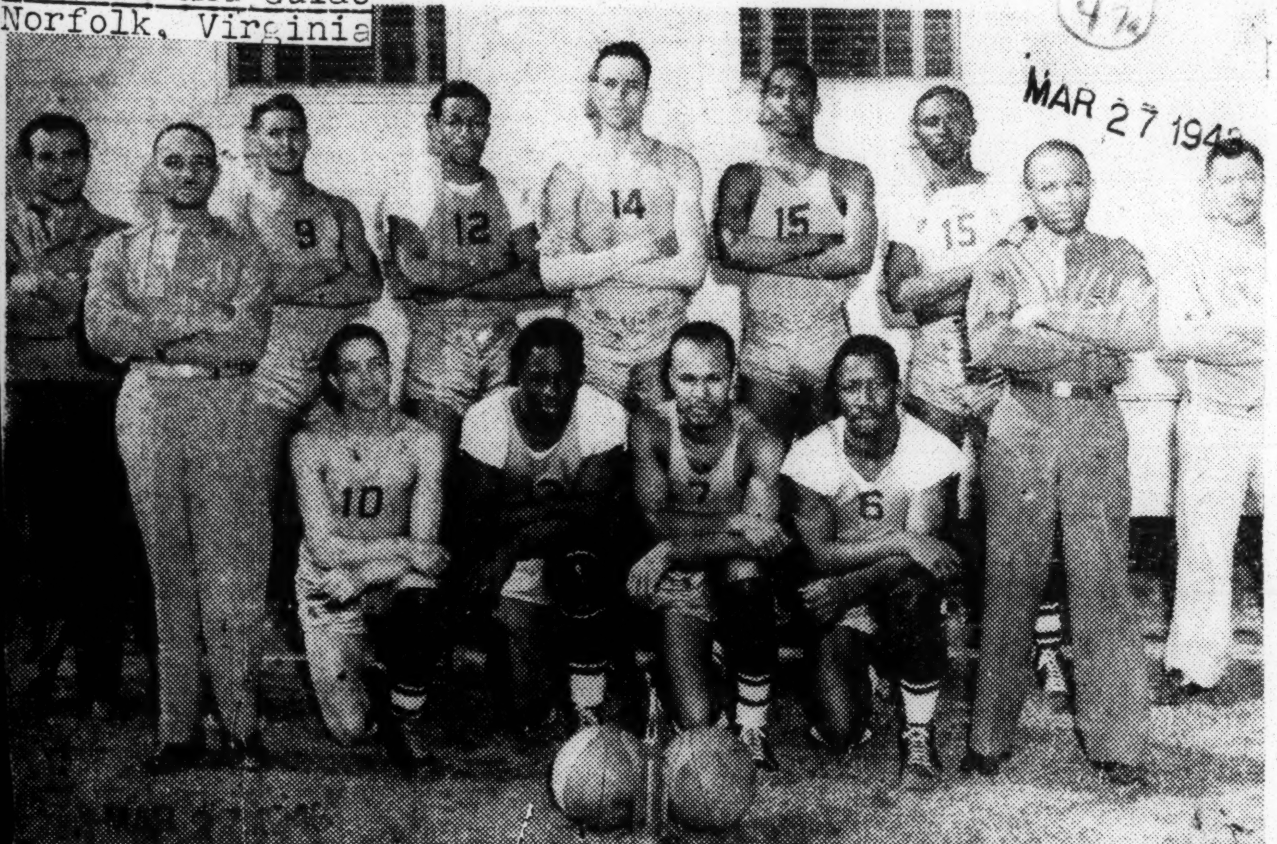
Leonard M. Jackson, Sidney J. Moseley Jr., Curtis C. Robinson, Harold E. Sawyer, Lewis C. Smith and Luke J. Weathers Jr.

Tuskegee Flyers Win Army Tourney

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

47

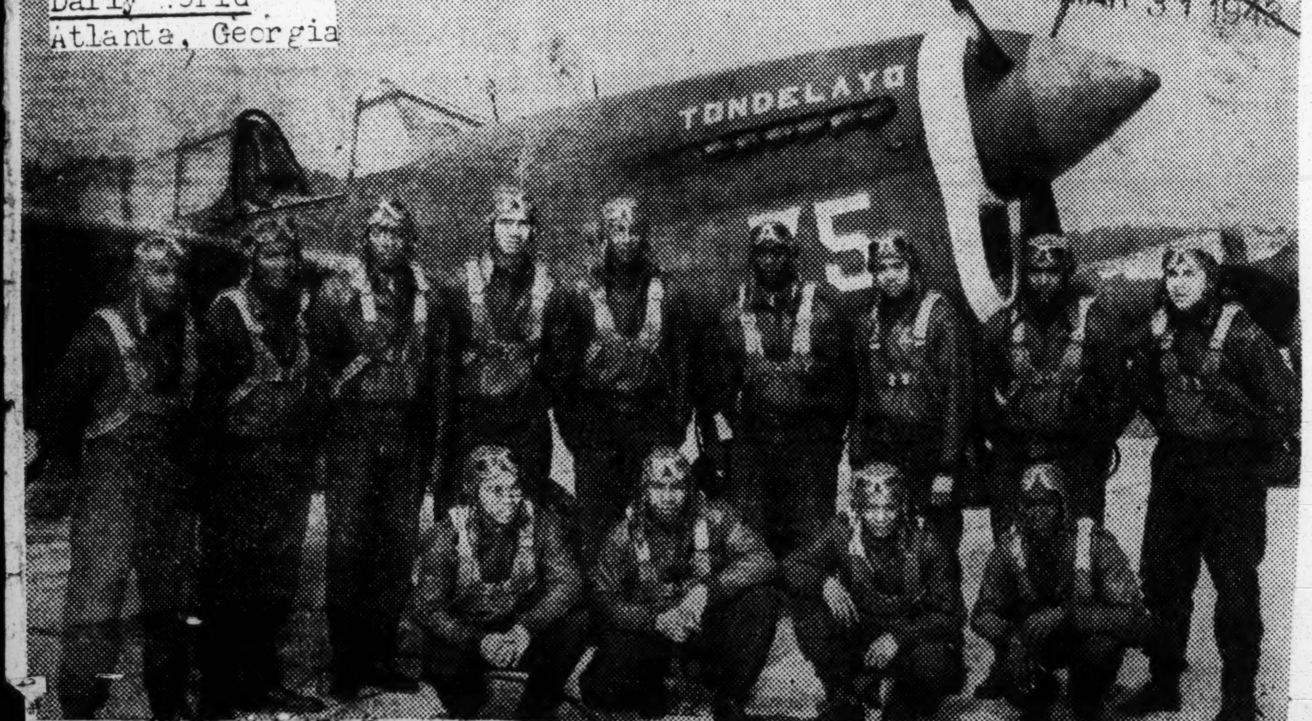
MAR 27 1943



They Have Won Their Coveted Silver Wings

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

MAR 31 1943



TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(SNS)—Officers that have seen their dreams come true in the field of flying at the Tuskegee Army Flying School are shown standing beside one of the fighter planes. They are, left to right: Second Lieutenants Elmer L. Gordon of Portsmouth, Va.; Lloyd G. Singletary of Jacksonville, Fla.; Woodrow W. Crockett of Texarkana, Ark.; Lawrence E. Dickson of New York, N. Y.; William Gordon of Jackson, Miss.; Alfonza W. Davis of Omaha, Neb.; Clarence W. Allen of Mobile, Ala.; Leroy Bowman of Sumter, S. C., and Wilmeth W. Sidat Singh of Washington,

---

D. C. (standing). Kneeling: Walter L. McCreary of San Antonio, Texas; Pearlee E. Saunders of Bessemer, Ala.; Charles F. Jamerson of Pasadena, Cal., and Alwayne M. Dunlap of Washington, D. C.

Bee [redacted]
Chicago, Ill.

AIR SCHOOL GIVES 'BROADWAY TO CHEHAW' AT TUSKEGEE

APR 11 1943

APR 11 1943

47e

TUSKEGEE, Apr. 8—(ANP)—Under the sponsorship of the Women's club of Tuskegee institute, the special service department of the Tuskegee Army Flying school recently delighted an enthusiastic audience of 3,500, that overflowed the institute's large Logan hall, by displaying a remarkable array of talent in a variety show, "From Broadway to Chehaw."

The entire proceeds of the program were donated to the flying school's Soldier's Day Room fund, —marking a tremendous step forward in providing the men here with well-furnished, adequately-equipped places of recreation and relaxation.

APR 11 1943

Providing entertainment to suit all tastes, the performance exhibited a versatile, well-rounded program that ranged from "hep cat jam sessions' 'to dramatic dances and classical music. Smoothing the breaks between numbers and "giving out" with a steady line of patter, Sgt. James H. Pittman of New York, master of ceremonies, kept the audience in an appreciative mood all evening with his score of surprising and humorous antics.

APR 11 1943

Highlighting the program was the dramatic dance interpretation of the well-known folk song, "Chloe", by the Elizabeth Ray dancers, with an excellent vocal rendition by Cpl. Leon E. Smith of Detroit. These dancers were directed by Miss Elizabeth Ray, woman's physical education director at the institute. Also for the benefit of the so-called "high-brows", was the masterful piano technique of Pvt. James White. Pvt. White, a former student of New England conservatory and a graduate of Harvard university, gave a powerful program of classical selections.

APR 11 1943

The "jive lovers" received their "kicks" for the evening through various "solid" vocals by the quartet of enlisted men, Pfc Carl Barker of Cleveland, Pvt. William Starling of Baltimore, Pfc Warren Johnson of Washington, and Pvt. Emanuel Walker of New York. The flying school orchestra, 'the Imperial Wings of Rhythm", also gained the appreciation of the "swing-set" by their "jam session" of "rocking rhythm."

The "standing room only" signs and the appreciative applause were ample evidence of the show's popularity and the enjoyment received by the studen's and citizens of Tuskegee, as well as the soldiers from the Tuskegee Army Flying school.

The success of the production under the direction of Lt. Kermit Mehlinger of Washington, assistant special service officer, was largely due to the efforts of three civic-minded women of the institute. These three are Mrs. D. D. Patterson, Mrs. Max Bond and Mrs. J. A. Kenny of the public affairs committee of the Women's club, who managed the promotion of the show in the interests o fthe Soldiers' Day Room fund.

Flyer Seen Crashing Into Lake Huron

MAY 14 1943

MAY 14 1943

Army Reports Body, Chute, Plane Could Not Be Found; See Oil Slick

MAY 14 1943

EAST TAWAS, Mich.—Lt. Wilmeth Sidath Singh, graduate of the army flying school at Tuskegee, Ala., and former football ace of Syracuse university, was reported missing on Sunday after his single-seated pursuit plane crashed into Lake Huron near here.

MAY 14 1943

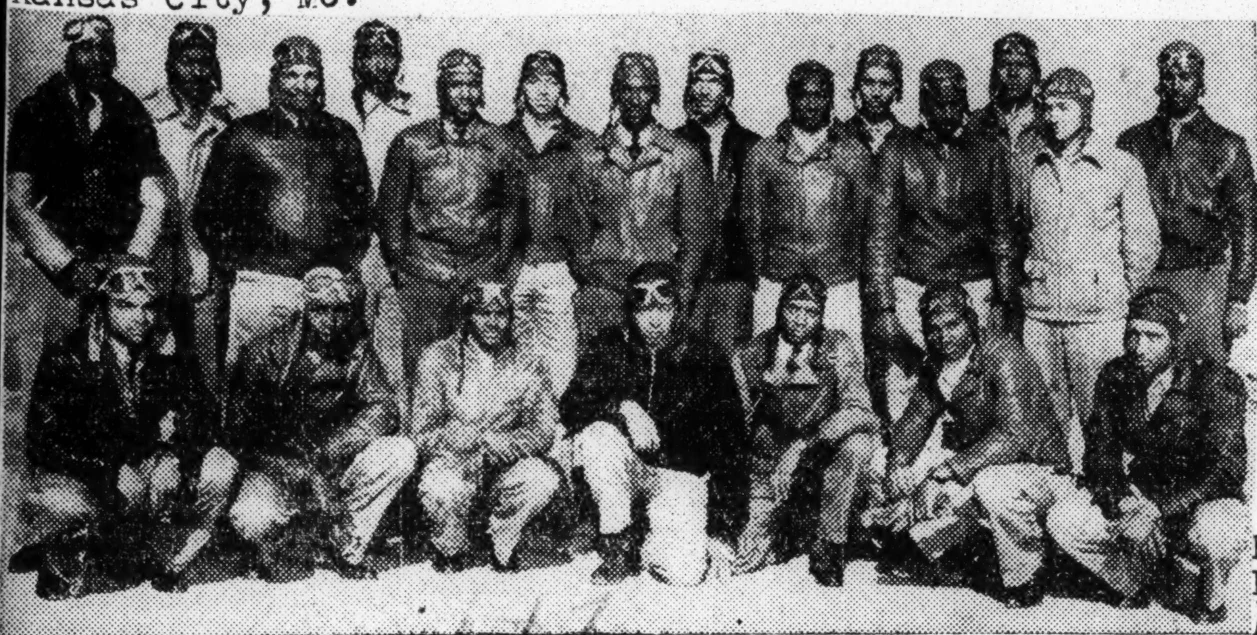
Attaches at the flying headquarters, Selfridge Field said that they had seen him bail out of his plane, but neither plane, his body or chute was found. A large oil slick was found on the lake, the army said.

Army officials said that he was on a routine flight at the time of the crash.

MAY 14 1943

Sidat-Singh starred in sports at Clinton high school, New York City where he was graduated in 1935. He was graduated from Syracuse university in 1939 and was an outstanding star in both football and track. His father, Dr. Samuel Sidat-Singh, lives in New York, and his mother, Mrs. Pauline E. Sidat-Singh, lives in Washington.

47a-1943
Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.



TEACH ROOKIES HOW TO FLY—

These are the men who give the aviation cadets at the Tuskegee Army Flying School their initial experience of climbing into a cockpit. Shown here are civilian flying instructors employed at the Army Air Forces Training detachment, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, where hawkmen at T.A.F.S. receive their primary training before being transferred to this field for their basic training.

Bottom row: (left to right) Perry Young, Oberlin, Ohio; Charles H. Flowers, Wadesboro, N. C.; Claude Platt, Fort Worth, Texas; Charles A. Anderson (chief pilot) Bridgeport, Penn.; C. R. Haris, Wilksboro, N. C.; Wendell R. Lipscomb, Berkley, Cal.; James E. Wright, Savannah, Ga.

Top row: (elft to right) Robert Terry, Greensboro, N. C.; John H. Young, 3d, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Charles W. Stephens Jr., Monroeville, Ala.; Charles R. Foxx, West Palm Beach, Fla.; Roscoe D. Draper, Haverford, Penn.; Sherman T. Rose, Jefferson City, Mo.; James A. Hill, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Adolph J. Moret Jr., New Orleans, La.; Earnest Henderson, Mountville, S. C.; Matthew W. Plummer, San Antonio, Texas; Linkwood Wiliams, Madison, Ill.; Daniel James, Pensacola, Fla.; Lewis A. Jackson, Argola, Ind.; Milton P. Crenhsaw, Little Rock, Ark.

Heading the list with the greatest number of flying hours is Charles A. Anderson, who has approximately 5,000 hours in the air. Challenging this remarkable record are Lewis A. Jackson, director of training, who has chalked up some 3500 air hours, and Milton P. Crenshaw and Charles R. Foxx, each of whom has 15,000 hours to his credit.—(ANP).

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Air Officers' School Opens On January 15

JAN 2 - 1943

First For Colored; Missouri Camp Is Selected For Work

JEFFERSON BARRACKS, Mo. — The first Officers' Candidate School for Negro soldiers in the Army Air Forces Technical Training Command will open at Jefferson Barracks on January 15, according to an announcement by Col. Thomas J. J. Christian, commanding officer of the historic Army Post.

JAN 2 - 1943

First contingent of soldier students selected from the ranks of Negro troops throughout the United States will arrive for the 11-week course on January 15 said the colonel.

The opening of an Officers Candidate School at Jefferson Barracks is one of several new functions the Post will take on augmenting its already well established program as the first Basic Training Center of the Technical Training Command, under Major General Walter R. Weaver.

Negro troops at the barracks will have equal treatment and equal facilities as all soldiers stationed there, said Colonel Christian, who announced that plans were already underway for the construction of a new service club, a chapel, post exchange, an officers' club and bachelor officers' quarters for Negroes.

A Cooks and Bakers School for Negro soldiers will also open on January 15, said the announcement.

JAN 2 - 1943

PLAN OFFICERS' SCHOOL

There is also planned, at a later date, to open an Officers' Training School for Air Corps specialists who have received preliminary training at Yale University. This school will be open to a select group of Negro officers for intensive six week courses.

Graduates of the Officers' Candidate School will be trained as supply officers, adjutants, personnel officers, military intelligence officers and statistical officers. Many will be sent to other schools upon graduation to do further work in the field of their specialization.

It is understood that the graduates will serve as administrative and technical officers for the fighter squadrons being prepared for combat at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama.

Aviation cadets slated for flight training at Tuskegee may be sent to Jefferson Barracks for preflight ground school, said the colonel.

The barracks has been an Army Air Forces Technical Training Command basic center since September 1, 1940. JAN 2 - 1943

Prior to that its history goes back to 1826, making it one of the oldest Army posts west of the Mississippi. Colonel Christian took command of the Post on December 5, 1942.

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Mrs. Gertrude Williams, Miss Helen E. Allie and Miss Cecilia Dixon Work With Determination to 'Keep 'Em Flying'

TUSKEGEE — (ANP) — The efficency with which the weaker sex has taken the bull by the horns in the numerous war industries and the army personnel is a convincing revelation of their unusual aptness and adaptability. The red bandanna has been discarded for ear phones and the kitchen apron packed away for the leather and rubber aprons for the duration.

The Tuskegee Army Flying school presents one of the first opportunities by which the Negro woman has found opportunity to serve in skilled jobs that are a part of the many tasks in "keep 'em flying" at the wartime flying field. Only a few of the women working at this station were technically trained in their respective jobs, but they have successed by their courageous spirit and determination linked with a desire to do their part. As an integral part in the huge war program, they can point to their performance with pride. 1/15/43

The majority of these unsung heroines are under 31 years of age and spend their spare time supporting the activities of the USO. They come from New York, Los Angeles, and from the smaller cities of the south.

Take, for example, Mrs. Gertrude Williams of Chicago. She attended Sumner high school in St. Louis and later the University of Illinois for two years. Her entire family typifies the spirit of democracy. Her brother is a sergeant at Camp Lee, Va. Her mother is a director of a USO branch in California, and her father is an examining physician at Lambert field, near St. Louis. Only 20, and the mother of a baby boy, she operates the intricate reproduction machinery at the sub depot here. 1/15/43

She and her co-worker are specialists in the handling of the lithograph, multigraph, multilith and addressograph machine that furnish circulars, bulletins and other reading matter to thousands on this post. Miss Velma Porter, her co-worker, hails from San Antonio, Texas, where she received her certificate as aircraft electrician when only 16 years old. Miss Porter received training at Tuskegee institute.

From the Quaker City comes charming Miss Helen E. Allie to take over the highly skilled business of laboratory technician at the base hospital. She finished the Memorial Laboratory school and later earned the nurse's certificate at Mercy hospital in Philadelphia. She is a resident nurse in Tuskegee and rides 20 miles each day to fill her job as a technician.

Probably the first Negro woman aircraft dispatcher is lovely and petite Miss Cecelia Dixon of Columbia, S. C. A former West Virginia State coed and dancing star, she claims the AKA as her sorority. Miss Dixon shelved her social duties for war duties, and now gives the all clear signal to incoming and out-going air craft at this field. Her job is probably one of the most responsible ones on the field. 1/15/43

In the fabric repairing department down on the line, patching up damaged wings, ailerons, and rudders, is Mrs. Adell McDonald of Tuscaloosa, Ala., classified as a mechanic learner. The friendly, plump, housewife is a former Stillman Institute Junior college student.

Two of the most proficient clerks on the post are two charming young office workers at the Quartermaster corps. They are Miss Violet Brown and Miss Lillian Register. The requisition clerk, Miss Register, hails from Pensacola, Fla., and boasts of her brother in the service who is stationed at Camp Lee, Va. She attended Tuskegee while Miss Brown comes from Harlem. She also has a brother in the army. Miss Brown, athletic and 19, is the chief clerk at the quartermaster office. 1/15/43

Last but not least of the versatile group of skilled ground crew personnel is Miss Marcelle Phyllis Reed of Atlanta, who although, on the ground, is to the pilot what the navigator is to the chief pilot in the large bombers. She plots the cross-country courses that our flying officers take in their routine flights.

Holding a degree from Tusgegee, Miss Reid is so thoroughly trusted by the officers that they seldom check behind her accuracy that makes her an artist in the field of navigation.

These young women form part of the ground crew that make it possible for the pilots here to undergo their training. They are proud of their jobs that indirectly will send down to earth in flames the planes of our enemies.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Cadet Gets "Wings"

DEC 26 1942

Cadet Robert B. Tresville of West Point, his mother, Mrs. Robert Tresville and his brother enjoy a happy reunion as Tresville completes flying training at the Tuskegee Army Flying School. He will return to the United States Military Academy to receive his commission in the early part of 1943.

West Pointer Among Flying School Grads

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Outstanding among the many cadets who have completed their flying training at the Tuskegee Army Flying School is Air Cadet Robert B. Tresville of the United States Military Academy.

He completed his secondary education at the Germantown High School, Philadelphia, in June, 1937, and the following year entered the University of Pennsylvania. As an undergraduate student he excelled in swimming, track and tennis.

To West Point in '39

After one year of college, he entered West Point July 1, 1939, where he was active in routine sports and achieved recognition in the realm of tennis before his assignment to the 66th Army Air Forces Training Detachment at Tuskegee Institute for his primary flight training.

He completed his advance training at the Tuskegee Army Flying School on December 12, with the status of air cadet. At present, he holds an instructor's rating in American Red Cross swimming. On the rifle range he has a rating of marksmanship and sharp shooter with the pistol.

Father a Warrant Officer

Air Cadet Tresville's father, R. B. Tresville, holds the rank of warrant officer and is the bandmaster of the famous 24th Infantry stationed for many years at Fort Benning, Ga. Mr. Tresville began service abroad many months ago.

Mrs. R. B. Tresville, his mother, resides in Bay City, Tex. Cadet Tresville will return to West Point in the near future where he will graduate in the early part of the incoming year.

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.

TUSKEGEE BASE RECORD PRAISED

FEB 5 1943

Social Disease Group Is Told Phenix City Also 'Cleaned Up'

FEB 5 1943

ATLANTA, Feb. 3 —(AP)— The Tuskegee (Ala.) Air Base, all-Negro flight training center, has established one of the nation's best records in curbing venereal diseases, an Army medical officer asserted Wednesday.

The air school's rate of infection dropped in October to one of the lowest in the Army, Maj. Ernest B. Howard, of the Army Medical Corps, told a regional social hygiene conference.

Phenix City, Ala., near Ft. Benning, world's largest infantry school, "has been cleaned up," said the venereal disease control officer for the Fourth Service Command.

Jacksonville, Fla., too, is doing a good job, he added, but no favorable trend has been noted in Atlanta, where some infection increase is reported.

Problem Intensified

Surg. Gen. Thomas Parran, of the U. S. Public Health Service, told the conference the influx of thousands of trainees had intensified the problem of venereal disease control in the South.

FEB 5 1943

Selective service examinations reveal, he said, a surprising geographical variation in syphilis incidence.

In the 16 Southern states and the District of Columbia, the surgeon general said, the rate among white boys examined was 21 per 1,000 compared with a rate of nine in the North Central states.

"When one adds that to the much higher rate among Negroes," he added, "it is apparent that the problem is intensified in the South."

Col. Charles G. Souder, M. C., of the Fourth Service Command, said civilian committees in the seven states covered by the command "had not responded promptly and freely" to the Army's request for suppression of prostitution.

Eight Leaders Listed

The eight cities in the Southeast where the most cases were reported for the first 11 months of 1942 he listed as Jacksonville, Fla.; Atlanta, Columbus, Savannah, Macon, Augusta, in Georgia; Columbia, S. C., and Fayetteville, N. C.

"Four Georgia cities listed were responsible for 34 per cent of infections acquired in 15 leading cities of the Southeast," Col. Souder said, and added that for the months of October and November of last year "Atlanta led all other cities as to source. No other city approached it except Birmingham."

Among 19,000 reported sources of infection in the first 10 months of 1942, Col. Souder said, "20 per cent were acquired in Georgia. North Carolina, Georgia and Florida accounted for over 50 per cent o the cases."

Birmingham News
Birmingham, Ala

Tuskegee's All-Negro Flight Training Center Praised By Parran

Spread Of Infections In Birmingham Reported High During Part Of '42

ATLANTA—(AP)—Influx of thousands of military trainees has greatly intensified the problem of venereal disease control in the South, Surgeon General Thomas Parran, of the U. S. Public Health Service, told a regional social hygiene conference here Wednesday.

Selective service examinations, he said, have revealed a surprising geographical variance in syphilis incidence, explaining that the rate among white boys in the 16 Southern states and the District of Columbia was 21 per 1,000 as compared with nine in the North Central states.

FEB 4 1943

"When one adds that to the much higher rate among Negroes, it is apparent that the problem is intensified in the South," he declared.

Col. Charles G. Souder, M.C., of the Fourth Service Command, asserted that the Army's request for suppression of prostitution had not met prompt response in the seven states in the Fourth Service Command.

FEB 4 1943

Jacksonville, Fla., Atlanta, Columbus, Savannah, Macon and Augusta, in Georgia; Columbia, S. C., and Fayetteville, N. C., were listed by Col. Souder as the eight cities in the Southeast where the greatest number of cases were reported in the first 11 months of 1942.

He reported four Georgia cities were responsible for 34 per cent of the infections acquired in 15 leading Southeastern cities, and that for October and November, 1942, "Atlanta led all other cities as to source. No other city approached it except Birmingham."

FEB 4 1943

On the brighter side of the picture, the conference heard another Army medical officer describe how the all-Negro filght training center at Tuskegee, Ala., had made one of the nation's best records in combatting venereal diseases.

Maj. Ernest B. Howard, venereal disease control officer for the Fourth Service Command, told also of improvement in the situation at Jacksonville, Fla., and Phenix City, Ala., near Ft. Benning.

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

FOR MORE NEGRO PILOTS

FEB 29 1943

Two New Squadrons Will Be Trained at Tuskegee

FEB 29 1943

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 — The Army Air Corps is forming two additional squadrons of Negro pilots to work in a group with the first such squadron now in training at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama.

FEB 29 1943

In addition to training of pilots for these squadrons, the Army will train Negroes in all supporting ground services. Negroes have already been assigned in large numbers to other important arms, including the field artillery, coast artillery, anti-aircraft units, engineers and signal corps.

The Union
Cincinnati, Ohio

SCIENTIST TO FLYER!

MAR 18 1943

BLACKLAND ARMY FLYING SCHOOL, Waco, Texas.—From a statistical economist in the Miscellaneous Minerals Branch of the War Production Board in Washington, D. C., to acting sergeant and clerk at Blackland Army Flying School, Waco, Texas, is the story of Corporal Herman A. Johnson of Washington, D. C., now serving in Blackland Field's first Negro Aviation Squadron

MAR 18 1943

Corporal Johnson was inducted into the Army January 13, 1943(and has recently been promoted to the rank of Corporal.

He is 26 years old and left for the Army soon after New Year's from his desk in the War Production Board, where since June 1, 1942, he had been in charge of tabulating and allocating such metals as silver, mercury, antimony, cobalt and quartz crystals whenever such materials were imported or exported for the United States.

MAR 18 1943

He was born and raised in Schenectady, N. Y., where his father was a refrigeration engineer. His mother and grandmother now live at 619 Lee Court, Scranton, Pa.

He received his B. S degree in accounting and business administration from Albany College with three years previous study at Cornell.

47a-1943

Last All-Fighter Class Of Pilots Get Wings As Bomber Pilots Begin Training At Tuskegee Air Field

OCT 16 1943

FUTURE BOMBER PILOTS — Lieutenant Robert B. Meagher, one of the instructors of twin-engine training at Tuskegee Army Air Field, explains the workings of a controllable-pitch propeller on the AT-10 twin-engine trainer to a group of cadet trainees. The cadets (from l. to r.) are Herman R. Campbell, New York, N. Y.; Jerome D. Sperlin, Chicago Ill.; Haldane King, Long Island, N. Y.; Harvey Pinkney, Baltimore, Md.; and Perry Hudson of Atlanta, Ga. These cadets are members of the first Negro group of twin-engine pilots preparing for future medium bomber training.

OCT 15 1943

CAISSONS GET WINGS— In keeping with expanded training facilities recently instituted at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, liaison pilot wings were presented to fledgling flyers of the Field Artillery this past week, marking the first graduation of its kind in the history of the field. The graduating officers will receive their advance and tactical training at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. Among the officers to receive their wings after nine weeks of intensive training are, standing from left to right: 1st Lt. James I. [illegible], 2nd Lts. James E. Woodson, Arnold D. Grant, 1st Lt. William Y. Rose, 2nd Lts. Leander A. Hall Jr., Lloyd R. V. Taylor, Alvin J. Johnson, Captain William H. Shannon 1st Lt. Charles T. Hood, assistant director of liaison pilot training, and Captain Errol W. Becthold, director of liaison training at Tuskegee. Kneeling, left to right: 2nd Lts. Aldrick H. Wilson, Benjamin F. Moore, Darry C. Bishop, Harry W. Dungil, Leonard E. Wilburn, Charles G. Dunn, and 1st Lt. Chauncey Eskridge. (Photos by TAAF).

OCT 16

AUG 7 - 1943

47a

Capt. Hall Tells How He Shot Down "Jerry"

47a

AUG 7 - 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

The first pilot in the 99th Pursuit Squadron to shoot down an enemy plane was Captain Charles B. Hall, 22, of 1034 E. Hendrix street, Brazil, Ind., a flight leader. Captain Hall is shown in the top photo explaining to a group of interested pilots the way he went after the Jerry and brought him down. At left is 2nd Lt. Willie H. Fuller, Tarboro, N. C. (wearing sun helmet), while 2nd. Lt. Spann Watson, Hackensack, N. J., can be seen walking away, at the extreme right.

No. 2—Captain Hall writes a letter to his wife, the former Miss Maxine Parris, Terre Haute, Ind., telling her about his experience in shooting down the enemy plane.

No. 3—A prize had been put up for the first member of the 99th Squadron to knock down an enemy plane, and Capt. Hall is shown here about to enjoy his well deserved trophy—a bottle of Coca-Cola. Others shown are 1st. Lt. Sidney P. Brooks, Cleveland, Ohio (behind bottle), and 2nd Lt. Willie H. Fuller, Tarboro, N. C. The coke, the only one seen by most of the squadron since they arrived in North Africa, was served ice cold and had been brought back to the advance training base several weeks earlier by 2nd Lt. Louis R. Purnell, of Germantown, Pa., from Oran where he had gone to ferry a new P-40 plane back to his field.

No. 4—Also flying in the same mission on which Capt. Hall scored his victory was Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., Washington, D. C., commanding officer, shown listening to accounts of the action from others in the flight. At right is 1st. Lt. Clarence C. Jamison, Cleveland, Ohio, flight leader (face half shown) and between them is 1st. Lt. Erwin B. Lawrence, Cleveland, Ohio, assistant operations officer (side of face shown). (Photos by Thomas W. Young, U. S. War Correspondent)

Joe Fighter Squadron Writes To His Mom

Journal and Guide Norfolk, Virginia

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent
(By Air Mail, Delayed.)
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

ALLIED AIRFIELD IN SICILY, AUGUST 12—Below is the second of a series of imaginary letters typical of those which any member of the 99th Fighter Squadron might write to his mother.

In the first of these the reader was acquainted with the religious practices in the squadron, the recreational and amusement the men indulge in, and something of the Arab people who are most numerous in North Africa.

Since then, the pioneer Negro fighter pilots moved over to Sicily shortly after the invasion forces secured airfields and established lines sufficiently advanced to make their use practicable.

Remember this is not a real letter from any particular soldier to his mother, but it contains a great many items in which all friends and parents of the members of th[illegible]squadron are interested. And because of that, it might have been written by any one of them.

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY
August 13, 1943

DEAR MOM,

It has been several weeks since I wrote you a letter telling you the news of our camp. But during that time we have moved from North Africa to the Italian island of Sicily which the United Nations invaded on July 10th.

This is really the most ideal spot we have occupied yet. Our tent area is in a pleasant grove of olive trees among which the Sicilians also grow wheat. These provide enough shade to keep our tents enjoyably liveable during the day, and the intense heat of the tropical sun is greatly relieved by the soothing breeze that blow (censored) off the Mediterranean Sea across our base.

We live right at the foot of a steep and rocky hill that rises (censored).

The evenings, too, are really delightful. They are so different from those in North Africa where it was terribly hot in the day and cool — often chilly — at night. Here the nights are as pleasant as tomorrow's anticipation [illegible]il from home. It is not hot at all, and we sle[illegible]ry soundly and comfortably under one or two blankets.

The natives here are very friendly. They seem to be glad to have the Americans here. Up on the hill behind our camp live some of the better class families of this section. Roaming through the hillsides we have met and talked to them, and visited them in their homes. The hospitality we have received has been surprisingly genuine.

But with all of these new sights and experiences to interest the soldiers, they are still groping for an adjustment to the new way of life they are cast in. This was very obvious recently when our camp was visited by a traveling show put on by soldiers in an Air Corps outfit.

One of the acts was a memory test in which one of the performers showed amazing power of retention. He asked the soldiers in the audience to list on a blackboard twenty subjects that came most readily to their minds. Then after looking it over for 30 or 40 seconds he turned his back to it and as the audience would call out the numbers he would recite the subject written opposite that number.

With remarkable accuracy he named the subjects opposite each number asked for—and they were not asked in consecutive order, but more in a "scrambled" fashion. We all got a great kick out of it.

But what intrigued me most was the nature and scope of subjects that came first to mind. They reveal, perhaps, the subconscious thinking of men in arms, and indicate the scope of things that would make life in the army more nearly normal, or more easily endurable. Here are the twenty thoughts [illegible] by men in this squadron:

Scotch and Soda
Fatima
Pepsi-Cola
Herring
Hamburger
Gin Rickey
Ham Sandwich
"Finis"
Woman
Tondelao
"A" Train (NY sub)
Ice cream
Victory
"Pro"
Pail of water
Furlough
"C" Ration
Paramount Theatre
Medina
Lana Turner
MEDICAL DISCHARGE

At another camp it might be twenty different subjects, but it is a good bet that at least half this list would be duplicated by other units of soldiers throughout the combat area. You have to be a soldier for a while to understand what I mean.

Another one of our members is an "overseas father." This time it is Lt. Malone (Thomas N. Malone Jr., 24, of 5627 Tilman avenue, Detroit, Mich., adjutant of the service detachment with the 99th Fighter Squadron). He became the father of a 6 pound boy on May 30, although he did not receive the letter telling him about it until August 6, way over in Sicily. Such beaming and chest sticking out you never saw before.

(Editor's Note: First member of the squadron to become a father overseas was Sgt. Robert J. Chap[illegible]ontgomery, Ala., whose son was born on April [illegible] Mrs. Malone is the former Danis Johnson of Montgomery, Ala. They were married on October 31, 1942. Lt. Malone is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas N. Malone Sr., of the same Detroit address).

If being in the combat zone has its hazards, it also has some advantages, such as a free package of cigarets every day for every man. These are provided by the Army and are issued along with the rations.

Love to all the folks at home, and tell them to write as often as they can. I miss you very, very much.

Your loving son,
JOE FIGHTER SQUADRON

AUG 7 1943
SEP 8 1943
SEP 18 1943

47a-1943

New Men Carry On For The Fallen

2ND LT. McCULLIN

1ST LT. WHITE

1ST LT. MITCHELL

2ND LT. GIBSON

2ND LT. BAUGH

2ND LT. TOPPINS

Since soaring into the Mediterranean skies in June [illegible] the Axis enemy, three pilots of the 99th Fighter Squadron have been listed as missing or killed in action. To fill these gaps and to relieve the "veterans" of many sorties against the enemy, 12 additions to the unit have joined the squadron.

Reported killed in action is First Lt. Paul G. Mitchell of Washington, D. C. Missing pilots, since July 2, following an attack on the Castelventrano Airfield in Sicily during the preliminary to the invasion, are Second Lt. James L. McCullin of St. Louis, Mo., and [illegible] Herman White Jr. of Macon, Miss.

Three replacements to the unit are Second Lts. Howard L. Baugh of Petersburg, Va., and Edward L. Toppins of San Francisco, Calif., who joined the squadron on July 26; and Second Lt. John A. Gibson of Chicago, Ill., who joined the fighters on August 5. A fourth early replacement is Second Lt. John S. Morgan of Cartersville, Ga.

Eight other pilots flew the Atlantic to take up duties with the squadron on August 15. They are Second Lts. Henry B. Perry of Thomasville, Ga., Robert W. Deiz of Portland, Ore., Edward T. Driver of Trenton, N. J., Clarence B. Mills of Durham, N. C., William H. Walker of Carbondale, Ill., George T. McCrumby of Fort Worth, Texas, Price D. Rice of Montclair, N. J., and Herman A. Lawson of Marysville, Calif.

Journal and Guide

A Noteworthy Change In Army Policy

Norfolk, Virginia

A SIGNIFICANT modification of Army policy, or at least practice, was formally announced last week, when Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy made known the program of training for Negroes as crews for medium bomber planes, the twin-engined Martin B-26, one of the finest of its type in the world. The War Department official emphasized that the training was to be in mixed classes, a departure from the initial plan of giving fliers segregated training as at Tuskegee. This is a democratic step.

Its feasibility was demonstrated in the officer candidate school program in every section of the nation. That colored and white men can fight together, as well as train together, and that a colored officer can command white officers and troops was brilliantly demonstrated in the activities of the 99th Fighter Squadron after it left this country.

Lt. Colonel Benjamin O. Davis Jr., of the 99th was the senior line officer on board the transport which carried him to Africa last April. He was designated to pick a staff and report to the transport commander as executive officer, despite the fact that of the 4,000 troops aboard, less than 15 per cent were colored.

"After the first 24 hours or so of curiosity and wonder at this unusual staff of the transport commander, everything proceeded smoothly and without incident for the remainder of the 8-day voyage," Lt. Col. Davis commented Friday during a press conference in Washington.

"In relation to the 99th's experiences to date overseas, the young and able commander related: ". . . there was not a single circumstance or incident which could be regarded as discriminatory by the most rabid race leader," and he narrated various experiences to prove the validity of this conclusion of his: ". . . .that a considerable bond exists among those who fly, regardless of color or race."

This is a good augury for the success of the training plan of the War Department for bomber pilots and crews. The high command of the Army has a positive viewpoint about this, as expressed by Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who has said: "Everybody who goes to bombardier and navigator school will be used as bombardiers and navigators. They're not going to be used to cut paper dolls or play marbles."

The Army is going ahead, definitely, in making that branch of the service closer to the democratic ideal in its practices. As General [illegible] pointedly [illegible] in his recent report on Selective Service and its problems and accomplishments, the story is quite different with respect to the Navy, Coast Guard, and Marine Corps.

In his words, a lot more remains to be done by those service branches before a proper utilization of American manpower is truly realized. They have done some liberalizing, but too little so far.

Benning Given First Negro Parachute Unit

Constitution

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—(AP)—The first Negro parachute unit in the American Army will be activated at Fort Benning, Ga., the War Department announced today.

Serving under Brigadier General Leo Donovan, commanding general of the Airborne Command, the unit is designated as the 555th Parachute Infantry Company.

The War Department has authorized General Donovan to select volunteers for an enlisted cadre from the 92d Infantry Division at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

After the first month's training at the Fort Benning parachute school, those qualifying will be assigned to their unit and will receive $50 monthly additional pay.

Atlanta, Ga.

Other new parachute units are in process of formation, the department said, and applications for that duty still are being accepted.

The War Department emphasized that parachute units have been used successfully in combat in North Africa, Sicily, Italy and the Southwest Pacific.

During recent maneuvers near Camp Mackall, N. C., an entire airborne division was landed in a single night-and-day operation, the Army said.

'Rochester' Visitor At Tuskegee Base

Montgomery, Ala.
Advertiser

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, ALA. [illegible].—Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, famous radio and screen star, on tour of army camps, visited the Tuskegee Army Air Field and spent a half hour on the Tuskegee Institute Campus today, being received by Dr. F. D. Patterson, president, who told the famous actor that he was cordially welcome on the campus of the Institute.

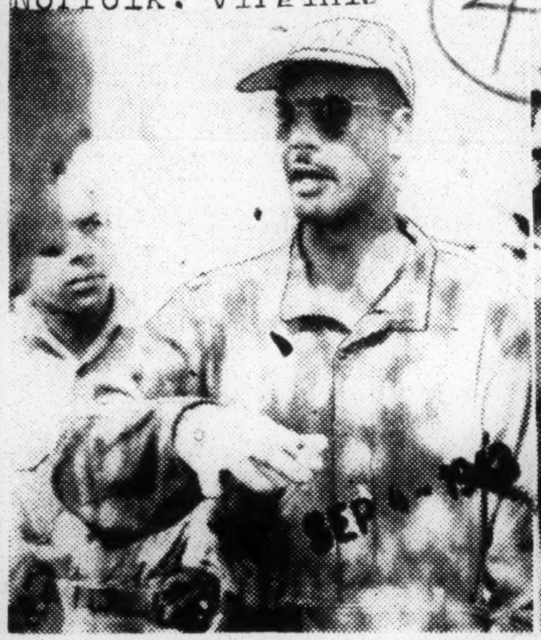
The noted radio and screen star visited the USO, the George Washington Carver museum and the Booker T. Washington monument. He [illegible]ssed himself as [illegible] with his visit to the [illegible]us and said he hopes that Mr. Benny and his entire cast may be able to visit Tuskegee Institute at an early date.

Relaxation Is Important To Sky Warriors After Mixing With The Enemy

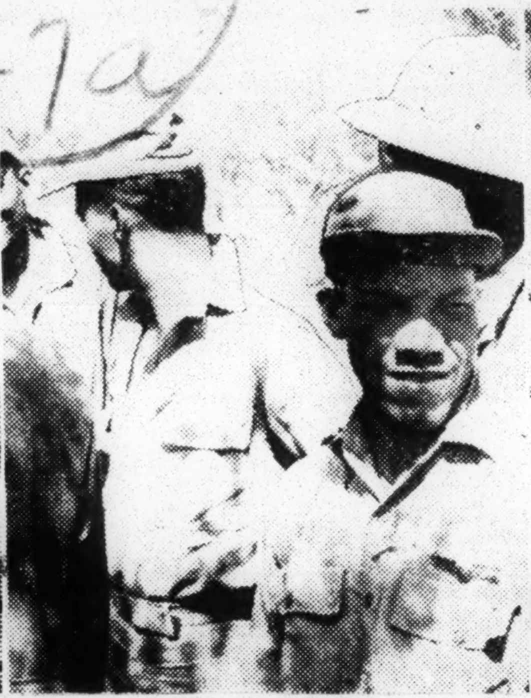
Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

47a

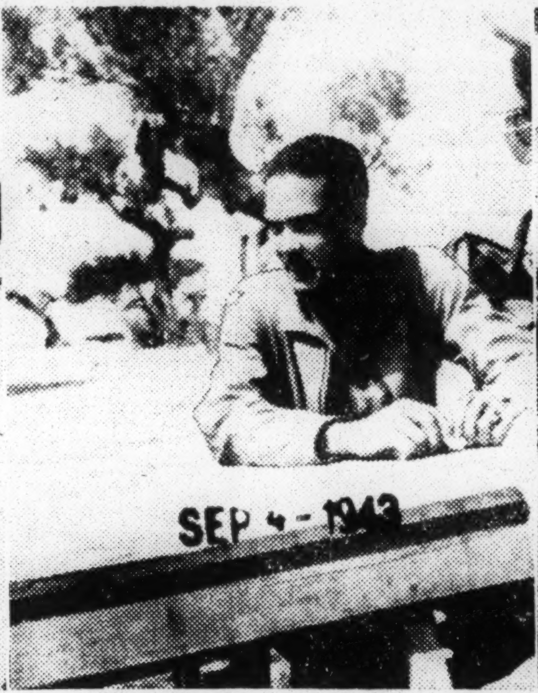
SEP 4 - 1943



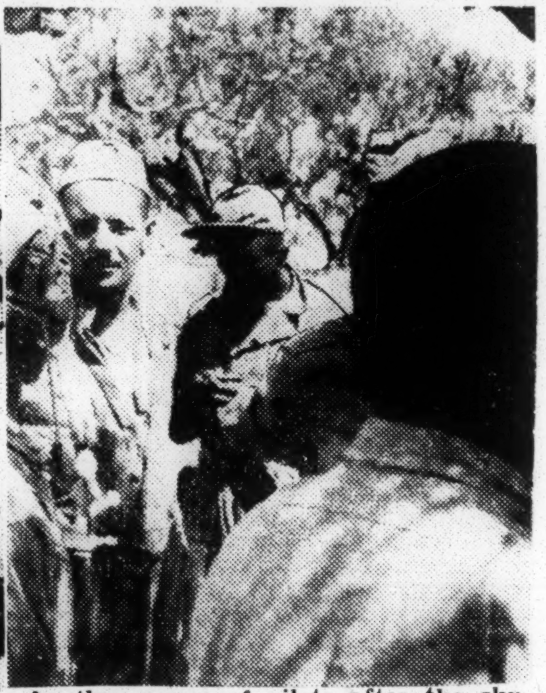
Lt. Colonel B. O. Davis, Jr., describes an aerial encounter with German planes by members of the 99th Fighter Squadron which he commands. The fliers have fought from North Africa and Sicily, performing notably.



A group of listeners includes 1st Lt. William A. Campbell, T[illegible]ee Institute; 1st Lt. Lee [illegible]ford, Washington, D. C., (head turned); and 2nd Lt. John W. Rogers, Chicago.



Lt. Colonel Davis, West Point graduate and son of the only Negro general in the Army, enjoys a bit of the humor [illegible]ing out of the dogfight. The squadron [illegible] at least one official victory and two probables.

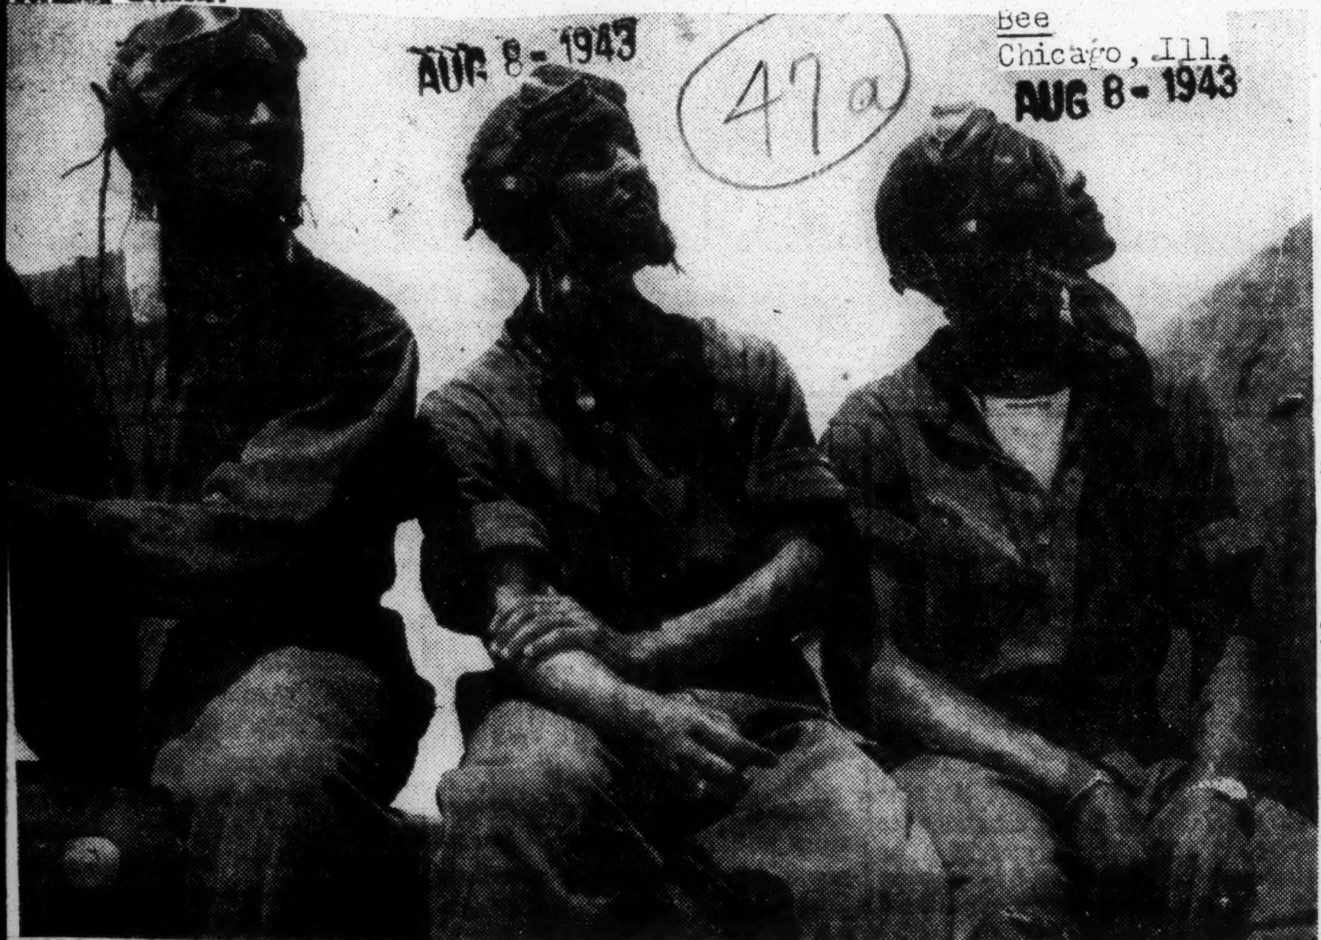


Another group of pilots after the sky-warring.: Looking towards the camera is 2nd Lt. Samuel M. Bruce of Seattle, Washington, [illegible]ormer A. and T. athlete. (Photos by Thomas W. Young, Journal and Guide war correspondent.)

Bee
Chicago, Ill.

AUG 8 - 1943

47a



CHICAGOANS GET WINGS — These three Chicago youths are among the nation's most recent flying officers. They received their "wings" at the recent graduation exercisies held at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Pictured from left to right, are: Second Lieuts. Harry L. Bailey, Cornelius C. Rogers and John Daniels.—Photo by Tuskegee Army Air Field.

Distinguished Service Medal Action

New York, N. Y.

Amsterdam News

47a

SEP 4 - 1943

During the Battle of Sicily, an intrepid member of the already famous 99th Pursuit Squadron came to the rescue of U. S. bombe[illegible]lanes w[illegible]hey were about to be attacked by Nazi fighters. Momentarily lost from his squadron, the youthful Negro aviator immediately made for the Nazi planes when he saw what they were up to, shot down two of them and caused the others to turn tail and flee. Then he returned to his base as if nothing had happened.

Army aviators have already predicted that the hero of the Battle of Sicily will be awarded a Distinguished Service medal for his valor under grave circumstances. He courageously attacked and dispersed the enemy while in extreme danger to himself.

Incidentally, the members of the 99th are among the best gunners in the world. In fact, other aviators declare that they si[illegible] canno[illegible] as good as they are, although they have prove[illegible]eir marksmanship time and time again.. (The others say they can't be so good not because they are colored but because the men of the 99th are breaking gunnery records like a good shot smashes clay pigeons in a shooting gallery).

One reason why the men of the 99th are such excellent gunners is that, when they had completed their gunnery course before they were sent abroad, the Army Air officials were faced with sending them on cross country hops where they would have had to stop at camps with white air corps officers. In order to prevent any association between the men of the 99th and white air corps officers, the 99th was ordered to continue gunnery practice. Therefore, they practiced gunnery so long and so much that they could shoot a speck off a fly's wing traveling at 300 miles an hour. When they went overseas, their extra gunnery training made them standouts among American aviators.

The success of the [illegible] of the 99th who shot down two German plan[illegible]d forced others to flee is a tribute to the courage and a[illegible]ity of every man of the 99th. We sincerely hope that the U. S. Government recognizes officially and publicly the heroism of the young fighter by awarding him a Distinguished Service Medal.

47a-1943

Air Force Head Can Use More Colored Flyers

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

AUG 21 1943

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U. S. Troops in Sicily

[Copyri[illegible] reproduction [illegible] whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Cable, Censored)—In a special interview this week for the AFRO, Major General Edwin A House, air force commander, had only praise for the fighting ability of the 99th fighter squadron, which has given German flyers over Pantelleria and Sicily much grief.

Said General House, "The colored fighter squadron has carried out its mission in superior manner and I am pleased to have them as members of this command. I expect these pilots to take their part in the final victory in Sicily."

More of our flyers would be welcomed over here, according to General House. Reports of injuries to Lieut. Col. B. O. Davis, commanding officer of the unit, in a plane crash have been much exaggerated. Colonel Davis is in fine shape, with no sign of injury.

These flyers are ranging daily over the entire island, repeatedly striking at the area around Mount Etna and Messina.

When no reports of enemy planes shot down are forthcoming, the daily sorties are still important, and telling on the pilots.

AUG 21 1943

Every morning the boys are on line at daybreak to take to the air or be on the alert. The usual story when they return is "heavy flak over target area but few enemy planes sighted."

The job is often routine, but any mission may be one which a storm will break, so the boys are always keyed up.

I am still amazed at the efficiency of the ground crews. Not one life has been lost because of carelessness or oversight on the part of mechanics. These men deserve credit for every successful sortie.

---

99 th Chieftian Authorizes More

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Money For Wife

Four Million Families Now Receiving Aid

SEP 21 1943

NEWARK, N. J.—(S-N-S)—Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., one of the heroes of the Sicilian campaign and organizer and first commanding officer of the famous Negro 99th Fighter Squadron, brought word to Newark, Saturday that a big factor in the high morale of the men at the front is the knowledge that their families are receiving their family allowances and allotments-of-pay regularly each month.

Colonel Davis has returned to employ his battle experience in training a larger fighter group.

GIVES WIFE MORE

Stopping in for a visit at the War Department of Dependency Benefits to authorize an increase in his allotment-of-pay to his wife, Mrs. Agatha S. Davis of 97 Carmel St., New Haven, Conn., Colonel Davis declared that 'the efficiency of the ODB in getting family allowances and allotments-of-pay to the dependents of our men in the service, is a major factor in the high morale which prevails.'

SEP 21 1943

Colonel Davis is the son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, now living in Washington. He was graduated from West Point in 1936. In 1941 he transferred from the Infantry to the Army Air Corps, and in 1942 organized and trained, at Tuskegee, Alabama, the first all-Negro air squadron—the Fighting 99th.

ADDED INCENTIVE

Apprised of Colonel Davis' commendation, Brig. Gen. H. N. Gilbert, USA, Director of the ODB, pointed out that the millions of letters received by this activity of the Army Service Forces from soldiers and their families have brought the employees a realizatioin of their responsibility toward the Army and the nation.

SEP 21 1943

"But," he stated, "when returning heroes like Colonel Davis tell us that their men are better fighters because the ODB is doing its job well here at home, it is an added incentive to GET 'EM PAID."

The ODB does business with more than four million soldiers, administering monthly family allowances and allotments-of-pay on behalf of more than eight million dependents of Army men. By cable and radio the ODB receives authorizations for these benefits for the families of them stationed all over the world. And day and night, on two shifts, and on every holiday except Christmas, the employees of the ODB work to GET 'EM PAID.

SEP 21 1943

RACE BOMBERS TO FLY B-26'S, ARMY REVEALS

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Mixed Training Setup Upholds Hastie Argument

By HARRY McALPIN
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—The 'impregnable fortress' of the army air forces' jim crow policy, like Hitler's Europe, is about to be pierced! The first Negro cadets will enter training as bombardiers and navigators "within the month" along with white students, according to Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy.

The new plan for bomber crews will wipe out the segregated Air Corps training setup of long time standing. Mixed Negro and white students will go to school together, according to McCloy.

Whether the dropping of the Jim Crow policy in bomber training will affect the segregated Tuskegee Army Flying Field, where cadets are trained for pursuit ship fighting, is not known. However, it is expected to give new impetus to the campaign for more mixed units in various Army units.

Will Fly B-26's

"Within the month," McCloy said, "Negro cadets will be sent to either Fort Dodge, Kansas, or Del Rio, Texas, to start training in the B-26 transition school with the objective—command of B-26 airplanes (bombers).

"In December, Negro cadets will be trained as navigators and bombardier officers. They will be trained as such for 18 weeks, after which they will go to gunnery school. All this training will be with white students.

"To complete the crews of this medium bombardment group, which must be activated by [illegible] 1944, many Negro enlisted men are already in training all over the country. They are studying radio, aviation mechanics, electrical work and armor at Lincoln, Chanute, Lowry Fields and other air force installations, all with white enlisted men."

The unqualified statement that Negro and white air corps students will train and fly together marks a historic departure from the War Department's stubborn stand for Jim Crow air units.

New Setup Hailed

Negro leaders here and throughout the nation hailed with high enthusiasm the setup and saw in the change a victory for the long battle by Judge William Hastie, who resigned as civilian aide to the Secretary of War largely because of the insistent Jim Crow attitude of the Army air Command. On Feb. 18 he released a statement in wihch he said:

"If we want white and colored flyers in combat to get along well with each other, the best plan is to build mutual understanding and self-respect by training them together from the time they begin learning to fly. The worst plan is to keep them apart until they are forced together under the stress of circumstances in combat. Prejudice is based on ignorance. Let men get acquainted with each other in training and there is no great problem of their harmony later on.

SEP 11 1943

"All this has seemed simple and obvious to me. The Air Command, however, cannot see it. The Air Command is not even influenced by the fact that the ground forces have been training white and colored officer candidates together with excellent results ever since the beginning of the present army expansion.

"There are none so blind as those who do not want to see. And the Air Command just does not want to see the advantages of training white and colored flyers together. I believe this blindness will continue until public criticism and condemnation of the segregated training policy becomes so strong that it can no longer be ignored."

'Time' Says Army Not Satisfied With The 99th

SEP 22 1943

Commanders Said To Want Group For "Dirty Work"

WASHINGTON—(A N P)—Outspoken "Time" magazine gives the lowdown on the actual position of the Negro in the war effort in its current issue. Speaking of the 99th Pursuit squadron, the magazine avers that the high command of the air force is not pleased with the work of the squadron, regardless of glowing reports from the front and that the same command has in mind placing the squadron on convoy duty abroad instead of permitting the men to develop as normally they would if given additional combat work. This does not interfere with plans for the organization of other unit shower.

SEP 22 1943

Speaking of combat units, the article continues and says that few area commanders abroad want Negro troops those that do accept them, want them only in small numbers compared with the whites; and then they do not want combat troops, they want engineers and laborers to do the "dirty work" for army of which there is a plenty.

Criticism is levelled at the war departmnt policy of separate training and units for Negroes. The article is of the opinion that no real value can be placed on the Ngro's worth as a soldier unless he is trained side by side with white troops. It ends with the question still unanswered, "which is the better soldier, the white or Negro."

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

RAF Paratroop Unit Has First Colored Private

NOV 6 1943

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Defender London Correspondent)

LONDON — The proudest Negro serving in the British army is Pvt. Charles Waterman, first of his race named as a paratrooper with the Canadian force training for the invasion of Europe.

Wearing his insignia of a parachute with wings on his chest and a shoulder badge marked "Airborne—Canada," Waterman arrived here last week on leave. The only colored member of the battalion, Waterman was born in the West Indies but settled in Toronto where he worked as a furrier, and in spare time made a reputation as an amateur boxer.

NOV 6 1943

He took part in the semi-final golden gloves contests in New York in 1940. Waterman says that boxing is excellent training for paratroop operations. He explained that only a small part of the operation is concerned with actual dropping from a plane.

Like all colored boys serving as pilots in the RAF, Waterman is very proud of his wings, obtained after eight months' training. He expressed the hope of meeting Joe Louis when the champion visits England for his proposed exhibition bouts.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Army

Operating from Foggia They Strafe Nazis

With New Outfit Share Equally in Rations and Missions

NOV 13 1943

DECISIVE CLASH IS EXPECTED SOON

Lt. Bill Campbell Explains Results of Dive Bombing

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in North Africa

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ALLIE[illegible]—(By Cable, Ce[illegible])—[illegible] ever wondered how it feels to take part in dive-bombing missions? Then listen to 1st Lt. Bill Campbell of Tuskegee, who has just told me somethine of such tactics. Said Lt. Campbell:

"All our fellows get a tremendous kick on dive-bombing snows. You approach the target in formation and peel off to strike at terrific speed. Usually you don't see your bombs land, but you may see the results of bombs from man diving ahead of you.

"If the target is a small town or garrison, little houses seem to jump into air after the bombs hit them."

Activity Plentiful for 99th

The 99th Fighter Squadron is getting plenty of activity blasting railroad junctions, coastal shipping, troop concentrations and convoys. Dive bombing is unglamorous because the lads see no enemy aircraft and get no chance to increase their score of planes shot down.

However, the work is necessary and the high command has praised the squadron for its splendid co-operation with ground forces, who attack after the enemy is demoralized by plane activity.

Now With 8th Army

The squadron is happy despite bad weather, and is attached to a group that gives it every opportunity to make a good showing. Our pilots s[illegible] equally [illegible]cations, missions and entertainment. The group is one that began fighting with the British at Alamein and has been with the Eighth Army since. Thus the 99th is now part of the Eighth Army air army.

The enemy is reported strongly entrenched in mountains north of Foggia and indications are that strong resistance[illegible]xpected in what[illegible] soon be a [illegible]sive clash.

Playing Important Role

Details of the daily operations cannot be released, but every time a new objective or town is reported captured, all of us know our lads have helped pry the Germans loose from another piece of Italian soil.

Special credit [illegible]o the medical detachment, under Capt. Maurice Johnson, which does emergency work on the spot and keeps us healthy now that the rains have come.

Service is Constant

Surgical and dental technicians are carried and ambulance service maintained on the field at all times.

The crew includes [illegible] Arthur Gooding, [illegible] York; [illegible]. Joe Davis, Savannah, Ga.; Sgt. Oswald Braithwaite, Memphis; Pfc. Ruby Jackson, New Orleans; Pfc. Carlton Sufford, Carters Grove, Ala.; Cpl. Elmer Acree, Denton, Md.; Cpl. James Abrams, Macon, Ga.; Pfc. Howard Cunningham, Columbia, S.C.

There are known as the men behind the men who keep planes in the air.

Bomber Pilots Get Wings

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Tuskegee Graduates Men To Pilot B-25 Bombers

NOV 13 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—The first Negro pilots in the history of the U. S. Army Air Forces to receive the coveted silver wings of twin-engine bomber pilots were commissioned second lieutenants at graduation exercises held in the post chapel at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, Wednesday morning, November 3.

Included among the initial group of Negro bom[illegible]ilots, who represent[illegible] eigh[illegible] states, are 2nd [illegible] Henri F. Fletcher, San Antonio, Texas; 2nd Lt. Perry Hudson Jr., Atlanta, Ga.; 2nd Lt. Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N. J.; 2nd Lt. Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore, Md.; 2nd Lt. Jerome D. Spurlin, Chicago, Ill.; 2nd Lt. William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass.; 2nd Lt. Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, Calif.; 2nd Lt. Herman R. Campbell Jr., New York City; and 2nd Lt. Haldane King, of Jamaica, N. Y.

This group of flyers will report to Mather Field, Calif., where they will undergo transitional bomber training in B-25 Mitchell bombers.

ADDRESS BY FATHER OF 99TH PILOT

T. M. Campbell, field agent, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and father of 1st Lt. William Campbell, first of the all-Negro fighter squadron to bomb the Axis, delivered [illegible] address to one of the largest aud[illegible]s ever to witness a graduation at this base.

Mr. Campbell, who has two sons in the armed forces and a daughter in the WAC, pointed out to the new flying officers that, "the courage, skill and precision, which you have exhibited during your period of training here will not only be of great inspiration to those following in your footsteps but will command the respect and admiration of both races of people in this immediate community, this state, this region, this nation and other parts of the world where you may chance to go."

CADET HONORS

The three top-ranking cadets of the class were awarded prizes emblematic of their all-around excellence as potential officers in the Air Forces. First honors were awarded to 2nd Lt. Leslie A. Williams, former student at the University of California.

Second honors went to 2nd Lt. Edward M. Thomas, former Chicago postal clerk, while 2nd Lt. Harvey N. [illegible]kney, who attended Morgan Co[illegible] [illegible]prize.

SINGLE ENGINE PILOTS

Cadets completing their training and commissioned as single engine fighter pilots comprised a majority of the class and included representatives of eight states and the District of Columbia.

Listed among the single engine graduates are the following second lieutenants: Gwynn W. Pearson, Oakland, Calif.; James B. Brown and William Thomas, Los Angeles, Calif.; Roger B. Brown, Glencoe, Ill.; Oscar D. Hutton, Emory L. Robinson, and Edward M. Thomas of Chicago, Ill.; Alfred Q. Carroll, Washington, D. C.; Clarence W. Dart, Elmira, N. Y.; Charles W. Dickerson, and Theodore H. Mills of New Roch[illegible] N. Y.

Hugh St. Clair [illegible]ner, New York City; Edward Laird, Brighton, Ala.; Ivey L. Leftwich, Fairfield, Ala.; Turner W. Payne, Wichita Falls, Texas; Earl S. Sherard, Columbus, Ohio; Eugene D. Smith, Cincinnati, Ohio; Nathaniel C. Stewart, Philadelphia, Pa.; and Paul C. Simmons Jr., Detroit, Mich.

A PERSONAL NOTE

Augusta, Ga., Herald
December 26, 1943

GEN. MARK CLARK CITES NEGRO AIRMEN

Now on the verge of entering the New Year, the noteworthy achievements of Negroes in the war during the year should make us all feel some degree of pride. As the days and weeks and months came, according to reports from the many fronts in this global war, the Negro men serving Uncle Sam—on land, in the air, and on the high seas—have given a good account of themselves. Marked deeds of heroism have been performed by them—to which The Herald has called the attention of its readers from time to time.

From the Fifth Army, now on the war path in Italy, now comes news that a resourceful Negro anti-aircraft battalion that accounted for two German bombers, even before the unit became the first American Negro combat force to land on European soil, has been cited by Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark, Commanding General of the Fifth Army, for "outstanding performance of duty" in its "baptism of fire."

This unit, the 40th Anti-Aircraft Automatic Weapons Battalion, already had the distinction of being the first Negro combat body to land in North Africa. And these troops were aboard ships in Naples harbor when German bombers began an attack on shipping massed in the bay.

Aboard one vessel, the soldiers had been selected to man 40 m.m. weapons that were part of the ship's armament. Because of the position of the hostile aircraft, the main anti-aircraft defenses of the ship could not be maneuvered to produce effective fire. An enemy bomber was picked up by searchlights, however, and the American crew was soon pumping shells at the target.

Several hits were observed—the last of which appeared to tear off the right wing of a Nazi plane. The enemy bomber crashed into the sea. As the story goes, on a nearby ship that was carrying other personnel and equipment of the battalion, a Negro Master Sergeant from Detroit, jumped into a deck-loaded truck and opened fire with a .50 calibre machine-gun mounted on the cab. A second bomber, struck by the Sergeant's shots, plus other fire being put up from the ship, also crashed into the sea.

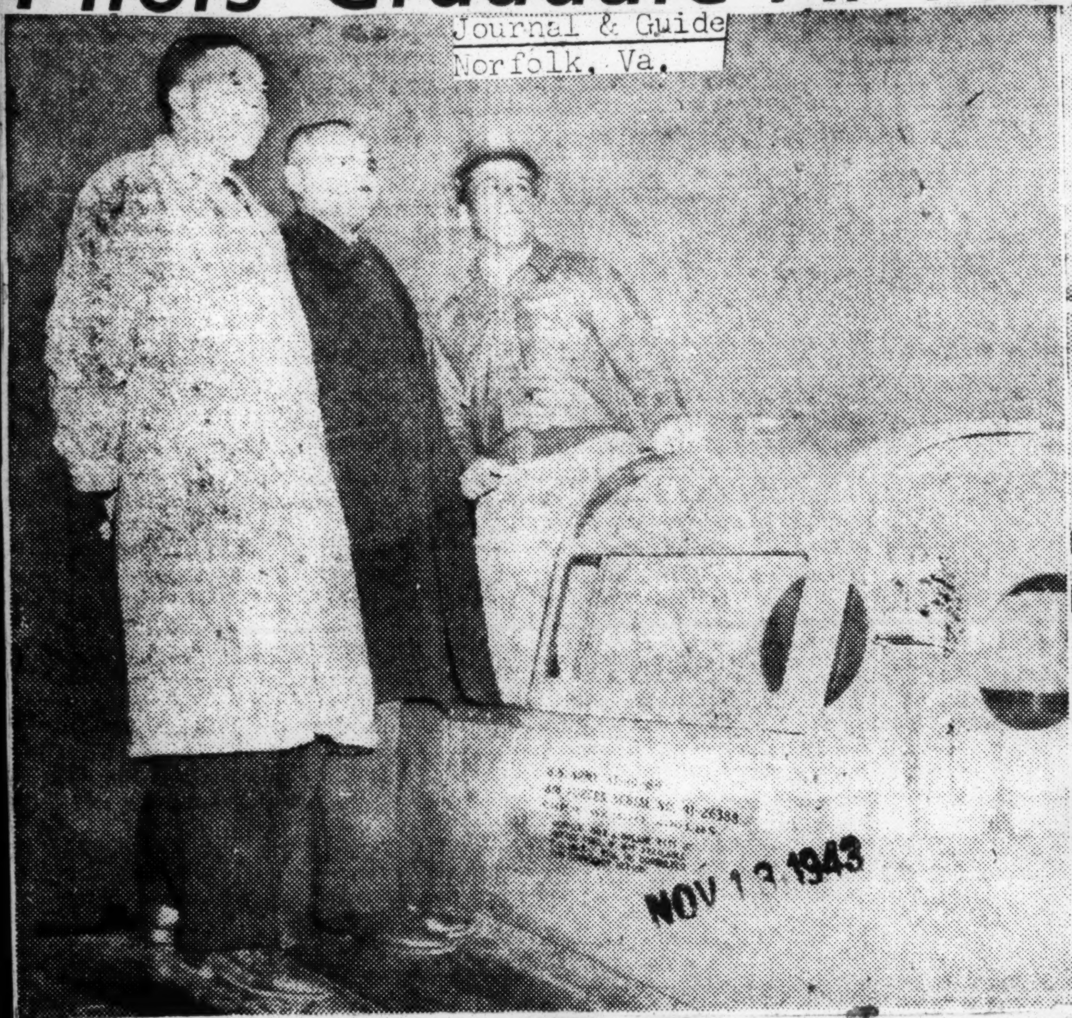
Thus, within a few moments, the colored troops accounted for the destruction of two Nazi bombers—which definitely weakened the enemy's raid on harbor shipping.

And so in commending the Negro troops, General Clark declared: "I am proud of the outstanding performance of duty of these soldiers in this baptism of fire. Their conduct was excellent and reflects the training and discipline of their unit. The Fifth Army welcomes such soldiers."

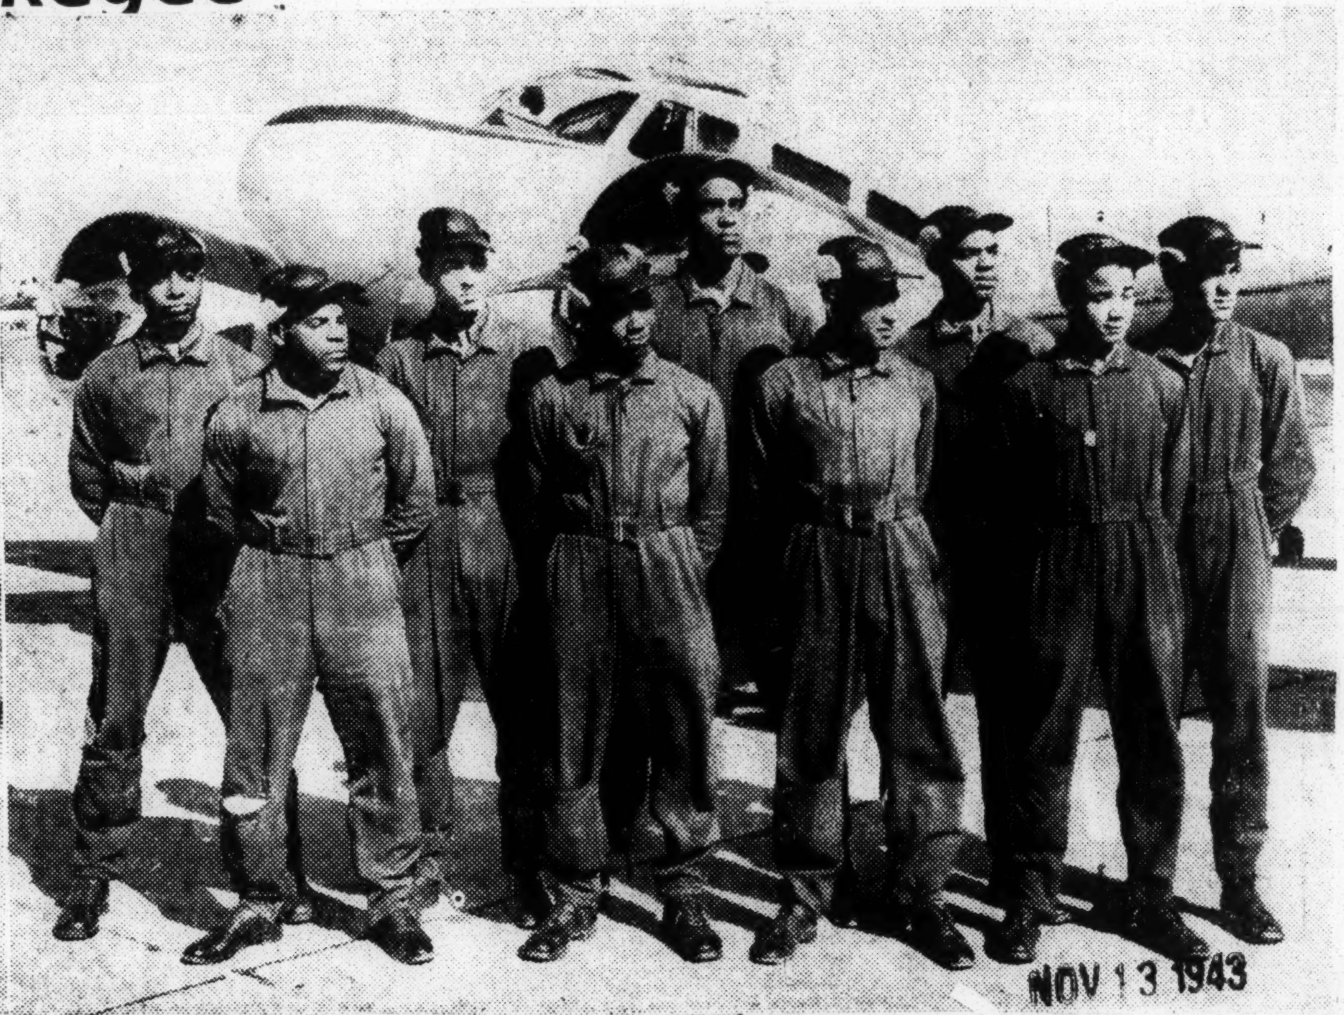
47a-1943

First Class Of Twin-Engine Bomber Pilots Graduate At Tuskegee

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.



NOV 13 1943



NOV 13 1943

Fond memories of thrills from pioneer flying days were rekindled for two aviation "old timers," at the Tuskegee Army Air Field when Dr. Albert E. Forsythe of Atlantic City, N. J., (center) visited his old flying chum, Charles Anderson, chief flight instructor at the 66th Army Air Forces Flying Training Detachment (left). Lt. Cassius A. Harris III, of Philadelphia, Pa., (right), accompanied the pioneer pilots on their tour of the modern Army planes at Tuskegee base. Dr. Forsythe and Mr. Anderson were the first of their race to make a transcontinental trip to Haiti in the early thirties.

At the latest graduation exercises held Nov. 3, at the Tuskegee Army Air field, the first class of Twin Engine pilot trainees received their wings and commissions.

NOV 13 1943

The recently commissioned 2nd Lieutenants, shown l. to r. are Herman R. Campbell, Jr., New York, N. Y.; Henry F. Fletcher, San Antonio, Texas; Perry E. Hudson Jr., Atlanta, Ga.; Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N. J.; Haldane King, Jamaica, N. Y.; Jerome D. Spurlon, Chicago, Ill., Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore, Md., William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass.; Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, Calif.

Going over a last minute checkup of the cockpit procedure to be undergone in the At-10 Twin Engine Trainer before the take-off are 2nd Lieutenants Herman R. Campbell, New York, in the pilot's seat; Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N. J., in the co-pilot's seat, and William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass., peering over the shoulder of the pilot. In the background surveying the scene is 2nd Lieutenant Harvey N. Pinkney of Baltimore, Md. Standing on the wing in the foreground is 2nd Lieutenant Haldane King. All the flying officers shown in the picture are recent graduates of the Twin Engine School of Flying at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. (Photos by Tuskegee Army Air Field).

NOV 13 1943

47a

Officers of the 332nd Fighter Group Air Corps Now Based at Selfridge Field, Michigan, Under Command of Lieutenant Colonel B. O. Davis, Jr.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

OCT 30 1943

LT. ELMER L. GORDEN
Portsmouth, Va.

LT. EVERETT W. JOHNSON
Philadelphia, Pa.

LT. ARMOUR G. McDANIEL
Martinsville, Va.

LT. PETER C. VERWAYNE
New York [illegible]

LT. SAMUEL L. FULLER
Norfolk, Va.

LT. ALVIN WILLIAMS
Boston, Mass.

LT. BASCOM S. WAUGH
Camden, N.J.

LT. JAMES Y. CARTER
Winston-Salem

LT. CLAUDE B. GOVAN
Newark, N.J.

LT. EUGENE D. WEAVER
Philadelphia, Pa.

LT. JOSEPH A. CHRISTMAS
Durham, N.C.

LT. MELVIN T. JACKSON
Olney, Md.

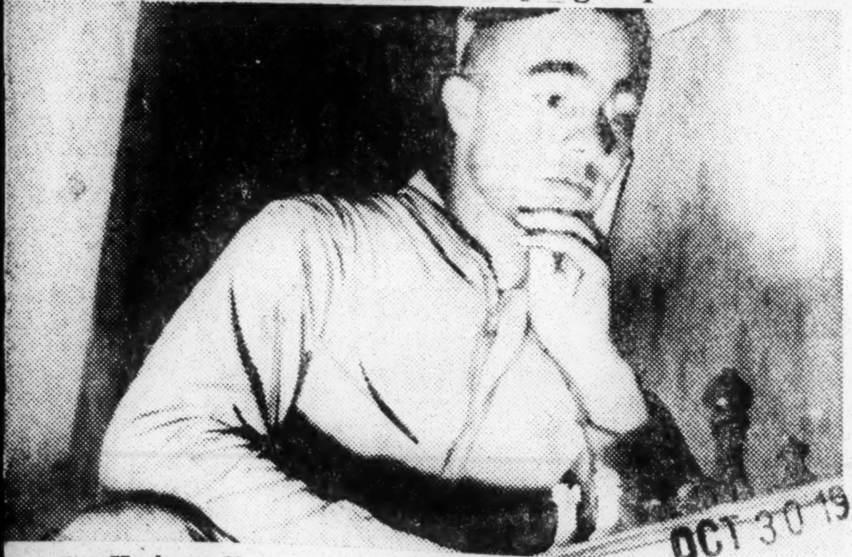
LT. BENJAMIN D. JONES
Philadelphia, Pa.

LT. MILTON R. BROOKS
Glassport, Pa.

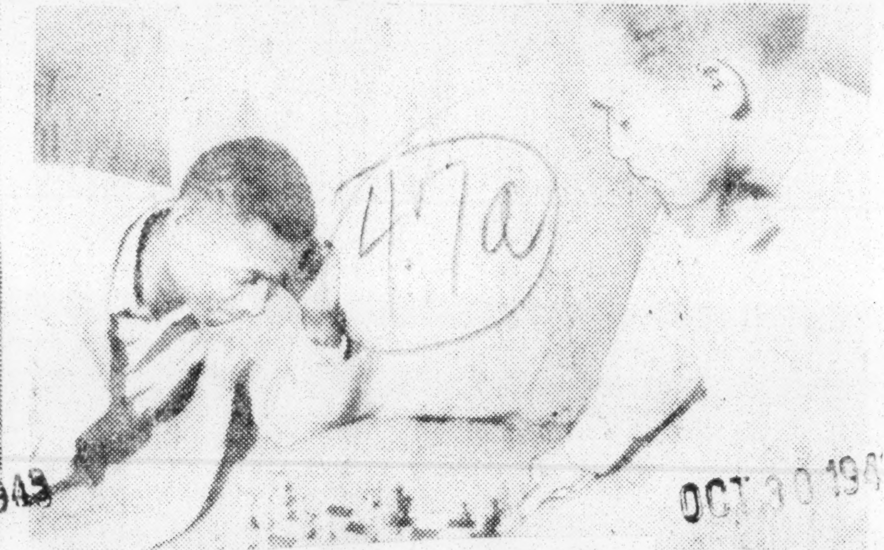
LT. JAMES M. McFATRIDGE
Huntington, W.Va.

LT. VERNON V. HAYWOOD
Raleigh, N.C.

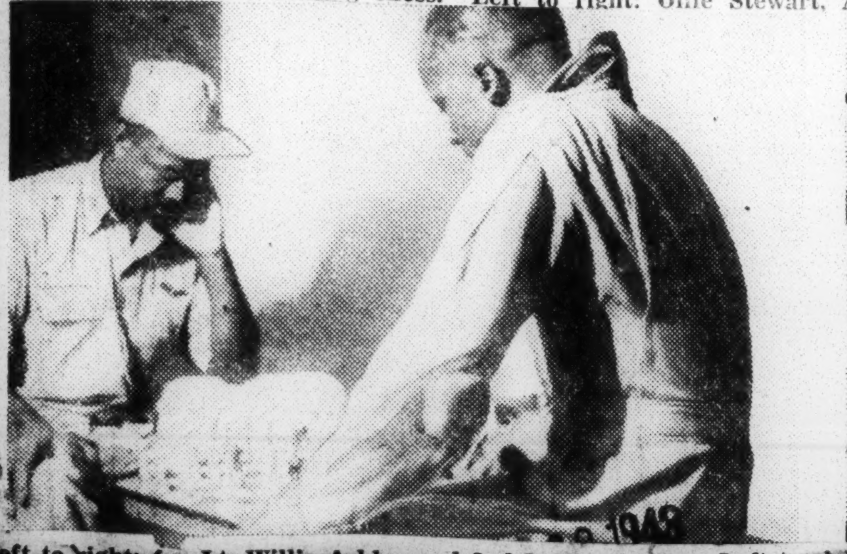
What Soldiers of the 99th Flying Squadron Do in Italy in Their Spare Time. The Games Are Chess, Pinochle and Bridge



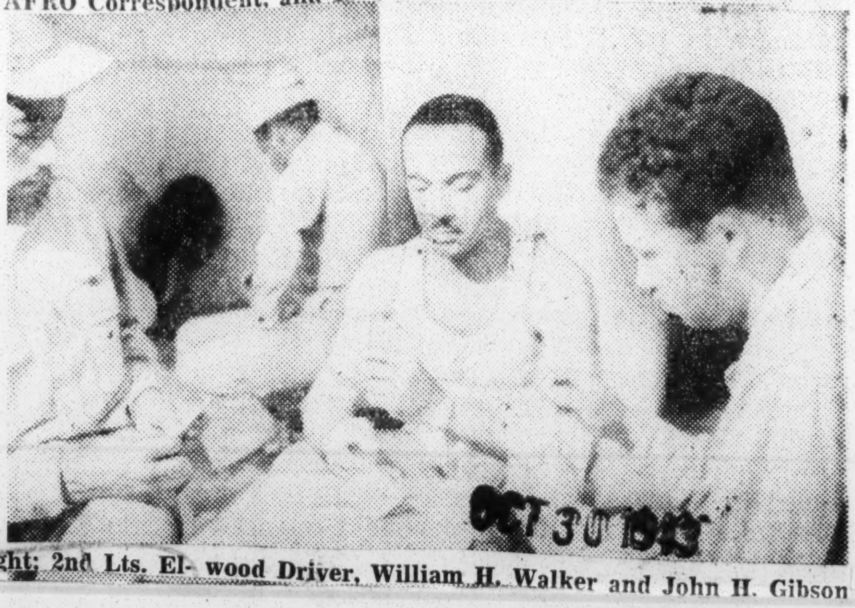
1st Lt. Herbert Clark playing chess.



Left to right: Ollie Stewart, AFRO Correspondent, and 1st Lt. James T. Wiley.



Left to right: [illegible] Lt. Willie Ashley and 2nd Lt. P. D. Rice.

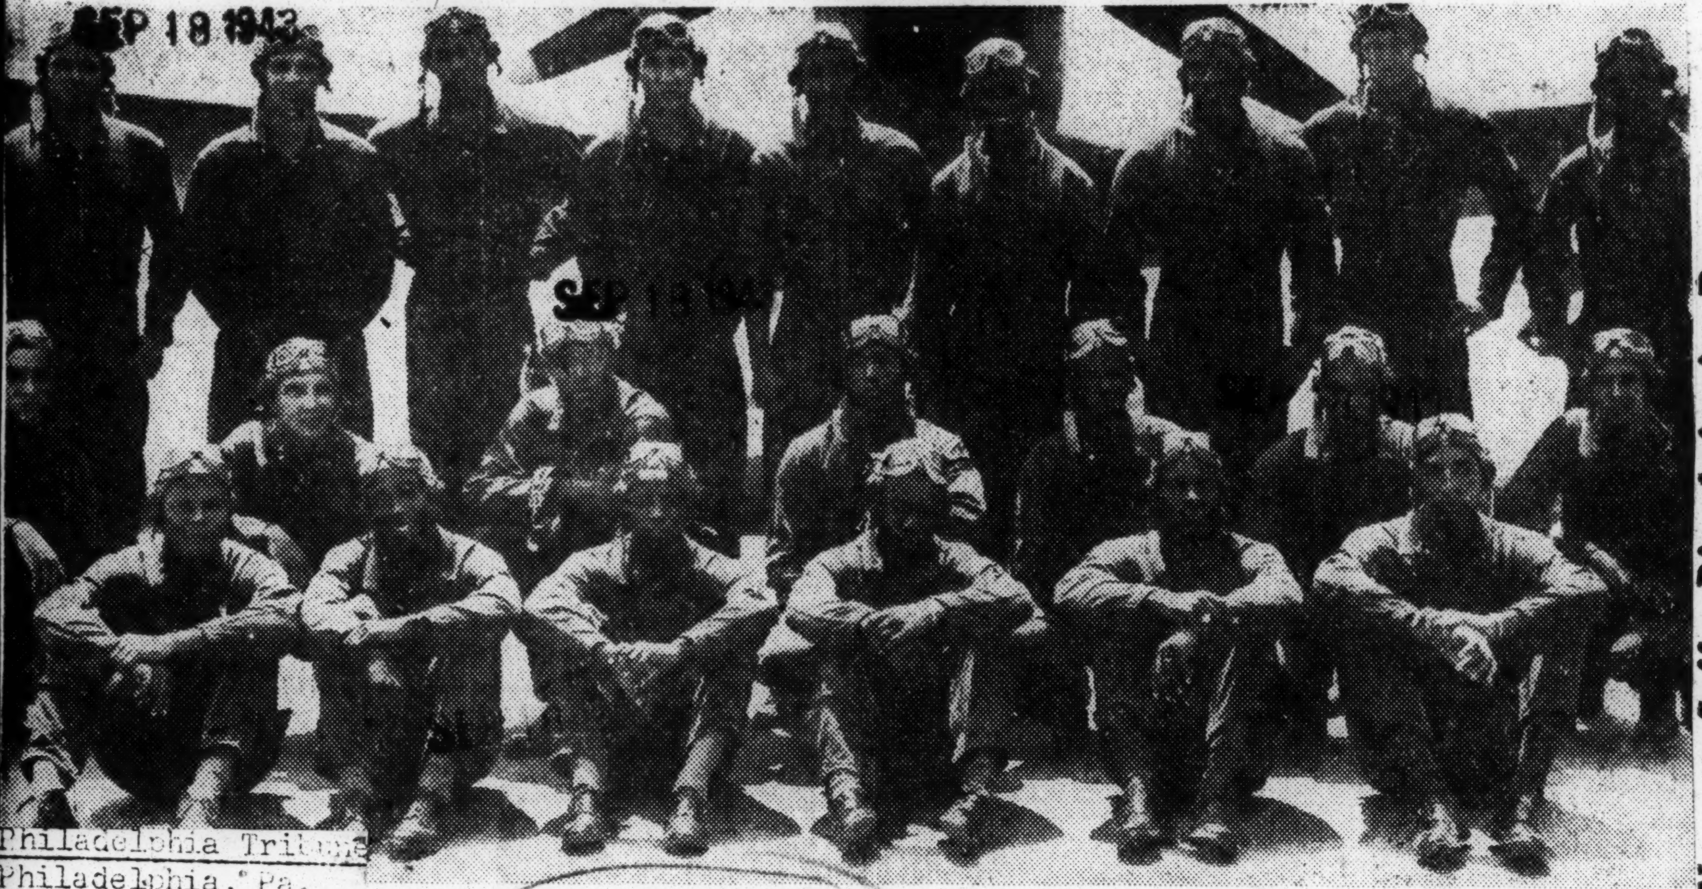


Left to right; 2nd Lts. Elwood Driver, William H. Walker and John H. Gibson

47a-1943

Fighters Ready For Action

SEP 18 1943



Philadelphia Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Pictured above is the most recent contingent of pilots to wear the wings of the Army Air Forces. Shown from left to right are: 1st row, 2nd Lts. Carroll S. Woods, Valdosta, Ga.; GEORGE A. TAYLOR, Philadelphia, Pa.; Hubron R. Blackwell, Baltimore, Md.; Edward W. Hill, Narransett, R. I.; Smith W. Green, Los Angeles, Calif.; and Hubert L. Jones, Denver, Colo.

2nd row, 2nd Lts. Charles W. Tate, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Willard L. Woods, Los Angeles, Calif.; Starling B. Penn, New York City; Leon Purchase, New York City; Everett A. Bratcher, Poplar Bluff, Mo.; Samuel Jefferson, Galveston, Texas; and Harry J. Daniels, Indianapolis, Ind.

3rd row, 2nd Lts. William B. McClenic, Akron, Ohio; Alton F. Ballard, Pasadena, Calif.; Roger Romine, Oakland, Calif.; Floyd A. Thompson, London, W. Va.; Alix Pasquet (Haitian Air Force), Port-au-Prince, Haiti; Norvell Stoudmire, St. Louis, Mo.; Bernard Jefferson, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Andrew H. Doswell, Cleveland, Ohio; and Charles A. Dunne, Atlantic City, N. J.

'An Indispensable Arm.'

Bee
Chicago, Ill.

AUG 29 1943

47a

THE 99th fighter squadron continued in Sicily, the brilliant successes that characterized its efforts in North Africa. Its commanders have termed these valiant Negro airmen as "an indispensable arm" of their outfit.

These young Negro airmen are writing a continuous series of glorious chapters to the total saga of America's intrepid flying men. Upwards of 300 sorties were inflicted on enemy positions since the arrival of the "99th" in North Africa and Sicily.

This "softening" up work made the ultimate task of the ground forces in North Africa and Sicily incalculably easier.

Lt. Colonel Benjamin O. Davis and his command were cited in a recent War Department communique for, "its mission of bombing Axis communications and supply columns in Sicily."

The skilled training, personal courage and high degree of resourcefulness in battle is evinced by the fact that in the recent report only two flyers from the squadron have been reported missing, Lt. Sherman W. White and [illegible] James B. McCullen.

Rarely in [illegible] history of air combat with a record of 300 battles, has a squadron accomplished so much with a parallel minimum of casualties. When Hitler's "Fortress Europa" begins to fragment under the ceaseless impact of allied air power, we are confident that when the history of the accomplishment is disclosed, the 99th fighter squadron will more than ever merit the citation "An indispensable arm" of their outfit.

STIMSON PRAISES 99th ON RETURN HOME

Weekly Review

(BY ERNEST E. JACKSON)

AUG 14 1943

47a

WASHINGTON, — [illegible] — (ANP)—Negro [illegible], quartermaster and anti-aircraft units were warm-praised for their work in connection with the preparations for the Sicilian invasion, some of whom were actual participants when Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson discussed his 13,500 mile inspection trip to the European and North African theatres of operations at his press conference last Thursday. Birmingham, Ala.

The secretary was in good spirit, and a bit jocular as he answered the questions of reporters dealing with progress of the war, his trip, and sundry other items.

During his journey he [illegible] Negro troops in England and others in North Africa, and had occasion to personally meet Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, commanding the 99th pursuit squadron, now stationed in Sicily.

Accompanied by Maj. Gen. John Lee Stimson inspected several of the colored units and found what he called an "interesting situation" in which the men were "workingvery vigorously and getting along well togeher with all troops." He had no comment to make, as to whether there had been any reports to the contrary.

In Africa he said he had seen a unit of engineers which had previously served in Liberia in the construction of the Roberts Airfield, said to be the largest in the world.

"That unit performed very valuable work on the construction and repair jobs at the North African ports from which the invasion of Sicily was undertaken," he said. "Furthermore, [illegible] Negro quartermaster units [illegible] excellent wor in the [illegible], and some of thes troops [illegible] actually with th landing forces in Sicily."

Obviously his statement of th quartermaster unit that was in the landing force was in answer to a question submitted inquiring for additional information regarding the news photo of a Negro soldier rushing up the beach at Gela.

"I personally met Col. Davis of the 99th, which is now stationed in Sicily," the secretary said. "He flew over to Tunis to meet me." Stimson recalled his earlier statement of a few weeks ago that the squadron is [illegible] "creditable work." He also revealed that a colored anti-aircraft unit is in Africa.

AUG 7 1943

Skilled Negroes Suffer Discrimination By Army Air Forces, Says NAACP In Protest

New York, N. Y. — Age

Specific cases in which skilled Negroes are being denied opportunity for training and technical service i nthe Army Air Forces are cited by Roy Wilkins, Assistant Secretary, in the most recent protest of the NAACP against racial discrimination in the armed forces.

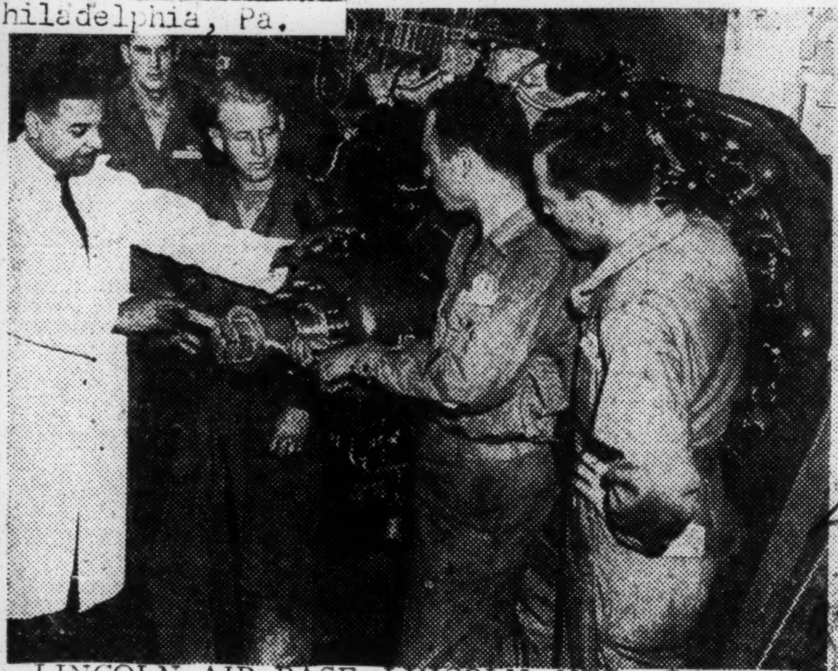
In one case, it is pointed out that four Negro enlisted men of the air corps, one the top man and all-ranking students in their class in photography, were rejected for advanced training leading to higher ratings and commissions in this field, while white classmates whom they had out-ranked were selected. The pretext for this discrimination was the charge by one of their officers that Yale University, where the advanced training is offered, "is not ready to accept Negroes."

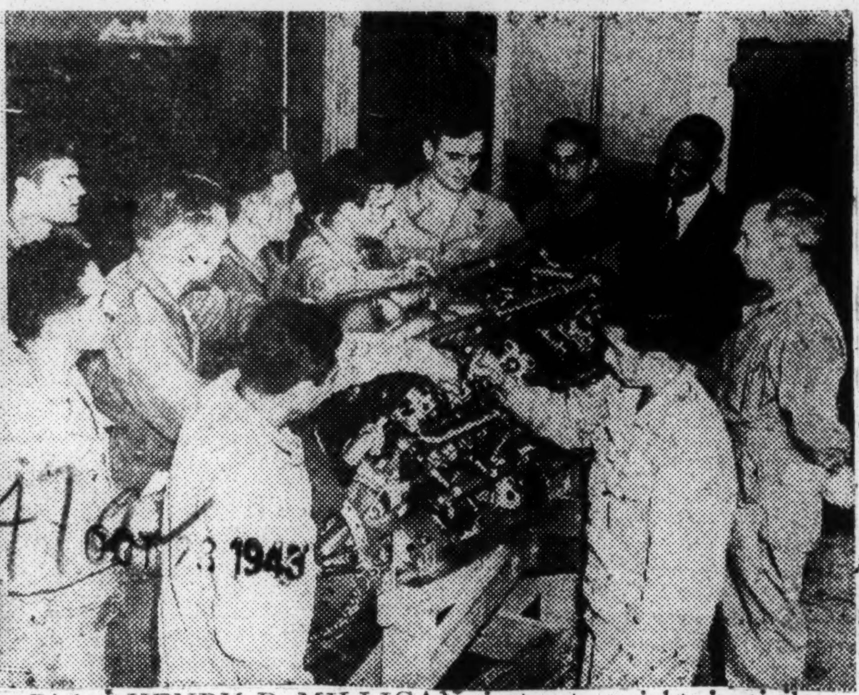
Mr. Wilkins also cited the case of a Negro soldier, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of a leading university, with advanced study in biology and bio-chemistry, who was first denied assignment to laboratory work in an army hospital, then especially trained as an air corps armourer, and finally sent to an air field to work as a laborer.

In presenting the matter to Assistant Secretary of War, John J. McCloy, Mr. Wilkins thus summarized the position of the NAACP by stating: "While the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People asks for remedial action in the cases above cited, we are even more concerned that by more careful and frequent checks and inspections, and by disciplinary action against particular commanders as may be merited, the War Department actually enforce a policy of assigning, training and advancing the skilled Negro soldier on the basis of his merit and potential usefulness, rather than wasting and demoralizing [illegible] as is all too often the case at present."

Air Forces Use Colored Instructors

Philadelphia Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.





LINCOLN AIR BASE, LINCOLN, NEB.—Colored instructors are teaching at the Army Air Forces Training School here.

Left: Details of a Pratt Whitney airplane are being explained to students by LLOYD M. WILLIAMS, extreme left, Kansas City, Mo., graduate of Southern University, Kansas State Agricultural College and Bradley Polytechnical Institute.

Right: HENRY P. MILLIGAN, instructor, right, in civilian attire, is teaching the functioning of an airplane engine on a "cutaway" model at the Army Air Forces Technical Training School, here. Milligan is a graduate of Langston University, and received his training in aircraft engines at Amarillo Field, Texas. —(Photos by U. S. Army Air Forces.)

OCT 23 1943

Lieut. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., Commander Of 99th Pursuit Squadron, Brought Back From Africa For Duty With New Negro Fighter Group

Back From War Front

Age
New York, N. Y.

Lt. Col. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS, Jr.

ARLINGTON, Va.—Ordered back to this country for duty with the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field, Mich.. Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, jr., commanding officer of the 99th Pursuit Squadron which saw service [illegible] the African, Sicil[illegible] and Italian invasions, told the editors of 20 Negro newspapers at a War Department conference in the Pentagon Building, Friday, that Negro pilots in the air force are no longer regarded as an experiment as result of the exploits of the 99th overseas.

Commander of the 99th from August 27, 1942, until September 2, 1943, Col. Davis traced the history of the squadron as "an experiment to determine whether the Negro pilot was physically, mentally and emotionally suited to the rigors of combat flying."

He said that all members of the squadron were "impressed at all times with the knowledge that the future of the Negro in the Air Corps probably [illegible] be dependent largely upon the manner [illegible] which they carried out their mission. Hence, the importance of the work done by this squadron, the responsibility carried by every man be he ground crewman or pilot, meant that very little pleasure was to be had by anyone until the experiment was deemed an unqualified success."

For himself he said the pleasure of commanding the squadron "was realized when it became apparent that the 99th Fighter Squadron had taken and could maintain its proper place in the Northwest African theatre of operations. Very little pl[illegible] existed prior to that time."

Declaring [illegible] the publicity of the segregated aspects of the Tuskegee Airfield had a profound effect upon the individual members of the 99th, Col. Davis said that while the members felt hurt that the training station at Tuskegee Army Airfield "was being regarded by some persons outside the military establishment [illegible] being a discrimi[illegible]y felt that the best means to "defeat the end of supporters and philosophers who delegated him (the Negro) to a subsidiary role in the life of the United States, was to do his job in such a way that the world would know that he was capable of performing a highly specialized and technical piece of work in a creditable manner."

The fact that the unit was an experiment, Col. Davis said, became a challenge to the men and he declared that "every man in the 99th will go through any ordeal concocted by combat or garrison existence to assure the successful completion of the experiment. At all times every man realizes that the pleasures and relaxations that are available to men in other organizations are not available to him because his task is far greater, his responsibility is much heavier, and his reward is the advancement of his people."

No Segregation Abroad

The segregation against the 99th Squadron in the United States, Col. Davis said, was not practiced overseas. "From the time this squadron left the continental limits of the United States, and that was on April [illegible] 1943, [illegible]esent time, there has not been a single circumstance or incident which could be regarded as discriminatory by the most rabid race leader," he declared.

On their arrival in Casablanca, the squadron was sent to its base in French Morocco where the men experienced, for the first time, the thrill of flying brand new airplanes. Their instructor was Lieutenant Col. Philip Cochran — the Flip Corkin of "Terry and the Pirates" cartoon fame. On May 31, the squadron took off for the Cape Bon Peninsula, and action.

"I personally believe," said Col. Davis, "that no unit in this war has gone into combat better trained or better equipped than the 99th Fighter Squadron. We were weak in one respect only and that was simply that the squadron commander — myself — and the flight commanders had had no actual combat experience....On the other hand, this deficiency was balanced by the fa[illegible]at [illegible] averaged about [illegible] hours in a P-40, and a young pilot in these days who has 250 hours in a P-40 before he goes into combat is a hard man to find."

Escorted Bombers

First mission of the 99th was over Pantelleria and later it escorted bombers to Sicily and Sciacca, Italy. After the fall of Sicily, the squadron spent its time training replacements that come from the United States. On September 2nd, Col. Davis received orders assigning him to the 332nd Fighter Group and left for home.

For the time being, Lieut. Colonel will be stationed at Mitchell Field, Long Island, at headquarters of the 1st Air Force, of which Selfridge Field, Mich. is a part, and when he leaves Mitchell for Selfridge he will be stationed with the 332nd Fighter Group, composed of three squadrons of [illegible]o fighter pilots. If named [illegible] commander, he will probably be promoted to the rank of full Colonel.

SEP 18 1943

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

Pilots Report On Successful Battle With The Enemy In Sicily

47a

AUG 21 1943

AFTER AIR BATTLES with the enemy, members of the 99th Fighter Squadron, now taking part in the Sicily action, report to an intelligence officer on their latest mission. Above a group of serious looking pilots are making such a report. It is this group of pilots who are making history for the Negro pilot which has caused the Jim Crow bars to lessen in the Army Air Corps, (we will soon have Negro and white cadets training as navigators and bombardiers). These are the men in actual combat which the Tuskegee Army Air Field paid tribute to a fortnight ago as the All-Negro air base celebrated its Second Anniversary.—Official U. S. Army Photo.

In Tunisa With Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr.

Weekly Review

BY Pvt. IRWIN SHAW

The following article appeared originally in "Yank" the army weekly, it is being reproduced by the Associated Negro Press through special arrangement with Yank).

AUG 28 1943

TUNISIA —It was sunny on the Mediterranean and Pantelleria looked like a small dark stone struck in the shining blue sea 8,000 feet below the six P-40's droning along on an afternoon patrol. The fighters had been ordered to take off from their African field to sweat out an hour and some minutes of cover over the invasion of Sicily.

47a

Lt. G. W. Dryden of New York City was leading the flight. His squadron, in action for only three weeks had bombed Pantelleria in the furious air push toward Italy and at other times had escorted bombers. However, as de from a little wild flack loosed by the forlorn gun crews on the island, the outfit had never known trouble.

Birmingham, Ala.

The litutenant scanned the wide empty sky and looked around to make sure the flight was tucked in neatly behind him. He looked at his watch and noticed that the patrol was nearly over.

Behind him the big engines filled the bright salt air with their deep steady noise. Then, through the earphones clamped on his head, over the wild and howling crackle of aircraft radios, came the voice of the air observer on Pantelleria: "Unidentified aircraft approaching the island."

Lt. Dryden wheeled and the flight wheeled behind him. They went out looking for trouble.

Behind Dryden were Lt. Leo Rayford of Washington, D. C.; Lt. Willie Ashley of Sumter, C. C.; Lt. Spann Watson of Hackensack, N. J.; Lt. S. P. Brooks of Cleveland, Ohio, and Lt. Leon Roberts of Pritchard, Ala. They settled tighter in their seats and tensed a little against the pull of the big engines, because there was a fight coming up and all their long hours of training, all the studying and all the sweat and misery of earning their wings and learning how to fight were either fianlly going to pay off or not pay off on this calm blue afternoon.

They went up to 12,000 feet as the sitll unseen plane dodged in over the sea, trying to avoid detection. Suddenly from out of the sun the Messerschmitts and the Focke-Wulfs dove. There were 12 of them, screaming down the peaceful air, and behind and above them were 12 bombers, come to lay waste the precious airfield below.

Roberts saw the planes pouncing, looking with their pale paint againts the bright sky like white puffs of ack-ack. He wheeled and the rest of the flight wheeled with him, but they had been taken off balance, and it was impossible to maintain company against the Germans, who were coming down in loose formations of twos at 450 miles an hour.

The P-40 is a comparatively slow plane and its fighting has to be defensive, because the Messerschmitt ,with its superior speed, can pick the angle and time attack. But the P-40 has one advantage; it can make tighter turns. The flight yanked hard on their controls and turned into the German onslaught.

Dryden, after his turn, found himself far out beyond the edge of the melee ,with the bombers passing sedately 5,000 feet above his head. So he roared up above them and then dove down across the tail of the formation, spraying them as he went, and continued right down into the dobfight below.

Three of the P-40's were making a lufberry, a slow, spiraling circle in which each plane protects the other's tail. From that defensive circle, like covered wagons gathered around a square against Indians on the plains, the defenders can shoot out as the enemy speeds around on the outside. Dryden shook a Focke-Wulf on his tail and snugged into the lufberry, circuling, firing his guns as the Germans flicked across his sights.

Leo Rayford was having troubles of his own. To FWs kept at him, and when he turned into one, the other would get a burst in at him. One burst hit and his right wing shuddered as a 20-mm cannon shell exploded there. Rayford was fighting grimly, taking the long gamble against the two Germans, when Spann Watson appeared on his wing from nowhere. Watson opened up at long range. He hit the outside German and the two planes broke away out of the fight.

At the initial turn Willie Ashley's plane had gone into a spin and he'd lost considerable altitude. When he pulled out, he started spiraling up to rejoin the others. Suddenly ahead of him he saw another plane on the loose. He edged in to investigate. It was a Focke-Wulf.

AUG 28 1943

Ashley got in good and close before letting go with his entire works. He saw that his tracers were going too far in front, so he cut down on the lead until he saw the tracers hitting home. He sprayed the German from end to end, and it began a long smoking glide toward the sea.

The pilot followed the falling German plane as far as he dared, but the air behind him was still full of machine-gun fire and spitting planes. He wheeled and climbed to make sure there was no one on hsi tail, and when he looked down once more there was no sign of the German. Ashley climbed to rejoin the flight.

The six American planes spiraled in formidable procupine formation, and the German fighters left off and sailed toward Italy. Meanwhile the jittery enemy bombers had jettisoned their loads into the sea, without attempting a run over the island. and were making for home.

Once again the P-40s joined company front, flying wing to wing in extended horizontal order, and resumed their patrol over Patelleria. A few miuntes later they were relieved and headed for home, flying [illegible] formation of Sp[illegible] coming out to carry on the daylight virgil over the island.

There is nothing very new in this story. Six untried pilots from a squadron new to action meet the enemy and do rather well against him, beating off superior forces without loss to themselves and with probably loss to the enemy. They finish their patrol, alive with new confidence, and fly home to dinner. It must have happened time and time again in this war to thousands of fighters. There is nothing new —except that all the pilots are Negroes and the entire squadron, flyers and ground crew, commanding officer and buck private, are Negroes.

Over the Meditteranean six Americans of this race for the first time in history fought for their country in an aerial battle against the enemy.

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the squadron, who flies with his men, was graduated from West Point in 1936. He is 30 years old, tall and wiry, and has that peculiar tenseness you find among flyers. Son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, now on duty in the ETO the colonel formed the squadron himself and bears the large weight of responsibilty.

He has told his men that he's not interested in commanding just another squadron. He wants a crack outfit or nothing.

AUG 28 1943

47a

BOMBARDIERS TRAINING

To Fly B-25 Bombers

St. Louis, Mo.
Argus

NOV 19 1943

47a

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The third and final step in the training of Negroes as bombardiers has been taken with the announcement by the Army Air Forces that Negro navigation cadets now in training at Hondo Army Air Field, Texas will serve the dual function of navigator and bombardier.

Upon the successful completion of the navigation course, the cadets will be assigned to a school in the Central Training Command for bombardier training.

At the same time the War Department announced that twelve Negro flying officers, the first Negroes [illegible] receive wings as twin-engine pilots, have been assigned to the B-25 transition school at Mather Field, California, where they will study the operation of B-25 bombers, the proposed basic arm of an all-Negro medium bombardment group.

Names and addresses of the nine second lieutenants selected from Tuskegee Army Air Field, follow: Herman R. Campbell, Jr., New York, N. Y.; Henry F. Fletcher, San Antonio, Texas; Perry E. Hudson, Jr., Atlanta, Ga.; Vincent J. Mason, Orange, New Jersey; Haldane King, Jamaica, New York; Jerome D. Spurlon, Chicago, Illinois; Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore, Md.; William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass.; and Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, Calif.

The flying officers from Selfridge Field are: Second Lieutenants Daniel James, Jr., Pensacola, Fla.; Charles I. Williams, Lima Ohio; and James Y. Carter, Winston Salem, N. C.

NOV 19 1943

A Progressive Trend

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

AUG 21 1943

47a

The training of Negro bombardiers and navigators by the Army Air Corps is another important advancement of the race in the nation's fighting forces. That Negro youths are fully qualified for such high positions in the Air Corps goes without saying, for [illegible] since the colonists fought for freedom in the Revolutionary War Negro men in this country have been in the vanguard of its best fighters.

Although Negro Americans haven't been granted absolute equality in our armed forces, they have made real strides since World War Two was started. In 1939, there were only about 13,000 Negroes in the Army. Today, there are about 700,000. While there were only two line officers four years ago, there are now more than 1,000. A little over a year ago Negroes were accepted in the Navy only as messmen. Today, black and white naval gunners man the guns on our fighting ships side by side. Barred from the Army Air Corps until 1941, at this very minute Negro aviators are having dog fights with Nazi pilots over Sicily.

The race still has far to go before it is granted complete opportunities to serve their country in its fighting forces equally with white men. Its very record, if [illegible]ing else, should have resulted in it being granted an equal right to serve in all capacities long ago. Nevertheless, it has made genuine progress in the past few years—more than ever before. We salute our bombardiers and navigators in-the-making. They will carry on as efficiently and courageously as Negro Americans have always done in every war our country has fought.

AUG 21 1943

Tuskegee Graduates Another Flying Class

Call
Kansas City, Mo.

AUG 6 1943

47a

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. — In perfect cadence to the stirring notes of the "Air Corps Song," Class SE 43-G filed into the new theater building Wednesday, July 28, at the Tuskegee Army Aid field to receive their wings and commissions as single engine fighter pilots in the Army Air Forces.

This contingent of airmen became Tuskegee's most recent group of flyers to complete the arduous pilot training course and become flying officers in the Air Corps.

They were addressed by Roger F. Gordon, field director, of the American Red Cross at the Tuskegee Army Air Field who advised them to, "Meet the next stage of your training and the trials that are to follow with the same purposeful determination, the same optimism and the same faith that have to this point crowned your efforts with success."

Mr. Gordon, who proved to possess a keen insight into human nature further admonished the graduating cadets that, "Yours then is a dual responsibility. Your nation expects of you a stellar performance; and because of its peculiar situation with that nation your race demands it. For as you raise the wings of your P-40 into the flame-infested sky of some foreign land, the fate, the future and the prayers of thirteen million Negro American ride with you."

Immediately following the main address by Mr. Gordon, the graduates were presented commissions as second lieutenants in the Army Air Forces by Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the field. Wings were awarded the graduates by Major Donald G. McPherson, Director of Training at the post.

Student officers receiving wings were Second Lieutenants John Daniels of Chicago, and William B. Ellis of Washington, D. C.

Among those receiving wings and commissions were: Second Lieutenants Lee Andrew Archer, New York City, Harry L. Bailey, Chicago; William R. Bartley, Jacksonville, Fla.; Samuel Lee Curtis, Yeadon, Pa.; William W. Green, Staunton, Va.; George B. Greenlee Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Richard W. Hall, Albany, Ga.; Jack D. Holsclaw, Spokane, Wash.

Daniel James Jr., Pensacola, Fla.; John Howard Leahr, Cincinnati; Claybourne A. Lockett, Los Angeles; James W. Mason, Monroe, La.; Eddie A. McLaurin, Jackson, Miss.; William R. Melton Jr., Los Angeles; Robert H. Nelson Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Maurice R. Page, Los Angeles; Cornelius G. Rogers, Chicago.

Edward N. Smith, Philadelphia; Lowell C. Steward, Los Angeles; Elmer W. Taylor, Pittsburgh; Alva Newte Temple, Carrollton, Ala.; Walter D. Westmoreland, Atlanta; Robert H. Wiggins, New York City; Leroy Shelton Williams, Roanoke, Va., and Beryl Wyatt of Independence, Kas.

Haitian Wins Wings

Also completing the pilot training course and receiving wings and a certificate wthe first foreign student at Tuskegee, Sgt. Raymond Cassagnol, Haitian Air Force, Port au Prince, Haiti.

Cadet honors for all around excellence as cadets were Lee Andrew Archer of New York City, Claybourne A. Lockett, Los Angeles, Cal., and Daniel James Jr., of Pensacola, Fla. Lt. James was a flight instructor at the Primary Flying Field, Tuskegee Institute, Ala., prior to accepting appointment as an aviation cadet.

The graduating class will undergo a short period of transitional instruction and then be assigned to a tactical organization for further combat training.

Air Crash Brings Death To Tuskegee Flight Instructor

Weekly Review
Birmingham, Ala.

AUG 14 1943

47a

TUSKEGEE INST., Ala.—George L. Washington, General Manager, 66th Primary Flying School, Tuskegee Institute, officially announced today the death of civilian instructor, Norman DeWitt Gray, Jr., of Springfield, Illinois. Instructor Gray was killed instantly last Friday afternoon, July 30, 1943, at 4:15 P. M. when the ship flown by a solo student collided with the ship in which he was flying (with one of his students).

Mr. Gray was born February 2, 1920 in Natchez, Mississippi. His early years in Springfield schools were spent in Springfield, Illinois where he received his [illegible] and High school education.

In September, 1938, Mr. Gray, desiring to further prepare himself for future accomplishments, entered Jackson College in Jackson, Miss.

When the Civilian Pilot Training Program came into effect, Mr. Gray was among the enthusiastic young men who enrolled for this special course. He completed his flight training in Chicago and received his commercial license, Instructor, C. A. R., Engine and Ground Ratings.

In May, 1943, Mr. Gray came to Tuskegee Institute with a prospective view toward becoming a Flight Instructor at the 66th. After completing the Refresher Course and successfully passing the Army check flight, he was assigned a quota of students to begin instructing on May 21, 1943. At this time also, he was issued the Army Air Corps Certificate of Proficiency.

For those of us who knew Gray his loss will be kneenly felt. He is survived by a father, Mr. Norman D. Gray, Sr., two [illegible], Vivian and Dorothy of Springfield.

He passed [illegible] performing duty of training military pilots for the U. S. Air Corps and may be therefore considered as having made the supreme sacrifice in the defense of his country.

AUG 14 1943

47a-1943

The General Inspects

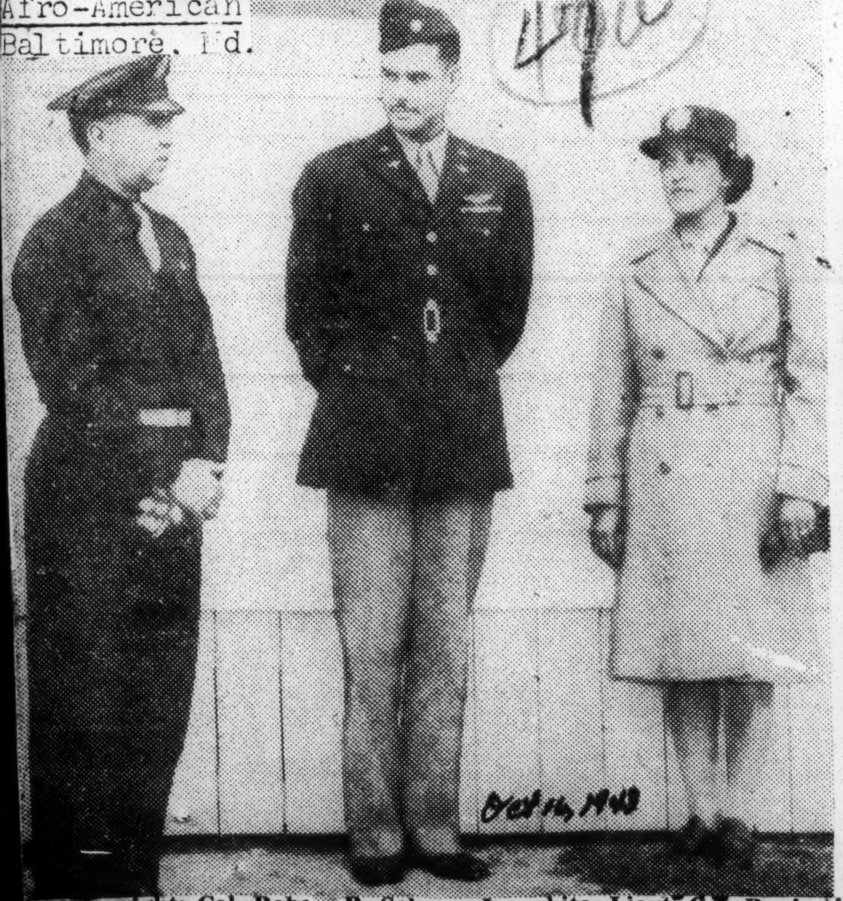
Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

OCT 16 1943

Brigadier General B. O. Davis, Sr., of the Inspector General's Department, and Truman Gibson, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, shown doing a week's inspection tour of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field, Mich. Left to right, Gen. Davis, Col. Robert R. Selway, Jr., Officer in charge of all Fighter Groups at the Field, 1st Lt. James Pughsley, adjutant; Captain George L. Knox, Operations officer and Mr. Gibson. The sergeant in the back is not saluting—the sun is in his eyes.

47a

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

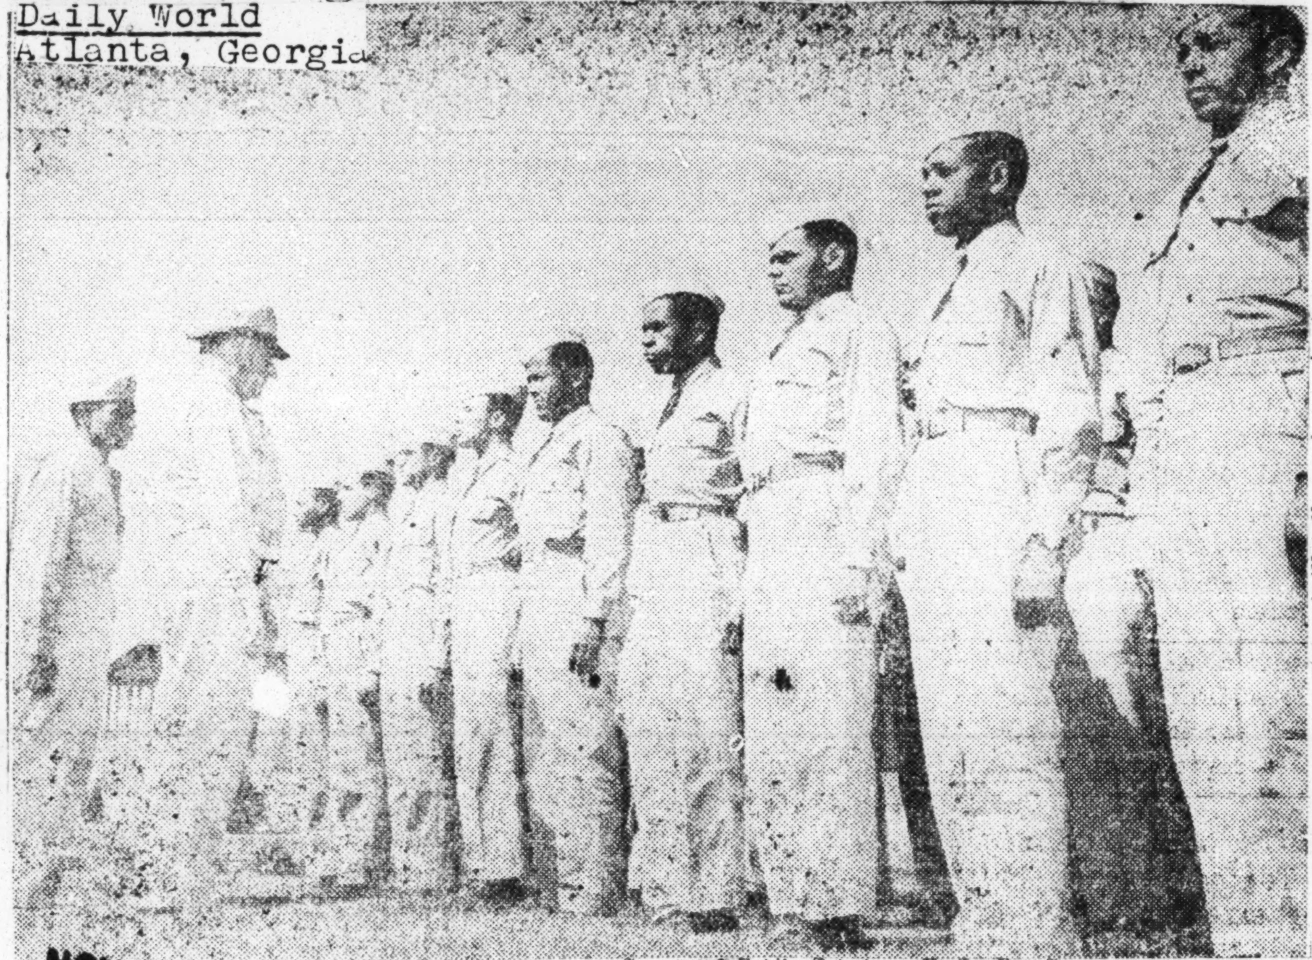


Oct 16, 1943

Left to right: Col. Robert R. Selway, Jr., white, Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., now commanding officer of 332nd Fighter Group, and Harriet M. West, Women's Army Corps, at Selfridge Field, Mich.

First Navigators At Texas Airbase

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



Bureau of Public Relations, U. S. War Department

FIRST NEGRO NAVIGATORS arrive in Texas Airbase. The 30 smartly disciplined members of Squadron 10, first Negro unit to report for navigation training at Hondo Army Air Field, Hondo, Texas, are shown being inspected shortly after their arrival at the huge navigation airbase. The inspecting officer is Captain Frank H. Sheffield, senior tactical officer of the school's Group III. To Captain Sheffield's left is Navigaton Cadet Arnold W. Galimore, flight marcher for the unit. (Photo by Army Air Forces)

NOV 1 1943

47a

Colored Boys to Fly This B-26

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Acting Secretary of War John J. McCloy announced Thursday that colored airmen will soon be flying the B-26 shown above as navigators and bombardiers.

The plane is made at the Martin factory in Baltimore. It is a medium bomber of midwing monoplane design. Construction is all-metal monocoque. The landing gear is a retractable tricycle type.

The power plant consists of two Pratt and Whitney 18-cylinder engines rated at 1850 horsepower. The propellers are Curtiss automatic electric, four bladed, full feathering with diameters of 13 feet 6 inches. The gross weight of the plane is 26,625 pounds. Provisions are available for a crew of five.

Races Train Together at Selfridge Field

Afro-American

OCT 16 1943

No Discrimination in Dining Room or Theatre

332ND ANXIOUS TO GET AT ENEMY

Two Fighter Groups, Quartermaster and Service Units There

By Staff Correspondent

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—There is a real All-American setup at this field. White and colored officers eat in the P-X dining room, attend the base theatre, and train together without discrimination.

A white group, the 403rd Fighter Squadron, is attached to the 332nd Fighter Group "to be of whatever service it can in training the flyers for combat duty."

There are actually four outfits here and at Oscoda, a gunnery school about 200 miles away.

Two Service Units

There is a quartermaster outfit that recently arrived here. It is an air base squadron whose duty it is to serve the needs of the base. They clean up, drive trucks, cook and serve tables.

There is also the Ninety-sixth Service Group which keeps the planes flying. The planes are kept in tip-top shape by these soldiers and they also perform many other duties.

Then the 332nd Fighter Group which has three squadrons of flyers and more. There are a number of flyers over the group quota who are training right along with the regulars.

Boys Want Action

These flyers have their own ideas (which are quite unofficial) as to when they are going over, and they will tell you in a minute that they believe and hope that it won't be long.

They want to get over and do their part. Here is how one flyer puts it:

"It is just like getting a knife good and sharp. The first thing you want to do is to try it out on some one or something. That is what we want. We have had quite a bit of training and now we want to try it out on the Japs and Germans."

OCT 16 1943

OCT 16 1943

These flyers are not afraid. They are daredevils. They don't mind fighting but they want to return to a better world after the war is over.

Flyers from Tuskegee

The flyers who are sent to this field come from Tuskegee where they have learned to operate a plane. They learn operational flying, how to work with a group and to fly in formation.

This camp was established on July 4, 1941, and pilots began arriving shortly after that. It was not until May 20, 1943, that the 332nd was actually organized by Col. R. R. Selway. Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., took command of the outfit last week.

Virginians Die In Plane Crash

LT. WILLIAM WALKER

LT. LeROI WILLIAMS

Two Virignia Pilots Die In Midair Crash

OCT 23 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Planes Collide During Flight At Selfridge Field

Special to Journal and Guide

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich. — Two Negro pilots, both natives of Virginia, were killed at 3:10 p. m., Thursday, October 14, in the midair crash of two single seat P-39 Airacobras. Their bodies were burned beyond recognition in the accident two miles northwest of Selfridge Field, and three miles northeast of Mt. Clemens, Mich.

The [illegible] to earth in flames [illegible] of several motorists.

The pilots were 2nd Lt. William H. Walker of Suffolk, Va., and 2nd Lt. LeRoi Shelton Williams, 221 East Harrison avenue, Roanoke, Va., both of the 100th Fighter Squadron of the 332nd Fighter Group, now in training at Selfridge Field. They were on a routine training flight.

Lieutenant Walker's mother is Mrs. Braddy Walker, General Delivery, Suffolk, Va. Lieutenant Williams' mother is Mrs. [illegible]delia Shelton Williams, [illegible] Harrison avenue, [illegible]anoke, Va. Their fathers are deceased. Both were unmarried.

LT. WALKER

Lieutenant Walker was born January 20, 1919, in Keysville, Ga. He was educated in East Suffolk public schools, at Nansemond Institute, and St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute. [illegible] the Army as an aviation cadet April 9, 1942, he took flight training at Tuskegee Army Flying School, Ala. He reported to Selfridge Field with the 332nd Fighter Group March 29, 1943.

LT. WILLIAMS

Lieutenant Williams was born July 30, 1919, at Roanoke, and was educated in schools there and at Hampton Institute. Prior to reporting to Selfridge Field, on August 30, 1943, he had taken nine months of flying training at Tuskegee Army Flying Field, Ala.

THE THIRD VIRGINIAN

The deaths of these two pilots make the third Virginia Negro flyer to die in a crash on a routine training flight within the past six months. Lt. Sidney J. Moseley of Norfolk, who [illegible] at Tuskegee Army Flying School on May 11, was the first.

Lt. Moseley died within less than 30 days after receiving his wings, having graduated on April 29, with the largest class the school had ever turned out. He had also recently been married.

Full military honors were to be accorded both flyers at funeral rites scheduled to be held this week.

Funeral services for Lt. Walker were scheduled to be held Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock at the Macedonia AME Church, Pine street, Suffolk, with the Rev. Dr. J. Alvin Russell, of St. Paul Polytechnic Institute, Lawrenceville, Va., officiating. The Rev. E. B. Bowling is pastor of the church.

Lt. Walker's body was accompanied from Selfridge Field by Lt. Verwayne of the 332nd Fighter Group who was also making preparations to secure a guard of honor from Fort Eustis, Va.

THREE SISTERS, FOUR BROTHERS SURVIVE

In addition to his mother, Lt. Walker is survived by three sisters: Mrs. Louise Thomas, of New York City; Mrs. Myrtis Roper, Suffolk; and Miss Ruth Walker, also of Suffolk; four brothers: Pvt. Porter Walker, now stationed somewhere in the South Pacific; Pvt. Quilla Walker, of the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Aberdeen, Md.; and Joel and Shaver Walker, both of Suffolk.

Lt. Theodore Wilson, also a native of Roanoke, Va., accompanied the body of Lt. Williams to his native city where funeral services, with full military honors, were scheduled to be held Thursday afternoon at three p. m. at the First Baptist Church, Roanoke. The pastor, the Rev. A. L. James, D. D., was to be the officiating minister.

Lt. Wilson also brought messages of sympathy to he bereaved family from members of he 100h Figher Squadron and he 332nd Fligh Group a Selfridge Field. A military escort consisting of six white officers from the Woodrum Air Transport Field near Roanoke, was present for the rites. A Douglas transport plane from Woodrum Field was scheduled to circle the cemetery during the interment rites at Lincoln Park Cemetery.

ACTIVE PALLBEARERS

Active pallbearers were: Messrs. Albert Macklin, Thomas Coleman, Gilbert March, Edwadr Wright, and Thomas Croan. Members of the Addison High School faculty served as honorary pallbearers.

Flower girls were: Janette Turner, Margaret Wilson, Sallie Terrell, Iris Saunders, Hazel Hall, Mary Curtis, Elizabeth Howard, Elnora Petty, Ruth Lash, Marie Taylor, Elizabeth Batts, and Janie Grantham.

In addition to his mother, Lt. Williams' survivors include: Corporal James T. Williams, Camp [illegible]lis, Ill.; Capt. Eugene Williams, Hampton Institute, Va.; Prof. H. H. Williams, Hampton Institute; Mrs. Virginia Williams and Mrs. Edna Geraldine Williams, Roanoke.

Report 99th Successes In Hard Sicily Fighting

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

AUG 21

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.— Successful participation by the 99th Fighter squadron in the air battle over Sicily was given official cognizance in a War Department communique this week.

Praise for the work of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis and his command "in its mission of bombing Axis communications and supply columns in Sicily," was couched in the announcement, which followed on the heels of a revelation that the Negro outfit has emerged from upward of 300 sorties on enemy positions since its arrival in North Africa early in the summer.

While it is next to impossible to determine the exact number of battles in which the former Tuskegee squadron has been engaged, it is known that these include well over 300. The skill of the men and the coordination which marks their efforts are attested to by the fact that only three have thus far failed to return on schedule.

Two Now Missing

Of this number, one, 1st Lt. Sherman W. White, was reported missing by the War Department since July 2. A second, Lt. James B. McCullin, is also missing. The only other flyer to fail to return on schedule, however, showed up six days after being downed in the Mediterranean by a Nazi plane. He was Lt. William Bolling, of Phoebus, Va.

Lt. White, 22-year-old Macon, Miss., lad, failed to return after a mission during the fall of Pantelleria, first of the Italian island strongholds projecting into the Mediterranean to be taken by the Allies. His mother, Mrs. Nettie B. White, lives near Wetumpka, Ala.

The War Department communique also lauded other Negro troops which have seen action in the North African theatre. Special mention is made of "the efficiency of the ordnance and supply units in North Africa from the moment of their landing on the shores of Gela."

These units consist of airbase security squadrons, whose work it is to take over, rebuild and help defend all air bases captured from enemy hands. Also included in this category are quartermaster and truck commands which race supplies to the front lines for use by the fighting units.

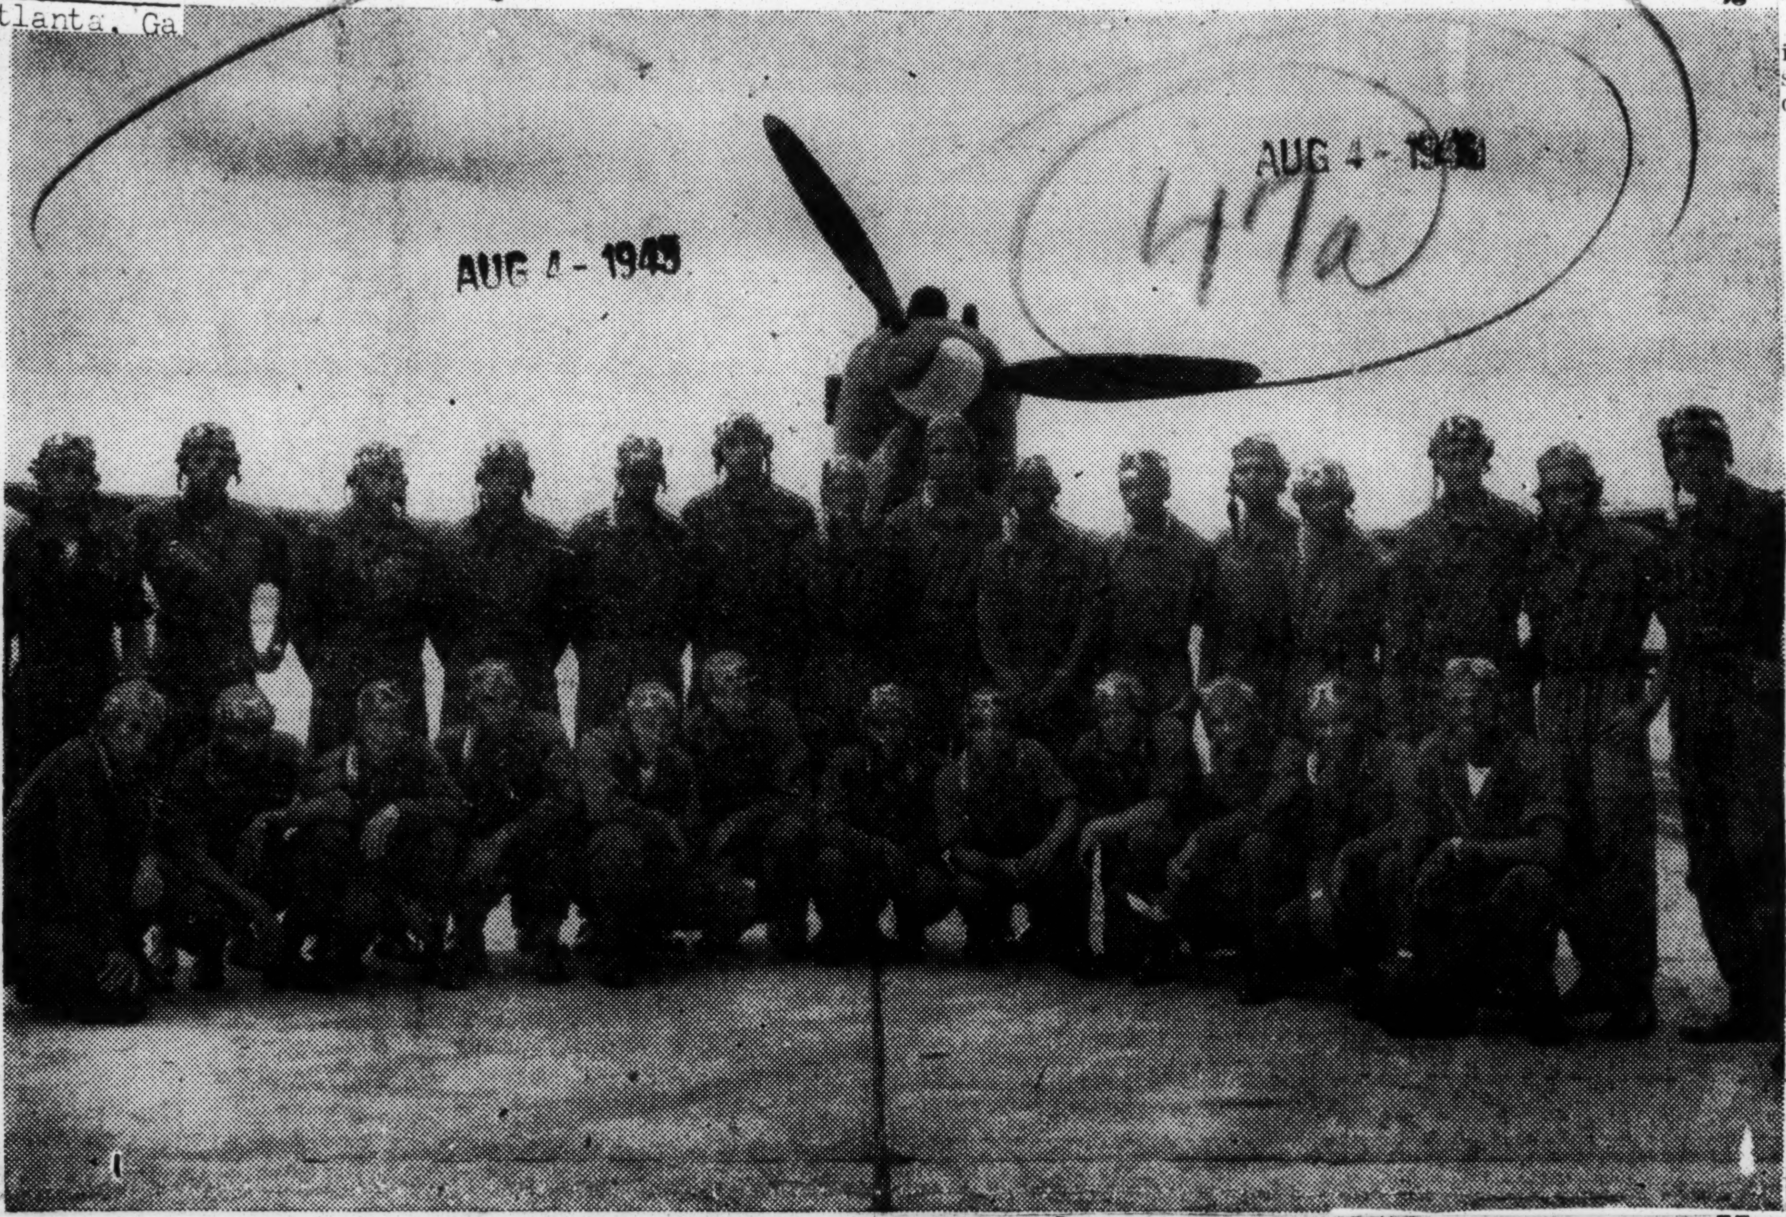
Other curt references are made to colored troops in the following War Department announcements: "Engineers are pursuing construction and repair work at North African invasion ports," and emphasis is laid on the bravery being displayed by these outfits.

The work of anti-aircraft batteries, manned by Negroes, has been especially noteworthy, the announcement reveals. Colored troops manning these guns have run up a creditable score and their commanders have frequently referred to them as "an indispensible arm" of their outfit.

47a-1943

Here's Latest Crop Of Tuskegee's Fighter Pilots

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga



AUG 4 - 1943
AUG 4 - 1943

47a

This group of young men were among the latest single engine fighter pilots graduated from the Tuskegee Army Air Field. All are Second Lieutenants in the Army Air Forces. They are from left to right: (kneeling) Lowell S. Steward, Los Angeles, Calif.; William Melton, Los Angeles; Walter D. Westmoreland, Atlanta, Ga.; Maurice R. Page, Los Angeles, Calif.; Elmer Taylor, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Jack Daniels Holsclaw, Spokane, Washington; Eddie R. McLaurin, Jackson, Miss.; Cornelius G. Rogers, Chicago, Ill.; William W. Green, Jr., Staunton, Va.; George B. Greenlee, Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Claybourne A. Lockett, Los Angeles, and John Daniels of Chicago, Ill.

(Standing) Leo A. Archer, New York City; William B. Ellis, Washington, D. C.; Alva N. Temple, Carrollton, Ala.; William R. Bartley, Jacksonville, Fla.; Le Roi S. Williams, Roanoke, Va.; James W. Mason, Monroe, La.; Beryl Wyatt, Independence, Kans.; Daniel James, Jr., Pensacola, Fla.; Edward N. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa.; Robert H. Nelson, Jr., Pittsburgh; John Howard Leahr, Cincinnati, Ohio; Harry D. Bailey, Chicago, Ill; Richard W. Hall, Albany, Ga.; Robert H. Wiggins, New York, and Samuel L. Curtis, Yeadon, P

99th Squadron "Experiment" Is Succeeding — T. W. Young

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

JUL 17 1943
JUL 17 1943
JUL 17 1943
JUL 17 1943

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

By Air Mail, Delayed by Censor.)

(Copyrighted. Reproduction Expressly Forbidden.)

AN ADVANCED ALLIED BASE IN NORTH AFRICA —Those in the Army Air Forces high command who had faith in the future of a Negro Fighter Squadron can relax a little now.

Their "experiment"—and such it was, for the idea involved for the first time the training of Negro pilots for combat fighting —is succeeding beautifully.

Those in the high places who had the temerity to make room in the expanding Air Corps for colored mechanics, armorers, engineers, administrators, ordnance men, and fliers did so in the face of a variety of objections, some expressed, some implied, and of far-from-unanimous belief that it would work out happily in the end.

The "experiment" IS succeeding, measured by any yardstick. It is yet too early to claim that it now is an accomplished success, although the pilots have flown more than two hundred sorties and forays, twenty-nine of them actual combat missions.

The operations of this squadron include fighter-bombing and strafing, bomber escort, patrol over routes flown by our bombers to enemy targets, and patrolling advanced allied bases subject to attacks by enemy planes. They have been completed without loss of a man or a plane, or even injury of any kind to personnel.

FOUGHT ENEMY

These fliers have encountered enemy fighters while escorting bombers and chased them away. They have engaged in dogfights with Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs and returned to their base with cannon and machine gun holes in their aircraft.

But after all this . . . after weeks of living in North Africa under inconveniences and hardships never experienced before . . . after a trip across the submarine-infested Atlantic which only a handful had ever crossed before . . . after seven months of alert status in the United States prior to departure for this theatre the esprit de corps of this squadron is high, its morale is solid and inspiring.

As everybody knows, this is no ordinary fighter squadron. Being the first of its kind, it has pioneered its way from the beginning right into the thick of the fight to drive the enemy from his European bastion.

Its reputation has spread even beyond the continental bounds of the United States. Everywhere it has been over here it has been cordially and warmly received.

WELCOMED BY EVERYONE

Every community it has entered has welcomed it. Americans, British, French, and native North African officials have always appeared happy to see and meet the officers and men of the Squadron about which they had heard even before it reached this theatre.

This correspondent has traveled thousands of miles and spent many pleasant weeks with the squadron since being attached to it before leaving the States. This can be said categorically: its conduct, its demeanor, its performance as a tactical unit in the Army Air Forces have been better than might reasonably have been anticipated.

In my travels I have seen many other units of colored soldiers, a great many of them in this theatre of operations. The superiority of this fighter squadron in almost every way over other organizations of colored troops I have seen is so marked that I have sought some explanation.

A few of them come to mind early. These are all superior men—way above the masses, much better than the average. It is an organization of technicians and fliers, and just ordinary people don't become experts in mechanical and organizational operations, or in flying complicated fighter planes like the P-40.

MORE MATURE

They are more mature, perhaps, than the members of other organizations. The squadron has been activated more than a year now, and the personnel was in on the ground floor. Many were in the Army long before the attack on Pearl Harbor.

The age differential is pronounced among the flying officers. They have been in the Army Air Forces for a year or more. They completed their regular training for combat work long before they finally sailed. Many were pilots and pilot instructors in civilian life before entering the Army. They were seasoned fliers and composed a close knit organization when they entered this theatre of operations. Those are some of the obvious reasons. The less obvious ones are probably more significant and bear a closer relation to the result.

The officers and men all realize that they, because of the great amount of attention given this squadron, are being watched closely by both colored and white people at home. Knowing they are on trial, so to speak, they are anxious to live up to the most critical expectations of their well-wishers.

Another subtle reason is the kind and quality of officer material commanding this squadron. One of the most fortunate decisions in the activation of this unit was that which gave it Negro officers from the commanding officer down. That arrangement has fostered a wholesome respect and regard for the enlisted men by the officers, and for the officers by the enlisted men.

JUL 17 1943

THE COMMANDING OFFICER

Most fortunate of all the circumstances is the superior leadership qualities of the commanding officer, Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., a soldier and a gentleman who has the complete respect of every man in the squadron from the lowest private to the top ranking subordinate officer.

That is no coincidence. Colonel Davis was almost born and reared to this job. His background is military. Almost since he can remember he has been shuffling about the world on military missions performed by his father, Brig. General B. O. Davis Sr., the only Negro general in the U. S.

He entered the U. S. Military Academy at West Point with odds of 1,000-to-1 against his finishing—that is, he had been an ordinary person.

No Negro had gone through West Point since Col. Charles Young graduated in 1887. Two other youths had been appointed, passed entrance examinations and been admitted.

In one year young Davis established his right to the respect and admiration of his fellow cadets at the Academy. At the end of his plebe year he was "recognized"—a traditional formality by which the first year men are admitted into the comradeship and society of West Point.

From then on till graduation the only trial of any consequence was that of loneliness, almost solitude, in being the only member of his race among the cadets.

He participated in cross-country running, with two years of varsity competition, boxing, and gymnastics [illegible] enjoyed the friendship and association of most of the cadets, but because he was the only Negro there he found nothing of interest in the social life of West Point.

JUL 17 1943

WANTED AIR CORPS

On completion of his course in 1936 he applied for the Air Corps, but there was no place then for a Negro officer in that division, so he went into the Infantry. It was natural, therefore, that as soon as an opportunity came to get into the Army Air Forces, he took it.

Doubtless because of those early amibitions he is today, at 30 years of age, the highest ranking Negro officer in that branch of our armed services.

Every inch a soldier, he has required that his men live up to all that is expected of soldiers in the United States Army. Often they have had to wear full uniforms on their post over here when soldiers at other bases nearby were indulged for their stricter attention to fighting than to military rules and regulations which in active combat zones tend to become tedious and oppressive.

They did not have passes sometimes when men from other fields in the vicinity were enjoying liberty in nearby cities. But all these things were a part of the price men had to pay for membership in this squadron. There was some grumbling and belly-aching; there would have to be. But the price was small and most of them paid it cheerfully.

JUL 17 1943

KNOW PROBLEMS

Even in this brief experience overseas, the members of this squadron have gained a world of experience and knowledge about operations of a fighter squadron in combat areas. They know the problems of administration, of personnel, of intelligence.

They are versed in the intricacies of maintainance and repair of aircraft under combat conditions. They know well the problems of supplies, transportation, medical care, mess, communications, armament, ordnance and special services.

JUL 17 1943

Air Force School Term Lengthened to 8 Weeks

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Only One Colored Cadet Has Finished Secret Business Training at Harvard

BOSTON—The course of training given to the army air force statisticians at the Harvard Business School has been increased from five to eight weeks.

So far, only one colored student has attended the school, Lieut. Emmett Rice of New York City, and City College of New York City, now stationed with one of the Tuskegee Army Air Force squadrons.

The course was lengthened from five to eight weeks to give the statisticians practical experience at airfields in the Boston area before they are shipped to combat zones.

Only School of Its Kind

By the new system, which has been in operation over a year, a statistician control officer is placed with every army air force unit. The demand for these men is so great that most of the graduates are overseas.

The school is the only one of its kind in the nation, and was also the first to experiment with the use of civilian professors to teach army courses. Organized in June, 1942, it was kept secret until Time magazine revealed the setup in January, 1943.

The men get specialized training in the problems of air logistics, learn the new AAF statisticians' system, how the air forces are organized, methods of collecting and gauging statistics, personnel analysis, and military law.

Daily Worker
New York, N. Y

Train All Neg[illegible] Bomber Group

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (UP).—Training of pilots for an all-Negro bombardment group to be activated on July 1 of next year will begin within a month at either Fort Dodge, Kans., or Del Rio, Tex., the War Department announced today.

In December, other Negro cadets will be trained as navigator and bombardier officers at air fields which are as yet unannounced. Ground [illegible] for the [illegible] bombing group [illegible] already in training at air forces installations throughout the country. The Negroes who will make up the group are all being trained with white students.

Negro Bomber Pilots Receive Coveted Silver Wings at 'Skegee

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—The first Negro pilots in the history of he U. S. Army Air Forces to receive the coveted silver wings of twin engine pilots were commissioned second lieutenants at the graduation exercises held in the Post Chapel at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, Wednesday morning, November [illegible]

NOV 13 1943

To Train on West Coast

Included among the initial group of Negro bomber pilots, who represent eight states, are 2nd Lt. Henri F. Fletcher, San Antonio, Texas; 2nd Lt. Perry Hudson, Jr., Atlanta, Ga.; 2nd Lt. Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N. J.; 2nd Lt. Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore, Md.; 2nd Lt. Jerome D. Spurlin, Chicago, Ill.; 2nd Lt. William D. Tomkpins, Fall River, Mass.; 2nd Lt. Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, Calif,; 2nd Lt. Herman R. Campbell, Jr., New York City; and 2nd Lt. Haldane King, of Jamaica, New York.

This group of flyers will report to Mather Field, Calif., where they will undergo transitional bomber training in B-25, Mitchell bombers.

Cadets Honors

The three top-ranking cadets of the class were awarded prizes emblematic of their all-around excellence as potential officers in the Air Forces. First honors were awarded to 2nd Lt. Leslie A. Williams, former student at the University of California. Second honors went to 2nd Lt. Edward M. Thomas, former Chicago postal clerk, while 2nd Lt. Harvey N. Pinkney, who attended Morgan College, won third prize.

Single Engine Pilots

Cadets completing their training and commissioned as single engine fighter pilots comprised a majority of the class and included representatives of eight states and the District of Columbia.

Listed among the single engine graduates are the following, second lieutenants: Gwynn W. Pearson, Oakland, Calif.; James B. Brown and William Thomas, Los Angeles, Calif.; Roger B. Brown, Glencoe, Ill.; Oscar D. Hutton, Emory L. Robinson, and Edward M. Thomas of Chicago, Ill.; Alfred Q. Carroll, Washington, D. C.; Clarence W. Dart, Elmira, N. Y.; Charles W. Dickerson, and Theodore H. Mills of New Rochelle, N. Y.; Hugh St. Clair Warner, New York City; Edward Laird, Brighton, Ala.; Ivey L. Letfwich, Fairfield, Ala.; Turner W. Payne, Wichita Falls. Texas; Earl S. Sherard, Columbus, Ohio; Eugene D. Smith, Cincinnati, Ohio; Nathaniel C. Stewart, Philadelphia, Pa.; and Paul C. Simmons, Jr., Detroit, Mich.

Tuskegee Flyer Made Nazi Officer Climb a Tree

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

DEC 4 - 1943

CHICAGO (ANP)—Lt. Price D. Rice, Montclair, N.J., of the 99th Tuskegee Flyers, dropped down out of the skies in Italy and strafed a certain German headquarters at dawn.

He saw a German officer, clad in red-and-white sport pajamas, leap from the window, dash across the field and begin to climb a tree.

Shot Him Down

DEC 4 - 1943

Lieutenant Rice was so startled that he circled, came back and shot the officer down.

This is the story of H. R. Knickerbocker, white, Chicago Sun Service foreign correspondent, in a dispatch to his paper last week.

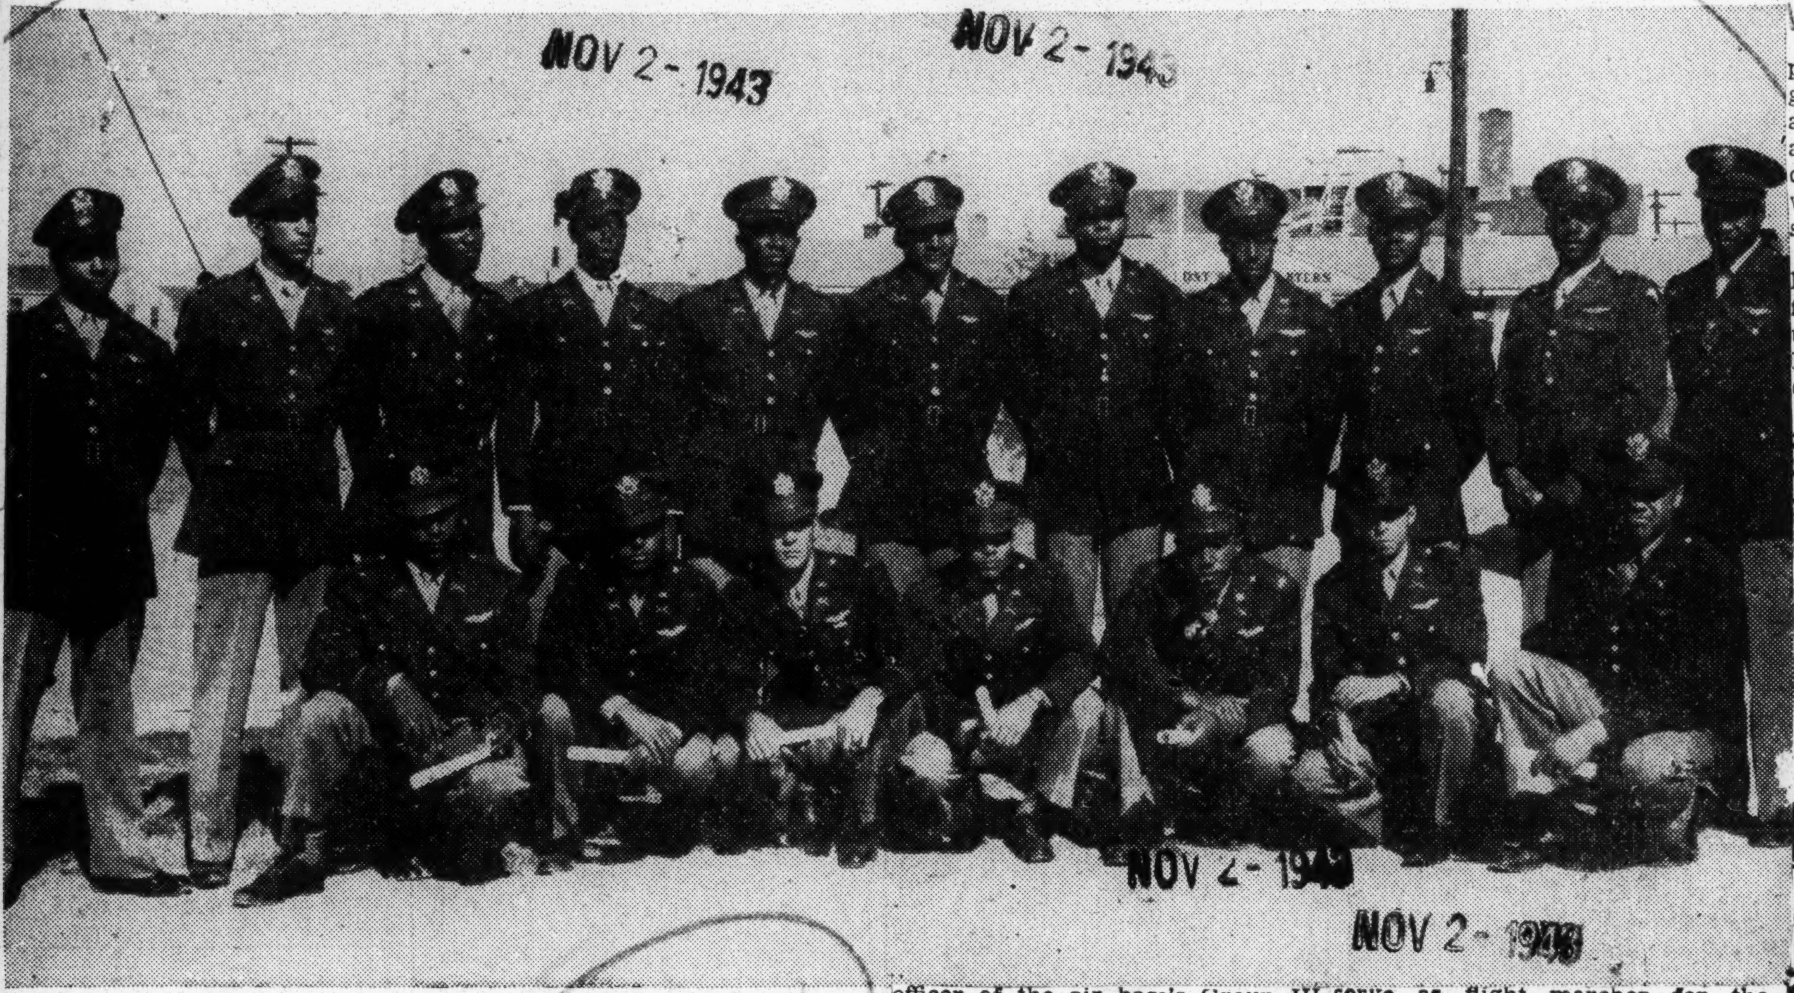
Captain Hall

Speaking of Capt. Charles B. Hall, 23, now commanding the 99th, Knickerbocker said: "Hall has been on thirty-seven missions and once strafed a line of German motorcyclists and saw them pop into the air like watermelon seeds."

47a-1943

They'll Become Overhead Eyes Of The Caissons

NOV 2 - 1943



Pictured above is the most recent class of liaison pilots from the Field Artillery to complete their training at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Shown, left to right (kneeling) are: 2nd Lt. John E. McCode, Houston; 1st Lt. John B. Dudley, Brooklyn; 2nd Lt. George F. Bizzell, Lancaster, Ohio; 2nd Lt. John O. Cunningham, Kokeno, Ind.; 2nd Lt. William J. Cleveland, Warren, Ohio; 1st Lt. Robert L. Wrenn, Cincinnati; and 2nd Lt. John M. Franklin of Toledo, Ohio. (Standing): 2nd Lt. Louis K. Hanks, Toledo, Ohio; 1st Lt. Gaines C. Farley, Paducah, Ky.; 1st Lt. Terry H. Brooks, Houston; 2nd Lt. Richard C. Chatman, Chicago; 2nd Lt. Henry Bennett, New Orleans, La.; 1st Lt. Fred E. Howard, Chicago; 1st Lt. Leroy Stephens, Jr., Chicago; 2nd Lt. Daniel C. Thomas, Akron, Ohio; 2nd Lt. Thurston Mason, Chicago; 2nd Lt. Paul Weathersby and 2nd Lt. William M. Jordan of Chicago.—PHOTO BY TAAF.

First Navigation Cadets Arrive At Texas Air Base

Defender Chicago, Ill.

NOV 6 1943

HONDO ARMY AIR FIELD, HONDO, Tex.—Thirty Negro navigation cadets have arrived at this air base, the first Negro unit to be enrolled as aerial navigation students in the AAF Central Flying Training Command.

Under the leadership of Aviation Cadet Arnold W. Galimore, 21-year-old flight marcher from New York City, the members of Hondo Field's "Squadron 10" reported to Captain Frank H. Sheffield, senior tactical officer of the air base's Group III, and were immediately launched into the first busy day of the huge school's intensive 15 weeks' training program.

Many of the new navigation cadets have had primary or flight training at Tuskegee, Ala. Selected for final classification as combat crew navigators, these men reported at Hondo for advanced training along with other Negro soldiers formerly assigned to various branches of the Army Ground Forces. A number of the latter were non-commissioned officers before transferring to the Army Air Forces.

Mostly College Men

A high percentage of these cadets had either been graduated from or were attending college and universities throughout the United States at the outbreak of the war.

Assigned to give "Squadron 10" initial orientation lectures at Hondo was 1st. Lieut. George F. McInerney of Group III's instructor's school staff. Lieut. McInerney is a flight commander at the air base, thoroughly trained in assisting new students to get into the swing of the stiff Hondo Field training program with a minimum of lost time.

Cadet Galimore will continue to serve as flight marcher for the members of "Squadron 10." The young navigation student was a staff sergeant in the Medical Corps before beginning cadet training. He has four years' service in the Army. The son of Mrs. Hazel Tudor, 244 West 137th street, New York City, Cadet Galimore attended City college, New York, and New York University College of Engineering before becoming a member of the armed forces.

Upon successful completion of the navigation course at Hondo Field, the members of Hondo's first Negro cadet squadron will receive commissions as flight officers or second lieutenants. They then will be available for active duty on the fighting fronts, or will receive assignments as navigation instructors in the United States.

Captain Sheffield said today of the new cadets: "I am well pleased with their soldierly bearing and eagerness to begin training. We are confident they will prove their worth in the rigid program that lies ahead."

Chicago, Ill. Defender

Hint New Tuskegee Instructors Negroes

SEP 18 1943

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — Negro pilots, members of the last class to graduate from the Tuskegee army air field, are to be returned there as instructors, according to rumors current here. They will replace white instructors who are to be assigned elsewhere.

There have previously been no Negro instructors at the army airfield, although flying teachers are used in primary training and at Moton field, Tuskegee, where secondary training is given.

It has also been learned that the 332nd fighter group, in training at Selfridge field, Mich., has been assigned to the first army air corps based in New York. This unit, composed of three squadrons, is understood to be complete with a full complement of ground crew. All the pilots are graduates of the Tuskegee army air school and Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., recently recalled from Sicily where he commanded the 99th Pursuit squadron, is expected to command the 332nd.

Defender Chicago, Ill.

99th's Davis Back In U.S., Hails Success Of Our Pilots

By HARRY McALPIN

(Chief, Defender Washington Bureau)

SEP 18 1943

WASHINGTON—The "experimental stage" of the Negro in combat aviation is over—the Negro pilot is no longer a question mark.

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr. until recently commander of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, came home from North Africa and Sicily this week to furnish strong testimony to the coming of age of the Negro in aerial warfare.

Back in Washington preliminary to taking a post with the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field, Mich., youthful Davis told a War Department press conference that the 99th pilots had answered the challenge of those army chiefs who doubted the Negro's ability to master the combat plane.

"Just what a Negro pilot in a P-40 would do when anti-aircraft fire burst about his ship or when an enemy aircraft was strewing cannon shells and machine gun bullets about his cockpit was a matter that was really conjecture in the minds of some of the high-ranking officers of the American air force," Colonel Davis declared.

"The fact that his unit was an experiment became a challenge to him, a challenge which he has answered," he said of the 99th pilots "and in such a way as to change many things that were unpleasant to him and others of his race."

In paying tribute to the way the pilots accepted this responsibility he said: "Every man in the 99th will go through any ordeal concocted by combat or garrison existence to assure the successful completion of the experiment. At all times every man realizes that the pleasures and relaxations that are available to men in other organizations are not available to him because his task is far greater, his responsibility is much heavier, and his reward is the advancement of his people."

Davis declared that "from the time this squadron left the continental limits of the United States," which was on April 15, 1943, and up to the present time, they experienced not a single circumstance or incident that could be regarded as discriminatory. He said that "a considerable bond exists among those who fly regardless of color or race."

On the way to Africa, he said the first act of the drama began. The day before they sailed, the passenger list showed the transport commander that Lt. Col. Davis was to be the senior line officer on board. He was directed to pick a staff consisting of an adjutant, mess officer, police and prison officer, a provost marshal, and to then report to the transport commander as executive officer.

Get Along Well

This staff of colored officers carried out the orders and policies of the transport commander despite the fact that of the 4000 troops on board, less than 15 per cent were colored. No incidents occurred as a result of this unusual situation.

The squadron landed in Casablanca, and was later stationed at a field about 150 miles inland, in French Morocco. "Our stay there was probably our most pleasant stay overseas," the colonel said.

"Most cordial relations existed between the members of the squadron and the members of the fighter bomber group nearby. The pilots of the two organizations engaged in impromptu dogfights to determine the relative superiority of the P-40 and the A-36, and were very happy to verify our belief that the P-40 was vastly superior in this phase of aerial combat. Enlisted men of the two groups got along together very well in all types of athletic contests and other means of recreation.

Fine Training

In the town of Fez "was found one of the most delightful spots that any of us had ever visited," Col Davis declared. The stay there was made socially successful through the efforts of Josephine Baker, who saw that the officers met many of the outstanding and prominent French and Arab families. "The town provided everything that a man away from home could wish for," he stated.

Concerning the training of the men, he said: "I personally believe that no unit in this war has gone into combat better trained or better equipped than the 99th Fighter Squadron. The pilots averaged about 250 hours in a P-40, and a young pilot in these days who has 250 hours in a P-40 before he goes into combat is a hard man to find."

The 99th Squadron was attached to a fighter group for operations purposes, and were sent out on daily missions. The first missions were over the island of Pantelleria. There they dive-bombed objectives every day until the fall of the island on June 11. They also escorted bombers to the island, and on one such occasion experienced their first brush with the enemy.

The most active days for the squadron, the colonel declared, were those from July 1 to 9, escorting bombers to Sicily. "On every trip we were attacked by superior numbers of enemy fighters," he said.

Dream of Combat

"After the middle of July, we had a squadron of pilots whose fondest dreams were no longer about the girls back home. Instead, they dreamed about a German pilot who would be foolish enough to slug it out in aerial combat."

He referred to the engagement over Sciacca, Sicily, where the squadron lost two aircraft, but accounted for one enemy definitely destroyed, two probably destroyed and three damaged. That was the day, he said, that General Eisenhower visited their field and during his stay congratulated Lt. Charles B. Hall, now Captain Hall.

The field was often visited by high ranking officers of both the British and American armies, he stated. Among such visitors were men as Air Marshal Cunningham, in command of the Tactical Air Forces; Lord Trancher of the last war; General House, commanding general of the Twelfth Air Support Command; General Doolittle, who is in command now of the Strategic Air Force; General Spaatz, commanding general of the Northwest African Air Force, and many others.

The squadron provided cover for the landing beaches on Southeastern Sicily on July 10. Thereafter, until July 19, they escorted C-47s which moved the air echelon of the various units to new bases on Sicily. On July 19, they moved to a base on Southeastern Sicily and provided air support for the ground troops by dive-bombing and strafing strong points holding up the advance.

SEP 28 1943

Get Replacements

Since the fall of Sicily, the 99th pilots have devoted their time to trainng replacements that reached them from the States, Colonel Davis said. On September 2, he received orders assigning him to the 332nd Fighter Group, and he left his pals overseas.

"I believe that the men that I left behind instead of being the fledglings they were on the first of June are now seasoned veterans of a combat experience that all of us may well be proud," he declared.

Colonel Davis' father, Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis Sr., sat beside him during the press conference, unable even with his years of strict military discipline to conceal his just pride in his son. When asked what he thought of his son, he said "Well, he has always been my son, and he's still my son."

General Davis said he thinks the Negro fighter pilots have done a good job, and that he always felt they would do a good job.

Lieut. Col. Davis said his orders do not indicate in what capacity he is to serve the 332nd Fighter group. In answer to a question, however he said that the Table of Organization calls for the commander of such a group to have the rank of a full colonelcy.

At the conference were many of the editors and publishers of Negro newspapers throughout the country, who happened to be in Washington at the time for conferences with the War Department and the Fair Employment Practice committee.

Daily Worker New York, N. Y.

SEP 23 1943

Chief of Negro Air Unit Tells How It Passed 'Test' Over Italy

By Eugene Gordon

One of the most significant statements of the war—not reported in the allegedly "free" commercial daily press—is the report by Lt.-Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., until recently commander of the 99th Fighter Squadron, on his return from the Italian front.

Col. Davis, son of Brig.-Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, America's only general in a Negro population of more than 13,000,000, commanded the all-Negro 99th Fighter Squadron from Aug. 27, 1942, until Sept. 2, 1943—from the time it was conceived at Tuskegee, Ala. until after it had taken part in numerous fights above Sicily.

The 99th was intended by the government as an experiment, according to Davis, "to determine whether the Negro pilot was physically, mentally and emotionally suited to the rigors of combat flying." The 30-year-old lieutenant colonel added: "It is a very significant fact, I believed, that all members of this organization were impressed at all times with the knowledge that the future of the Negro in the air corps probably would be dependent largely upon the manner in which they carried out their mission."

TEST CASE

The members of this unit thus became a test case for all the Negro people. It speaks well, therefore, for Americans' innate fairness that, seeing the double handicap facing the Negro flyers and ground crews, numerous influential officers interceded.

The first handicap was discrimination and segregation. The men must overcome a SENSE of this handicap before they are psychologically prepared for combat against an enemy whose stock in trade is discrimination and segregation of non-"Aryan" minority peoples. The second handicap, shared by the Negro fighters in common with their white fellow Americans, was that of overcoming and defeating the fascist opponent.

While the War Department was figuring what to do with this "experiment"—the Negro people, meanwhile, demanding action for the 99th—this squadron was undergoing a schedule of training far beyond the normal period. They profited immensely thereby. Col. Davis reports:

"The first act of the drama began the day before we sailed. The passenger list showed the transport commander that I was to be senior line officer on board the transport. I was directed to pick a staff consisting of an adjutant, mess officer, police and prison officer, and a provost marshal, and then to report to the transport commander as executive officer.

NEGRO AND WHITE

"The staff of colored officers carried out the orders and policies of the transport commander despite the fact that of the 4,000 troops on board less than 15 per cent were colored. After the first 24 hours or so of curiosity and wonder at this unusual staff of the transport commander, everything proceeded smoothly and without incident for the remainder of the eight-day voyage.

A military man doesn't criticize his superior in a report to the public. There are ways, however, by which he may indicate his feeling.

The youthful colonel's eyes twinkled, witnesses say, when he reported:

"During all this time the members of the squadron basked in the awe of the attention paid them by other soldiers on board and succeeded admirably in creating the impression that the colored pilot and the colored soldier are not so much different, after all."

From the moment of their landing at Casablanca to their entrance into combat, men of the 99th Fighter Squadron met only comradeship and cooperative goodwill. In French Morocco they were located near an American service command station—white, of course. Near them, also, was a fighter-bomber group. Its commander was a Col. Stevenson, whom Col. Davis had known at West Point.

"Most cordial relations" existed between the Negro squadron and the white bomber group. Pilots of the two organizations "engaged in impromptu dogfights to determine the relative superiority of the P-40 and the A-36, and we were very happy to verify our belief that the P-40 was vastly superior in this phase of aerial combat."

The enlisted men of the two units "got together very well in all types of athletic contests and other means of recreation." Miss Josephine Baker, outspoken anti-fascist, "insisted on presenting several different groups of our officers to the prominent French and Arab families" in the town of Fez.

The 99th first went into combat over the island of Pantelleria, "no unit," in Col. Davis' opinion, having ever entered its initial fight "better trained or better equipped than the 99th Fighter Squadron."

FIGHTING IT OUT

The Germans were not so eager for fighting as they once had been. Col. Davis attributes this fact to losses among Nazi pilots. Pilots of the 99th, on the other hand, "who were initially uncertain of themselves, had now developed a very strong fighting spirit and were eager for an opportunity to meet the German and really fight it out."

After the middle of July the 99th pilots no longer dreamed only of the girls back home. "Instead, they dreamed about a German pilot who would be foolish enough to slug it out in aerial combat."

The Negro flyers participated in almost all engagements after that. They were visited in the field by such high-ranking officers as Air Marshal Cunningham, in command of the Tactical Air Forces; General House, commanding general of the 12th Air Support Command; General Doolittle, in command of the Strategical Air Force. General Eisenhower visited them on a day when they had downed several of the enemy.

TIME FOR CHANGE

One would judge from Col. Davis' report that it is high time for the War Department to stop experimenting and to enlist Negro men and assign Negro officers in greater numbers and without the sponsorship of that anachronism of the Civil War—Col. Jim Crow."

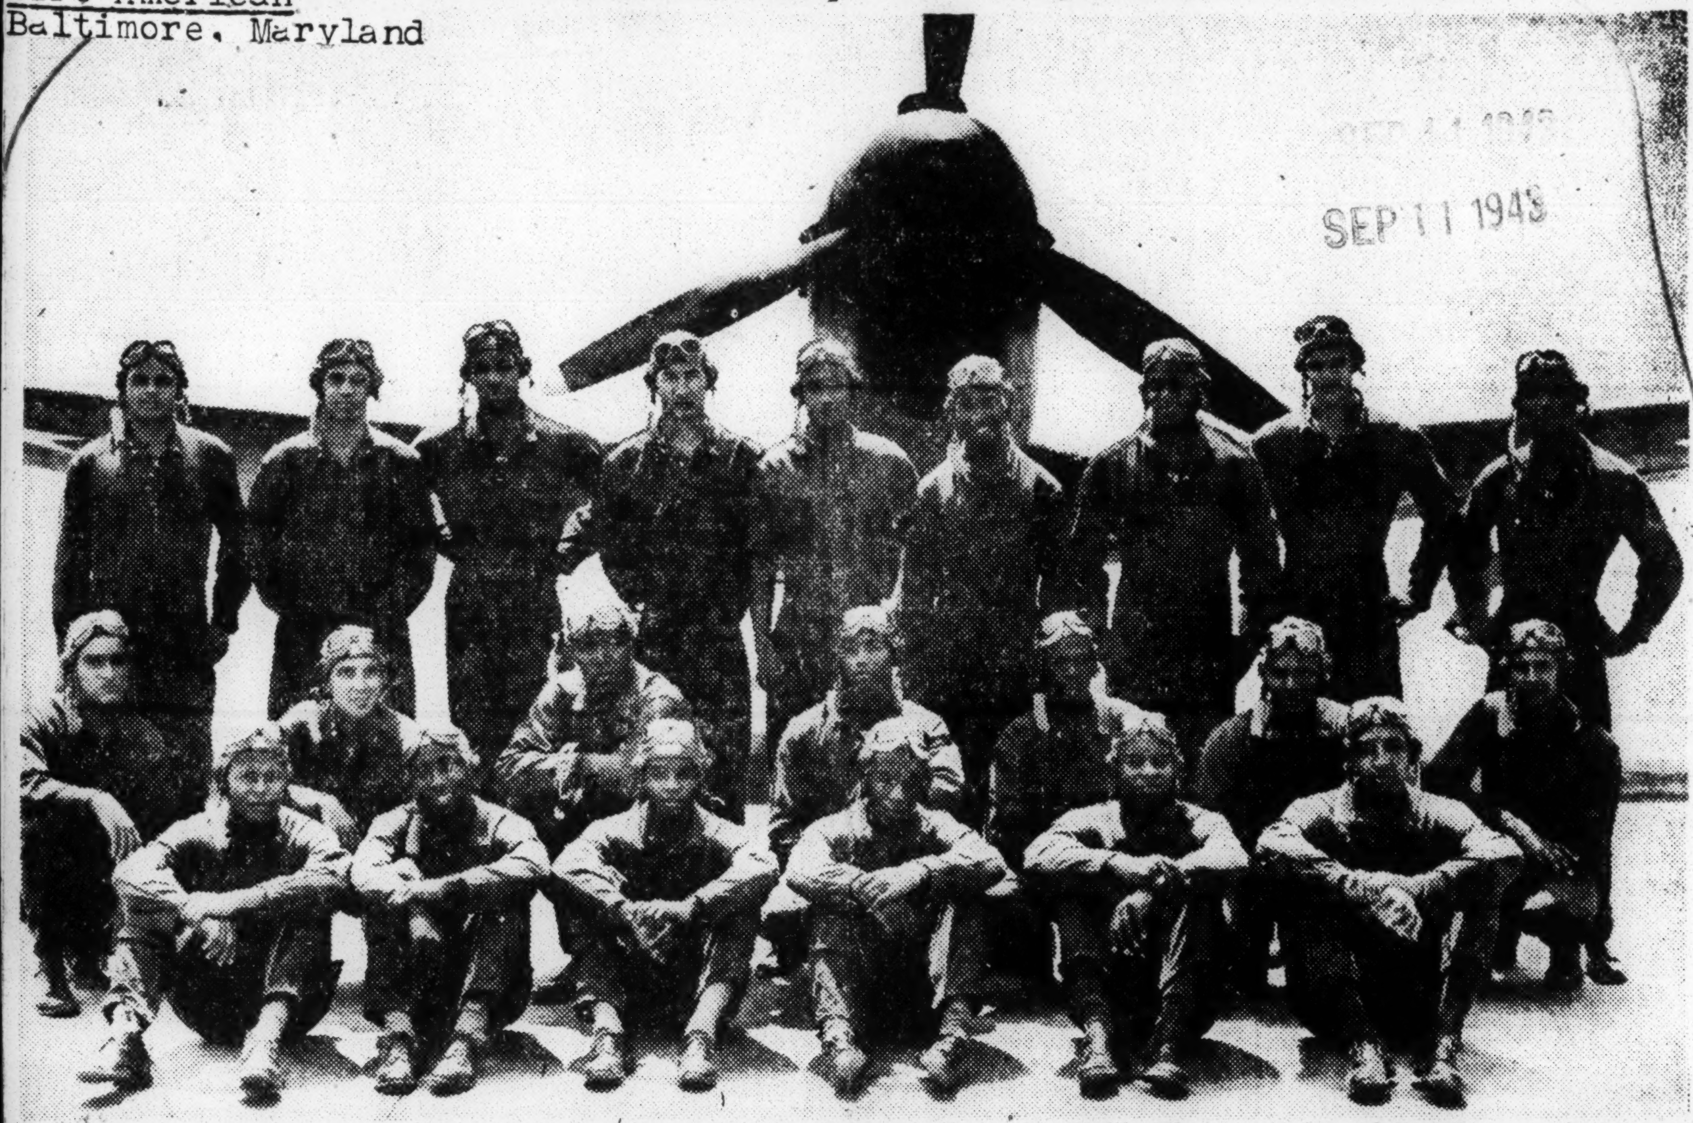
The report concludes

47a-1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

More Airmen Ready to Help Lick the Axis

SEP 11 1943



U.S. Army Air Forces Pilots who were graduated last week at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. They are, left to right, First row, 2nd Lts. Carroll S. Woods, Valdosta, Ga.; George A. Taylor, Philadelphia; Hubron R. Blackwell, Baltimore; Edward W. Hill, Narragansett, R.I.; Smith W. Green, Los Angeles; and Hubert L. Jones, Denver, Colo.; Second row, 2nd Lts. Charles W. Tate, Pittsburgh; Willard L. Woods, Los Angeles; Starling B. Penn, N.Y.C.; Leon Purchase, N.Y.C.; Everett A. Bratcher, Poplar Bluff, Mo.; Samuel Jefferson, Galveston, Texas; and Harry J. Daniels, Indianapolis, Ind. Third row, 2nd Lts. William B. McClenic, Akron, Ohio.; Alton F. Ballard, Pasadena, Calif.; Roger Romine, Oakland, Calif.; Floyd A. Thompson, London, W.Va.; Alix Pasquet (Haitian Air Force), Port-au-Prince, Haiti; Norvell Stoudmire, St. Louis, Mo.: Bernard Jefferson, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Andrew H. Doswell, Cleveland, and Charles A. Dunne, Atlantic City.

99th Squadron Wants Job of Training More U.S. Flyers

Afro-American Baltimore, Maryland AUG 21 1943

After Three Months' Service, Flyers Believe That They Can Train Men for Combat Duty Better Than Anyone Else

By OLLIE STEWART
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Sicily

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY (Via Air Mail—Censored) — This is a story of a state mind that has its roots and, consequently its solution, in the USA. I write about it because I think it is so significant that many people will be interested, and because it would never reach interested people except through a neutral party like a correspondent.

Those who have the problem are too busy to talk about it. They are too busy hunting German planes and shooting them down. They are too busy escorting our bombers — too busy patrolling and protecting our newly won battle areas.

A certain fighter squadron with which I have had close contact for four months has an entire colored personnel. The squadron was formed as an experiment and sent overseas to prove or disprove the contention that colored pilots could hold their own in combat.

Pioneers on Spot

It also had the opportunity of proving or disproving that colored ground crews could service and keep in first class condition the latest combat ships — and most important of all, that colored officers could maintain discipline and efficiency in a crisis.

Why anyone should doubt the possibility of these things is beside the question. The fact is legendary that in America no one had ever seen it done; and even the men involved knew that as pioneers they would definitely be on the spot. The future of colored in American aviation would hang in the balance, and depend on what they did.

AUG 21 1943

Experiment Successful

The experiment has been successful. I say this without qualifying my statement because I have corroboration from experts in combat aviation and because the record of the squadron will bear me out.

A colored commanding officer, Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., a group of colored flying officers, and a colored ground personnel have all worked together in combat against the luftwaffe for three months. They have done everything that has been asked of them. They have performed along the same lines as any other squadron of their type in the war zone.

Now, for the state of mind. These men, from the colonel on down to the last grease monkey, feel that they have survived the test because their casualties have been low.

They have not been overdestructive of their expensive machinery (every time a pilot takes off he has at his fingertips more than $50,000 worth of plane and equipment) and they have not betrayed the confidence of those who gave them a chance.

Worried About Home Front

Because these things are true, they feel the keenest interest in anything that threatens or may be detrimental to the work they have done.

Reports from home have them worried. What they hear (and I hear it, too) from the formation of a colored group in the States is not favorable. In fact, it is downright discouraging. For some reason or the other a succession of incidents has resulted in publicity that is detrimental to larger inclusion of colored young men in aviation.

The men over here who went to such pains to build up good feeling in the minds of the War Department and the American people do not want to see the program discarded.

Listening to them I gather that they are more anxious to do something about the situation — and what they feel is best to do follows along these lines:

Train Aviators in U.S.

Before somebody throws up his hands in disgust, these experienced pilots would like to be given the opportunity to return to an airbase in the States and help train the hundreds of younger men now coming into aviation — give them, so to speak, the benefit of all the experience that has been gained both at home and abroad.

Without unnecessary injection of race into the issue, this squadron feels itself better qualified to explain the heavy responsibility awaiting a young colored flyer than any white instructor could do, because this squadron has felt unique responsibility more than anybody else has felt it.

Jealous of Reputation

I, perhaps more than anyone else, have seen this unit face many problems. I was present when the first ten men were accepted into the air corps. I saw the first class graduate. I saw their flying field when it was covered with cotton stalks, and later a beautiful army base. I saw the squadron arrive in North Africa. I know almost every man, officer and enlisted man, by name.

I know how jealous the outfit is of its reputation. Every mechanic knows he is a pioneer. Every pilot is stared at when he lands at a new field because he is a novelty. But nothing matters to them as long as no bad mark is registered against the squadron.

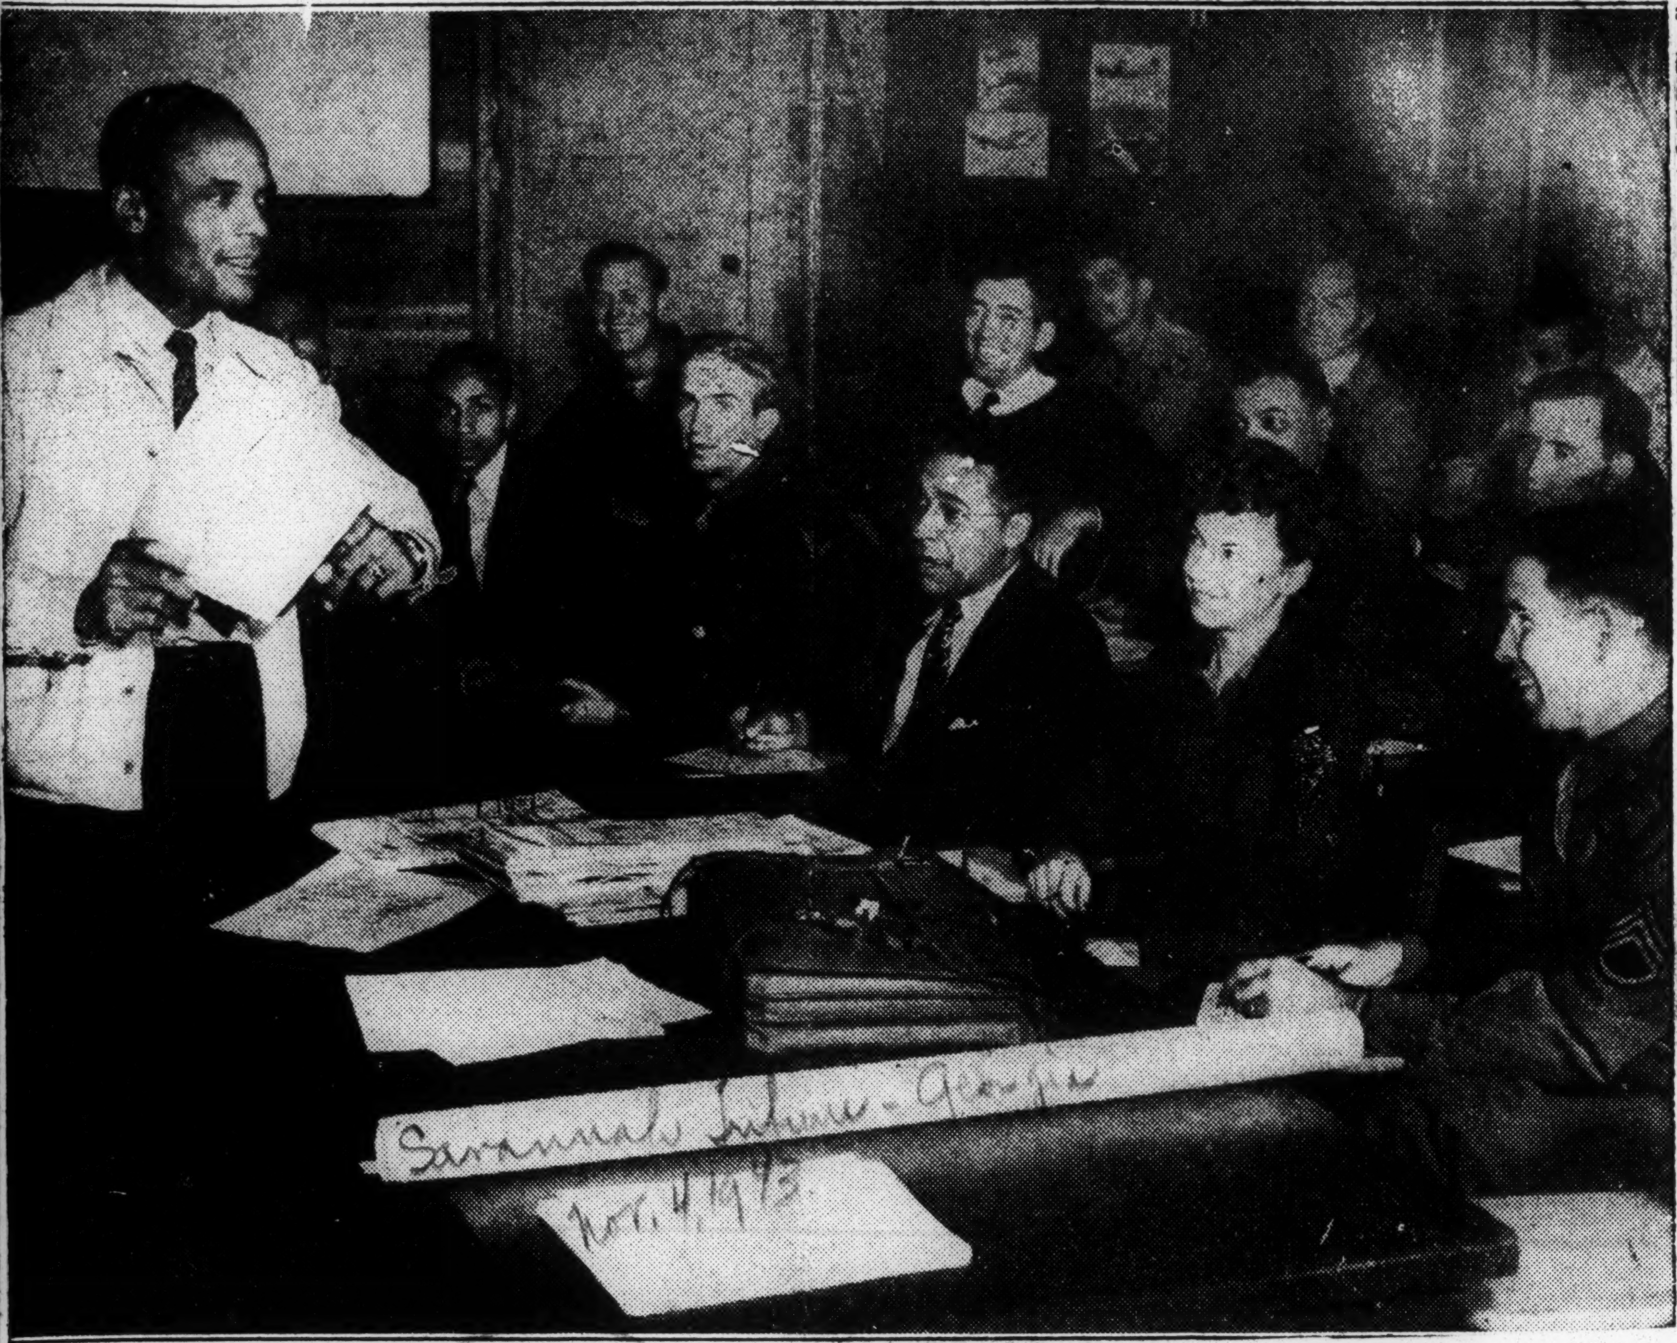
Objection Worthwhile

They feel the same way about aviation for colored at home.

If groups are being formed and twin-engined courses opened and navigation and bombardier classes offered, they feel that they have something to contribute to the efficiency of these newcomers.

As an observer, I feel the same way. As an American I humbly submit that the case is good and the objective worthwhile. This squadron could do wonders as an example and inspiration if returned to the States as officer personnel in the formation of subsequent squadrons and groups.

CLASS FOR INSTRUCTORS OF ARMY'S NAVIGATOR - BOMBARDIER TRAINING PROGRAM



Savannah Tribune - Georgia

Nov. 4, 1943

Grover C. Nash, senior instructor in the Airplane Mechanics chool at Lincoln Air Base, Nebraska, is shown explaining principles f navigation to a group of instructors who will form the nucleus f teachers for the Army's bombardier-navigator training program ith the objective command of B-25 bombers. As announced by the ar Department, Negroes and whites will be schooled together. ash, only civilian flight instructor at Lincoln Air Base, is a graduate of several flying schools. In 1938 he was the first and only Negro to fly the United States mail. He spent 16 months as instructor for the U. S. Army Air Forces Training Command, and has almost 3,000 flying hours to his credit in 30 different types of planes. His home is in Chicago, Illinois, where he operated his own flying school for six years. (Photo by U. S. Army Signal Corps).

Bureau of Public Relations, U. S. War Department

Afro-American
Baltimore. Md

Segregation Banned as Air Corps Plans Bombing Unit

WASHINGTON

Details for the activation of an all-colored medium bombardment group by next July 1 were announced by Acting Secretary of War John J. McCloy at his press conference Thursday.

Mr. McCloy emphasized that the men who are to compose this bombing group are to be trained in mixed classes. This is the first time the army air force have abandoned segregation in the training of pilots.

Within a month, the acting secretary said, colored cadets will be sent either to Fort Dodge, Kan., or to Del Rio, Texas, to begin training in a B-26 Transition School to fly B-26 airplanes.

Ground Crews in Training

In December the first colored cadets will begin training as navigators and bombardier officers. Their training as such will cover a period of eighteen weeks, after which they will go to gunnery school.

Ground crews for the bombing group are already in training in classes with white students.

These men are studying radio, aviation mechanics, electrical work and armor at Lincoln Field, Neb., Chanute Field, Ill., and Lowry Field, Colo., and at other air force installations.

Announcement was first made that the army air force would train colored personnel as bombardiers and navigators by Robert P. Patterson, the Under Secretary of War, on July 15.

The decision of army air force to activate an all-colored medium bombardment group is believed to have been influenced by the 99th Pursuit Squadron, now based in Sicily, which demonstrated its efficiency whenever it contacted the enemy.

47a-1943

Paints Graphic Picture Of 99th In Slow P-40's

Daily World
—Atlanta, Georgia—

AUG 23 1943

By PVT. IRWIN SHAW

(The following article appeared originally in "Yank," the army weekly, it is being reproduced by the Associated Negro Press through special arrangement with Yank.)

TUNISIA— IT WAS sunny over the Mediterranean and Pantelleria looked like a small dark stone stuck in the shining blue sea 8,000 feet below the six P-40's droning along on anafternoon patrol. The fighters had been ordered to take off from their African field to sweat out an hour and some minutes of cover over the conquered Italian island while the Allies pushed ahead with preparations for the invasion of sicily.

Lt. G. W. Dryden of New York City was leading the flight. His squadron, in action for only three weeks, had bombed Pantelleria in the furious air push toward Italy and at other times has escorted bombers. However, aside from a little wild flak loosed by the forlorn gun crews on the island, the outfit had never known trouble.

SCANS EMPTY TROUBLE

The lieutenant scanned the wide empty sky and looked around to make sure the flight was tucked in neatly behind him. He looked at his watch and noticed that the patrol was nearly over.

Behind him the big engines filled the bright salt air with their deep steady noise. Then, through the earphones clamped on his head, over the wild howling crackle of aircraft radios, came the voice of the air observer on Pantelleria: "Unidentified aircraft approaching the island."

Lt. Dryden wheeled and the flight wheeled behind him. They went out looking for trouble.

TENSE AGAAINST PULL

Behind Dryden were Lt. Leo Rayford of Washington, D. C.; Lt. Willie Ashley of Sumter, S. C.; Lt. Span Watson of Hackensack, N. J.; Lt. S. P. Brooks of Cleveland, Ohio. and Lt. Leon Roberts of Pritchard, Alabama. They settled tighter in their seats and tensed a little against the pull of the big engines because here was a fight coming up and all their long hours of training, all the studying and all the sweat and misery of earning their wings and learning how to fight were either finally going to pay off on this [illegible] afternoon.

The [illegible]000 feet as the still unseen planes dodged in over the sea, trying to avoid detection. Suddenly from out of the sun the Messerschmitts and the Focke-Wulfs dove. There were 12 of them, screaming down the peaceful air, and behind and above them were 12 bombers, come to lay waste the precious airfield below.

Roberts saw the planes pouncing, looking with their pale paint against the bright sky like white puffs of ack-ack. He wheeled and the rest of the flight wheeled with him, but they had been taken off balance, and it was impossible to maintain company front against the Germans, who were coming down in loose formations of two at 450 miles per hour.

PLANE IS SLOW

The P-40 is a comparatively slow plane and its fighting has to be defensive because [illegible] Messerschmitt, with its superior speed, can pick the angle and time of attack. But the P-40 has one great advantage; it can make tighter turns. The flight yanked hard on their controls and turned into the German onslaught.

Dryden, after his turn, found himself far out beyond the edge of the melee, with the bombers passing sedately 5,000 feet above his head. So he roared up above them and then dove down across the tail of the formation, spraying them as he went, and continued right down into the dog-fight below.

Three of the P-40's were making a lufberry, a slow, spiraling circle in which each plane protect the others tail. From that defensive circle, like covered wagons gathered around a square against Indians on the plains, the defenders can shoot out as the enemy speeds around on the outside. Dryden shook a Focke-Wulf on his tail and snugged into the lufberry, circling, firing his guns as the Germans flicked across his sights.

WING IS SHATTERED

Lee Rayford was having troubles of his own. Two FWs kept at him, and when he turned into one, the other would get a burst at him. One burst hit and his right wing shuddered as a 20-mm cannon shell exploded there. Rayford was fighting grimly, taking the long gamble against the two Germans, when Spann Watson appeared on his wing from nowhere. Watson opened up at long range. He hit the outside German, and the two planes broke away out of the fight.

At the initial turn Willie Ashleys plane had gone into a spin and he'd lost considerable altitude. When he pulled out, he started spiraling up to rejoin the others. Suddenly ahead of him he saw another plane on the loose. He edged in to investigate. It was a Focke-Wulf..

Ashlev got in good and close before letting go with his entire works. He saw that his tracers were going too far in front, so he cut down on the lead until he saw the tracer hitting home. He sprayed the German from end to end, and it began a long smoking glide toward the sea.

GERMAN DISAPPEARS

The pilot followed the falling German plane as far as he dared but the air behind him was still full of machine-gun fire and spitting planes. He wheeled and climbed to make sure there was no one on his tail and when he looked down once more there was no sign of the German. Ashley climbed to rejoin his flight.

The six American planes spiraled in formidable procupine formation, and the German fighters left off and sailed toward Italy. Meanwhile the jittery enemy bombers had jettisoned their loads into the sea, without attempting a run over the island, and were making for home.

99th Moves Up from Sicily to Front Line

Afro-American
Baltimore. Md

OCT 30 1943

Stewart Says German Planes Roar Again Over Fields at Night

COLORED TROOPS UNDER NAZI FIRE

Pontoon Bridge Blown Up After Part of Unit Crosses Volturno

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ALLIED AIR BASE IN ITALY.—(By Cable, Censored).—I am now in Italy. My recent arrival here (censored) saw a reunion (censored) in Mussolini's former stronghold and placed our pilots again within striking distance of enemy troops and communication lines.

Our brief period of inactivity beneath the Sicilian sun is ended. Once again the drone of German planes at night reminds me that Jerry still has some punch left. However, our bombers roar overhead at regular intervals and most of them return after dropping devastating calling cards.

I had my first view of Naples from the sky, riding in a captured Italian plane. Edgar Rouzeau of the Pittsburgh Courier, was with me. Our plane made its approach above the clouds and had difficulty finding a hole through which to drop and land.

As our forces move northward, the terrain is much the same—all mountains and valleys. The people are more modern than in Sicily, but there is the same distress from lack of food and clothes. Also dialects make conversation difficult.

Towns All Quiet

Cities and villages that once knew eternal songs and troubadors at fiesta time are now quiet, except for an occasional melancholy chant from a donkey cart driver, and pock-marked from bombs and shrapnel.

At night, behind shuttered windows huddled families talk in musical whispers, but soon grow silent when enemy bombers or our night fighters begin roaming.

Soldiers Make Friends

Our lads have had amusing experiences in places where colored people have not been seen before. Often everybody runs but old men and cripples. Our boys soon make friends, however, and in a few minutes they become the center of attraction. Even children want to rub their heads.

I have met many outfits that I saw in North Africa last fall soon after the invasion. Most of these have pulled repeat performances here with the Fifth Army.

Engineers Praised

The recent crossing of the Volturno River and the storming of Maddeloni found our lads doing their part under fire. While crossing the Volturno part of one unit raced over a pontoon bridge which was immediately blown up by the Germans, and other men were forced to wait under fire for construction of a new bridge. Our engineers were complimented on their work and bravery.

One quartermaster trucking unit runs shuttle service to and from the front, hauling precious ammunition, [illegible] and troops.

Soldiers in Italy

Old friends of mine seen include:

Chaplain Thomas Jenkins, Charlotte, N.C., whose wife sends clippings from home which we all appreciate; Chaplain F. Hugh Warley, Atlanta, Ga.; Capt. Samuel Coleman, First Lieuts. Oliver Lewis, James Dcoley and Elba Cole;

Second Lieuts. William Morrow, George White of Boston; Warrant Officers George Kirby, Roscoe McDowell, Arnold Barclay, and the following enlisted men:

Sgt. Allen Ward, Brooklyn; Cpl. William Benyard, Wilmington, Del.; Cpl. Charles Johnson, Washington; Cpl. William Chandler, Cambridge, Mass.; Pfc. John Simmons, Chicago; Cpl. William Parks, Atlanta; Pvt. Clinton Sandusky, Cleveland, Ohio; Sgt. Leroy Charles, Jersey City, N.J.; Cpl. Clifton Frisby, Baltimore, and Pvt. Harry Jones, Philadelphia.

Another pleasant surprise in Italy was meeting T/Sgt. William Chaney of Washington, D.C., personal orderly to General Clark. I saw Chaney last in London. He keeps the General in good health with the assistance of a mess staff including Cpl. Lloyd Gist, New York; Cpl. Bular Manley, Alton, Ill., and Cpl. Hurschel Baker, Los Angeles.

I found Corporal Gist cooking a pot of greens, which the General likes with pork. Chaney was with the General for many years before the war and bosses the household in the city as well as in the field.

---

8 New Pilots Reach Italy to Join 99th

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

OCT 23 1943

5 Regular Flyers Sent Home to Teach Cadets at Selfridge Field

POVERTY SHOCKS NEW ARRIVALS

Inhabitants Eating Stray Cats, Horses; Soldiers Barefooted

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in North Africa

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ADVANCED AIR BASE IN ITALY.—Indications of forthcoming deevlopments became apparent last week with the arrival of fresh fighter pilots. The new replacements joined the Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron with eagerness in their eyes and confidence in their ability to knock Goering's boys out of the skies.

Coming from various parts of America, these newcomers, looking forward to their first sortie, add pep to the training routine that often is a grind to veterans.

Grilled About Home

For the first few days we all kept them busy talking about that distant and almost forgotten place called home, and a thousand questions were as[illegible]ic, movies, night clubs, and girls who wear stockings.

They were shocked to learn that over here people are so hungry that every stray cat is eaten, also horses and insects.

Learn of War Horrors

They looked with awe at the first Italian prisoners, returning home barefoot and almost naked, who beg rides on the highway all day and sleep in a ditch at night.

The horrors of war are brought home to the newcomers quickly when veteran pilots point out places near us which they bombed and helped capture many weeks ago.

One [illegible] says [illegible] relief a few da[illegible] because his bomb destroyed their home during the Sicily fight.

Eight New Arrivals

The new pilots, all second lieutenants, include:

W. V. Eagleson, Bloomington,

Ind., former student at Indiana University; L. C. Smith, Los Angeles, graduate, UCLA; C. P. Bailey, Punta Gorda, Fla., Bethune-Cookman College; Clarence W. Allen, Mobile, Ala., West Virginia State; Leonard M. Jackson, Fort Worth, Texas, Tillotson College; H. C. Houston, Detroit, Morehouse; W. E. Griffin, Birmingham, Ala., Miles Memorial, and A. M. Dunlap, Washington.

As the new men arrived, five veteran pilots, all first lieutenants, left the squadron for a replacement center to instruct others. They included Walter Lawson Graham Smith, Lee Rayford, Louis Purnell and Charles Dryden. It is reported that they will join Colonel Davis, who has been assigned to the 332nd Fighter Group, at Selfridge Field, Mich.

OCT 23 1943

Killed in Action

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 — The report that Lt. Paul G. Miller, a flier, was killed in action in the North African area, Augsut 11, was confirmed by the War Department, Saturday. He was a pilot with the 99th Pursuit Squadron, now based in Sicily. The details of the action in which he was killed were not made known.

Lieutenant Miller was a resident of the District of Columbia, and a graduate of Howard university.

Also confirmed was the death of Charles S. Chisolm, Jr., also of Washington. He, too, was killed in action in the North African area. His death occurred August 21.

'COLONEL DAVIS ON WAY BACK,' ROUZEAU CABLES

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa. 1943

Capt. George S. Roberts, Fairmont, W. Va., Now Heads Fliers in Sicily

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU
(Courier War Correspondent)

SEP 11

(Copyright, 1943, by Pittsburgh Courier Publishing Company. Reproduction in whole or in part is strictly forbidden.)

SICILY, Sept. 9 — (Via Wireless)—I've been chasing Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commander of the famed 99th Pursuit Squadron, ever since I've been in this theatre of operation. When I finally caught up with him, I didn't recognize him, and almost missed discovering that he was on his way home.

Thanks to the Colonel, he recognized me when our paths crossed at a North Africa air transfer base and it was there that I found he had been recalled to the United States so that his vast fund of tactical flying knowledge, obtained in North African, Sicilian and Italian air battles, can be used elsewhere.

D. C. Pilot of "99th"

Undoubtedly he will be in the United States by the time this is published.

Davis will be succeeded by Capt. Geoge S. Roberts, of Fairmont, W. Va., formerly second in command, as commander of the 99th, now in action over Italy.

"I'M COLONEL DAVIS"

It was through the merest coincidence that I met the Colonel, who was accompanied on his homeward flight by my pal, War Correspondent Tommy Young of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, who has been with the squadron constantly since they left the States. I was switching planes for Sicily when I heard someone call, "Rouzeau!"

I looked around and saw an officer whose face was strangely familiar. He was sitting on a bed roll. When he saw me, he arose, and as he approached, he held out his hand. Seeing my puzzled look, he said, "I'm Colonel Davis."

I was quite ashamed, since I covered his graduation at West Point years ago. I've been chasing him ever since, and have had every reason to remember him. He was awaiting transfer for a homeward-bound plane.

Tommy Young did not recognize me, either. He was away searching for water when Colonel Davis and I met. Returning, he threw me an uninterested look and said, "Howdydo."

When I said, "Hello, Tommy," he looked again sharply and almost shouted with glee. The happy meeting with Davis and Tom was too brief. My flight number was called, and amid a torrent of questions, I had to run to catch the plane. As they accompanied me to the plane, we barely had time to exchange regards to our respective wives.

In the meantime, the 99th Squadron, through their new commander, sends greetings to The Pittsburgh Courier and their many friends among the readers, as they now concentrate on objectives on the Italian mainland.

Assured Care of Families Aid Morale of Army Men

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

NEWARK, N.J.—Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, one of the heroes of the Sicilian campaign and organizer and first commanding officer of the famous all-Negro 99th Fighter Squadron, brought word to Newark yesterday that a big factor in the high morale of the men at the front is the knowledge that their families are receiving their family allowances and allotment of pay regularly each month.

SEP 25 1943

Colonel Davis has returned to employ his battle experience in training a larger fighter group.

Stopping in for a visit at the War Department Office of Dependency Benefits to authorize an increase in his allotment-of-pay to his wife, Mrs. Agatha S. Davis of New Haven, Conn., Colonel Davis declared that "the efficiency of the ODB in getting family allowances and allotments-of-pay to the dependents of our men in the service, is a major factor in the high morale which prevails."

Colonel Davis is the son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, now living in Washington. He was graduated from West Point in 1936. In 1941 he transferred from the Infantry to the Army Air Corps, and in 1942 organized and trained, at Tuskegee, Ala., the first all-Negro air squadron—the Fighting 99th.

SEP 25 1943

Single And Twin Engine Pilots Get Commissions

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Last Class Of Liaison Pilots Receives Wings

DEC 12 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD Ala.—The second mixed class of single and twin-engine pilots to complete the Army Air Forces Training Command course for pilots at the Tuskegee Army Air Field received their wings and commissions Saturday morning, Dec. 4th.

At the exercises held in the Post Chapel, Capt. Harold D. Martin, director of the Ground School, spoke to the graduating class. Capt. Martin lauded the entire class upon the excellent scholastic record they had compiled in the academic phase of learning to fly the Army Air Forces way. In closing he admonished the new pilots to justify the confidence placed in them by the AAF and the U. S. government. "We know you have laid a solid foundation," the ground school director told them, "and hope that your fine record will be an inspiration to drive you on to an honorable and efficient job in combat and in life."

COMMISSIONED OFFICERS IN CLASS

Having been previously commissioned at officer candidate schools and having seen active duty in the Southwest Theatre of Operations, 1st Lt. Elmore Kennedy Philadelphia, Pa., and 1st Lt. Fitzroy Newsum, New York City, were awarded their wings as twin-engine pilots, while 2nd Lt. Edgar L. Bolden of Arlington, Va., was awarded his wings and rating as a single-engine pilot.

SINGLE-ENGINE PILOTS

Among the cadets completing the single-engine course and receiving their wings and commissions were Clarence H. Bradford, St. Louis, Mo.; Robert H. Daniels, Jr., Corona, N. Y.; Othel Dickson, San Francisco, Calif.; Robert J. Friend, New York City; Frederick D. Funderburg, Monticello, Ga.; Howard C. Gamble, Charleston, W. Va.; Stanley L. Harris, St. Paul, Minn.; Lloyd S. Hathcock, Dayton, Ohio; Wellington G. Irving, Belzoni, Miss.; Clarence D. Lester, Chicago, Ill.; William R. Lewis, Boston, Mass.; Henry Pollard, Buffalo, N. Y.; Reid E. Thompson, New Rochelle, N. Y.; William L. Hill, Huntington, W. Va.; Edward J. Williams, Columbus, Ga.

TWIN ENGINE-PILOTS

Completing the twin-engine pilot course were Samuel A. Black Plainfield, N. J.; Harold E. Brazil Joplin, Mo.; Eugene C. Cheatham, Philadelphia, Pa.; Stewart B. Fulbright, Springfield, Mo.; John L. Harrison, Omaha, Nebr.; Henry P. Hervey, Chicago, Ill.; Richard B. Highbaugh, Indianapolis, Ind.; Harold A. Hillery, New York City; Samuel Lynn, Jamaica, N. Y.; Amos A. Rogers, Tuskegee, Ala.; Wendell Wells, Norfolk, Va.; Joseph D. White, New York City, and Willie L. Byrd of Fayetteville, N. C.

DEC 12 1943

Prizes for the cadets having the best all-around records were awarded Flight Officer Samuel Lynn, first; 2nd Lt. Frederick D. Funderburg, second; and 2nd Lt., Othel Dickson, third.

LIASON PILOTS GET WINGS AT TUSKEGEE

In impressively brief ceremonies at the Tuskegee Army Air Field Post Chapel, Tuesday morning, Dec. 7th, the last group of Field Artillery Officers to complete the liaison pilot training course were awarded silver wings and pilots ratings.

Marking the termination of liaison pilot training at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, the graduating class was addressed briefly by Capt. Raymond I. McKinh, Director of Liaison Training. Pilot ratings were awarded by Col. Noel F. Parrish, Commanding Officer, while Capt. Joseph W. Gurnow, Assistant Director of Liaison Training, handed out the silver liaison wings to the following officers: 1st Lt. Lee Arthur Baker, Ft. Worth, Texas; 1st Lt. Scott K. Cleage, Hamden, Conn.; 2nd Lts. John D. Battle, New York City; Edward W. Brice, Rock Hill, S. C.; Johnny Y. Brooks, Mineola, Texas; George D. Conquest, Chicago, Ill.; Charles B. Elam, Troy, Ohio; Sterling K. Jackson, Chicago, Ill.; Ernest W. Goldsborough, Chester, Pa.; Maxwell Honemond, Tuskegee, Ala.; William H. Johnson, Tulsa, Okla.; Elwood A. Smith, New Orleans, La.; Sherman W. Smith, San Antonio Texas; Lemuel L. Tucker, Philadelphia, Pa.; George Woods, Cleveland, Ohio; and Wendell W. Long, Champaign, Ill.

Upon receiving their pilot ratings the members of the class were ordered to report to Ft. Sill, Okla. for further tactical training.

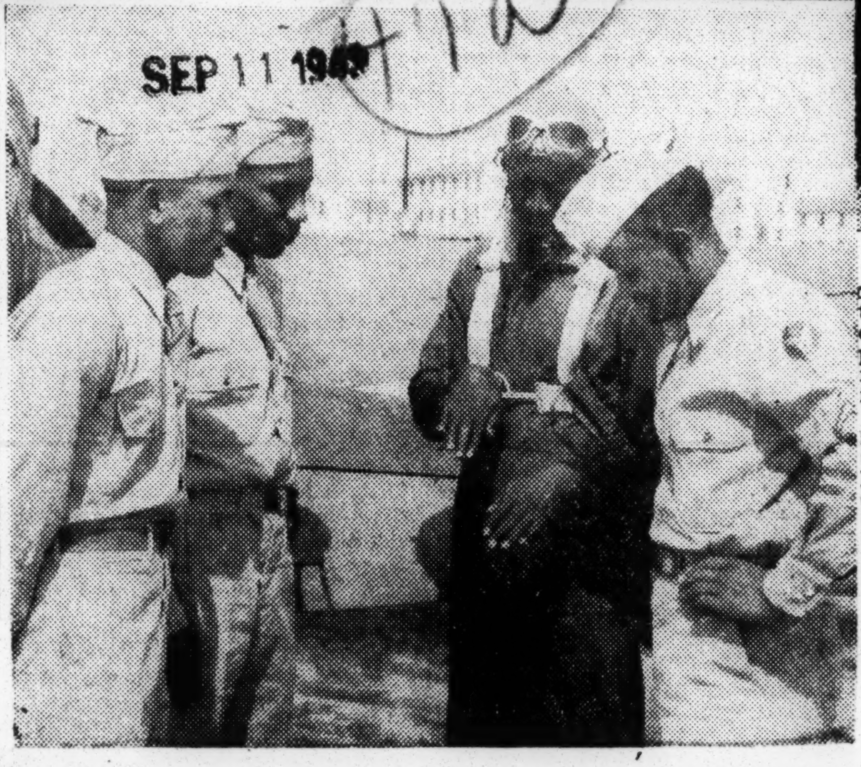
47a-1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

FOR A GREATER GAME—Second Lt. Bernard Jefferson, former Northwestern University grid star, upper left, and Second Lt. Andrew H. Doswell, former Ohio State track star, upper right, are now prepared for the greater game—the battle against the Axis forces for freedom. Both became full-fledged fighter pilots recently at graduation exercises at Tuskegee Army Air Field. To the right, Lt. Jefferson is pictured giving a few of the finer points of flying to three flying hopefuls who are taking primary training.

They are, left to right, Pvt. Clarence Madden Jr., airplane mechanic, from Altoona, Pa.; T/Sgt. Norman F. Prime, photographer from East Orange, N. J.; Lt. Jefferson, and Cpl. Stephen Hotesse, service aide from New York City.

SEP 11 1943



1/a

GOOD OLD AMERICAN HUMOR

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

HARLEM EXCHANGE
AUG 7 1943
4
T-60

Displaying the unfailing humor of U.S. soldiers everywhere, these soldiers of an Air Base Security battalion, hailing from all parts of the country, stand before an island "oasis" somewhere in the Pacific area.

The staff of this mainland counterpart is pictured from left to right, top row: Pvt. Salem Field, Indianapolis, Ind.; Pfc. Clarence Smith, Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y.; Pvt. Walter Caesar, Jambing[illegible], W. Va.; Lt. Nathan Baker, Bernardino, Calif.

Bottom row: Pfc. Fred Rice, Huntsville, Ala.; Pfc. Harding Phippe, also of Huntsville, Ala., and Pvt. Robert Davenport, Chattanooga, Tenn.

AUG 28 1943

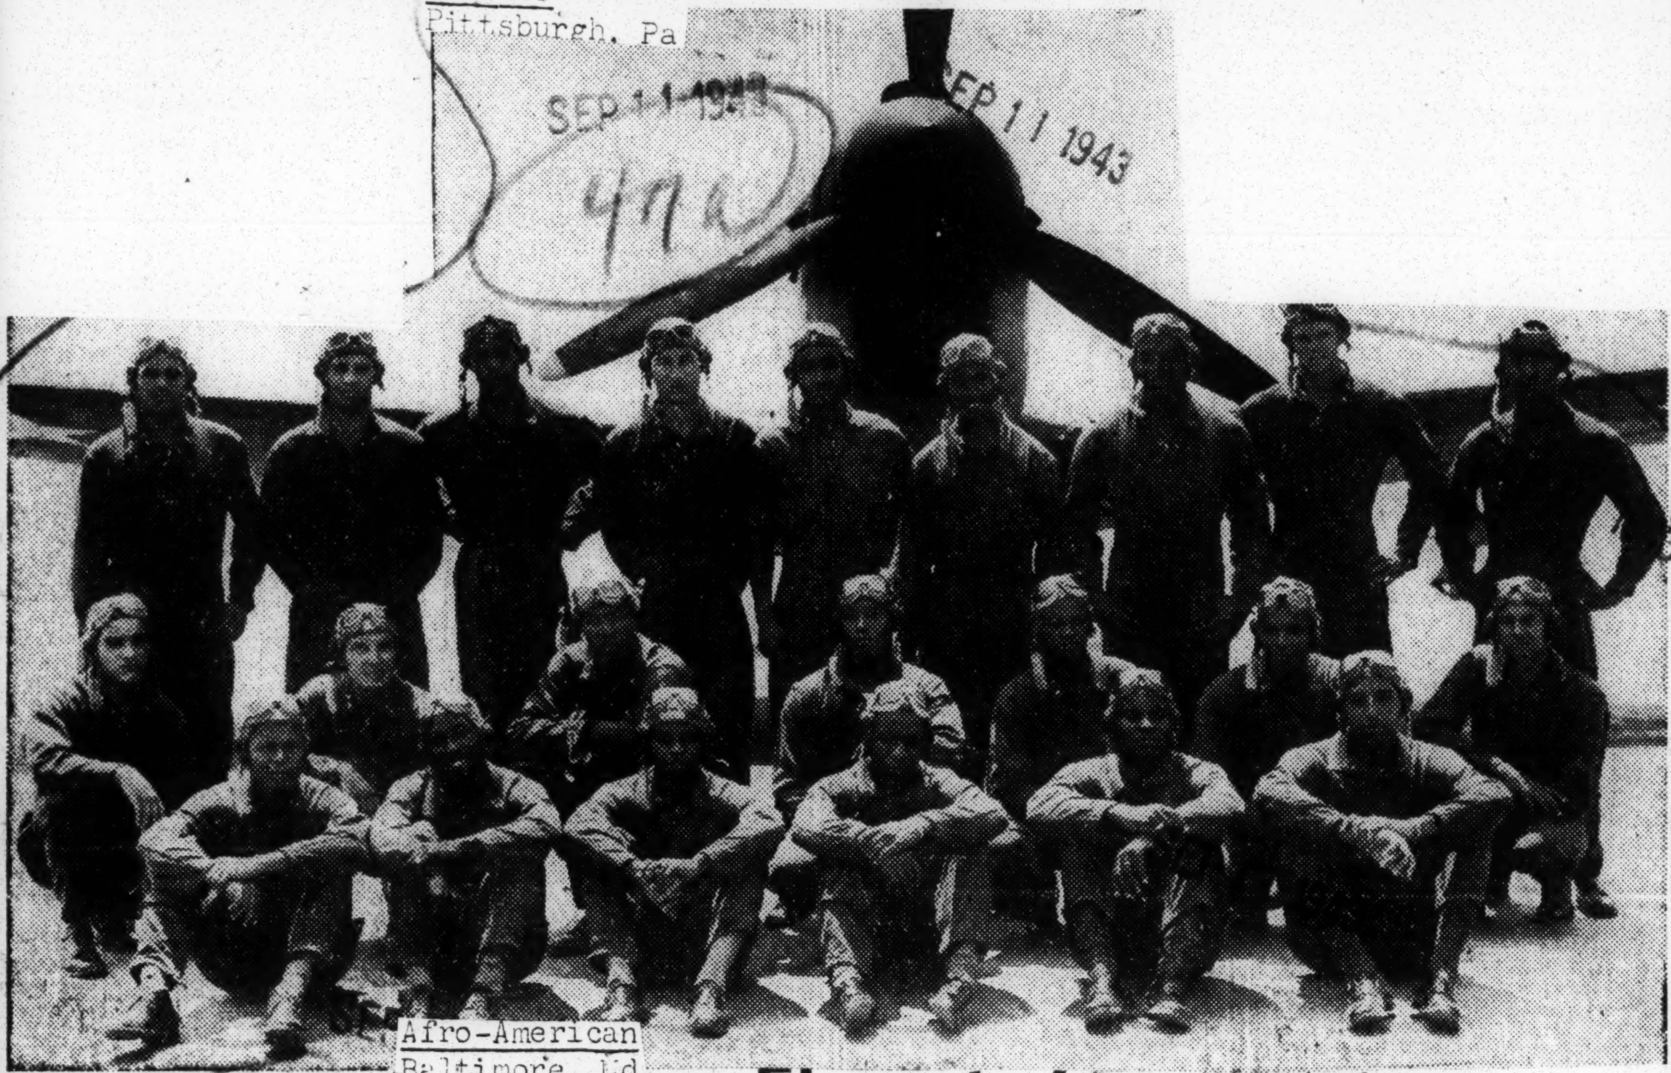
4

NEW EAGLES FROM TUSKEGEE

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

SEP 11 1943

47a



Pictured above is the most recent contingent of Negro pilots to wear the wings of the Army Air Force. Shown from left to right are, 1st row, 2nd Lieuts. Carroll S. Woods, Valdosta, Ga.; George A. Taylor, Philadelphia, Pa.; Hubron R. Blackwell, Baltimore, Md.; Edward W. Hill, Narrangansett, R. I.; Smith W. Green, Los Angeles, Calif., and Hubert L. Jones, Denver, Colo.

Second row: 2nd Lieuts. Charles W. Tate, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Willard L. Woods, Los Angeles, Calif.; Starling B. Penn, New York City; Leon Purchase, New York City; Everett A. Bratcher, Poplar Bluff, Mo.; Samuel Jefferson, Galveston, Texas, and Harry J. Daniels, Indianapolis, Ind.

Third row: 2nd Lieuts. William B. McClenic, Akron, Ohio; Alton F. Ballard, Pasadena, Calif.; Roger Romine, Oakland, Calif.; Floyd A. Thompson, London, W. Va.; Alix Pasquet (Haitian Air Force), Port au Prince, Haiti; Norvell Stoudmire, St. Louis, Mo.; Bernard Jefferson, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Andrew H. Doswell, Cleveland, Ohio, and Charles A. Dunne, Atlantic City, N. J.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

5 Overseas Flyers to Go to Selfridge as Instructors

Members of 99th Are Allowed 23 Days' Furlough Before Reporting for New Job

By DOUGLAS HALL
Staff Correspondent

MITCHELL FIELD, N.Y.—Five weary flyers, who really know first hand the story of warfare in the skies over the North African theatre of war, reported here for duty this week.

The pilots, all members of the 99th Pursuit Squadron now based in Italy, are Lts. Lee Rayford Washington, D.C.; Walter Lawson, Newton, Va., Charles Dryden NYC, Louis Purnell, Philadelphia and Graham Smith, Vicksburgh North Carolina.

Unhurt, Nerves on Edge

The boys reported a long but uneventful trip back to this country. All have had at least thirty combat missions over enemy territory and do not have a scratch to show for it. Most of them admitted their nerves "are a bit on edge" but that is about all.

"Nothing is wrong that a bit of good old American hospitality won't cure," one of them stated. They have been given twenty-three day furloughs to "rest up a bit."

Eligible for Award

The flyers are eligible for the Oak Leaf Cluster, an award given to a flyer who has made at least thirty combat missions, but they did not have time to wait for it in Italy. They will get their awards later.

It is understood that these flyers will report to Selfridge Field as instructors when their furloughs are over. Indications also point to promotions for the battle-worn heroes.

The pilots expressed surprise that the people over here know that the people over here knew home. They said they wanted to surprise their friends but learned that almost everybody knew that they were being returned, because Ollie Stewart told about it in his dispatches from Italy.

Off to Visit Relatives

-Here is what happened to the pilots after they received their furloughs:

Lieutenant Smith returned to North Carolina to visit relatives and friends. Lieutenant Rayford left for his home in Washington. Lieutenant Dryden is at home in New York. He has been in the hospital for a few days. Nothing serious. His parents, one sister and brother are in New York.

Lieutenant Lawson is visiting his wife Mrs. Cleo Lawson in Virginia. He was married only a month before he was sent overseas.

Age-Herald

What Negroes Are Doing

Birmingham, Ala.

BY OSCAR W. ADAMS

NOV 14 1943

The first Negro pilots in the history of the U. S. Army Air Forces to receive the coveted Silver Wings of twin engine pilots were commissioned second lieutenants at graduation exercises in the post chapel, Tuskegee, Ala., Wednesday of last week.

Included among the initial group of Negro bomber pilots are 2nd Lt. Henri F. Fletcher, San Antonio, Tex.; Perry Hudson, Jr., Atlanta, Ga.; Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N. J.; Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore, Md.; Jerome D. Spurlin, Chicago, Ill.; William D. Thompkins, Fall River, Mass.; Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, Calif.; Herman R. Campbell, Jr., New York City; and Haldane King, of Jamaica, N. Y.

This group of fliers will report to Mather Field, Calif., where they will undergo transitional bomber training in B-25 Mitchell bombers.

T. M. Campbell, field agent for the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and father of 1st Lt. William Campbell, first of the all-Negro fighter squadron to bomb the Axis, delivered the main address to one of the largest audiences ever to witness a graduation at the Tuskegee Air Base. In his speech, Mr. Campbell, who has two sons in the armed forces and a daughter in the Wac, pointed out to the new flying officers that: "The courage, skill and precision which you have exhibited during your period of training here will not only be of great inspiration to those following in your footsteps, but will command the respect and admiration of both races of people in this immediate community, this state, this region, this nation, and other parts of the world where you may chance to go."

The three top-ranking cadets of the class were awarded prizes emblematic of their all-around excellence as potential officers in the air forces. First honors were awarded to 2nd Lt. Leslie A. Williams former student at the University of California; second honors went to 2nd Lt. Edward M. Thomas, former Chicago postal clerk while 2nd Lt. Harvey N. Pinkney who attended Morgan College, won third prize.

Cadets completing their training and commissioned as single engine fighter pilots comprised a majority of the class and included representatives of eight states and the District of Columbia. Listed among the single engine graduates are the following:

Second Lts. Gwynn W. Pearson Oakland, Calif.; James B. Brown and William Thomas, Los Angeles Calif.; Rodger B. Brown, Glencoe Ill.; Oscar D. Hutton, Emory L. Robinson and Edward M. Thomas of Chicago, Ill.; Alfred Q. Carroll, Washington, D. C.; Clarence W. Dart, Elmira, N. Y.; Charles W. Dickerson and Theodore H. Mills, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Hugh St. Clair Warner, New York City; Edward Laird, Brighton, Ala.; Ivey F. Leftwich, Fairfield, Ala.; Turner W. Payne, Wichita Falls, Tex.; Earl S. Sherard, Columbus, Ohio; Eugene D. Smith, Cincinnati, Ohio; Nathaniel C. Stewart, Philadelphia, Pa. and Paul C. Simmons, Jr., Detroit, Mich.

47a-1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

9 Members of 99th Squadron Promoted

SEP 4 1943

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Sicily

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY.—First Lieutenant Henry M. Letcher of Washington, D.C., is now executive officer of the Ninety-ninth Fighter Squadron. The appointment was announced Sunday by Colonel B. O. Davis, Jr., effective August 21, and makes Letcher responsible for the efficiency and functioning of all ground members of the command.

Said Letcher: "I feel highly honored that the commanding officer has chosen me for this position of great responsibility, and I shall make every effort to justify his faith in me."

Letcher has already made his presence felt in the squadron by his untiring efforts as special service, transportation and PX officer. He is a former Howard instructor and prior to coming into the service taught at Phelps Vocational School. His wife, Mrs. Evelyn H. Letcher, now teaches in the Washington public schools and lives at 3028 Sherman Avenue, Northwest.

Bolling Makes Safe Belly Landing

George R. Bolling has walked away from another one. This pilot, who weeks ago parachuted to safety near the coast of Sicily, Saturday slid his plane in on its belly after his motor cut out on him at 1500 feet and stepped out without a visible scratch.

He had just read in the AFRO of his other escape and wishes to assure his mother that he is still okay.

Eight Pilots Promoted

I left the squadron a few days ago for a visit to the front and returned to find nine squadron officers promoted, effective August 1. All promotions were from second to first lieutenant and all were pilots but one. The exception is First Lieutenant George Currie of Los Angeles, ordnance officer and graduate of Aberdeen.

The pilots have almost three months' combat duty to their credit and all send love and best wishes to their families. Included are:

George R. Bolling, Phoebus, Va.; Walter Lawson, Newtown, Va.; Graham Smith, Ahoskie, N.C.; Willie Ashley, Sumter, S.C.; Louis Purnell, Philadelphia; William Fuller, Tarboro, N.C.; Samuel Bruce, Seattle, Wash., and Paul Mitchell, Washington, D.C.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Lt. Lawson Came Home on Half Wing and a Prayer

Former Tuskegee Flyer Says Germans Don't Stand and Fight Any More

By DOUGLASS HALL

NEWTON, Va. — "Coming Home on a Wing and a Prayer" is a pretty safe business, but what happens to a flyer when he has only a prayer and half a wing left? Lt. Walter Lawson, member of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, knows the answer because he had that experience in North Africa.

Lt. Lawson

While escorting a bomber on a mission over enemy territory, Lieutenant Lawson was attacked by a group of German planes. He dived into them! When it was all over, he had only half a wing left and a plane whose motor was not running none too well.

His Closest Call

"I headed for home," Lieutenant Lawson stated, "flying low. The plane did not have the power to climb very high. I had my fingers crossed and I prayed — hoping that I would not meet the enemy flyers again. I did not and arrived home safe."

That was Lieutenant Lawson's closest call. Soldiering was no bed of roses for the boys in North Africa, he said, but he wouldn't take a million dollars for his experiences.

Germans Hit and Run

"Never at any time were the boys afraid," the lieutenant added, "they like to engage the enemy planes in dog fights, but that is almost something of the past. The Germans no longer stand and fight; they strike hard and run.

"But when one sails through the skies en route to a target," he stated, "there is a terrible feeling that comes over him. Behind every roll of cloud enemy planes seem to be lurking. It is the unknown that bothers us — not the known.

"Let them come out and fight—man to man, plane to plane — and the war will soon be over. But, no, they lurk in the clouds and fall down when you least expect."

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Race Bomber Pilots To Start Training Within Thirty Days

SEP 11 1943

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—Negro aviation cadets, destined to pilot B-26 medium army bombers in the recently announced Negro medium bombardment group, will begin their training either at pilot schools at Fort Dodge, Kansas, or Del Rio, Texas, within the next 30 days, John J. McCloy, assistant secretary of War, said at his press conference here Thursday. The cadets will be trained in company with white cadets.

Answering a question of The Pittsburgh Courier on the status of the project for a medium bombardment group, Mr. McCloy said that, in addition to the training of bombing pilots, training of Negro cadets as navigator and bombardier officers will get underway no later than December, 1943. "They will be trained as such for 18 weeks, after which they will go to gunnery school. All this training will be with white cadets," he declared.

Giving further particulars, Mr. McCloy stated, "To complete the crews of this medium bombardment group—which must be activated by July 1, 1944—many Negro enlisted men are already in training all over the country. They are studying radio, aviation mechanics, electrical work and armor at Lincoln, Chanute, and Lowry fields, and other Air Force installations—all with white enlisted men."

TEAM WORK STRESSED AT TAAF GRADUATION

SEP 11 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., Sept. 9—Stressing the value of team work, discipline and punctuality, Major George McDonald, formerly a prominent Baltimore, Md., physician, spoke briefly to the latest graduating class at the Tuskegee Army Air field, August 30.

PRESENTED COMMISSIONS

Following the address by Major McDonald, executive officer of the Tuskegee Station hospital, commissions as second lieutenants were presented to the members of the class by Major Donald McPherson, director of flight training. Among the cadets being commissioned, were 2nd Lts. Alton F. Ballard, Pasadena, Calif.; Hubron R. Blackwell, Baltimore, Md.; Everett A. Bratcher, Poplar Bluff, Mo.; Harry J. Daniels, Indianapolis, Ind.; Andrew H. Doswell, Cleveland, Ohio; Charles A. Dunne, Atlantic City, N. J.; Smith W. Green, Los Angeles, Calif.; Edward W. Hill, Narragansett, R. I.; Lawrence B. Jefferson, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Samuel Jefferson, Galveston, Texas; Hubert L. Jones, Denver, Col.; William B. McClenic, Akron, Ohio; Starling B. Penn and Leon Purchase, of New York City; Roger Romine, Oakland, Calif.; Norvell Stoudmire, St. Louis, Mo.; Charles W. Tate, Pittsburgh, Pa.; George A. Taylor, Philadelphia, Pa.; Floyd A. Thompson, London, W. Va.; Carroll S. Woods, Valdosta, Ga.; and Willard L. Woods, of Memphis, Tenn.

HAITIAN OFFICER IN CLASS

Second Lt. Alix Pasquet, aviation student from the Haitian Air force, was among those completing the flight training course. Lt. Pasquet, who holds a commission in the Haitian army, was presented a certificate and wings.

INDIANA FLYER GETS TOP HONORS

Cadet honors were awarded to 2nd Lt. Harry J. Daniels, of Indianapolis, Ind., by Maj. John G. Cooke, commandant of cadets. Second and third honors were won by 2nd Lts. Andrew H. Doswell, Cleveland, and Alton F. Ballard, Pasadena, Calif.

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y

Army Air Forces School Has Negro

BOSTON (ANP).—The course of training given to the Army air force statisticians at the Harvard Business School has been increased by three weeks. So far only one colored student has attended the school—Lt. Emmett Rice, of New York City, and City College of New York City, now stationed with one of the Tuskegee Army Air Force squadrons.

SEP 18 1943

The course was lengthened from five to eight weeks to give the staticians control officer is placed with airfields in the Boston area before they are shipped to combat zones.

By the new system which has been in operation over a year, a statistiicans control officer is placed with every Army air forces unit. The demand for these men is so great that most of the graduates of the school are overseas.

Because of this demand, the school is being enlarged, and new classes enter very four weeks. The schol is the only one of its kind in the nation, and was also the first to experiment with the use of civilian professors to teach Army courses. Organized in June, 1942, it was kept secret until Time magazine revealed the set-up in January, 1942.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Lt. S. W. White Of 99th Is Missing

AUG 14 1943

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — First Lieutenant Sherman Windham White, Jr., of Macon, Mississippi, is the second member of the 99th Pursuit Squadron reported lost in combat following engagements over Pantalleria Island in the Allied advance on Europe. White was reported missing in July.

Details in the air fight are lacking.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

NEGRO AVIATORS SHOWN IN CLICK MAGAZINE

AUG 17 1943

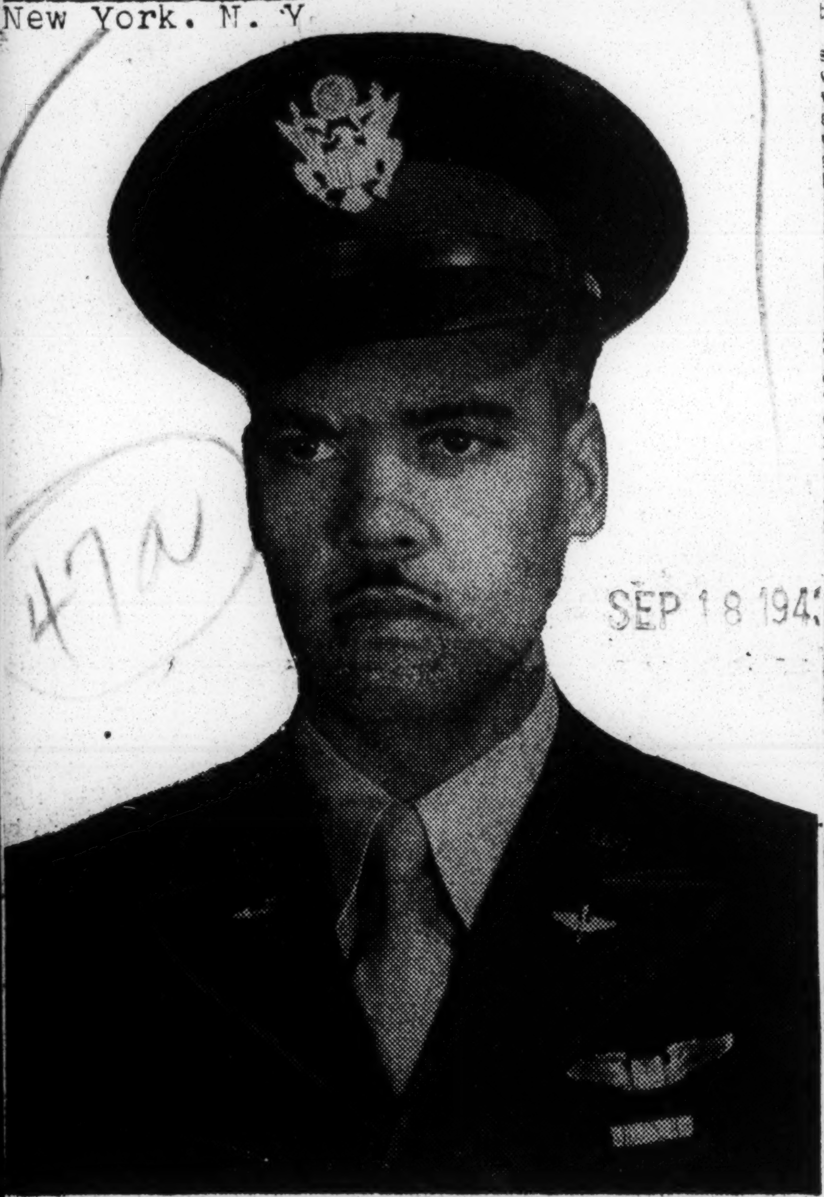
NEW YORK — (SNS) — Click magazine for September has a three-page picture story on the "Black Panthers," Negro fighter group, now finishing training at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama. The article declares the group is "tough, smart and rarin' to go," and declares the instructors of the squadron say the members fly and fight "intelligently, bravely and skillfully."

Lauds 99th Pilots

Amsterdam News
New York. N. Y

47a

SEP 18 1943



LT. COL. B. O. DAVIS, former commander of the 99th Fighter Squadron, who returned to the States last week. He praised the work of the fliers of his outfit. He will go to Selfridge Field to join the 332nd Fighter Group there.

Leader Of 99th Flies From Sicily For Engagement

AUG 14 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Secretary of War Also Discloses Other Negro Troop Units Working Side By Side With Whites in Spirit of Harmony

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 12—At his first press conference since his return from a visit to the fighting front, held last week, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson declared himself well pleased with the creditable showing of Negro troops in all branches of the service.

He declared emphatically that his visits to Negro troop units convinced him that they were working well together with white American troops.

Of Negro troops in England he said: "I inspected one of the units with General Lee and I found a very interesting situation. The several units I saw were all working very vigorously and very earnestly and seemed to be working well together with other troops."

SQUADRON DOING CREDITABLE WORK

The Secretary indicated that at his invitation Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commander of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, had flnown from an advanced air base in Sicily to Tunis in North Africa for a special conference. Stimson stated: "I personally met Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., the commanding officer of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, which is now stationed in Sicily. He flew over from Tunis to meet me. That squadron, as has already been reported, is doing creditable work in its mission."

Stimson also had high praise for Negro engineer, quartermaster and anti-aircraft units in North Africa and Sicily. He said: "In North Africa there was an engineer unit of Negro troops which served in Liberia in the spring of 1942, and that unit performed very valuable work on construction and repair jobs at North African ports from which the invasion of Sicily was undertaken.

"Furthermore, Negro quartermaster units did excellent work in preparation for the Sicilian invasion, and some of these quartermaster troops actually were with the landing forces in Sicily. Negro anti-aircraft units have been performing their mission all through North Africa."

AUG 14 1943

MARTIN B-26 BOMBER—WE'LL FLY 'EM SOON!

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

SEP 11 1943

47a

The Martin B-26 medium bomber, above, will soon have brown hands at the controls—brown eyes sighting the guns and the skill and daring of brown bodies guiding its course as it deals out death and destruction to our enemies. A War Department release admits "our boys" will start training in this type of ship within the next 30 days.—International News Photo.

Amsterdam News
New York. N. Y.

Meteorology Grads OK'd

Men Honored At M.I.T. While Churchill Was Honored At Harvard U.

By PAUL DANIEL DAVIS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., (ANP)—On Labor Day in this city while Harvard University was conferring an honorary degree upon Prime Minister Winston Chuchill, two young Negro aviation cadets were among the group of men studying at the United States Army Air Corps Meteorology school, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, to be commissioned lieutenant in the Army Air Corps, as weather forecasters.

Those Commissioned

They are John Tomas Willis of Riverton, N. J., and Robert Maurice Preer of St. Louis and Atlanta. For the past 11 months they have been taking the difficult meterology coures at the famed M. I. T. in Cambridge, and now at finished products will be stationed in strategic positions to aid in air combat by their ability to predict and chart weather conditions accurately, which is all important in air combat.

Was an Athlete

John Thomas Willis the son of Mrs. Eleanor J. Young, of Riverton, attended the Palmyra, N. J., high school and graduated from the Trenton, Teachers College in 1942, where he held a scholarship. There he was on the track and soccer team, and in the glee club. At the meterology school he was in the weatherman's chorus, which broadcast frequently over Boston Stations. He was also a member of Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society for teachers, and treasurer of his College's chapter.

Willis then studied photogrammetry at Princeton University under the national defense courses and later worked in the geological survey division of the department of the interior for six months and continued course work at Howard University.

He became a member of the enlisted reserve on August 24, 1942 and reported to M. I. T. as a cadet on Nov. 7, 1942, where he did his basic training and entered the regular meterology program.

Come From Atlanta

Robert Maurice Preer, the son of Mrs. Rose Preer Brown of Parson Street, Atlanta, graduated from the Booker T. Washington high school in Atlanta and from Morehouse College in Atlanta with the class of 1941 obtaining a B.S. in chemistry. He was a member of the science and math club, member of the "M" club, and one of the national directors of the Delta Phi Delta, journalism society.

He later worked as postmaster at Atlanta University and in the registrar's office. He volunteered in June 1942, for meterology training and was called to active duty on November 9, 1942, Preer married Miss Bette Banner, of Boston and Atlanta University, and one June 10, become the father of a son, Preer Jr.

At Other Schools

At the present five universities, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, New York University, University of Chicago, California Institute of Technology, Pasedena, and the University of California at Los Angeles are offering this highly technical training in cooperation with the Army. Five men are now in the advanced phases of meterology in the Air Corps. One of the other two commissioned officers besides Willis and Preer is Lt. Benjamin Bullock, stationed at Tuskegee; one aviation cadet is now in training in California.

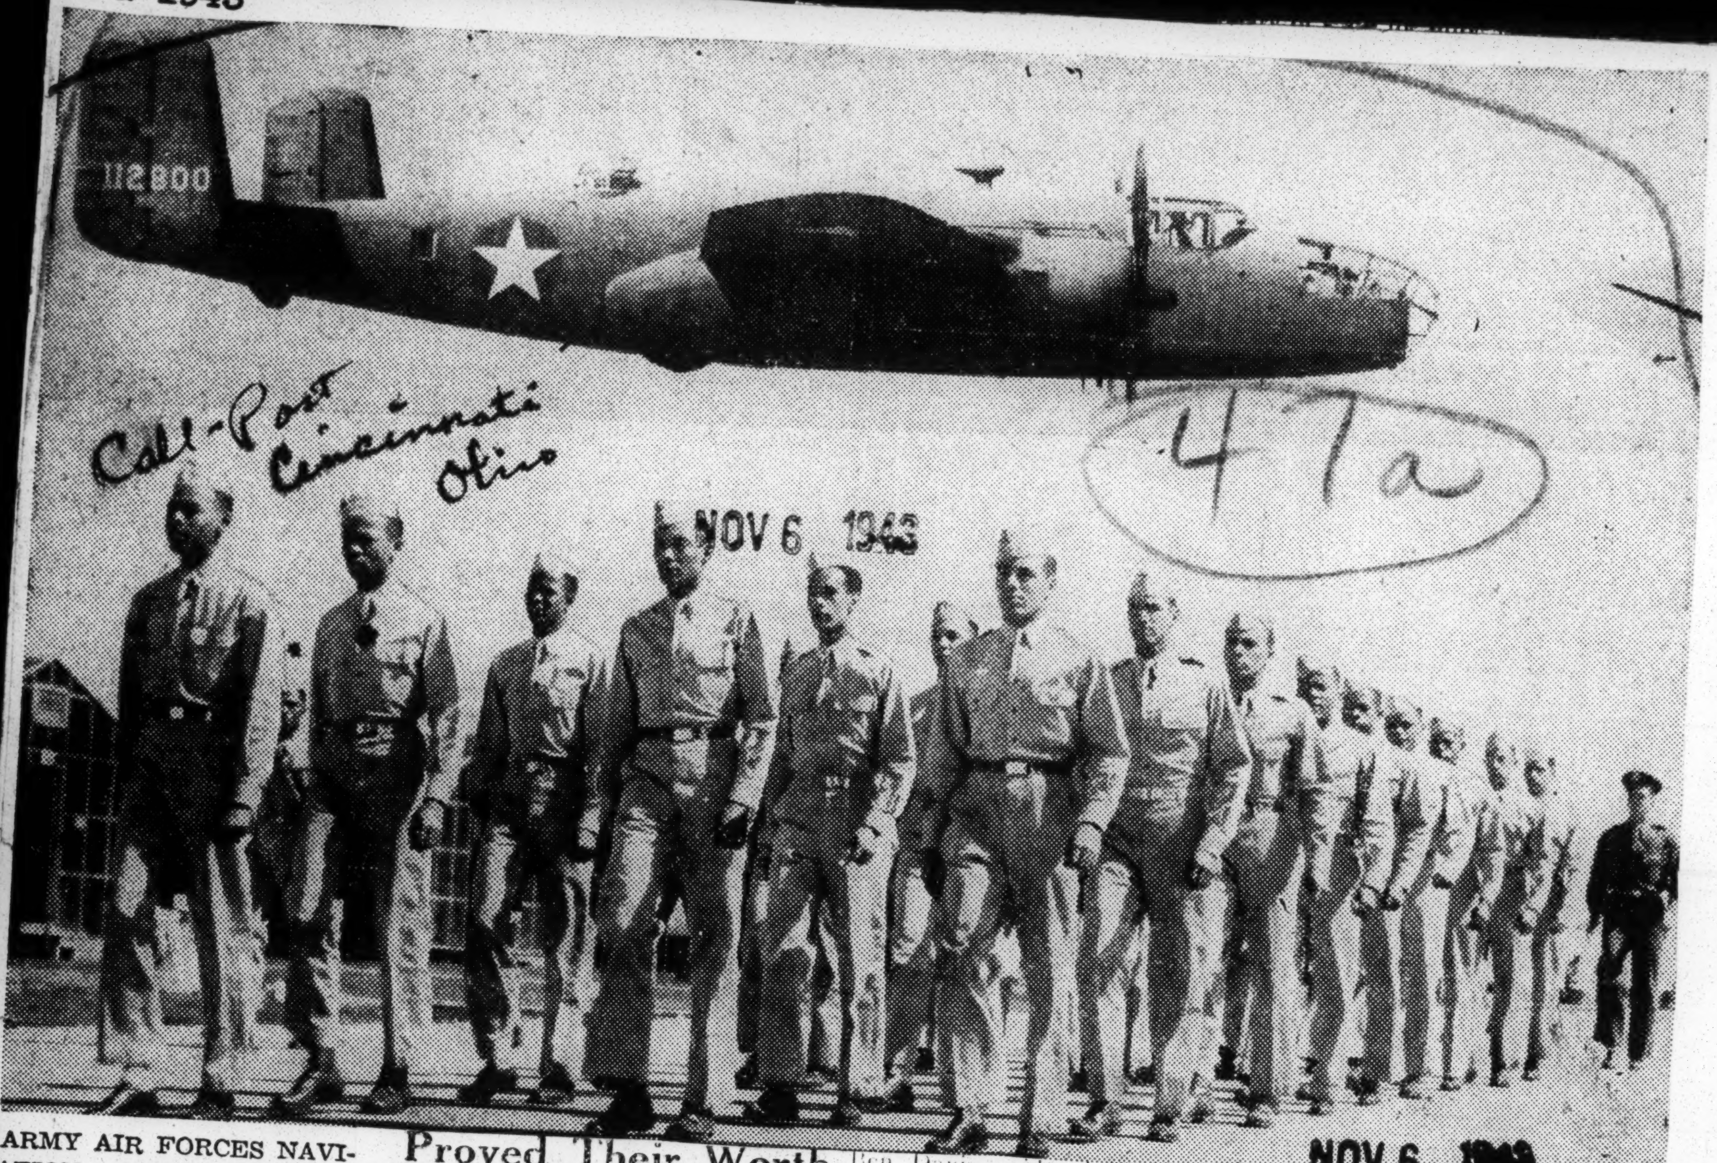
Afro-American
Baltimore. Md.

TAAF Commended for Safety Record

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — For its part in the air safety record of the army air forces for 1943, the Tuskegee Army Air Field was recently presented a facsimile of the National Safety Council's Distinguished Service to Safety Award bestowed on the army air forces.

In a letter to the TAAF commander, Col. Noel F. Parrish, Robert A. Lovett, Assistant Secretary of War for Air, said: "Please convey my congratulations to the officers and men of your field. You have helped effect a reduction in the rate of army aircraft training accidents during 1943 as compared with the previous year."

47a-1943



Call-Post Cincinnati Ohio

47a

NOV 6 1943

NOV 6 1943

ARMY AIR FORCES NAVIGATION SCHOOL, Texas—Heads up and arms swinging in the clipped arc of the Army Air Forces, these 30 members of the Hondo Army Air Field's first Negro navigation cadet unit march to their first classroom lecture. Their instructor in orientation subjects is 1st Lt. George F. McInerney.

Flying at the top of photo is the powerful North American B-25 bomber in which they are destined to see service against the Axis enemy. The admission of Negroes to navigation and bombardiers schools is anoter forward step in really "Americanizing" the U. S. armed services.

NOV 6 1943

Last Of Fighter Pilots Finish At Tuskegee, Ala.

OCT 15 1943

Negro Flyers Have Proved Their Worth But Fail To Get Fair Break From Chiefs Of United States Army, Says Report

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Oct. (ANP)—Perhaps a situation surrounding fliers should always be more less "up in the air." Certainly such a position has characterized much of life as it has surrounded the doughty airmen being trained at this post. Probably the fundamental cause is that teaching Negroes to fly and making them an integral part of the army air corps was not envisioned at the start and always has been a sort of carbuncle on the corps' neck.

47a

All of the white pilots being trained for the army are fitted in according to a stated plan which is related to combat needs. Not so with the Negro pilots. Despite the fact that the government has spent nearly $1,000,000 in the development of this fine field; even though colored fliers have proven beyond doubt that they could fly with the best, as Lt. Col. Ben Davis said when he returned from North Africa, "Negro pilots are no longer an experiment," still they are an extra something, on the outside so far as the air corps is concerned.

Originally there was no plan to [illegible] Negroes. The pressure exerted by Negro public opinion and the effective planning and cooperation by Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee, plus the influence of many other racial factors finally got the field located and started. It sounds fantastic to say so today, but it is reported that even though they were building the field, there were many higher ups in the air corps who never felt it would be a success.

So the 99th Pursuit Squadron was trained and after it had completed its normal work they did not know what to do with it. To make it an integrated part of a regular fighter group would defeat the ideas of those who felt that even in the highly individualistic pursuit planes where a man flies to his glory or his death alone Negroes could not be made part of white units. So the 99th stayed at Tuskegee and practiced until they became the most expert [illegible] still on this side.

1943

While it was decided to develop an all Negro fighter group. This would call for several squadrons to make up the group. With the hundreds of men necessary for ground crews and the perhaps hundreds or two pilots which replacements would require it was felt that despite the fact that the United States has trained 50,000 white pilots in the last two or three years, the couple of hundred would suffice to satisfy Negro public opinion, so that Negro fliers are still outside the "regular" army air corps plan.

Then came the anxiety upon the part of Negroes to be included in more than just the pursuit plane groups. They wanted to be part of the highly publicized bomber-fighters too. They began to exert pressure. Directed at the office of the civilian aide, the pressure was felt. Slowly the air corps responded. "All right, it will train bombers, men who will fly two engined jobs instead of the single engine pursuit planes alone."

47a

The air corps could have sent a group of colored youth on to school just as it sends whites. Instead, the emphasis is being shifted from pursuit flying. This class which graduated from TAAF last week is the last 'all-fighter' group which will probably graduate at Tuskegee. This doubtlessly means there will be no more fighter units after the 332d. A few, perhaps half of the students at TAAF, will go into pursuit flying so as to make up replacements for those put out of action with the 332d. The rest of the pilots will be trained in two engine bomber flying, leaving Tuskegee after they get their preliminary phase for training in one of the bomber-pilot schools, probably Fort Worth, Tex.

Thus far no colored mechanics are being trained for the bomber program. If the two programs are to be effectively pushed it would appear that colored mechanics would have been put into training at Lincoln or Chanute and plans laid for a really all-out bomber program. This could have been done while still producing fighter groups. It need not have been projected here at Tuskegee.

Why could not bomber training have been instituted somewhere else? Now that Negroes have proven themselves as good fighter pilots, why could Negro bomber trainees have not been taken right into the white schools forgetting about this folly of separateness? Asst. Secretary of War McClay said there would be no segregation and we accept his word as a gentleman.

Perhaps we did not carry our pressure far enough. It looks as though we are getting half a loaf and that there is danger of hashing up the fine job Tuskegee field has been doing in its specialized field when all we will get out of the bomber angle is a token representation. The army air corps dies hard the howls and protests which we raise are sometimes not intelligently directed to secure the best overall results for which we all pray.

Crowd Applauds Tuskegee Band

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

AUG 27 1943

The crack Tuskegee Air Field Band, directed by Captain Frank L. Drye, former conductor of the Tuskegee Institute Band, was given a great ovation by the large crowds that witnessed the colorful parade for the southern premiere of "This Is The Army," which was held last night at the Fox Theatre.

47a

The well-balanced Tuskegee Air Field cadets thrilled the crowd with their brilliant performance of "This Is The Army Mr. Jones," at fast march tempo and their perfect footwork.

AUG 27 1943

The parade featured various military units, including the army, WACS, Marines, Spars, Paratroopers, and heavy artillery and tanks corps, as well as the American Red Cross, American Women's Volunteer Service, American Legion, Civilian Defense and "Victory Gardens."

Bomber School Already Begun

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

OCT 16 1943

By DOUGLASS HALL

OSCODA, Mich. — Training of the ground crew for the bombardier school which is to get under way in Texas at a very early date has already begun here.

There are two Martin B-26 Marauder planes here which the boys are learning to take apart and put together. It is expected that these trainees will be shifted to the new outfit as soon as it is organized.

The new school will be opened as soon as there are trained ground men to make up the crew, the AFRO learned.

50 Colored Officers Here

"In truth," an official stated, "one [illegible] say that the school is already under way. Men are being trained for responsible positions in it. Of course, pilot training cannot began until the ground setup is working smoothly."

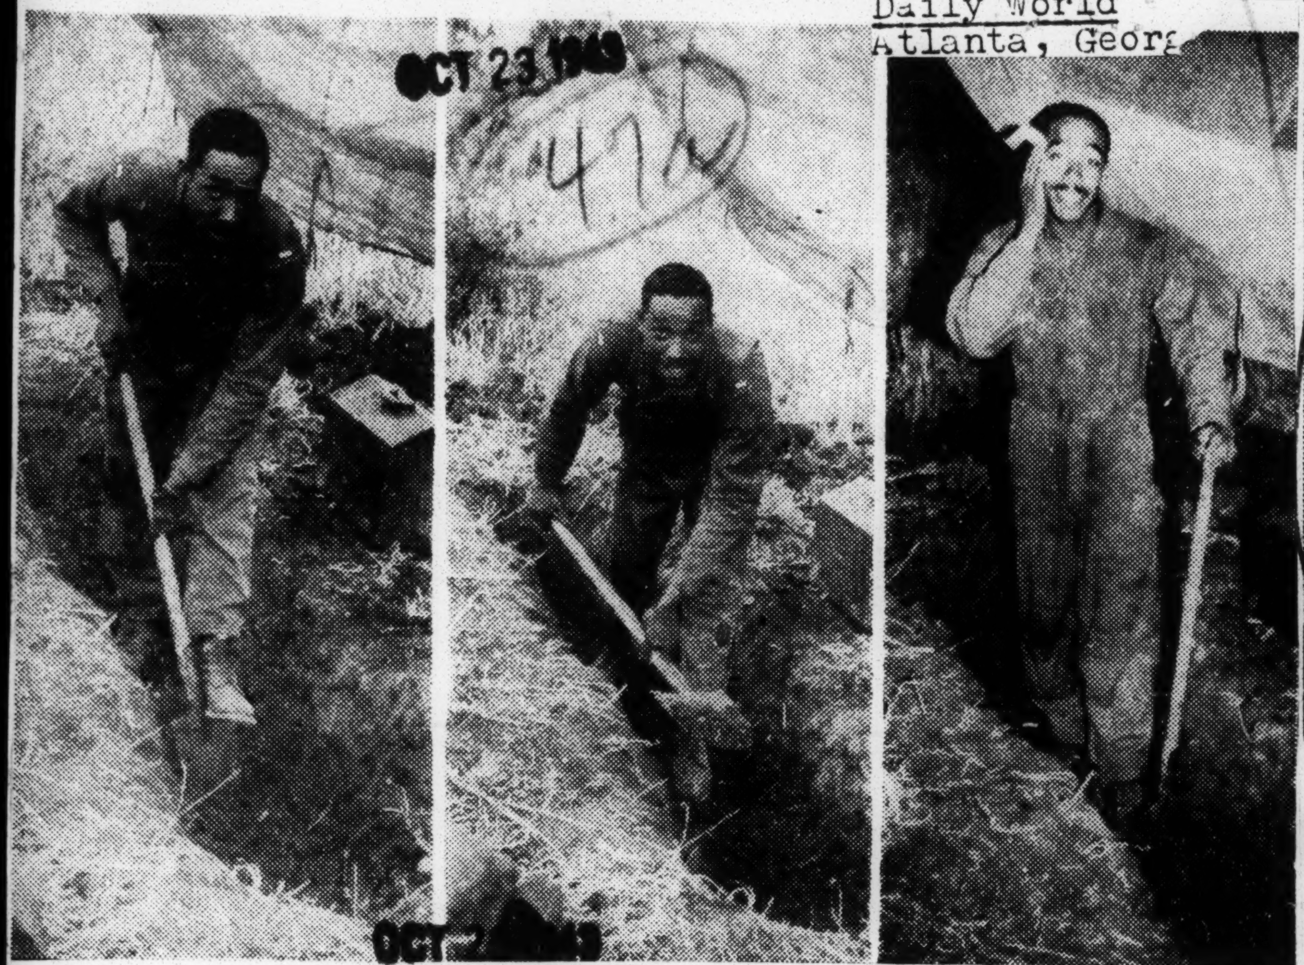
At this field there are more than fifty colored officers ranging from second lieutenants to majors.

Before Plane Crash Ended A Brilliant Flying Career

Daily World
Atlanta, Georg

OCT 23 1943

47a



OCT 23 1943

First Lt. Sidney P. Brooks of Cleveland, Ohio, is pictured as he worked on a foxhole near the air base of the 99th Fighter Squadron in Sicily prior to his fatal accident in mid-September. The flying officer was given a military funeral on September 19. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Brooks of Cleveland, and is also survvied by his widow, the former Miss Lucille Miller. When he joined he Army two years ago he was a junior at Ohio State University. (Journal and Guide photos by Thomas W. Young)

OCT 23 1943

Leads Eastern Cadets In Air Gunnery

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

47a

DEC 8 1943

Aviation Cadet Othel Dickson of the Tuskegee Army Air Field led all flying cadets in the Eastern Flying Command and finished third in the national ranking of all cadets in the AAF Training Command at the recent National Fixed Gunnery Meet held at Elgin Field, Fla. The shooting young airman is shown loading the thirty calibre cowl gun on the AT-6 which he flew in the recent competition. A-C Dickson hails from Coffeyville, Kansas. (Photo by AAF Training Command)

DEC 8 1943

Last Rites Held

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

SGT. JAMES A. JACKSON

Military Burial For Youth Who

AUG 7 - 1943

Served With 99th

AUG 7 - 1943

Atlantans Pay Tribute To Sgt. James A. Jackson

47a

Funeral services for Technical Sergeant James A. Jackson, who died en route to Atlanta from North Africa, were held Friday at the First Congregational church, with Rev. John C. Wright officiating.

Hundreds of Atlantans attended the impressive military rites, and paid their last tribute to the young soldier, who merited the respect and admiration of all who knew him, by his useful and unselfish life.

President Benjamin E. Mays, of Morehouse College, stated that the deceased was the first casualty from Morehouse College in World War II, and mentioned the splendid record made by Sgt. Jackson in both scholarship and extra-curricula activities at the college. "A good man died in a good cause," Dr. Mays concluded.

Fred D. Maise, assistant Scout Executive of District 10, told of Jackson's well-rounded life as a scout.

Prof. J. P. Whittaker, registrar of Atlanta University and an official of the First Congregational church, said the deceased has always identified himself with the highest expressions in life. He also stated that Sgt. Jackson's knowledge of French was of practical use in North Africa.

In an eloquent and scholarly manner, Rev. Dr. Wright spoke at length about the many desirable character traits possessed by the deceased. Among those mentioned were his willingness to serve his fellowman, and unusual ability to make friends.

The funeral was completed at the grave at Southview Cemetery, where the deceased was paid the traditional military honors, including the gun salute and taps.

Sergeant Jackson was one of the first Atlanta youths to volunteer for the United States Air Corps, and trained at Chanute Field, Ill., and the Tuskegee Army Flying School, before going to North Africa as a member of the 99th Fighter Squadron. He was in combat area when he became sick and was being transferred to Lawson General Hospital in Atlanta when he died.

AUG 7 1943

47a

AUG 7 1943

Jackson was well known in the Gate City. He attended David T Howard Elementary and Junior High School where he was awarded a loving cup for being the best all-round student, and graduated from the Atlanta University Laboratory High School and Morehouse College. He was a member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, and while at Morehouse, was a cheer-leader.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Ruth Jackson, two sisters, Mrs. A. W. Brown of Orangeburg, S. C., Mrs. Joseph Daniels, and one brother, Stephen Jackson.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Haywood Assigned To Advanced Flight Class At Tuskegee

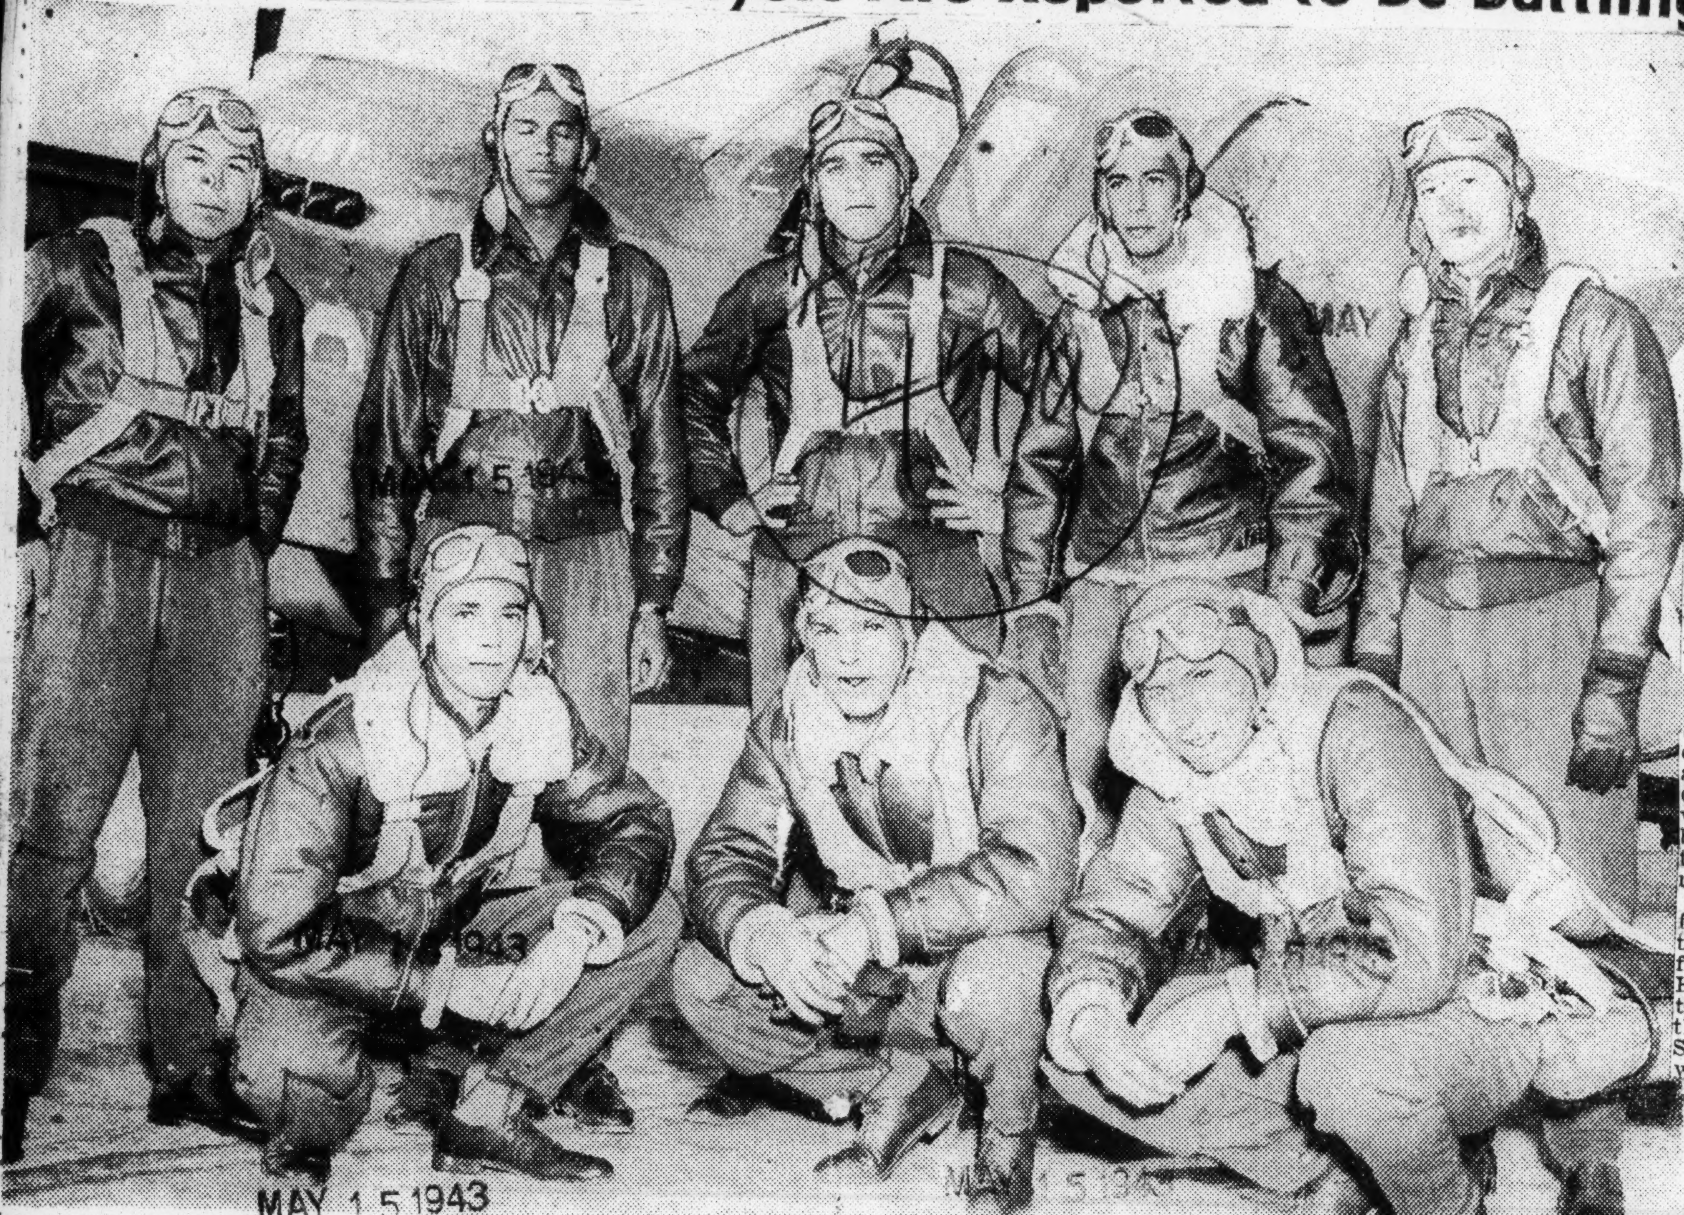
JUL 17 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Aviation Cadet Thomas W. Haywood Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. T. W. Haywood of Warrenton, N. C., recently completed his basic flight training at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, and has been assigned to the advanced flight class. He graduated from Hampton Institute in 1941 with a B. S. degree.

Prior to entering the Aviation Cadet Corps, Cadet Haywood was an instructor in industrial arts at Douglas High School in Winchester, Va.

47a-1943

Some of These TAFS Flyers Are Reported to Be Battling the Axis in Africa



MAY 15 1943

Left to right (front row) Edward C. Gleed, Lawrence, Kansas; Richard C. Pullam, Kansas City, Mo.; William H. Walker, Suffolk, Va.; back row, Milton T. Hall, Owensboro, Ky.; Robert B. Tresville, West Point cadet, of Bay City, Texas; Peter C. Verwayne, New York; Wendell O. Pruitt, St. Louis, Mo., and Marcus R. Williams, Marshall, Texas.

Speaking of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, which has been on the "alert" for six months, awaiting assignment to a theatre of war, a top ranking air force general said recently in an off-the-record statement, "We have trained these boys all right. They are the best trained flyers in America today They are really ready for combat but the trouble is that those guys up at Washington can't make up their minds what to do with them."

That statement was made several weeks ago and now it can be said that Washington is known to have made some important decisions that cannot be revealed for some time to come. Incidentally, a lot of pilots and ground personnel have been reported missing from Tuskegee and the group at Selfridge Field does not account for all of them.

WILL NOT MIND FIGHTING JAPANESE

Recently a man discussing the th Pursuit Squadron from Tusgee wanted to know how I thought they would feel if they come to grips with Japanese Zeros and their pilots. He shared my opinion that the Negro aviators when they get their first taste of battle are going to be pitted against the little men from the land of the rising sun.

The boys from the 99th will be flying the Stars and Stripes, I told him, and whether the foe they face is a Japanese, an Italian or Hitler himself you can count on them making every effort to prove the black contingent in Uncle Sam's flying force is the best the world ever saw.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Congress Hears Negro Air Squadron Leaves For Duty

Ohio Solon Puts Matter On Record In 'Skegee Talk

MAY 7 1943

WASHINGTON—(A N P)—First public statement that a Negro air squadron had left for combat duty was made by Congresswoman Frances P. Bolton of Ohio on the floor of the house Thursday, April 15, when, speaking about Tuskegee institute of which she is now a trustee, she said:

"The first squadron of colored flyers has left for combat duty taking the hearts of Tuskegee with them. I am sure the entire membership of this house wishes them well and hopes for them a high record of honor and of glory."

Although Mrs. Bolton's speech is found in its entirety in the Congressional Record for April 15, thousands of copies of which have been printed and distributed throughout the nation to read by any interested person, the war department has sought to prevent its publication in newspapers, stating that no mention of this squadron's departure, should be made until official sanction is given by war department officials.

However, the Office of Censorship has given permission for the Associated Negro Press to reproduce Mrs. Bolton's statement exactly as it appears in the Record.

MAY 7 1943

47

Says 99th Is 'Best Trained'

MAY 11 1943

Pittsburgh Courier

MAY 1 1943

47a

Air Force General Praises Tuskegee Airmen, Raps Washington

By ALBERT ANDERSON for ANP

WASHINGTON, April 29—

ANOTHER AVIATOR KILLED ON LAKES

Pittsburgh Courier

BULLETIN! Due to the many unusual angles that have developed surrounding the shooting incidents, airplane crashes and graft charges, The Pittsburgh Courier has dispatched its managing editor, William G. Nunn, to Selfridge Field for a personal investigation.

MAY 15 1943

(SEE LETTER PAGE 4)

DETROIT, Mich., May 13—Wilmeth Sidat-Singh, second lieutenant in the Army Air Force, and former football star at Syracuse university, was reported missing Sunday night at the Army Air Force base at Selfridge Field after an eight-hour futile search along the shores and in the waters of Lake Huron.

Singh's pursuit plane plummeted into Lake Huron Sunday at noon a few hours after Second Lieut. Jerome Thompson Edwards, Steubenville, O., was killed in a crash at the Oscoda sub-base to Selfridge Field.

The War Department reported Monday that the U. S. Coast Guard was continuing its search for the body of Lt. Wilmeth Sidat-Singh. He was last seen to bail out of his single pursuit ship while ke Huron. His mother, uline E. Sidat-Singh, spressed hope he would turn up alive.

ARMY BOARD TO PROBE CRASHES

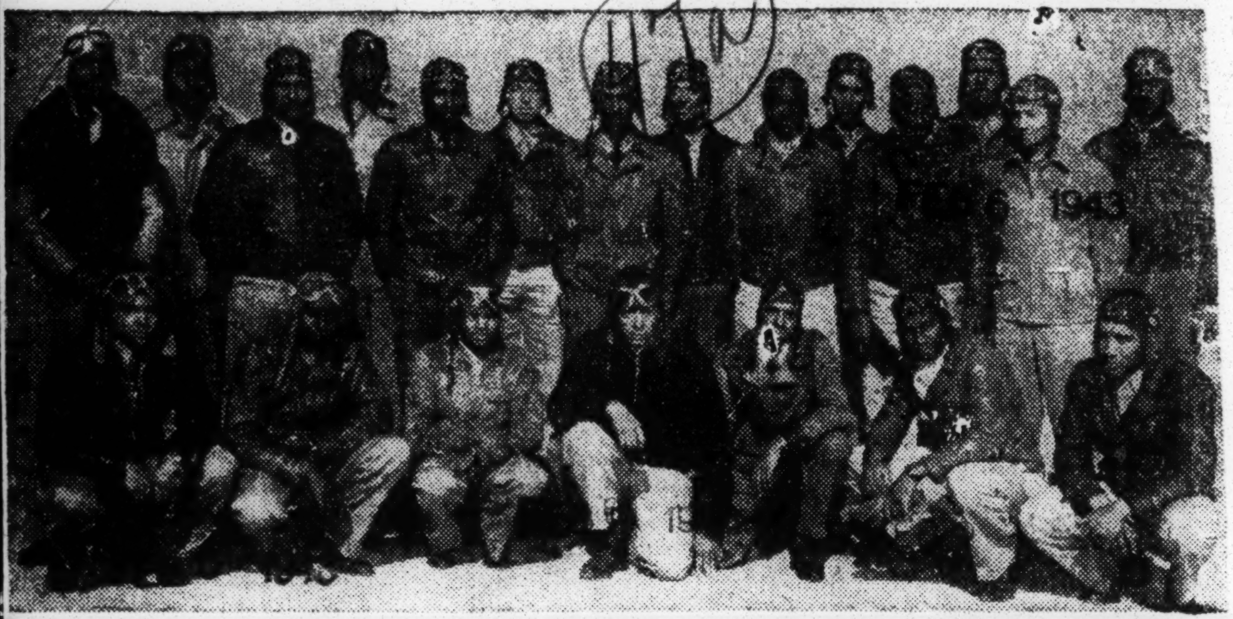
Singh, who had arrived at Selfridge Field last Tuesday, was engaged in a routine flight when his single-seat plane developed engine trouble. The flyer took to his parachute and baled out. An oil smear on the surface of the lake indicated where the plane went down, but no trace of the body had been found late Sunday night. The flyer was a member of the 301st Fighter Squadron of the 332nd Fighter Group. A board of Army officers has been appointed to determine the cause of the accident.

Singh was graduated from the Tuskegee Army Air Force school March 25, this year. He was a graduate of DeWitt Clinton high school, New York, and Syracuse university. Pior to entering the Army he served as a police officer in Washington, D. C., and played basketball with the world champion Washington Bears. His mother, Mrs. Pauline Sidat-Singh, resides in Washington, and his father, Dr. Samuel Sidat-Singh, in New York.

MAY 15 1943

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

Civilian Flying Instructors Train Negro Cadets At Tuskegee



By Bureau of Public Relations, U. S. War Dept., Wash., D. C.

TUSKEGEE, ALABAMA—These are the civilian flying instructors who give the aviation cadets at the Tuskegee Army Flying School their initial experience of climbing into a cockpit. Bottom Row, left to right, Perry Young, Oberlin, O.; Charles H. Flowers, Wadesboro, N. C.; Claude Platt, Fort Worth, Tex.; Charles A. Anderson (Chief Pilot) Bridgeport, Pa.; C. R. Harris, Wilkesboro, N. C.; Wendell R. Lipscomb, Berkley, Cal.; James E. Wright, Savannah, Ga.

Top Row, left to right, Robert Terry, Greensboro, N. C.; John H. Young, III, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Charles W. Stephens, Jr., Monroeville, Ala.; Charles R. Foxx, West Palm Beach, Fla.; Roscoe D. Draper, Haverford, Pa.; Sherman T. Rose, Jefferson City, Mo.; James A. Hill, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Adolph J. Moret, Jr., New Orleans, La.; Earnest Henderson, Mountville, S. C.; Matthew W. Plummer, San Antonio, Tex.; Linkwood Williams, Madison, Ill.; Daniel James, Pensacola, Fla.; Lewis A. Jackson, Argola, Ind.; Milton P. Crenchaw, Little Rock, Ark.

FEB 6 1943

Lieut. Sidat-Singh, Great Negro Athlete, Missing

The Daily Worker New York, N. Y.

MAY 11 1943

The United States Army bulletin which was issued yesterday and reported Air Corps Lieut. Wilmeth Sidat-Singh "missing" after his plane had crashed in Lake Huron, comes as a deep and terrible shock to millions of sports fans all over the country who had come to know the great Negro athlete from his exploits on the football gridiron and basketball court.

Lieut. Sidat-Singh, just recently graduated from the Tuskegee, Alabama, Army Flying School, was on a routine flight over the lake when his single-seater pursuit plane went crashing into the water. Headquarters at Selfridge Field, where he was stationed, reported that eye-witnesses had seen him bail out before the ship crashed but a search for him has proved unsuccessful so far.

As the Daily Worker goes to press there is still no word of Sidat-Singh's whereabouts, but together with millions of other Americans we hope fervently that the search for the Negro Air Corps Lieutenant will prove fruitful and that he will be found alive and well.

* * *

The sports pages have a way of using the word great with much abandon, but in the case of Sidat-Singh the word is used in its real and proper meaning. For if ever there was an athlete who was great, it was this well-built, handsome all-around athlete who is still remembered as one of the most magnificent stars ever developed by Syracuse University.

Not only was he a great star at Syracuse but he was likewise one of the greatest natural athletes in the entire country.

Wilmeth Sidat-Singh was brought up in New York City where his father, Dr. Samuel Sidat-Singh, has long been one of Harlem's most eminent physicians. He went to Clinton High School, where from his first year he was one of the most talented athletes and scholars in the school. Quiet spoken and modest, Sidat-Singh starred on three teams, winning his varsity letters in football, baseball and basketball.

Upon graduation from Clinton he went to Syracuse University where he intended to study medicine. It was in Syracuse that he rose to become one of the greatest athletes in America.

A brilliant halfback, Sidat-Singh sparked his team to victory after victory. He was a wonderful broken field runner, a fine punter and a wonderful passer. He rose to the height of his fame when in the traditional game with Cornell in 1938 (then one of the mightiest teams in the land) he almost single-handedly beat them by throwing three long touchdown passes in the last three minutes of play.

But he was more than just a football star. He was even more talented perhaps on the basketball court. In fact, when upon graduation from college he found it was impossible to land in the football major leagues because of the Jim Crow ban on Negro players, he joined the famed Renaissance Basketball team—an all Negro five which has been ranked by many experts to be the greatest basketball team in the world. For four years he was one of the brightest figures in basketball and was known to fans in every section of the country.

Almost immediately after Pearl Harbor was attacked, however, Sidat-Singh's athletic career came to an end. He enlisted in the Army despite the rotton Jim Crow set-up he knew he was getting into. In short time his superb physical condition and his obvious high mentality and leadership abilities impressed his superior officers and Sidat-Singh was sent to the Army Air Corps Training School at Tuskegee. He graduated from there on March 25, a full-fledged air fighter and was impatiently awaiting transfer to a fighting front when his plane crashed into Lake Huron at about noon Sunday.

* * *

There is little one can say as long as the search for him goes on. But one can point out that Sidat-Singh is a fine representative of the Negro people. His devotion to his country and to the fight against fascism was manifested time and again. One of the happiest days of his life came in 1938 when his team, the "Rennies," played a game for the benefit of Loyalist Spain. Sidat-Singh and his Negro teammates were heart and soul for Spain and when the Veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade presented him with a little badge in token appreciation for his services, he replied in a voice full of emotion: "Long live Loyalist Spain. Salud!"

Such a man is the man who crashed into the water wearing the uniform of a Lieutenant in the United States Army Air Corps.

Salud!

—Nat Low.

MAY 11 1943

Argus
St. Louis, Missour

March 12, 1943

EXPAND AIR TRAINING PROGRAM AT TUSKEGEE

TUSKEGEE, Ala., March — A new chapter of training in the Army Air Forces was opened today on the campus of Tuskegee Institute famous Alabama school for Negro youth, with the arrival of Flying Training Command personnel assigned here to head the newly instigated training program for aviation cadets.

The new program, announced recently by the War Department will see the thousands of cadet reserves inducted immediately into colleges from coast to coast for academic and military courses prior to their actual training. After the program is underway the students will take a five months' course.

March 12, 1943

A limited flying program will be conducted for all students in cooperation with CAA War Training Service.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., STAR
Circ. D. 130,904 S. 187,592

JUL 4- 1943

PROMINENT IN ATHLETICS.

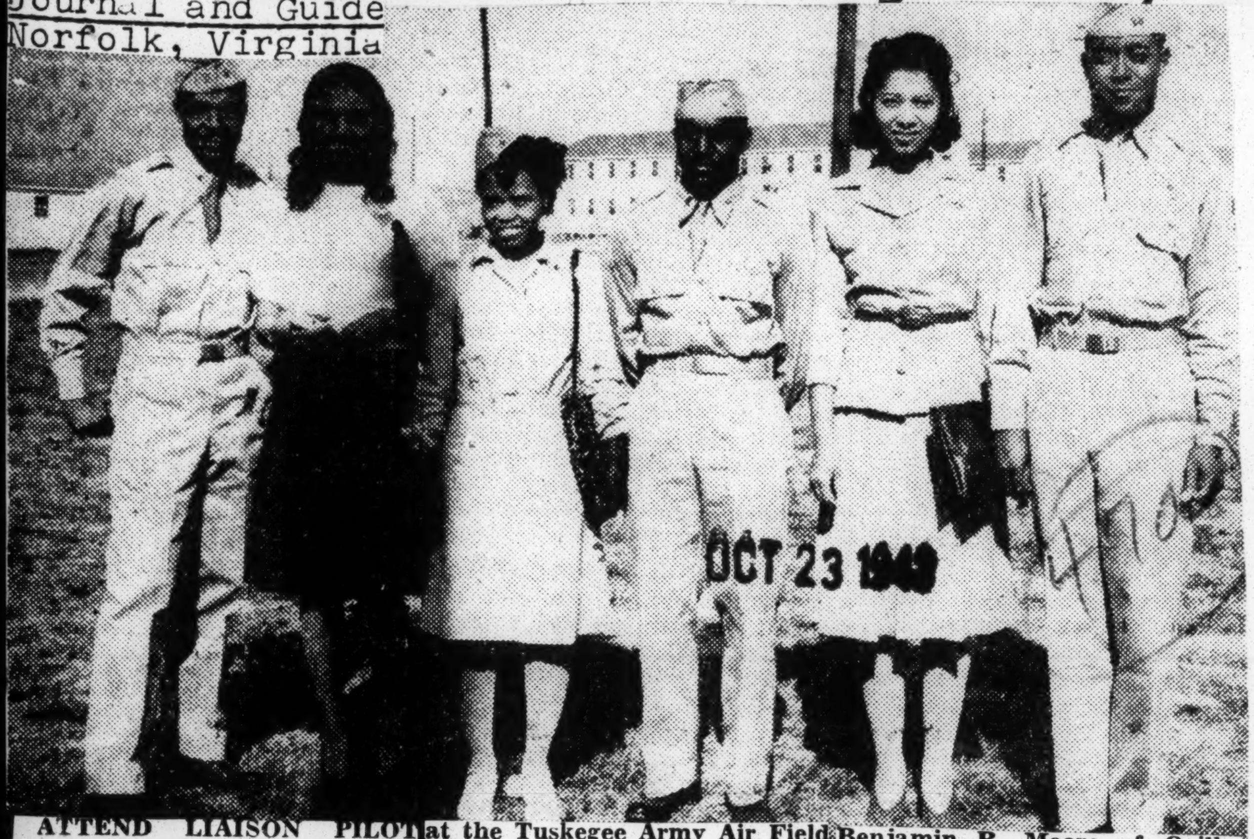
Brazil, Ind., July 3.—(Special)—Lieut. Charles B. Hall, 25 years old, first Negro aviator to down a German plane, is the son of Mrs. Anna Hall of this city and enlisted in Air Corps three weeks before Pearl Harbor. He received his wings at the advanced flying school at Tuskegee University, Alabama. Hall was graduated from Brazil High School and won a scholarship to Eastern Illinois Normal. He was prominent in football and track in high school and at Normal.

47a-1943

Families And Friends On Hand For Fighter And Liaison Pilots' Graduation At Tuskegee Army Air Field

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia



OCT 23 1943

47a

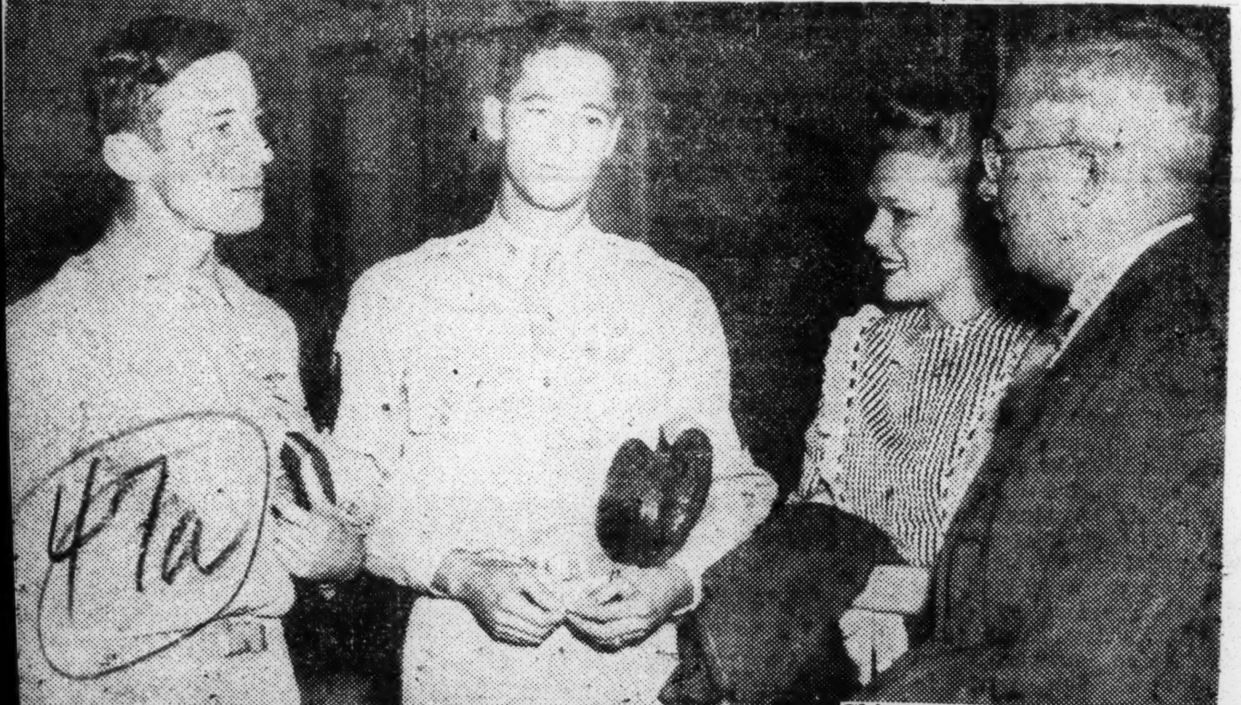
ATTEND LIAISON PILOT GRADUATION— Among the many guests present for the graduation of the first group of Field Artillery officers to receive their liaison pilot wings at the Tuskegee Army Air Field were (left to right): Lt. and Mrs. Chauncy Eskridge of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Miss Willa M. Thomas of Cleveland Ohio; Lt. Benjamin R. Moore of Ocilla, Ga., (both are graduates of Georgia State [illegible]ege) and Cap[illegible] and Mrs. William H. Shannon, Chicago, Ill. (Photos by TAAF)

OCT 23 1943

OCT 23 1943

HAPPY DAY FOR FORMER CADET CAPTAIN—Having the honor of being chosen the outstanding cadet of his class for being the most efficient and all-[illegible] s[illegible]t to Cadet Captain Carl E. Johnson of Char[illegible]sville, Va. Pinning the coveted wings on the ranking cadet immediately following graduation is Miss Arbodia Edith Lee of 1718 South 27th avenue, Birmingham, Ala.

OCT 23 1943



47a

ATTORNEY WINS WINGS—Second Lt. Carroll M. Langston Jr., fingers his "silver wings," awaiting their pinning on by his charming wife, as the commanding officer of Tuskegee Army Air Field, Col. Noel F. Parrish, and Atty. Carroll N. Langston Sr., discuss the young flyer's future. Lt. Langston, prior to his entra[illegible] the cadet corps, was a[illegible] in Chicago. His father is an eminent lawyer of that city. The flyer's wife, the former Miss Marguerite Wilson previously taught in the Chicago [illegible]blic schools.

OCT 23 1943

11 Officers Promoted at Selfridge Field, Michigan

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

By Staff Correspondent

OCT 6 1943

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—Dr. James [illegible] Ramsey [illegible]iladelphia was promoted from captain to major here Sunday. He is group surgeon of [illegible] 332nd Fighter Group.

OCT 16 1943

Ten other promotions included the following:

To Be Captains

First Lieuts. George L. Knox of Indianapolis, operations officer; Franklin B. Beck, dental surgeon; Harry B. Anderson of Indianapolis, flight surgeon;

To Be First Lieutenants

Second Lieuts. Eugene D. Weaver of Philadelphia, personnel officer; Joseph A. Christmas of Durham, N.C., statistical officer; Roosevelt Richardson, weather officer; Robert L. Smith, of Aledander Rapids, La., engineer officer; William A. Banks of Clarksdale, Miss., engineer officer; Edward C. Gleed of Lawrence, Kans., material officer, and Robert G. Pitts of Ottumwa, Iowa, intelligence officer.

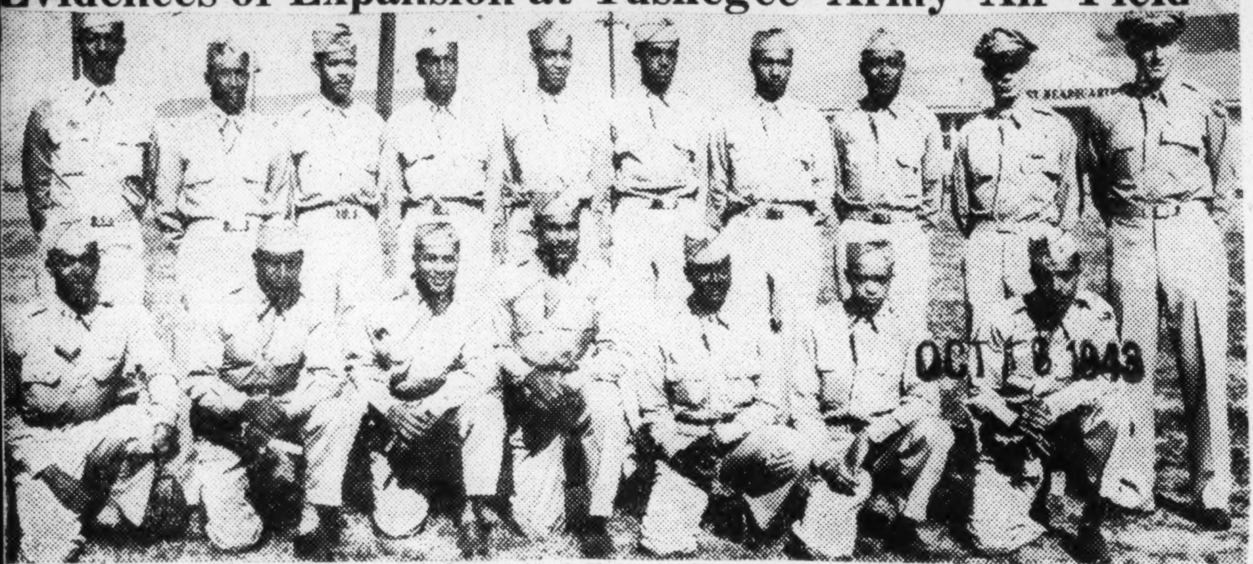
Promotions Lagging

Some of the group's pilots have expressed uneasiness lest they be sent overseas be[illegible] expected numbe[illegible] promotions have been made.

OCT 16 1943

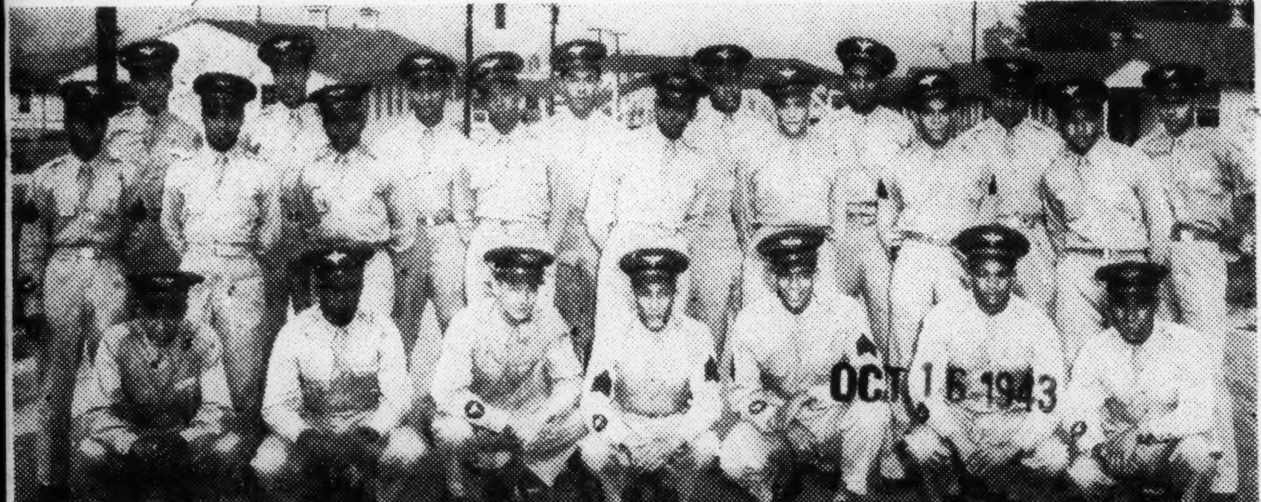
Such a group is said normally to have a lieutenant colonel, 2 majors, 17 first and 17 second lieutenants. The 332nd is considerably short of this standard.

Evidences of Expansion at Tuskegee Army Air Field



OCT 16 1943

Field artillery officers who last week received liaison pilots' wings in the first such graduating class at the expanded Tuskegee Army Air Field. Their training covered nine weeks of preparation for observation and communications flying in connection with operations of ground forces. Shown, left to right, are: Standing—1st Lt. James I. Minor, Washington; 2nd Lts. James E. Woodson, Topeka, Kan.; Arnold D. Grant, Coffeyville, Kan.; 1st Lt. William Y. Rose, Chicago; 2nd Lts. Leander A. Hall, Jr., Mobile, Ala.; Lloyd R. V. Taylor, Atlanta, Ga.; Alvin J. Johnson, Chicago; Capt. William H. Shannon, Chicago; 1st Lt. Charles T. Hood, assistant director of liaison pilot training, and Capt. Errol W. Becthold, director of liaison training of the Tuskegee Army Air Field; kneeling—2nd Lts. Aldrick H. Wilson, Chicago; Benjamin F. Moore, Ocilla, Ga.; Darryl C. Bishop, Houston, Tex.; Harry W. Dung[illegible], Chicago; Leonard E. Wilburn, Columbus, Ohio; Charles G. Dunn, Cincinnati, Ohio, and 1st Lt. Chauncey Eskridge of Washington. The graduating officers will receive their advance and tactical traning at Fort Sill, Okla.



OCT 16 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Members of the last all-fighter group to be graduated from the Tuskegee Army Air Field, who received their wings and commissions last week. Future classes will be split up; some to enter twin-engine training in preparation for bomber work, while the remainder will continue as fighter pilot trainees. In this group, left to right, are: Fi[illegible] row—2nd Lts. R. H. Smith, Baltimore; W. D. Ross, Ashland, Ky.; C. N. Langston, Chicago; C. E. Johnson, Charlottesville, Va.; G. J. Haley, Bath, N.Y.; Flight Officer William Cross, Cleveland, Ohio, and 2nd Lt. C. B. Johnson, Philadelphia; second row—2nd Lts. C. B. Browne, N[illegible] Jones, N.Y.C.; N. W. Scales, Austin, Tex.; C. W. Newman, St. Louis; M. A. Harris, Boston; [illegible] F. May, [illegible]anapolis; P. G. Goodenough, Washington; G. M. Rhodes, Brooklyn, N.Y.; third row—W[illegible] Alsbrook, Kansas City, Kan.; W. N. Morgan, Omaha, Neb.; A. Simmons, Jacksonville, Fla.; D. B. Ponder, Chicago; C. L. Browder, Wilmington, N.C.; N. V. Nelson, Chicago; E. W. Watkins, Freeman, W.Va., and H. B. Scott, Jersey City, N.J. Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, addressed the graduates. Cadet honors for outstanding excellence as officer candidates were awarded to Carl E. Johnson of Charlottesville, Va., first; Carroll N. Langston, Jr., Chicago, and Gene C. Brown, of N.Y.C. Lt. Browne, who is 19, is said to be the youngest colored pilot in Army Air Forces.

OCT 16 1943

Ready For Crack At Dictators

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

NOV 7 1943

47a

A quartet of recently commissioned 2nd Lieutenants, graduates of the Twin Engine School of Flying at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, eagerly talk over the prospects of contemplated bombing forays over Germany or Japan, when they will ultimately complete their training in B-25 Medium Bombers at Mather Field, California. Pictured from left to right, are: [illegible] Lieuten[illegible] Henry F. Fletcher, San [illegible]nio, Texas; Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, California; Jerome D. Spurlin, Chicago; and Perry E. Hudson, Jr., of Atlanta.—(PHOTO BY TAAF)

NOV 7 1943 NOV 7 1943

2-Engine Bomber Pilots Now Training at Tuskegee

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Prepare for the Forthcoming Activation of All-Colored Bomber Squadron; U[illegible] AT-10's

OCT 16 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Training of pilots for flying twin-engine planes officially began last week at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, in preparation for the forthcoming activation of an all-colored bomber squadron.

Major Clay Albright, who is said to have taught every colored fighter pilot in the Army Air Forces how to fly fighter aircraft, was selected to head the school. Lieutenant Milton B. Hall of Owensboro, Ky., will assist him in an administrative capacity. Instructors are 1st Lieut. Leonard B. Cro[illegible] and [illegible]t. Robert B. Meagher.

OCT 16 1943

Pilot Selection

Pilot trainees for twin engine training will be selected from the Upper Basic class of cadets, and are to receive 70 hours of advanced flying training. After this they will be transferred elsewhere for actual bomber pilot training.

The type of aircraft to be used in the twin-engine course is the AT-10BH (Beechcraft), or the "assimilated [illegible] bom[illegible]" Ingenuity and skill are required of pilots who operate them.

OCT 16 1943

Instructors from Turner Field, Ga., have been attached here to familiarize mechanics in the fundamental knowledge of keeping these ships serviced.

47a-1943

FIRST NEGRO FIGHTER GROUP

Pilots Beg To Stay In Air, Set For Crack At Facists

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

SEP 11 1943

By DETON J. BROOKS
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—From early morning until the last rays of closing day vanish from the horizon, grim, determined, nerveless pilots of the all-Negro 332nd Fighter Group work and train for the moment they must hunch over gun sights and draw a bead on sallow Japs or haughty Germans in some aerial battleground high above a far-away foreign land.

The continuous roaring rumble of fast P-40 and P-47 pursuit ships thundering across Selfridge Field or the gunnery range 200 miles north near Oscoda, Mich., are a constant reminder of what these boys are about.

Theirs is the grim business of preparing for battle — a battle of speed, where twisting, diving planes hurtle through the air, where trigger-haired judgment is the lone bulwark against eternity, where nerve and courage and personal skill are as essential to victory as perfectly constructed planes.

When I visited Selfridge last week, observing these dark flyers as they went through maneuvers and later talking or playing cards or drinking a bottle of beer with them in their quarters, I got a new kind of thrill.

Cream of Manpower

Here was assembled a large group of physically and mentally perfect young men representing the cream of the nation's manpower, regardless of color. A few months ago they were spread all over the United States, going about their peaceful occupation while today they are members of the most daring branch of the armed services — the Army Air Force, and they are organized into the first full-fighter group of Negroes.

Their organization is three times larger than the famous 99th Pursuit Squadron now in service overseas. In fact, there are three squadrons—the 100th, the 301st, and the 302nd. As a group, they are a complete administrative and tactical unit.

FATHER AND SON COMBINATION

1ST LT. ROBERT B. TRESVILLE, JR.
Commander of the 100th Squadron at Selfridge Field, Mich., who is a West Pointer—the first Negro to graduate from the Military academy into the Army Air Corps.

WARRANT OFFICER ROBERT B. TRESVILLE, SR.
Regular army band master who has a long record of service and is proud of his son in the Air Corps.

While all these men are graduate pilots, they are still training and the competition is keen. Their commander, Col. Robert R. Selway Jr., set the pattern when he told me that the unit was overstaffed. "I prposely wanted it that way, so that every pilot would feel that he had to work to stay with the group. Those men who can't make the grade must go. Only the best will remain."

This spirit helps to keep the men on their toes and keenly interested in their training program. If one thinks that because these flyers look glamorous or because they lead a daring life that their schedule isn't rigorous and hard, a short visit to Selfridge will disabuse their minds.

When a fledgling officer arrives at the post after receiving his wings at the Tuskegee Flying school, he is usually sent up to Oscoda for a period of two or three weeks. The training base there is cut out of the wilderness. There is a beautiful concrete runway and hangars, but the pilots live in very simple huts which are camouflaged among tall trees. From the air all you can see is the hangars and runways.

Here, far away from girls and night clubs, they fly on an average of six hours a day and sometimes they go on night missions. It is here that they practice ground-strafing and skip-bombing. The technique in both of these maneuvers, as it was explained to me, is to keep from crashing into the ground while dropping low enough for withering machine gun fire blasting from wing guns to hit troops walking along or to be low enough for demolition bombs to be dropped on machine gun nests or huts.

This takes plenty of nerve and practice. For a plane may be circling at a thousand feet when it spots a likely target. It peels off and dives almost vertically. The pilot had better not misjudge his distance and forget to pull out soon enough since he can't make that mistake twice.

After a period at Oscoda, the flyers return to Selfridge. There, after breakfast, which must be over by 7:45 a.m. every morning, they report to the flying line. In their ready rooms, squadron commanders with the help of instructors outline the day's mission, and from 8 o'clock until dark someone is in the air.

Strenuous Program

At Selfridge they perfect the technique of formation flying. They practice gunnery, firing at towed-sleeve targets, and they begin and end cross country long distance hops.

On bad days when they can't fly, they either study tactics in the ready rooms or go to the pistol or skeet ranges for practice. Skeet shooting is very valuable to pilots because it teaches them to follow a moving target.

They are hard at work six days a week. They only have one day off and this doesn't necessarily fall on Sunday as someone is flying every day.

Recently orders were issued requiring all pilots who haven't completed 80 hours of flying time with the group to be in bed at 10 p.m every night with the exception of the night before and their night off. The colonel took this action to protect them from having accidents as a result of overfatigue. All of this indicates how strenuous their program is.

In the evenings after the day's work is over, they loiter in the club room of their BOQ (Bachelor Officer's Quarters to the uninitiated) where they play cards or drink a few bottles of beer or, as most of them do, eat candy. If they are lucky and have completed their 80 hours training, then they can leave the post. Some of them like to spend an evening with the girls in Detroit.

At 10 o'clock those that are under restrictions must be in their rooms for the checkup by the Officer of the Day.

It's quite a strenuous routine; sometimes a few will start to grumble a little in protest of constant flying. Then a fellow officer will pull out a letter he's received from a buddy on the battlefront with the 99th and read "Get all the flying in you can. Don't wait to be told; beg to stay in the air. That's your protection when you get over here." That sober thought stops the protest and the boys get ready for another mission.

Instruction Gives Group Opportunity In Unusual Field

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

By ELLIOTT J. BARNETT

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala.—(ANP)—Tuskegee Institute's division of aero-mechanics started its second year of existence last week with a gain in enrollment and vastly supplemented equipment, William C. Curtis, director of the school of mechanical industries announced.

Open to freshmen and sophomores, the aero-mechanic course covers a two year period of laboratory work and lectures designed to fit the students to pass the aircraft and engines examination given by the Civil Aeronautics authority, to obtain the much coverted A and E. licenses. The students spend about 30 hours a week in the shops and hangar in addition to their regular academic studies. Upon completion of the prescribed curriculum, a trade diploma [illegible]arded by the college.

OCT 1 - 1943

VITAL TRAINING

OCT 1 - 1943

"This u[illegible] of instruction is set up to give Negro youths an opportunity to participate in the field of aircraft repair because there is a distinct need for this training at present and the coming post-war period," Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee, said in a recent interview.

The course originated in the summer of 1940 as an outgrowth of the definite need for aircraft mechanics to service the planes owned by Tuskegee's Flying field. An intensive search failed to uncover a sufficient number of competent mechanics so George L. Washinton, at that time the director of the school of mechanical industries, and at present the civilian manager of the 66th Air Force Flying Training detachment, presented the idea of training the necessary personnel to do their own maintenance work to Dr. Patterson. The far-sighted president quickly saw the merit of the program, with the unlimited opportunities for the training of Negro youths, and gave the proposition his full support.

Four shops are coordinated in the presenting of the courses. They are air-craft engines. aircraft fabric and repair, aircraft painting and dope, and aircraft sheet metal.

There is well over $250,000 worth of equipment for actual shop work. Two P-40's, one P-39, and assembly yard, Allison 1710 liquid cooled engines, Pratt and Whitney and Wright twin rowed air cooled engines, comprise the modern material with which the classes become familiar daily.

OFF-RESERVATION SCHOOL

OCT 1 - 1943

The school has be[illegible]ed by an off-reservation school set up by the federal government and by a state training program, under the supervision of Wilson S. Allen. The off-reservation school has been used to train mechanics for the Tuskegee Army Air Field Sub-depot, and other flying fields scattered over the country. Highly trained technicians in specialized fields constitute a well rounded faculty.

OCT 1 - 1943

Since T[illegible]kegee is th[illegible]y Negro college, that offers a complete and thorough training in aircraft mechanics, the geographical distribution of the students is large. At present eight states are represented by the enrollment records in the registrar's office, with New York and Texas students trav[illegible]ing the greatest d[illegible].

OCT 1 - 1943

While, going through [illegible] shops and hangar on an inspection tour and watching the seriousness registered on the boys faces as they listen to lectures or as they study and work on some unit of a P-40, the impression is gained that these youths know what they want and they intend to make full use of the chance to fulfill their ambitions.

Hint 332nd To Leave For Combat Soon

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—The departure of the first all-Negro fighter group of the army air force, the 332d fighter group, for a combat area is imminent. An inform[illegible] source in the war departmen[illegible] revealed that the date of departure [illegible] the destination have been set. Th[illegible] the group for which Lt Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr, returned from the North African theater of operations to assume command They are stationed at Selfridge field, Mich.

NOV 16 1943

And when that glorious day arrives, [illegible]4 pilots and a flock of enlisted men and their officers who make up the ground crew, will be on their way to put into practice the training for which the government thas spent roughly $4,000,000 Further, it is authentically learned, when they arrive at their destination, they will get into the cockpits of a flying ship of superior capabilities, which the army force has said [illegible] little about to date.

"TURN, TURN, TURN"

NOV 16 1943

Throughout their training both at Tuskegee and at Selfridge field, the men have been flying P-40s made by Curtis-Wright, and P-39s, made by Bell Aircraft. Of the former, Col. Davis had said upon his return from Sicily that all they could do waste "turn, turn, turn."

A fighter group is comprised of three squadrons . Each squadron normally [illegible] commanded by a lieutenant colonel, an[illegible]e group itself by a full colonel. It is not unlikely that young Davis may be raised in rank before the group departs.

NOV 16 1943

Meanwhile, the war department has officially announced that 12 pilots from Tuskegee and Selfridge have been ordered to report to Mahter field, Cal., by Nov. 15 [illegible] begin their training in the handling of B-25 bombers. Already a group has arrived at Honde Army Air field, Texas, where they are undergoing training as navigators and bombardiers.

GRADUATES LISTED

The three who have proceeded from Selfridge are 2nds Lts. Daniel James Jr., P[illegible]la, Fla.; Charles I. Williams, [illegible] Ohio; [illegible]ames Y Carter, Winston Salem, [illegible] N. C. Those from Tuskegee, all graduates in the Nov. 3 class, are 2nd Lts. Henry R. Campbell, Jr., NewYork; Henry F. Fletcher, San Antonie, Texas; Perry E. Hudson, Jr., Atlanta. Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N J ;Haldane King, Jamaica, N. eatr Y.;Re Y.; Jerome D. Spurlon, Chicago; Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore; William D. Thompkins, Fall River, Mass; and Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo.

NOV 16 1943

The war department bureau of public relations explained that navigators and bombardiers will now perform dual functions. They will all learn navigating first and then bombarding techniques.

The reason for this change in practice, it [illegible] said [illegible] because of the loss[illegible] effecti[illegible] of a bomber should either of the two skilled men become disabled in the course of a mission.

FIRST NEGRO CADETS ARRIVE AT HONDO FIELD

NOV 6 1943

Call Post Cincinnati, Ohio

Study Aerial Navigation At Texas Field in 15-Week Grind

NOV 6 1943

HON[illegible] ARMY AIR FIELD, HOND[illegible]s —Thirty Negro navigatio[illegible]ts have arrixed at this bas[illegible] the first Negro unit to be enrolled as aerial navigation students in the AAF Central Flying Training Command.

Under the leadership of Aviation Cadet Arnold W. Galimore, 21-year-old flight marcher from New York City, the members of Hondo Field's "Squadron 10" reported to Captain Frank H. Sheffield, senior tactical officer of the air base's Group III, and were immediately launched into the first busy day of the huge school's intensive 15 weeks' training program.

Many of the new navigation cadets have had prim[illegible]r flight training at Tuskeg[illegible] Alabama. Selected for final classification as combat crew navigators, these men reported at Hondo for advanced training along with other Negro soldiers formerly assigned to various branches of the Army Ground Forces. A number of the latter were non-commissioned officers before transferring to the Army Air Forces.

A high percentage of these cadets had either been graduated from or were attending colleges and universities throughout the United States at the outbreak of the War.

Assigned to give "Squadron 10" initial orientation lectures at Hondo was 1st Lieutenant George F. McInerney of Group III's instructor's school staff. Lieut. McInerney is a flight commander at the air base, thoroughly trained in assisting new students to get into the swing of the stiff Hondo Field training program with a minimum of lost time.

Cadet Galimore will continue to serve as flight marcher for the members of "Squad[illegible]0." The young navigation st[illegible] was a staff sergeant in the Medical Corps before beginning cadet training. He has four years' service in the Army. The son of Mrs. Hazel Tudor, 244 West 137th Street, New York City, Cadet Galimore attended City College, New York, and New York University College of Engineering before becoming a member of the armed forces.

Upon succesful completion of the navigation course at Hondo Field, the members of Hondo's first Negro cadet squadron will receive commissions as flight officers or second lieutenants. They then will be available for active duty on the fighting fronts, or will receive asignments as navigation instructors in the United States.

Captain Sheffield said of the new cadets: "I am well pleased with their soldierly bearing and eagerness to begin training. We are confident they will prove their worth in the rig[illegible]ogram that lies ahead."

NOV 6 1943

99th Squadron Divided for Italy Invasion

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

OCT 2 1943

Split of Tuskegee Flyers Affects Unit

Like Family Death

ACTION IS FIERCE SOUTH OF NAPLES

Captain Roberts with Section That Stays Behind

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in North Africa

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expessly forbidden.]

ADVANCED SICILIAN AIR-BASE (By Cable, Censored) — The separation of [illegible] from embarkati[illegible]ints near here is like death in a family. Recently we stood grim and silent as we watched part of the 99th Fighter Squadron leave for Italy, not knowing whether the entire outfit would ever be united again.

OCT 2 1943

There were a few damp eyes among those who were left, for all of us had eaten and bunked together for months, and even toughened soldiers regard their comrades as brothers after all have shared a common danger. Now as we wait our turn to set foot on Mussolini's former kingdom, we watch the daily news carefully.

In Battle South of Naples

Some of our comrades were in the fierce fighting last week with the Fifth Army south of Naples. Instead of being frightened by the stiff German resistance in Italy, all men I have talked to are anxious to get there and take a hand in the scrap.

No outfit makes headline news every day, but after watching this squadron since its first combat with the enemy in June, I can say that they are good soldiers every day.

Capt. Geo. S. Roberts, commanding officer since th[illegible]arture of Lieut. Co[illegible] B. O. [illegible], gets co-operatio[illegible]m pilots and ground personnel in every respect.

OCT 2 1943

The men, who arrived here plump and chubby, are now lean and weather-beaten. In the ordnance u[illegible] recently booked for Italy, I met S/Sgt. John Reynolds, of Camden, N.J., former All-CIAA center at Johnson C. Smith; Pvt. Raymond Cato, West Point, N.Y.; Sgt. John Williams, Albany, N.Y.; Wilbert Wallace, NYC; Pvt. James Knowles, Mound City, Ill.; Pvt. Joe Bowser, Tunis, N.C., and Pfc. Albert Porter, Springfield, Ohio.

Deny Story 99th Is "Not Satisfactory"

OCT 2 1943

WASHINGTON

In reply to an article in Time Magazine last week which talked of the probable assignment of the 99th Pursuit Squadron now in Italy to the coastal air force and which also intimated that the High Command was not satisfied with its overseas performance, the Office of Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding general of the Army Air Force, issued a statement this week.

Rumors Are Unwounded

It said that it had no knowledge of any such proposal to assign the 99th to the Coastal Air Force and that any rumor to the contrary was without foundation.

As to the record of the 99th Squadron overseas, the official position is that Lieut. Col. Davis in his full statement last week told the correct story and the War Department will stand on Colonel Davis's statement.

OCT 2 1943

The War [illegible]tment is also checking on Ollie Stewart's report that the 99th has been divided. No official comment could be made at this time. Unofficially, it was said the division might be a good thing for it might mean that the 99th Squadron is being integrated with other American air force units.

47a-1943

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

NOV 13 1943

BRIEFING—A group of fighter pilots get details of their mission before take-off. Note map on ground. Seen in above photo are 1st Lt. Lee Rayford, Washington, D. C. [illegible] to camera); 1st Lt. Herbert V. Clark, Pine Bluff, Ark., (center, background); Capt. George S. Roberts, Fairmont, W. Va., [illegible]re-headed), and 1st Lt. Erwin B. Lawrence, Cleveland, Ohio (scratching neck). (Exclusive photo by Journal and Guide war correspondent).

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

47a

NOV 13 1943

INSPECTING PARACHUTE—Sgt. William O. Warner, Atlanta, Ga., must carefully inspect and o.k. each parachute periodically. Work of the parachute rigger is most vital, because if one of them fails, the pilot just doesn't get a new one. (Exclusive photo by Journal and Guide war correspondent).

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

NOV 13 1943

47a

LOADING THE GUNS — Sgt. Morris Beavers, 23, 111 Oaone street, Atlanta, Ga., one of the armorers is placing a chain of .50 calibre bullets in the cartridge chamber of [illegible] machine guns mounted in the wings of P-40 Warhawks. (Exclusive photo by Journal and Guide war correspondent).

Flyers at Selfridge Field Tell of Close Calls in Air

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

OCT 16 1943

One Says He "Kissed Death" Twice, Others Tell of "Dying Motors" Crashes in Mid-air

By DOUGLASS HALL
Staff Correspondent

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—In addition to pilling up thousands of hours of fighting flying time, pilots in the 332nd Fighter Squadron also have exciting experiences "on practically every trip up."

These exciting moments range all the way from a plane cutting off in mid air to a crash in the skies. But the boys are not nervous about it all. They laugh it off and go right back for more.

The most common occurence in the career of the fighters is the cutting of the motor in the air. This does not happen so often now that there are a shipment of new planes on the field and the old "motor-stopping" ones have been grounded. They call these close calls "Twik-Experiences"

47a

"Kissed Death" Twice

No flyer here has been any closer to death and still lives than Lt. Woodrow W. Crockett, 1618 W. Eighteenth Street, Little Rock, Ark., who has on two occasions "kissed death."

"My first exciting experience came when I crashed with another plane in mid-air. My plane was damaged [illegible] landed without serious mishap," he said

"The second came when I was coming in and a tire blew out. My plane crashed and I was trapped under it. I escaped that with a black eye and a few scratches on my leg. They cut me out of the plane.

"I want to get over and get a crack at some of those Germans before I kill myself," he kidded.

Lt. Crocket has 375 flying hours—150 of them fighter.

Gets Lost in the Clouds

Lt. Andrew Turner, 1000 Westford Place, Northeast, Washington, wtinessed his highlight experience while still a student at Tuskegee Institute when he got lost while flying in formation.

"We ran into clouds," he explained, "and I lost the man I was following. I flew around trying to find a break in the clouds and my gas was running low all the time. Finally I saw a break and landed at [illegible] Field. The flyer he was following crashed.

Lt. Turner has 475 flying hours, 225 of them fighter.

Lt. Mac Ross is an old timer around here. He finished in the first class at Tuskegee Institute, March 6, 1942, and has 650 hours, 187 of them "fighter."

Only One to Bail Out

He is the only flyer here who has bailed out of a ship and that was his highlight experience. "The plane went bad and I bailed out," Lt. Ross stated, "and that is the only mishap I have had." He is a native of Dayton, Ohio.

The motor of the ship that Lt. William B. Ellis of Washington was flying actually stopped in the air. "Yes sir," he stated, "just c[illegible]ck on again—but not be[illegible]I had done a lot of thinking and praying." He has 260 hours in the air.

Lt. Willie S. Hunter just "ran over a plane that happened to be parked in the lane he landed in. He got "grounded" for it, but even at that he has 323 flying hours, 50 of them fighter.

He "Just Didn't See It"

"I just didn't see the plane," Lt. Hunter stated, "but I had a terrible feeling when I struck it." He is a native of Albany, Ga.

First Lt. Daniel (Chappie) James, J[illegible] Pensacola, Fla., has 1560 flying hours to [illegible] credit. An instructor of primary aviation while at Tuskegee Institute, commands the squadron which has about 10,000 hours in the air.

"I had my narrow escape, too," he stated. "Once I was much closer to trees than I thought I was—right at the top of them. My motor has cut off several times."

Lt. Joseph Elsberry of Langston, Okla., was diving when his plane ran out of gas and cut off. He turned on another tank and saved the day. He has 500 flying hours—about 240 fighter.

Such experiences are everyday occurences with the Fighting 332nd and they still think flying is the best game in the world.

OCT 16 1943

Ferry Command Pilot Tells Adventures On Ocean Hop

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

CRACK BRITISH NEGRO FLYER VISITS

Capt. Fred Hutcherson Jr., only Negro ever to fly in the celebrated Ferry Command, pictured being greeted by friends on his recent furlough trip to his home here. Though only 30 years old, Capt. Hutcherson boasts experiences which would chill the spine of the average airman many years his senior. Here he shakes hands with Mrs. Ida M. Scott, commanding general of the Fred Hutcherson Jr. unit. In the picture also are Dr. James Scott and Mrs. Hutcherson.

By SAM LACY

He is only 30 years of age but the tales he can tell of his actual experiences in the air would grizzle the emotionally-inclined listener overnight. He is a Negro and, therefore, is not one of God's "favored" children who can enter the field of their choice, but even so, he has spent more than one-third of his life in the cockpit of an airplane.

In fact, Capt. Fred Hutcherson, Jr., began flying at the age of 17, and for the 13 years since, has been darting into a sun-swept cloud for the fun of it, or plummeting to within 50 feet of a glacier-bedecked surface of the North Atlantic for "safety's" sake.

The Illinois-born Negro was back in Chicago last week, here for a brief visit with relatives and friends before returning to his job as transport pilot with British West Indian Airways. His present post, while generously sprinkled with dangers, is something of a respite for him as he looks back upon the three years of service he has just completed with the government of Great Britain.

An instructor in the Royal Air Force training system, Captain Hutcherson was in a strategic position to break into the Ferry Command when that arm was established as a means of getting American-built planes to England under lend-lease. Although a contract requirement was that candidates for the Ferry Command "must be of the white race," the record of Capt. Hutcherson in the RAF was such that the exception was made in his case. Thus he became the only Negro ever to undertake, or be assigned to, the perilous task of delivering planes to war-torn Britain at the height of the Nazi blitz on the isles.

Real Work Begins

It was then the real work began. There were to be no more days of flittering around upstairs, dipping a wing into the cumuli or standing the crate on its tail for the thrill it gives. Ahead of him was action of all varieties and types, but none of the kind that he himself could manufacture.

It was, as a matter of fact, his first trip across that provided the first of a long line of nerve-testers which, in reasonably short time, reduced the ranks of those who went in along with Captain Hutcherson from 33 to 16.

"We were enroute to England with our first group of bombers," said Captain Hutcherson in a Defender interview, "and were going along at a fair clip. Since it was our first trip out, it was natural that all of us were keyed to a high nervous pitch.

"My navigator had just told me we were passing the halfway mark when we received a check on the fuel supply from the controlroom. It told us we had about 96 gallons of fuel left, enough for 35 or 40 minutes more of flying on that engine, before switching to our second engine.

"Suddenly and without warning, the motor went dead, stopped cold.

"We were at 23,000 feet, but when engine stopped we began to do the inevitable. We started to drop. I tried frantically to switch to the other engine, at the same time fighting with the instrument panel in an effort to revive the stalled motor.

Cold Feel Tenseness

"Things looked bad. I knew that there was little hope the second engine would get going sufficiently to keep us from hitting the water of the middle Atlantic, because it is customary to allow yourself plenty of time to switch from one engine to another, under normal conditions. Moreover, this is usually done while the first engine is still running in order that the second can be sufficiently warmed up before putting the weight of the plane on it.

"Anyway, we were down to 19,000 feet and losing altitude fast. Everyone was quiet. I could feel the tenseness of the atmosphere, could almost hear the inward pleadings of those brave guys whose eyes were pinned on me. The stutter of the stalled engine brought but little relief, we were only 17,000 feet away from the white caps and though this was no time for picturesque words or story-book description, they looked like a million outstretched hands reaching up after us.

"At slightly better than 16,000 feet the stalled motor caught up and the burst was like music to our ears. The rest of the journey was uneventful but I am satisfied the experience was one that will live forever in the memories of that crew. The hair of my radio operator, a likeable chap from Glasgow, turned from deep black to chalk gray in the course of those few minutes.

His name was Waddy Cohen, Captain Hutcherson said, and he was killed last March in the crash of his B-24 bomber in Bermuda.

Another hair-raising experience fell to his lot a few months later on a trip from Greenland to Iceland, Captain Hutcherson declared. Here again the motors threatend to stop and he was not more than 40 or 50 feet above the ocean waves before he could bring his reserve supply of gas into play. Landing was on the beach of Iceland and, so pleased was he with his miraculous escape, Captain Hutcherson effected the delivery of the machine there.

Still another narrow escape from death, and one which doubtless would have had world-shaking consequences, occurred in May of 1942. He was on a flight from Iceland to Scotland and had ducked down to 500 feet in order to get under bad weather.

About 400 miles south of his taking-off point, Captain Hutcherson saw a huge shape loom up ahead of him in the darkness. He wasn't sure what he should make of it, but decided in short order that he would have to do something. He banked off to his right and at the same time saw a large American plane go off to its right.

A head-on collision with a plane he later learned was carrying Airforce General H. H. Arnold, was thus averted by split-second thinking and action. Intelligence, he said, had failed to notify either him or the pilot of the other plane that an opposite-bound machine was in the air.

Experiences such as these are numerous in log-book of the dapper young sky veteran. Which bears out what was said earlier, that the job he now holds with BWL Airways is soft stuff to what he has been through.

Married but with no children, young Captain Hutcherson is a native of Evanston, Ill. He obtained his first air "ways" under an old German ace of the first World war, Roy Guthier. Gutheir was a teacher at Sky Harbor, which is located about five miles north of the Curtiss-Wright airfield, where Captain Hutcherson spent much of his boyhood watching planes and tinkering with the engines of old abandoned crates.

He loves flying and $1,000 a month for doing something you love ain't hay! Or maybe you think so.

JUL 3 1943

47a-1943

6 Rated As Only Negro Liaison Pilots In U.S.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

MAR 27 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY FLYING SCHOOL, Ala. — Six former members of the Army Flying school here who made enviable records with the field artillery branch of the service are now the only Negro liaison pilots in the United States, it was learned this week.

These men who have the rating of staff sergeants, but serve in the capacity of officers, are Staff Sgts. Caldwell, Morris, Rainey, Hickman, Johnson and Christian. Three are with the 92nd Division and three with the 93rd.

Assigned first to Fort Sill and after remaining there five weeks, it was decided to train them as liaison pilots, in the course of which, it is understood all made outstanding records.

Of the six men, Langston Caldwell, a pilot, was considered here a top ranking student. He is capable of becoming a leader in aviation, as he demonstrated here and at Ft. Sill, and now leads the air observation unit at Fort Huachuca.

Only Liaison Pilots

The air observation department of a field artillery unit, it was explained, requires five officer pilots and five staff sergeant pilots per unit. The six former Tuskegee men, therefore, are America's only colored liaison pilots. Staff Sgts. Caldwell and Johnson are performing the duties of captains, while Morris, Rainey, Hickman and Christian shoulder the responsibilities of first lieutenants.

MAR 27 1943

Caldwell, Morris and Rainey, airmen here agree, have qualifications to become service pilots in the Army Air Corps. In Waco, Texas, where they took flight checks, they were advised to have their commanding officer, Col. F. V. Kimble, to certify them for the service pilots course because they had experience in heavy aircraft and would be of value in the service or ferry command. The commanding officer however, is said to have refused to give authorization for this work.

On their return to Ft. Sill, the three men are said to have been advised that they would receive commissions as did many of the whites. However, reportedly because of the color, they received rating as staff sergeants, acting in the capacity of officers.

Caldwell and Rainey, it is said, have more than 400 hours in the air to their credit, in aircraft up to 650 horse power, while Morris has 300 credit-hours in aircraft up to 450 horse power. So skilled are they that the only way to distinguish them from the white officer-instructors ,is by noting the color of their skin.

For several months past, a white colonel has been here at Tuskegee Army Flying school recuriting men for liason flying with the field artillery. Many of the men stationed here have expressed regret that these six qualified Negro pilots have not received their commissions and permitted to take part in the training and recruiting here of colored liason pilots.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Sidat-Singh Is Missing; 2 Others Die

MAY 15 1943

Fear Football Star Dragged Down By Chute In Lake

Two colored flyers were killed and a third was reported missing in army plane crashes over the past week end.

MAY 15 1943

EAST TAWAS, Mich. — Second Lt. Wilmeth Sidat-Singh, of Washington, D. C., nationally known as an athlete, was reported by the Army headquarters at Selfridge Field to be missing after his single-seat pursuit plane crashed in Lake Huron, near here, Sunday.

Army authorities told the Defender late Monday that no trace of the missing flyer or his parachute could be found, despite a continuous search since Sunday noon. Crash boats and dragnets have patrolled a wide area of the lake and searchers have conducted an unceasing hunt through the surrounding woods.

MAY 15 1943

LT. WILMETH SIDAT-SINGH

Michigan State Highway policemen reported seeing Sidat-Singh bail out of his plane, but the ensuing search by them revealed no indication of his whereabouts. It was assumed that a large oil slick, found on the lake, marked the final resting place of the plane.

Dragged Down By Chute

Fears are being held out that the young pilot landed on the lake surface and was dragged under by the chute when it became waterlogged.

Sidat-Singh was born in Washington, D. C., the son of Mrs. Pauline Webb. On the marriage of his mother to Dr. Samuel Sidat-Singh, an East Indian physician with an extensive New York practice, the youth assumed the surname of his step-father.

MAY 15 1943

Dr. Sidat-Singh, after enabling the lad to complete his high school education, entered him at Syracuse university where he later won nation-wide fame as a football player, basketball star and track athlete. His gridiron efforts, particularly in his senior year when he forward-passed Cornell to defeat in the last seconds of a hectic 20-19 battle, captured the attention of the country's best-known sports writers.

Grantland Rice, in a syndicated column, rated Sidat-Singh as "greater than Columbia's immortal Sid Luckman," the Chicago Bear star who has frequently been selected on all-star professional teams.

MAY 15 1943

His first venture into professional basketball was with the Seagram five, of New York. He played with that outfit in the 1940 professional basketball tournament. The following year he performed with the New York Renaissance, after which he showed in the uniform of the Washington Bruins, which team was the foundation of the Washington Bears, current world's pro champions.

MAY 15 1943

Prior to joining the air forces, Sidat-Singh served as an auxiliary policeman in Washington.

STROTHERS, Ala. — Second Lt. James Brothers, like Sidat-Singh a graduate of the Army flying school at Tuskegee, Ala., died Saturday afternoon when an army primary-training plane cracked up near here.

Lt. Brothers' plane was discovered by two other flyers from the Army Air field here, who had gone in search of the ship after it was reported missing. With him at the time of the crash was Pvt. Stewart, whose first name was not obtained in the early release of the information.

The cause of the accident is unknown and army authorities have ordered an investigation.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Army Pilot Killed at Tuskegee Flying School

FEB 13 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — (ANP) — Lieutenant Richard Davis, 25, pilot attached to a pursuit squadron at the Army Flying School, was killed instantly Saturday when the plane he was piloting on a routine flight crashed.

FEB 13 1943

A native of Fort Valley, Ga., Lieutenant Davis was a former student of Hampton Institute and had been a flight instructor for the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, Lambert Field, Mo., before entering the service. His father and four brothers survive.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

New Trainees Assigned to Flying School

MAY 1 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—A number of officers have been transferred here for service with the administrative branch of the Tuskegee Army Flying School.

They, together with the weather officers, engineers and armament officers, make up the non-flying commissioned personnel at the post. Such officers are trained elsewhere, while the pilots receive all their training here.

For the latter, there are four stages of training—pre-flight, primary, basic and advanced flying.

Administrative officers here include:

MAY 1 1943

Second Lts. Paul L. Brown, Bolling D. Burrel, Kenneth McA. Phipps, and Royal E. Harris, of N.Y.C.; Walter Nicholson, Jamaica, N.Y.; Eldridge F. Williams, Kansas City, Kans.; Otha Morgan, Los Angeles, Calif.; John V. Durand, 3rd, New Orleans; Sheppard D. O'Neal, Atlanta, and William P. Brooks, Jr., Washington.

Advanced Training Begun

Among those who have completed their basic training and have begun advanced training are:

Cadets Langdon E. Johnson and George E. Cray of West Virginia; Dempsey W. Morgan of Detroit and Oliver Miller of Battle Creek, Mich.; Maurice V. Esters, Webster City; Luther H. Smith, Des Moines and Joseph Goner of Iowa Falls, Iowa; John J. Suggs, Terre Haute, and John F. Briggs, Anderson, Ind;

Milton R. Brooks of Glassport and Walter S. Board of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Charles M. Bussey and Lawrence D. Wilkins of Los Angeles; Albert H. Manning, Jr., Hartsville, S.C.; Herbert W. Samuel, Rome, Ga.; Spurgeon N. Ellington, Winston-Salem, N.C.; Clemenceau N. Givings, Richmond, and Dudley M. Watson, Frankfort, Ky.; Craig H. Williams, Chicago, and Harry A. Sheppard, Jamaica.

Two officers are now taking their pre-flight training: 1st Lt. Fitzroy Newsun, Brooklyn, N.Y., and 2nd Lt. Albert Howard of N.Y.C.

American Negro Fliers Score in First Air Battle

Washington, June 25—(UP)—The first United States Army Negro fighter squadron to go into action came through its initial encounter with enemy fighters with flying colors, according to reports to the War Department released Thursday.

Six members of the squadron, flying P-40 Warhawks, were attacked June 18 over Pantelleria by 12 German Focke-Wulf 190's. The Focke-Wulfs were escorting German bombers attempting to raid the island, then in Allied hands. High overhead 10 more German fighters hovered to provide protection.

The American Negro fliers, led by First Lieut. Charles W. Dryden, 22, of Bronx, N. Y., parried the Nazi thrust, damaged two German fighters and forced the remainder to retire. The Americans all came home safely.

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

Cong. Bolton Take Time to Laud Kegee Airmen

APR 25 1943

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22—Congresswoman Frances P. Bolton of Ohio declared on the floor of the house last Thursday that although the ratio of accepted Negro students for the air corps at Tuskegee is a "little lower" than that of the average white air schools, the quality of the successful candidate "leaves nothing to be desired."

APR 25 1943

She was addressing congress on the work of Tuskegee institute, of which she is a trustee, and placing particular emphasis upon the flying school there. She maintained that one of the reasons why Negroes don't qualify as high as the white student is partly due to their "educational difficulties."

"This brings out dramatically one of the problems before this country: adequate educational opportunity to all groups," she asserted. "When these colored lads can have such equal opportunity, in all likelihood their ratio of acceptance as flyers will be as high as other groups."

APR 25 1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Recover Body Of Missing Pilot

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—(ANP)—The body of 2nd Lieut. Nathaniel Milton Hill, missing since June 16, has been recovered from Lake Huron near Oscoda, Mich. Next of kin have been notified.

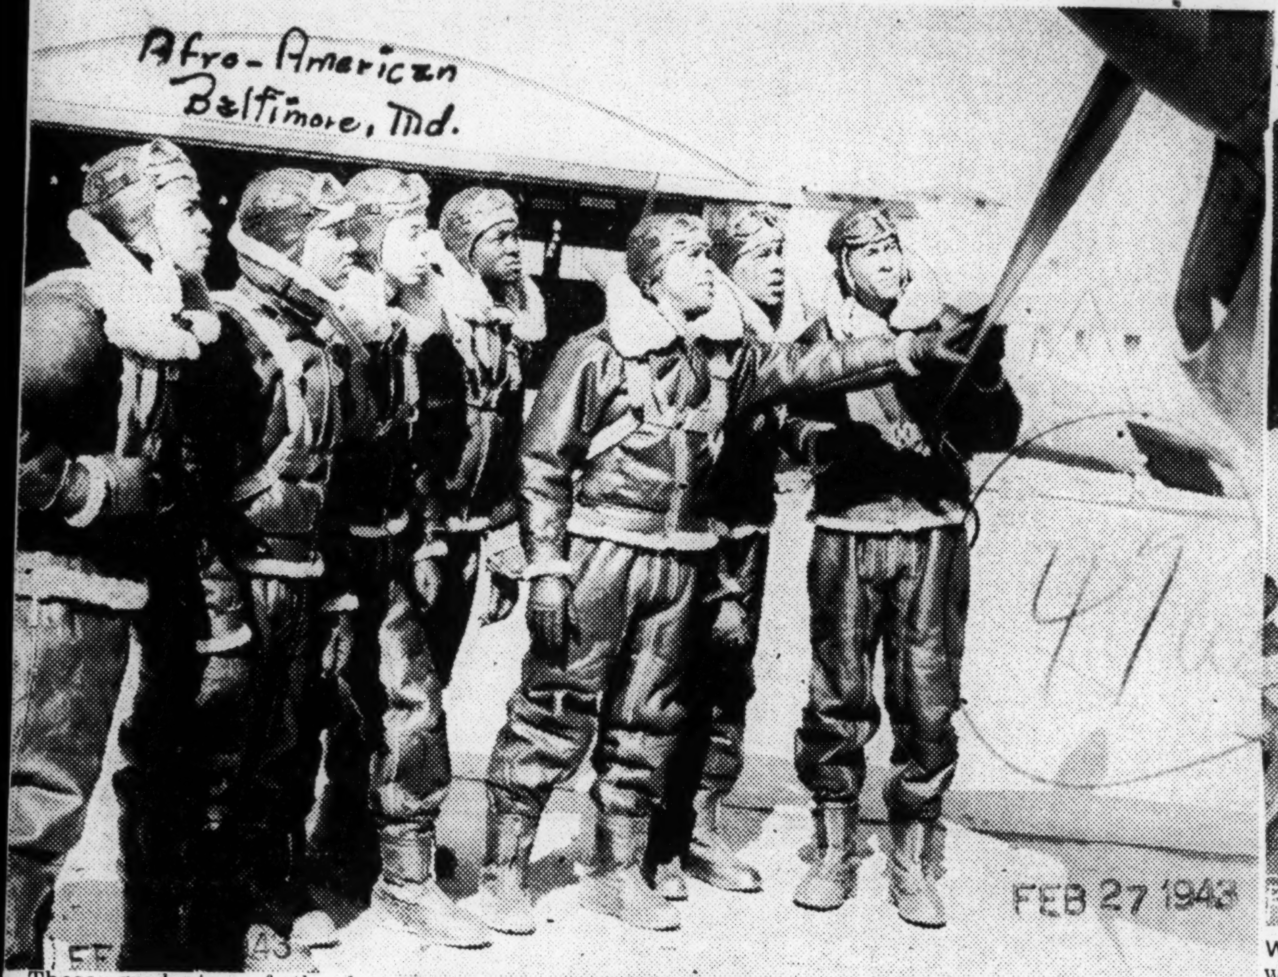
Lieut. Hill was piloting a two seater training plane when he crashed into Lake Huron during a routine flight from the Oscoda army air field, a sub base of Selfridge field. He was accompanied on the flight by 2nd Lieut. Luther Linson Blakeney, a weather officer, whose body was found June 17.

AUG 7 1943

The army air force pilot was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joshiah Hill of Washington, D. C. His wife, Laverne, resides in the same city.

New Pilots Inspect Future Vehicle

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.



FEB 27 1943

These graduates of the latest class of pilots to receive their commissions as second lieutenants at the Tuskegee Army Flying School inspect the type of plane they may soon be flying in combat. They are, left to right:

2nd Lieuts. Roy Spencer, Tallahassee, Fla.; Claude B. Govan, Newark, N.J.; James R. Polkinghorne, Pensacola, Fla.; John H Prowell, Jr., Lewisburg, Ala.; William H. Walker, Carbondale, Ill. William E. Griffin, Birmingham Ala., and Walker H. Downs, Mc Comb, Miss.

FEB 27 1943

Negro Pilots Get First Nazi Plane

New York, N.Y.
World-Telegram

By the United Press.

ALLIED HQ., North Africa, July 3.—First Lt. Charles B. Hall, 22-year-old pilot from Brazil, Ind., today claimed the first enemy plane credited to the American Negro fighter squadron in the North African theater. Lieutenant Hall brought down a Focke-Wulf 190 during a dog-fight over Castelventrano airfield in Sicily yesterday. He piloted a P-40 Warhawk escorting Mitchells that raided the field.

JUL 3 1943

More U.S. Pilots Get Wings at Tuskegee

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Members of the 43-B graduating class of the Tuskegee Army Flying School last week heard Maj. William T. Smith, commanding officer of the primary field adjacent to this air base, term their training "second to none in the world."

Maj. Smith also called the graduates' attention to the importance of their forthcoming combat training to the performance of their eventual missions in actual war service.

Held in New Chapel

The class was the first to have its graduation exercises in the new post chapel. The post band, directed by 1st Lieut. Frank L. Drye, furnished music.

Lieut. Col. Noel F. Parrish, acting commanding officer of the Tuskegee Army Flying School, presented diplomas, and Lieut Col. Benjamin O. Davis, commanding officer of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, pinned wings on the following new 2nd lieutenants:

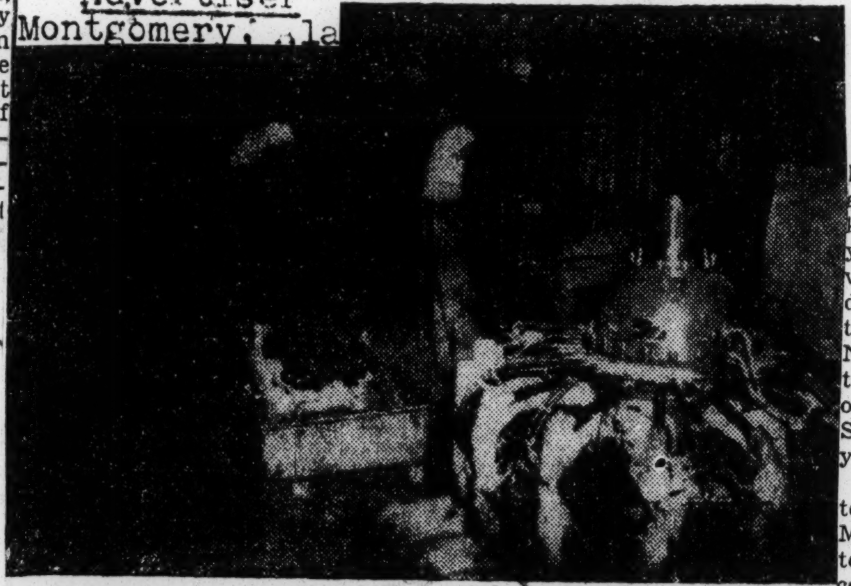
Roy M. Spencer, Tallahassee, Fla.; John H. Prowell, Jr., Lewisburg, Ala.; Claude B. Govan, Newark, N.J.; William E. Griffin, Birmingham, Ala.; James R. Polinghorne, Pensacola, Fla.; Walter M. Downs, McComb, Miss., and William H. Walker, Carbondale, Ill.

Birmingham, Ala., News
August 19, 1943

WHILE HUBBY FIGHTS—Busy with her exacting duties as instrument inspector at a war plant in New York is Mrs. Benjamin Davis, Jr., wife of the lieutenant colonel commanding an all-Negro air squadron of the U. S. forces in the North African theater of operations.

Tuskegee Prepares Mechanics

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala



A view of a section of the Aircraft Engine Laboratory at Tuskegee. In the foreground is shown a Pratt and Whitney Twinrow 14-cylinder Aircooled Engine. The young lady is building up an Allison 1710 Liquid Cooled Engine for installation in a P-40.

JUL 23 1943

JUL 23 1943

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala

Negro Pilots Damage Two German Planes In Lively Engagement

WASHINGTON, June 25.—(AP) --War Secretary Stimson reported today that the Air Forces first squadron of negro pilots, the Sixth Fighter Squadron, has "weathered its first aerial combat test very creditably."

The squadron, commanded by Lieut. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., a son of the first negro general officer in the Army, is in North Africa and participated—as an escort and fighter combat outfit—in the siege of Pantelleria but had little chance to engage enemy fighters during that time. The group was fired on only once and when it turned to engage the enemy fighters the latter fled.

On the afternoon of June 18, however, a flight of six P-40's led by First Lieut. Charles W. Dryden, Bronx, N. Y., was attacked over Pantelleria by 12 German FW 190's escorting enemy bombers trying to raid the island. Ten more German fighters hovered above the bombers.

In a lively engagement, the American negro pilots damaged two of the German fighters and forced the remainder to retreat.

JUN 26 1943

Others participating in the engagement were First Lieut. Lee Rayford, Ardwick, Md.; First Lieut. Sidney P. Brooks, Cleveland, Ohio; Second Lieut. Willie Ashley, Jr., Sumter, S. C.; Second Lieut. Spann Watson, Hackensack, N. J., and Second Lieut. Leon C. Roberts, Prichard, Ala.

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

HOOSIER GETS 1ST NAZI PLANE FOR NEGRO FIGHTERS

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, July 3.—The American Negro air fighter squadron on this front knocked down its first enemy plane yesterday in a battle above Castelvetrano air field in Sicily, probably destroyed a second, and damaged a third. The honor of being the first Negro pilot to score a victory went to Lt. Charles B. Hall, 22 year old, of Brazil, Ind., who attended Illinois State Teachers college for three years prior to enlisting.

JUL 4 1943

When the Negro flyers returned to their base after escorting the Mitchell bombers which raided Castelvetrano, Gen. Eisenhower, allied commander in North Africa, greeted them as he stopped there on a tour of allied air fields.

Hailed by Eisenhower.

He congratulated the squadron commander, Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr. of Washington, D. C., son of the brigadier general who is the highest ranking Negro officer in the United States army.

When more than 20 Focke-Wulf 190s and Messerschmitt 109s came in to attack the Mitchells and P-40 Warhawk escorts over Castelvetrano, Hall downed a Focke-Wulf.

How Hall Bagged Nazi.

"It was my eighth mission," Hall related, "but it was the first time I had seen the enemy close enough to shoot at. I saw two Focke-Wulfs following the Mitchells just after the bombs were dropped.

"I headed for the space between the fighters and bombers and managed to turn inside the Jerries. I fired a long burst and saw my tracers penetrate the second aircraft. He was turning to the left, but suddenly fell off and headed straight into the ground. I followed him down and saw him crash. He raised a big cloud of dust."

Service Club Opens At TAAF

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., July 29—After nearly 15 months of planning, the Tuskegee Army Air Field Service club held its formal dedication and opening Friday. Housing a lounge and hardwood dance floor with an adjacent blueroom for special games and a snack bar with veranda luncheonette, this clubhouse is one of the finest in this section. Much credit is due Lt. Col. John T. Hazard, post executive officer, for his co-operation with the special service department under Capt. Fred B. Minnis in his negotiating for the club's construction.

LT. COL. PARRISH SPEAKS

Congratulatory remarks by Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the Tuskegee Army Air field, set the tempo for the celebration festivities at the dedication of the club.

Instrumental in stamping the occasion a huge succes was Eddie ("I Don't Want to Set the World on Fire") Durham and his All-Girl Rhythm band. Creating more of a riot than any band to visit these parts, they chalked up a high score for the Imperial Wings of Rhythm to shoot at. The "Imps," however, bidded fair to match their visiting opponents.

The club's new directress is Mrs. Eugene B. Wood, Howard university graduate from Mount Bayou, Miss.

47a-1943
Constitution
Atlanta, Georgia

JUL 31 1943

47a

Tuskegee Trained Fighters Have Faced Their Acid Test

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., July 30.—When the screaming P-40 Warhawks, piloted by the first Negro fighter squadron in the history of the world, roared through Mediterranean skies to aid an Allied offensive concentrated on the Italian island base of Pantelleria, the Tuskegee-trained fighter pilots faced their acid test and came through with flying colors to prove to the world that they were possessed of the necessary mettle to successfully fly in combat.

Blasting down death and destruction in one of the heaviest air operations in the history of warfare, these colored fighting men of the air attacked heavily fortified Pantelleria, and from this island off the coast of Sicily they brought the Tuskegee Army Air Field out of the experimental stage to prove the true value of Negro pilots in the present war.

This Allied offensive was of unusual significance because it marked the first time that air power alone had completely destroyed all enemy resistance, but to colored people all over the country the battle was of noteworthy interest because it was in this battle that the Negro fighter pilots trained at Tuskegee got their first taste of aerial combat.

Praised by Stimson.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, in discussing the battle plan of Pantelleria, asserted: "We are all very proud of the splendid activity of a fighter squadron commanded by Lieutenant Colonel B. O. Davis Jr. over Pantelleria."

The Tuskegee Army Air Field, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Noel F. Parrish, who rose through the ranks from private to his present position, is nine miles from Tuskegee Institute, the school founded and made famous by the late Dr. Booker T. Washington. The field was activated in August of 1941, and in March, 1942, the first class, of which Colonel Davis (then captain) was a member, marched into the post recreation hall to receive their wings and commissions in the Army Air Forces. The other four members of the class were Second Lieutenants Lemuel Custis, George S. Roberts (now captains) and Mac Ross and Charles Debow (now first lieutenants). These five men formed the nucleus of the all-colored Fighter Squadron, now on duty in North Africa, and following classes added to its number until it reached full strength.

The men trained in fighter planes from the time of the first graduation until last April, when the entire outfit was transferred from this field, where they had received all their flying training. to overseas duty.

While the squadron was on duty in the Pantellerian offensive, so successful were the Allied operations that they did not have any opportunity to engage the enemy at that time, but a few days later Tuskegee's colored fighter pilots saw real action when a flight of P-40 Warhawks, led by First Lieutenant Charles W. Dryden, Bronx, N. Y., was attacked over Pantelleria by a dozen German FW 190's escort enemy bombers. Flying above the hostile bombers was a formation of ten more German planes.

Enemy Retreated.

In the ensuing fray the colored pilots pitched in and damaged two of the German planes and forced the others to retreat. Pilots taking part in the fight were First Lieutenants Charles W. Dryden, fight leader; Lee Rayford, Ardwick, Md.; Sidney [illegible] Brooks Cleveland, Ohio, and Second Lieutenant Span Watson, Hackensack, N. J.; Leon Roberts, Prichard, Ala., and Willie Ashley, of Sumter, S. C.

More recently First Lieutenant Charles B. Hall, Brazil, Ind., shot down an enemy plane in a North African dogfight, to become the first of the squadron to chalk up a complete victory in an air fight.

Since that day nearly two years ago when work on the field was first begun, the Tuskegee Army Air Field has been transformed from what was once an abandoned graveyard into a modern air base teeming with activity with colored cadets and flying officers zooming overhead at all hours of the day and night. The cadets now number hundreds—the first graduating class had five members.

Today the field forms a big valley, a beautiful rolling valley that slopes gently from the runways and hangars to the headquarters building on the hill.

It was within this setting that the Negro pilots, now on duty in North Africa, were trained, and the hundreds of colored cadets are now training to pilot the fighter planes of the war that they, too, like the members of the earlier graduating classes who are now the Fighter Squadron in North Africa. They must, they will, "stay on the ball." So back go their shoulders and out go their chest. And they march for all they're worth.

As they march, they sing. Sometimes it's the "Air Corps Song," sometimes "Six Pence," but the song they really love to sing is:

Contact! Joystick back,
Sailing through the blue.
Gallant sons of the 99th,
Brown men tried and true.
We are the heroes of the night;
To hell with the Axis might.
Fight! Fight! Fight! Fight!
Fighting Ninety-Ninth!

After nine weeks of intensive work, the preflighter is ready for his acid test. He is sent to the 66th AAF Flying Training Detachment at Tuskegee Institute for primary training. Here he does his flying. The primary cadet is issued flying togs, helmet and goggles and assigned to a colored flying instructor. He's ready to fly now—in the back seat. The instructor is in the front cockpit to stay until until the embryonic pilot is ready for a solo flight.

After a quick nine weeks of primary training, the cadet, now a veteran of 60 hours in the air, is rushed back to the Tuskegee Army Air Field for his basic and advanced work. He's now ready for real flying in faster planes than the PT-17 which he has flown for the past nine weeks.

Physical Training.

But there is a good deal more to flying than taking off, doing maneuvers and landings. In order to do these a lot of other things must be done. So the cadet still goes to classes, drills and physical training.

Physical conditioning plays an important part in the life of a Tuskegee cadet. It is essential that he possess the necessary co-ordination and physical stamina to endure gruelling hours of acrobatic flying and maneuvers. A large percentage of cadets who are unsuccessful as fliers are those who do not possess the proper co-ordination of physical and mental ability. The pilot must be able to call the proper muscles into play at all times with split second precision in order to execute certain specific maneuvers. His life depends upon it.

The physical training program includes free-hand calisthenics, wand and dumbbell drills, tumbling, cross-country and a variety of games and achievement tests. Cadets are given the types of exercise necessary to condition them for flying. As a result they are given strenuous push-ups, run tough cross-countries, cover a difficult obstacle course and take calisthenics until the sweat soaks right through their gym suits. It's nothing unusual these hot days to see cadets actually soaking wet after a session on the athletic field.

As they progress through the various stages of flight training, the allotment of time devoted to the various types of exercises is varied in accordance to their specific needs. The advanced group—which is close to actual combat—receives instructions in Judo and rough and tumble fighting as part of their regular schedule of physical activities.

The whole program is tough. Sure. But this is war—every activity is geared for the future combat duty of the pilot—and in order for these colored cadets to join the fighting Negro pilots in North Africa (it may be Europe by the time they graduate) and strike death blows at the Axis, they must be in the pink of condition. They have to be strong and husky. And that is the function of the physical training section—"keeping 'em fit for flying." Needless to say that these cadets seldom lose time through being physically unfit for participation in the daily schedule. They can't. They have a job to do.

Spot Enemy Aircraft.

But this is the Army and there's still more to flying than being in tip-top condition and knowing how to fly. Basic and advanced students must study such courses as aircraft identification (so they can easily spot enemy aircraft), armament and gunnery (so they can shoot with unerring skill), navigation (so they can chart their course and follow it), the radio in making history, can go to combat and train their gunsights on the enemy.

The Tuskegee setup is a unique development in Army aviation in that all the cadet's training is accomplished at Tuskegee. The men selected for aviation cadet training must first undergo a five months' preflight period at the College Training Detachment at Tuskegee Institute. After completing this course, they are sent to the Tuskegee Army Air Field—nine miles from the institute—for preflight. After nine weeks of preflight instruction the cadets are luoaded into big Army trucks and jostled the nine miles back to Tuskegee Institute. This time for primary instruction. After which basic and advanced flight training is taken at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. The cadet completes all of his flight training—from preflight to wings at Tuskegee with only 27 miles of travel in all his training.

The field is nationally known as the only place where colored flying cadets are trained. Here eager young Negro fledglings undergo a type of training that calls on all the stamina, preservance and physical conditioning that the finest of their race possess. It calls on the best in these colored boys. Preflighters called "dummies" by upperclassmen—are really in for something new when they report to Tuskegee. They are subject to the strictest discipline and the toughest courses, and at the same time they must attain the high standards of the Air Corps and maintain them throughout their cadet lives.

From 5 o'clock in the morning when they first arise, until 9:30 at night when taps are sounded, the busy cadets are "on the ball." They go to classes, physical training, drill, lectures, training films and in general keep very busy throughout the day. These preflighters study ground forces physics, maps and charts, math., aircraft identification, radio code and air forces.

"Shoulders Back."

As they march to classes—indeed, as they march anywhere—these eager, young, prospective pilots are warned to "crack those shoulders back" and "look proud, Mister, you're in the Air Corps now." And they really step. It's poetry in motion to see these lads march. Already they have been imbued with the tradition of the Air Corps. Then they have their own tradition. They remember communication, first aid, naval forces, meterology and military sanitation. All these courses are essential to the pilot in the Army Air Forces, and many hours each week are spent in the classroom studying them.

In addition to these subjects, basic and advanced cadets are required to get in a number of hours in the Link trainer. Then they fly cross-country. Sometimes these trips are at night, and they have to stay "on the ball" from the time they take off until they land. This calls into play much of the theory that has been pounded into them by their instructors. If they don't stay "on the beam," they might get lost.

It's a hard job—this matter of becoming an Army pilot, but the Tuskegee cadets revel in its rigors. They are happy to be flying. It has gotten into their blood, and anything that's necessary to flying, they do with a gusto that is an inspiration to see.

How the Day Ends.

Except for the study periods and for those cadets who have flying to do, the day ends with Retreat. This colorful formation is made each day—Saturday and Sunday excepted. The cadets line up in parade formation, and to the music of the post band they march to the front of post headquarters where the flag is flying. There in the cool of the evening as the sun is rapidly fading into the west, hundreds of cadets salute the flag and what it stands for while the National Anthem is played. At the last note they are commanded to "Order Arms!" Hundreds of right hands are brought down smartly, and the men march back to their barracks to prepare for another day. After 15 months of such days, the cadet is ready for graduation and wings.

After receiving wings and commission in the Army Air Forces, the flying lieutenant remains at the Tuskegee Army Air Field for a short while, during which time he amasses a total of 20 hours in a P-40. After getting this time in the air, he is transferred to the Oscoda Air Base in Michigan for his final training in gunnery and aerial tactics before going to combat.

Spurred on by the news of the excellent showing of the other Tuskegee-trained pilots in the North African theater of operation, the cadets look forward with keen anticipation to the day when they, too, can spot the enemy through the gunsights of a fighter plane.

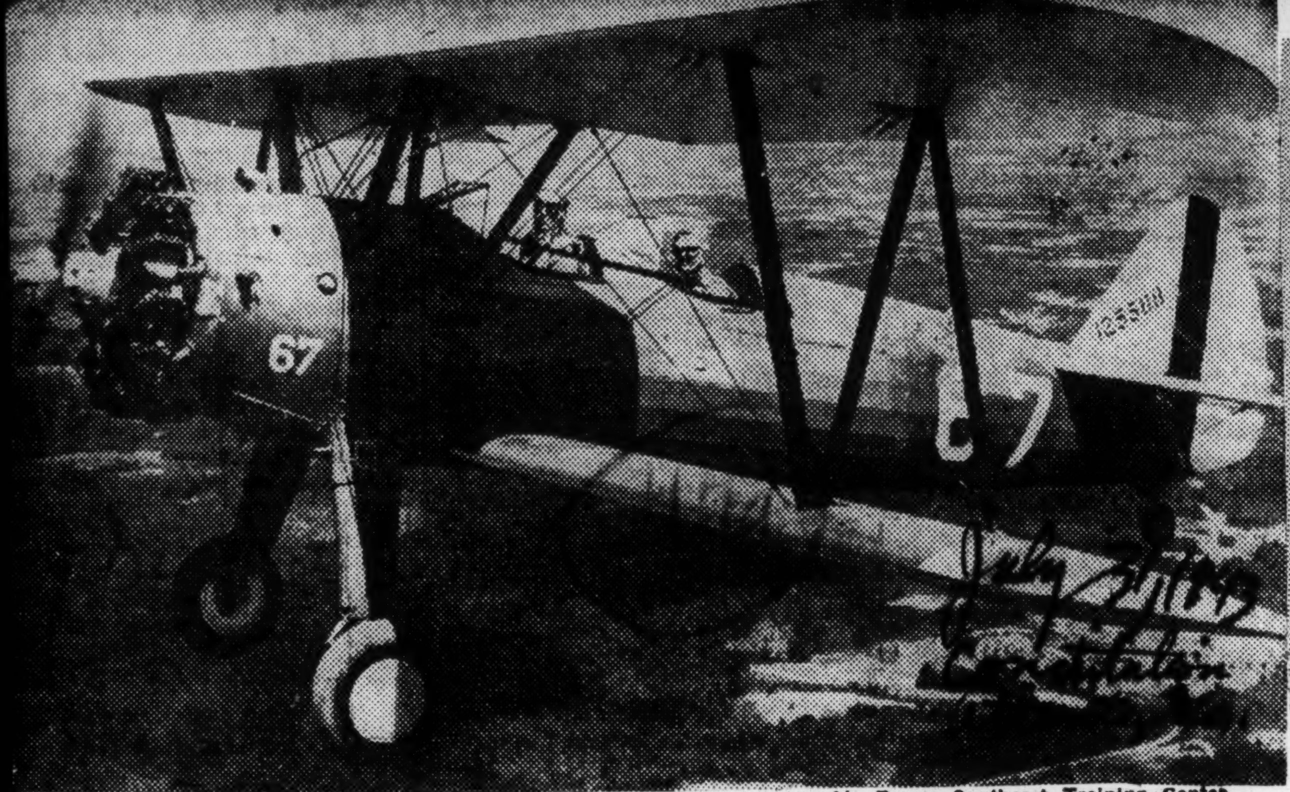
Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

JUN 19 1943

Negro Squadron Sets The Pace

COURTLAND ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—Of the various units stationed at Courtland Army Air Field, the one setting the pace for squadron excellence is a Negro squadron, which started in third place, forged its way to the front and for four successive weeks, has captured the "Superior" pennant, an award granted after each Saturday night's inspection.

Squadrons are judged by the point system on 12 separate phases of military life, ranging from administrative duties of the orderly room to individual behavior and appearance of enlisted personnel. As a result of this competition, many improvements are becoming evident throughout the base and up to the present time, the Negro squadron is showing the way. Their commanding officer, First Lieutenant Herbert H. Gorman of Jacksonville, Fla., has steadily encouraged the squadron's efforts and says, "These men are in there pitching all the time to improve their own appearance and that of their squadron and are proud of their showing thus far."



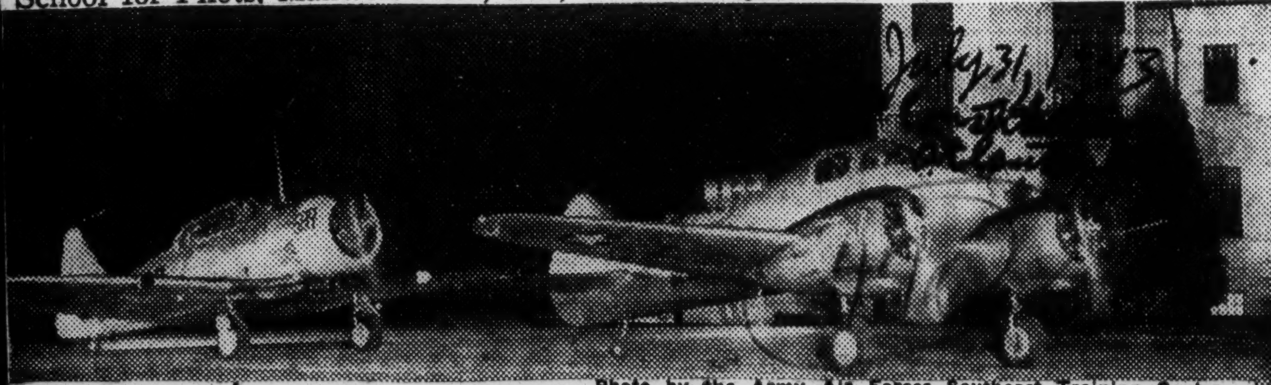
July 31, 1943
Constitution

Photo by the Army Air Forces Southeast Training Center.

PILOTS NEVER FORGET first flights and instructors in primary training. Lessons here are as simple and rudimentary as their ship. Instructor in front cockpit of PT-17, above, directs student through one-way speaking tubes or Gosports. Student first learns to feel out his ship in straight and level flight.

Constitution
July 31, 1943

TO BE ON THE SAFE SIDE, aviation cadets who are learning to fly high above poisonous gasses, get a whiff of the stuff as part of their training at the Pre-Flight School for Pilots, Maxwell Field, Ala., in the Army Air Forces Training Command.



July 31, 1943

Photo by the Army Air Forces Southeast Training Center.

THE LATE TRICK—America's Army Air Forces Training Stations, like her factories, work overtime late into the night. Above, students in ships representing two types of advanced training, twin and single engine, get the go signal from the operations tower at Maxwell Field, Ala., before taking off on a night training mission.

"MISS TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD"

JUL 31 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh Pa.

Mrs. Rose Lynn Lane, wife of Lt. Allen Gaston Lane, now stationed with the Negro Fighter Squadron in North Africa, was recently crowned "Miss Tuskegee Army Air Field" by popular applause of the entire personnel of this station.

Mrs. Lane is a graduate of the latest class of Tueskegee institute where she received her B.S. degree. At the present time she is an employee in the Post Signal Office. She is the daughter of Professor and Mrs. J. T. Williamson of Tuskegee institute, Ala.—Photo by the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

Fledglings

Complete Basic Air Training

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

JUL 17 1943

Ala., July 15—America's flying officers are raining bombs and bullets of terror on the Axis powers of all fronts. As have th men that are now serving their country overseas, youths at the Tuskegee Army Air Field are learning the art of flying so they, too, can participate in destroying the Axis. Here at this base men of Pennsylvania are learning to fly the Army way.

The aviation cadets from Pennsylvania who recently completed their basic flight training at this field and have been assigned to the advanced flight class are: Aviation Cadets Charles W. Tate, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and George A. Taylor, of Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

COL. SELWAY COMMANDS 332ND

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—(ANP)—Col. Robert R. Selway, air corps, has reported for duty at Selfridge field, and is commanding the 332nd Fighter group, first all-Negro group in the army air forces.

1943

Lead Attack

Honor of being the first Negro flyers to go into combat against the Axis foe went to Lieuts. William A. Campbell (above) of Tuskegee, Ala., and Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Ind. Campbell, Tuskegee-born son of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Campbell, comes from a patriotic family serving the nation. Four Campbells are in the armed service and a fifth is a war worker.

JUN 19 1943

47a-1943

Ollie Stewart Visits With Squadron Headed By Col. B. O. Davis Jr.

Kansas City Call

Flyers and Ground Crew Are Taking Advanced Training Preparatory to Action Against Hitler and Japan

Kansas City, Mo.

By OLLIE STEWART

War Correspondent in North Africa

(Copyrighted by the Afro-American Newspapers Syndicate. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA.—(Censored)—The colored fighter squadron has arrived in North Africa and I was on hand to greet them. The unit flies P-40 Warhawk planes and now is receiving advanced training based on lessons learned in the Tunisian campaign.

JUN 11 1943

Upon the completion of this advanced training, the outfit will go into action. Headed by Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., the squadron has its own equipment and ground crew. Its morale is very high.

The way the pilots handle their planes in practice maneuvers is a tribute to the intense training given them in America and to the high caliber of men selected.

AT HITLER NEXT

Soon Hitler's bombers and fighters will be the object of these flyers' pent-up fury and their determination to make a fine record in combat.

JUN 11 1943

"All of us realize we are pioneers and on the spot," says Col. Davis: "Our enlisted men and ground crews are efficient in the handling and serving of our ships and there is teamwork in every operation we undertake."

Since the arrival of the squadron, I have visited them days at a time and Americans can expect great things from this group whose arrival marks the beginning of a new era for men as I shall stick to the unit like a brother.

Another colored correspondent, Thomas W. Young Jr., of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, arrived with the flyers and I welcome him heartily.

GROUND CREW IMPORTANT

As in all air units, the flyers in the colored fighter squadron wear the glamour pants and make the headlines but their success in the air depends upon the boys who stay on the ground—the grease monkeys who nurse the planes and sweat out long hours while their baby is in the air.

For each plane there is a crew chief without whose okay the pilot cannot take off. No mother gives her infant more loving care than these non-coms who wipe and pat and inspect their ship after every 25 hours of flying.

The ground crews are divided into sections: communication, engineering, armament and ordnance. The intelligence quotient of the squadron is amazing even for a hand-picked group.

JUN 11 1943

Almost every man I have talked to is a college man and a specialist in his field.

A ST. LOUISAN

Men in the communications section include Tech. Sgt. George Gail, Baltimore; Tech. Sgt. Clovis Bordeau, St. Louis; Staff Sgt. Harold Carter, Key West, Fla.; Staff Sgt. Herbert Nichols, Masontown, Pa.; Staff Sgt. Lew-Mon Boykin, Los Angeles.

The engineers include: Mech. Sgt. Elsworth Dansby, Decatur, Ill.; Mech. Sgt. Alexander Crawford, Dayton; Staff Sgt. Elliott Lucas, Washington; Tech. Sgt. Donald Quander, New York; Staff Sgt. Abraham Thomas, Los Angeles; Tech. Sgt. Herman Jones, Atlanta; Staff Sgt. Eugene Pickett, Columbus, Ohio, and Staff Sgt. Robert Chapman of Charleston, W. Va.

47a

JUN 11 1943

Armament men who are experts in small arms are: Mech. Sgt. Asa Newman, Cleveland; Tech. Sgt. Fred Archer, New York; Tech. Sgt. James Jackson, Atlanta; Staff Sgt. Thomas Downs, San Antonio; Staff. Sgt. Thomas Gill, Atlantic City; Cpl. William Benson, Camden, N. J.; Sgt. William Morrison, Roanoke, Va.; Sgt. Charles Butler, Brooklyn.

Parachute riggers include Sgt. William Warner, Atlanta; Sgt. James Lockhart, New York; Staff Sgt. Walter Turner, Los Angeles.

Flying Officers Now in Africa

By OLLIE STEWART

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA.—The officer personnel of the Negro flying squadron now stationed somewhere in North Africa is composed of:

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Washington.

Capt. Hayden C. Johnson and Capt. Maurice E. Johnson, brothers of Washington.

Lt. James McCullin, St. Louis, Mo.

Lt. James Knighton, Tulsa, Okla.

Lt. Herbert Carter, Natchez, Miss.

Lt. Herbert V. Clark, Little Rock, Ark.

47c

Lt. James L. Johnson, Washington.

Lt. Henry M. Letcher, Washington.

Lt. George E. Pettross, Washington.

JUN 11 1943

Lt. Paul G. Mitchell, Washington.

Lt. Lee Rayford, Washington.

Lt. Dudley W. Stevenson, Washington.

Capt. Elmer D. Jones, Washington.

Capt. George S. Roberts, Fairmont, W. Va.

Lt. Benote H. Wimp, Chicago.

Lt. Bernard Proctor, Philadelphia.

Lt. George R. Curri, Los Angeles.

Lt. Erwin B. Lawrence, Cleveland.

Capt. Lemuel R. Curtis, Hartford, Conn.

Lt. James T. Wiley, Pittsburgh.

Lt. William H. Fuller, Tarboro, Ala.

Lt. Louis R. Purnell, Philadelphia.

Lt. Graham Smith, Ahoskie, N. C.

Lt. Clarence C. Jamison, Cleveland.

Lt. Wiley Ashley, Sumter, S. C.

Lt. Leon C. Roberts, Prichard, Ala.

JUN 11 1943

Lt. Spann Watson, Hackensack, N. J.

Lt. Charles B. Ball, Terre Haute, Ind.

Lt. Walter Lawson, New York City.

Lt. George R. Bolling, Phoebus Va.

Lt. Samuel M. Bruce, Seattle Wash.

JUN 11 1943

Lt. William A. Campbell, Tuskegee, Ala.

Lt. Sherman White, Montgomery, Ala.

Lt. William Thompson, Pittsburgh.

Lt. Cornelius Vincent, Boston.

Lt. James Freeman, New York.

Lt. Thomas Maline, Detroit.

Lt. John Rogers, Chicago.

Lieut. George Bolling Safe After Parachuting Into Sea; Plane Burned

Kansas City Call Kansas City, Mo.

No Word Yet Heard From Lt. James McCullin of St. Louis Who Failed To Return From Pantelleria Mission

JUL 30 1943

By OLLIE STEWART

JUL 30 1943

(War Correspondent in North Africa)

(Copyright by Afro-American Newspapers Syndicate. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly forbidden).

ADVANCED ALLIED AIR BASE.—(Censored)—Having his P-40 War Hawk plane shot from under him forcing him to jump and parachute 4,000 feet into the sea close to the coast of Sicily and to return uninjured to his fighter squadron to tell about it is an experience that few people can boast of.

47c

Lieut. George R. Bolling of Phoebus, Va., is one of that few

BAILED OUT FROM BURNING PLANE

A graduate of Hampton, Bolling quietly related his story Friday to happy fellow pilots after 6 harrowing days away from his outfit. His plane was hit by Flak on July 11, the day after the initial landing in Sicily by Allied troops while on patrol duty.

The plane began to burn as Bolling turned and headed for the base across the Mediterranean so he bailed out and floated down to water.

Lt. Samuel M. Bruce of Seattle, a graduate of A. and T. college, circled the parachute to fight off enemy planes that might have machine-gunned the helpless Bolling. Striking water, Bolling inflated his Mae West life belt and unstrapped the rubber dinghy.

JUL 30 1943

Picked Up By Destroyer

This was early afternoon. He tried to attract attention all afternoon but failed and in wet garments had to cover himself with part of his parachute to keep warm throughout the night. He had chills and slept but little.

Back at the base, Bolling said: "It was dark and lonesome and I thought I might drift out into the middle of the Mediterranean and be run down by boats. However, daylight found me still sitting in the dinghy waving whenever I saw a ship on the horizon.

"About noon I was picked up by a destroyer and given blankets and a stiff drink. I was also given clothes and food. I was treated swell just like a navy officer. They put me ashore later and I had my first walk on Sicilian soil.

JUL 30 1943

Many Dead, Many Prisoners

"The Allies were taking thousands of prisoners, both German and Italian and many dead soldiers were lying along roads as fighting continued for airports and bridgeheads."

Bolling spent the next four days on a small coastal boat resting and eating pie and ice cream which he had not tasted for a long time. He was finally delivered to his unit by plane.

47a

He is one of the quietest men in the squadron and every man in the outfit had a handshake for him when he returned. He does not smoke. His dip in the Mediterranean has not cooled off his fighting ardor.

JUL 30 1943

Crew Chief Hopeful

Hic crew chief, S-Sgt. John Hargraves of New York, wandered around like lost while Bolling was away. With no pilot to fuss over, Hargraves kept insisting Bolling would come back. Day by day, my respect for these pilots grows as I watch for them, watch them take off for certain dogfights with the enemy and possible death. A few months ago they were mild young men studying and attending frat dances in Washington, Tuskegee, New York and other cities. The ordinary hazards of flying they take for granted. Their worry is how to keep FW-190's off their tail or dodge ack-ack fire from the ground. Every mission may be their last but they have learned tricks that make them confident they can fight with the best. No one fears Goering's circus boys.

Bronx Mother Proud of Flying Son Who Led 99th in Pantelleria Battle

By NELL DODSON

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

"I'm so proud and thankful, and so happy!"

These were the words with which Mrs. Charles Dryden of the Bronx greeted the news in the daily papers that her son, First Lieut. Charles W. Dryden, jr., had led a squadron in an air battle against German planes over Pantelleria, June 18.

"He's always been interested in planes," Mrs. Dryden said. "He was always making them and fooling around with them!"

Charles Junior's habit of "fooling around" with planes stood him in good stead in the skirmish above the clouds.

ATTACKED BY NAZIS

On the afternoon of June 18, a flight of six P-40 pursuit planes led by Lieut. Dryden, was attacked over Pantelleria by 12 German FW 190s. The nazi planes were escrting bombers attempting to raid the island. Ten German fighter planes were also in the raiding enemy squdron.

According to an Associated Press report, the boys from the 99th damaged two of the fighter planes and forced the others to high-tail it back to their home field.

FLIERS COMMENDED

Secretary of War Stimson stated the 99th Fighter Squadron had "weathered its first aerial combat very creditably."

Meanwhile, at Lieut. Dryden's home, 800 Home st, his mother and his sister, Pauline, are awaiting some word from Charles whom they haven't heard from in over three weeks.

"The last time he wrote by V-mail," Mrs. Dryden said, "he told us he was very busy!"

We agree, Charles has been VERY busy.

MOM AND POP ARE SOOO PROUD!

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Drayton, Sr., 800 Home St, Bronx, parents of Lt. Charles Drayton, jr., who led a squadron of 99th Pursuit fighter planes in an air battle against Nazi planes over Pantelleria, June 18, look at picture album crammed with snapshots of their flying son. He was always fooling around with planes," Mrs. Drayton told PV last week.—Cecil Layne photo.

LOCAL HERO

First Lieut. Charles Drayton, jr, dood it. He made the daily paper headlines when he led the boys of the 99th Pursuit squadron in an air skirmish, June 18. Recently wrote his mother he was "very busy."

Wings Awarded More Tuskegee Air Pilots

Pittsburgh Pa. Courier

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., Aug. 5—In perfect cadence to the stirring notes of the "Air Corps Song," Class SE 43-G filed into the New Theatre building July 28 at Tuskegee Army Air Field to receive their wings and commissions as single engine fighter pilots in the Army Air Forces.

This contingent of airmen became Tuskegee's most recent group of flyers to complete the arduous pilot training course and become flying officers in the Aid Corps. They were addressed by Roger F. Gordon, field director of the American Red Cross at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, who advised them to "meet the next stage of your training and the trials that are to follow with the same purposeful determination, the same optimism, and the same faith that have to this point crowned your efforts with success."

Immediately following the main address the graduates were presented commissions as second lieutenants in the Army Air Forces by Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the field. Wings were awarded the graduates by Major Donald G. McPherson, director of training at the post. Student officers receiving wings were Second Lieutenants John Daniels of Chicago, Ill., and William B. Ellis of Washington, D. C.

Among those receiving wings and commissions were: Second Lts. Lee Andrew Archer, New York City, Harry L. Bailey, Chicago, Ill., William R. Bartley, Jacksonville, Fla., Samuel Lee Curtis, Yeadon, Pa., William W. Green, Staunton, Va., George B. Greenlee, Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa., Richard W. Hall, Albany, Ga., Jack D. Holsclaw, Spokane, Wash., Daniel James, Jr., Pensacola, Fla., John Howard Leahr, Cincinnati, Ohio, Claybourne A. Lockett, Los Angeles, Calif., James W. Mason, Monroe, La., Eddie A. McLaurin, Jackson, Miss., William R. Melton, Jr., Los Angeles, Calif., Robert H. Nelson, Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa., Maurice R. Page, Los Angeles, Calif., Cornelius G. Rogers, Chicago, Ill.

Edward N. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa., Lowell C. Steward, Los Angeles, Calif., Elmer W. Taylor, Pittsburgh, Pa., Alva Newte Temple, Carrollton, Ala., Walter D. Westmoreland, Atlanta, Ga., Robert H. Wiggins, New York City, Leroy Shelton Williams, Roanoke, Va., and Beryl Wyatt of Independence, Kansas.

HAITIAN WINS WINGS

Also completing the pilot training course and receiving wings and a certificate was the first foreign student at Tuskegee, Sgt. Raymond Cassagnol, Haitian Air Force, Port au Prince, Haiti.

HONOR STUDENTS

Cadet honors for all around excellence as cadets were Lee Andrew Archer of New York City, Claybourne A. Lockett, Los Angeles, Calif., and Daniel James, Jr., of Pensacola, Fla. Lt. James was a flight instructor at the Primary Flying Field, Tuskegee institute, Ala., prior to accepting appointment as an aviation cadet.

SHOT DOWN AT SEA . . . SAVED

Pittsburg Courier Pa.

Lt. George R. Bolling, member of the Fighting 99th Pursuit Squadron, in action on the North African frontier, was reported safe, after being shot down while on a mission in that theatre of war. Word received stated that he had been returned to his unit somewhere in Sicily.—Official OWI Photo.

47a-1943

ntertains 'Skegee Personne

Daily World.
Atlanta, Georgia

The versatile Miss Christine Chatman, who recently gave a concert at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, is pictured at her "boogie-woogie" piano. She defrayed her expenses and gave three performances so that all the men here could share in the entertainment.—(Photo by Tuskegee Army Air Field)

47a

Tuskegee Graduates Its Largest Class Of Flyers

Chicago Illinois Defender

MAY 8 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—In keeping with the War Department's program to expand its quota of pilots this year, the Tuskegee Army Air Field graduated the largest class of flyers in its history last week.

They received the traditional coveted silver wings and a commission in the army of the United States, as a result of their ratings as full-fledged pilots.

The newly commissioned officers marched to the post theatre where the graduation exercises was held, followed by lower classmen to the tune of the Air Corps song played by the Post band. Here an overflowing house of parents, friends and fellow soldiers, the largest group yet to witness a graduation, waited to observe the ceremony.

Following the invocation by the post chaplain, Capt. Douglas L. T. Robinson, Lieut. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the Tuskegee Army Air field, introduced Major Donald G. McPherson, director of flight training. who delivered the principal address.

Major McPherson emphasized" . . after you leave here, those of us who have trained you will watch your accomplishments with an eager eye and accept them proudly. As you know, it has only been a short time that men of your race have been trained as pilots in the Army Air Corps. Therefore, your contributions to the traditions of the Air Corps have necessarily been curtailed.

"Now you are part of the Air Corps and you will be expected to live up to its traditions and standards. They are high and you will have much to live up to and I have no doubt that you will. You are in a unique position. On one hand, you must maintain the traditions that have been made in the past by members of the Air Corps all over the world, and on the other hand, you will make traditions to which members of your race who follow you, may emulate and aspire to. Let the wings you are about to receive remain a symbol as they have in the past, of excellence, of honor and of courage."

Immediately following the address Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish presented the graduates their commissions. Presentation of the silver "wings" to the candidates was made by Major McPherson.

Special honors were awarded to three of the cadets by Major John C. Cook, commandant of cadets. The three honored men receiving silver identification bracelets for outstanding academic and military bearing were: Second Lieutenants Vernon V. Haywood, Raleigh, N. C.; Ulysses S. Taylor, Kaufman, Tex.; and Charles I. Williams of Lima, Ohio.

Other members of the graduating class were Second Lieutenants Paul Adams, Charles P. Bailey, James E. Brothers, James Y. Carter, Arnold W. Cisco, Wilson V. Eagleson, William J. Faulkner, Jr., Walter T. Foreman, Herber C. Houston, Freddie E. Hutchins, Leonard M. Jaskson, Sidney J. Moseley, Jr., Curtis C. Robinson, Harold E. Sawyer, Lewis C. Smith and Luke J. Weathers. Jr.

47a

MAY 8 1943

Patterson Says Army To Train Black Bombers

Atlanta Daily World

Negro Navigators To Be Trained

Also, He Says

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(A N P) —Acting Secretary of War Robert Patterson confirmed the report that the war department intends to train Negro soldiers as bombardiers and navigators in the army air force. His statement, brief and lacking in detail, was made in answer to a question put to him at the weekly press conference last Thursday morning.

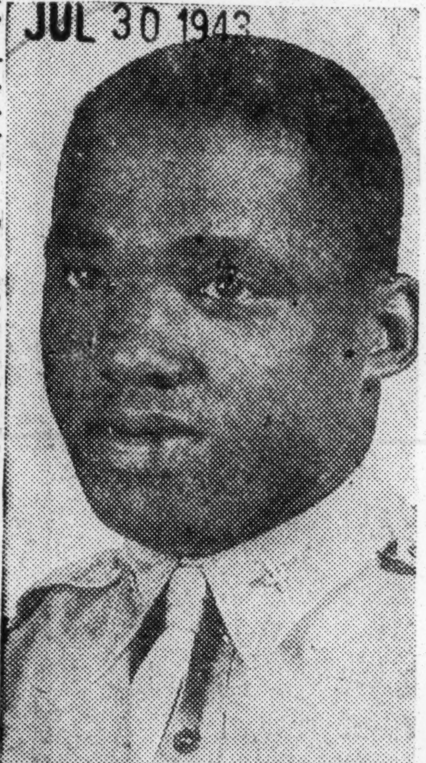
Drew Patterson, in his radio column the Sunday before, had alluded to this plan of the war department as its "answer" to the race riots. The question was intended to invite a straightforward statement from the department.

Patterson explained that army schools have always been open to the men of the service, irrespective of their race, color or creed. He said that Negro soldiers would be sent to these schools and that "every man who goes will be used as a bombardier or navigator."

Asked of they would be organied into teams, the acting secretary declared that "these men will be used for combat duty." His reluctance to go into greater details at the moment was apparent.

47a

JUL 30 1943



Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

JUL 30 194

MISSOURIAN MISSING.—2nd Lieut. James L. McCullin of 3901 Enright Ave., St. Louis, Mo., is the first flyer in the 99th pursuit squadron to be reported missing in action. He was in the group of flyers who participated in the bombing of Pantelleria.

47a

"Spratmore" and "Skeegumese"

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

(By Air Mail, Delayed. Passed by Censor.)

(Copyrighted. Reproduction Expressly Forbidden.)

JUL 9 1943

ENROUTE TO THE NORTH AFRICAN WAR ZONE—This column contains "Spratmore" principally. That is "Skeegumese" for choice bits of gossip or hangar talk about the pilots and ground crew. "Skeegum" is short for Tuskegee where the Army Flying School at which most of the men in this outfit have spent practically all of their Army life till now is located.

In other words we'll record here the gems of personal news—gossip, if you prefer—about this first unit of Negro pilots to see combat service in the history of the country.

This is the Fighter Squadron which was trained and activated at the Tuskegee Army Flying School and it is at last on its way, as this is being written, to the North African combat zone. Your correspondent is attached to this squadron and will try to bring you week-by-week and up-to-the minute history of this precedent smashing vitally significant flying fighter unit.

47a

1943

Nearest-to-home member of the pilot crew is 2nd Lt. George Richard Bolling of 24 Cummings Avenue, Phoebus, Va., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Bolling, of the same address. A graduate of Hampton Institute with a bachelor of science degree in electricity, Lt. Bolling got into flying during the summer of 1940 at Hampton where he enrolled in the CPT course.

After graduation he plied his trade at the Norfolk Navy Yard. from June to November, 1941, and then signed up as a flying cadet in the Army's new program at Tuskegee. He finished his primary, basic and advance training and was commissioned on July 3, 1942. Then he joined the Fighter Squadron.

Standing 5 feet 10 inches, and weighing 140 pounds, Lt. Bolling is an admirable specimen of the quality of men who make up this squadron. He is 22 years old. He does not smoke or drink, and the "Spratmore" I've been able to gather thus far would indicate that he sticks pretty close to flying for his recreation.

But there's xplanation for that, too [illegible] sure his sweetheart, Dolores Jenkins, a teacher at Florida A. and M. College, is very happy to have a boy friend like Lt. Bolling.

The youth of these lads is underscored by one fact which Lt. Bolling recalled. At Whittier School where he went through the grades, one of his teachers was my sister-in-law whom he remembers as "the prettiest teacher in the school."

HAMPTON TRADITION

His family formerly lived in Hampton and he is wrapped thickly with the tradition. He went on to Phenix High School from which he graduated in 1936, before matriculating at Hampton Institute.

STROLLS THE DECK

It's way past midnight and I've just returned from a stroll around the deck of our transport. A full moon paints a broad, glistening path across the water to the horizon. There are but a couple more days to go, but we are getting into the "hot" waters now.

Tomorrow we'll probably be within range of friendly patrol bombers from the other side, and they will be keeping sharp eyes peeled for Nazi submarine packs. If you read this you'll know we made tomorrow morning all right because I can't file this story until we debark.

I've promised a 3-column picture in the JOURNAL AND GUIDE for the first pilot of the squadron who knocks down a Jerry. ((Aside to the editor: Please oblige).

* * *

A remarkable thing is how 1st Lt. William A. Campbell (of the Tuskegee Campbells, Suh) has lived to be so old (age 26)! Without question the hardest teaser in the Squadron he is like the seven-years itch when he once turns his sparkling dry humor on a vic tim.

Yet he has more flying hours than any other man in the Squadron, just because he loves to fly. He was far ahead of minimum requirements for fighter pilots going into combat.

HARD TEASER

The wonder is not why or how he has avoided an accident in the air; his skill takes care of that. But it is how he has avoided the brickbats of exasperated "victims" of his teasing. I know. I've been sleeping in the same room with Lt. Campbell for over a week.

1943

Periodically we are told to set our watches ahead a half-hour. Can't say how often we do this because that would indicate the speed of our ship. And wouldn't old Jerry like to know that!!!

332nd Fighter Pilots Seen Ready, Eager For Combat

Journal and Guide
(O Norfolk, Virginia)

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer of this article, now in the United States on leave of absence, was until recently attached to the 99th Fighter Squadron as an accredited U. S. War Correspondent, and reported the combat action of this famed group of fliers from Africa and Sicily. His background of overseas reporting from a fighting front makes this article on the 332nd Fighter Group especially significant.)

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—There is very little difference between the Army Air Forces unit in training here, of which Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., recently took command, and the more famed 99th Fighter Squadron which he led through three months of precedent shattering combat action in the Mediterranean theatre last summer.

If there is any difference of consequence it is chiefly one of size. This latest assignment gives the 30-year-old son of the Army's only Negro general command of just three times more men, planes, equipment—and problems.

For a fighter group comprises three (or more) squadrons, each of which in its operations and organizations matches the make-up of the pioneer Tuskegee-trained unit which blazed the trail for Negro fliers in the Air Corps, plus a group headquarters which runs the three-squadron show.

AWARE OF DESTINY

Having crossed the ocean with the 99th last April, and observed their carefully scheduled preparation for baptism of enemy fire in the skies above Africa, I studied with keen interest daily routine of these daring young members of the Army Air Forces as they went through the final stages of their organizational training.

They were aware of the almost certain destiny that may soon put them, like their eminent predecessors in the 99th, into actual combat with German—or Japanese—fighters and bombers in the skies above Europe or the Pacific.

Every schoolboy can tell you that the Army is training fighter pilots for just one purpose—and that is, to fight and overwhelm the enemy in the air. There could be no lingering doubts in the minds of these men that they, too, are going to be called on to prove their right to wear the silver wings which so proudly adorn their chests.

There might have been doubts a year ago about what the high command planned to do with these newly accepted Negro pilots in the Air Corps. Those doubts, however, were dispelled when the 99th went overseas after two years of training in the United States.

PROFESS EAGERNESS

So, these bronze Americans who aspired to wear wings, too, knew then, as they know now, that their job in the Army would be fighting. Happily, the 332nd is dominated by men who have no illusions about their destiny.

Yet they show only reasonable and natural concern for the certain trip across one of the oceans that has been written into their secret itinerary for the future. Many profess an eagerness to get over there and show what they can do.

And I am certain that some of these are as sincere and honest about wanting to get into combat as any pilots of any race anywhere on this side of the global bomb line.

Let's make a quick appraisal of some of their "physical assets," and then let us consider some of the "intangibles" that constitute their military sound "net worth."

WILL SATISFY CRITICS

In the few days this writer was able to spend at Selfridge Field there was time to survey the group only by a "sampling" process. There doubtless are many of its finest assets which will not be mentioned here. But I saw enough to convince me of this one thing:—

This group of fighter pilots, the second unit committed to combat, will make a name for itself and hang up a record that will satisfy the most severe critic of colored fliers in the Air Corps.

They have read and heard the criticism recently made of the 99th Fighter Squadron—that its record of planes shot down was unsatisfactory. These boys in the 332nd think they can shoot down Jerries or Japs just as fast as any other fighter pilots can, and they are determined above all else to hang up enough victories over the enemy to forestall any such charges.

The desire and the determination are not all that is required to turn the trick. But they go a long way toward doing it. Any flier who's been overseas can tell you that the task is hopeless without those two requisites.

LEADERS PRODUCED

The 332nd fighter group has a commanding officer who who already has proved himself a "tonic" to the entire outfit. Col Davis had the frightfully difficult task of leading the first group of colored pilots through three months of combat initiation.

His will be the voice of experience, and of established authority, when he speaks. Even without that, he is universally regarded as a soldier and a leader with few peers. Well, West Point is noted for turning out great soldiers, and not every cadet who graduates is the son of a career Army man who rises to the rank of general.

Human nature being what it is, you might have anticipated some petty jealousy or resentment to the elevation of this youthful flying officer. But it wasn't that way.

Just about every man I talked to was happy about the appointment of their new commandant. They had anticipated his coming quite keenly after the news was made known, and his arrival at the field gave the entire organization a tremendous "lift."

That's as it should be. The program to train Negro fliers for the Army Air Forces is, at the outset, a failure if it does not produce men capable of commanding those separate units activated for combat operations. The result would be most unfortunate if the men who make up those units did not accept, and even prefer, the leadership chosen from their own ranks.

ROUZEAU TELLS HOW OUR BOYS FIGHT GERMANS

SEP 18 1943
Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU, Courier War Correspondent

(Copyright, 1943, by The Pittsburgh Courier Publishing Company. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.)

SICILY, Sept. 16—(Via Wireless)—Tuskegee's "Black Eagles" of the 99th Pursuit Squadron from Alabama were in the thick of the fighting when the Allies bombarded Sicily and, with the heat of invasion now stretched to the Italian mainland and the atmosphere heavy with an aroma of impending climax, Our Boys are still "up to their necks" in this "Peoples' War." But, as much consternation as they have caused the Axis in their P-40 Warhawks, the majority of the "99th" pilots want Spitfires or P-51 Mustangs, which, being faster, would rob the Germans of power and would make all combat decisions in their favor.

The pilots of the "99th," to a man, have averaged 25 aerial missions over enemy combat territory since Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., and his now famous bronze fighter pilots first cast their dark but heroic shadows over the North African-Mediterranean basin.

TOUGHEST ASSIGNMENTS

The bulk of the 99th Pursuit Squadron's work, to date, has been of a highly important nature, but it has not been glamorous newspaper reading, because the Allied Air Command does not favor newspaper heroes and frowns on the idea of daredevil pilots hunting aerial combats — the theory being that the results obtained are unworthy of the risk of valuable plane and personnel. The risk is approved only when planes must fight to safely escort bombers to and fro or when bombing enemy gun positions which may, on a large scale, Allied ground operations and endanger thousands of troops.

SEP 18 1943

The Tuskegee-trained fighter fliers of the "99th" have been used chiefly for escorting bombers, strafing troops and bombing gun positions.

On such fighter "sweep" missions, fighter pilots seek fights, since they are permitted to attack anything and everything, in the air or on the ground, within an area assigned to this particular patrol.

GERMANS MAKE DECISIONS

But when Our Boys meet German fighters on these special missions, they must wait for the Germans to bring the fight to them. German Messerschmitts 109 and Focke-Wulfs 190 are two or three thousand pounds lighter than our P-40 Warhawks and can out-race, out-climb and out-dive them.

When German fliers don't want to fight they simply keep out of range and our pilots can't get near them. On the other hand, if the Germans outnumber us and seek Transportation Corps, Officers' Candidate School.

Sergeant Taylor, who resides in Dallas, Texas, was employed 10 years as machinist, before he entered the Army on January 25, 1941

tage of terrific fire power (six guns), however, and can turn in a much smaller circle than the fast-moving German Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs. Usually, the enemy is in the air when contacted, whereupon the Allied pilot simply turns into him. Since the German pilot cannot make a similar quick turn, his rigid guns are out of focus in the twinkling of an eye. The German plane, in such a spot, keeps diving to get out of range of our guns. With the German plane diving, our turning can be continuous without the Warhawks being hit as long as they see the Germans coming and time their turning moment accurately.

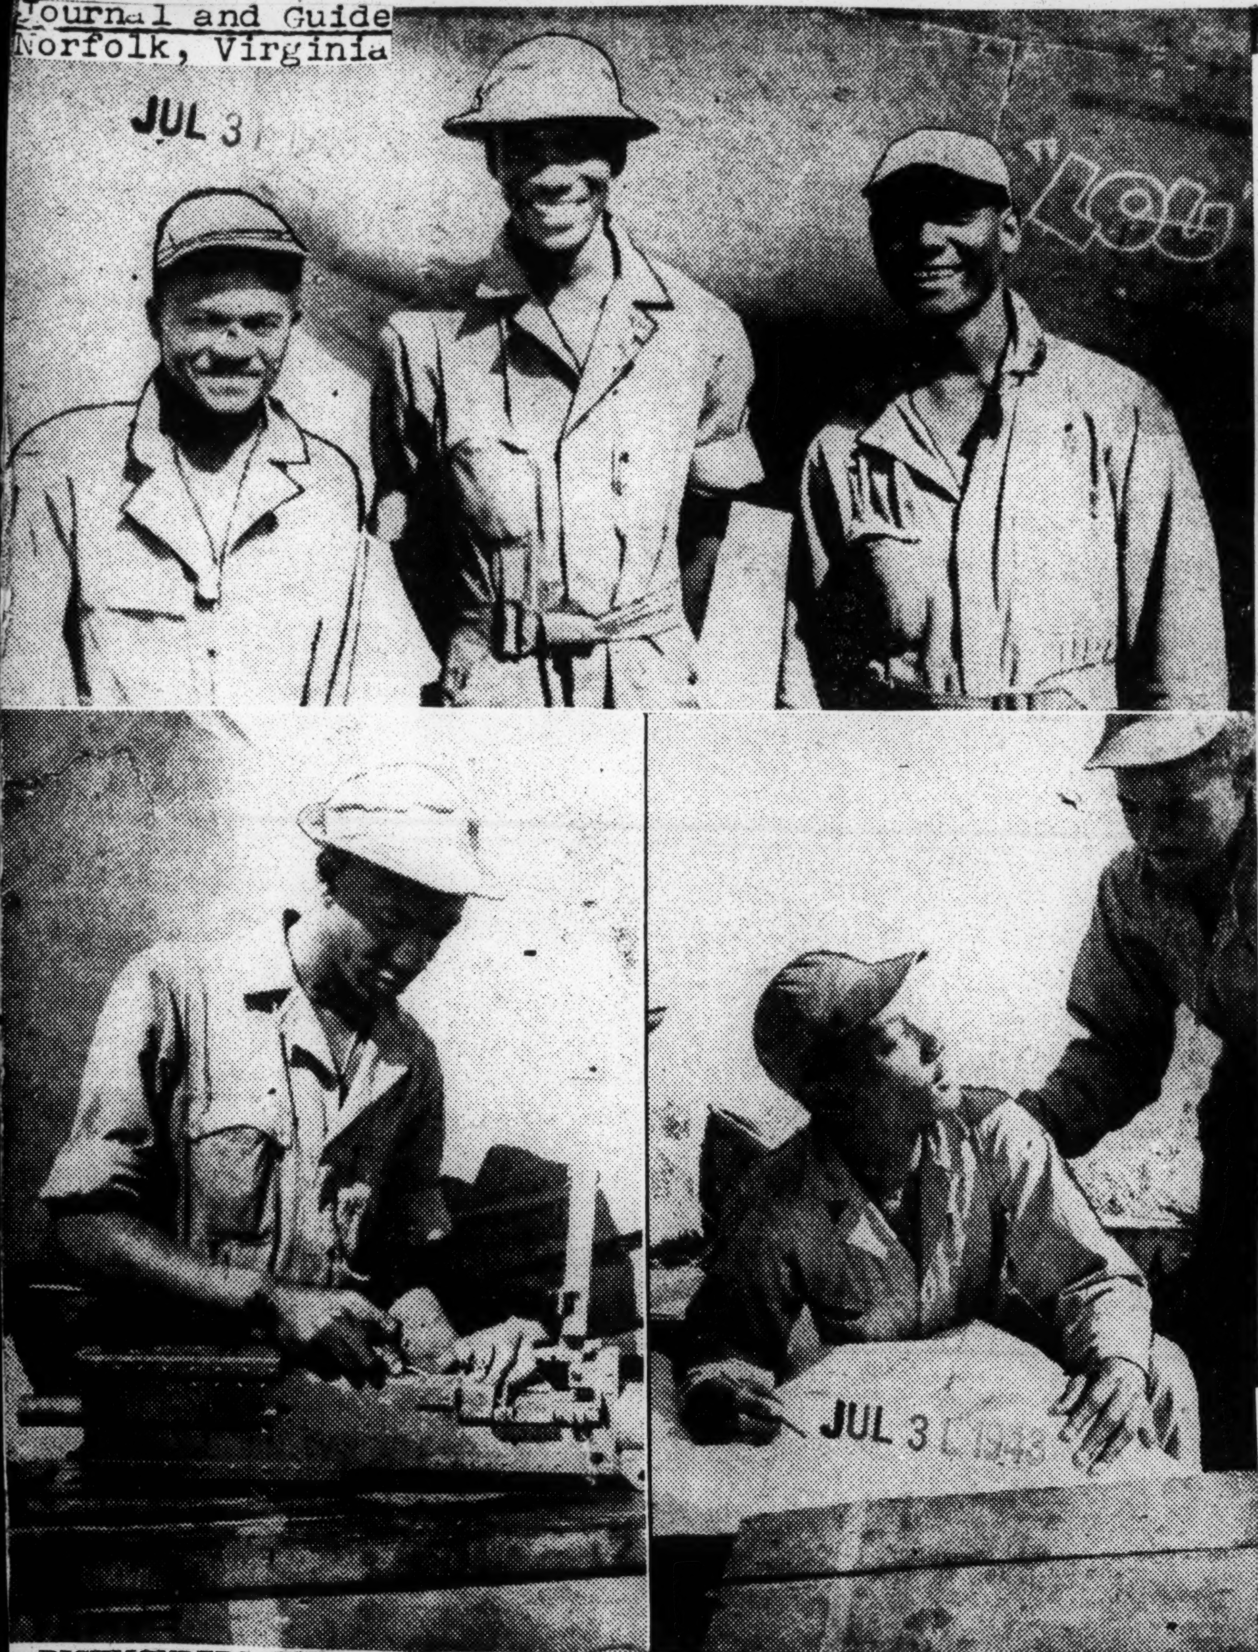
"WILL-O'-THE-WISPS"

The German planes are usually gone before Our Boys can focus guns on them. Few Germans can stomach head-on fights against our guns.

Our pilots have developed great teamwork and know how to protect each other in tight spots. The Germans invariably find themselves facing too many Warhawks and seldom come down from high altitudes to fight. Our Boys feel they have accumulated the necessary experience for successful air combats. They believe the Germans are concentrating on making "fighters"—not "bombers"—and won't risk having these fighters knocked down.

47a-1943
Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

JUL 31



JUL 3 1 1943

RICHMONDERS WITH 99th FIGHTER SQUADRON — The only three Richmond, Va., residents in the 99th Fighter Squadron now doing combat service in North Africa are shown in the above layout. Shown at top, left to right: Corporal Kenneth C. Freeman, 21, of 411 W. Marshall street; Sergeant William H. Young, 22, of 107 Birch avenue, and Corporal Augustus W. Gayles, 22, of 7 South Beech street.

Corporal Gayles is shown bottom, right, seated, pointing out to Corporal Freeman on a map how he finds enemy planes by use of radio and allied equipment. At bottom, left, Sergeant Young is shown repairing a machine gun from the wing of a P-40 Warhawk plane flown by one of the members [redacted] Fighter Squadron of which [redacted] is a member. (Exclusive Journal and Guide photos by Thomas W. Young).

47a

World-Telegram
New York. N. Y.

Col. Davis Given
New Air Command

OCT 5 1943

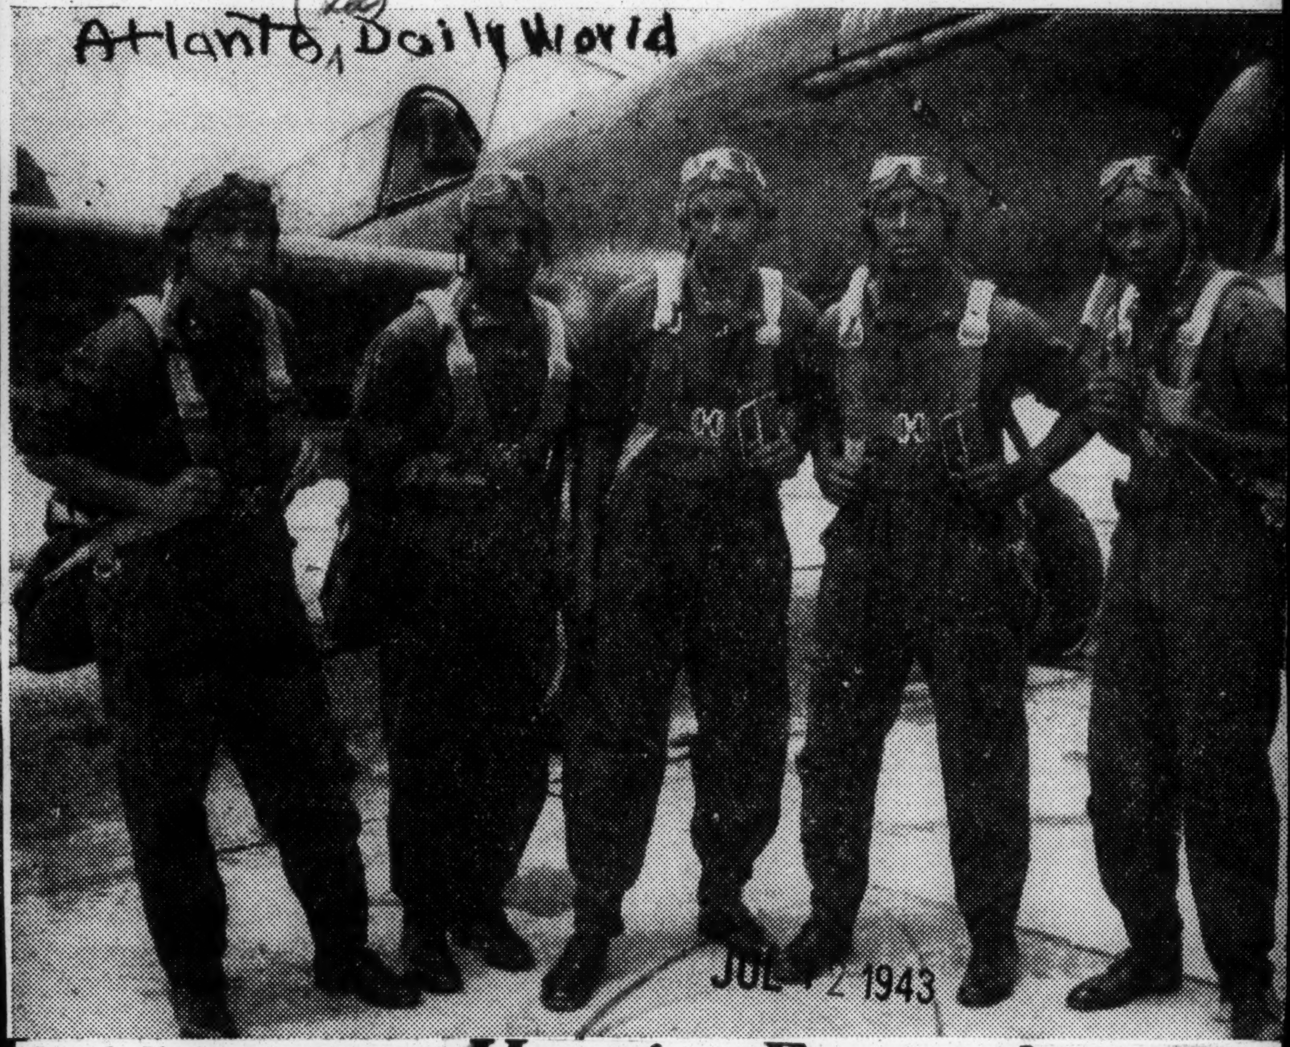
By the United Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., a Negro, formerly commander of the 99th Fighter Squadron, now in action in Italy, has assumed command of the 332nd fighter group at Selfridge Field, Mich., the War Department announced today. Both are Negro units. The 30-year-old Davis is the first Negro officer ever to command an air force combat unit.

47a

Fighter Pilots Begin Training At TAAF

(2a)
Atlanta, Daily World



JUL 12 1943

Second Lieutenants Richard H. Harris Jr., Oscar A. Kenney, John S. Sloan, Frank D. Walker and Willis S. Hunter are shown getting ready to take a test flight in one of the fighter planes at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. They were among the recent graduates to receive their wings and commission at this base. Lt. Harris, son of Mr and Mrs. R. H. Harris of 283 S Jackson St., Montgomery, Ala. graduated from Fisk University in 1941 with a Bachelor of Arts degree. Lt. Kenney, son of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Kenney of Box 248 Tuskegee Institute, Ala., attended Oberlin College from 1939 to 1941. Lt. Sloan of 2817 S. 6th St., Louisville, graduated from Kentucky State College with a Bachelor of Arts degree. Lt. Walker of 110 E. Main St., Richmond, Ky., attended West Virginia State from 1938 to 1941. Lt. Hunter, son of Mrs. Daisy Hunter of 1323 Whitney Ave., Albany, Ga., attended Tuskegee Institute from 1939 to 1941.

JUL 12 1943

(47a)

Hastie Raps Army School At Tuskegee

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

(47a)

By WILLIAM H. HASTIE
(Former Civilian Aide to Secretary of War)

FEB 27 1943

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—There is not now and never has been any good reason for the segregated training of Negro flyers at Tuskegee.

There are two stages in the training of a soldier to be an Army flyer. The first stage teaches the new cadet how to fly, using small light aircraft adapted to the training of a beginner. This part of the program is carried out by private operators who contract with the Army to give preliminary flying instruction to aviation cadets. The private contractor furnishes the field and the instructors, while the Army selects and assigns the cadets, prescribes the course of instruction and supervises training. There are a great many such contract schools scattered in various sections of the country.

The cadet who successfully completes the elementary flying course at such a school is next assigned to an Army field for further basic and advanced training. From this point on, the Army takes complete charge of the training program.

FEB 27 1943

There was no need to segregate Negro cadets in either stage of training. Newly appointed Negro cadets could have been assigned to beginning classes at any one of the many contract schools just as white cadets are assigned. In fact one or two Negro cadets were so assigned by mistake. But when they arrived for training, arrangements were quickly made to reassign them to Tuskegee. Similarly in the more advanced training, Negroes who had completed the primary course could have been sent to the various Army flying training centers, but the Air Command was determined to separate Negro and white cadets at every stage of training.

Tuskegee Institute was awarded a contract to provide Army primary training for Negro Army aviation cadets. Under this contract the Army enlisted and appointed a small group of Negro cadets every few weeks and sent them to the Tuskegee Institute for elementary flying training under Army supervision. Incidently, this caused some confusion because Tuskegee Institute also had a civilian pilot course which is not connected with the Army. Some young men enrolled in this civilian course under the misapprehension that by doing so they were getting into Army aviation.

FEB 27 1943

For the more advanced training of Negro cadets, the Army invested millions of dollars in the construction of a new Army Air Base for Negroes located a few miles from the town of Tuskegee. Tuskegee Institute has no connection with this Army field or with the advanced training conducted there. However, as to this also there has been some confusion and misunderstanding in the public mind.

But why in the name of common sense should all of this elaborate special machinery be set up to train Negro flyers. It was expensive. It caused a delay of six months or more in the beginning of flying training for Negroes. It was not flexible, since it was adapted only to the training of pursuit pilots. Only by setting up additional Negro training centers for bombardment and observation, or by abandoning segregated training could the program be broadened.

The idea of a separate training base for Negro pilots is indefensible, if Negroes are actually to be an integral part of our combat air forces. It is not possible to train flyers in one small area as foot soldiers can be trained. Even in training, men must fly from field to field. After a flyer is commissioned, his flying in this country will necessarily take him in and out of a large number of flying fields. If he goes into combat abroad one thing is certain, he will not just fly out of a Jim-Crow base with his own Negro unit and fly back again. Even infantrymen traveling on their own two feet get scattered in combat. How much more are aviators bound to get into unexpected places and undergo regrouping from time to time during the course of a campaign. It is simply impossible to maintain racial segregation of pilots in a combat area. The Air Command must know this.

Since such contacts and mingling are unavoidable, the only sensible thing to do is to prepare men for them by providing inter-racial associations in training such as they are bound to have later on. If we want white and colored flyers in combat to get along well with each other, the best plan is to build mutual understanding and self-respect by training men together from the time they begin learning to fly. The worst plan is to keep them apart until they are forced together under the stress of circumstances in combat. Prejudice is based on ignorance. Let men get acquainted with each other in training and there is no great problem of their harmony later on.

All of this has seemed simple and obvious to me. The Air Command, however, cannot see it. The Air Command is not even influenced by the fact that the ground forces have been training white and colored officer candidates together with excellent results ever since the beginning of the present Army expansion.

There are none so blind as those who do not want to see. And the Air Command just does not want to see the advantages of training situation in this country for wha it is rather than for what the would have it to be, know tha these opportunities have been, ar important now, and will be for long time to come. Our great nee

---

Lt. Charles B. Hall First To Get "Jerry"

Journal and Guide

Focke-Wulf 190 Knocked Out In History-Making Action Over Sicily

Norfolk, Virginia

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent
(By Cable, Delayed. Passed by Censor)
(Copyrighted. Reproduction Expressly Forbidden)

JUL 10 1943

SOMEWHERE IN NORTH AFRICA—First Lieutenant Charles B. Hall, 22-year-old fighter pilot of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, has blasted from the skies the first German fighter credited to a Negro flier of the United States Army Air Forces.

Lt. Hall was part of a fighter group protecting a formation of U. S. Mitchell Bombers which attacked the enemy airfield at Castelventrano in Sicily. His victim was one of 20 German interceptors which came up thru a heavy haze to battle the formation. A Focke-Wulf 190 fell crashing to earth before the blazing guns of Lt. Hall.

Here is his story:

"I saw two Focke-Wulfs following the Mitchells just after the bombs were dropped. I headed for the space between the fighters and the bombers and managed to turn inside the Jerries.

"I fired a long burst and saw my tracers penetrate the second aircraft. He was turning to the left, but suddenly fell off and headed straight into the ground. I followed him down and saw him crash.

"He raised a big cloud of dust."

The young lieutenant, a native of Brazil. Indiana, also had the distinction of being one of the first two pilots of the 99th Squadron to go into action early in June. The other was First Lieutenant William A. Campbell of Tuskegee, Ala. Lt. Hall was given his wings and commission at Tuskegee Army Flying School on June 3, 1942. It was almost a year to the day that he took off from a North African airfield, home of the squadron, to take part in the bombing offensive against Pantelleria. With other members of the squadron he dropped 500 pound bombs from the P-40 Warhawk fighter jobs they fly. The July 2 flight was the eighth mission for the pilot against the enemy. In addition to the plane shot down by Lt. Hall, a second, a Messerschmitt 109, was probably shot down and a third was hit and damaged.

YOUNG

The attack on Castelventrano was the first mission by medium bombers of the Northwest African Tactical Air Force since the fall of Pantelleria on June 11. The resistance from the enemy was furious as 20 German defenders took to the air.

The communique issued at Allied Headquarters in North Africa on July 3 said: "Yesterday B-25 Mitchells of the Tactical Air Force attacked Castelventrano airfield in Sicily. One enemy fighter was shot down by one of the P-40 Warhawks escorting the bombers." All our planes returned safely.

Following the action of July 2, General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied Commander-In-Chief, visited the 99th pursuit unit and personally congratulated Lt. Hall for his exploits. Gen. Eisenhower also congratulated Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., squadron commander.

This first air victory for which the pilots, and all sponsors and boosters of the Negro squadron project, have awaited with eager anticipation since the first class graduated in March, 1942 at Tuskegee Flying Field came after long preparation on the part of the 99th's fliers.

For months the young flying officers awaited the issuing by the Army Air Force of the necessary battle command. With a promise early in the year that the fighters would be in the thick of things against the enemy by June 1, the Army sent into motion operational plans to dispatch the fighters and their crewmen to the North African scene of operations.

Late in April they arrived in Africa just before the fall of the vaunted German Africa Corps. Advanced training in African skies under the expert instruction of battle-wise veterans fitted them for the real test. They were taught the art of bombing from a fighter plane. By June they were ready.

Pantelleria was the first objective of the 99th. For eight days, usually as part of veteran squadrons the fliers swooped over the island and dropped missles of destruction upon the base, which eventually was forced to surrender, making the first complete victory over a fortified stronghold by air power.

The opposition was little. Anti-aircraft fire was all they faced.

Seven days after the Allies took over the island, the Germans came. Twelve bombers and 22 fighter planes formed a formation sent to bomb the installations to forestall the pending Allied offensive. A flight of six pilots of the 99th was on patrol.

Unhesitatingly the planes roared into battle and drove away the enemy. As a result of this June 18 action two German planes were damaged, according to operational reports. None was definitely reported shot down. This came on July 2, when Lt. Hall blasted a Focke-Wulf over Sicily.

Major Is Proud Of 99th Pilots He Gave Start

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

SEP 4 1943

KEARNS, UTAH—When news of the Negro fighter pilot squadron's success in North Africa came through, proudest man on the post was Major T. Smith, who was commanding officer of Moton Field, Tuskegee Institute, Ala., where the pilots received their primary training.

Every one of the P-40 pilots, from the commanding officer, Lieutenant-Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr. down, had gone thru the school while Major Smith was there.

He remembers that first group, and all the other Negro aviation cadets, as being outstanding aerial gunnery. "They established extremely high records in that field," he said.

Negro cadets are handled in the same fashion as whites. They are recruited from civilian life. from the Army and from men overseas.

PRIMARY PHASE

They received their training at the Tuskegee Institute and Tuskegee Army Air Base—pre-flight, primary, basic. advanced, and transition. The major's branch at the institute handles only the primary training phase.

The major came here in July to help recruit CPT men for the Army to act as instructors for flying cadets. He expects to be here until October 1 and then back to Moton Field. After that he wants combat action.

Major Smith graduated from West Point in 1939, received his pilot's wings at Kelly Field, Texas in 1940. He assumed command at Tuskegee on December 1, 1941.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Artillery Men Trained To Fly As Observers

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Another phase of flying has been temporarily added to the training schedule of the busy Tuskegee Army Air Field. Joining the Basic Trainers, Advanced Trainers and P-40's that crowd the busy runways of this active air base, a grasshopper fleet of tiny "cubs," Army liaison planes, are landing and taking off from the field.

This addition to the Tuskegee field's curriculum is a course of instruction for qualified Negro field artillery officers who are training as liaison pilots. The course lasts from nine weeks, during which time the trainee receives sixty hours in the tiny sixty-five horsepower airplane.

SEP 4 1943

The students, all officers, most of whom have come up from the ranks in the field artillery, live in the bachelor officers quarters at the air base. Their schedule calls for them to attend ground school classes every morning.

ARE OBSERVERS

In these classes they are taught such necessary subjects to successful flying as theory of flight, aircraft engines, navigation. aircraft recognition, and weather. Every afternoon they are transported to the Tallasee auxiliary field of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, where they accomplish the actual flying.

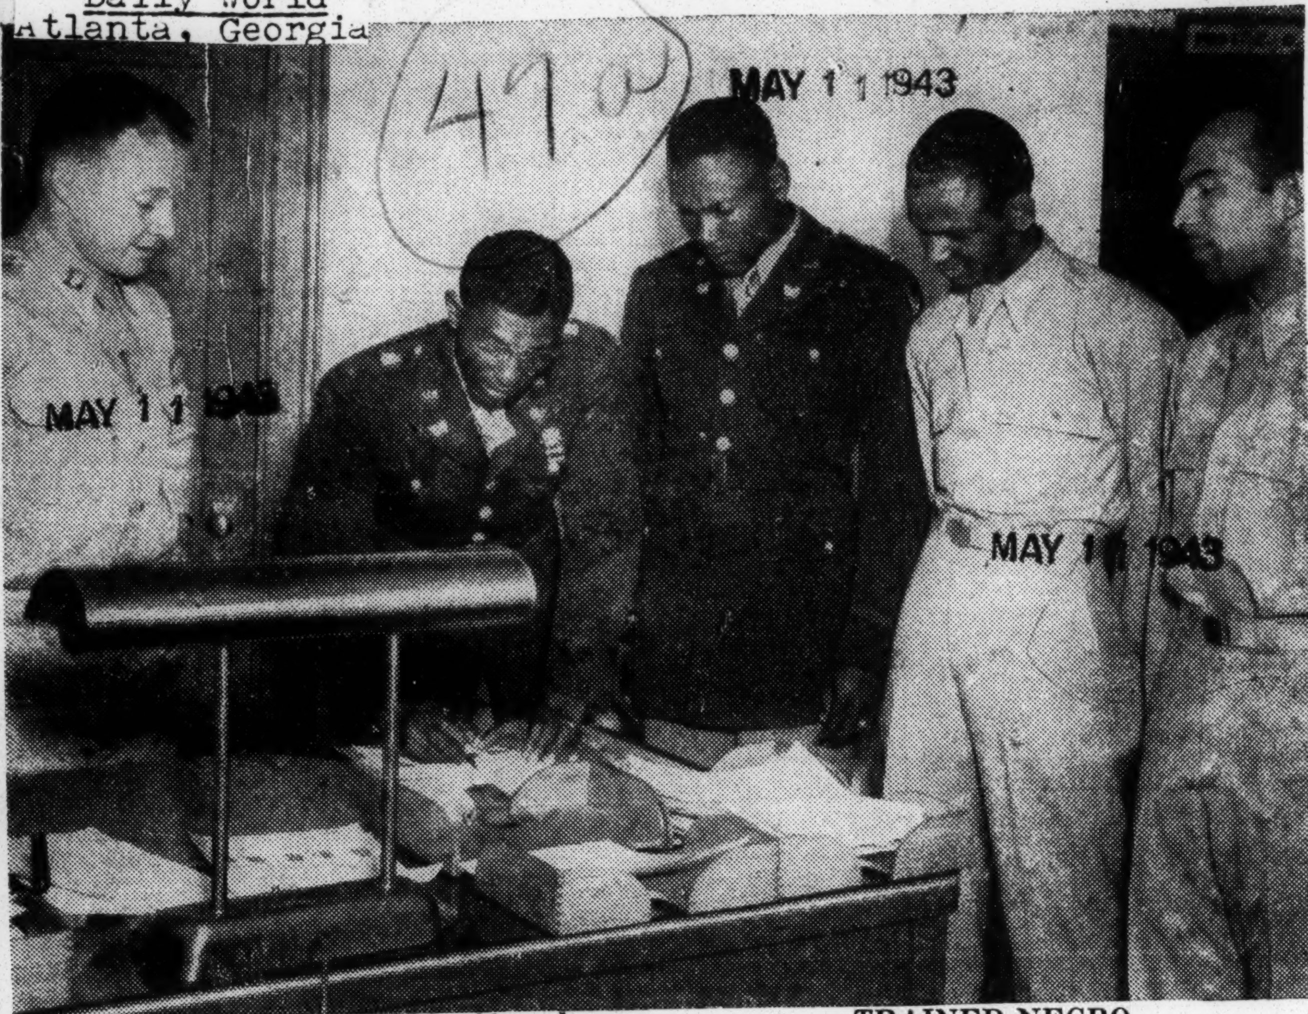
After nine weeks and sixty hours of flying instruction, the student officer receives his liaison pilot wings and goes to Ft. Sill, Okla., for advanced training and preparation for tactical work. In combat these liaison pilots serve as observers of battery fire. They fly so they can see where the salvos from their batteries are hitting. Then necessary corrections are radioed from the pilot to the battery crews until the shots are striking the targets.

47a-1943

New Warrant Officers At Tuskegee Base

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

MAY 11 1943



TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—Among the new officers at the Tuskegee Army Air Field are four new Warrant Officers (Junior Grade) who recently received their commissions in the Army of the United States. All four of the men have been members of the Regular Army and were outstanding non-commissioned officers in their specialized duties. Signing his discharge as an enlisted man in the presence of Captain Clyde H. Bynum of Auburn, Ala., Post Adjutant, is F-Sgt Daniel Hicks of Brooklyn, N. Y. Other newly commissioned "Misters" are: F-Sgt. Augustus Robertson of New York City, S-Sgt. Roscoe Thompson of Camden, S. C., and M-Sgt. Frederick Herbert of Detroit.

Lt.-Col. B. O. Davis Meets Original "Corkin" in Africa

People's Voice, New York, N.Y.

JUN 19 1943

By LLEWELLYN RANSOM

"Flip Corkin," flying hero of Milt Caniff's comic strip, Terry and the Pirates, talked about the valor and genious of American flyers without distinction of race and color in a "personal appearance" for the press at the Waldorf Astoria last Tuesday.

"Corkin" is none other than the famous Lt. Col. Phil Cochran, who landed with the first units in North Africa and spent months with a hand full of American flyers in P 40's who supported black and white ground units when Rommel pounded the Allies with his superior forces. He and his men held on in guerilla fashion until supplies and reinforcements arrived.

TRAINED NEGRO SQUADRON

After he had been wounded, "Corkin" was sent to Morocco to train new fighters for the African terrain. His last assignment before leaving for America was the training of the 99th Pursuit Squadron headed by Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, jr. Since then, the famous Negro unit has seen fire and has fought with the same "second sense and ingenuity" that "Corkin" says all the "kids" fight with.

"The boys didn't want me to bring back any stories about them until they had had their chance to show the world what they could do," he said.

"They are like any other American fighters — eager, hard-working and daring."

At the end of the press conference, "Corkin" went to Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis' suite to pay his respects and give him first-hand information about his son.

Air Force Schools To Include Negroes

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

JUL 16 1943

(Daily Worker Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Acting Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson revealed today that steps are being taken to break down jim crow restrictions in the Army Air Force.

Patterson told a press conference that air force schools for navigators and bombardiers will now include both Negro and white cadets.

It is understood that this is but one of a series of moves contemplated by high War Department officials to eliminate some of the discriminatory practices rampant against Negroes in the Army.

The Army Air Force has been one of the strongholds of jim crow, and Judge William Hastie, the noted Negro lawyer, resigned a few months ago after he had failed to make any progress towards removing discrimination in the Air Force.

At present the only Negroes being trained for the Air Force are at segregated schools at Tuskegee Institute and Selfridge Field, Michigan. Those schools train Negro fighter squadrons—which have already seen action.

The new step announced by Patterson means both that progress is being made towards removing segregation in army schools and towards training Negroes for service on bombers for the first time.

Asked for what the Negro navigators and bombardiers would be used, Patterson said: "They are not going to be used to play marbles or cut paper dolls. They'll be used in combat duty."

CHAMBERS COUNTY NEGROES IN THE SERVICE

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"Editor, The LaFayette Sun,
LaFayette, Alabama.
"Dear Editor:

"The column that you have reserved in your paper for news of 'Chambers County Negroes In The Service' is truly a wonderful opportunity, and very much appreciated by all Negroes of this county.

"Our boys who are in various Army camps and some who are overseas, have had the opportunity to read their home town paper and reports from them say that it is encouraging to know that they are being so kindly thought of by the people at home. So again, thanks for this column.

"Although none of the boys from Chambers County are members of this Squadron, if permissible I would like to say a few words about the splendid work of the First Air Squadron of Negroes the world has ever known.

"This Squadron, which is known as the '99th Pursuit Squadron' is composed of Negroes only, and originated from the Tuskegee Army Flying School, Tuskegee, Ala., located just nine miles from Tuskegee Institute, and is commanded by Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., who is the son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, the only Negro to hold the highest Army rank.

"The '99th Pursuit Squadron fought victoriously in the raids of Pantelleria and recent invasion of Sicily.

"This squadron has been highly praised by General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied Commander in Chief in North Africa, and Secretary of War Mr. Stimson.

"We should be very proud and grateful to our boys for their courageous fighting and with the help of God and our prayers we are hoping that all of them will come home again victorious.

"EVELYN WEBB."

Below is news:

S.|Sgt. Willie Gresham, stationed at Camp Stewart, Ga., was recently home on 3 days leave.

Cpl. Frank (Mike) Rae is serving with the U. S. Army in North Africa.

Sgt. Harry Lee Flournoy is stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Pvt. Nick C. Flakes is stationed at Fort Benning, Ga.

Cpl. Walter Trimble is with the U. S. Army in North Africa.

Negro Squadron Beats Off Nazis

PM
New York, N. Y.

JUN 25 1943

The first U. S. Negro fighter squadron to see action successfully beat off a force of Nazi F-W 190's which outnumbered them more than three-to-one over Pantelleria June 18.

A War Dept. report says the U. S. pilots, in six P-40 Warhawks, were attacked by 12 Nazis convoying a bomber formation while 10 more German fighter planes hovered overhead for further cover. Two of the enemy planes were damaged and the rest withdrew. All the Americans returned safely.

The leader of the U. S. flight was 1st Lt. Charles W. Dryden, 22, 800 Holmes St., the Bronx.

Haitian Pilots Now Training At Tuskegee

Atlanta Daily World

APR 4 1943

Receiving a pre-flight chalk talk from their instructor at the Tuskegee Institute Primary Training Detachment are from left to right, Sgt. Raymond Cossagnal, Lts. Philipe Calestin and Alix Pasquet. These three Haitians are earning their wings in the United States Army Air Corps for the Haiti Republic.

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

TUSKEGEE'S PILOT TRAINING PROGRAM GIVEN BY OFFICER

Men Practice on Two Fields Near Famous School

JUL 16 1943

TUSKEGEE, July 8—(ANP)—The outline of Tuskegee Institute's pilot training program that provided background for the famous 99th Pursuit squadron now on combat duty in North Africa and the relationship of the three fields here was given this week in a report by G. L. Washington, general manager of the division of aeronautics.

Washington, a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and former director of the Tuskegee trade school, said the program "is restricted to training under government contracts embracing flying training for aviation cadets and flying training for enlisted reservists under the civil aeronautics administration war training program." Before the advent of the new program instruction was also given to civilians.

There are two fields under the division, one devoted to C. A. A war training, and the other named Moton field in memory of the second president of the institution. This latter field, owned outright by the school, trains cadets in their primary flying stages. Both fields the fall of 1940. stated Washington, and was licensed as an advanced flying school by the department of commerce in 1941. This have been designated landing ares under war emergency regulations.

The other field is six miles out from Moton field and is known as the Tuskegee Army Air field which is owned and operated by the U. S. Army Air corps. This field provides basic and advanced flying instruction to aviation cadets and is a restricted army post.

Tuskegee got its first airport in field trains students under civilian pilot training courses, in cross country, elementary, secondary and instructors courses. It also furnished the instructors for members of the 99th Pursuit Squadron The field is now completing C. A. A. contracts.

At Moton field trainees of the U. S. Air corps are given their primary flying courses. To qualify for training here they must have completed successfully the pre-flight work at field number one. Upon completion of the work here the cadets are next sent to the Tuskee Army Air field. Moton field has been in operation since August, 1941.

JUL 15 1943

Graduates of the primary courses at Moton field are given basic flying instruction in an intensive nine weeks' course at the Tuskegee Army Air field in operation since November, 1941. Successful candidates remain for a similar number of weeks to absorb instructions in advanced flying, and upon graduation receive their wings and commissions.

After all those steps in the training period have been completed the officers are assigned to flying pursuit aircraft preparatory to be transferred to another field of pre-combat flight training, said Washington.

JUL 16 1943

Andalusia, Ala., News
July 15, 1943

Ala. Aviators Given "48-Gun Salute", A Radio Tribute

AAC Hq., Puerto Rico, July 14.—Alabama's Antilles aviators and Air Forces soldiers were spotlighted on the Antilles Air Command's "48-Gun Salute," a 30-minute radio tribute to the 'Bama state and its men in uniform.

A weekly program originated for and by Air Force soldiers, "48-Gun Salute" is broadcast to Caribbean air bases on islands extending from the western tip of Cuba to the sweltering equatorial belt of South America. The program derives its name from the military custom of firing one gun for each state of the union on Independence Day.

Stationed on isolated bases throughout the Caribbean, Alabama's soldiers were reminded of their home state and cities as they listened to skits, facts and music about Alabama. Cities discussed and "visited" included Phoenix City, Birmingham, its steel industries and raw materials; Bessemer; Cullman, known for its strawberry festivals; Muscle Shoals with its huge hydroelectric plants; Dothan, land of the wire grass; Montgomery, cradle of the confederacy; Tuskegee and its famous Tuskegee Institute; Mobile with its Bellingrath Gardens and the Azalea Trail and others.

Cpl. Bill Davidson, of Birmingham, and Sgt. Tom Sharp, of Springhill, participated in the program. Other Alabamians mentioned were Sgt. Otto Simon, of Mobile; Cpl. James Landrum, of Deer Park, and Sgt. James Clements, of Tuscaloosa.

A highlight of the program was the dramatization of the heroism of Lt. (j.g.) Johnny Roberts, former fullback hero of the Crimson Tide, who dive-bombed his plane into a Jap aircraft carrier in the Pacific. Lt. Roberts now is missing in action but he has been credited with the sinking of an enemy aircraft carried in the battle of Midway.

Tribute also was paid to the first Negro Fighter squadron in the Air Forces, a squadron which received part of its training at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama. It was this unit that established a record for itself in the bombardment and capture of Pantelleria.

"48-Gun Salute" salutes a different state of the union and its armed forces each week. It is broadcast to palm-fringed air bases from which planes fly daily patrols over an area 39 times that of Alabama, constantly on the alert for menacing Axis submarines.

AAC air bases are located strategically on small coral islands and in the midst of the lush tropical Caribbean jungles forming a protective barrier to the vital gateway to the three Americas and the Panama Canal.

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

Cheers To Our Flyers.

JUL 17 1943

AT LAST Negro flyers are winging their way through the thick of current air battles. Our first Negro air fighter squadron was reported to be unexcelled in discipline or flying excellence after the termination of action over Pantelleria and proximal territory.

This squadron, flying P-40 Warhawks, is under the immediate leadership of Lieut. Col. Benjamin Davis, Jr., and the general command of Colonel William Momyer. Most of these men are college trained and have unusually brilliant aptitudes as flyers, according to their superiors.

The squadron was cited for its meritorious effort in its initial combat engagement over Pantelleria. These airmen served as patrols over the conquered Island and disabled two Focke-Wulf planes and forced the third to feed its bombs to the fish after an attempted 'nuisance raid' by the Nazi flyers.

JUL 17 1943

These Negro flyers are now escorting big bombers, in addition to engaging in fighter bomber attacks. Colonel Davis said that his men are good flyers and are anxious to get in the thick of things. "They realize that war is only for the hardy types. That is why they are keen for the difficult task ahead, so we can get it over with."

Meanwhile, invasion plans are proceeding with exceeding care and thoroughness. It is to be hoped that these boys are given every facility and every incentive to acquit themselves like the excellent men we know them to be. Davis said that the men wanted to face and get over the difficult task ahead. That view is universally shared.

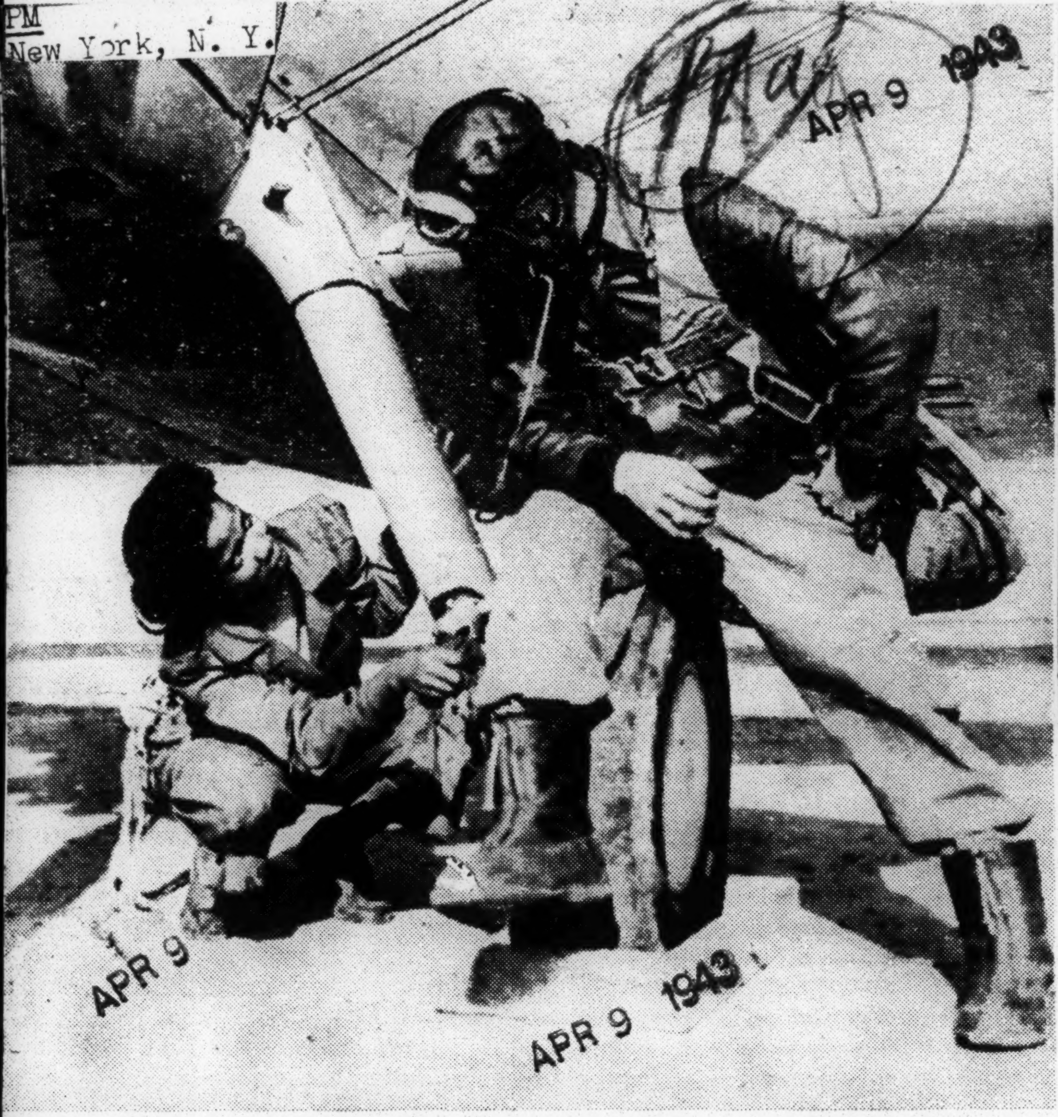
This can best be done by keeping the morale of our boys high by evidencing a wholehearted cooperation both in combat as well as non-combat relationship. We can well dispense with our army and navy pattern of segregation in our air corps set-up.

JUL 17 1943

A black army and navy and a white army and navy are examples of sublime nonsense in a democracy. But it would be an absolute tragedy to continue attempts at segregating airmen. Segregation engenders bad feeling and a lack of comradeship. The rank and file of white and Negro youth do not want it. The brass hats will jeopardize our maximum efforts if they do not rid themselves of the blind spots of prejudice and plan a united all-out effort.

47a-1943

PM
New York, N. Y.



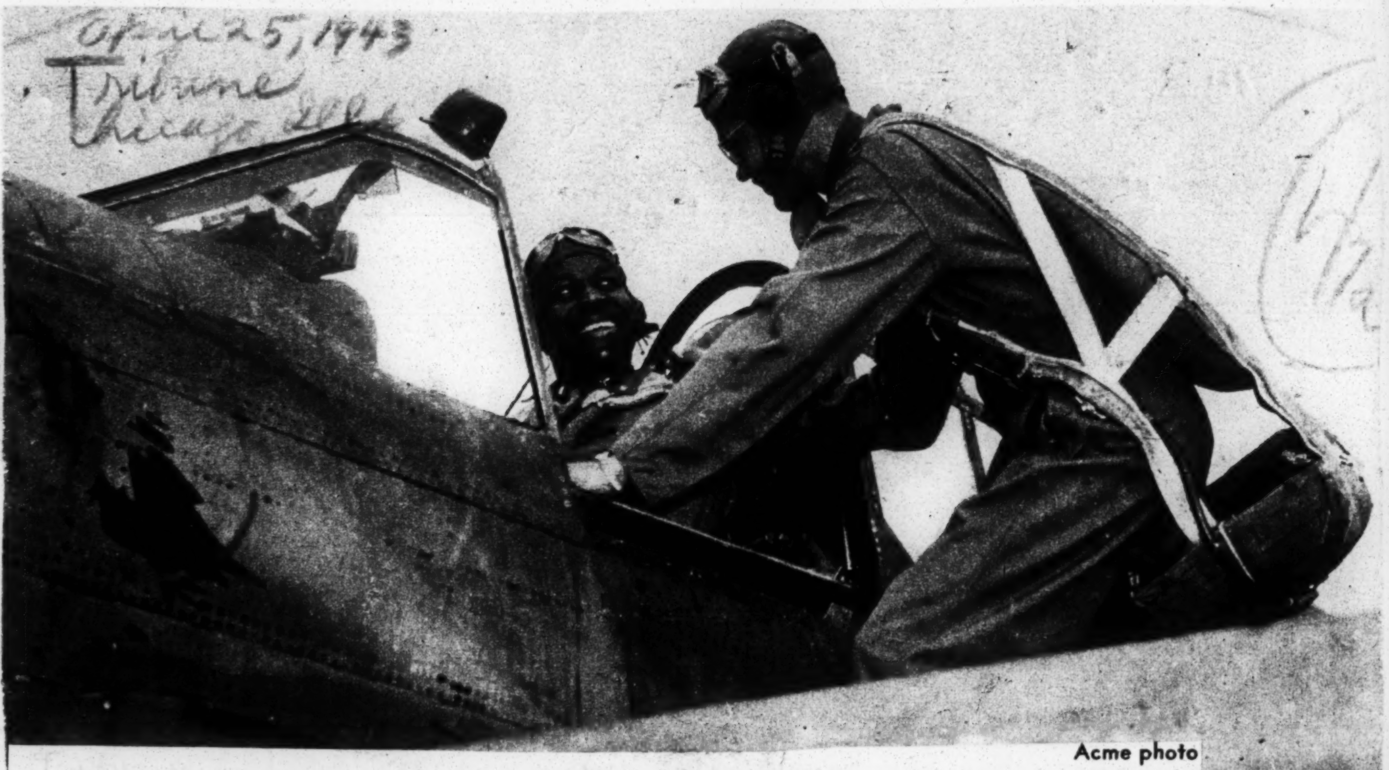
APR 9 1943

APR 9 1943

APR 9 1943

Marjorie Dorsey, apprentice mechanic, was working on the landing gear of this plane when Cadet Cornelius G. Rogers, about to take off into "the blue sky yonder," came up to say hello. The scene took place at Tuskegee, where Negro cadets are trained in advanced flying.

April 25, 1943
Tribune
Chicago Ill.



Acme photo

AN ARMY FLEDGLING learning to fly at the Tuskegee, Ala., air base, training center for colored pilots. His instructor is Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., highest ranking colored officer in the army air forces and son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, highest ranking colored officer in the regular army.

Student Pilot Killed in Training

FEB 5 1943

"The Call" Kansas City Mo.

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(ANP)—Lt. Richard Davis, 25, pilot, was instantly killed in an accident here Saturday night. The accident occurred on a routine flight with a pursuit airplane. A board has been appointed by the commanding officer to investigate the cause of the crash.

FEB 5 1943

Davis, whose home was Fort Valley, Ga., was a former student of Hampton institute. Also, he was a pilot before entering the army, having been an instructor for the Robertson Aircraft corporation at Lambert Field, Mo.

The deceased pilot is survived by his father, Henry Davis, farmer, of Fort Valley, and a brother, Moses Davis, civilian mechanic on duty at the primary flying school, two brothers at Fort Valley, one brother at Coconut Grove, Fla. Burial was at Fort Valley.

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

360TH AVIATION SQUADRON TRAINS AT SAN ANGELO

Group Is Under Command of White Major Who Says "The Good Negro Soldier Can't Be Beat"

APR 23 1943

San Angelo, Texas, April.—There's a sign over a half-length mirror in the orderly room of the 360th Aviation Squadron at San Angelo Army Air Field bombardier school. "Be A Credit to Your Organization," it says.

It is at once a slogan and a goal in this group of nearly 500 Negro troops, who are working hard all day and reporting to the classroom at night in a determined effort to make their squadron second to none.

Directing their efforts is the only white man in the organization, the commanding officer. He's 30-year-old Major Raymond Egan of New Orleans, a 1935 graduate of Louisiana State University who has commanded both white and Negro troops.

The good Negro soldier can't be beat, he says. And though the bad one is as bad as they come, nearly all of them want to be good. And though, those who prefer the rockier path receive exactly the same disciplinary action that white troops receive, it's not fear of punishment, he says, that leads his men to straighten that tie, polish that brass and shine those shoes. It's an intense pride in the uniform they wear—and a determination to be a credit to their organization.

APR 23 1943

Neatness and cleanliness are not confined to the uniform. The barracks are spotless. In fact, there's a tendency to overdo the daily house-cleaning by use of too-strong cleansing agents.

"But there's where they really look good," Major Egan said and pointed through the window of his office to the drill field.

A column movement by the 360th has all the rhythm of a dance and the precision of a watch. There's snap to the turns and a solid beat to the steps. And it's just a little bit different.

APR 23 1943

Ordinarily, for instance, the cadence count of marching troops is a booming 1 2 3 4, 1 2 3 4. In the 360th, it's 1 2 3 4, 1—2—3—4, 1 2 3 4. It's the rhythmic count of men who like to march.

Three nights a week, members of the 360th who want to improve their educational background attend the squadron school, where Pfc. Frank Hicks of Norphlet, Ark., officers classes in reading, writing, civics and American history. Hicks, a college graduate, was the supervisor of several Arkansas schools in civilian life. His cousin, Pfc. Leo Hicks, is another college graduate. A school teacher and principle in civilian life, he is now a squadron clerk. Still another squadron member who has had college work is Cpl. Junious Lindsey of Rosstown, Ark., the orderly room clerk.

There are others who have proven themselves capable office workers. Major Egan points to Staff Sgt. Reginald Parks of Fordyce, Ark., as one of the best clerks in the army. Staff Sgt. Stanley Blackwell Jr., of Cincinnati, Ohio, has risen to the post of acting first sergeant. Doing a capable job as acting supply sergeant is Cpl. Henry W. Ferguson of Hope, Ark.

APR 23 1943

But the men who win the loudest praise in their organization are Mess Sgt. Roy Weatherall of Dallas and his cooks. The 360th is that long-sought organization in which there are no beefs about the chow. As Major Egan puts it, "It's far and away the best mess on the field."

The squadron has its own mess hall, its own barber shop, its own post exchange and its own day room. The day room orderly, incidently, is a veteran of World War I. He's Pfc. W. L. Whitlow of Dallas, who has two sons serving in the present conflict.

APR 23 1943

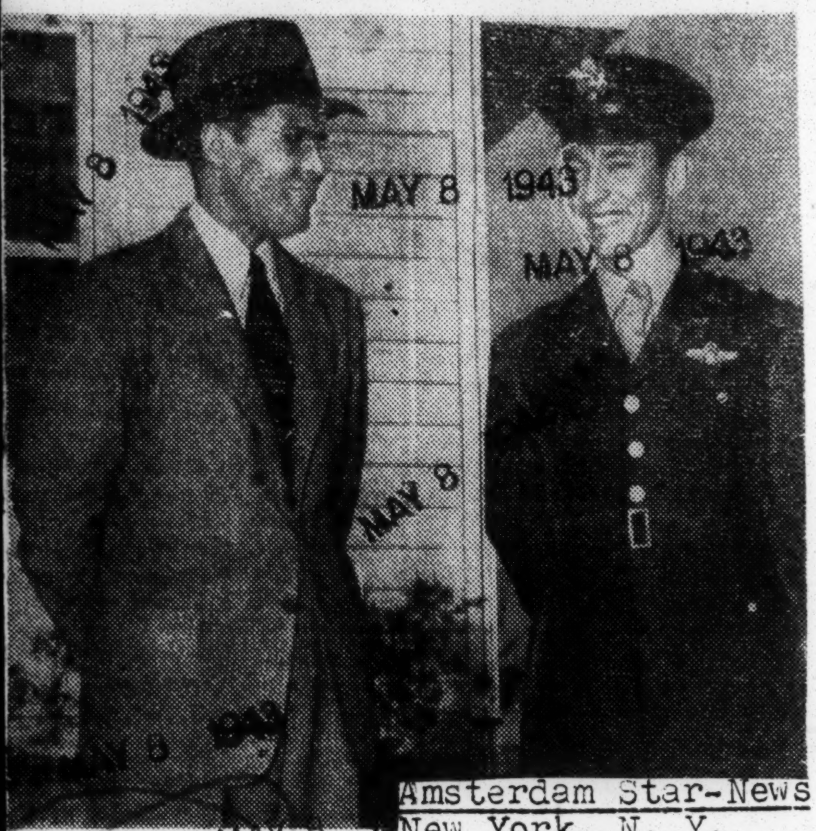
The squadron also has its own military police, but there are very few troublemakers to make their life difficult. Off-duty hours of the 360th are already pretty full and more energy absorbing activities are being added. To tis two quartets, which specialize in spirituals, for instance, the squadron is now adding a band.

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

TUSKEGEE FLYERS.

Hammond, Ind., April 19.—THE TRIBUNE of April 16 carried a very significant editorial entitled "Tuskegee Flyers." This paper is to be commended for its broad stand in demanding that these well trained airmen be given an opportunity of showing their [illegible] to our fighting forces. The general public is getting out of patience with those who let their petty race and religious peeves stand in the way of using all of our man power to bring this war to a successful conclusion.

Army Heads Collaborate



MAY 8 1943

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

ATTY. TRUMAN K. GIBSON (left), Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, is seen conferring with Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish (right), Commanding Officer of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, during a routine tour of inspection at this post. ....
—Photo by Tuskegee Army Air Field

Now At Tuskegee

Atl 22+23
Daily World

JAN 31 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — (SNS) — Aiding with her sunshine smile and experience in the field of nursing, Second Lieutenant Elizabeth T. Dezier, was one of a group of nurses assigned to the Tuskegee Army Flying School to share in protection of the health of this personnel. Nurse Dezier received her training at the Grady Hospital of Atlanta, Georgia, and was commissioned from the Fourth Service Commanding Office of Atlanta. Before her induction she served as matron of the nurses home of Grady Hospital.

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala

TWO FLIERS KILLED IN TUSKEGEE CRASH

MAY 11 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala., May 10—(AP)—Second Lt. James E. Brothers, of (5336 Kenwood Avenue), Chicago, and Pvt. Ross C. Stewart, of (2500 Madison Avenue), Baltimore, Md., were killed in the crash of a primary training plane piloted by Brothers near the Tuskegee Army Air Field Saturday.

Lt. Brothers, who recently received his wings and commission at the local field, attended the University of Wisconsin where he was a track star, the public relations office said. Stewart, a former cadet, operated a garage in Baltimore before entering the Army. His mother, Mrs. Elsie W. Stewart, lives in Johnstown, Pa.

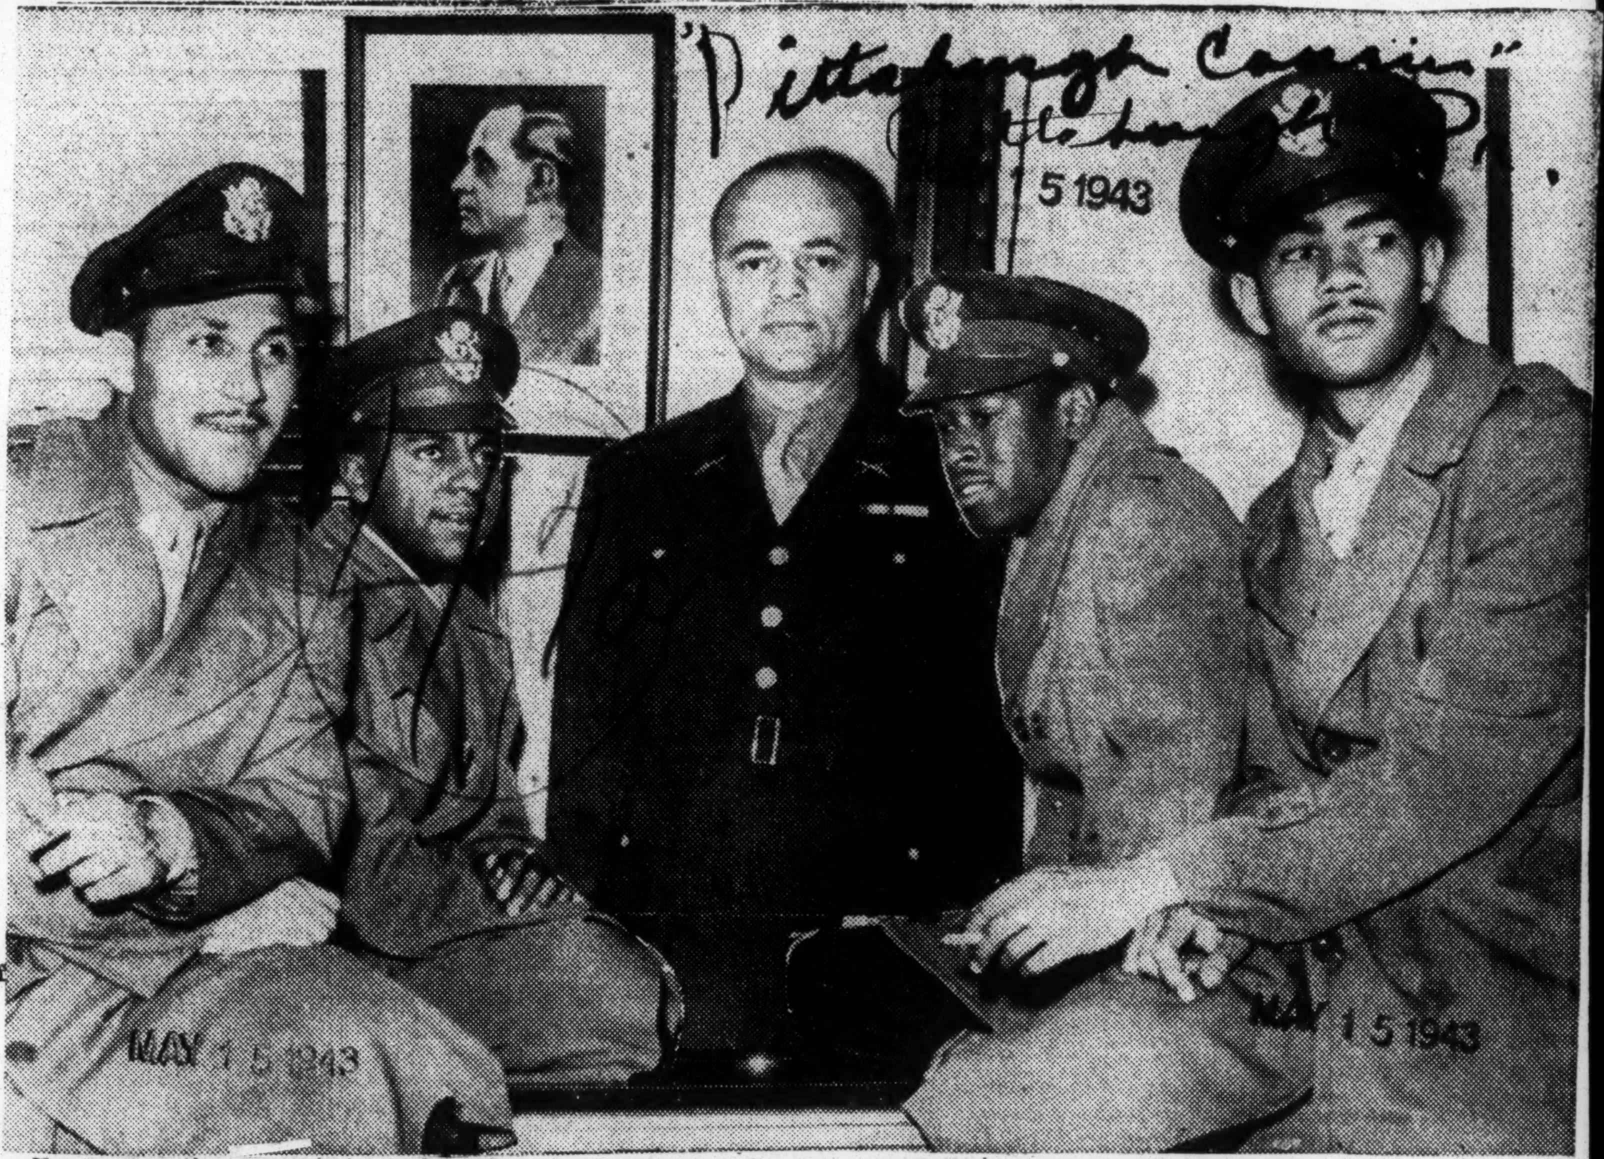
MAY 11 194

DID TRAGEDY BREAK UP THIS QUARTET OF FLYERS?

"Pittsburgh Courier"

Pittsburgh, Pa.

MAY 15 1943



Four recently commissioned lieutenants in the U.S. Air Force who, after completing their basic training at Tuskegee, Ala., were transferred to Selfridge Field, Michigan, several days ago, where it is was learned that one of them, Lt. Sidat Singh, Washington, D.C., was reported lost during a flight when he was forced to parachute from his burning plane over Lake Huron, Michigan, Sunday. The four are pictured above during their stopover in Pittsburgh en route to Michigan.

From left to right: Lt. Sidat Singh, reported missing; Lt. E. L. Gordon, Portsmouth, Va.; Lt. Col. Campbell Johnson, Selective Service Office, Washington, D.C.; Lts. E. M. Dunlap, Washington, D.C., and L. E. Dixon, New York City.

MAY 15 1943

TUSKEGEE FLYING OFFICER FATALLY INJURED IN CRASH

Atlanta, Georgia Daily World

MAY 13 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—(SNS)— Second Lieutenant Sidney James Mosely Jr., son of Mrs. S. J. Mosely of 1518 42nd Street, Norfolk, Virginia, flying officer from the Tuskegee Army Air Field, Alabama, was fatally injured in a plane crash Monday, May 10, while engaged in a routine flight in the vicinity of his home field. A board of qualified Air Force officers will be appointed to determine the exact cause of the accident.

Lieutenant Mosely, a former student of St. Paul College, Lawrenceville, Va., received his commission and silver wings on the 29th of April, 1943. Prior to his entrance into the service, Lt. Mosely was employed at the Norfolk Navy Yard, Portsmouth, Virginia.

MAY 13 1943

Stimson Praises Negro Air Unit

World-Telegram
New York. N. Y.

By the Ass

JUN 24 1943

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Secretary of War Stimson reported today that the Air Forces' first squadron of Negro pilots, the 99th Fighter Squadron, has "weathered its first aerial combat test very creditably."

The squadron, commanded by Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., a son of the first Negro general officer in the army, participated in the siege of Pantelleria but had little chance to engage enemy fighters. The group was fired on only once and when it turned to engage the enemy fighters the latter fled.

On the afternoon of June 18, however, a flight of six P-40's led by First Lt. Charles W. Dryden, 800 Home St., Bronx, was attacked over Pantelleria by 12 German FW-190's escorting enemy bombers trying to raid the island. Ten more German fighters hovered above the bombers.

In a lively engagement, the American Negro pilots damaged two of the German fighters and forced the remainder to retreat.

47a-1943

Relaxation Is Important To Sky Warriors After Mixing With The Enemy

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

47a

Lt. Colonel B. O. Davis, Jr., describes an aerial encounter with German planes by members of the 99th Fighter Squadron which he commands. The fliers have fought from North Africa and Sicily, performing notably.

A group of listeners includes 1st Lt. William A. Campbell, Tuskegee Institute; 1st Lt. Lee Rayford, Washington, D. C., (head turned); and 2nd Lt. John W. Rogers, Chicago.

Lt. Colonel Davis, West Point graduate and son of the only Negro general in the Army, enjoys a bit of the humor growing out of the dogfight. The squadron has at least one official victory and two probables.

Another group of pilots after the sky-warring, looking towards the camera is 2nd Lt. Samuel M. Bruce of Seattle, Washington, former A. and T. athlete. (Photos by Thomas W. Young, Journal and Guide war correspondent.)

Scribe Sees Pilots Pour Winged Death From Skies

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

CHICAGO AVIATOR

Second Lieut. Felix J. Kirkpatrick leaves his P-40 pursuit ship after gunnery practice high over Lake St. Clair in Michigan. Lieut. Kirkpatrick is a Chicagoan and in civilian life was assistant airway traffic controller at Chicago Municipal Airport. He also attended the United States Military Academy at West Point for a period of six months as an appointee of former Congressman Mitchell.

By DETON J. BROOKS
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—I watched keen, eager air-warriors of the 332nd Fighter Group, largest Negro combat unit in the army Air Corps, go through breath-taking, death-defying maneuvers this week as they train to blast the Axis from the skies.

In company with a group of ace cameramen, representing all the major newsreel companies, I travelled first to this base near Detroit and then 200 miles north to the gunnery range at Oscoda, Mich.

Col. Robert R. Selway Jr., commander of the 332nd, put his Brown fliers through a spectacular series of training stunts for our benefit.

They performed all type of tactical manuevers. They thundered across the sky in tight formations, so close together that from the ground their wings appeared to be touching. They fired at towed sleeve targets five thousand feet above the blue waters of Lake St. Clair.

They engaged in dogfights, twisting, turning, diving and then shooting sharply skyward until they resembled small black arrows playing tag.

And then as a climax, the three squadrons of the 332nd in the greatest concentration of fighter planes ever piloted by boys of our race blackened the sky as they roared across the airport in a mass salute.

Sees Gunnery Display

When this demonstration finished at Selfridge Field, we proceeded to Oscoda where an advanced training base is stuck in the wilds of northern Michigan and where both pilots and ground crew train under simulated battle conditions. There our bronze pilots treated us to some red hot gunnery.

We went out to the range, which is located adjacent to the airport, in an army truck. There Col. Selway, stationed us about 100 yards from the target which stood 10 feet high and six feet wide. Here we were informed we would be reasonably safe and still get a good view of the action.

Flying single seater P-40 pursuit jobs, the boys took off in flights of five, climbed to a thousand feet, described a wide sweeping arc until they were about two miles in front of the target, and then in Indian file and about a thousand yards apart, they peeled off, diving almost vertically earthward. And when it looked as if they'd crash, they leveled off, coming straight at the target, doing about 300 miles per hour. There was a belch of smoke-flashes as tracer bullets hit—then a steep left bank as the planes veered away from the target and silhouetted against bluish-white clouds as they shot skywards.

Target Ripped

We examined the targets afterwards and they'rd been ripped to pieces. With this demonstration as an indication, I couldn't help but predict destruction for any Axis troops who are unfortunate enough to get caught in the withering ground fire of this group when they go into action.

After this we watched them as they destroyed a hut with small demolition bombs. This is called "skip bombing" because the pilots drop his bombs before he reaches the target and they bounce along the ground until they hit some obstacle. Again the planes came hurtling down to within ten feet of the ground before the pilots straightened out for the attack.

One fellow was especially hot. In six tries he laid five "eggs" right on the hut. Even the colonel got excited when he saw this. He said, "That's a darn good record for a man who's been flying for years. That pilot's coming along fast. He's right on the ball."

When the show was over, I was limp but proud. Those boys looked good—like they have the stuff to give a good account of themselves. The 332nd was activated only a little over a year ago, on July 4, 1942, at Tuskegee, but they didn't start intensive training until they came to Selfridge Field on March 29 of this year. Since that time their instructors claim they have come along fast.

First Fighter Group

They are the first all-Negro Fighter Group in the history of the Army Air Corps. So there isn't any confusion, it must be explained that a group is different than a squadron. A group is composed of two or more squadrons. It can handle bigger tactical missions and it is also organized to handle its own administration. The 99th for instance which is commanded by Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., and is now overseas, is a squadron.

The 332nd Fighter Group is composed of three squadrons—the 100th, the 301, and the 302nd.

Each is headed by a youthful commander who is being prepped for his job so that he can assume responsibility when the unit sees action. The 100th is under command of First Lieut. Robert B. Tresville, West Pointer, graduate of the class of January 1943; First Lieut. Charles H. DeBow, a member of the first graduating class from Tuskegee Flying school is commanding the 301st; and Second Lieut. Edward C. Gleed heads the 302nd.

The group commander is Col. Selway, West Pointer and for 17 years a pursuit pilot himself. He has only recently taken command of the unit, succeeding Lt. Col. Sam Westbrooks.

SEP 4 1943

Only Best Stays

A strict professional soldier he is keenly interested in developing a top-notch organization. As he told me, "I am interested in making the 332nd a fighter group that the Negro people can be of. Each pilot and crew man will have to be good. We are over-staffed and only the best can stay. I promise you that when they get into battle zones,

47a

Army To Start Training Of Bomber Crews

Journal and Guide

New Policy Set Forth; Success Of 99th Helped

Norfolk, Virginia

WASHINGTON, D. C.—That the colored pilot and technician are no longer regarded as an experiment in the Army Air Forces was indicated by Acting Secretary of War John J. McCloy at his press conference last weekend when he made public details for the activation of a medium bombardment group consisting of colored personnel.

SEP 11 1943

Also significant is the fact that the training of the pilots, navigators, bombardiers, and technicians for this medium bombardment group is not to be segregated on the basis of race. Mr. McCloy emphasized that the men who are to comprise this medium bombardment group are to be trained in mixed classes.

CHANGE IN POLICY

In the training of pilots previously, the Army Air Forces has adhered to a policy of segregation. Colored pilots have been trained hitherto at the Tuskegee Army Air Base. A fighter group that received basic training at Tuskegee are now undergoing advanced training at Selfridge Field, Michigan.

The decision of the Army Air Forces to activate a medium bombardment group consisting of colored personnel is believed to have been influenced by the Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron, now based in Sicily, which demonstrated its efficiency whenever contact with the enemy was made.

SEVERAL "FIRSTS"

The beginning of the training program within a month will mark the first time that the Army Air Forces has undertaken the training of colored cadets other than as pilots of fighter planes, in which the pilot engages in combat single-handed.

It will also mark the first time that the Army Air Forces has trained colored men as navigators and bombardiers.

Within a month, Mr. McCloy said, colored cadets will be sent to either Fort Dodge, Kansas, or Del Rio, Texas, to start training in a B-26 Transition School to fly B-26 bomber airplanes.

MIXED CLASSES

In December, colored cadets will start training as navigators and bombardier officers. Their training as such will cover a period of eighteen weeks, after which they will go to gunnery school. All of this training, Mr. Cloy emphasized, will be with white students.

The projected medium bombardment group will be activated by July 1, next. To complete the crews, Mr. McCloy said, colored enlisted men are already in training all over the country.

They are studying radio, aviation mechanics, electrical work and armor at Lincoln Field, Nebraska, Chanute Field, Illinois, and Lowry Field, Colorado, and at other Air Forces installations.

PROMISED LAST JULY

He emphasized that these colored enlisted men are undergoing training with white enlisted men.

Announcement was first made that the Army Air Forces would train colored personnel as bombardiers and navigators by Robert P. Patterson, the Under Secretary of War, on last July 15.

HOW TO BE USED

Judge Pattersin was asked how the Army would use colored men it trained as bombardiers and navigators.

He replied: "Everybody who goes to bombardier and navigator schools will be used as bombardiers and navigators. They're not going to be used to cut paper dolls or play marbles."

PROGRAM SPEEDED UP

Persons familiar with the long delay in the beginning of the training of colored pilots after the Army Air Forces had announced, in 1939, in response to Congressional pressure, that it would train colored air cadets, marvel at the quickness with which the Army is moving to begin the training pilots, bombardiers, and navigators for the projected medium bombardment group.

SEP 11 1943

The Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron, which is believed to be responsible for the decision, "Is doing creditable work in its mission," Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson recently reported after he returned from a tour of battlefronts.

Lt. Col. Davis Takes Command Of 332nd Unit

OCT 8 1943

Daily World

New Commander Is Honored At Post Reception

Atlanta, Ga.

OCT 8 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin O Davis, Jr., Air Corps, formerly commander of the 99th Fighter Squadron which presently is seeing action in Italy, has assumed command of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field, Michigan, the War Department announced Tuesday.

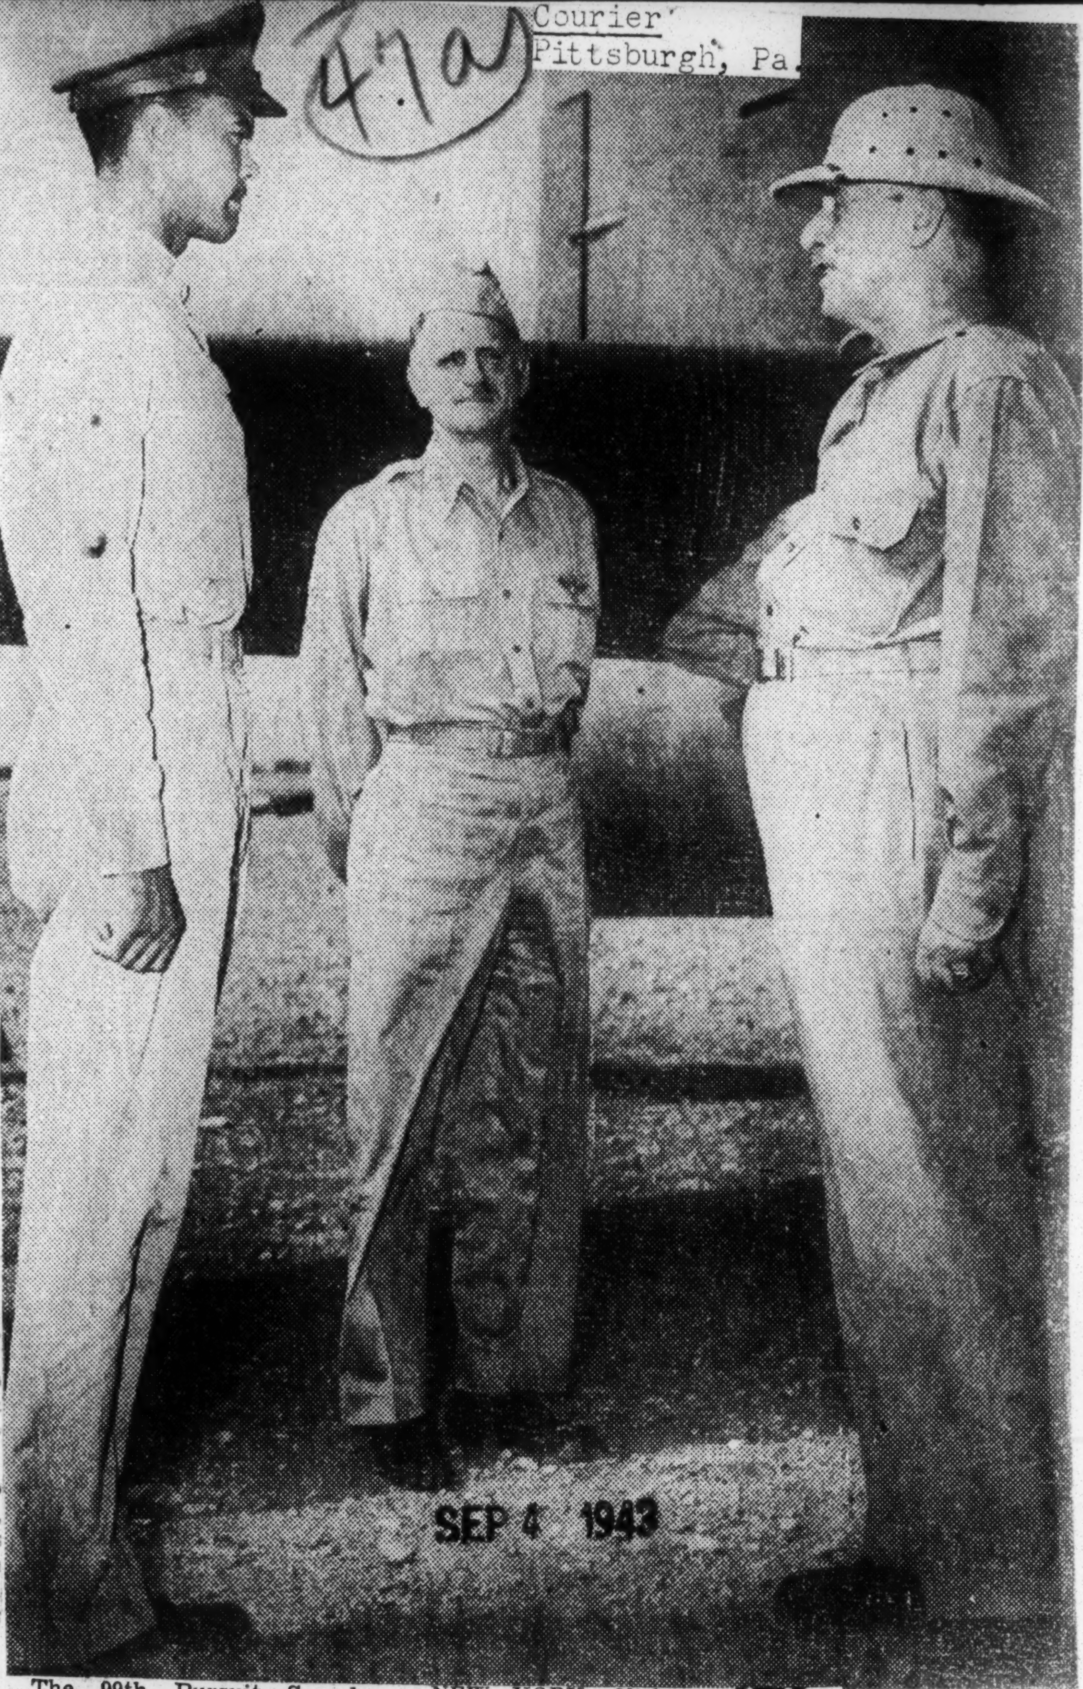
OCT 8 1943

The first Negro officer ever to command an Air Force combat unit, Lieutenant Colonel Davis was honored Tuesday, October 5 in the presence of 400 guests at a reception held in the Post Officer's Club at Selfridge Feild.

Among high ranking Army officers in attendance was Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, father of the new group commander. Major J. P. Ramsey, Flight Surgeon at the Field, was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Lieutenant Colonel Davis returned early last month from Sicily where he commanded the 99th Fighter Squadron, the first all-Negro combat unit committed to action against the enemy in the North African area. A graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, he is 30 years old.

OCT 8 1943



Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

SEP 4 1943

The 99th Pursuit Squadron, while on duty in the West African theatre of war, were visited by Secretary of War Stimson and Lt. Gen. Carl Spaatz, commander of the Northwest African Air Forces.

Above, Mr. Stimson is seen talking to Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the unit. General Spaatz is standing in the background.

Christian Recorder
Philadelphia, Pa.

NEGRO AVIATORS SHOWN IN CLICK MAGAZINE

SEP 26 1943

NEW YORK—Click magazine for September has a three-page picture story on the "Black Panthers," Negro fighter group, now finishing training at Oscoda, Michigan. The men in this group finished their first training at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama. The article declares the group is "tough, smart and rarin' to go," and declares the instructors of the squadron say the members fly and fight "intelligently, bravely and skillfully."

One squadron trainer at Tuskegee—the 99th under command of Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr.—is already in combat overseas, having taken part in the Sicilian campaign.

they'll be ready to give a good account of themselves."

For this reason he's putting them through an intensive schedule. From eight in the morning until dusk, planes are in the air executing day-time missions. And up at Oscoda flying continues even at night.

When the weather is bad and the planes are grounded, pilots practice shooting either at the small arms and skeet ranges or study tactics indoors.

Every day in the week, Sundays included this program continues. And all day and night long, the faithful unsung heroes of the maintenance crews working in shifts of eight hours each, are constantly on the job servicing planes so they'll be ready to take the air on a moment's notice.

The 332nd is still in training and therefore there is a cadre of white officers and enlisted men who are attached to the group for purposes of supervision. Some of the white flying officers have only recently returned from active combat zones. They are supposed to teach these young flyers the latest and best battle tactics. These men are not part of the group however, and it is expected that they will be detached when the unit is ready for combat.

47a-1943

Tuskegee Flyers Help Crush Italian Island Fortresses

Amsterdam News New York, N. Y.

Drop Bombs On Pantelleria, and Return To African Base Without Losing Plane

47a

JUN 19 1943

WASHINGTON (Special)—Carrying death and destruction as they winged their way across the Sicilian Narrows of the Mediterranean Sea, intrepid Negro fighter pilots under the command of Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, took part in the bombardment that brought about the surrender of the Italian island Fortress of Pantelleria after 20 days resistance.

In revealing this information, the OWI put on the record the first overseas aerial battle participated in by Negro flyers. Riding through withering anti-aircraft fire, the Tuskegee-trained airmen found their targets and rode home without losing a plane.

The fighter unit flew P-40 Warhawk fighter-bombers, a recently converted type of fighter plane that carries the bomb loads under the fuselage of the plane. Incessant anti-aircraft fire met the fliers on each trip over the thirty-two square mile island from the rock-bound forts manned by Mussolini's soldiers.

TRAINED AT TUSKEKEE

The fliers that comprised the unit received their basic training at Tuskegee's Army Flying School under Colonel Davis, son of Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, highest ranking Negro officer in the army.

The fliers and the ground crews arrived in Africa about a month ago and were given additional training by seasoned veteran pilots who helped rout General Rommel's once proud Afrika Korps from Tunisia and Bizerte.

After the four-week advanced flying course on the desert, the fliers were given orders to participate in the bombardment of Panetelleria. The flyers went into action for the first time in actual warfare. No axis fighter planes met them over the island, which lies between Tunisia and Sicily but a constant fire of flak was sent upward.

The island of Lampedusa fell a day after the Panetelleria surrender, and the following day witnessed the capitulation of the tiny, unfortified Italian island of Linosa. Meanwhile the Allies had intensified their bombing of Sicily. It is not expected that heavily fortified Sicily will give up as quickly as did the other islands, yet the Allied command considers it just a matter of time before it too will be forced to succumb under the terrible barrage of bombardment from the air and from warships.

JUN 19 1943

Leads Flyers

LT. COL. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS, whose flyers emerged triumphant after their first baptism of fire over the Italian island fortresses which they helped bomb into submission.

SERGEANT MAKES AVIATION CAREER

Pittsburgh Pa.

Courier

JUL 24 1943

47a

EUROPEAN AREA, July 22—If America's first All-Negro Fighter Squadron [illegible] sees action in Africa doesn't set the world afire, the whole outfit is going to have to answer to Master Sergeant Ellsworth H. Dansby, Jr., its 28-year-old line chief.

His work in his outfit with his boys is the climax of a dream to the tall mechanic. "Being out here with this gang and doing this work," he said, "is something I've hoped for all my life." This has just got to be the best outfit in the world. I think it will be as soon as we have a chance to prove ourselves."

KNOWS AIRPLANES

Sergeant Dansby, who is a native of Decatur, Ill., is a pilot and knows airplanes with a knowledge born of devotion to a chosen career in aviatioin. When he was about 14 years old, airplanes began to interest him.

He joined the Army on March 24, 1941, and was sent to Chanute Field, Ill., to be trained at a technical school. Emerging from there, he was sent to Tuskegee, Ala., to join his present outfit at the time it was being formed. Since then he's been advanced to the highest rank within reach of an enlisted man in the Army.

"But I still plan to do my own flying after the war," he grinned. "I hope to stay in the Army, but as soon as this war is over, I'm going to have my own plane so fast it'll make your head swim."

47a

JUL 24 1943

Downs Another Plane; Crew Never Belives They Won't Come Back

The Informer

Houston, Texas

By OLLIE STEWART

(Copyright by the Afro-American and Informer Chain of Newspapers Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited)

JUL 24 1943

47a

Censored From Stewart. Advanced Air Base, North Africa —It has just been announced that Charles Hall has been promoted to Captain. This amazing young man now has two enemy ships to his credit and his promotion follows fine work in the taking of Pantelleria. Hall has a pet system for outfighting attacking jerries and anybody who has doubts about our lads' being able to hold their own in big league dog-fights can find same here, and now.

As I write this, the second flight before noon takes off for Sicily and we won't have lunch until they come back. However, the kitchen crew is setting up table for the full number because they never believe there will be anybody missing.

Assault from the South

Literally and actually, I have—and have had for weeks—a ringside seat for one of the most amazing dreams the world ever saw—assault of Saziland from the south. I have watched from my Mediterranean peephole developments for the invasion step by step and can now report that every possible precaution against failure was taken before one man's life was risked.

What the world reads about and waits for is but the culmination of intense activity I have seen and heard since unpacking my typewriter in this strategic hot-spot. Colored fighter pilots were in the vanguard of devastation by air which paved the way for allied landings in Sicily just as they were before and during the capture of Pantelleria. Days before American, British and Canadian troops set foot on Sicily, returning air men were describing to me the terrain of the Mussolini island stronghold.

Observations

Said Lieut. Herbert Clark, of Pine Bluff, Arkansas: "Looks like a pretty nice place—from what I could see between bursting lead and while dodging enemy fighters." Lieut. Louis Purnell, Philadelphia, agreed with him. Our fighters were over the island a few hours before the zero hour and Saturday when landings were made they helped provide the all-important air umbrella for ground forces dashing ashore from boats and barges.

JUL 24 1943

Although I knew these pilots fairly well from daily association I was amazed at their coolness before their big mission Saturday morning. I knew an invasion was being pulled off and so did they but they acted as though the flight were a mere routine mission. Lieuts. John Rogers, Chicago, and Spann Watson, Hackensack, New Jersey, were arguing as usual. James Knighton of Tulsa was kidding Leon Roberts of Pritchard, Alabama, and Chubby Lee Rayford of Washington was so eager for blood he had to be calmed down by Erwin Lawrence of Cleveland. When they returned to base there was great disappointment over the scarcity of enemy fighters. Charles Dryden, New York, and Allen Lane, Demopolis, Alabama, were most annoyed because they got no shots at Nazis.

Watched Them Assemble

"It was too peaceful; all I saw were a few fires and lots of boats near shore but no jerries in the air," said Land.

For days before the invasion while swimming in the blue Mediterranean and from top of a nearby mountain I watched the huge sea armada assemble. All types of boats were in the convoy with silvery barrage balloons overhead and slim destroyers darting here and there to keep them together. One convoy was attacked clos to our base at night and flares lit up the sea for miles but ack-ack from shore and ship guns kept Nazis too high to do any damage. Now ships are dispersed but wave after wave of bombers still pound Sicily, around the clock.

JUL 24 1943

Army Reveals 99th Pursuit Squadron in North Africa

Bystander

Des Moines, Iowa

47a

JUN 17 1943

Allied Headquarters in North Africa—The only American Negro aerial unit in foreign service was among the Allied forces that bombed Pantelleria, it was disclosed Monday.

They flew P-40 Warhawks and were under the command of Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, a noted cavalry officer.

The all-Negro squadron trained at Tuskegee Institute Alabama, before coming overseas.

That the squadron had arrived at its destination was revealed in a dispatch from North Africa by Ollie Stewart, war correspondent for the Afro-American affiliated newspapers. Later Stewart stated that Lt. Col. Davis was living in a town where he was stationed. Both articles passed the censor.

Seen Actual Duty

It was at first stated that the squadron had seen actual combat duty in the closing days of the North African campaign, but this was denied by the war department. The announcement of Wednesday said the flyers, who use P-40 Warhawks, were being given advanced instruction in new fighter tactics by veteran pilots of the Tunisian battles, and that upon completion of this advanced training the squadron will be sent into action.

No news of the actual departure of the squadron was allowed to be printed because of censorship regulations. Mention of embarkation of any unit is explicitly prohibited since such publication would give valuable information to the enemy.

It can be revealed now, however, that the squadron left Tuskegee at midnight April 2. The squadron had no idea where it was going. The train was completely blacked out, with windows and vestibules painted black and affording no opportunity to see out. The group, composed of a full complement of ground and maintenance crew and medical contingent, had the run of the special train which zigzagged across the country to its destination. When the train stopped it was on the docks at a southeastern port and alongside the transport to which the squadron was immediately transferred.

JUN 17 1943

Farewells were said as the men

swung abroad at Tuskegee. Many of their families were at the school and in the community nearby. All were forbidden to speak of their departure. Families of those living in other parts of the nation knew of their boys' departure because personal belongings were sent home to them.

The night the squadron left Tuskegee the 96th Service squadron was transferred to Selfridge Field, Mich. The 332nd Fighter group, composed of several pursuit squadrons and first all-Negro fighter group in army history, was also moved to Selfridge.

Transfer of army pilots from Tuskegee is part of the regular air corps plan. There is no room at Tuskegee for squadrons after they complete their training because at present new flyers are reporting at the rate of 52 every five weeks. Classes are graduating frequently with from 25 to 30 men instead of five or six as was formerly the number.

EXCLUSIVE

KIMBLE'S IRON HAND STILL RULES AT BASE

Defender

FEB 1943
FEB 13 1943

Prejudice Runs Rampant At Tuskegee Field; Morale Low

FEB 1943

By ENOC P. WATERS
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala.—The Tuskegee Army Flying School here on the red clay fields of Alabama is a deep disappointment.

4A

The most pessimistic predictions of those who opposed it at its inception two years ago have come true. While Negroes have had their first chance to fly Army combat planes, it is felt that the humiliation and loss of self-respect they have been forced to endure has not been worth it.

And to the War Department the school has been a dire disappointment, too. For those anti-Negro brass hats in the Army who thought that by now Negroes would have performed so poorly in the air that the project could be abandoned, have found out different.

Hastie Criticism

All of Judge William Hastie's criticism directed at the school in his resignation still stand. In brief, here is the situation at the field:

1. Col. Frederick Von Kimble, who has insisted on rule by color at the field, is still at the field and his influence is in command here.
2. Race prejudice rules the field with white personnel given special privileges denied all Negro men.
3. Race rather than rank rules at the field.
4. Morale is low with Negro enlisted men disgusted with the Jim Crow setup.

FEB 1943
FEB 1 1943

The conditions on the field are a reflection of the worst features of the South.

In spite of hopeful reports that Col. Von Kimble had been replaced as commanding officer of the post, the fact is that he is still here and his influence still is felt. Lt. Col. Noel Parrish, designated to succeed him, is generally believed to be more the type of commanding officer the men stationed at the post would like to have. But he is powerless so long as Kimble remains on the post.

It is reported from authoritative sources that Parrish is, himself, disappointed with the policy of the post regarding Negroes, but that out of respect for his superior officer, whom he doesn't wish to embarrass, refuses to institute any reforms.

Defender

Perhaps more insidious than the influence of Col. Kimble is that of Lt. Col. John T. Hazzard, executive officer, who at the time of the establishment of the air school here was a lieutenant in the Civilian Conservation Corps.

He is a typical Mississippian, being guided, in his thinking concerning Negroes by the conceptions and philosophy of the worst type of white southerner.

He is at least, equally guilty, along with Col. Kimble, for the disgraceful conditions on the field.

Contrary to general belief, Tuskegee Army Flying school is run—every department and division of it—by whites, many of them southerners, who look upon the Negro as an inferior being. It is the philosophy of those whites in charge that is responsible for the general unrest, dissatisfaction and low morale of the Negroes associated with the establishment.

Bus Discrimination

From confidential sources I was able to get a picture of conditions at the field which brought the resignation of Judge Hastie, as civilian aide to the secretary of war.

In such trivial matters as the buses which operate between the field and the town of Tuskegee there is discrimination. A soldier told us that the bus makes a special stop to pick up enlisted white soldiers, stationed at the field, before it makes its first stop to pick up Negro passengers.

In several instances Negroes have attempted to board the bus at this stop and were told that they could not enter the bus there. The result is that when the bus reaches the first stop where Negroes are permitted to board it, the whites are already seated. The preference shown the white enlisted men here—and there are about 100 of them—is a source of constant irritation to the Negro enlisted men. In many cases they are accorded the privileges not consistent with their rank.

For example, they are not required to live on the post, a privilege accorded only to Negro officers and Negro staff, master and technical sergeants.

Moved to North

Maj. Westbrooks, one of the few white officers commanding the respect of the Negro troops under his command, is reportedly so dissatisfied with the treatment of Negroes at the post that he is having his men trained at Northern establishments in Michigan and Ohio.

Maj. Westbrooks' outfit is the 332nd fighter group, which is the technical outfit for the 100th Pursuit Squadron. The men for the most part are not southerners and have had difficulty in adjusting themselves to southern traditions in respect to Negroes.

A similar situation exists among the 689th Signal Air Corps warning company, a highly specialized outfit under the command of Capt Herbert R. Orr. Capt. Orr, who was professor of electrical engineering at Florida A and M college and was formerly associated with the 366th Infantry at Fort Devens in Massachusetts, and his entire outfit, are said to be seeking a transfer from the field.

Sparks Passed Up

FEB 3 1943

Typical of the treatment of Negroes sent here to assume positions of authority are two cases which were brought to our attention. The first is that of Capt. Lloyd Sparks sent here originally to take charge of the post finance office. Because he was a Negro and for that reason alone — he has been by-passed, and the position given to a white officer, who was working under him in an all-white outfit of enlisted men. It's a lily white outfit.

Capt. Sparks, whom it is believed could have been transferred to another post had he so desired, has elected to stay here and fight the thing through.

For a while he had nothing to do, but, because of pressure from the outside, he was recently appointed to the finance section of the 96th headquarters service group where he is attempting to train a Negro personnel.

So great is the prejudice here that even textbooks, which the army provided for the training of its financial personnel, are denied him by local authorities. From other sources, however, it is reported that he has secured the literature and is developing a group of Negroes to handle army finance in anticipation of the day when he can assume the position to which he was originally assigned.

Refused Post

Not long ago, it is reported, on good authority, a Negro civilian was sent here from Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill., where the army's largest air corps technical school is located, to take charge of the parachute division. Upon his arrival here, he was told bluntly, by white commanding officers, that a Negro cannot hold such a position of responsibility. Today, according to the report, a white man whom he, as an instructor at Chanute Field trained, was sent here and placed in charge but left the post in protest and never returned.

One of the greatest sources of irritation is the P-X Cafe which has equal quarters for whites and Negroes. The Negro side of the establishment is highly patronized and is contsantly crowded. Yet a Negro dared not go to the white side.

Col. Kimble during his regime made an issue of the posting of signs designating certain facilities for Negroes and others for whites. When the Negroes rebelled and continually tore down the signs, he was finally overpowered. There are no "whites or colored" signs on the post today. But from experience, the Negro knows his place. And his place is certainly not that of the white man here.

Fine Education

The Tuskegee Army Flying school is unique so far as army posts are concerned, the Negroes assigned here being by far the superior of whites from the standpoint of background and education.

Some of the most promising young minds of the Negro race are here. They came here under the impression that because it is a Jim Crow set-up they could advance; that since they would not be in competition with whites, merit would be the yardstick for advancement. But this is not the case.

Here, as elsewhere in the South, the Negro back bender is the man who advances. Without calling names, a case was cited for us. There are two West Point graduates here, both Negroes.

One is a true soldier — that is, he takes orders and never questions them regardless of how embarrassing they may be to him or to the other Negroes. The other, younger and much more militant and race conscious, holds a much lesser rank.

It is my opinion that the latter will not advance at the same rate of speed of the former, not because he is less qualified, but because he is much more of a race man and much less willing to humiliate himself to be promoted. When the war is over one will probably be a general, the other, a lieutenant or at the most a captain.

That is the Tuskegee program and philosophy.

Rebuff Friendship

Negro officers have attempted to make overtures to the white officers in an effort to create goodwill on the post. For the Negro officers there is an officers club and they, according to reports, extended an inivitation to their white fellow officers to become members.

However, when the high ranking officials became aware of this situation they directed the few white officers who accepted the invitation to sever their relationship with the Negroes and today there is no general social relationship between the two groups.

However, the opinion of the Negro enlisted man is that the Negro officers fail to realize that their problem is the same as theirs on the most.

"The whites here," they told us, "have no more respect for a Negro officer than they have for us.

"I have seen," one man said, "white enlisted men and white officers deliberately turn their heads or walk in another direction to keep from having to salute a Negro of higher rank."

Rank Means Nothing

To Col. Kimble and Lt. Col. Hazzard, whether a Negro has bars, a gold leaf or no officers insignia at all, he is a Negro and is regarded as a Negro. Rank, so far as the Negro is concerned, has no significance to the whites except in strictly official capacities.

But dissatisfaction with conditions at the air base are not confined to the post itself where approximately 14 related units are stationed.

At the campus of Tuskegee Institute, which has no official connection with the army flying school, members of the faculty reflect the general attitude of unrest and dissatisfaction with conditions at the army post.

It is felt by many of them with whom I talked that Tuskegee Institute is suffering loss of good will and even prestige as a result of the constant criticism of conditions at the base.

They suggested that a civilian commission, made up of persons who have the confidence and respect of Negroes, be appointed to investigate and make a public report of conditions at the field.

School Proves Little

The Tuskegee Army Flying school, in the opinion of many persons connected with it, has established no new facts so far as the Negro and aviation is concerned.

Its only effect has been to prove an already established fact: That the Negro can fly a plane. But so far as creating new opportunities for him in the field of military aviation, the school is regarded as a failure. It is true that about 50 men have completed the course and have been commissioned as second lieutenants in the air corps as pilots. It is true that others have completed training in associated skilled and technical capacities, many of whom hold commissions. But none of these including Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., are in positions of full responsibility, all of them being accountable to local white officials.

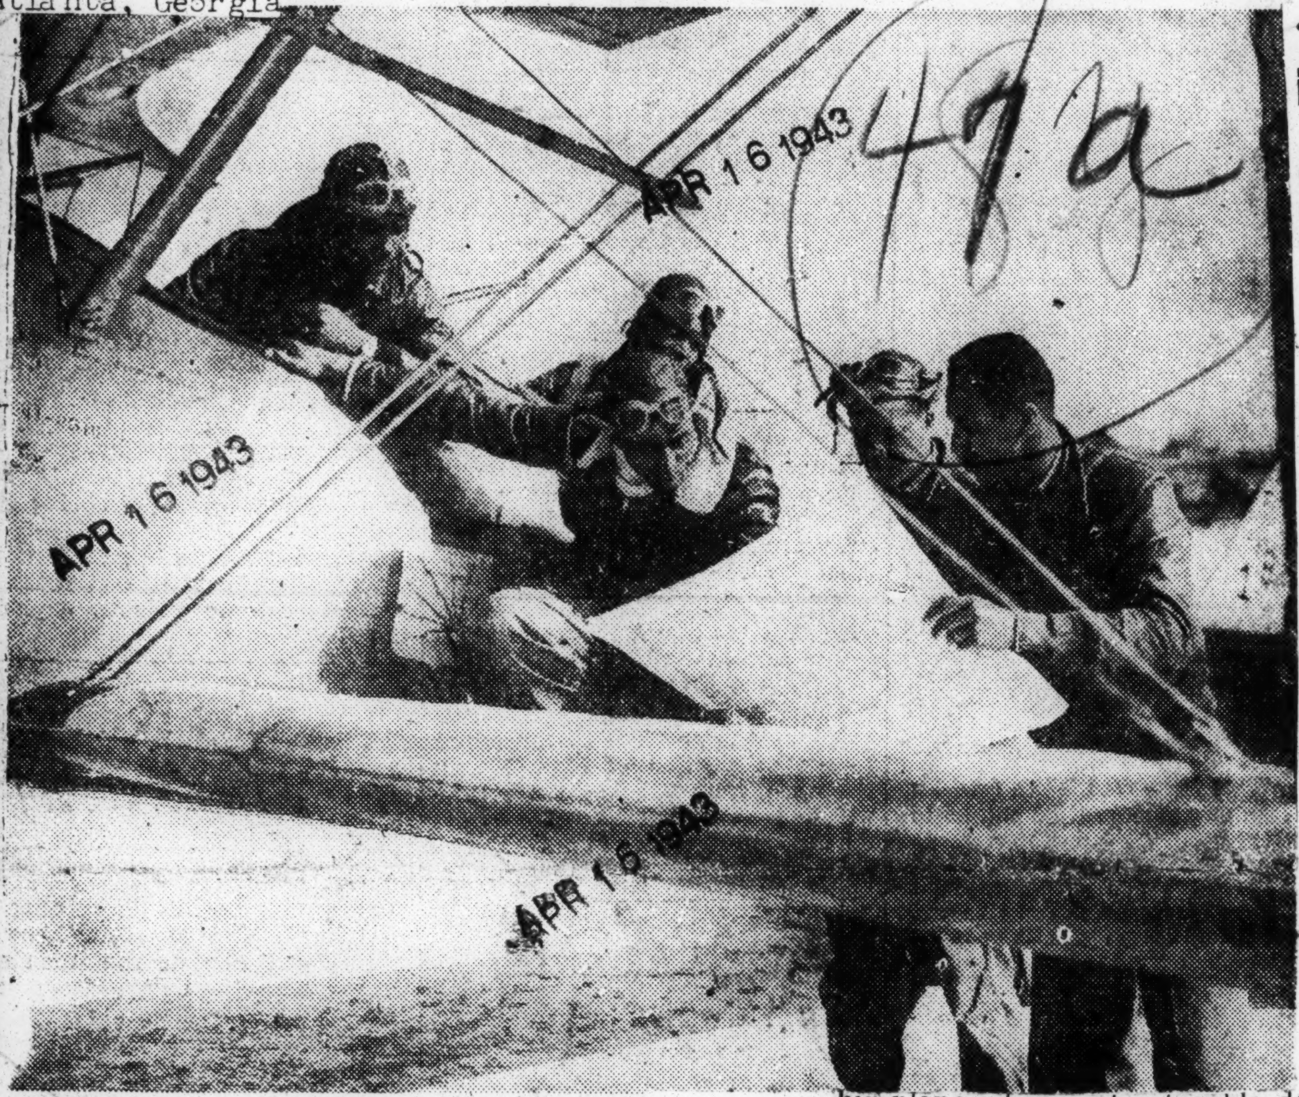
It is a question as to whether the Negro through a segregated unit has gained more, or even as much, as he might have, had he been fully integrated into the air corps without regard to race.

47a-1943

Take Final Look Before Going Skyward

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

APR 16 1943



47a

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(SNS)—Aviation cadets take a final look at their maps before going aloft. Left to right: Lt. John Daniels, of Chicago, Ill.; Clayborne Lockett, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Lawrence O'Clark, of Chicago; William Melton, of Los Angeles, and Civilian Instructor Milton Crenchaw (hatless), of Little Rock.

"SMITTY'S"

Kansas City Call

Sports Spurts

Pittsburg Curier

By WENDELL SMITH

Kansas City, Mo.

Sidat-Singh Is Missing . . . But If There's a Possible Chance He'll Return to His Base

MAY 15 1943

I hope I am not writing Lt. Wilmeth Sidat-Singh a last tribute. He is missing somewhere in the vicinity of Oscoda, Mich., where it is alleged that he was forced to leap from his plane when motor trouble developed. The War Department has announced that the plane was found, but at the time of this writing Sidat-Singh was missing.

One week ago Sidat-Singh visited this office. He was on his way to Oscoda then for advanced training. He was wearing his "wings" and, naturally, was proud of them. Three of his flying mates were with him. They had their pictures taken, and answered the questions of a host of admirers who followed them wherever they went.

* * *

I guess I am the last sports writer to have interviewed Lt. Wilmeth Sidat-Singh before he disappeared. He was a great athlete at Syracuse university. He starred in football and basketball. After his college days, he played a year with the New York Renaissance and Washington Bears and then went to Tuskegee.

It is easy to understand why Sidat-Singh wanted to fly. He was the personification of speed, both on the football field and hardwood. He had courage, heart, and would gamble when the stakes were highest. It was only natural, I guess, that he should have chosen the Air Force.

During the interview last week, Sidat-Singh said:

"We know we have a great big job on our shoulders. We are among the first Negro flyers, and we have to make good. This is a war and we are ready for anything . . . come hell or high water."

* * *

Come hell or high water . . . that was Sidat-Singh. He played football and basketball that way. The bigger and tougher they came, the better he liked it. He was a rugged, handsome guy, who had an infectious smile and a winning way about him. He won friends . . . he won ball games . . . and he won his "wings" at Tuskegee the way he lived . . . simply by being himself . . . modest, sincere and considerate.

Sidat-Singh is the first of our famous Negro athletes to encounter real trouble in this war. Like Michigan's great Tom Harmon, Sidat-Singh's been "forced down."

I hope he'll come tramping back like Tom did through the wilds and wastes of upper Michigan . . . so we can all stand up and cheer him once again.

---

500 Negro Troops

At Angelo Bomber Field Strive To Make Their Squadron Second To None In Army

The Union
Cincinnati, Ohio

MAY 6 1943

There's a sign over a half-length mirror in the orderly room of the 360th Aviation Squadron at San Angelo Army Air Field bombardier school.

"Be A Credit To Your Organization," it says.

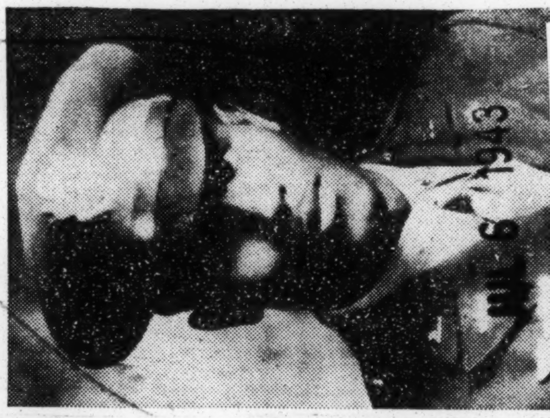
It is at once a slogan and a goal in this group of nearly 500 Negro troops, who are working hard all day and reporting to the classroom at night in a determined effort to make their squadron second to none.

Directing their efforts is the only white man in the organization, the commanding officer. He's 30-year-old Maj. Raymond Egan of New Orleans, a 1935 graduate of Louisiana State University who had commanded both white and Negro troops.

The good Negro soldier can't be beat, he says. And though the bad one is as bad as they come, nearly all of them want to be good. And though, those who prefer the rockier path receive exactly the same disciplinary action that white troops receive, it's not fear of punishment, he

---

Downs an Enemy



JUL 6 1943

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

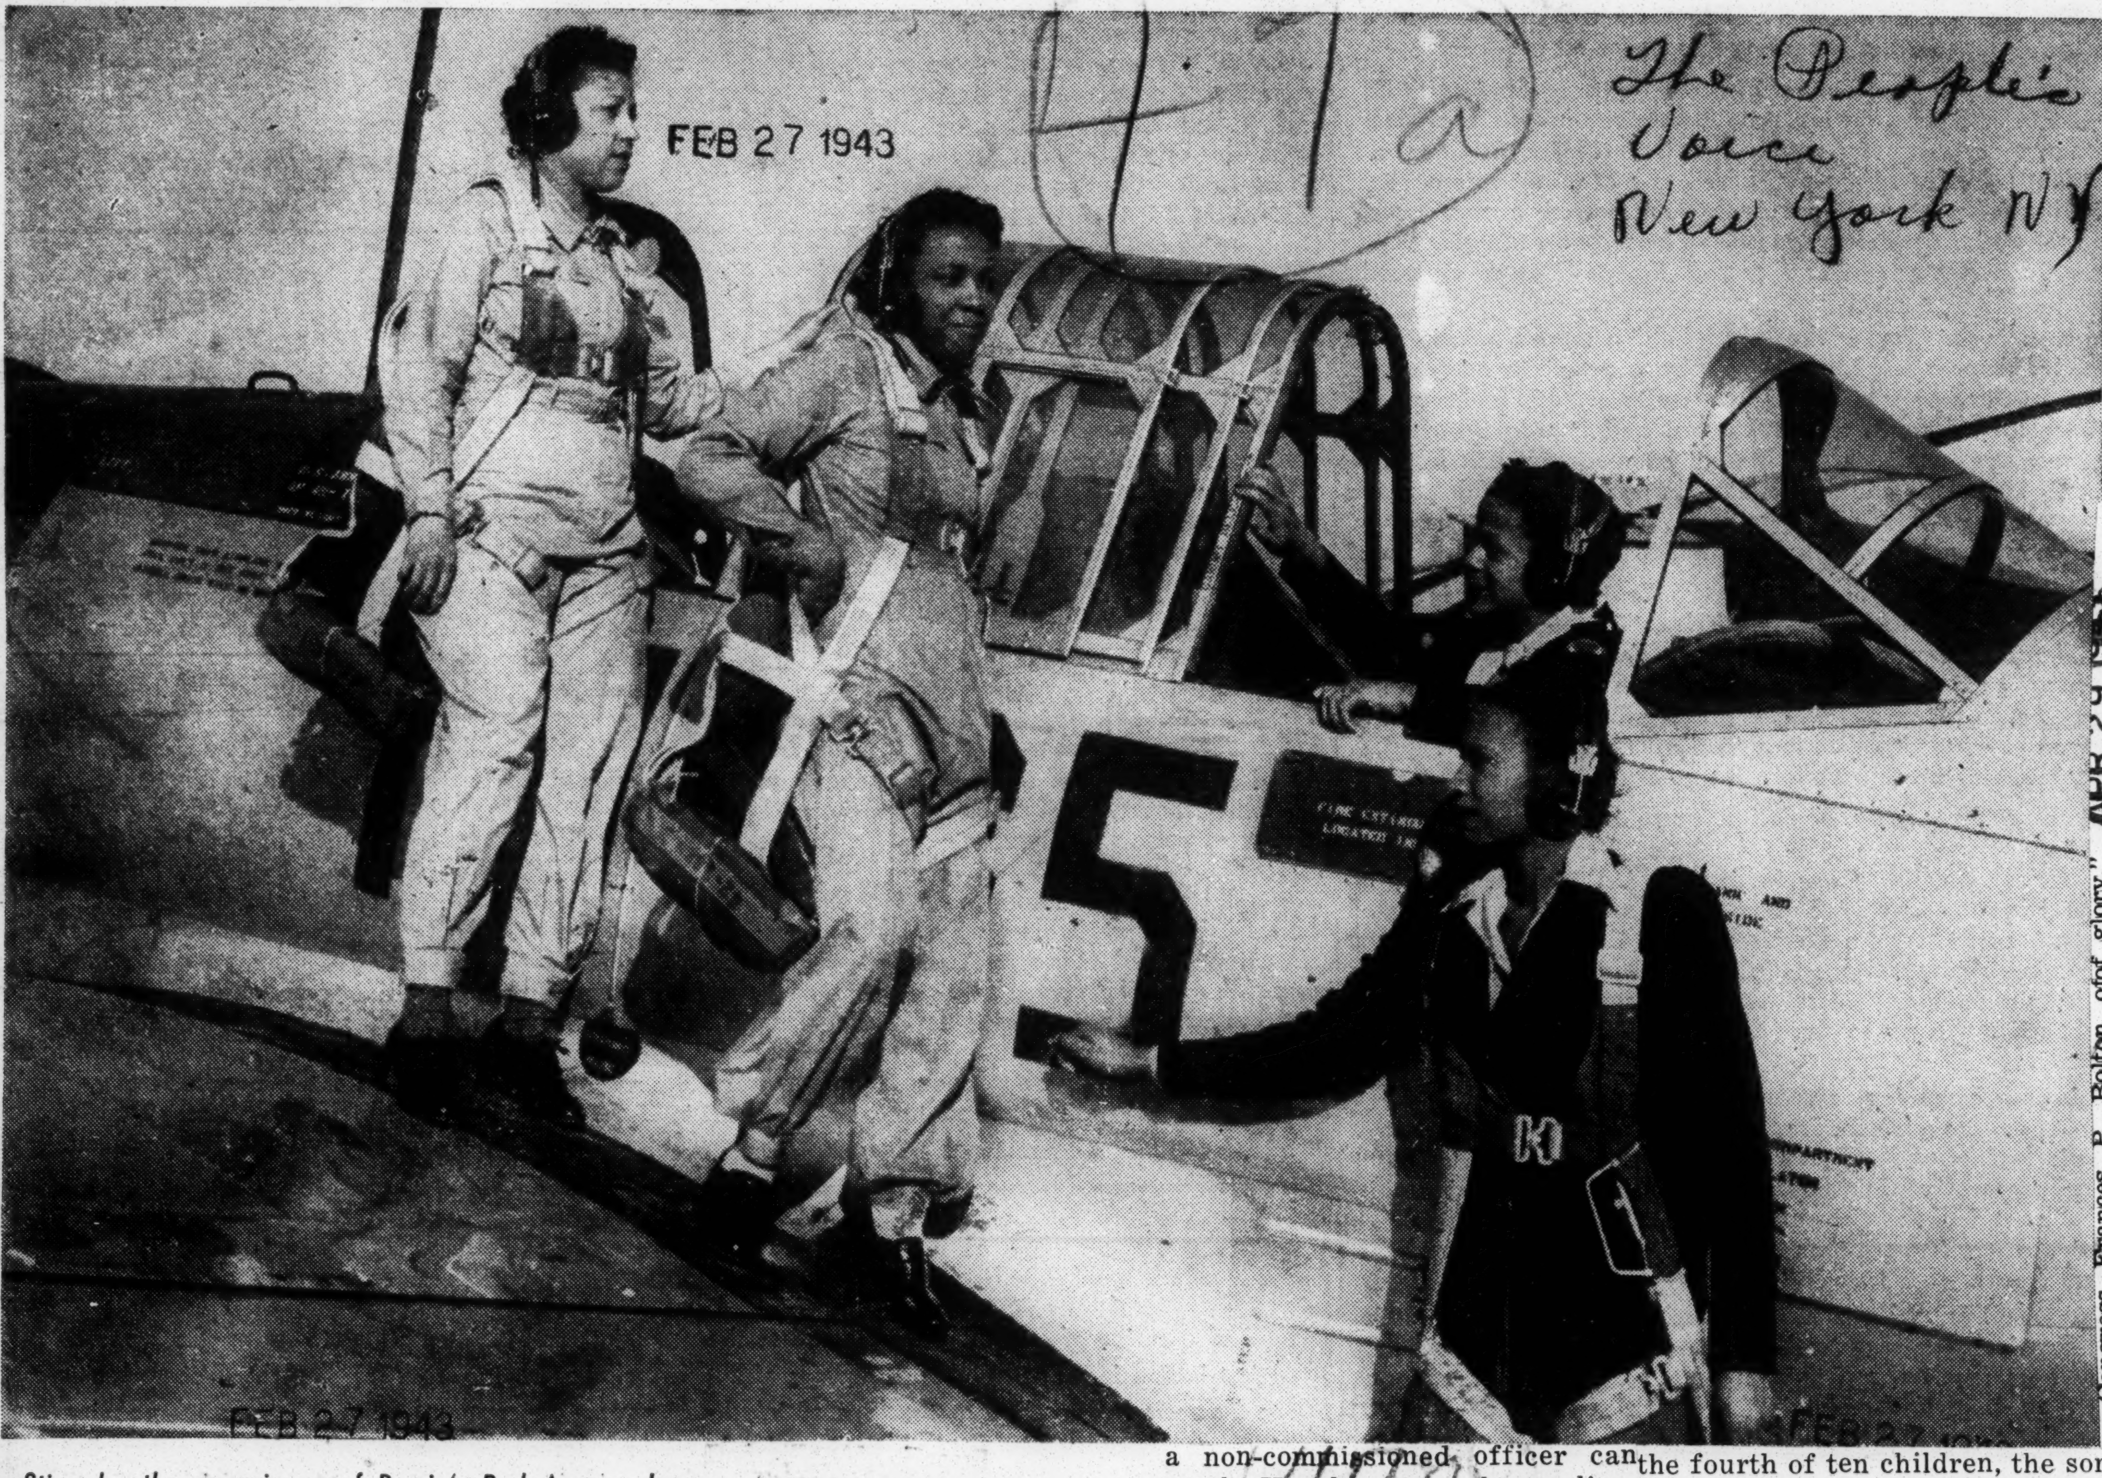
Lt. Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Ind,. who was the first American Negro to destroy an enemy airplane in combat. He shot down a German fighter plane over Castelvetrano field in Sicily while flying a P-40 Warhawk.

FLYING NURSES:

FEB 27 1943

The People's Voice
New York NY

4/a



FEB 27 1943

FEB 27 1943

Profiting by the experience of Russia's Red Army, where the rate of mortality from lack of medical treatment at the front lines has been cut in half when compared to World War I, the USArmy nurses in World War II are also carrying the hospital to the front lines. Above, staff army nurses of the Tuskegee Flying School learn the proper way to enter and leave a plane. Seated in the plane is First Lt. Rainey, chief nurse; standing, l to r, Second Lts. Voorhis, Speight and Trotter.—(OWI foto.)

Sandy M'Corvey Breaks Record At Perrin Field

Smashing all records for advancement at Perrin Field, and possibly in the whole country, according to an Army release, First Sgt. Sandy J. McCorvey, of an aviation squadron, won his present rating exactly 108 days after arriving at the field.

McCorvey's post is the highest a non-commissioned officer can reach. He plans to make application for Officer's Candidate School.

His commanding officer at Perrin attributes part of his rapid advancement to "his bulldog tenacity and ability to stay on a job until it is done regardles of when that may be."

McCorvey was the popular Negro County Agent of Tallapoosa County and a graduate of Tuskegee Institute. He entered the Army at Ft. Benning. Sandy is the fourth of ten children, the son of E. J. McCorvey, Peterman, Ala. He worked his way through college and saw service in CCC. As agent here he was well liked by both white and colored people and was trusted by both races as unusually upstanding, energetic and dependable.

This lengthy communication from Perrin Field, only a few quotations from which are taken, but which any of his friends who wish may inspect, states that McCorvey is undoubtedly headed for the top.

Des Moines, Iowa
Bystander

CONGRESS HEARS NEGRO AIR SQUADRON LEAVES FOR COMBAT DUTY

APR 29 1943

Washington (ANP)—First public statement that a Negro air squadron had left for combat duty was made by Congress Frances P. Bolton of Ohio on the floor of the house Thursday, April 15, when, speaking about Tuskegee Institute of which she is now a trustee, she said:

"The first squadron of colored flyers has left for combat duty taking the hearts of Tuskegee with them. I am sure the entire membership of this house wishes them well and hopes for them a high record of honor and of glory."

APR 29 1943

Although Mrs. Bolton's speech is found in its entirety in the Congressional Record for April 15, thousands of copies of which have been printed and distributed throughout the nation to read by any interested person, the war department has sought to prevent its publication in newspapers, stating that no mention of this squadron's departure should be made until official sanction is given by war department officials.

APR 29 1943

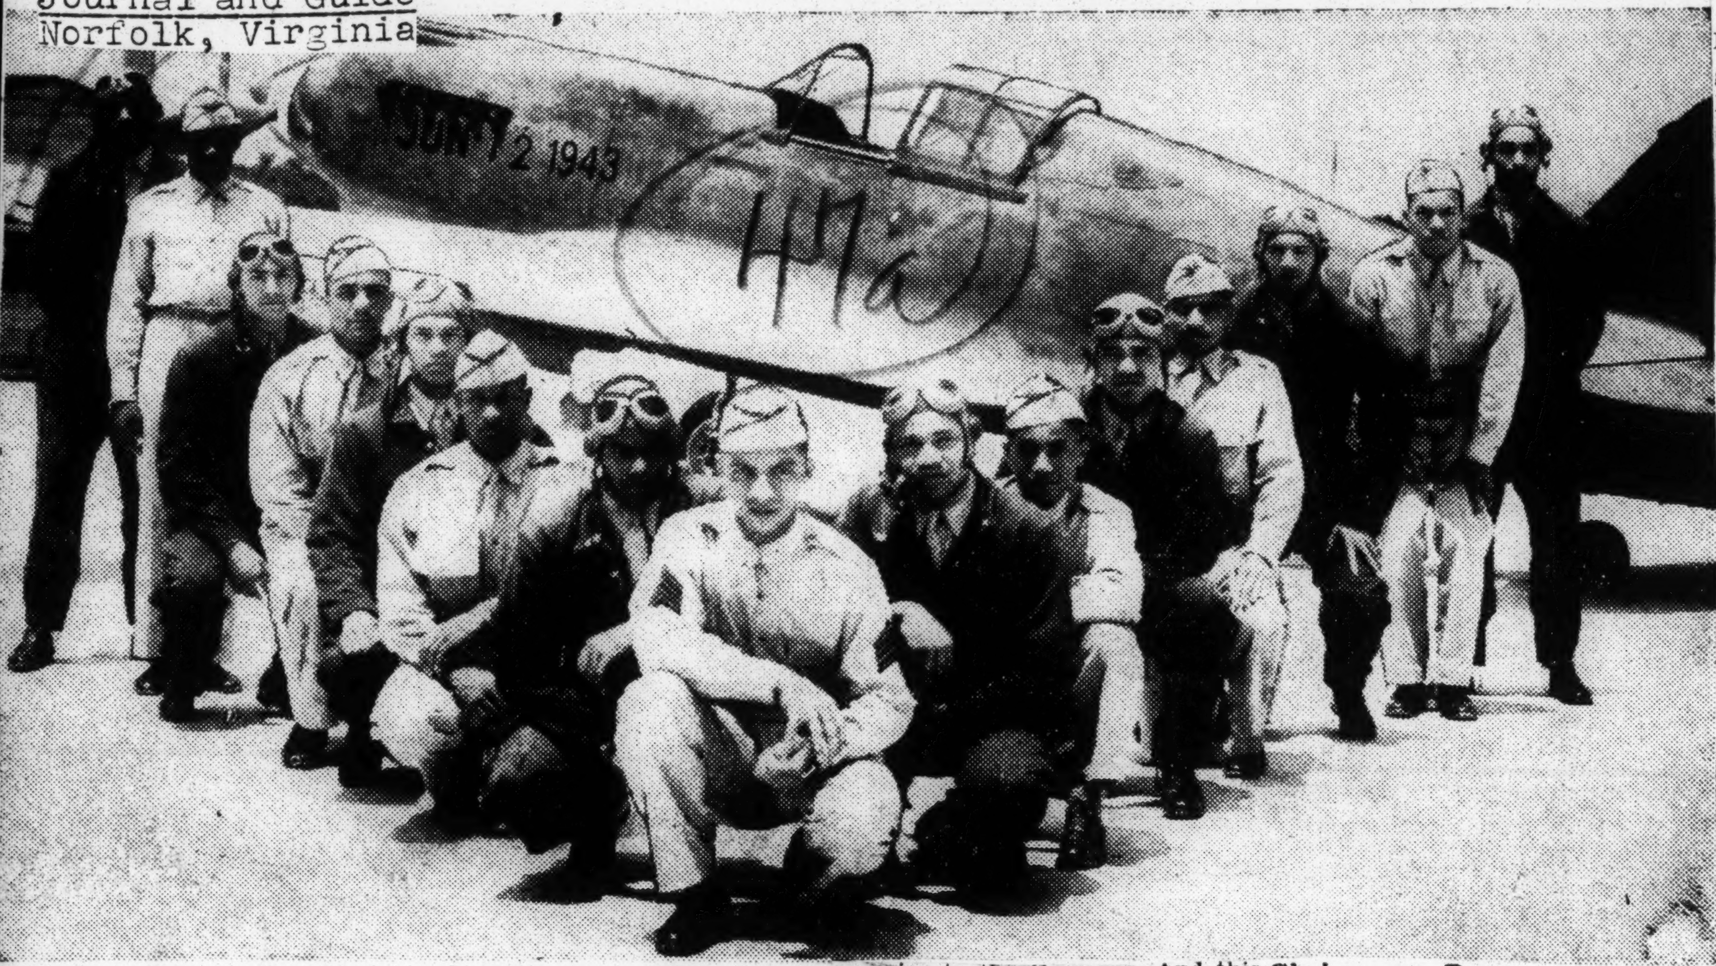
However, the Office of Censorship has given permission for the Associated Negro Press to reproduce Mrs. Bolton's statement exactly as it appears in the Record.

APR 29 1943

47a-1943

They Helped Blast Italian Mediterranean Fortress

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia



JUN 12 1943

47a

Nine of the 15 flyers shown have gone into action with the United States Army Air Forces against the enemy. They graduated on June 3, 1942, at which exercises Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., their commander, delivered the finals address. Left to right, the air fighters are, William Campbell, Tuskegee, Ala.; Willie Ashley Jr., Sumter, S. C.; Langston Caldwell, Denver, Colo., who was not among the graduates; Herbert V. Clark, Pine Bluff, Ark.; George R. Bolling, Phoebus, Va.; Charles B. Hall, Brazil, Ind.; Paul G. Mitchell, Washington, D. C.; Herbert R. Carter, Amory, Miss.; Louis R. Purnell, Germantown, Pa.; Graham Smith, Ahoskie, N. C.; Allen G. Lane, Demopolis, Ala.; Spann Watson, Hackensack, N. J.; Paythe A. McGinnis, Muskogee, Okla.; James T. Wiley, Pittsburgh, Pa.; and Irvin B. Lawrence, Cleveland, Ohio. Lts. Campbell, Hall, Wiley, Bolling, Smith, Clark, Mitchell Purnell and Watson have gone into action.

Stimson Lauds Fliers

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

JUN 26 1943

WASHINGTON, June 24—"We are all very proud of the splendid activity of a fighter squadron commanded by Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., over Pantelleria," declared Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, after his press conference last week. This statement owed a review by the Secretary War of the battle for Pantel- a in which he declared, that air battle over the Italian out- ost in the Mediterranean had constituted "one of the heaviest air operations in the history of warfare."

47a

Courier

Indicating that Pantelleria—like the island of Malta, which has withstood Axis enemy bombing for more than three years, was a heavily fortified island used for both offensive and defensive operations by Italy, Secretary Stimson pointed out that the air battle, in which the fighting pursuit squadron played such an important part, was of unusual significance because it furnished the first time when air power alone had resulted in complete destruction of enemy resistance.

Contrasting the failure of the German air arm at Malta with Allied successes at Pantelleria, Stimson said the reason for the difference was the "sporadic and inaccurate bombing of the Germans as against the concentration and precision of our own flyers. "Hits on military targets were scored with mathematical precision," he said. "Our pilots are superior to the Germans. And this is a development which holds great promise for the future."

JUN 26 1943

AIRMAN

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

Aviation Cadet Bennie A. Perry of Mt. Pleasant, Texas, has entered the Army Air Forces at Yale university where he will undergo intensive training pointed toward his becoming a technical officer in armament with the rank of second lieutenant. He is the nephew of Mrs. R. E. Smith of Mt. Pleasant.

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

Fighter Pilot Dies in Crash Near Tuskegee

JUL 18 1943

47a

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., July 15.—Second Lieutenant Oscar Armstrong Kenney of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., was killed instantly Friday afternoon, July 9, when the P-40 airplane he was flying crashed approximately ten miles northeast of Tuskegee.

Lt. Kenney was on a routine training flight at the time of the crash and a board of qualified Air Force officers will be appointed to determine the exact cause in detail.

The son of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Kenney, Tuskegee Institute Ala., Lt. Kenney attended Oberlin college in Oberlin, Ohio, from 1939 to 1941.

JUL 19 1943

The Northwest
Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

NEGRO FLYERS'

VALOR PRAISED

JUL 7 1943

47a

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 4. — A graphic account of how America's North Africa-based Negro fighter sguadron scored its first victory in dogfights during the raid on Castel Vetrano airfield in Sicily was told to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

General Eisenhower was visiting the Negro squadron's air base when the fightersr eturned without loss from their first encounter with enemy planes. Greeting the Negro pilots, Eisenhower congratulated Lieut. Charles B. Hall, twenty-two, of Brazil, Indiana, when Hall described the battle in which he got an enemy plane.

"It was my eighth mission, but the first time I got close enough to shoot," said Hall, who is a fromer student from the Illinois State Teachers' College.

JUL 7 1943

"I saw two Focke-Wulf 190's following our Mitchell bombers just after they got their bombs away. I headed for the space between the fighters and the bombers and managed to turn in alongside the jerries.

"I fired a long burst and saw my tracers go into the second plane. He was turning to the left but suddenly fell off and headed straight for the ground. I followed him and saw him crash. He raised a big cloud of dust."

47a

JUL 7 1943

Another Negro pilot reported he hit a Messerschmitt 109 and probably brought it down, but could not follow to verify it.

General Eisenhower felicitated Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, comander of the squadron, on the work of his fighters.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Tuskegee Graduates New Class

AUG 7 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD Ala. — In perfect cadence to the stirring notes of the "Air Corps Song," Class SE 43-G filed into the New Theatre Building here last week to receive their wings and commissions as single engine fighter pilots in the Army Air Forces.

47a

This contingent of airmen became Tuskegee's most recent group of flyers to complete the arduous pilot training course and become flying officers in the Air Corps.

The graduates were presented commissions as second lieutenants in the Army Air Forces by Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of the field. Wings were awarded the graduates by Major Donald G. McPherson, director of training at the post. Student officers receiving wings were Second Lieutenants John Daniels of Chicago, Ill., and William B. Ellis of Washington, D. C. Among those receiving wings and commissions were Second Lieutenants Lee Andrew Archer, New York City; Harry L. Bailey, Chicago. Ill.; William R. Bartley, Jacksonville, Fla.; Samuel Lee Curtis, Yeadon, Pa.; William W. Green, Staunton, Va.; George B. Greenlee Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Richard W. Hall. Albany, Ga.; Jack D. Holsclaw Spokane, Wash.; Daniel James Jr., Pensacola, Fla.; John Howard Leahr, Cincinnati, Ohio; Claybourne A. Lockett, Los Angeles, Calif.; James W. Mason, Monroe, La.; Eddie A. McLaurin, Jackson, Miss.; William R. Melton Jr., Los Angeles, Calif.; Robert H. Nelson Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Maurice R. Page, Los Angeles, Calif.; Cornelius G. Rogers, Chicago, Ill.

Edward N. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa.; Lowell C. Steward, Los Angeles, Calif.; Elmer W. Taylor, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Alva Newte Temple, Carrollton, Ala.; Walter D. Westmoreland, Atlanta, Ga.; Robert H. Wiggins, New York City; Leroy Shelton Williams, Roanoke, Va., and Beryl Wyatt of Independence, Kans.

Also completing the pilot training course and receiving wings and a certificate was the first foreign student at Tuskegee, Sgt. Raymond Cassagnol, Haitian Air Force, Por au Prince, Haiti.

---

43 Enlistees Go To College

Pittsburgh Courier

JUL 10 1943

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich., July 8—Forty-three enlisted men of the 332nd Fighter Group and 96th Service Group stationed at Selfridge Field have been ordered to East Lansing, Mich., to take preliminary courses in the Army Specialized Training program at Michigan

State college.

Listed according to organization, their names are as follows:

96th SERVICE GROUP

1st Sgt. Peter J. Chandler, Fort Worth, Tex.
Pfc. James A. Gilliam, Philadelphia, Pa.
Pvt. Melvin C. Harrison, Palto-Alto, Cal.
Cpl. George L. Jameson, Columbus, Ohio.
Cpl. Frederick T. Richardson, St. Joseph, Michigan.
Pvt. Harold T. Alston, Paducah, Ky.

332nd FIGHTER GROUP

Pvt. Raymond W. Bailey, Los Angeles, Cal.
Pfc. Milton C. Bright, Washington, D. C.
Pfc. Cleo D. Clayborne, Ottawa, Kas.
Pfc. Jesse B. Eggleton, Washington, D. C.
Cpl. Daniel L. Ferniel, Los Angeles, Cal.
Pvt. Vernon G. Graves, Millan Gibson, Tenn.
Cpl. Gilbert C. Kenner, Los Angeles, Cal.
Pfc. Brice H. Miles, Philadelphia, Pa.
Cpl. Agustin Monsanto, New York, N. Y.
Pfc. Eugene [illegible] Simmons, Wheeling, W. Va.
Pvt. Eugene [illegible]ow, Roxbury, Mass.
Pvt. Roosevelt Stroman, Far Rockaway, Long Island, New York.
Pfc. George W. Whitehead, Columbus, Ohio.
Pvt. James P. Young, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Cpl. Arthur H. Bruce, Los Angeles, Cal.
Sgt. Cecil C. Watkins, Bronx, N. Y.
Cpl. George M. Applewhaite, New York City.
Pfc. Matthew Bowman, Philadelphia, Pa.
Pfc. Bernert S. Carter, Yonkers, N. Y.
1st Sgt. William H. Carter, Santa Monica, California.
Sgt. William Crawford, Jr., Albany, N. Y.
Pvt. Shepherd N. DeLisle, New York, N. Y.
Pfc. Aleaxnder D. Dungill, Chicago, Ill.
Sgt. George B. Eutemy, Albany, N. Y.
Pvt. Albert Fairweather, New York, N. Y.
Pfc. Harry N. Hall, Danville, Va.
Pfc. Walter C. Hamilton, Lexington, Ky.
Pfc. Eric G. [illegible]s, New York, N. Y.
Pvt. William M. Jenkins, Indianapolis, Ind.
Pvt. Robert J. Law, Baltimore, Md.
Paul L. Lockette, Reynolds, Ga.
Cpl. Emile Milles, Monrovia, Cal.
Pvt. Percy W. Patrick, Danville, Va.
Pvt. Henry M. Smith, Jr., Washington, D. C.
Pfc. George F. Washington, Baltimore, Md.
Pvt. Raymond L. Washington, Baltimore, Maryland.
Pfc. Isaac J. Wilford, St. Louis, Mo.

JUL 10 1943

Air Cadets Get 'Wings' At Tuskegee

Defender
Chicago Ill.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. — Graduation ceremonies at the Army Air Field here for the Aviation Cadet class of 43-E were featured by the address of Dr. Eugene H. Dibble Jr., medical officer in charge of the United States Veteran's hospital, Tuskegee.

Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of Tuskegee Army Air Field, and Major Donald G. McPherson, director of training, officiated at the exercises.

Second Lt. Thomas J. Collins, acting commandant of Cadets presented Cadet Honors to the ranking men of the class of 43-E. These awards went to the following: first award to Clemenceau McAdoo Givings of Richmond, Va.; second to Felix Jackson Kirkpatrick Jr., of Chicago, and third to Laurence Dunbar Wilkins of Los Angeles.

Among the other flying officers who received their wings and commissions were Second Lts. John F. Briggs Jr., St. Louis; Milton R. Brooks, Glassport, Pa.; Charles M. Bussey, Los Angeles; Spurgeon N. Ellington, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Maurice V. Esters, Webster City, Iowa; Joseph P. Gomer, Iowa Falls, Iowa; George E. Gray, Hemphill, W. Va.; Langdon E. Johnson, Rand, W. Va.; Albert H. Manning Jr., Hartsville, S. C.; Oliver O. Miller Jr., Battle Creek, Mich.; Dempsey W. Morgan Jr., Detroit; Harry A. Sheppard, Jamaica, N. Y.; Luther H. Smith Jr., Des Moines, Iowa; John J. Suggs, Terre Haute, Ind.; James A. Walker, Manning, S. C.; Dudley M. Watson, Frankfort, Ky.; and Craig H. Williams, Chicago.

JUN 5 1943

Tuskegee Non-Coms Open Club

Bee
Chicago, Ill.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., July 15—(ANP)—The non-commissioned officers of the Tuskegee Army Air Field formally opened their own exclusive club last Saturday night when Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer, gave the dedicatory address preceding the initial party.

JUL 1 8 1943

The club's president and host, M-Sgt. James Blackstone, welcomed the many club members and their guests to enjoy one of the most festive evenings seen at the air field in quite some time. The enjoyable time had by all seemed proof enough that the demand for a social center for a majority of the enlisted men had, once and for all, been satisfactorily met.

This N.C.O. club, through the leadership of its officials and the assistance of the special service department, seems destined to add a definite contribution to the recreation and social life of the non-commissioned officers of the air field.

The non-coms now have an enjoyable place to retire to amuse themselves and their guests following off duty hours. The officials of the club are: M-Sgt. James Blackstone of Annapolis, Md., president; T-Sgt. Robert E. Donaldson of Chicago, secretary; S-Sgt. William T. McGrew of San Angelo, Texas, treasurer; Sgt. Andrew Collins of Houston, reporter and M-Sgt. Earl C. Ausbey of Portsmouth, Va., sergeant at arms.

JUL 1 8 1943

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Patterson Tells Of New Plan

Air Force To Prepare Men For Combat

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—Acting Secretary of War Robert Patterson confirmed the report that the war department intends to train Negro soldiers as bombardiers and navigators in the army air force. His statement, brief and lacking in detail, was made in answer to a question put to him at the weekly press conference last Thursday morning.

Drew Pearson, in his radio column the Sunday before, had alluded to this plan of the war department as its 'answer" to the race riots. The question was intended to invite a straightforward statement from the department.

JUL 23 1943

Patterson explained that army schools have always been open to the men of the service, irrespective of their race color or creed. He said that Negro soldiers would be sent to these schools, and that "every man who goes will be used as a bombardier or navigator."

Asked if they would be organized into teams, the acting secretary declared that "these men will be used for combat duty." His reluctance to go into greater details at the moment was apparent.

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Tuskegee Non-Coms Open Club

JUL 16 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—(ANP)—The non-commissoned officers of the Tuskegee Army Air field formally opened their own exclusive club Saturday night when Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish commanding officer, gave the dedicatory address preceding the initial party.

The club's president and host, M-Sgt. James Blackstone, welcomed the many club members and their guests to enjoy one of the most festive evenings seen at the air field in quite sometime. The enjoyable time had by all seemed proof enough that the demand for a social center for a majority of the enlisted men of the field had, once and for all, been satisfactorily met.

JUL 16 1943

This N. C. O. club, through the leadership of its officials and the assistance of the special service department, seems destined to add a definite contribution to the recreation and social life of the non-commissioned officers of the air field.

The non-coms now have an enjoyable place to retire to amuse themselves and their guests following off duty hours. The officials of the club are: M-Sgt. James Blackstone of Annapolis, Md., president; T-Sgt. Robert E. Donaldson of Chicago, secretary; S-Sgt. William T. McGrew of San Angelo, Tex., treasurer; Sgt. Andrew Collins of Houston, reporter, and M-Sgt. Earl C. Ausbey of of Portsmouth Va., sergeant-at-arms.

JUL 18 1943

RESCUES PILOT OF AIRPLANE

JUL 30 1943
[illegible] Wis. Argus

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26—Private Arbrady Hicks of Ralston, Ark., on May 26th, was presented with the Soldier's Medal for "extraordinary heroism" following his daring rescue deed of a pilot from a burning plane. The plane crashed near his bivouac area and immediately burst into flames. The unconscious pilot, thrown from the cockpit, lay only a few feet from the burning plane, his clothing on fire. The other men of Hick's company were ordered away from the plane which was expected to explode at any second. Hicks seized the pilot's jungle knife and quickly cut away the burning clothes and removed him to a position of safety. A few minutes later the plane blew up.

A graduate from the Nevada County Training School in 1941, Private Hicks entered the Army the same month. He trained with a Signal Construction Company at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri and was the first of his race to be admitted to the Signal Corps. He then transferred to the Tuskegee Flying School, Alabama, where he trained in aircraft warning. Hicks scored another first by being among the first fourteen Negroes to go into the air corps. In April, 1942, he went overseas with a Signal Air Warning unit, to a South Pacific post.

JUL 30 1943

Ironically enough, the day after Private Hicks rescued the pilot, he himself went to the hospital. His trouble? He stepped into a hole and fractured his leg and it was while he lay in the hospital that he was presented with the award. "You know," he said, "Dame Fortune must have it in for me. I cheated her one day, but the next day she goes and breaks my leg."

On the side Private Hicks is a talented trumpet player and played in the first Army Air Force band to be organized at Tuskegee.

JUL 30 1943

Noted Banker Praises S'kegee

Informer, Houston

JUL 3 1943

DURHAM, N. C.—(ANP)—After a recent visit to the Tuskegee Army Air field, C. C. Spaulding, Durham, insturance executive and banker, expressed great satisfaction with the unit and its commanding officer Col. Saul Parrish.

JUL 3 1943

Given Every Opportunity

"I had an opportunity to inspect the grounds and I find that Negroes are being given every opportunity to develop and acquire the same type of training that is offered in any other flying school," declared Mr. Spaulding. "It is unfortunate that those who criticized Tuskegee and who are still criticizing it could not have visited the institution for first hand information.

"President Patterson is laying great stress on the training of the Negro's hands, hearts, and minds. No one can stand by the monument of Booker T. Washington and fail to appreciate what has been accomplished and is now being accomplished at Tuskegee.

Makes Wise Decision

Mr. Spaulding said that the recently much publicized plan announced by school officials to accept a $100,000 yearly subsidy grant from the state was a wise decision. He said we must be realists and practical and make the most of the materials at hand, because the day when Negroes will be admitted to white state universities is a long way off.

JUL 3 1943
Informer

Gov. J. Melville Broughton recently named Mr. Spaulding to the executive committee of the North Carolina state national war fund. The Durham Morning Herald carried a photograph of Mr. Spaulding flanked by Mrs. Grace Walters and Mrs. Nelle Teor, two of the most prominent white women in Durham immediately after the announcement. Observers regard the incident as an example of growing democracy in the south.

King George Gives Medal To Heroic West Indian Flyer

Chicago Ill. Defender

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Chicago Defender London Correspondent)

LONDON — (Censored) — Quite a number of colored West Indian airmen serving with the Royal Air Force have already distinguished themselves in action over Germany.

Among the latest islanders to be awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal for gallantry is Sgt. W. K. Hynam of Barbados.

APR 17 1943

The young flyer, who is a bombardier, went to Buckingham Palace to receive his medal from King George.

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

99TH SQUADRON PROVING ABILITY

JUL 8 1943

The war department has been giving daily press releases dealing with the exploits of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, based in North Africa. This is, of course, unusual because for military reason the exact location of units is not given to the press.

It is quite obvious why this departure from the customary handling of news comes about. The boys are doing a good job, and Washington wants the people back home to know it in order to off-set some of the rotten things that delayed the induction of Negroes into the Air Corps, and their treatment, in some instances, since they have been there.

JUL 8 1943

This is all very fine. It is just the thing to have done. In fact, it is just downright stupid and ridiculous to have done otherwise.

But the publication of this information does more than that: the work of these men simply demonstrates that those who led the fight to make a place for Negroes in the Air Corps were on the right track; that given a chance, the Negro can do a good job.

Richmond, Va. Times-Dispatch
October 16, 1943

Two Negro Officers Killed in Air Crash

SELFRIDGE FIELD, MICH., (AP)—Two Negro flying officers, Lieutenant William H. Walker, 24, whose mother, Mrs. Broddy Walker, lives at Suffolk, Va., and Lieutenant Leroi S. Williams, 24, whose mother, Mrs. Cardelia S. Williams, lives at 221 Harrison St., Roanoke, Va., were killed in midair collision of pursuit planes Thursday while on a routine flight.

The planes plunged to earth in flames in view of several motorists.

47a-1943.

Julian Comes to Town With Usual Flourish

Peoples Voice
New York, N.Y.
JUN 12 1943

The fabulous Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, Harlem's colorful and internationally famous soldier, flew to N.Y. from Lincoln, Neb., a couple of weeks ago as a member of a crew of a high-powered U. S. bomber.

He came in a private's uniform with a captain's rating in his pocket. Not only that, he came armed with a staggering number of letters of commendation from Army officials and nationally famous civilians testifying as to his character, ability, personality, etc., and recommending him for the commission he received a couple of weeks ago.

However, the most startling announcement made this trip by the erstwhile Black Eagle, Commander of the Ethiopian Airforce, Captain in the Finnish Air Force and not so long ago private, then sergeant, then private again in the U. S. Army, concerned the mystifying and much publicized incident when the King of Kings supposedly kicked Julian out of Ethiopia several years ago.

"Now that Ethiopia has come into her own again, the truth can be told," he said.

The newly-made captain, sartorially perfect as ever, said that he had left Ethiopia, not in the bad graces of Haile Selassie as the press commented at the time, but on exceptionally friendly terms. He was then a "man without a country," traveling on a League of Nations passport. He had entered Italy, he claimed, with every intention of assassinating Mussolini.

WENT TO KILL IL DUCE

"I had rigged up an automatic affair," Julian said, "that was to go off when I raised my hand in a fascist salute; but by accident I gave myself away and only got out of Italy by the skin of my teeth."

Anyway it's a good story.

Capt. Julian went to the Army Airforce Technical School at Lincoln on Mar. 6, finishing his work there a couple of weeks ago with a 91 percent rating. Subjects he took included hand tools, fundamentals, structures, hydraulics and engines.

"Most of the fellows were just out of college and couldn't understand how I could adapt myself so easily," he commented. "They wouldn't believe that I will be 46 years old in September."

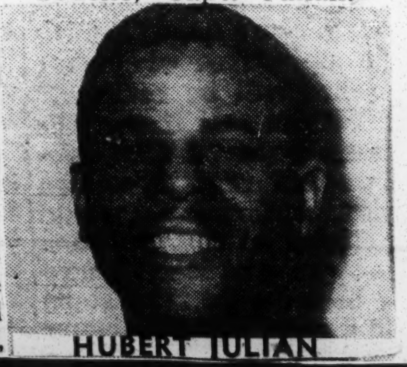
Following are excerpts from letters written about Julian before he was discharged from the school two weeks ago to accept a commission:

Brig. Gen. Early E. W. Duncan: "Pvt. Julian possesses the essential qualities of leadership and I sincerely hope that he receives a commission and is given an opportunity to better serve our country."

Major E. L. Bloom to Col. McDermott: "I would like very much to see him placed under your jurisdiction where there are colored troops. Any courtesy you could give Pvt. Julian would be appreciated by me."

C. S. (Casey) Jones, Pres Curtis Airplane Co.: "From my personal acquaintance with him, I believe he is qualified for consideration for a commission."

Touche, Capt. Julian.



HUBERT JULIAN

---

2 Die in Trainer Crackup at Tuskegee, Another when His Craft Plunges into Saginaw Bay

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
MAY 15 1943

WASRHINGTON

Three soldiers, one a Baltimorean, were killed in two army plane crashes over the week end, the War Department acknowledged this week.

The dead are:

2ND. LT. WILMETH SIDAT-SINGH, 25, former Syracuse University athletic star, of Washington;

CADET ROSS C. STEWART, 28, 2500 Madison Avenue, Baltimore, former Howard University student; and 2ND LT. JAMES E. BROTHERS, 26, of Chicago, University of Wisconsin junior.

Lieutenant Brothers and Cadet Stewart died when a primary training plane operated by Brothers cracked up near the Tuskegee (Ala.) Army airfield Saturday.

Brothers, along with eighteen other pilots, was awarded his second lieutenant's wings last Thursday. His mother and several aunts reside in Chicago.

Cadet Stewart had been in the army since February and had just recently applied for release from the service. He was home on furlough two weeks ago.

Stewart's Wife in Baltimore

His wife, Mrs. Evelyn T. Stewart, and two small daughters reside in Baltimore. His mother, Mrs. Elsie Stewart, lives in Somerset, Pa., where the body will be shipped.

Cadet Stewart attended Johnstown (Pa.) High School and Howard University. Before entering the army he was a foreman at the Bethlehem Steel Co.

He has another brother, Sgt. Horace Stewart, on duty with the army in Trinidad.

CADET ROSS C. STEWART

Lieutenant Singh, military authorities state, was reported missing after his single seat pursuit plane crashed into the Saginaw Bay off Lake Huron, Mich., Sunday noon.

Singh Crashed Sunday

Army officers from Selfridge Field, air base for Singh, learned from witnesses that a parachute opened before the plane fell.

However, no trace of Sidat-Singh or the parachute had been found by searchers late Monday. Army men from the Army Gunnery School at Ascoda, Mich., State police and coast guardsmen joined in the search.

The plane sank after it crashed and army officials said that only a large oil slick was found in the lake about a mile off shore.

Lieutenant Sidat-Singh, a native of Washington and a resident there since his college graduation, was graduated as a second lieutenant from Tuskegee Army Flying School on March 25 and had been assigned to the 301st Fighter Squadron at 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field since last Tuesday (May 4).

LT. WILMETH SIDAT-SINGH

Visited Mom 2 Weeks Ago

He had been sent to Ascoda School, a unit of Selfridge 200 miles away, for gunnery practice, and was on a routine flight. When the crash occurred, he was 26 hours overdue.

Two weeks ago, Singh visited his mother in Washington and told friends at the time that he enjoyed flying as much as he had thrilled at college athletics.

At the time of his departure for Tuskegee last August, Singh was a member of the Washington police force, a position he had held for six months. Prior to this, he had worked in the Navy Yard, coached athletic teams and played pro football and basketball.

Colorful Athletic Career

At Syracuse University, where he starred in football and basketball, Singh was considered one of the greatest athletes ever to attend Syracuse.

His basketball proclivities at DeWitt Clinton High School in New York City won for him a scholarship at Syracuse and he lived up to all the expectations of the Orange athletic directors.

On the gridiron eleven, he played halfback and was frequently mentioned for all-American honors. In 1939, he played on the Eastern College all-star squad, coached by Jock Sutherland, formerly of Pitt, against the New York Professional Giants, and the Washington Redskins, the latter in Boston.

In Singh's senior year at Syracuse, 1938, he attracted national attention with his forward passing greatness when he hurled three touchdown passes in Syracuse's traditional game against Cornell in the final nine minutes of play, causing Grantland Rice, syndicated writer, to hail him as "the greatest forward passer of the decade." His passes enabled Syracuse to win the game, 19-17.

After college graduation, Singh played pro basketball with the Renaissance, being a member of the Rens when they won the world pro championship in the Chicago tournament in 1939.

He also played two seasons with the Washington Bears, played pro football with the Washington Lions, and also was the star of the 1942 interracial all-star football game held in New York.

Appeared in Baltimore

In Baltimore against the Baltimore Mets, in February, 1942, Singh established a pro basketball scoring record of 28 points for a single game at the New Albert Auditorium. Charles (Tarzan) Cooper, famed coach of the Washington Bears, called Singh the "best shooter" since Pappy Ricks.

At the height of his athletic career at Syracuse, Singh was always in the headlines as many Southern colleges refused to play against him. The most celebrated instance of the color ban against him occurred in October, 1937, when Syracuse came to Baltimore to play the University of Maryland.

Singh previously had been advertised as a "Hindu halfback," but when it was learned that he was an American-born colored youth, Maryland refused to play against him and Singh had to sit it out on the bench. He was also barred from playing basketball at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

He resided in Washington at 610 R Street, Northwest, the home of his mother, Mrs. Pauline E. Sidat-Singh, a War Department employee. He is the only son, and the adopted son of Dr. Samuel Sidat-Singh of New York, whose family name he carried.

FIND BODY OF PILOT MIS SING SINCE JUNE

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich. Aug. 5—(ANP)—he body of 2n Lt. Nathaniel Milton Hill, missing since June 16, has been recovered from Lake Huron near Oscoda, Mich., according to a statement from Capt. Ramey, public relations officer. Next of kin have been notified.

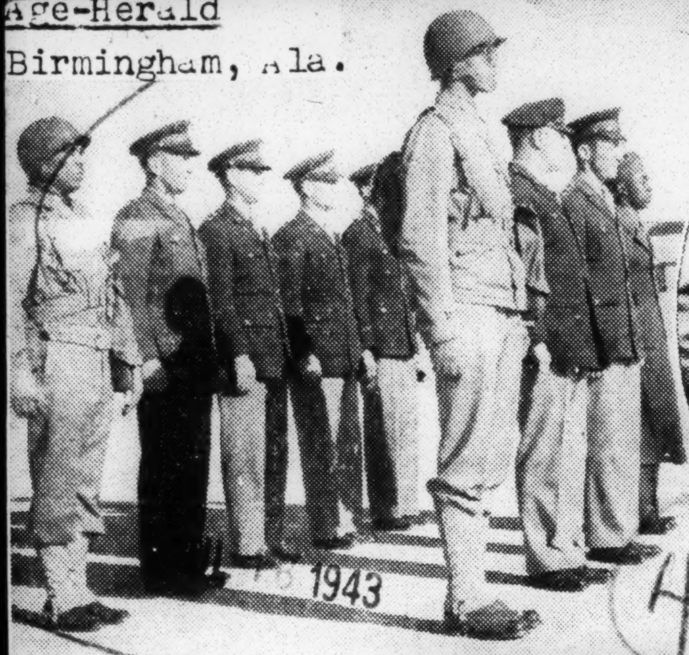
Lt. Hill was piloting a two seater training plane when he crashed into Lake Huron during a routine flight from the Oscoda army air field, a sub base of Selfridge field. He was accompanied on the flight by 2nd Lt. Luther Linson Blakeney, a weather officer, whose body was found June 17.

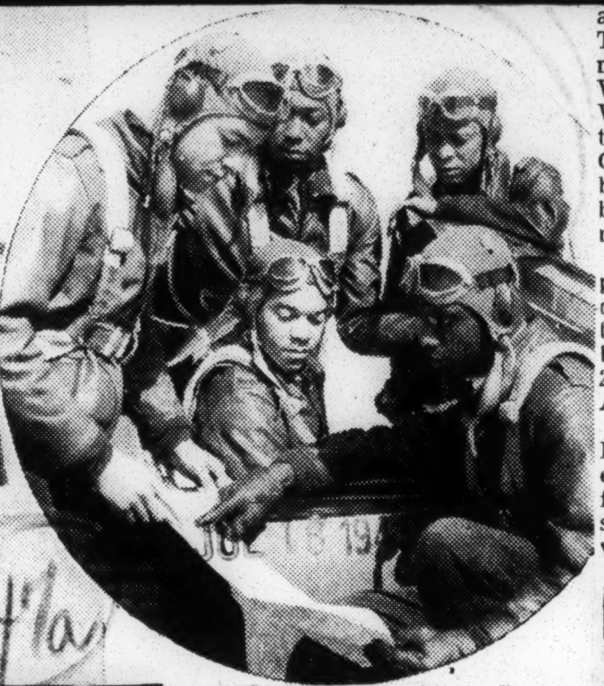
The Army air force pilot was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Hill of Washington, D. C. His wife, Laverne, resides in the same city.

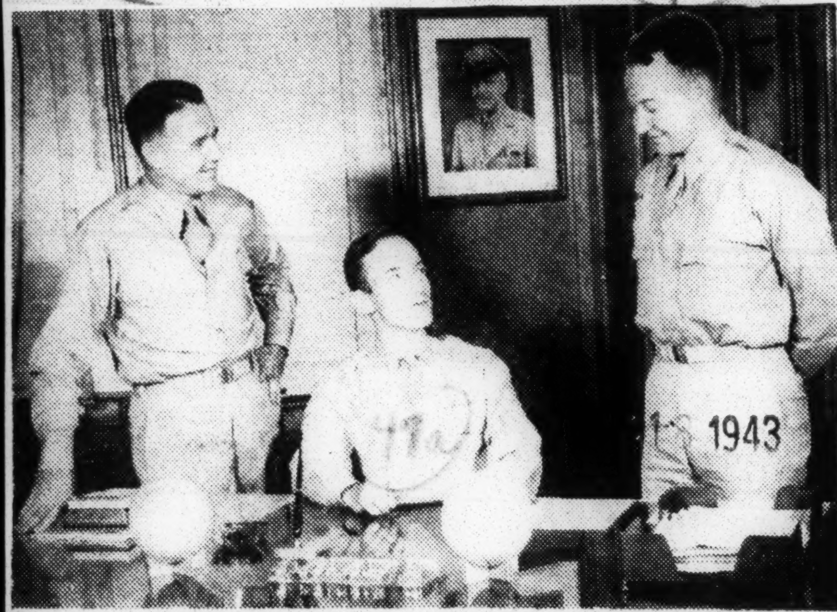
Both flyers were attached to the 332nd fighter group.

1943

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.







NEGRO PILOTS TRAINED—The Tuskegee Army Air Field at Tuskegee is training hundreds of Negro fliers for Uncle Sam's growing air force.

Top photo (above) shows officers who have been instrumental in the development of the air field passing in review at a parade in honor of Sgt. Arthur Freeman, who was awarded the Soldier's Medal for rescuing a child from drowning.

Front row (left to right), Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., Maj. Gen. Ralph Royce, Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer at Tuskegee, and Sgt. Freeman; back row (left to right), Capt. Hayden C. Johnson, Brig. Gen. Von H. Kimble, Lt. Col. John T. Hazard and Maj. John G. Cooke, Jr.

Top right shows flying officers checking their course for a cross-country flight.

Lower photo shows the commanding officer and his staff. Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish (seated) is commanding officer. Lt. Col. John T. Hazard (left) is executive officer and Capt. Clyde H. Bynum (right) is adjutant.

JUL 18 1943

Tuskegee-Trained Fliers Make Good In Combat At Pantelleria

2nd Lt. Leon Roberts, Prichard, Ala., Among Pilots Who Force Nazi Planes To Retreat

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—When the screaming P-40 Warhawks piloted by the first Negro fighter squadron in the history of the world, roared through Mediterranean skies to aid an Allied offensive concentrated on the Italian island base of Pantelleria, the Tuskegee-trained fighter pilots faced their acid test and came through with flying colors to prove that they had the necessary mettle to fly successfully in combat.

Blasting down death and destruction in one of the heaviest air operations in the history of warfare, these Negro fighting men of the air attacked heavily fortified Pantelleria, and from this island off the coast of Sicily they brought the Tuskegee Army Air Field out of the experimental stage to prove the value of Negro pilots in the present war. The first man of the squadron to bomb hostile territory was an Alabamian, 1st Lt. William A. Campbell, of Tuskegee.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, in discussing the battle plan of Pantelleria, asserted, "We are all very proud of the splendid activity of a fighter squadron commanded by Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., over Pantelleria."

* * *

THE TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, UNDER THE COMMAND Of Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, who rose through the ranks from private to his present position, is nine miles from Tuskegee Institute, the school founded and made famous by the late Dr. Booker T. Washington. The field was activated in August, 1941, and in March, 1942, the first class, of which Col. Davis (then captain) was a member, marched into the post recreation hall to receive their wings and commissions in the Army air forces. The other four members of the class were 2nd Lts. Lemuel Custis and George S. Roberts (now captains) and Mac Ross and Charles Debow (now first lieutenants). These five men formed the nucleus of the all-Negro fighter squadron, now on duty in North Africa, and following classes added to its number until it reached full strength.

The men trained in fighter planes from the time of the first graduation until last April, when the entire outfit was transferred from this field, where they had received all of their flying training, to overseas duty.

While the squadron was on duty in the Pantellerian offensive, so successful were the Allied operations that they did not have any opportunity to engage the enemy at that time, but a few days later, Tuskegee's Negro fighter pilots saw real action when a flight of P-40 Warhawks, led by 1st Lt. Charles W. Dryden, Bronx, N. Y., was attacked over Pantelleria by a dozen German FW 190s escorting enemy bombers. Flying above the hostile bombers was a formation of 10 more German planes.

In the ensuing fray, the Negro pilots pitched in and damaged two of the German planes and forced the others to retreat. Among pilots taking part in the fight was 2nd Lt. Leon Roberts, Prichard, Alabama.

More recently, 1st Lt. Charles B. Hall, Brazil, Ind., shot down an enemy plane in a North African dogfight, to become the first of the squadron to chalk up a complete victory in an air fight.

DAMAGE 2 PLANES OUT OF 12

Pittsburgh Courier

Fighter Squadron, Trained at Tuskegee, Wins First Aerial Combat Test Against the Vaunted German Luftwaffe

JUL 3 1943

WASHINGTON, uly 1 — The Army Air Forces Fighter Squadron in North Africa, composed of Negro pilots, has weathered its first aerial combat test, six of its planes encountering a larger formation of German fighters and damaging two of the enemy without loss to themselves, according to a message to the War Department last week.

This squadron, the 99th Pursuit Squadron, after careful training at Tuskegee and in North Africa, had previously been in action during the air siege of the island of Pantelleria. Its pilots did patrol duty, escorted heavy bombers and served as fighter bombers with other units of the tactical air force over Pantelleria and Lampedusa. However, during the first half of June they did not have much chance to show their ability in a test of strength against enemy fighters. During that time they were fired on only once and when they turned toward the enemy aircraft, the latter fled.

ATTACKED OVER PANTELLERIA

On the late afternoon of June 18 came the first engagement in the air. A flight of six P-40's led by First Lieut. Charles W. Dryden, 22 years old, of 800 Home street, Bronx, New York City, was attacked over Pantelleria, then in Allied hands, by a force of 12 German FW 190's trying to raid the island. Ten more German fighters hovered above to protect the bombers which the FW 190's were escorting. In a lively encounter the American Negro flyers parried the Nazi thrust, damaged two of the German fighter planes and forced the remainder to retreat.

First Lieut. Lee Rayford, of Ardwick, Md., said he was more surprised than alarmed when his wing was struck by machine gun and cannon fire in this, his first flight under the guns of enemy aircraft. He brought his ship back safely.

GIVEN NEEDED CONFIDENCE

Lieut. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the squadron said, "It was the first time any of them ever shot at the enemy. They gave a good account of themselves considering the odds against them, and, most important, they all came back safely."

Lieutenant Dryden who left City college, New York, where he was an engineering student, to become a pilot, said he thought the fight would give the flyers the confidence they needed, the confidence that could not be gained by mere training.

First Liut. Sidney P. Brooks, of 3009 East J street, Cleveland, Ohio, sighted the enemy fighters above his formation and warned the others just as the FW's dived to attack.

"They attacked in formation of four," said Lieutenant Dryden, "and we counted 12 coming down on us. Another 10 stayed above as high cover for the enemy bombers. We turned into them and they made diving attacks on us individually. When they started back up we went with them and they began a wide circle, with us after them. Then they broke off and climbed above us and stayed there waiting for another chance to dive on us. We stayed around until the controller ordered us home."

Second Lieut. Willie Ashley, Jr., of 212 West Bartlett street, Sumter, S. C., said his gas needle pointed to empty when he finally landed. The other planes were all low on gas also.

Lieutenant Rayford said his plane was hit while he was firing on two FW 190's. "While I was after the two," he said, "a third one got on my tail. That's the first time I've ever been shot at."

JUL 3 1943

Weather Teacher

OCT 6 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

LT. PAUL WISE

Recently assigned to the Tuskegee Army Air Field as instructor in meteorology is Second Lieutenant Paul S. Wise of Denton, Md., who comes to Tuskegee from the Grand Rapids Army Air Forces Technical Training Command, Michigan. A graduate of A. and T. College, Greensboro, N. C., Lt. Wise was employed as a science teacher in the high school at Denton, prior to his appointment as an aviation cadet.

Griffin Ga. News November 16

GRIFFIN COLORED BOY WINS PILOT'S WINGS AND ARMY COMMISSION

Jimmy Brown is the first colored boy from Griffin to win his wings as a pilot and a commission as second lieutenant in the Army Air Corps. He volunteered for the Army in 1941 and was first sent to Tuskeegee Institute (Ala) for preliminary training. Later he was assigned to a Florida field for combat training.

Brown was then sent to Texas for training in aerial gunnery and was entered in the National Gunnery trials by his outfit. He ranked seventh in this competition.

He is the grandson of the late Dr. A. M. Wilkins, who for many years practiced dentistry here.

47a-1943

WINGMEN FINISH TOUGH AIR COURSE AT TUSKEGEE... AWAIT ACTION

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Pittsburgh Courier

APR 3 1943

Having completed the required work of student airmen of the United States army, brown-skinned Americans received their officers' ratings and stand ready for duty, eager to get a chance to prove their ability at their new fighting task. Above picture shows some of the wingmen at Tuskegee Army Air base who have seen their dreams come true in the field of flying.

They are, from left to right: 2nd Lieuts. Elmer L. Gordon of Portsmouth, Va.; Lloyd G. Singletary of Jacksonville, Fla.; Woodrow W. Crockett of Texarkana, Arkansas; Lawrence E. Dickson of New York, N. Y.; William Gordon of Jackson, Miss.; Alfonzo W. Davis of Omaha, Nebraska; Clarence W. Allen of Mobile, Ala.; Leroy Bowman of Sumter, S. C., and Wilmeth W. Sidat-Singh of Washington.

Latest Group Of Tuskegee's Full-Fledged War Hawks

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

JUL 7 1943

47a

—Pictured are a few of the recent graduates at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Thse youths have received their wings and commission, and are now full-pledged Army Air Forces pilots.

JUL 7 1943

Shown in the above pictures are: (Front row. left to right) 2nd Lts. Willie S. Hunter, Wayne V Liggins. Hezekiah Lacy Jr., Theodore A. Wilson, Charles A. McGee, Oscar A. Kenny. Richard H Harris Jr.. and Weldon K. Groves. (Second Row) 2nd Lts. Frank D. Walker, Johnson C. Wells, Joe A. Lewis' William H. Johnson, William F. Williams, Leonard F. Turner, and William G. Wilkerson. (Third Row) 2nd Lts. John S. Sloan. Walter J. Palmer, Theopolis D. Moore, Virgil J. Richardson, Wylie W. Selden, Robert M. Alexander, Herbert Harris, Milton R. Henry and Alexander M. Bright.—(Photo

---

Group Awarded Superior Pennant For Four Weeks

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

JUN 20 1943

COURTLAND ARMY AIR FIELD, Alabama — (SNS) — Of the various units stationed at Courtland Army Air Field, the one setting the pace for squadron excellence is a Negro Squadron which started in third place, forged its way to the front and for four successive weeks, has captured the "Superior" pennant, an award granted after each Saturday night's inspection.

47a

Squadrons are judged by the point system on 12 separate phases of military life, ranging from administrative duties of the orderly room to individual behavior and appearance of enlisted personnel. As a result of this competition, many improvements are becoming evident throughout the base and up to the present time, the Negro squadron is showing the way.

Their Commanding Officer, First Lieutenant Herbert H. Gorman, of Jacksonville, Florida, has steadily encouraged the squadron's efforts and says "These men are in there pitching all the time to improve their own appearance and that of their squadron and are proud of their showing thus far."

JUN 20 1943

99th Squadron Helps Defeat Axis; Also Finds Time to Play

Afro-American Baltimore Md.

Flyers at Party Given by Jo Baker; Stewart Plays Chess with Commander; Crooner, Athletes in Unit

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in North Africa

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

JUL 17 1943

FROM AN ADVANCED AIR BASE—(By Mail, Censored)—When you're around a group every day for several weeks, eating and talking and playing games with men you don't know back home except in a casual way, you learn much and notice much. Your job is to write a bout them, and you try—but somehow you never seem to pin the man down on paper as you see him at his job of helping to defeat the Axis.

47a

Take Lieut. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the 99th Fighter Squadron, for instance. With all the headaches he must have keeping this outfit on the ball. I had to come all the way over here to discover that he plays a whale of a game of chess. I play, too—if Pat Murphy and Walter T. Dixon have no objection to my saying so.

Our guys fight on land and in the air—but still can appreciate left-handed Lieut. Bill Ashley of Hampton when he pitches horseshoes against Lieut. Bill Fuller of Tarboro, N.C.

JUL 17 1943

Ex-Boxer, Ordnance Officer

Particularly do I like to chat with Lieut. James O. Freeman, ordnance officer. Husky, jovial, never without his .45, Freeman's dry humor of his days at Brown University, his life in New York, and his many travels are a constant source of pleasure.

Freeman has been both amateur and professional boxer. He has visited Europe with the American Olympic team, and likewise toured South America with star athletes.

Around New York and New England he was building up quite a reputation as a referee until Uncle sent him "greetings." I wouldn't be surprised if he wound up managing a world champion after the war is over.

Letcher Busy Man

Another athlete and busy man is Lieut. Henry M. Letcher of Washington. Quite a football man was Letcher in his Hilltop days, but now he wins a big nod from me by his efforts as special service officer.

He gets us beer at least once a week, ice cream whenever possible, arranges various games, adds new books and magazines to the squadron library at every opportunity, selects and puts on movies, and provides transportation to the beach.

Entertained by Jo Baker

Before I joined the unit, he arranged for the outfit to see and meet Josephine Baker in her tour of North Africa. They're still talking about a party she threw after the show.

JUL 17 1943

Letcher's right-hand man is Pvt. Robert News[illegible] of Detroit, who until recently had a lot of stripes on his arm, but had a slight misfortune.

Crooner in Group

T/Sgt. James R. Anderson, Jr., South Bend, Ind., has the best ballad voice in these parts. Back home he sang in the Youth Choir of Los Angeles, but now he knocks the GI's off their boxes when he croons. Oh, yes, we have a S/Sgt named Charles Boyer.

Sgt. James A. Jackson comes from Nashville, and had the good taste to attend my old alma mater—Tennessee State College. An Alpha man, he now labors mightily as engineering clerk.

T/Sgt. Donald Quander comes from New York City and Textile High. Corp. Hiram Harding, Dallas, Tex., used to play trumpet in a swing band. Now he does photography.

Md., Pa., Men Seen

Not in this unit, but seen recently were:

Lieut. William H. Hall, Chicago who is an alumnus of Tuskegee and ordnance school at Aberdeen; S/Sgt. William T. Jeltz, Kansas City, Mo., graduate of the University of Kansas;

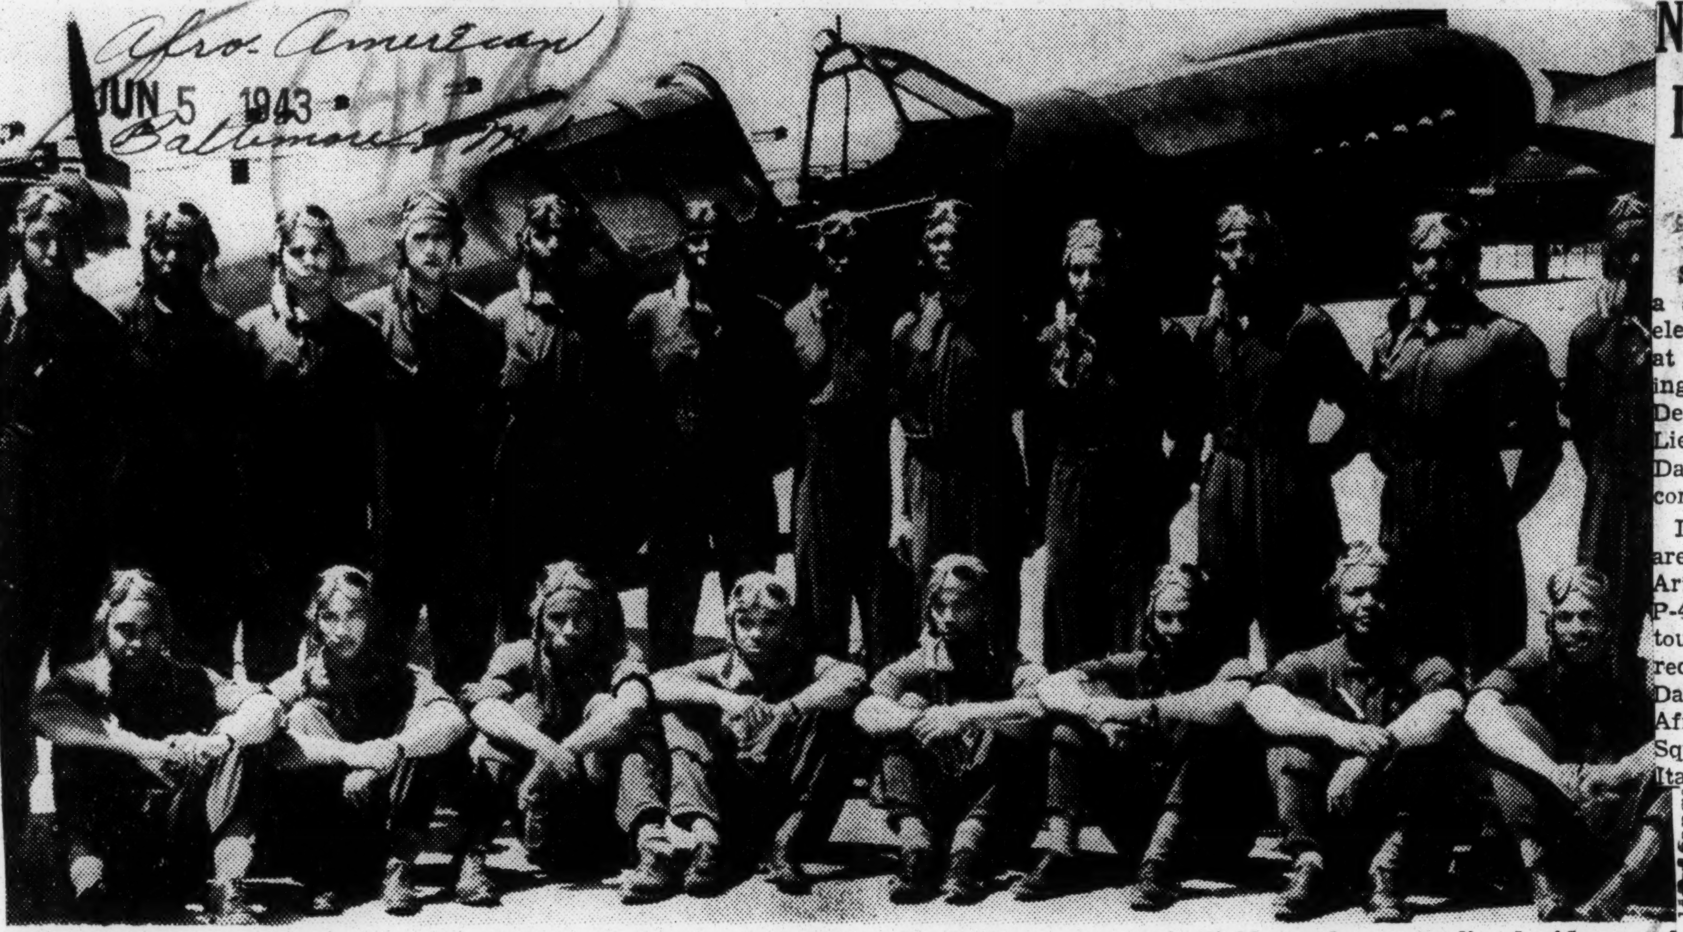
Pfc. James E. Green, electrician, a mechanic many years in his home town in Akron, Ohio; Corp. Wallace McKenney of Frederick, Md., who went to school at Princess Anne, and S/Sgt. Cleveland Watts who claims Homestead, Pa., as his home town.

JUL 17 1943

And all of us have a good word for Miss Hope Sutherland, New York City, who is our favorite Red Cross worker in these parts. She is white—and her weekly visits with doughnuts and coffee are always welcome.

TAAF's Newly Commissioned Flying Officers

Afro-American
JUN 5 1943
Baltimore, Md.



Members of the recent class that received their wings and commisions at the Tuskegee Army Air Field are shown standing beside one of the pursuit planes they are soon to fly. They are, from left to right: Standing, Second Lieutenants Joseph P. Gomer, Iowa Fall, Iowa Felix J. Kirkpatrick, Chicago; Craig H. Williams, Chicago; George E. Gray, Hemphill, W.Va.; Dempsey W. Morgan, Jr., Detroit; Spurgeon H. Ellington, Winston-Salem, N.C.; Albert H. Henning, Jr., Hartsville, S.C.; Dudley M. Watson, Frankfort, Ky.; Milton H. Brooks, Glassport, Pa.; Harry A. Sheppard, Jamaica, N.Y.; Charles H. Bussey, Los Angeles, and John F. Briggs, Jr., St. Louis; sitting, Laurence D. Wilkins, Los Angeles; Maurice V. Esters, Webster City, Iowa; Oliver O. Miller, Jr., Battle Creek, Mich.; Luther H. Smith, Jr., Des Moines, Iowa Langdon E. Johnson, Rand, W.Va.; James A. Walker, Manning, S.C.; John J. Suggs, Terre Haute, Ind., Clemenceau M. Givings, Richmond, Va

JUN 5 1943

Negro Pilots Get New Planes At Selfridge; Davis Is Commander

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—With a smart array of new equipment, elements of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field are fast attaining their training peak, the War Department announced this week. Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, jr., Air Corps, has assumed command of the Group.

Included in the new equipment are P-39s (commonly called the Ariacobra), P-47s and P-40s. The P-40 will be remembered as the tough air arm that brought much recognition to Lieutenant Colonel Davis' 99th Fighter Squadron in the African campaign. The 99th Fighter Squadron is presently serving in Italy.

Sidat-Singh's Body Found; Air Corps Plans Hero's Burial

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Plane to Drop Wreath as Noted Athlete Is Laid to Rest in Arlington

WASHINGTON

An official military funeral with big guns roaring and fighter bombers flying overhead, will be held Thursday for Second Lieut. Wilmeth Sidat-Singh at the Holy Redeemer Catholic Church, New York Avenue and M Street, Northwest.

JUL 3 1943

A wreath will be dropped from a plane on the body of the army flyer an ex-D.C. policeman and athlete when he is laid to rest in Arlington Cemetery.

Killed 7 Weeks Ago

Lieut. Sidat-Singh, former Syracuse University star athlete, was killed May 9 when he parachuted from his plane which crashed into Lake Huron, Mich. His body was sighted by a coast guard patrol at 3 p.m. Sunday, exactly seven weeks after the fatal accident.

He was a member of the 332nd Fighter Group, and when the plane fell into the lake was on a routine training flight from Oscoda to Selfridge Field.

Mother Feels Better Now

Mrs. Pauline E. Sidat-Singh mother of the flyer, who received official notice from the War Department Monday that her son's body had been found, stated:

"We loved him, but God loved him more. I really don't feel so badly now. Wilmeth had really crammed a whole lot of living into his twenty-five years."

Looking at a large room filled with scrapbooks, trophies, medals, pictures, fan mail that the great athlete had amassed in his very short lifetime, the mother added:

JUL 3 1943

"I am sure a lot of little boys can get a bit of inspiration out of just looking at these things. They worry me all the time now to look at them."

N.Y. School Honors Athlete

Already the flyer's mother is receiving many telegrams and letters of sympathy. Clinton High School in New York, which Sidat-Singh attended, dedicated a pamphlet to the flyer.

Tuskegee Institute has sent a life-size painting of Sidat-Singh with the inscription: "He was a man's man—what more can any man say."

JUL 3 1943

Many national and local organizations are expected to send representatives to the funeral. Pop Gates, the athlete's teammate on the Washington Bears, will head a Sidat-Singh Committee, which will form in New York and journey to D.C. for the funeral.

The flyer's body arrived here Tuesday and was taken to McGuire's funeral home where it will lay in state until the funeral.

The body was accompanied from the station by a guard of honor composed of policemen who had worked with the athlete here.

HEROISM OF '99th' PILOTS RECORDED

Pittsburgh Courier

By RANDY DIXON

(Accredited U. S. War Correspondent)

LONDON, Aug 5—(Via Cable)—Glowingly graphic in detail is the account—just published in "Yank," official organ of Allied troops in the North African Theatre of Operations—of the first battle of the 99th Pursuit Squadron from Tuskegee, Alabama. Prefaced by an explanation that the squadron had bombed Pantelleria for three weeks without enemy opposition, the article glorifies the heroics of six members of the "99th" in thwarting the humiliating German attacking force of 12 bombers, 12 Messerschmidt and Focke-Wulf fighter planes.

Led by Lt. G. Y. Dryden—behind whom were Lts. Leo Rayford, Washington, D.C.; Willie Ashley, Sumter, S.C.; Spann Wilson, Hackensack, N.J.; S. P. Brooks, Cleveland, Ohio, and Leon Roberts, Pritchard, Ala.—the squadron, despite the comparative slowness of its P-40's, beat off the superior forces without loss to it but with certain losses to the enemy.

GERMAN FIGHTERS MUCH FASTER

P-40 fighting must be defensive because the speedier Messerschmidts and Focke-Wulfs can pick an angle and time an attack. Starting the battle, the Americans employed a defensive Ludberry—the slow spiraling circle in which each plane protects the tail of the other. Rayford had two Focke-Wulfs at him when he turned into the burst of still another one. The burst hit and his P-40's right wing shuddered as the 20 mm. shell exploded there. Rayford was fighting grimly and taking a long gamble against two German fighter planes when Spann Watson appeared on his wing from nowhere.

AUG 1943

Watson opened fire at long range and hit the outside German with the result that the two enemy planes broke away from the fight.

"YANK" CREDITS ASHLEY WITH FELLING FIRST PLANE

Meanwhile, Ashley's plane had gone into a spin when he altituded and encountered another Focke-Wulf. This time, Ashley got close and let go the entire "works," spraying the Germans end to end. It began a long, smoking glide into the sea. It was the first German plane shot down by a Negro airman. Then all six planes spiraled into a formidable porcupine formation and the German fighters quit the battle and sped homeward.

47a-1943

Brazilian Opera Star Arrives For Concert At Auditorium

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.

Bidu Sayao, popular Brazilian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is pictured at the Tutwiler Hotel displaying her charming qualities of beauty and character shortly after her arrival in Birmingham Thursday afternoon. Mme. Sayao will be presented in joint concert with Richard Crooks in the opening presentation of the local Music Club's artists series at the Municipal Auditorium Friday night.

BY INEZ STEWART TUGGLE

Possessing the rare charm and beauty of a sheltered South American background, Bidu Sayao, popular star of the Metropolitan Opera Company, showed nothing but childlike pleasure and interest in her first trip to the South when she arrived here Thursday afternoon for a joint concert with Richard Crooks Friday night.

Mme. Sayao, willing to accommodate to any extent by graciously posing for pictures and answering questions of interviewers, displayed a sincere quality of character in the interests and surroundings of those about her. Her first thought, however, was getting her mother settled for a rest. Her mother is the singer's constant traveling companion. Charmingly explaining that the beginning of her concert tour had been tiring on her mother, the Brazilian soprano did not complain of any personal fatigue, even though she told of an exciting concert in Atlanta Wednesday night following which she "indulged in only three hours of sleep before leaving for Birmingham."

Crooks Is Delayed

Mr. Crooks' arrival in Birmingham was delayed due to his consenting, on a moment's notice, to sing at a free concert at a Negro Army camp at Tuskegee Thursday night. He was to be flown to Birmingham after the concert.

Presenting a striking appearance in a tastefully-arranged traveling ensemble, Mme. Sayao has rich auburn hair which she wears in a becoming roll on her neck, large brown eyes with a generous fringe of lashes and a disposition which never varies from a wide, happy smile showing beautiful white teeth and dimples.

She and her mother have not visited their native Brazil in three years and both have acquired the habits and reactions of "you North Americans."

Before coming to this country Bidu Sayao had won fame at home and in Europe where she sank at the Paris Opera Comique. She was engaged by the Metropolitan Opera Company in 1937 and the exciting promise of her opera debut as Manon has been richly fulfilled in a variety of roles she has made her own.

New Orleans Next Stop

Just beginning the current concert tour, she appeared in Savannah, Ga., besides Atlanta, before coming to Birmingham. Leaving here she will go to New Orleans and will complete the tour with several Midwestern appearances before returning to New York.

Mme. Sayao and Mr. Crooks will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Friday at the Municipal Auditorium in the opening presentation of the Birmingham Music Club's annual artists series.

Having appeared here in several previous concerts, Mr. Crooks' visit is looked forward to by numerous music lovers in Birmingham. A top-ranking member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, his voice lends itself uniformly well to songs, opera, ballads or religious music.

Albany, Ga., Journal
September 3, 1943

LOCAL NEGRO GETS WINGS

A second Albany Negro, member of an old and respected family here, has won his wings in the Army Air Forces, it was learned this week.

He is Richard Hall, son of Henry and Annie M. Hall, a graduate of Hampton Institute, Va., who enlisted in the AAF, was trained at Tuskegee, Ala., and was commissioned upon his graduation last month. Hall, a second lieutenant, also was awarded a medal for expert gunnery.

First Albany Negro to win wings was Willie S. Hunter, son of Daisy Hunter, in June, when he, too, was graduated from the AAF school at Tuskegee with high honors. He is now stationed at Selfridge Field, Mich.

The Hall Negrfo family has long been associated with the prominent Tift and Hall white families here, gaining its surname in slavery days from the latter family. Daisy Hunter has been employed in the service of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Barnett for a great number of years.

Bomber Squadron Formed

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—The second dream of air-minded colored youth of today materialized into a reality, as twin engine training officially started last week at the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

With the advent of the first all-colored Fighter Squadron to combat, in single engine P-40 Warhawks, the question immediately arose as to the possibility of an all-colored bomber squadron.

The question was answered when the War Department sanctioned the training of colored cadets in the arduous task of becoming multi-engine pilots, here at the home of the first all-colored Fighting Pilot Squadron now engaged in deadly combat over the war torn skies of Europe.

Selected to head this new school, the first of its kind anywhere in the world, is Major Clay Albright, the man who has taught every colored fighter pilot in the Army Air Forces today how to fly fighter aircraft. Lieutenant Milton B. Hall of Owensboro, Kentucky, is assisting him in an administrative capacity. Instructors of the newly formed school are 1st Lieutenant Leonard B. Crozier and 2nd Lieutenant Robert B. Meagher.

Pilot trainees for twin engine training here will be selected from the Upper Basic class of cadets. They are to receive 70 hours of advanced flying training here and then transferred elsewhere for actual bomber pilot training.

The type of aircraft to be used in the twin engine course here, is the AT-10 BH (Beechcraft). This plane is referred to as an "assimilated loaded bomber," as its altitude in flight is comparable to that of a medium bomber with a full load of bombs. All the ingenuity and skill required of a bomber pilot is necessary in flying the AT-10 trainer.

For the highly technical job of maintenance, instructors from Turner Field, Georgia, have been attached here to familiarize our mechanics in the fundamental knowledge of keeping these ships aloft.

Oxford, Miss., Eagle
September 16, 1943

Commander Tells Of Training Negro Pilots

- Col. Parrish Relates to Rotarians Some of the Work at Colored Training Field in Alabama

Some of the highlights of the training of negro aviators for Army combat work was told to Rotarians at their Tuesday luncheon by Lt. Col. Parrish, commanding officer of the air training center at Tuskegee, Ala., the only one of its kind in the world.

This training field gives from basic to and including advanced flying instruction, turning out aviators ready for combat service. About 300 negroes have graduated and gone into air service. One group operated pursuit planes in the invasion and victory in Sicily and acquitted themselves well.

Col. Parrish said that the course was exactly the same as given white men and that a negro earning his wings and commission had to be for all purposes as good a flier as a white. About 40 per cent of those who enroll for the course complete the work in comparison to 60 per cent of white trainees

The bulk of the trainees come from northern states and usually have some educational credits from state universities where they attended along with white students. There are, however, some Southern students in the groups, more in the early stages of the field's operation than at the present time.

The majority of officers at the field are colored. Col. Parris, a Georgian by birth, told of some of the difficulties that arise when two races are thrown together on somewhat equal ranking. However, he stated that the colored officers understand the situation and never became presumptuous. There has never been any racial trouble at the field, even though the majority of colored officers and trainees came from sections of the country where they have been used to very nearly the same social privileges as white people.

Col. Parrish came to Oxford with Lt. David W. Smallwood for a short social visit and vacation. Lt. Smallwood was present at the luncheon and introduced his distinguished guest. Mrs. J. A. Smallwood, the young lieutenant's mother, and Mrs. B. S. Guyton were also guests at the Tuesday luncheon.

War Dep'tment Announces Negroes to be Trained as

Washington Tribune Washington, D. C.

Bombardier Soldiers

Acting Secretary of War John J. McCloy announced at the War Department Press Conference that on September 5 or October 3, Negro cadets will be sent to either Fort Dodge, Kansas or Del Rio, Texas, to start training in a B-26 Transition School with objective the command of B-26 airplanes.

In December, Negro cadets will be trained as navigator and bombardier officers. They will be trained as such for 18 weeks after which they will go to gunnery school. All this training will be with white students.

To complete the crews of this Medium Bombardment Group which must be activated by July 1, 1944, many Negro enlisted men are already in training all over the country. They are studying radio, aviation mechanics, electrical work and armor at Lincoln, Chanute, and Lowry Fields, and other Air Forces installations, all with white enlisted men.

Time
Chicago. Illinois

Experiment in Segregation

Sirs:

. . . I have been a constant reader of TIME for over ten years and during that period I have observed that TIME has done a fair job of honestly reporting the news. However [in the Sept. 20 issue], TIME made some definite statements about the 99th Fighter Squadron and unashamedly admitted these statements to be based on "unofficial reports." . . .

My husband, Lieut. Colonel Benjamin O Davis Jr. . . . until recently commanded the 99th Fighter Squadron. . . . His views are undoubtedly not as objective as those of a disinterested onlooker. . . .

Are you justified in saying that the record of the 99th Fighter Squadron is only fair? My husband tells me that his judgment, based on comparison with the work done by six veteran P-40 squadrons in the same area on the same types of missions over the same period of time, is that the record of the 99th Fighter Squadron is at least worthy of favorable comment.

My indictment is that by publishing an article based on "unofficial reports" you have created unfavorable public opinion about an organization to which all Negroes point with pride. You should realize that these few printed words in TIME—words which may be creating a false impression—have struck at one of the strongest pillars upholding Negroes' morale in their effort to contribute to the winning of the war.

AGATHA SCOTT DAVIS

New York City

OCT 18 1943

▸ TIME's "unofficial reports" came from responsible sources which could not be quoted. Those reports—on operational results—raised no question about the Negro's fighting ability.

If the 99th's record has been only fair, the blame must at least be shared by the Army Command responsible for the squadron's segregated training and operation. Perhaps too much was expected of such an experiment—ED.

Sirs:

You are undoubtedly correct in suggesting that Negro pilots are unlikely to develop their full potentialities in a segregated setup. A good analogy is the case of the Negro athlete. Jesse Owens, Brud Holland, etc. were products of unsegregated playing fields and more or less open competition. . . .

ANNE BONTEMPS

Nashville

OCT 18 1943

Sirs:

. . . It is not disappointing to learn "that the top air command was not altogether satisfied with the 99th's performance." . . . All along the "findings" of the top air command have been the bases of Negroes' objection to the establishment of a segregated unit. . . .

While casting a severe eye upon the example, the command should likewise cast an eye of forbearance upon the squadron, for after all it has received second-class training to defend a first-class democracy. . . .

A. A. ABRAHAM

Alcorn. Miss.

News
Birmingham, Ala.

Noteworthy Program By Marian Anderson Well Received In City

Four Schubert Numbers Expertly Interpreted, Prove Best Of Offerings

Birmingham gave Marian Anderson her usual ovation Saturday night at the Municipal Auditorium, and she accepted the reception with the numbleness of spirit and unaffected simplicity which seems invariably to accompany greatness in any field.

Standing with closed eyes and singing from her soul, she gave a noteworthy program which opened with a group of 18th century composers, but it was not until she came to the group of four Schubert numbers, "Suleika," "Auf dem Wasser zu singen," "Nacht und Traume" and "Musensohn" and "Ave Maria" as an encore, when she employed mezzovoice in sustained passages that her singing was at its best.

Marian Anderson's virtuosity in outlining of long phrases sung with the half-voice was nowhere more notably displayed than in her rendition of her favorite, "Ave Maria." It was a memorable invocation that held the audience silent and not disposed to break the spell.

Marian Anderson sings music by classic masters not as a lesson learned, or a duty carefully pe formed, but as an interpreter wh has fully grasped and deeply fe the import of the song. Her rang and her control and reserve breath are exceptional and th tonal colors of her vocal organ ar varied and of prevailing beauty.

The aria "Plus Grand Dans So Obscurite" from "The Queen o Sheba" was brilliantly sung and fol lowed by "Comin' Thru the Rye, charmingly done. "Upon Thei Grave," "Evening Song," "Neil," "Dans les ruines d'une Abbaye" an "Vocalise" composed the remainde of the program that was closed wit a group of Negro spirituals. Whe Marian Anderson interprets th songs of her own race she invest them with understanding and spiritual quality that lift them above ordinary folk music.

The Anderson concert, as always was a musical experience to be remembered.

Next of the special attractions o the Birmingham Music Club will be the Jeanette MacDonald concert Nov. 5.—LILY MAY CALDWELL.

40a

September 25, 1943

Local Negro To Sing In London

Greenville, N. C.—Reflector

Headquarters, European Theater of Operations—Private William J. Bernard, 33, of 608 Clark Street, Greenville, N. C., soon will appear in a chorus of 200 colored Engineer Aviation troops on the stage of London's Royal Albert Hall in a concert of American spiritual and patriotic music.

Roland Hayes, the colored tenor, and the London Symphony Orchestra also will be featured in the concert which, under the sponsorship of Lord Beaverbrook's "Daily Express," promises to be one of the outstanding events of the current season.

The program will be presented on September 28 and 29.

Pvt. Bernard, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Austin Bernard, has been in the army about 16 months. He is in the Corps of Engineers.

Symphony Thrills Audience; Still's Music Is Featured

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By RANDY DIXON

(Accredited U. S. Army War Correspondent)

BRISTOL, England, April 15—(Censored)—The chimes of racial achievement pealed forth another epic chord in World War II when 300 colored American soldiers, this week, converged on this city—ancestral bastion of slave trade—to witness a Negro artist mount the pinnacle of cultural achievement on the exact soil where, centuries ago, hapless and illiterate slaves, perhaps direct blood antecedents of these same soldiers, were sold as so much human cargo off the auction block.

APR 17 1943

The occasion was the triumph of the young genius, Rudolph Dunbar, as guest conductor of the National Symphony orchestra. To others in the capacity audience of 2,800 persons, it was an event animated into brilliancy under the combined magic of Dunbar's baton and the sublime, ofttimes exuberant but always invigorating, passages of William Grant Still's Afro-American symphony. But to the 300 soldiers it was much more than that: it was a visual and audible manifestation of their race's upward surge during the more than 75 years since Emancipation. These men grasped, with full significance, the fact that a contemporary product of slavery was returning to the city of Bristol, bygone axis of the slave industry. But returning, not as a bit of human fodder to be bartered, but as an eloquent spokesman of the world's highest culture. And they saw, too, a precise link between the event and their own blood-shedding mission over here.

QUESTIONS THEY THOUGHT ABOUT

Were they not fighting participants in the raging global wars against the present day forces opposing freedom of speech, freedom of action, freedom of opportunity, and the right of mankind, the world over, to live and advance at his whim's dictates, with God-granted talent and inborn abilities as the lone workable criterion?

Were they not about to shed their own blood to make occasions, such as Dunbar's triumph, an everyday event?

INTEROSPECTIVE SITUATION

Yes, they apprehended the irony of the situation. They knew that, for them, history was being written—and they were determined to help write it. Hence, they bought up every ticket remaining from the heavy advance sale. They made certain that their Army chores were disposed of in such a manner that nothing interfered with their requests for time off to attend the concert. They came by train, by tram, on foot. One group, which was out on a truck convoy, worked like demons to shave four hours off its schedule return, in order to come to Bristo for the event. Although very fe had ever before attended a symphonic presentation, their rigidit under the impetus of pride quickl relaxed into dignity and they regarded the proceedings with much reverence. The spirit of Still's music and the genius of Dunbar became infectious. The music transmitted to them the speech of passion, of sentiment, of emotion. It was the divine language of the elements, the sigh, the gasp, the meloncholy moan, the plaintive note of supplication, the caressing murmur of maternal love, the cry of challenge, the soul of emancipation. It was music that made the doors of the brain fly open and the mind swell forth into the world of the past. The senses became steeped in langour, the eyes filled with tears, the memories of the past took form and a voluptuousness and sadness permeated the soul.

APR 17 1943

GRAND RECEPTION FOR DUNBAR

When the concert was concluded and the audience had thundered six curtain calls, the music did not vanish from the souls of those 300 soldier boys. Like a shadow vanishes in one's arms, they carried its memory over to the reception they held in Dunbar's honor and greeted him with a spontaneous tribute as he entered the auditorium of the great George Street Red Cross club, scene of the reception.

When Cpl. Willie Hunter, Florence, Ala., strode up to the conductor and said:

"Thank you, Mr. Dunbar, for your concert; we have gained a new spiritual uplift to go out and fight for democracy," Dunbar replied: "Thank you, Corporal; I am indebted to you, and not you to me, and don't forget, it was not my program or my music or my triumph—it was ours."

MEMORABLE EVENT

Dunbar was besieged for more than 30 minutes, signing autographs and relating the background and history of the American Negro composer, William Grant Still.

Today, every one of those 300 soldiers is back at his post, awaiting the call to combat, but each awaits the call with sharpened morale and increased zest, because he has helped write a new page in the history of racial accomplishment and recognition.

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
October 6, 1943

MARIAN ANDERSON TO BE HEARD HERE

Marian Anderson, Negro contralto, will be heard in a program including arias from famous grand operas and spirituals, when she sings at the Municipal Auditorium Oct. 23 under the sponsorship of the Birmingham Music Club.

Her concert will be the first of the special attractions, not included on the regular artists' series, booked for the Fall and Winter by the music club.

Jeanette MacDonald, titian-haired soprano of screen operettas, radio, concert and grand opera, will sing a "command" concert here Nov. 5. Sigmund Romberg and his concert orchestra and soloists will follow on the evening of Nov. 12. Oscar Levant, of Information, Please, will appear in piano recital Jan. 29.

Opening the music season in Birmingham and the artists' series of the music club, Bidu Sayao, Brazilian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, and Richard Crooks, of the "Met," will sing in joint recital at the auditorium Oct. 15, their program including arias, duets and scenes from "La Traviata," "La Boheme," and "Manon."

Other attractions on the artists' series will be the Charles L. Wagner production of Gounod's "Faust," Oct. 23; Fritz Kreisler, Dec. 2; Licia Albanese, Dec. 15; Vladimir Horowitz, Jan. 22; Don Cossack Russian Male Chorus, Feb. 7; Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Artur Rubenstein as piano soloist, Feb. 23, and the Russian Ballet Theater, March 28.

47 a-1943

Another First For History's Book

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

JUN 26 1943

First pilot in a fighter squadron in North Africa to land a plane on foreign shores was 1st Lt. James T. Wiley, Pittsburgh, one of four fliers who ferried the first consignment of ships to the base from an assembly point. Lt. Wiley brings his plane to a stop and looks happily out of his cockpit. Members of the ground crew stationed at the squadron base climb on wings to greet Lt. Wiley as he brings in the plane. Behind Lt. Wiley is Staff Sgt. Earl Dillard of Marshall, Texas. (Exclusive Journal and Guide photo by Thomas W. Young.)

JUN 26 1943

Map Plans For Air Pickup

Atlanta Daily World

FEB 8 1943

The U. S. Air Force has organized a new ground transport system whereby delivery and pick up between air stations in England is regulated by central offices. Extreme left is Lt. Berry W. Fite, Resaca, Ga., with briefing sergeants in charle of convoy prior to departure. Left to right, Sergeants Raymond R. Delvatch, Yonkers, N. Y.; Sam L. Carmack, Birmingham, Ala.; Roscoe Whitelow, Riddely,

FEB 2 1943

JUL 31 1943

Informer
Houston, Texas

47a

Informer
Houston, Texas

47a

1943

RELAXATION IN NORTH AFRICA

These boys are part of the 99th Fighter Squadron stationed in North Africa who are taking part in the battle of Sicily. Even in this war-torn territory Pvt. JAMES B. KNIGHTON, Tulsa, Oklahoma, and Lt. WILLIE ASHLEY of Sumter, South Carolina, relax by playing horseshoes. Seen in and on the jeep are other members of our 99th Squadron.

U. S. Negro Pilots Weather First Test Against German Flyers

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

The Army Air Forces fighter squadron in North Africa composed of Negro pilots has weathsix of its planes encountering a larger formation of German fighters and damaging two of the enemy without loss to themselves, according to a message to the War Department today.

This squadron, after careful training in this country and in North Africa, had previously been in action during the air siege of the island of Pantelleria. Its pilots did patrol duty, escorted heavy bombers and served as fighter bombers with other units of the tactical air force over Pantelleria and Lampedusa. However, during the first half of June they did not have much chance to show their ability in a test of strength against the enemy fighters. During that time they were fired on only once and when they turned toward the enemy aircraft, the latter fled.

On the late afternoon of June 18 came the first engagement in the air. A flight of six P-40's led by First Lieutenant Charles W. Dryden, 22 years old, of 800 Home Street, Bronx, New York City, was attacked over Pantelleria, then in Allied hands, by a force of twelve German FW 190's trying to raid the island. Ten more German fighters hovered above to protect the bombers which the FW 190's were escorting. I a lively encounter the American Negro flyers parried the Nazi thrust, damaded two of the German fighter planes and forced the remainder to retreat.

First Lieutenant Lee Rayford of Ardwick, Md., said he was more surprised than alarmed when his wing was struck by machine gun and cannon fire in this, his first flight under the guns of enemy aircraft. He brought his ship back safely.

Lieutenant Colonel B. O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the squadron, said, "It was the first time any of them ever shot at the enemy. They gave a good account of themselves considering the odds against them, and most important, they all came back safely."

Lieutenant Colonel B. O. Davis, City College, New York, where he was an engineering student, to become a pilot, said he thought e fight would give the flyers the confidence that could not be gained by mere training.

JUL 10 1943

First Lieutenant Sidney P. Brooks of 3009 East J Street, Cleveland, Ohio, sighted the enemy fighters above his formation and warned the others just as the FW's dived to attack.

'They attacked in formation of four," said Lieutenant Dryden, "and we counted twelve coming down on us. Another ten stayed above as high cover for the enemy bombers. We turned into them and they made diving attacks on us individually. When they started back up we went with them and they began a wide circle, with us after them. Then they broke off and climbed above us and stayed there waiting for another chance to dive on us. We stayed around until the controller ordered us home."

Second Lieutenant Willie Ashley, Jr., of 212 West Bartlett Street, Sumter, S..C,, said his gas needle pointed to empty when he finally landed. The other planes were all low on gas also.

Lieutenant Rayford said his plane was hit [illegible] he was firing on two FW 190's. "While I was after the two," he said, "a third one got on my tail. That's the first time I've ever been shot at."

The Americans were too busy to get a close shot at the bombers, although Lieutenant Dryden fired one fleeting burst at one of them. They were unable to state whether the bombers had reached their objectives but Lieutenant Rayford said he saw at least four bombs strike the water without doing any damage. Besides Lieutenants Dryden, Rayford, Ashley and Brooks, pilots participating in the engagement were Second Lieutenant Spann Watson of 122 J Street, Hackensack, N.J., and Second Lieutenant Leon C. Roberts, of Murphy and McGee Streets, Prichard, Ala.

An advantage that the squadron has over many other is that nearly all its personnel, commissioned and enlisted, h a s worked together since the outfit was formed in 1941.

The pilots are enthusiastic in their praise of their P-40's, said Lieutenant Dryden. "I can honestly say I'd rather fly the Warhawk than any other ship I know of," he added.

Most of the pilots are college-trained, while a great many of the enlisted ground crew have had civilian training in flying and aircraft mechanics. The knowledge thus gained has in most cases been polished at air corps technical schools in the United States.

In addition to those mentioned above, the following are the pilots of the first squadron of its kind to see action:

Captain George S. Roberts, 317 Quarry Avenue, Fairmont, W. Va.; Captain Lemuel R. Curtis, 67 Pliney Street, Hartford, Conn.; First Lieutenant Herbert E. Carter, Amory, Miss.; First Lieutenant Edwin B. Lawrence, 2068 East 90th Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

First Lieutenant Herbert V. Clark, 810 East 67th Street, Pine Bluff, Ark.; First Lieutenant Allen Ga[illegible], 205 Cherry Street, Dempolis, Ala.; First Lieutenant James T. Wiley, 705 Woods Run Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; First Lieutenant Clarence C. Jamison, 2252 East 85th Street, Cleveland, O.

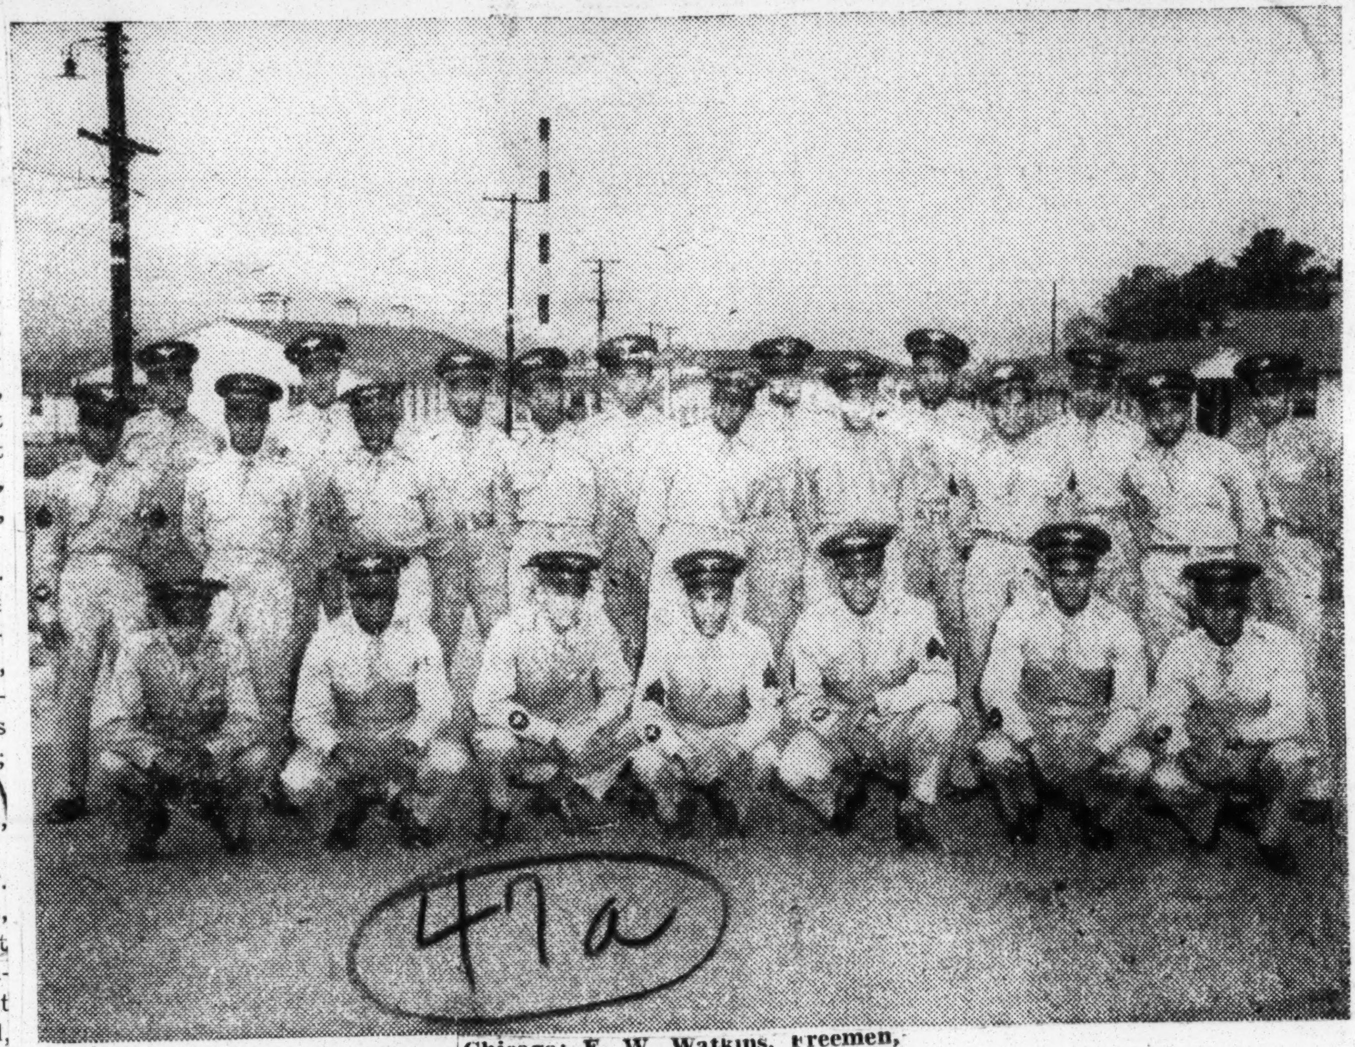
First Lieutenant Sidney P. Brooks, 3709 East 142nd Street, Cleveland, O.; First Lieutenant Charles B. Hall, 1034 East Hendrix Street, Brazil, Ind.; First Lieutenant William A. Campbell, Tuskegee, Ala.; First Lieutenant James B. Knighten, 1130 Mt. Greenwood Street, Tulsa, Okla.

Second Lieutenant Willie H. Fuller, Tarboro, N.C.; Second Lieutenant Graham Smith, Ahoskie, N.C.; Second Lieutenant Paul G. Mitchell, [illegible] Howard Road, S.E., Wash., D.C.; Second Lieutenant Louis R. Purnell, West Weaver Street, Germantown, Pa.

Second Lieutenant John W. Rogers, 1522 Linn Street, Cincinnati O.; Second Lieutenant Samuel M. Bruce, 319 12th Avenue, Seattle, Wash.; Second Second Lieutenant James L. McCullin, 3901 Enright Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.; Second Lieutenant George R. Rolling, 24 Cummings Avenue, Phoebus, Va.; Second Lieutenant Walter I. Lawson, Newton. Va.

JUL 10 1943

Last 'All-Fighter' Class ToGet Wings



47a

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD. Ala. — What may be the last all-fighter group to graduate from Tuskegee Army Air Field, received their wings recently from this famous training center. This class may be the last to graduate from the Advanced School of Flying here and and remain intact as a fighter group, since all classes following in their wake will be split up; some to enter twin engine training in preparation for bomber work, while the remainder will continue as fighter pilot trainees.

Among the group to receive wings and commissions were: First row: Second Lieutenants R. H. Smith, Baltimore; W. D. Ross, Ashland. Kentucky; C. N. Langston, Chicago, C. E. Johnson, Charlottesville, Va.; G. J. Haley, Bath, N. Y.; Flight Officer William Cross, Cleveland, and Second Lieutenant C. B. Johnson, Philadelphia; Second Row: Second Lieutenants C. B. Browne. New York; E. L. Jones, New York; N. W. Scales, Austin, Texas; C. W. Newman, St. Louis; M. A. Harris, Boston; C. F. May, Indianapolis; P. G. Goodenough, Washington, D. C.; G. M. Rhodes, Brooklyn; Third Row: W. N. Alsbrook, Kansas City, Kan.; W. N. Morgan, Omaha; A. Simmons, Jacksonville, Fla.; D. B. der, Chicago; C. L. Browder, ngton, N. C.; N. V. Nelson, Chicago; E. W. Watkins, Freemen, W. Va.; H. B. Scott, Jersey City.

LT SAM BRUCE SEATTLE PILOT FIGHTS OFF AXIS PLANES, SAVES COMRADE

The Northwest Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

(Sam Bruce, saviour of his comrade is the son of Mrs. Martha Davis, manager of The Angelus, funeral directors. He is a graduate of Garfield High and of A. & T. College. He stared in both football and baseball. His popularity in Seattle was dimmed by his brilliant performance at A. & T. College. His coach was our own Homer Harris.—Editor.)

PHOEBUS, Va. — The family of Lt. George R. Bolling, fighter pilot attached to the 99th Pursuit Squadron, was notified this week that the youth had returned safely to his outfit after having been shot down over the Mediterranean and missing for six days.

While details of his nerve-wracking experience were few, it is reliably reported taht Lt. Bolling's plane was struck by flak from anti-aircraft guns during the second day of Allied landings in Sicily. He immediately banked and headed back for his base in North Africa.

He had gone only a short distance though, when the machine burst into flames and he was forced to abandon ship. Lt. Bolling jumped, pulled the ripcord and started his 4,000-foot drop. A fellow-pilot, said to be Lt Sam Bruce, former A. and T. college football star, circled him and fought off Axis planes which appeared bent on machine-gunning the unfortunate Bolling.

Kept Long Vigil

The rest of the day and through [illegible] night, Bolling drifted about helpless in his rubber life raft. Despite the fact that aid seemed to be a remote possibilitp, Lt. Bolling refused to give up hope. When the next day dawned he resumed his vigil for a ship [illegible] may prove his rescuer.

Whenever he [illegible] ship on the horizon, the flyer would begi waving in an effort to attract at tention. Finally, on his secon day in the water, Lt. Bolling wa picked [illegible] by a destroyer and carried to safety. Within a few days he was [illegible] with his comrades and relating [illegible] experiences over and over to them.

Lt. Bolling was one of two flyers knocked out of formations of the 99th on the invasion of Sicily. The other pilot, Lt. James L. McCullin, of St. Louis, Mo., is still missing.

SEP 15 1943

15

9/15/1943

41a

47a-1943

Hall, Pilot Hero, Kept His Promise

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

JUL 17 1943

By JOHN R. WILLIAMS
(Staff Correspondent)

FORT WAYNE, Ind., July 15—"You may be reading about me." Those are words—later to prove as prophetic as the inevitability of fate itself—which First Lieut. Charles B. Hall, the "Brazil Bomber," wrote his mother, Mrs. Anna Hall, local war worker at the Wayne Tank and Pump company, in his last letter from "Somewhere in North Africa."

Yes, Lieutenant Hall—with the determination of any devoted son to make his mother proud of him—has more than fulfilled his prophetic promise. For indeed, not only is his mother reading and hearing about him, but the whole wide world as well!

COMMUNITY IDOL

The modest, unassuming Brazil, Ind., youth, white and colored people alike admired and respected as a polite, restrained and unspoiled young man who was a credit to his community, is no longer just an object of local pride, Lieut. Charles B. Hall is an international hero!

Who could have predicted 22 years ago—when this child of ordinary, God-fearing parents, living in the most modest kind of environment was born—that here was the hero who would revolutionize world history? The unsung copper lad who would become the first American Negro air pilot in world history to shoot down an enemy plane?

FEAT MARKS NEW EPOCH

The idolatry held for Lieutenant Hall—which simmers from General Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of Allied forces in the North African theatre of operations, and Charles' fighting mates overseas, across the Atlantic and the Pacific to a hero-worshipping American nation, to a united white and colored press, and particularly to that percentage of 14,000,000 Negroes still left on the home front—is now a thing idyllic in beauty. An epochal event in world history! A legend to fire the imagination of millions of Allied peoples throughout the universe!

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

WORLD KNOWS FULL STORY NOW

It is now a matter of world knowledge—how bronze Charles B. Hall, trained at the Tuskegee Army Flying school in Alabama and stationed with the 99th Pursuit Squadron in the North African theatre of operations, flew his P-40 Warhawk, "Maxine" (named for his beloved wife, the former Maxine Parrish of Terre Haute, Ind.) over the clouds of Sicily and junked a Focke-Wulf 190, fastest and most expensive German fighter [illegible] in use by Hitler's fight-

Yes, the world knows Lieut. Charles B. Hall, and the Allied world feels a deep sense of obligation to him—for the surging spirit he displayed in his relentless flare of deepest moral courage and coolness under heavy fire is indubitably the spirit which will win this global conflict.

Lieutenant Hall's father died three years ago. His older sister, Victoria Littlejohn, who also lives here at 1826 John street, is a war worker too—at the General Electric plant. The heroic pilot's sister, Victoria, is the mother of two boys, Charles, nine, and Donald, seven. Both want to be fighter fliers like their now famous uncle.

Permitting her son's entrance in the Air Force, while a tough decision for Mrs. Anna Hall to make—because she had already lost her devoted husband the year before—was, nevertheless, a decision she faced with courage.

UNWILLING AT FIRST

"I was reluctant to sign the necessary papers for Charlie's enlistment," Mrs. Hall admitted to The Courier. "He was only 20 years old and I didn't want to see him go, but after he explained that Negro boys had just been accepted in aviation, and that eventually he would be drafted and would have to accept any service assigned him, I let him have his choice. Soon thereafter, I left Brazil and came here to Fort Wayne to live with my married daughter, Victoria.

"Mr. Hall had passed only a year before, and with Charlie also gone from me, life was too lonesome there in the old home in Brazil. I have not been at all lonely here. Everyone has been lovely and we get mail from Charlie regularly. Only yesterday we received this letter from him." (I read the letter—and it contained, in part, the now history-making sentence, "You may be reading about me."). And it was swift fulfillment of the remarkable prophecy—was the heroic feat which Hall accomplished less than a fortnight ago—because that letter was dated June 19.

MARRIED BEFORE GOING OVERSEAS

"Just before Charlie left for overseas duty," Mrs. Hall resumed, "he had a two-week furlough and came to see us about the first of December. That time, he came by train, although he had flown once or twice before. He only remained three days on that visit, because he wanted to visit with his fiancee, Miss Maxine Parrish, whose home is in Terre Haute, where she lives with her grandparents. While there, Charlie and Maxine married. It happened on December 14. I didn't object, because Maxine is a very lovely girl and an accomplished business woman. Just now, she is serving as secretary for her grandfather, who is an attorney.

BECAME DEFENSE WORKER

"After Charlie left for foreign service, I applied for defense work with the Wayne Pump and Tank company, where shells and tanks are being made. I was accepted immediately. Somehow, I get quite a thrill helping to make shells for Charlie to use.

"Later, Victoria got a job with General Electric. So now, we both are defense workers, and invest every penny we can to buy war bonds, because that is all we can do to help Uncle Sam and our Charlie to win the war. Victoria and I feel that, after the dreadful war is over, and our fellow Americans realize that our boys did their share for victory, better race relations will come and all Americans alike will enjoy freedom, democracy and equal opportunity."

WELL EDUCATED

Both Mrs. Hall and her daughter, Mrs. Littlejohn, are educated and cultured. Mrs. Hall taught school in Hattiesburg, Miss., before her marriage to the late Charles B. Hall, Sr., who, before his death, was successful in the trucking business in Terre Haute.

The local newspapers in Indiana were caught generally flat-footed on the now internationally acclaimed Hall story. They simply "missed the boat" by the proverbial country mile!

RADIO SCOOPS NEWSPAPERS

It remained for Fred Moore Hinshaw, brilliant white news editor of the local station WOWO-WCL, Fort Wayne, to "scoop" the entire field in the Hoosier area. He related the story in several broadcasts, giving The Courier credit for his information. His script, in part, for the first air message, read:

COURIER GIVEN DUE CREDIT

"The WOWO newsroom was informed this afternoon by The Pittsburgh Courier, national Negro weekly newspaper, that Mrs. Anna Hall, mother of the fighting Hoosier, now lives in Fort Wayne."

"The war mother," another bit of the script read, "is a small, smooth-faced lady, who takes a pride in her war work at the Wayne Tank and Pump company. As she puts it . . . "I may be helping to make some of the material he uses." The extent to which this is true may be judged by the fact that Wayne flies the Army-Navy "E" pennant for excellence in war production.

PRIDE SOMETIMES MINGLED WITH GRIEF

"As is the case with any mother of a son overseas," narrated Mr. Hinshaw, "Mrs. Hall could hardly restrain a tear when talking of Charles, and she explained her feeling about his outstanding acts this way: 'I try to feel good, but sometimes, of course I feel bad. Any mother does. We live in hope that he will come back soon—to this country—and I pray for him every day.'

"Her picture of him is not the stern, serious visage of an Army officer . . . but a studio photograph taken at Tuskegee, when he won his wings—in flying togs, helmet and parachute, the lines of his face softened to those of a youth . . . a reminder of Lieut. Charles Hall as Charlie, her youngster.

RECALLS LIFE AT HOME

"The mother speaks with pride of his ability to speak French, learned in college while he was studying a pre-medical course. And his sister, Victoria Littlejohn, recalls the days when she and Charles used to kid their mother by talking about her in French . . . as Mrs. Hall puts it, 'Probably something bad about me behind my back.'"

The touching closing to one of the Hinshaw news round-ups went:

"So, while Charles Hall is fighting the Axis over North Africa, on three shifts here in Fort Wayne, his brother-in-law, his sister, and most of all, his mother, are turning out the goods in Fort Wayne war plants toward the victory over injustice, discrimination and all that the Axis war lords have brought to the world—in suffering death."

Negro Flyers Left April 2 Now In Africa

JUN 12 1943

Informer
Houston, Texas

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Allied headquarters in North Africa announced officially Wednesday what readers of Negro newspapers already knew, that a Negro pursuit squadron, commanded by Lt. Col Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., was in North Africa to fight against the axis.

It can be revealed now, however, that the squadron left Tuskegee at midnight, April 2. The squadron had no idea where it was going. The train was completely blacked out, with windows and vestibules painted black and affording no opportunity to see out. The group, composed of a full complement of ground and maintenance crew and medical contingent, had the run of the special train which zigzagged across the country to its destination. When the train stopped it was on the docks at a southeastern port and alongside the transport to which the squadron was immediately transferred.

Farewells were said as the men swung aboard at Tuskegee. Many of their families were at the school and in the community nearby. All were forbidden to speak of their departure. Families of those living in other parts of the nation knew of their boys' departure because personal belongings were sent home to them.

The night the squadron left Tuskegee the 96th Service squadron was transferred to Selfridge field, Michigan. The 332nd Fighter group, composed of several pursuit squadrons and first all-Negro fighter group in army history, was also moved to Selfridge.

Transfer of army pilots from Tuskegee is part of the regular air corps plan. There is no room at Tuskegee for squadrons after they complete their training because at present new flyers are reporting at the rate of 52 every five weeks. Classs are graduating frequently with from 25 to 30 men instead of five or six as was formerly the number.

Announced in Congress

Several weeks ago Congressman Frances Bolton of Ohio announced in congress that "the 99th has departed for combat duty." Immediately the war department took steps to prevent Negro newspapers from printing her statement, although the Office of Censorship authorized publication of Mrs. Bolton's exact words spoken from the house floor.

That the squadron had arrived at its destination was revealed in a dispatch from North Africa by Ollie Stewart, war correspondent for the Afro-American and The Informer chain of papers. Later tSewart stated that Lt. Col. Davis was living in a town where he' was stationed. Both articles passed the censor.

It was at first stated that the squadron had seen actual combat duty in the closing days of the North African campaign, but this was denied by the war department. The announcement said the flyers who use P-40 Warhawks, were being given advanced instruction in new fighter tactics by veteran pilots of the Tunisian battles, and that upon completion of this advanced training, the squadron will be sent into action.

Censored

No news of the actual departure of the squadron was allowed to be printed because of censorship regulations. Mention of embarkation of any unit is explicitly prohibited since such publication would give valuable information to the enemy

---

Denver Youth Leads Tuskegee Flying Class

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. — The largest class ever to graduate from the Tuskegee Army Air Field received their wings and commissions here recently.

JUL 16 1943

Brig. Gen. Frederick V. H. Kimble, wing commander of the 27th Training Wing, told the class that "With the receipt of your wings today, but a short while remains at Tuskegee for transition to combat craft, then, you too, join the fighter squadron in North Africa.

Cadet honors were won by Cadets Joe A. Lewis of Denver, first; Theodore A. Wilson, Roanoke, Va., second, and Charles E. McGee of Champaign, Ill., third.

There was one Kansas youth and one Missourian in the class—Weldon K. Groves of the famous Groves family of Edwardsville, Kas., and Theopolis D. Moore of St. Louis.

Bombers at Last!

JUL 31 1943

Courier

After dodging the issue since long before Pearl Harbor, the Army has finally decided to train qualified colored youth as pilots and navigators of bombers.

If the Army authorities had not been so scary, this would have been done long ago.

When colored boys are accepted as fighter pilots, what excuse is there for barring them as bomber pilots and navigators?

(47a)

It requires much more skill as a pilot to handle a fighter plane than a bomber, but until now the colored lads who were unable to qualify as fighter pilots were simply dropped and not given a chance to try handling bombing planes.

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

The same thing holds true for transport planes which are going abroad in increasing numbers.

JUL 31 1943

It is our hope that both the Army and the Navy will soon end all discrimination against Negroes and make it possible for them to qualify for any kind of flying of which they are capable.

This is the true democratic way.

Fighter Pilot Killed in Crash

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Lt. Oscar Kenney, Son of Tuskegee Physician, Was Flying P-40 Plane

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—Second Lieutenant Oscar Armstrong Kenney of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, was killed instantly Friday afternoon, July 9, when the P-40 airplane he was flying crashed approximately ten miles northeast of Tuskegee.

JUL 16 1943

Lt. Kenney was on a routine training flight at the time of the crash and a board of qualified Air Force officers will be appointed to determine the exact cause in detail.

JUL 16 1943

The son of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Kenney, Tuskegee Institute, Ala., Lt. Kenney attended Oberlin college in Oberlin, Ohio, from 1939 to 1941.

Recover Body Of Flyer, N. M. Hill, Missing Since June 16

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich. — (ANP) — The body of 2nd Lt. Nathaniel Milton Hill, missing since June 16, has been recovered from Lake Huron near Oscoda, Mich., according to a statement from Capt. Ramey, public relations officer. Next of kin have been notified.

Lt. Hill was piloting a two-seater training plane when he crashed into Lake Huron during a routine flight from the Oscoda army air field, a sub base of Selfridge Field. He was accompanied on the flight by 2nd Lt. Linson Blakeney, a weather officer, whose body was found June 17.

The army air force pilot was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joshiah Hill of Washington, D. C. His wife, Laverne, resides in the same city.

AUG 3 1943

Both flyers were attached to the 332nd fighter group.

---

40 Students Rushed to Air Cadet Center

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — The first group of aviation students (air crew) to complete six weeks of study at the College Training Detachment on the campus of Tuskegee Institute, were transferred to the Tuskegee Army Air Field on May 22.

JUN 12 1943

At their new station they will commence the pre-flight training with the rank and pay of aviation cadets.

This class represents the newest method adopted by the Army Air Forces for the training and selection of aviation cadets.

Designed as 5-Month Course

The prescribed course of study at the College Training Detachment is designed for a five-month period. However, due to the immediate need of replacements at the TAAF pre-flight school, forty of the most capable trainees were released ahead of schedule.

JUN 1 1943

The executive personnel of the College Training Detachment consist of the following officers:

First Lieut. Theodore H. Randall, Indianapolis, Ind., commanding officer; Second Lieuts. Walter English of Washington, adjutant; Eugene P. White of Nashville, senior tactical officer; Eric Layne of NYC, junior tactical officer; and Capt. Roy C. Hairston of Asheville, N.C., medical officer.

Students Transferred

The aviation students transferred are:

Sgt. Henry A. Wise, Jr., Cheriton, Va.; Cpl. Buford Bailey, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Cpl. John J. Roderick, Harwich, Mass.; Pfc. George T. Brooks, NYC;

Pvts. Winston A. Adkins, Chicago; Arturo E. Alers, Mayaguez, Puerto Rico; Robert D. Anderson, Indianapolis, Ind.; Rual W. Bell, Portland, Ore.; Arsene O. Boykin, Chicago; James A. Calhoun, Bridgeport, Conn.;

Pvts. Robert Chandler, Allegan, Mich.; Joseph W. Collins, Jr., Richmond, Va.; Charles W. Diggs, Roxbury, Mass.; Andrew T. Dunn, Jr., Petersburg Va., Charles W. Dunn, Sidney, N.Y.; Roger B. Gaiter, Seaside Heights, N.J.;

Pvts. Thomas L. Gay, Detroit; Joseph E. Gordon, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Alfred M. Gorham, Waukeesha, Wis.; John J. Hall, Newark, N.J.; Richard S. Harder, Brooklyn, N.Y.; William A. Harrison, NYC; Reginald W. Hayes, Holicong, Pa.;

JUN 12 1943

Pvts. David F. James, Chicago; Wilbur F. Long, New Rochelle, N.Y.; Richard D. Macon, Birmingham, Ala.; Alvin F. Mason, New Orleans; George B.

Pvts. Frank H. Moody, Los Angeles; Matthews, Los Angeles;

Hillard W. Pouncy, Clayton, Ala.; Samuel E. Rhodes, Leonia, N.J.; George A. Robnett, Jr., Chicago; Marion R. Rodgers, Macon, Ga.; Davidson V. Turner, Los Angeles;

Pvts. Shelby F. Westbrook, Toledo, Ohio; Charles L. White, St. Louis, Mo.; Cohen M. White, Detroit; Leonard R. Willette, Belleville, N.J.; Kenneth I. Williams, Los Angeles; Charles E. Wilson, Chicago.

Army Officials Say Negro Pilots "Naturals" With P-39s

Washington Tribune Washington, D. C.

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—With a smart array of new equipment, elements of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field are fast attaining their training peak, the War Department announced this week. Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., Air Corps, has assumed command of the group.

Included in the new equipment are P-39s (commonly called the Airacobra), P-47s and P-40s. The P-40 will be remembered as the tough air arm that brought much recognition to Lieutenant Colonel Davis' 99th Fighter Squadron in the African campaign. The 99th Fighter Squadron is presently serving in Italy.

New camera equipment has been provided for use in firing practice to step up accuracy with the .50 calibre machine gun. The Army has also provided improved installations on the firing range at Oscoda, sub-base of Selfridge Field.

Many pilots of the 332nd Fighter Group have been referred to as "nanturals" by instructors and superiors when describing the manner in which they operate the P-39. The Airacobra, with its 1150-horsepower Allison engine mounted behind the pilot, has established an enviable reputation in combat.

There has also been a step-up in flying hours at the field. Formerly reported as between 400 and 500 hours a week, the flying time now accomplished by pilots in training totals above 2,000 hours a week.

Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., Assumes Command of 332nd Fighter Group

Guardian Boston, Mass.

Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin O Davis, Jr., Air Corps, formerly commander of the 99th Fighter Squadron which presently is seeing action in Italy, has assumed command of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field, Michigan, the War Department announced.

47

The first colored officer ever to command an Air Force combat unit, Lieutenant Colonel Davis was honored Tuesday, October 5 in the presence of 400 guests at a reception held in the Post Officer's Club at Selfridge Field. Among high ranking Army Officers in attendance was Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, father of the new group commander. Major J. P. Ramsey, Flight Surgeon at the Field, was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Lieutenant Colonel Davis returned early last month from Sicily where he commanded the 99th Fighter Squadron, the first colored combat unit committed to action against the enemy in the North African area.

OCT 23 1943

Col. Davis Assumes Command Of the 332nd Fighter Group

Washington Tribune Washington, D. C.

Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., Air Corps, formerly commander of the 99th Fighter Squadron, which presently is seeing action in Italy, has assumed command of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge, Mich., the War Department announced today.

The first Negro officer ever to command an air force combat unit, Lieutenant Colonel Davis was honored Tuesday, October 5 in the presence of 400 guests at a reception held in the Post Officer's Club at Selgridge Field. Among high ranking Army officers in attendance were Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, father of the new group commander. Major J. P. Ramsey, Flight Surgeon at the field, was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Lieutenant Colonel Davis returned early last month from Sicily where he commanded the 99th Fighter Squadron, the first all-Negro combat unit committed to action against the enemy in the North Africa area. A graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, he is 30 years old.

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

Completes Basic Flight Training At Tuskegee

DEC 4 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—Youths that are [illegible]sted in flying and have been accepted as Aviation Cadets in the Training Command of the Army Air Forces are rapidly learning the fundamentals of flying at the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

The men from New York that recently completed their basic flight training at the 66th Flying Training Detachment of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., and have been assigned to the basic flight class of the Tuskegee Army Air Field are: Aviation Cadets Hector D. Torres of New York City; Charles R. Hill of New York City; Elton H. Nightingale of New York City; Alva[illegible] M. Fras[illegible] Bronx, N. Y., and Vincent C. Dean of Corona, N. Y.

DEC 4 1943

Cadet Torres, son of Mrs. Paula D. Torres of 2179 8th Ave., New York City, was an employee of the New York Navy Yard, prior to entering the Aviation Cadet Corps.

Cadet Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Arnold Hill of 1945 7th Ave., New York City, attended A and T College from 1941 to 1943.

Cadet Nightingale is the son of Mrs. Agnes Nightingale of 132 West 112th St., New York City.

Cadet Fraser, son of Mr. Richard Fraser of 936 Stabbins Ave., Bronx, N. Y., attended the City College of New York from 1940 to 1943.

DEC 4 1943

Cadet Dean, son of [illegible] and Mrs. Thomas C. Dean of 10[illegible]34th Ave., Corona, N. Y., was employed by the Belt Aircraft Corporation of Flushing, N. Y., prior to entering the Aviation Cadet Corps.

47a-1943

Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser
June 20, 1943

Stunt Flying At Roof Tops Irks Tuskegee

TUSKEGEE, June 19.—Indignation over reckless diving of army planes to tree-top levels over and near Tuskegee mounted this week on the heels of a particularly flagrant example over a Tuskegee residential section. Several persons in the area were frightened by the low diving plane.

Witnesses stated that the pilot "cut" his motor at a moderate altitude and dived the plane almost to the tree top level before "gassing" the motor again.

A similar case was reported several weeks ago by Frank Bledsoe, business man. While on a fishing trip near Tuskegee, Mr. Bledsoe reported that a two-wing basic trainer dived on him while he was standing near his car and forced him to fall flat on the ground to avoid being struck.

When advised of the incidents this week, Lieut. Col. Noel Parrish, commanding officer of the Tuskege Army Flying Field, said that army regulations forbid planes to fly lower than 500 feet except on particular training assignments. Col. Parrish stated that such assignments are not ordered over cities and towns.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Tuskegee Gets New Air Cadet Training Unit

MAR 13 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — A new branch of training in the Army Air Forces was begun this week on the campus of Tuskegee Institute, with the arrival of personnel assigned here to head the newly instigated college training program for aviation cadets.

The new program, announced recently by the War Department, will see the thousands of cadet reserves inducted immediately into colleges from coast-to-coast for academic and military courses prior to their actual training. After the program is underway the students will take a five months' course.

A limited flying program will be conducted for all students in cooperation with CAA War Training Service. MAR 13 1943

The detachment at Tuskegee Institute will be headed by 1st Lieut. Theodore H. Randall. No announcement as to the number of future wingmen to be stationed here could be made at this time, Lieut. Randall said.

The training schedule, which will be conducted without interruption to the regular college curriculum, will fall into four major groups: academic, military, physical, and flying. The purpose of the program is to prepare men better for cadet training in the AAF Flying Training Command and thereby vastly reducing costly eliminations. MAR 13 1943

Students enroll as privates but upon completion of the 5-month course will be sent to one of the Flying Training Command Classification Centers as cadets and trained as pilots, bombardiers, or navigators.

Columbia, S. C. State
June 25, 1943

Sumter Negro Pilot Commended For African Work

Washington, June 24 —(AP)—War Secretary Stimson reported today that the air forces first squadron of Negro pilots, the Ninety-ninth Fighter squadron has "weathered its first aerial combat test very credibly."

The squadron, commanded by Lieut. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., a son of the first Negro general officer int he army, is in North Africa and participated—as an escort and fighter bomber outfit—in the siege of Pantelleria but had little chance to engage enemy fighters during that time. The group was fired on only once and when it turned to engage the enemy fighters the latter fled.

On the afternoon of June 8, however, a flight of six P-40's led by First Lieut. Charles W. Dryden, Bronx, N. Y., was attacked over Pantelleria by 12 German FW 190's escorting enemy bombers trying to raid the island. Ten more German fighters hovered above the bombers.

In a lively engagement, the American Negro pilots damaged two of the German fighters and forced the remainder to retreat.

Others participating in the engagement included Second Lieut. Willie Ashley, Jr., 212 West Bartlett street, Sumter, S. C.

Negro Pilots Win First Air Fight

Ledger June 24/43
Columbus, Ga.

Six P-40's Force 10 F-W's to Flight

WASHINGTON, June 24—(AP) War Secretary Stimson reported today that the Air Force's first squadron of Negro pilots, the 99th Fighter Squadron, has "weathered its first aerial combat test very creditably."

The squadron, commanded by Lieut. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., a son of the first Negro general officer in the army, is in North Africa and participated—as an escort and fighter bomber outfit—in the siege of Pantelleria, but had little chance to engage enemy fighters during that time. The group was fired on only once and when it turned to engage the enemy fighters the latter fled.

On the afternoon of June 18, however, a flight of six P-40's led by First Lt. Charles W. Dryden, Bronx, N. Y., was attacked over Pantelleria by 12 German F-W 190's escorting enemy bombers trying to raid the island. Ten more German fighters hovered above the bombers.

In a lively engagement, the American Negro pilots damaged two of the German fighters and forced the remainder to retreat.

Other participating in the engagement were First Lt. Lee Rayford, Ardwick, Md., First Lt. Sidney P. Brook, Cleveland, Ohio, Second Lt. Willie Ashley, Jr., Sumter, S. C., Second Lt. Spann Watson, Hackensack, N. J., and Second Lt. Leon C. Roberts, Prichard, Ala.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Rescues Two After Big Crash

APR 3 1943

Benjamin Jennings Hero Of Air Mishap Near Lynchburg

LYNCHBURG, Va. — Benjamin Jennings, 18-year old Lynchburg youth, stands today as an outstanding hero, and two Marine officer-flyers owe their lives to his cool courage and daring.

Jennings was credited with saving the lives of the two flyers, Lt. Jack Plunkett of Lynchburg, and Lt. J. H. Wehmer, of St. Louis, Mo., when their plane crashed into the James River about 10:30 a. m. Sunday. The pair were almost drowned in struggling to release themselves from the cockpit of the plane which sank within two or three minutes. APR 3 1943

The youthful hero, who was standing on the old YMCA Island, jumped into a flat boat nearby and paddled to the rescue with an improvised oar. APR 3 1943

CONDITION NOT SERIOUS

The two fliers, who were stationed at the Marine Base at Cherry Point, N. C., were taken to Lynchburg hospital where attendants said their conditions were not serious.

Both were suffering mostly from shock and exposure, and Lt. Plunkett was cut slightly about the head. Marine authorities came to Lynchburg Sunday afternoon to conduct an investigation.

Just what official cognizance will be taken of young Jennings' heroic act, has not been indicated.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Negro Pilot Missing In RAF Raid

MAR 20 1943
MAR 20 1943

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Chicago Defender London Correspondent)

LONDON — (Censored) — The ace West Indian Negro pilot, Flying Officer H. S. Etienne, was reported missing this week after an R.A.F. offensive operating over Nazi Germany.

London's West Indian community feels great anxiety over the news that the 19-year-old had failed to return from a bombing operation. Etienne was a native of the island of St. Lucia, where he had a brilliant academic career at St. Mary's college before entering local civil service. MAR 20 1943

Shortly after the Bridish air ministry decided to recruit pilots among the colored Caribbean population, dozens of young Negroes arrived in the British Isles to undergo intensive training at Royal Air Force centers. MAR 20 1943

Among the first contingent was Etienne, who distinguished himself

After a number of flights as a Spitfire pilot against the Luftwaffe over England Etienne was assigned to a bomber squadron and participated in several attacks upon Germany and enemy-occupied territory.

Atlanta, Ga., Journal
June 24, 1943

U. S. Negro Pilots Turn Back Germans

WASHINGTON, June 24.—(AP)—War Secretary Stimson reported Thursday that the Air Forces first squadron of Negro pilots, the Ninety-ninth Fighter Squadron, has weather its first aerial combat test very creditably."

The squadron, commanded by Lieut. Colonel B. O. Davis Jr., a son of the first Negro general officer in the Army, is in North Africa and participated—as an escort and fighter bomber outfit—in the siege of Pantelleria, but had little chance to engage enemy fighters during that time. The group was fired on only once and when it turned to engage the enemy fighters the latter fled.

On the afternoon of June 18, however, a flight of six P-40's led by First Lieutenant Charles W. Dryden, Bronx, N. Y., was attacked over Pantelleria by 12 German FW 190's escorting enemy bombers trying to raid the island Ten more German fighters hovered above the bombers.

In a lively engagement, the American Negro pilots damaged two of the German fighters and forced the remainder to retreat.

Others participating in the engagement were First Lieutnant Lee Rayford, Ardwick, Md.; First Lieutenant Sidney P. Brooks, Cleveland, Ohio; Second Lieutenant Willie Ashley Jr., Sumter, S. C.; Second Lieutenant Spann Watson, Hackensack, N. J., and Second Lieutenant Leon C. Roberts, Prichard, Ala.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

FIRST RACE AIR UNITS IN N. AFRICA

MAY 15 1943

Lieut. Col. Davis Heads Pursuit Squadron In Combat Zone

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Negro flying units have arrived in North Africa after little less than two weeks on the water.

A pursuit squadron, composed entirely of colored flyers and under the command of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., is now on the battle front and ready for action in the anticipated invasion of the European continent.

While no official word is available, it is generally believed that for the first days of their participation in the campaign they will form part of the sky umbrella needed for successful Allied bombing raids in Italy and southern France.

The unit was posted at Orangeburg, N. Y., prior to its embarkation. Army regulations and censorship prohibit identification of the outfit. MAY 15 1943

Premature revelation of the departure of the unit was made inadvertently by Congresswoman Frances P. Bolton on the floor of the House two weeks ago. Since that time speculation as to the whereabouts of the flyers has been rife, though announcement in the nation's press was vigorously opposed by the War department.

Arrival of the Negro flyers in a combat area establishes a precedent. It is the first time in the history of the American flag that a unit of colored airmen has been dispatched to a battle front for participation in war. It also brings to a climax the question as to the status of the flyers trained at Tuskegee institute. MAY 15 1943

For sometime, the role of Negroes in the air corps has been a matter of debate. Protest after protest has been filed with the War department against the policy of relegating colored trainees to labor brigades.

Lt. Col. Davis is the son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, Sr., ranking Negro officer in the United States army. He is a graduate of West Point

---

Tuskegee Army Air Field Gets New Librarian

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

JUL 31 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., July 29—A welcome addition to the civilian staff at the Tuskegee Army Air Field is Miss Robbie Goodloe, who has been appointed librarian in the Post Technical Library.

Miss Goodloe, a graduate of Hampton institute, was formerly post librarian at Camp Butner, N. C. She is a native of Durham, N. C., and has had wide experience as a librarian including work at Barber-Scotia Junior college.

Assisting Miss Goodloe in the library are Pfc. Sumner G. Wiles of Jacksonville, Fla., and Pvt. Anderson Brooks of Oxford, Ohio.

Ace Race Pilots Held To Rank Of Staff Sergeants

Atlanta Daily World

APR 3 1943

Plight of Six Negro Army Flyers Revealed

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(SNS)— The plight of six Negro Army flyers, who left the Tuskegee Army Flying School for Fort Sill and who have since been restricted because of the color of their skins, was revealed Friday.

According to information, the men left Tuskegee not knowing what their mission would involve at Fort Sill. After remaining there five weeks, it was decided to train them as liaison pilots. It is understood that under great odds, including riding four miles to and from the training department four times each day, they made an outstanding record.

Among the six men was Langston Caldwell who had "washed out" 28 hours before his class received their wings on July 3. Caldwell was among the best in his class as a flyer and in the classroom. He was among the two ranking students in the class and is capable of becoming a leader in aviation as he has proved at Tuskegee and Fort Sill. Caldwell now leads the Air Observation unit at Fort Huachuca.

DUTIES OF CAPTAIN

The Air Observation Department of a Field Artillery Unit, as set down in the Table of Orgainzation, requires five Officers' Pilots and five Staff Sergeants' Pilots per Division. Caldwell, Norris and Reiney of the 93rd, plus the three pilots with the 92nd, are the only liaison pilots in the United States who are Negroes. At present they are doing the work of Officers' Pilots and holding the rating of staff sergeant They form the neucleus of Liaison flying for Negroes. Staff Sergeant Caldwell is performing the duties of a captain, while Morris and Rainey shoulder the responsibility of first lieutenants.

Caldwell, Morris and Rainey have qualifications to become service pilots in the Army Air Corps. In Waco, Texas, where they took flight checks, they were advised to have their commanding officer, who was Colonel Kimble, authorize them for the Service Pilot's Course, because they had had more experience in heavy aircraft and would be of more service to service or ferry command. The commanding officer refused to give his authorization for this work.

Returning to Fort Sill they were advised that they would receive commissions as did many of the whites. Because of their color, these men received rating as staff sergeants acting in the capacity of officers.

Caldwell and Rainey have over 400 hours in the air and in aircraft up to 650 horsepower. Morris has 300 hours in aircraft up to 450 horsepower. It was quite hard to tell which was the instructor: the difference being only in the color of the skin. With the experience in the air, they could serve their country better as navigator or bombardier, but are prevented from doing so because of their color.

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Crash in Pursuit Planes

MAY 21 1943

Three Met Death In Michigan and Two at Tuskegee

MAY 21 1943

Five young flyers were killed in crashes last week, three in Michigan and two at Tuskegee. Four of the victims were U. S. Army Air Force pilots. The fifth was a cadet trainee.

Best known of the victims was Lt. Wilmeth W. Sidat-Singh of Washington, former football star at Syracuse university, New York. He was lost in Lake Huron when he parachuted from his plane which caught afire on a routine flight from Selfridge Field, Mich.

OTHER VICTIMS

The other victims were:

LT. JEROME T. EDWARDS of Steubenville, Ohio, killed when his plane crashed at Oscoda, subbase to Selfridge Field.

LT. SIDNEY J. MOSLEY JR., of Norfolk Va., killed in a routine flight near Selfridge Field.

LT. JAMES E. BROTHERS of Chicago, killed on a flight from the Tuskegee Army Flying school.

CADET ROSS STEWART JR., of Johnstown, Pa., who was riding in the plane piloted by Lt. Brothers.

MAY 21 1943

All four of the lieutenants were graduates of the Tuskegee Army Flying school. Lieuts. Sidat-Singh, Mosley and Edwards along with other Tuskegee pilots were transferred to Selfridge Field several weeks ago and were on routine advanced training flights.

ENGINE TROUBLE MAY 21 1943

Lt. Sidat-Singh, whose death was reported last week, developed engine trouble while flying over Lake Huron. He bailed out but no trace was found of his body, his plane or his parachute. Before joining the army, Lt. Sidat-Singh was a police officer in Washington, D. C., and a member of the professional basketball team, the Washington Bears. His mother lives in Washington, and his father in New York.

Lt. Mosley is the son of Mrs. S. J. Mosley of Norfolk, Va. He was married just 7 days before the fatal crash to Miss Leonora Weaver.

Lt. Edwards, 25, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwards of Steubenville. He had a wife, Mrs. Lillian Virginia Edwards, and a daughter, Helen Vicki Edwards of the same city.

He was killed in a crash at Oscoda, Mich., at a sub-base 200 miles from Selfridge Field.

Lt. Brothers, who recently received his wings at Tuskegee, was an outstanding track star at the University of Wisconsin in 1939 and 1940. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dorothy Gregory of 5336 Kenwood Ave., Chicago. He was employed as a clerk in the treasury department before he joined the army.

Cadet Stewart owned a garage in Baltimore before entering the army. He leaves his mother, Mrs. Elsie W. Stewart, of Johnstown, and his wife, Mrs. Evelyn T. Stewart of Baltimore.

Lieuts. Sidat-Singh, Edwards and Mosley were members of the 100th pursuit squadron of the 332nd fighter group with headquarters at Selfridge Field.

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Expands Training Program

Feb. 6, 1943

The War Department announced Saturday expansion of the program for training Negro combat fliers. A group will be formed, composed of one Squadron now being trained and two new ones which are in the process of organization.

It will be provided with all the supporting services, not only those of the Air Corps, but of other arms and services such as Signal Corps and Quartermaster Corps.

Trained At Miami

Negroes are being trained throughout virtually the entire Technical Training Command of the Air Forces, as well as at the Air Forces Officers' Training School at Miami.

The Army now has a number of large Negro units, including several Negro Infantry and Cavalry regiments; tank and tank-destroyer battalions; and important units of Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, Anti-aircraft, Engineer, Medical Corps, Chemical Warfare, Signal Corps and Quartermaster troops. In addition to the major units, there are innumerable smaller ones of great aggregate importance.

In All Branches

Substantial Negro contingents are to be found in all arms and services of the Army at home, in all major Expeditionary Forces abroad and in almost all the technical and service schools, military and civilian, run by the Army or under contract to it. Feb. 6, 1943

The role of the Negro in civilian War Department employment is also an important one. Statistics from the field installations are not available, but figures of the Departmental Administrative Services show that of a total of 47,644 civilian employees at the present time, 9,569 are Negroes.

Says 99th Is 'Best Trained'

MAY 1 1943

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Air Force General Praises Tuskegee Airmen, Raps Washington

By ALBERT ANDERSON for ANP

WASHINGTON, April 29— Speaking of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, which has been on the "alert" for six months, awaiting assignment to a theatre of war, a top ranking air force general said recently in an off-the-record statement, "We have trained these boys all right. They are the best trained flyers in America today They are really ready for combat but the trouble is that those guys up at Washington can't make up their minds what to do with them."

MAY 1 1943

That statement was made several weeks ago and now it can be said that Washington is known to have made some important decisions that cannot be revealed for some time to come. Incidentally, a lot of pilots and ground personnel have been reported missing from Tuskegee and the group at Selfridge Field does not account for all of them.

WILL NOT MIND FIGHTING JAPANESE

Recently a man discussing the 99th Pursuit Squadron from Tuskegee wanted to know how I thought they would feel if they come to grips with Japanese Zeros and their pilots. He shared my opinion that the Negro aviators when they get their first taste of battle are going to be pitted against the little men from the land of the rising sun.

The boys from the 99th will be flying the Stars and Stripes, I told him, and whether the foe they face is a Japanese, an Italian or Hitler himself you can count on them making every effort to prove the black contingent in Uncle Sam's flying force is the best the world ever saw.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Army Dietitian

MAR 6 1943

Mrs. Arthalia Lee Royford of Salem, Va., and Norfolk, is stationed at Tuskegee Army Flying School, Tuskegee, Ala., as medical dietitian. A graduate of Dillard University, New Orleans, La., where she majored in home economics, Mrs. Royford was the first to specialize in dietetics and to finish the course in medical dietetics at Flint Goodridge Hospital. An active member of the American Dietetic Association, she has filled positions at Burrell Memorial Hospital, Roanoke, and Lincoln Hospital, Durham, N. C.

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala

Negro Pilot Wins Praise For Work

JUN 26 1943

Second Lt. Leon C. Roberts, of Prichard, Ala., was in the first squadron of Negro pilots to take part in a lively engagement over Pantelleria in which they damaged two of 12 attacking German fighters and forced the others to retreat, according to Secretary of War Stimson in Washington Thursday.

The Army Air Force squadron "weathered its first aerial combat test very creditably," Stimson reported.

The squadron, commanded by Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., son of the first Negro general officer in the Army, is based in North Africa and took part in the siege of Pantelleria.

As an escort and fighter bomber outfit, the squadron at first had little chance to engage enemy fighters. When it turned to engage attacking enemy, the enemy fighters fled.

On the afternoon of June 18, however, a flight of six P-40's led by 1st Lt. Charles W. Dryden, of the Bronx, N. Y., was attacked over Pantelleria by 12 German FW 190's escorting enemy bombers trying to raid the island. Ten more German fighters hovered above the bombers.

JUN 26 1943

In a lively engagement, the American Negro pilots damaged two of the German fighters and forced the remainder to retreat.

47a-1943

Lieut. Rayford's Ship Riddled As 2 Enemy Planes Are Downed

Informer
Houston, Texas

JUL 3 1943

By OLLIE STEWART

Informer, Houston Texas

(Copyright by the Afro-American and Informer Chain of newspapers. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa.—Censored from Advanced Air Base Cable.—All pilots who fly ships into combat either bombers or fighters, have close calls which they refer to among themselves as "tweak sessions." Lieut. L. T. Rayford, Washington, had an extended tweak session recently over the Island of Pantelleria. He and five others from a certain fighter squadron were doing patrol duty when attacked by twelve enemy fighters. All six returned to their base safely and reported probable destruction of two enemy planes but Rayford's ship was fairly riddled. A German FW played a tune with bullets all over his plane. Rayford did not kwnow it until he landed and Crew Chief Cecil Cousins of New York began inspection. "I knew I was in a tight spot for a little while but I did not know it was that bad," said Rayford. Lieut. William Ashley, Sumter, South Carolina, pounced on an enemy ship and after blasting away followed it down close to water where it blossomed in black smoke in profusion. Another probable destruction was scored by Lieut. Sidney P. Brooks of Cleveland, Ohio, who turned into an attacking Nazi and with several quick bursts sent him downward in a crazy dive.

JUL 3 1943

JUL 3 1943

Squadron Commended

In the same mission were Lieuts. Charles Dryden, New York; Leon Roberts, Pritchard, Alasi and Clarence Jamison, Cleveland, Ohio. The whole squadron has been commended for its fine work over Pantelleria.

I saw King George of England Friday in a small African coastal town. His Majesty was inspecting allied troops who had cleaned axis forces out of Tunisia and my fighter squadron was invited to take part in a big victory parade. It was a colorful spectacle and our boys brought many cheers from the population lining flag-draped streets..

JUL 3 1943 JUL 3 1943

Efficiency of System

One reason for the success of my adopted fighter squadron is the efficient communications section which maintains a listening post 24 hours each day. Aside from being the ears of the outfit this section with a skilled crew insures ground-to-plane and plane-to-plane communication by radio. Likewise it operates telephone and teletype system. The airport control station regulates takeoffs and landings by detailed instructions. Lt. Dudley W. Stevenson, 231 R. I. avenue, N. W., Washington, is communications officer. A graduate of Virginia State, he has surrounded himself with a crew of alert young men who get the kick of their lives out of the work they do. Technical Sergeant Clopis Bordeaux of St. Louis has charge of all communications. The radio section is headed by Sergeant Morris Fisher, Atlantic City. Others include Sgt. Herbert Woodson, Atlantic City; Sgt. William Jordan, Pittsburgh, and Sgt. Herbert Nicholas, Masontown, Pa.

INFORMER, HOUSTON, TEXAS

The radio section is a popular gathering place at night news, music, and axis propaganda. The air booms with rman broadcasts in English in this area and boys have ne comparing figures from axis sources with those from allies' reports.

JUL 3 1943

Interesting personalities this week: Tech. Sgt. Robert Irving, Pontiac, Mich.; Sgt. Edward Dozier, New York; 1st Sgt. P. C. Gray, 220 N. 56th street, Philadelphia; Corporal John McHease, Washington; Cpl. Julius Searles, Washington; and Sgt. William Young, Richmond.

Lt. Col. Davis Leads Formation In Attack On Axis Stronghold

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Fighters Weather Storm Of Anti-Aircraft Fire To Return After Attack Unscathed

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent
(By Cable, Delayed, Passed by Censor)
(Copyrighted. Reproduction Expressly Forbidden)

JUN 12 1943

Cable Filed, via Gibraltar, on June 3, 1943)

ADVANCED BASE NORTH AFRICA—Negro flyers of the United States Army Air Force are now fighting their country's war for the first time in history in skies above the old world whence came their ancestors. Pioneer pilots, first trained at Tuskegee, Ala., have carried out more than a half dozen sorties delivering bombs on Pantelleria, Italian Island in the Mediterranean, strong Axis fortress between Tunisia and Sicily and a protecting link in the enemy's defenses of Southern Europe.

The distinction of being the first of the race to fly American planes in combat went to First Lieutenants William A. Campbell of Tuskegee, Ala., and Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Ind. Later the same day First Lieutenants Lemuel R. Custis of Hartford, Conn.; Clarence C. Jamieson of Cleveland, Ohio; and James Wiley, Pittsburgh, Pa., joined their air comrades in arms.

Others on combat missions in the last several days include, Lt. George R. Bolling, Phoebus, Va.; Lt. Walter I. Lawson, Newton, Va.; Lt. Willie H. Fuller, Tarboro, N. C.; Lt. Graham Smith, Ahoskie, N. C.; First Lt. Herbert V. Clark, Little Rock, Ark.; Lt. Paul G. Mitchell, Washington, D. C.; Lt. Louis R. Purnell, Germantown, Pa.

JUN 12 1943

All planes returned safely. No Nazi interceptors challenged our fighters. The only opposition was flak—anti-aircraft fire.

LT. CAMPBELL

CAMPBELL FIRST

The honor of delivering the first Easter egg went to Lt. Campbell who won admiration for maintaining perfect formation even through thick flak on bomb run. Upon his return he explained he was "scared but determined to stay on the wing of the veteran leader even if he carried me into the front door of enemy headquarters."

YOUNG

Lt. Campbell landed safely from his first mission, but taxied his plane into a bomb crater, which was left on the field following an attack by American bombers on the airdrome while in the hands of the Germans. This was Campbell's first accident despite the fact he has most hours of any flyer in the Tuskegee-trained squadron. He was consoled by pilots and other groups. The crater is now marked by a sign.

Among pilots on successful combat missions was Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the squadron, who led a flight including First Lt. Sidney P. Brooks of Cleveland, Lt. Spann Watson of Hackensack, N. J.; and Lt. John W. Rogers of Chicago, Ill.

PRAISED BY WHITES

Most of the flyers, upon their return from their first mission to attack the enemy, admitted they were scared, but never did they hesitate in the flight toward the objective. The second and third sorties, to the flyers were more like all in a day's work. A member of the air base security unit [illegible] to this field overheard a white pilot, who flew in the attacking formation with the Negroes say 'those boys can fly like hell.'

All America can take pride in the manner these colored flyers [illegible] living up to the best traditions of the Army Air Forces which gave combat as promised by [illegible] this year. Moreover, officials are remarkably cooperative everywhere, providing equipment, assistance, and encouragement unhesitatingly.

Our squadron has been received ordially and enthusiastically erywhere in the combat area. White pilots have been helpful and iendly since our arrival.

"Nothing Too Large or Too Small" Motto Of 99th Supply Section

Norfolk, Va.
Journal and Guide

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

Cpl. Donald G. Campbell, 1080 Bruce street, Washington, Penna.

Pfc. Samuel Sams Jr., 515 Monroe street, Mandeville, La.

SQUADRON PHILOSOPHER

Sgt. Jones, at 37, the oldest enlisted man in the Squadron is the philosopher of the group. Well read, intelligent, conversant in local, national or international politics and diplomacy, he holds his own in any conversation. His specialty is giving the "low down" on the "big shots" of his native Philadelphia.

Sgt. Stocker is the expert on loading a freight car. Even Lt. Wimp doesn't interfere in that business. He simply shows Stocker the freight cars and trucks, and points out the freight to be transported and says "There you are."

Stocker is frugal, ambitious and energetic. In his spare time he does many odd jobs for the officers. With that and other earnings resulting from phenominal luck in black jack and poker he manages to send home several times his salary every month to pay for a new home he built in New Jersey before joining the Army. A steamfitter by trade, he married while in training at Tuskegee.

Cpl. Campbell believes in the old army maxim to the effect that any soldier who sees something he needs and doesn't take it isn't a good soldier. Turn him loose around a supply dump and this Fighter Squadron will never want for essentials if the clerks so much as bat an eye.

AN OLD ARMY MAN

Pvt. Sams is quiet, modest and willing. He is fast learning the tricks of his trade.

The explanation for such a capable supply section is found in its leadership. Lt. Wimp is an old Army man, and the only national guard officer in the Squadron. Some of his military inclinations must have come through association. A brother, Major Edward D. Wimp Jr., is now with the 931st Field Artillery Battalion now in training in the United States. His uncle, Lt. Col. Benote H. Lee, is professor of military science and tactics at West Virginia State College. He is in the National Guard and during the last war was a first lieutenant in the 8th Illinois Infantry.

Lt. Wimp has been a member of the Illinois National Guard for 15 years, going on active duty January 6, 1941, as a 2nd lieutenant. He had attended the field artillery school at Fort Sill, Okla., from April to July, 1941, and was with field artillery units at Fort Custer, Mich., until transferred to the Air Corps and made supply officer of the Fighter Squadron early in 1942.

STUDIED ACCOUNTING

Lt. Wimp finished Engelwood High School in 1932 and spent the next two years at the University of Illinois where he studied accounting. Before going on active duty he was a post office clerk in Chicago.

It is almost a routine operation for Lt. Wimp and his crew to move 50,000 gallons of 100-octane gasoline from a supply dump to the airfield occupied by his squadron in one day. The size of this undertaking can be appreciated when it is remembered that this movement involves almost a thousand 55-gallon drums weighing approximately 500 pounds each.

Whatever the Fighter Squadron needs, and is entitled to, it tells Lt. Wimp. Requisitions and other required papers are typed out, certified, approved, etc., and sent to the issuing agency.

NOTHING TOO LARGE OR TOO SMALL

The need might be a day's rations for several hundred men, an airplane engine, a dozen pyramidal tents, camouflage materials or a gross of lead pencils.

The supply section operates on the theory that nothing is too large, and nothing too small for it to handle.

(By Air Mail Delayed. Passed by Censor.)

(Copyrighted, Reproduction Expressly Forbidden.)

AN ADVANCED ALLIED AIRFIELD IN TUNISIA—One way to defeat an army is to cut off its supplies. No method is as complete and as certain as a total massacre of all its soldiers.

When you hear military experts stressing the importance of keeping open lines of communications, they have reference principally to the routes and the means of maintaining the flow of munitions, food, equipment and supplies to the units farther to the front.

And so in the organization of a tactical unit a primary concern is finding for it a competent, resourceful, reliable supply officer, and then giving him a staff that can keep pace with his progress.

EXCELLENT ENLISTED MEN'S STAFF

If the 99th Fighter Squadron which has been in North African combat since the first of June is operating successfully—and everybody who ought to know seems to think it is—a good portion of the credit belongs to 1st Lt. Benote H. Wimp, 31, 3112 Vernon avenue, Chicago, supply officer.

In turn, Lt. Wimp is indebted to—and he readily acknowledges it—his excellent staff of enlisted men who keep the Squadron supplied under his direction and leadership.

Top non-commissioned officer on the staff is T/Sgt. Edgar N. Hart, 140 W. 177 street, New York who does most of the paper work and keeps Lt. Wimp advised on current stocks. Others are:

S/Sgt. John E. ("Jack") Jones, 221 W. Duval street, Philadelphia.

Sgt. Stanley E. Stocker, 1630 North street, Philadelphia.

JUL 31 1943

Two Bombers Christened By Alabama Negroes Wed.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

By EMORY O. JACKSON

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (SNS) — Alabama Negro citizens christened two B-24 Liberator bombers here Wednesday afternoon at the Betchel - McCone - Parsons airplane modification plant, one for Julius Ellsberry, Pearl Harbor hero, and the other for Tuskegee Institute.

In touching, dramatic and triumphant ceremonies Mrs. Florence Ellsberry, mother of Julius, The Hero, smashed a bottle of champagne to give the bomber luck in Army tradition and her son's name the immortality it deserves.

Strikingly dressed, her bold, impressive and charming features reflecting the fine qualities of her character and the excellence of the womanhood of her race, Mrs. Ellsberry, showing slight nervousness, spoke to her fellow citizens over WAPI these words: "I now christen thee the Julius Ellsberry." The name she had once given to a babe she now gave to a bomber. "I am proud I had a son to give. The many fine things that have been said and done in his name completely overshadow my grief," she said wtih solemnity and beauty.

Something special surrounded this bomber. It was a special "Revenge Bomber" with devices on it so secret that only a special order from war officials would permit its motor to start up. For that reason, the motor on the "Spiri of Tuskegee Institute" had to hum in the ceremony.

Stuart Mims, ceremony chairman and representing B-M-P, in keynoting the five-minute program pointed out that "The Negroes of Jefferson County are going to launch a bomber in the name of the first citizen of Jefferson County, a Negro and native Alabaman, to give his life for his country in this war. As far as we know this will be the second christening by Negroes of a war plane anywhere. Betchel-McCone-Parsons is indeed proud that these ceremonies can take place today at Birmingham Modification Center."

S. J. Bennett, chairman of the Negro Division of the Jefferson War Savings Staff, spoke briefly, then introduced A. G. Gaston, chairman of the Bomber Committee. Mr. Gaston asserted that in addition to honoring Ellsberry, that "we also honor all the fine and noble traditions that America stands for.

Others present at the ceremonies were Mrs. Minnie Gaston, Mrs. Ruth Jackson-Odum, chairman of the Beauticians Volunteer Corps; Oscar W. Adams, supreme chancellor of Knights of Pythias; Rev. W. D. Hargrove, C. J. Greene, district manager of Atlanta Life; H. D. Coke, publicity director for Smith & Gaston; L. K. Shivery, field scout executive; E. O. Jackson, World editor; Robert Durr, Weekly Review editor and Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute.

A similar christening ceremony was held about an hour later in dedicating a B-24 Liberator, "Spirit of Tuskegee Institute." Ceremony Chairman Mims asserted that "Today's Liberator has been puchased by War Bonds subscribed through the most famous Negro institution in the world. We hardly need to explain that that's Tuskegee Institute.

Dr. Patterson, Alabama State chairman of Negro division of War Savings Staff, represented Tuskegee Institute with Mrs. Gaston crashing the bottle of wine according to the custom, lore, and tradition of fight craft.

In the Tuskegee party were Capt. R. P. Burton, Lt. Alexander B. Rose, Lt. Carl Taylor, T. M. Campbell, field agent U. S. Department of Agriculture; Rev. C. A. Kelly, chairman Negro Division War Savings Staff of Macon County; Harry Sims, associate administrator, War Finance Division for Alabama; N. Kellock, state agent Negro extension and V. C. Turner of the Army Air Base.

The parties toured the plant with guides explaining such activities as were not military secrets. B-M-P is the largest modification plant in the world. It has the largest floor space of any plant in the world.

A re-broadcast of the ceremonies will be made Sunday over the program sponsored by Smith and Gaston over Radio Station WSGN.

The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan

Stimson Praises 99th.; Others On Way Home

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

Washington, Aug. 13. (ANP)—Negro engineer, quartermaster and anti-aircraft units were warmly praised for their work in connection with the preparations for the Sicilian invasion, some of whom were actual participants, when Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson discussed his 13,500 mile inspection trip to the European and North African theaters of operations at his press conference last Thursday.

The secretary was in good spirits, and a bit jocular as he answered the questions of reporters dealing with progress of the war, his trip, and sundry other items.

During his journey he saw Negro troops in England and others in North Africa, and had occasion to personally meet Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, commanding the 99th pursuit squadron, now stationed in Sicily.

Accompanied by Maj. Gen. John Lee Stimson inspected several colored units in England and found what he called an "interesting situation" in which the men were "working very vigorously and getting along well together with all other troops." He had no comment to make as to whether there had been any reports to the contrary.

In Africa he said he had seen a unit of engineers which had previously served in Liberia in the construction of the Roberts airfield, said to be the largest in the world.

"That unit performed very valuable work on the construction and repair jobs at the North African ports from which the invasion of Sicily was undertaken," he declared. "Furthermore, Negro quartermaster units did excellent work in the invasion, and some of these troops were actually with the landing forces in Sicily."

Obviously his statement of the quartermaster unit that was in the landing force was in answer to a question submitted inquiring for additional information regarding the news photo of a Negro soldier rushing up the beach at Gela.

"I personally met Col. Davis of the 99th, which is now stationed in Sicily," the secretary said. "He flew over to Tunis to meet me."

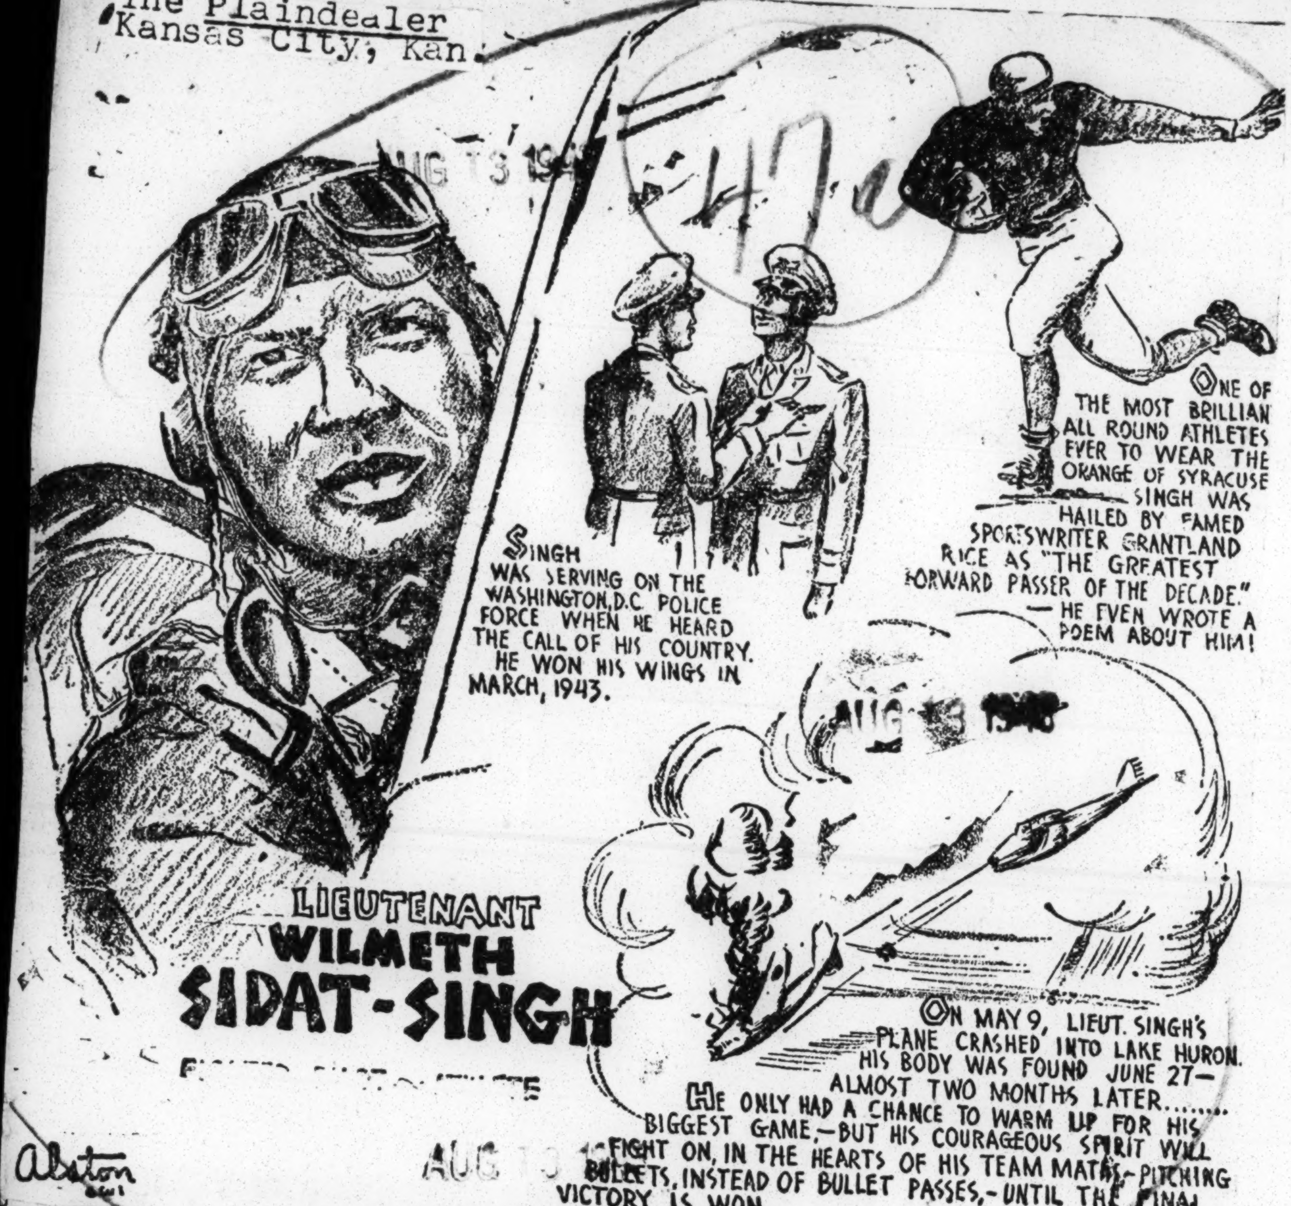
Stimson recalled his earlier statement of a few weeks ago that the squadron is doing "creditable work." He also revealed that a colored artin-aircraft unit is in Africa.

AUG

47a-1943

The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan.

AUG 13 1943



47a
LIEUTENANT
WILMETH
SIDAT-SINGH
SINGH WAS SERVING ON THE WASHINGTON, D.C. POLICE FORCE WHEN HE HEARD THE CALL OF HIS COUNTRY. HE WON HIS WINGS IN MARCH, 1943.
ONE OF THE MOST BRILLIANT ALL ROUND ATHLETES EVER TO WEAR THE ORANGE OF SYRACUSE SINGH WAS HAILED BY FAMED SPORTSWRITER GRANTLAND RICE AS "THE GREATEST FORWARD PASSER OF THE DECADE." — HE EVEN WROTE A POEM ABOUT HIM!
ON MAY 9, LIEUT. SINGH'S PLANE CRASHED INTO LAKE HURON. HIS BODY WAS FOUND JUNE 27— ALMOST TWO MONTHS LATER........
HE ONLY HAD A CHANCE TO WARM UP FOR HIS BIGGEST GAME,—BUT HIS COURAGEOUS SPIRIT WILL FIGHT ON, IN THE HEARTS OF HIS TEAM MATES,—PITCHING BULLETS, INSTEAD OF BULLET PASSES,—UNTIL THE FINAL VICTORY IS WON.
Alston

"Naturals" With Airacobra Report Negro Pilots Are

Atlanta, Ga.
Daily World

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Michigan, — (SNS) — With a smart array of new equipment, elements of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field are fast attaining their training peak, the War Department announced this week. Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., Air Corps, has assumed command of the Group.

Included in the new equipment are P-39s (commonly called the Airacobra), P-47s and P-40s. The P-40 will be remembered as the tough air arm that brought much recognition to Lieutenant Colonel Davis' 99th Fighter Squadron in the African campaign. The 99th Fighter Squadron is presently serving in Italy.

New camera equipment has been provided for use in firing practice to step up accuracy with the .50 calibre machine gun. The Army has also provided improved installation on the firing range at Oscoda, sub-base of Selfridge Field.

Many pilots of the 332nd Fighter Group have been referred to as "naturals" by instructors and superiors when describing the manner in which they operate the P-39. The Airacobra, with its 1150-horsepower Allison engine mounted behind the pilot, has established an enviable reputation in combat.

There has also been a step-up in flying hours at the Field. Formerly reported as between 400 and 500 hours a week, the flying time now accomplished by pilots in training totals above 2,000 hours a week.

Army Announces Recovery Of Body Of Sidat-Singh

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

JUL 3 1943

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—Coast Guard officials announced the finding of the body of 2nd Lieut. Wilmeth Sidat-Singh, here last week, seven weeks to the day after his plane plunged into Lake Huron during a training flight on May 9.

Lt. Sidat-Singh, a native of Washington, D.C., was a graduate of Syracuse university in the class of 1939, at which school he won national fame as a football and basketball player. He completed the course at the Tuskegee Army Air school on March 27, and was assigned to Selfridge Field on May 4, as a member of the 332nd Fighter Group.

The flyer, 25 years of age, was the son of Mrs. Pauline Sidat-Singh by a first marriage to the late Elias Webb, member of a prominent Washington family.

Col. Davis, Jr. Takes Command Of 332nd Group

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

OCT 9 1943

SELFRIDGE, Mich.—Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, Sr., top ranking Negro officer in the United States Army, attended the ceremonies at Selfridge Field on Monday and had the unique experience of seeing his son, Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., assume command of the 332nd Fighter Group, replacing the former commander, Col. Robert Selway.

Lieut. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., arrived at the Selfridge Field gates at 11 a. m., and was escorted to Base headquarters where he reported to the commanding officer, Col. William L. Boyd. A reception committee, headed by Major James T. Ramsey, formerly of Philadelphia, greeted the new commanding officer of the 332nd Fighter Group. Also in the reception committee was Capt. Nelson S. Brooks, Capt. George L. Knox, Lieut. James Pugsley, Lieut. Robert B. Tresville, Lieut. Charles H. DeBow, Lieut. Edward C. Gleed, Lieut. Morris T. Johnston, Lieut. Vernon C. Punch, Lieut. James Y. Carter and Lieut. Ray B. Ware.

Following the ceremonies of the afternoon, a formal reception was held in honor of Lieut. Col. Davis at Luxberry Hall Tuesday evening. Other guests of honor were Gen. B. O. Davis, Sr., Major Harriet West, Col. William L. Boyd, base commander of the post, and Col. Robert L. Selway, Jr., former group commander of the 332nd Fighter Group and his staff.

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.

TUSKEGEE FLIERS' COURSE ADVANCED

NOV 17 1943

WASHINGTON—The third and final step in the training of Negroes as bombardiers has been taken with the announcement by the Army Air Forces that Negro navigation cadets now in training at Hondo Army Airfield, Tex., will serve the dual function of navigator and bombardier.

Upon the successful completion of the navigation course, the cadets will be assigned to a school in the Central Training Command for bombardier training.

At the same time, the War Department announced that 12 Negro flying officers, the first Negroes to receive wings as twin-engine pilots, have been assigned to the B-25 transition school at Mather Field, Calif., where they will study the operation of B-25 [illegible] the proposed basic arm of an all-Negro medium bombardment group.

The pilots were ordered to Mather Field from Selfridge Field, Michigan, and Tuskegee Army Airfield, Ala. They began their studies at Mather Field Nov. 15.

Names and addresses of the nine second lieutenants selected from Tuskegee Army Airfield follow: Herman R. Campbell, Jr., New York; Henry F. Fletcher, San Antonio; Perry E. Hudson, Jr., Atlanta; Vincent J. Mason, Orange, N. J.; Ha[illegible] King, Jamaica, N. Y.; Jerom[illegible] Chicago; Harvey N. Pinkney, Baltimore; William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass. and Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo Calif.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Johnson Wells, ex-Tennis Champ, Killed in Air Crash

BUFFALO, N.Y.—Funeral services were held last Saturday at St Luke AMEZ Church for Second Lieut. Johnson C. Wells, son of Mrs. Bobbie Campbell, 44 Pine Street, who was killed in his army fighter plane which crashed near Selfridge Field, Mich., the previous Tuesday during a routine training flight.

Lieut. Wells was a graduate of Hutchinson Central [illegible] School and West Virginia State College. He was an athlete of national reputation, starring in tennis, basketball, and swimming.

Wells was former national junior tennis champion and midwestern intercollegiate champion while at West Virginia State. He competed in countless national ATA tournaments, always finishing in the upper bracket.

He was a member of the AME Zion Church, the Memorial Center-Urban League, Tuskegee [illegible] Michigan Avenue YMCA. He joined the army a year [illegible] 22.

OCT 16 1943

The body, reposing in a flag-draped casket, was accompanied to Buffalo by a military escort. The Rev. S. O. B. Johnson officiated at the funeral.

Survivors besides his mother are his wife, Mrs. Esther Wells, and two brothers, Marvin and Melvin.

News
Birmingham, Ala.

Negro Flier's Crash Into Power Lines Disrupts Electricity

DEC 2 1943

UNION SPRINGS, Ala.—Several thousand residents of Southeastern Alabama were without electricity for several hours Wednesday after an Army plane crashed into high tension power lines 12 miles northwest of here.

The Negro pilot of the plane, a training ship, suffered only minor injuries, reported Capt. H. C. Magoon, commanding officer of the 66th Flying Training Detachment based at Tuskegee Institute, Ala. He declined to identify the flier.

James M. Barry, vice president of the Alabama Power Company, estimated at Birmingham that 8,000 customers, including those at Dothan, Eufaula, Abbeville, Enterprise and Headland, were affected by the disruption of electric service.

Negroes in Training For Bombing Group

World-Telegram
New York, N. Y

By the U

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Training of pilots for an all-Negro bombardment group to be activated on July 1 of next year will begin within a month at either Fort Dodge, Kans., or Del Rio, Tex., the War Department announced today. One all-Negro pursuit squadron—the 99th—has already seen action in North Africa. [illegible] Negro fighter pilots are in training at Tuskegee, Ala.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

99th Pilot Reported Lost

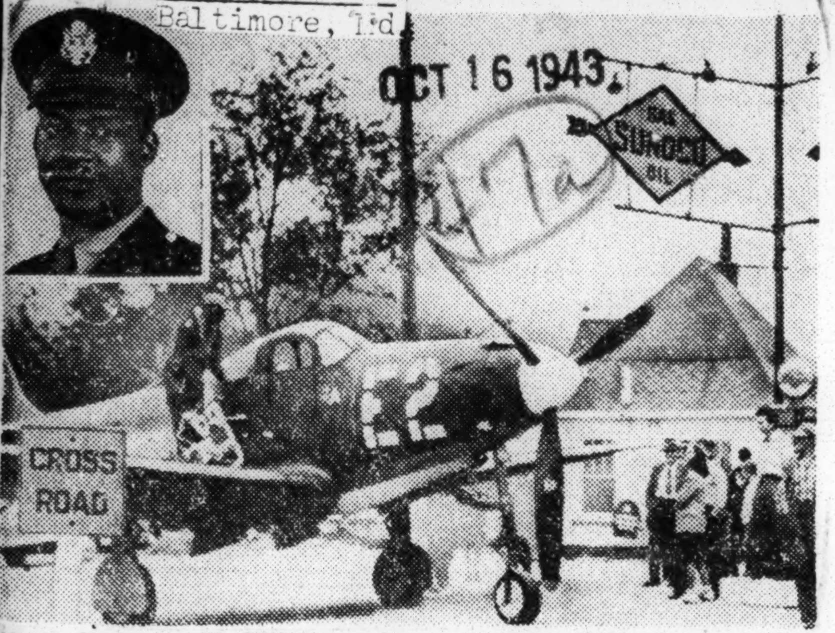
Courier

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—(ANP)—1st Lt. Sherman Windham White Jr., 22, of Macon, Miss., is the second fighter pilot of the 99th Pursuit squadron, now on duty in Sicily, reported lost in combat. The War Department announced he has been missing since July 3 following engagements over Pantelleria.

Pilot Lands on Highway to Get Gas

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
OCT 16 1943

47a



Lieut. Spurgeon N. Ellington (insert) and his P-39 plane which he landed on a Michigan highway to refuel at a gasoline station.

By DOUGLASS HALL

DETROIT, Mich.—Suburban residents were astonished last week to see an airplane land on the Northeast highway about nine miles out from town. The pilot turned out to be 2nd Lieut. Spurgeon N Ellington, of the 332nd Fighter Group, Selfridge Field. He had landed there because he was afraid that his P-39 fighter plane did not have gas enough to get back to the field.

Landing Uneventful

The army flyer, who had circled an unobstru[illegible]oad section until it became clear of automobile traffic, made a safe landing, taxied his plane up to a filling station and calmly asked for gasoline, for which he had no coupons.

Learning that the station did not have the type of gas his plane required, he phoned Selfridge Field and fuel was sent out by truck.

Also sent was Lieut. Floyd E. Lambert of Birmingham, a more seasoned pilot, who took off from the highway without mishap. He knew the way bac[illegible] the field and determined that the plane had sufficient gas after all.

Lieutenant Ellington's home is Winston-Salem, N.C.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

303rd Training Wing Commended

GREENSBORO, N. C.—(SNS)—Exceptional commendation from their commanding officers has been bestowed on the singing, swinging oldiers on the 303rd Training Wing, a new group of Negro trainees who recently started training here at Basic Training Center No. 10 of the Eastern Technical Training Command, Army Air Forces.

47a

SEP 11 1943

One of the distinguishing features of training centers in the Technical Training Command is that soldiers sing while they drill and the men of the 303rd Wing quickly adapted themselves to the combination of marching and music. According to their officers, the soldiers of the 303rd have proved [illegible]elves [illegible]ional on two cou[illegible]—for th[illegible]ality of their singing and their enthusiasm for drill.

Shortly after the arrival of the new group, it became traditional that when a passerby heard "Roll Out the Barrel" as it seldom had been rolled before, or the catchy "Six Pence" song of the Air Forces swung in perfect harmony, it was a certainty that the singing soldiers of the 303rd Training Wing were coming down the road. The men had quickly learned all the popular Air Force songs. They sang them with swing, with wholehearted vigor and gusto. When, with a deep throated roar, they "sounded off" with "Nothing Can Stop The Army Air Corps"—the listener re[illegible]believed it.

LEARN "MONKEY D[illegible]

The way these men have taken to drill has amazed the officers and permanent party non-coms charged with their training. They drill on their own time, at noon and in the evening after supper. Many of the men selected as acting non-coms in the trainee group have had experience in the CCC and ROTC. A crack drill team has been formed, and this group is learning "monkey drill," a fast complicated routine that only the best troops ever learn to perfection.

The trainees, coming here after passing through induction and reception centers, have been in the army only a few months. They represent every section of the country.

A comprehensive physical training program for the trainees embraces every sport played on the post. Teams have been organized for intergroup sports events in baseball, volleyball and basketball, while ping pong and horseshoe tournaments are run off between barracks. Th[illegible] plenty of boxing talent in the group, [illegible]ding boys who have fought in Golden Gloves bouts, in amateur contests and even some who have fought professionally.

There are a number of talented musicians in this group. Several are sending home for their instruments and expect to have a swing band formed soon. Cpl. McKenzie Ferguson, composer and former radio solo pianist, whose home town is Kansas City, Mo., already has formed his own entertainment unit and was given an enthusiastic reception when he appeared with a jitterbug dance act and his GI Jivers at the Officers Club of the post.

The men have expressed themselves as liking the idea of being in the Air Forces. And they are doing a good job of soldering. The officers, permanent party non-coms and trainees are unanimous in their conviction that the 303rd Wing is shaping up to one of the best outfits on the post.

47a

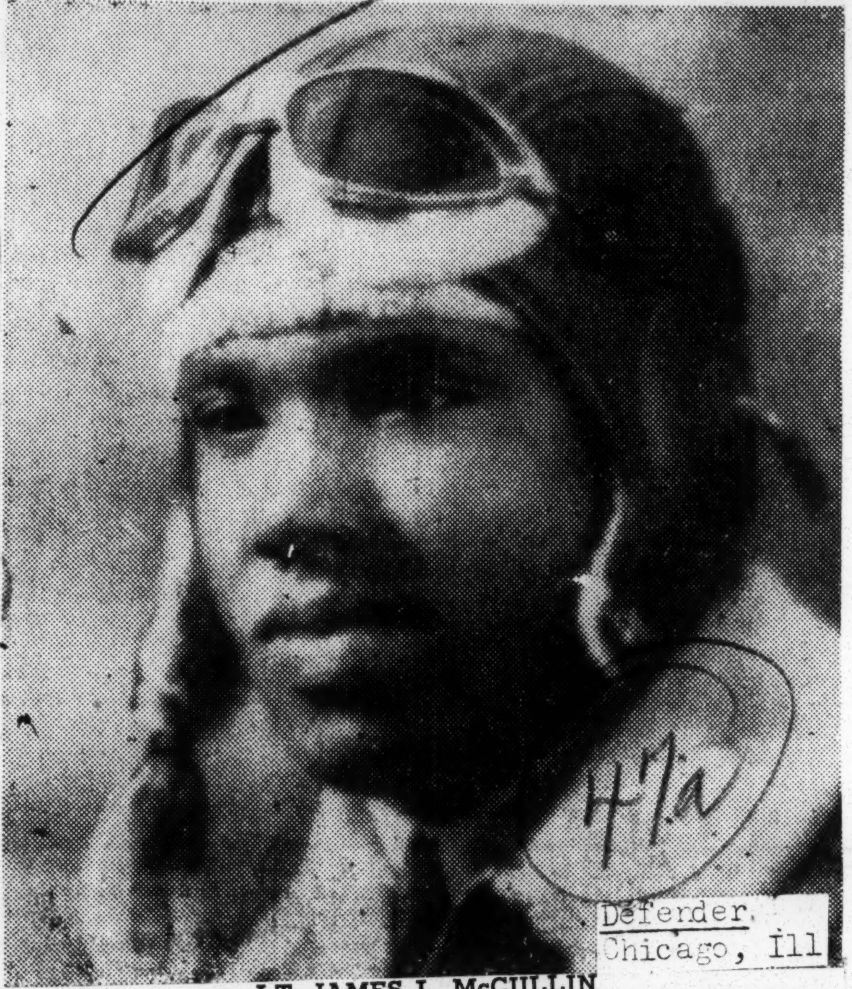
Haitian Pilot Earns Wings

SEP 13 1943

47a

Among the members of Tuskegee's most recent graduating class was Sous-Lieutenant (2nd Lt.) Alix Pasquet (left). In the above photo Lt. Pasquet receives warm falicitations from his countryman, 2nd Lt. Ray[illegible] Cassag[illegible] who completed his flight training with an earlier Tuskegee class. These pilots, who came to Tuskegee from Port au Prince, Haiti, are members of the Haitian Air Force. (Photo by Tuskegee Army Air Field).

MISSING IN ACTION



47a

Defender,
Chicago, Ill

LT. JAMES L. McCULLIN

Crack flyer of the 99th Squadron stationed in North Africa who has been reported by the War Department as missing in action. This picture obtained by the Defender from Lt. McCullin's mother, Mrs. Bessie McCullin of St. Louis, Mo., is her favorite photo.

LT. MC CULLIN REPORTED LOST IN AIR BATTLE

Missouri Mother Holds Out Hope For Son In Interview

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The name of one of the two 99th Pursuit Squadron pilots "missing in action" after an aerial dogfight over Sicily was disclosed here this week.

He is Lt. James L. McCullin of St. Louis.

The Missouri flyer was lost when a superior Nazi squadron outnumbering the 99th attacked the Negro aviators on their way back from a bombing mission over Castelvetrano airfield in Sicily prior to the invasion. It was the same engagement in which Lt. Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Ind., shot down a Focke-Wulf 190.

Lt. Hall was promoted to captain this week for his feat.

The Germans during the battle pursued our flyers from Sicily to Pantelleria, trying to take advantage of their numerical superiority. On the squadron's return to their North African base, it was disclosed that two of the 99th's planes were missing out of the 12

In the flight, the 99th was given the No. 1 spot protecting Mitchell twin-engined bombers. They met the Germans head-on in the battle that lasted 25 minutes.

47a

47b-1943

31 Negroes Awarded Congressional Medal of Honor in Nation's Wars

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

DEC

In the current global war the Negro has definitely established himself in the hierarchy of distinguished soldiers.

Private George Watson, of Birmingham, received the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in the Southwest Pacific on March 8, 1943.

For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services at Guadalcanal, on March 27, 1943, four Negro youths received the Legion of Merit. They were Private First Class Ben W. Pettis, Senatobia, Miss.; Private Jesse Harris, Tuskegee, Ala.; Private Verna C. Neal, Ruleville, Miss., and Private Henry Smith, Jr., Good Pine, La.

47

Sergeant Charles M. Baynes, of Chicago, was awarded the Silver Star for heroic conduct exhibited on June 26, 1943, near an Algerian air base. Another Silver Star award went to Private Mack B. Anderson, of Brenham, Ter., for bravery in India in 1942.

Many others have been honored in this war, their awards ranging from the Distinguished Service Cross to the Good Conduct Medal.

DEC 4 - 1943

Between [illegible] years [illegible] and 1926, soldiers serving in all-Negro outfits were awarded 31 Congressional Medals of Honor and 57 Distinguished Service Crosses. Since the War Department record of those honored makes no reference to race, it is presmued that there are others.

First authorized by act of Congress in 1862, the Medal of Honor, often referred to as the Congressional Medal of Honor because it was "presented in the name of Congress," is the highest decoration awarded by the United States Government.

The Distinguished Service Cross, the next highest honor, was instituted by executive order in January, 1918, and confirmed by Congress July 9, 1918.

First instance in history of the award of the Medal of Honor to a Negro was in 1863, when Sergeant William H. Carney, Company C, 54th Massachusetts Colored Infantry, received the honor for conspicuous gallantry at Fort Wagner, South Carolina, on July 18 of that year.

The citation, stated in part, that "when the colored sergeant was shot down, the soldier grasped the flag, led the way to the parapet, and planted the colors thereon. When the troops fell back he brought off the flag, under a fierce fire in which he was twice severely wounded."

And so down through the years the number of Negroes who have won acclaim for valor has become legion. The names of the 31 recipients of the Congressional Medal of Honor and the 57 recipients of the Distinguished Service Cross follow:

AWARDS OF THE CONGRESSIONAL OF HONOR—1862 TO 1926

(Awarded for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in action with the enemy.)

Sgt. Edward L. Baker, Jr., 10th U. S. Cavalry, 1898, Santiago, Cuba.

Pvt. William H. Barnes, 38th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, Near Richmond, Va.

1943

1st Sgt. Powhatan Beaty, 5th U. S. Colored Troops,, 1864, Near Richmond, Va.

Pvt. Dennie Bell, 10th U. S. Cavalry, 1898, Tayabacoa, Cuba.

Sgt. Thomas Boyne, 9th U. S. Cavalry, 1879, Mimbres Mountains, N. Mex.

1st Sgt. James H. Bronson, 5th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, Near Richmond, Va.

Sgt. William H. Carney, 54th Mass. Colored Inf., 1863, Fort Wagner, S.C.

Sgt. John Denny, 9th U. S. Cavalry, 1879, Las Animas Canyon, N. Mex.

Sgt. Decatur Dorsey, 39th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, Petersburg, Va.

Sgt. Christian A. Fleetwood, 4th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, Near Richmond, Va.

Pvt. James Gardiner, 36th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, Near Richmond, Va

Sgt. James H. Harris, 38th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, New Market Heights Va.

Sgt. Thomas Hawkins, 6th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, Deep Bottom, Va.

Sgt. Alfred B. Hilton, 4th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, Near Richmond, Va.

Sgt. Milton M. Holland, 5th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, Near Richmond, Va.

DEC 4 1943

Cpl. Miles J[illegible]s, 36th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, [illegible] Richmond

Sgt. Henry Johnson, 9th U. S. Cavalry, 1879, Milk River, Col.

Sgt. George Jordan, 9th U. S. Cavalry, 1880-1881, Fort Tulerso, N. Mex., and Carizo Canyon, N. Mex.

1st Sgt. Alexander Kelly, 6th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, Near Richmond, Va.

Pvt. Fitz Lee, 10th U. S. Cavalry, 1898, Tayabacoa, Cuba.

Sgt. William McBryar, 10th U. S. Cavalry, 1890, Arizona.

1st. Sgt. Robert Pinn, 5th U. S. Cloored Troops, 1864, Near Richmond, Va.

Sgt. Thomas Shaw, 9th U. S. Cavalry, 1881, Carizo Canyon, N. Mex.

Sgt. Emanuel Stance, 9th U. S. Cavalry, 1870, Kickapoo Springs, Tex.

Pvt. William H. Thompkins, 10th U. S. Cavalry, 1898, Tayagacoa, Cuba.

Pvt. Charles Veal, 4th U. S. Colored Troops, 1864, Near Richmond, Va.

Pvt. Augustus Walley, 9th U. S. Colored Troops, 1881, Cuchillo Negro Mountains, N. Mex.

Pvt. George H. Wanton, 10th U. S. Colored Troops, 1898, Tayabacoa, Cuba.

1st Sgt. Moses Williams, 9th U. S. Cavalry, 1881, Cuchillo Negro Mountains, N. Mex.

Cpl. William O. Wilson, 9th U. S. Cavalry, 1890, Sioux Campaign.

Sgt. Brent Woods, 9th U. S. Cavalry, 1881, New Mexico.

AWARDS OF THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS

(Awarded for extraordinary heroism in action under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved July 9, 1918.)

All of the foregoing awards were given in 1918.

Pfc. Robert M. Breckenridge, Co. H, 365th Inf., Ferme de Bel-Air, France.

Cpl. Russell Pollard, Co. H, 365th Inf., Bois-Frehault, France.

Pvt. George Bell, Co. E, 366th Inf., Lesseau, France.

Sgt. Roy A. Brown, Co. E, 366th Inf., Lesseau, France.

Pfc. Will Cliney, Co. F, 366th Inf., Frapelle, France.

Pvt. Alex Hammond, Co. E, 366th Inf., Lesseau, France.

Cpl. Van Horton, Co. E, 366th Inf., Lesseau, France.

Pvt. Edward L. Merrifield, Co. E 366th Inf., Lesseau, France.

Pvt. Tom Rivers, Co. G, 366th Inf., Bois-de-la-Voivrotte, France.

Pvt. Joe Williams, Co. E, 166th Inf., Lesseau, France.

Pvt. John Baker, Co. I, 368th Inf., Binarville, France.

Pfc. Thomas H. Davis, San. Det., 368th Inf., Binarville, France.

Pfc. Edward H. Handy, Co. B, 368th Inf., Binarville, France.

Pvt. Joseph James, Hq. Co., 368th Inf., Binarville, France.

Pvt. Bernard Lewis, Co. A, 368th Inf., Binarville, France.

Pfc. Lewis Watkins, Co. A, 350th M. G. Bat., Eply, France.

Sgt. William Butler, Co. L, 369th Inf., Maison-de-Champagne, France.

Cpl. Elmer Earl, Co. K, 369th Inf., Ripont Swamp, France.

Pvt. Elmer McCowin, Co. A, 369th Inf., Ripont Swamp, France.

Pvt. William Sandford, Med. Det., 369th Inf., Ripont River, France.

Sgt. Robert Barnes, Co. L, 370th Inf., Mont de Singes, France.

Pvt. William Cuff, 2nd M. G. Co., 370th Inf., Monte-de-Sanges, France.

Pvt. Leroy Davis, Co. L, 370th Inf., Mont-de-Sanges, France.

Sgt. Lester Fossie, Co. M, 370th Inf., Ferme-de-la Riviere, France.

Pvt. James Fuquay, Co. H, 370th Inf., Guillimet Farm, France.

Sgt. Ralph Gibson, Co. H, 370th Inf., Behume, France.

Pvt. Willie G. Hurdle, 3rd M. G. Co., 370th Inf., Ferme La Folie, France.

Pvt. Spirley E. Irby, Co. H, 370th Inf., Beaume, France.

Sgt. Mathew Jenkins, Co. F, 370th Inf., Vauxaillon, France.

Pvt. Arthur Johnson, Hq. Co., 370th Inf., Mont des Singes, France.

Pvt. Andy McCall, M. G. Co., 370th Inf., Ferme de la Riviere, France.

Pvt. Charles T. Monroe, Hq. Co., 370th Inf., Monte-de-Sanges, France.

Pvt. Harry L. Pearson, M. G. Co. 370th Inf., Ferme La Folie, France.

Pvt. Tom Powell, Co. H, 370th Inf., Behume, France.

Cpl. Emmett Thompson, Co. L, 370th Inf., Monte-de-Sanges, France.

Cpl. Isaac Valley, Co. M, 370th Inf., Vraincourt, France.

Pvt. Alonzo Walton, 3rd M. G. Co., 370th Inf., Rue Larcher and Pont-d'-Any, France.

Pfc. Nathaniel C. White, Co. F, 370th Inf., Vauxaillon, France.

Pfc. Alfred Williamson, Med. Det., 370th Inf., Beaume, France.

Pvt. Willie Boston, M. G. Co., 371st Inf., Ardeuil, France.

Pvt. Reuben Burrell, M. G. Co., 371st Inf., Champagne Sector, France.

Pvt. Charles Butler, M. G. Co., 371st Inf., Ardeuil, France.

Sgt. Thomas Cooper, Co. K, 371st Inf., Trieres Farm, France.

Pvt. Junius Diggs, Co. G, 371st Inf., Ardeuil, France.

Pvt. Burton Holmes, Co. C, 371st Inf., Near Hill 188, France.

Cpl. Sandy E. Jones, Co. C, 371st Inf., Near Champagne, France.

Sgt. Lee R. McClelland, Med. Det., 371st Inf., Ardeuil, France.

Pvt. Ellison Moses, Co. G, 371st Inf., Ardeuil, France.

DEC 4 - 1943

Pvt. Malley [illegible] Hq. [illegible] 371st Inf., Near Bussy Farm, France.

Pvt. Bruce Stoney, Med. Det., 371st Inf., Ardeuil, France.

Pvt. Tillman Webster, M. G. Co., 371st Inf., Addeuil, France.

Pvt. Clifford Crawford, Hq. Co., 372nd Inf., Near Bussy Farm, France.

Pvt. George Gross, Co. D, 372nd Inf., Near Sechault, France.

Pvt. Samuel H. Johns, Co. L, 372nd Inf., Near Bussy Farm, France.

Sgt. Ira M Payne, Co A, 372nd Inf., Near Sechault, France.

Pvt. Clarence R. Van Allen, Co. L, 372nd Inf., Near Bussy Farm, France.

ANOTHER NAVY HERO HONORED

DEC 25 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

476

By HERMAN HILL
(Pacific Coast Bureau)

CORONA, Calif.—Add the name of Marion Green, chief cook, United States Navy, to Uncle Sam's ever-swelling list bearing the names of such stalwarts as Dorie Miller, Leonard Roy Harmon, Charles J. French, and the rest!

DEC 25 1943

Like the others, Green belongs. Presently a patient in the U.S. Naval hospital here, the 26-year-old native of McClellandville, S.C., who entered the service eight years ago, is recuperating from shrapnel wounds suffered during a stirring sea battle against Japanese forces off Guadalcanal island the nights of November 12-13, 1942.

TWO COVETED AWARDS

Green, following recommendations by his chief, Captain McGregor, and mates on the crack destroyer, "U.S.S. Aaron Ward," has been awarded the coveted Silver Star Medal by U.S. Secretary of Navy Frank Knox for superlative heroism under extreme stress and, since that time, he has also received the Purple Heart, military medal of honor, from Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of Pacific Fleet operations.

COURAGE UNDER FIRE

Green's citation was "for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while serving aboard the U.S.S. Aaron Ward during the engagement with enemy Japanese naval forces off Guadalcanal on the nights of November 12-13, 1942. After a shell had struck and badly damaged his station in the galley, Green lifted a wounded shipmate to his back and attempted to evacuate him when a second shell struck the galley, killing the wounded man and piercing Green's body with innumerable pieces of shrapnel. Although suffering acutely, he, with utter disregard for his own personal safety, refused to leave his battle station, and remained to care for another wounded comrade."

DEC 25 1943

Green, in peace-time, did a hitch on the battleship "Maryland" and, since Pearl Harbor, has seen action off New Hebrides and the Fiji Islands, in addition to Guadalcanal and the Pacific war zone. He holds a student pilot's license, obtained in 1941 from the Metropolitan Flying school, Van Nuys, Calif., and, the same year, also passed the Army Air Corps tes and applied for transfer.

TWO MEDALS

Chief Cook Marion Green, USN, awarded both the Silver Star and Purple Heart medals for distinguished service in battle, is a patient at Corona Naval hospital, Corona, Calif., nursing shrapnel wounds suffered in South Pacific action. — Cutler

---

Draft Boards Still Reject More Negroes Than Whites

Informer Houston Texas

SEP 11 1943

WASHINGTON. — Negroes continued to be rejected in greater proportions than whites, according to the annual report of the selective service administration, just out, with illiteracy and venereal disease as the prevalent reasons. But at the same time, however, selective service was able to furnish to the armed forces in 1942 275,059 men.

476

The section of the voluminous report dealing with Negroes was written by Lt. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, administrative assistant to Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, SSA chief.

The "most important" cause of rejections is venereal disease. While local civic communities are trying to help the situation, a remedial program is being planned. In addition to this, the report says, there must be a recognition of the "social aspects of these diseases" if there is to be any real solution.

SEP 11 1943

The bulk of those classified were in 1A and 1B. Only 3 per cent of Negro registrants were deferred on industrial grounds. Conscientious objectors were few, representing but 2.2 per cent of the total.

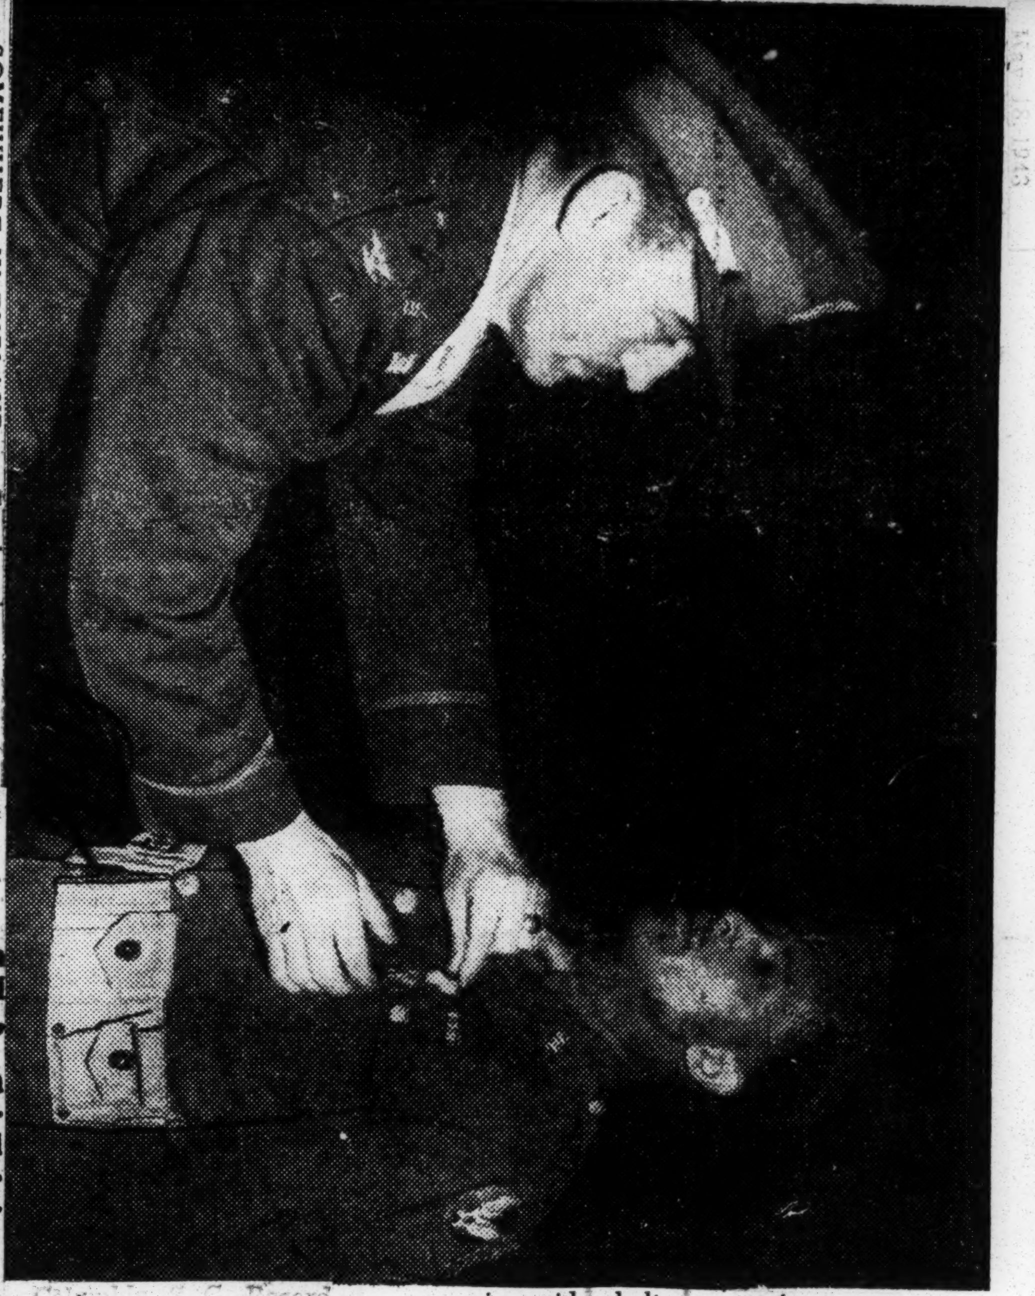
SEP 11 1943

There were "considerably less than" 100 cases of draft evasion among Negroes in 1942, and most of these were for failure to register, to return questionnaires, and giving incorrect names and addresses. One suicide because of the racial discrimination in the armed forces was recorded, in addition to one attempt at suicide. Six men refused to report to induction centers for the same reason.

47b-1943

Awarded Soldier's Medal For Brave Act

May 18, 1943



SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND — For heroism displayed in attempting to capture an armed assailant who had threatened spectators at a dance with a knife, Private James H. Burnam, 30, of 325 West Hickman Street, Winchester, Kentucky, receives the Soldier's medal from Colonel Ewart G. Plank.

The award, authorized by Major General John C. H. Lee, commanding general, Services of Supply, was made recently at a retreat ceremony.

The deed for which Private Burnam won commendation occurred at Suffolk. It was pointed out that the American soldier, member of an aviation engineer battalion, observed an individual armed with a knife and apparently ready to attack a girl at the dance. According to the citation, Private Burnam "grasped the armed assailant and, while attempting to disarm him, received a severe cut across the hand." Although the person escaped, Private Burnam was able to divert the attack and prevent injury to other spectators.

Emptied Machine Gun On Jap Zeroes, Then Used Pistol

Jan. 30, 1943

ASIATIC THEATER—A Silver Star combat decoration has been awarded to Private Mack B. Anderson, United States Army, of 211 North Austin street, Brenham, Texas, for bravery.

During a recent attack by Japanese Zero fighters on an airfield somewhere in India, Pvt. Anderson while under continuous fire from the attackers, manned a machine gun until it went out of action, then continued firing with his automatic pistol while several Japanese fighters definitely centered their attack on him.

Unit Praised

The conduct and bravery of the whole engineer unit of which Pvt. Anderson is a member was warmly praised by both Brigadier General Clayton Bissell, commander of the air forces operating in the China-Burma-India theater, and Brigadier General Caleb V. Haynes, commander of the India Task Force.

General Bissell wired Major Donald L. Jarrett, executive officer of the organization: "Reports say the conduct of the Negro troops was magnificent in their return to duty, and the damage to the airdrome was repaired almost immediately after the strafing ended. I desire you and your troops to know the performance of your duty is in the line of the best traditions of the army."

Three others praised were Sergeants Clarence T. Jackson of Washington, D. C.; Elmer Stephens of Cleveland, Ohio, and Ralph Snell of Dotham, Alabama. These men were instrumental in getting the field back into condition after the attack.

South Pacific Heroes:

MAY 29 1943

Four Privates Cited For Bravery; Braved Bombs To Save Comrades

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC—Four privates of an infantry regiment have been cited in orders by their commanding officer for gallantry in action after risking their lives during an enemy air raid to evacuate several wounded soldiers from a damaged dugout.

Pvts. Henry Smith, jr, of Godbine, La.; Ben W. Pettis of Sanatobia, Mississippi; Jessie Harris of Tuskegee, Ala., and Verna C. Neal of Ruleville, Mississippi, whose regiment has seen heavy fighting in the South Pacific theater of operations, have been cited by their battalion commander. Lieut.-Colonel Julian G. Herne for going to the aid of the wounded men, after voluntarily leaving their air raid shelter, crossing open ground in spite of falling bombs, and bringing the wounded men to safety.

MAY 29 1943

AWARDED PURPLE HEART

Pvt. Neal, who while aiding the wounded men received a bomb fragment in his left arm, has been awarded the Purple Heart.

Col. Herne, in commending the men, said: "The gallantry of these men is in keeping with the fine tradition of the infantry and is an inspiration to their comrades. The entire battalion is proud of them."

[illegible] C. Record
June 14, 1943

Beaufort Negro Wins Navy Cross

WASHINGTON, June 14.—(AP)—President Roosevelt has awarded the Navy cross to William Pinckney, Negro cook, third class, for his extraordinary heroism aboard the aircraft carrier Enterprise during the battle of the Santa Cruz Islands last October.

Pinckney, 28, is the son of Renty Pinckney of Beaufort, S. C.

His citation said that Pinckney was working in the ammunition handling room when a heavy bomb struck, killing four of his five companions and knocking him unconscious. When Pinckney regained consciousness and started to escape he found a shipmate also trying to get out. The wounded man fell unconscious, however, and Pinckney "unmindful of his own danger," the Navy said, carried his comrade to safety.

Norfolk, Virginia
Journal and Guide

First Lady Pins Medals On Heroes

APR 10 1943

SEATTLE, Wash. — Four Negro privates, including one from Newport News, Va., were ~~among five~~ soldiers decorated last Saturday by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, for heroism.

The five soldiers, according to press reports, rescued 10 persons from the Frye Packing Company plant in Seattle after the building had been set afire by the crash of a big Boeing bomber, which was being tested. 31 persons lost their lives in the crash and fire.

APR 10 1943

Names of three of the men who received the medals and congratulations of Mrs. Roosevelt were listed as Lonnie Acrum of Newport News: Bruce Singletary of Danville, Va., and Charles E. Whiteley of Smithfield, N. C. All are privates.

Never Mind The Medal Now

MAY 2[illegible] - 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgi

478

MAY 2 - 1943

Staff Sergeant Dee W. Andus, Carbondale, Illinois, has a double-barrelled reason for that smile. Mail came from home while he was being decorated with the Purple Heart for wounds suffered when his camp was bombed. Sergeant Andus had just received the medal and entered the orderly room to show it to his company commander when the mail came in and Andus got his batch. "Never mind the medal, sir," he said, smiling, "Here's just what I've been looking for—mail from home."

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

NEGRO SAILOR CITED FOR TOWING 15 MEN ON RAFT UNDER FIRE

MAY 19 1943

Washington, D. C., May 18 (AP).—For attempting to save 15 men adrift on a raft under enemy shell fire by swimming and towing the raft out of danger, Charles Jackson French, a Negro mess attendant has been commended by Adm. William F. Halsey Jr., commander in the South Pacific. French, 23, is from Foreman,

MAY 19 1943

His citation said the incident occurred during an engagement with the Japanese in the Solomon Islands Sept. 5. French and the men on the raft had survived the sinking of the destroyer transport Gregory.

MAY 19 1943

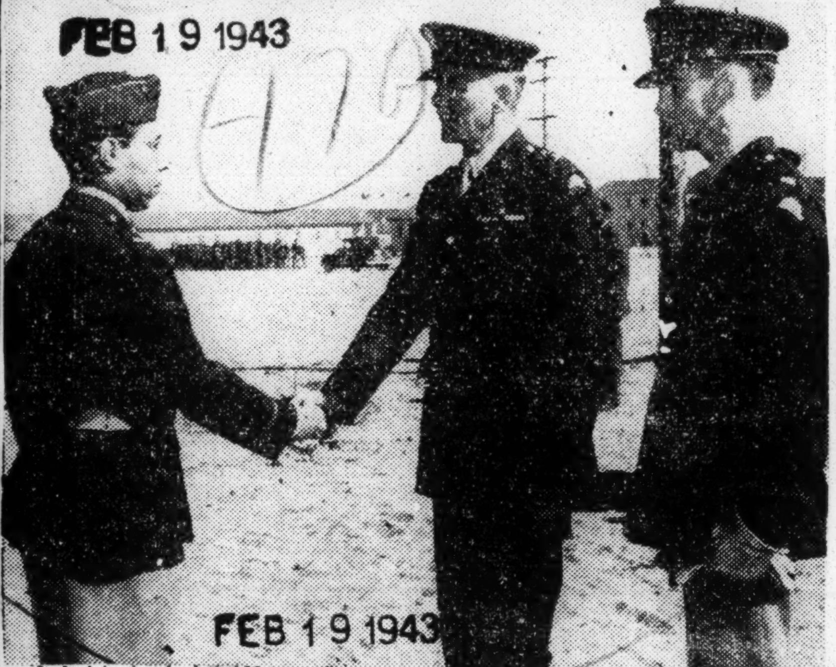
"After the engagement," the citation said, "a group of about 15 men were adrift on a raft which was being shelled by Japanese naval forces. French tied a line to himself and swam for more than two hours without rest, thus attempting to tow the raft. His conduct was in keeping with the highest traditions of the naval service."

478

Fort Huachuca Officer Gets Medal for Bravery

Kansas City Call Kansas City, Mo.

FEB 19 1943



478

FEB 19 1943

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz. — First Lieutenant Stanis S. Melendez, attached to the 318th Engineers Combat Battalion was decorated with the soldier's medal by Major General Miller of the 93rd Division on February 6, 1943, for an act of heroism beyond the call of duty.

FEB 19 1943

This took place during an accident, which occurred while the 318th Engineers were on maneuvers spanning the Colorado River at a point near Earp, California with a foot bridge on December 1, 1942, when an assault boat containing ten enlisted men was swept by the swift current of the Colorado River into the foot bridge, throwing four of the men into the river.

Lieutenant Melendez seeing the driven assault boat to the spot in accident proceeded in a power the river where the men were last seen and, fully clothed without regard for his own safety dived into the water in an effort to save the lives of four men.

Despite the great risk involved due to many holes in the river bed, which created strong under currents and whirlpools in the heavy sand-laden water, Lieut. Melendiz, repeated his efforts which enabled him to get a hold of one of the men, but due to the current and excited state of the drowning man he was unable to make his rescue effective. However, Lieut. Melendez persisted until he was exhausted and had to be assisted from the water.

Lt. Melendez ,an American citizen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanis Melendez of 7408 Susquehanna St. Pittsburgh, Pa., was born in 1915. He entered into active service on July 1, 1942, and was sent to the Medical Field Service School, in Carlisle, Penn. He graduated from there August 1, 1942, and was attached to the Service Station 318th Medical Battalion.

FEB 19 1943

Memphis, Tenn., Commercial Appeal
June [illegible], 1943

NEGROES WIN AWARDS

Two From Mississippi Among Four Decorated for Bravery

WASHINGTON, June 3.—(AP)—The Army's Legion of Merit has been awarded to four negro enlisted men for exceptionally meritorious services on Guadalcanal, Secretary Stimson announced Thursday. They were:

478

Pfc. Ben W. Pettis, Senatobia, Miss., Pvt. Jessie Harris, Tuskegee, Ala., Pvt. Verna C. Neal, Ruleville, Miss., and Pvt. Henry Smith Jr., Good Pine, La.

The identical citations for the four infantrymen read:

"For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service on March 27, 1943, at Guadalcanal, by leaving the comparative safety afforded by a slit trench and advancing some 250 yards over open terrain, exposed to bombing from an enemy air raid in order to assist in evacuating casualties."

News
Birmingham, Ala.

Negro Private Given Meritorious Award

For risking his life to save others, Pvt. Jesse Harris, Tuskegee, Ala., is one of four Negro enlisted men to be awarded the Army's Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious services on Guadalcanal, according to Secretary of War Stimson in Washington.

478

JUN 1943

The citation to the infantryman, stated:

"For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service on March 27, 1943, at Guadalcanal, by leaving the comparative safety afforded by a slit trench and advancing some 250 yards over open terrain, exposed to bombing from an enemy craft, in order to assist in evacuating casualties."

Jungles Hold No Barriers

Soldiers Win Awards For Difficult Feat

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

JUN 26 1943

SOUTH PACIFIC, June 24—News of awards, assignments and promotions of Negro troops from the Pacific area is increasing weekly. Most recent news tells the award of the Legion of Merit to two soldiers from Alabama and Louisiana by Lieutenant General Millard F. Harmon, Commanding General of the Army Forces in the South Pacific area.

Staff Sgt. Dennis Holt, 3600 Douglas Road, Birmingham, Alabama, received his award as Chief of a Battalion Wire Section, for leading his men on wire trails, through miles of difficult jungle. They carried wire up to a mountain top observation post and frequently crossed miles of water to nearby islands in all sorts of bad weather.

478

Sgt. J. P. Mays of Talula, Louisiana, as regimental wire chief, directed the field operation of installing and maintaining the wire-lines of a widely-dispersed regiment. He negotiated difficult and unexplored terrain with limited supplies, using pack horses instead of wire-laying equipment. Placed on limited duty, because of physical conditions brought about by his activities, Sergeant Mays, heedless of his condition, continued his work, which often required attention from 14 to 18 hours a day, and through his efforts, uninterrupted communications we maintained.

Three promotions in the area, in the ranks of an engineer battalion, which received its basic training at Camp Shelby, Mississippi, are those of Jack Hayman, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Morris Lee, Vidalia, Louisiana, and Thurman Vaughn, Nashville, Tennessee.

JUN 26 1943

A soldier who earned the chance to become a candidate for Officers School, while serving away from home, is Sergeant P. O. Armstrong, brother of Mrs. Clavat Strains, 995 Yeager street, Knoxville, Tennessee.

PM
New York, N. Y.

Negroes Honored

PM's Bureau

JUN 1943

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The War Dept. has awarded the Legion of Merit to four Negro enlisted men for exceptionally meritorious service on Guadalcanal. They are Pvt. Ben W. Pettis, Senatobia, Miss.; Pvt. Jessie Harris, Tuskegee, Ala.; Pvt. Verna C. Neal, Ruleville, Miss.; and Pvt. Henry Smith, Jr., Good Pine, La. All are infantrymen

478

JUN 1943

47b-1943
Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

RACE COP LEFT FOR DEAD BY NIP CAPTORS

British Laud Bravery of Policeman On Secret Intelligence Job

JAN 9 - 1943

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — The peerless bravery of a retired British Negro policeman who endured the savage brutality of Japanese captors to conceal the presence of American soldiers on Guadalcanal Island has been disclosed by the British Joint Staff mission here.

When seized by the axis power, the policeman, Sgt.-Maj. Vouze, was engaged on secret intelligence duties.

His torturers demanded that he reveal the hiding place and number of the United States troops. Sgt.-Major Vouze refused to comply and played a large part in the success of American operations in that theatre of war.

JAN 9 - 1943

Stabbed With Bayonets

The British reported that the intelligence officer was bound to a tree and stabbed in the arm, face and shoulder with bayonets in an effort to force him to tell where the troops were located.

Finally in a display of barbarous rage, the Japanese viciously jabbed the policeman in the abdomen and left him for dead.

After the Japs had gone, Sgt.-Maj. Vouze freed himself and crawled to the United States line. He refused to accept treatment at the hospital until he had made a complete report to the commanding officer.

JAN 9 - 1943

The officer is now reported to have improved and is expected to assume other dangerous missions.

According to a report of the British high commissioner concerning the heroic deed: "The Americans say no white man could have survived his wounds. I am unable to conceive of any greater bravery."

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

First Negro Soldier Wins Bars in AEF

JAN 9 - 1943

JAN 9 - 1943

On the morning of October 26, 1942, Master Sergeant John T. Lyle, assumed as usual his duties of sergeant major of a Station Hospital somewhere in Africa. He arrived on time at 8 a. m., but before noon of the same day Sergeant Lyle had signed his name to the oath as a first lieutenant, Medical Administrative Corps.

JAN 9 - 1943

He is one of the first of his race to be commissioned from the ranks in the war zone. Young soldiers in the detachment were heard to remark: "'thought you had to go to West Point before you could become a commissioned officer." "Right," replied the newly made officer, "I went to West Point. I was there for sixteen years. Served at the Station Hospital as clerk to the Recruiting Officer during that time."

Lieutenant Lyle was born in Lexington, Ky., on October 5, 1894, and attended the public schools of his home town and Frankfort. After the World War he returned to Kentucky and taught school at Louisville. He first enlisted in the United States Army at Fort Thomas, Ky., on July 24, 1917, attending the Medical Training School at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, and Camp Funston, Kan., 1917-18.

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.

BRITISH BROADCAST U. S. NEGRO VOICES

JAN 13 1943

BY NAT A. BARROWS

(Copyright, 1943, By The Chicago Daily News, Inc.)

LONDON, Jan. 12—(Special Radio)—They didn't get to see King George, but that doesn't detract from the thrill of being on the same radio program with him here in London. Yes, sir, those five colored soldiers from the United States Army are mighty thrilled about that.

JAN 13 1943

They are the first American Negro soldiers ever to broadcast through BBC microphones. They went on the Christmas program following the King's Empire message, then again on Jan. 3, singing spirituals over the force's program; Tuesday night they are going on again at the headquarters of the BBC's world-wide broadcasting outlet. And they will sing the two songs that are beginning to emerge as the soldiers' favorites of the war thus far:

"You Are My Sunshine" and "I'm Dreaming of a White Christmas."

Billed as "Uncle Sam's Boys on the Air," the soldiers are Sgt. Paul L. Love, of Galveston; Sgt. Edward L. Humphries, Miami, Fla.; Cpl. Samuel Williams, Dallas, Tex.; Pfc. Bernie Williams, Bryant, Tex., and Pvt. Alfred Daniels, Los Angeles.

One of the first Clarke County service men to be decorated for bravery is a Negro. Last week The Democrat carried a notice of Sgt. Ernest Johnson, of Cunningham, having received the Soldier's Medal for helping his lieutenant rescue an injured British soldier from a building filled with explosives and fumes and in which live mines were still exploding. We didn't know at the time that he is a Negro but are nonetheless proud of him because of the fact. We are likewise gratified that his act of heroism has been duly recognized and rewarded.

Robeson to Speak At Mulzac Dinner

"P.M. Daily"
N.Y. N.Y.

Paul Robeson will be the principal speaker at the dinner tomorrow night in honor of Capt. Hugh Mulzac and the crew of the Booker T. Washington.

JAN 11 1943

The dinner will be given by the Greater New York Industrial Union Council, CIO, at the Commodore. Mulzac is the first Negro to command a U. S. merchant ship during this war. The ship recently completed her maiden voyage at an East Coast port.

Langston Hughes, Negro poet, will read a composition written especially for the occasion. Fred Waring's glee club will sing a new Waring song about the Merchant Marine, A Song for the Unsung, dedicated to Mulzac and his crew.

Other speakers will include:

Charles Poletti.
Councilman A. Clayton Powell, Jr.
Joseph Curran.
Anna Rosenberg.
Dorothy Funn.

JAN 11 1943

George Medal Awarded Native Who Survived Jap Torture

"The Informer" Houston, Texas

By INNES

LONDON.—(ANP) — The signal distinction of the George medal has been accorded to a fizzy-haired, six-foot Melanesian Negroid native, Sgt. Major Vouza, of the Solomon Islands constabulary, a British colonial force, for having been faithful unto what in a white man would have been death—for the Maoris and Polynesians can sustain wounds which a Caucasian could not survive. Pierced through and through by Japanese bayonets, Vouza, until unconsciousness robbed him of his breath, refused to disclose the hiding place of the adjacent force of American marines on Guadalcanal. Doubtless his fidelity will be brought to the attention of the U. S. government.

JAN 16 1943

Do Not Know Meaning of Fear

Vouza is of the same sterling type as the armed constabulary village constables—many of them former cannibals — whose record in New Guinea stands so high and where they are still valuably aiding the American and Australian defenders against the invading Japanese. Fealty is their watchword, and they do not know the meaning of fear or treachery. One of them has been known to march up his file of police unarmed, owing to the order of a white officer who believed in appeasement, to certain death in the hope of supporting that officer against armed savages.

Vouza, whom an uninformed London newspaper quaintly describes as "Mister Vouza, a retired police officer," was as different from that conception as was Gunga Din from Colonel Blimp. He was sent on secret intelligence work behind the Japanese lines. The Japanese caught him and vainly questioned him. They tied him to a tree, questioned him again, and thrust bayonets into his arm and shoulder. Still he would not speak. They bayoneted him in the face and stomach, and left him for dead.

He managed to free himself and to crawl through the jungle, every inch of which he knew, to the marines' lines. His wounds were dressed, and in halting pidgin English, he made his report.

"No white man could have survived such injuries," said an army surgeon.

The daily life of Vouza, even before the war, was like that of all his fellows—the life to which the commandos are being so strenuously trained. He ran barefooted through the forest and swam rivers. His uniform was a khaki shirt of sulu, a white sash, and a Sam Brown belt which held up his waist belt of cartridges. When the British resident commissioner visited the island Vouza was in his glory, for he was the commissioner's personal bodyguard. At home, in his thatched hut, he taught his young son pidgin English, the Lingua Franca of the islands, in order that the boy might achieve an official position when the time was ripe. With a pay of four shillings a day, Vouza, aged 37, was the Croesus among his fellows.

JAN 16 1943

Comments

F. N. Ashley, former resident commissioner in the British Solomon Islands, now in London, said: "Vouza behaved just as I knew he would. He was my right-hand man—a great big fellow like Paul Robeson, but with wooly hair. I had great respect for him. When I visited his area on an inspectional visit after there had been trouble there, he cleverly picked a way through the jungle and told me all about his wife and son."

JAN 16 1943

Vouza is evidently just such another as Sgt. Barigi, formerly of the Papuan armed constabulary and right-hand man of the late G. A. W. Monckton, who as resident magistrate helped preserve the Queen's Peace in the early years of the turbulent Papua. He is not unique. The existence of such men gives lie to those who contend that the Britons have failed to win the confidence of the native races, "half devil and half child," who were cannibals yesterday and today wear the scanty but significant uniform of the white man's government.

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

Army Bestows Honors On Hayneville Negro

FEB 2 - 1943

Technician Fourth-Grade Caesar Brown, negro soldier from Hayneville, Lowndes County, and the honors he has won during 13 years of service in the U. S. Army, are the subject of a feature article in a recent issue of the camp paper published at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, where he is stationed.

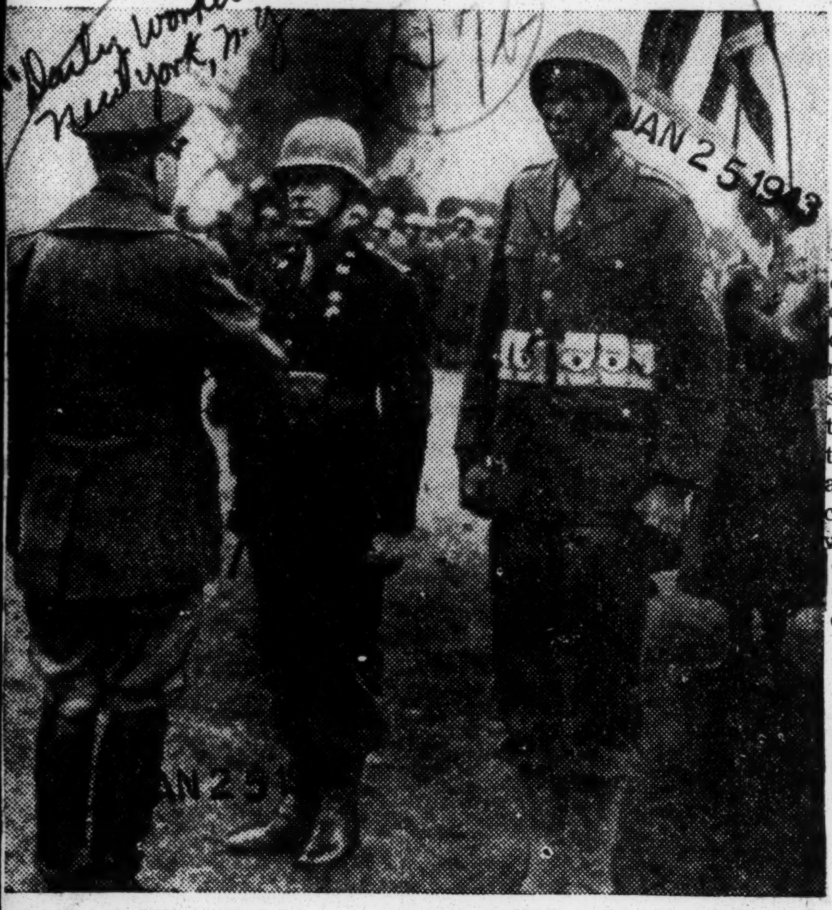
Brown, the oldest enlisted man in the 3417th Ordnance Company, has won such honors as Good Conduct Medal, Expert Rifleman, Pistol, Superior, With Hand Grenade, Expert Bayonet, Expert in Small Arms and Expert Automatic Rifleman, and most recently, first place in a marksmanship contest.

FEB 2 1943

Enlisting in 1926 at Fort Benning, Ga., at the age of 22, Brown returned to civilian life in 1939, but enlisted again when war was declared, and after special training at Mechanics' School at Hampton Institute, Va., was sent back to his old station with the 3417th Ordnance Automotive Maintenance Company at Fort Huachuca.

Win Medals for Saving Tommy

"Daily Worker" New York, N.Y.



JAN 25 1943

The Soldier's Medal is presented to Lieut. Vernon G. Adams, left, and Sgt. Ernest Johnson for heroism displayed in rescuing an injured British Tommy from a building near their camp after it was destroyed by the explosion of a land mine stored in it. Maj. Gen. John G. H. Lee, U. S. Army services of Supply boss in England, makes the award.

ittsburgh Courier
ittsburgh.PA.

British Negro Proves Valor In Aiding Allies

JAN 9 - 1943

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7—(ANP)—The peerless bravery of a retired British Negro policeman, who endured the savage brutality of Japanese captors to conceal the presence of American soldiers on Gaudalcanal Island. has been disclosed by the British Joint Staff Mission here.

When seized by the Axis power, the policemen, Sergeant Major Vouze, was engaged on secret intelligence duties. His torturers demanded that he reveal the hiding place and number of the United States troops. Sergeant Major Vouze refused to comply and played a large part in the success of American operations in that theatre of war.

HORRIBLE EXPERIENCE

The British reported that the intelligence officer was bound to a tree and stabbed in the arm, shoulder and face with bayonets in an effort to force him to tell where

---

Kshattryas, are considered higher than the others, Now, I am not justifying the caste system. It is an evil, and should be eliminated. But how? Caste distinctions were the result of an economic system and can be eliminated only by changing the system.

FATHER SERVED ALL

Take my own family, for example. We are Brahmins by caste. If any member of a lower caste visited our house, then everything that he had touched would have to be thoroughly washed. Under the pre-British set-up, my family had followed the traditional Brahmin profession of priesthood. But, due to economic necessity, my grandfathvived his wounds. I am unable to conceive of any greater bravery."

---

Negro Seaman Gets Royal Bronze Medal

"Weekly Review"
Jan. 9, 1943 Birmingham Ala.

LONDON, Dec. 8—Heroic lifesaving in shark infested waters in the Caribbean has brought signal honors to colored Able Seaman Desmond Woods of the Netherlands West Indies. The tanker on which Woods was serving was dogged for four hours by an enemy U-boat in the Caribbean. The ship sought desperately to evade the sead raided, but finally four torpedoes crashed into her hull and she sank in five minutes. The colored seaman plunged into the water. Despite the darkness of a moonless night, he caught sight of the ship's Second Cook, who could not swim and gave him his own life belt. He then hurried to the assistance of the Third Officer who was on the verge of going down. After hauling the officer aboard a raft, Woods swam to the Chief Engineer, who was swimming about badly injured. He pulled the engineer aboard the raft but the engineer died ten minutes later. The colored seaman, with another crew of members, then rowed the raft 13 miles to land.

The fifteen crew members, who were lost, were the first victims of the U-boat campaign in the Carribbean. Jan. 9, 1943

Recognition of Wood's courage came last month when the Royal Humane Society of London announced that its decoration, the Ribbon of the Bronze Medal of the Society, had been awarded to Woods. The decoration is in the form of a ribbon because the Society, owing to the scarcity of metals, is not presenting actual medal until after the war. A check for 25 pounds of sterling goes with the decoration.

The Government of Curacao, Netherlands West Indies, and private quarters in Curacao have sent money and flowers to the mother of the seaman to express their admiration for his valor. Wood's mother lives on the Island of Saba, also in the Dutch West Indies.

Daily World
Atlanta. Ga.

Vouza [illegible] of the same sterling type [illegible] he armed constabulary village constables—many of them former cannibals—whose record in New Guinea stands so high and where they are still valuably aiding the American and Australian defenders against the invading Japanese. Fealty is their watch-word, and they do not know the meaning of fear or treachery. One of them has been known to march up his file of police unarmed, owing to the order of a white officer who believed in appeasement, to certain death in the hope of supporting that officer against armed savages.

TIED TO TREE JAN 11 1943

Vouza, whom an uninformed London newspaper quaintly describes as "Mister Vouza, a retired police officer," was as different from that conception as was Gunga Din from Col Blimp. He was sent in secret intelligence work behind the Japanese lines. The Japanese caught him and vainly questioned him. They tied him to a tree, questioned him again, and thrust bayonets into his arm and shoulder. Still he would not speak. They bayoneted him in the face and stomach, and left him for dead.

He managed to free himself and to crawl through the jungle, every inch of which he knew, to the marines' lines. His wounds were dressed, and in halting pidgin English, he made his report.

"No white man could have survived such injuries," said an Army surgeon.

JAN 11 194

The daily life of Vouza, even before the war, was like that of all his fellows—the life to which the commandos are being so strenuously trained. He ran bare-footed through the forest and swam rivers His uniform was a khaki shirt of sulu, a white sash, and a Sam Brown belt which held up his waist belt of cartridges. When the British resident commissioner visited the island, Vouza was in his glory, for he was the commissioner's personal bodyguard. At home, in his thatched hut, he taught his young son pidgin English, the Lingua Franca of the islands, in order that the boy might achieve an official position when the time was ripe. With a pay of four shillings a day, Vouza, aged 37, was the Croesus among his fellows.

JAN 11 194

RIGHT HAND MAN

F. N. Ashley, former resident commissioner in the British Solomon Islands now in London, said: "Vouza behaved just as I knew he would. He was my right hand man—a great big fellow like Paul Robeson, but with wooly hair. I had great respect for him. When I visited his area on an inspectional visit after there had been trouble there, he cleverly picked a way through the jungle and told me all about his wife and son."

JAN 11 194

Vouza is evidently just such another as Sgt. Barigi, formerly of the Papuan armed constabulary and right-hand man of the late G. A. W. Monckton, who as resident magistrate helped preserve the Queen's Peace in the early years of the turbulent Papua. He is not unique. The existence of such men gives lie to those who contend that the Britons have failed to win the confidence of the native races, "half devil and half child," who were cannibals yesterday and today wear the scanty but significant uniform of the white man's government.

"B'ham News" B'ham, Ala.

NEGRO DECORATED

JAN 24 1943

One of the first Clarke County service men to be decorated for bravery is a Negro. Last week The Democrat carried a notice of Sgt. Ernest Johnson, of Cunningham, having received the Soldier's Medal for helping his lieutenant rescue an injured British soldier from a building filled with explosives and fumes and in which live mines were still exploding. We didn't know at the time that he is a Negro. but are nonetheless proud of him because of the fact. We are likewise gratified that his act of heroism has been duly recognized and rewarded.—Clarke County Democrat (Grove Hill).

Silver Star For Bravery Is Awarded Brenham. Texas. Hero

Atlanta Daily World
JAN 26 1943
Atlanta, Ga.
JAN 28 1943

ASIATIC THEATER. . . . A Silver Star combat decoration has been awarded to Private Mack B. Anderson, United States Army, of 211 North Austin Street, Breham, Texas, for bravery. Atlanta Daily World

During a recent attack by Japanese Zero fighters on an air field somewhere in India, Private Anderson, while under continous fire from attackers, manned a machine gun until it went out of action, then continued firing with his automatic pistol while several Japanese fighters definitely centered their attack on him. World

The conduct and bravery of the whole Engineer unit of which Private Anderson is a member was warmly praised by both Brigadier General Clayton Bissell, commander of the Air Forces operating in the China-Burmba-India theater, and Brigadier General Caleb V. Hayne, commander of the India Task Force. Atlanta Daily World JAN 26 1943

General Bissell wired Major Donald L. Jarrett, executive officer of the organization: "Reports say the conduct of the Negro troops was maginificent in their return to duty. and the damage to the airdrome was repaired almost immediately after the strafing ended. I desire you and your troops to know the performance of your duty is in line of the best traditions of the Army.

Three others praised were Sergeants Clarence Jackson of Washington, D. C.; Elmer Stephens of Cleveland, Ohio and Ralph Snell of Dothan, Alabama. These men were instrumental in getting the field back into condition after the attack.

47b-1943
Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

Negro Sergeant Cited For Valor

Medal Presented To Arthur Freeman By Gen. Royce

MAR 1 1 1943

TUSKEGEE, March 10.—For heroism displayed in rescuing an eight-year-old child from drowning in Michigan's icy Flint River, Arthur W. Freeman (right), 28-year-old Negro sergeant of the 889th Basic Training Squadron here, received the Soldier's Medal for Valor.

The medal was awarded by Maj. Gen. Ralph Royce, commanding the Army Air Forces Southeast Training Center, who flew here to make the presentation at a ceremony which massed squadrons of Negro enlisted men, aviation cadets and tactical officers.

Sergeant Freeman, at the time of the rescue on Dec. 12, was on leave to attend the funeral of his grandmother at his home, Flint, Mich., and was returning from the funeral when shouts for help called him to the banks of the frozen Flint River and to the rescue of the eight-year-old white child, Wilbur Wheatley.

The citation read here by Lieut. Maurice Scott, adjutant at the presentation, revealed that "the child had disappeared through the ice on which he had been walking about 100 feet from shore.

MAR 1 1 1943

"Attracted by the frantic cries for help by those who had witnessed the accident, Sergeant Freeman, with utter disregard of his personal safety, immediately obtained a rope from a truck parked in the vicinity . . tied the rope around his waist and slid down the hill to the river's edge and onto the ice where the child had entered the water.

"Leaving the other end of the rope in the hands of men standing on safe ice, he plunged into the cold water of the river three times and, with great difficulty, succeeded in bringing the child to the surface. He tied the rope around the child's waist and pushed him from the water onto the ice.

"When those on the bank were unable to pull both Freeman and the young Wheatley to shore, the Negro soldier abandoned the rope and allowed the boy to be pulled to safety first.

"While the child was revived by artificial respiration, Freeman, unnoticed, slipped away to a nearby basement to obtain dry clothes."

MAR 1 1 1943

But Monday, as happy reminder of what he considered a closed incident, Sergeant Freeman walked front and center to be awarded a medal by no less a personage than his commanding general and to hear these words at the conclusion of the citation:

"The heroism displayed by Sergeant Freeman on this occasion reflects great credit upon himself and the military service."

The coveted Soldier's Medal awarded by General Orders under the direction of the President is, with the exception of the Distinguished Service Medal, the highest award that can come to an enlisted man outside of a combat zone.

MAR 1 1 1943

At the close of the ceremony Sergeant Freeman stood in the reviewing stand with General Royce, Col. Frederick V. H. Kimble, commanding officer of the 27th Training Wing; Lieut. Col. Noel F. Parrish, of the Tuskegee Army Flying School; Lieut. Col. John T. Hazard, executive officer; Lieut. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., executive of troops at that station; Capt. John C. Coale, commandant of cadets, and others, as columns of soldiers passed in review.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

Medal To Officer Who Tried To Save Three

JAN 2 3 1943

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz., Jan. 21 — (ANP) — First Lieut. Stanis S. Melendez, medical corps officer attached to the 318th Engineer battalion, was awarded a Soldier's medal recently by the commanding general of the 93rd Infantry division, as a result of his heroic attempt to save the lives of three soldiers who were drowned in the Colorado river while their unit was on maneuvers the first part of December.

He received the Soldier's medal with a citation. Lieutenant Melendez is from Pittsburhg.

One of the four men he tried to rescue saved himself by swimming to safety. The other three men were drowned.

JAN 2 3 1943

After dragging and searching the Colorado river for three weeks, the other three men were found. One was found 70 miles down the river, one 10 miles down the river, and one at the spot where all three men went under the water.

The victims were Pvts. Teeordley Goven, Silas Stevenson and Corp. Amos Rogers, all of whom were members of Company B, 318th Engineer battalion.

JAN 2 3 1943

LEXINGTON MESSMAN GETS MEDAL

FEB 1 3 1943

Pittsburgh Courier

FEB 1 3 1943

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11—The Navy Department this week announced the awarding of the Navy and Marine Corps Medal to Elwin Bell, a 20-year-old messman aboard the ill-fated Carrier Lexington, for "distinguished heroism" during the battle of the Coral Sea.

Bell, though near exhaustion after volunteer service with a fire-fighting and repair crew in an area filled with exploding gasoline vapor and ammunition, completely disregarded his personal safety to enter the most dangerous part of the ship to rescue injured members of the ship's crew who had been trapped below decks.

WINS PROMOTION

FEB 1 3 1943

As a result of this action, Bell was one of five enlisted men in the Lexington's crew who were awarded the Navy and Marine Medal, according to the Navy Department's announcement. He was also promoted from mess attendant, third class, to mess attendant, second class.

A former resident of Jamaica, N. Y., he lived with his aunt, Miss Marie Lofton, at 139-08 114th avenue. An orphan, he attended Jamaica high school for one and a half years, then served in the CCC and entered the Navy on July 18, 1941.

His citation reads:

"For distinguished heroism while serving aboard the U.S.S. Lexington during the battle of the Coral Sea on May 8, 1942. Voluntarily joining a repair party fighting fire in an area frequented by violent explodings of gasoline vapor and ammunition, Bell, though emerging in an exhausted condition, unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken carrier and assisted in removing injured personnel who had been trapped below decks. His courageous initiative and utter disregard for his own safety were in keeping with the highest tradition of the United States Naval Service."

THRILLING ACCOUNT OF HEROIC DEED

Navy Department and OWI officials indicated that Bell was the messman who figured in such a rescue described in a cable sent to this country by Stanley Johnson, a war correspondent aboard the Lexington, shortly after its loss was announced.

Johnson's account follows:

"It was Commander Mort Seligman's task to direct the rescue. I heard him call on the men around him: 'There are three men in frame So-and-So. That's below the fire. To reach them, one of you must go around the fire and through passage X.

"A young colored mess attendant stepped forward. I could not see his face, for he was wearing a smoke helmet. He saluted and quietly said: 'I'll go, sir.'

"'Sure you know how to reach them?' the commander asked.

"'Yes, sir, I know the way.'

"'Do you realize that you might never make it, might never come back?'

"'Yes, sir, I do; but I would like to try just the same.'

"'Right, then. On your way. And good luck to you. We'll be waiting for you.'

"He went; through long passageways and down several flights of steel steps deep into the vast hull. But he was sure of his way. This fine colored lad did come back. And what's more—he brought the three men with him."

The other enlisted men in the carrier's crew who received the Navy and Marine Corps Medal in the battle included: Walter S. Cochrane, phamacist's mate, second class; Douglass Moore, storekeeper, second class; Paul Meuleveld, storekeeper, third class, and Walter Stacey, seaman, first class.

Washington Tribun
Washington, D. C.

FEB 1943

NEGRO FIGHTER AWARDED SILVER STAR—P. F. C. Mack B. Anderson, Brenham, Texas, who has been awarded the Silver Star, fourth highest combat medal for his heroic action during the recent Japanese bombings in the China-Burma-India area. Several instances of exceptional courage were reported. P. F. C. Anderson stood up in the middle of an airfield firing a machine gun while a Japanese Zero fighter repeatedly swooped over him. Eventually his gun jamed and Anderson then raced across the field, leaped into a trench, whipped out his pistol, and continued.

FEB 20 1943

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

SHIPYARD WORKER WINS CERTIFICIATE

MAY 6 1943

Washington, D. C.—A West Coast shipyard worker whose suggestion increased production 400 per cent has become the first Negro war worker to win a Certificate of Individual Production Merit, the War Production Drive Headquarters announced Monday (May 3, 1943.)

MAY 6 1943

The award winner is Charles H. Fletcher, a welder in the Moore Dry Dock Company shipyards at Oakland, Cal. He worked out a device to use in welding insulation pins to deckheads, which increased production 400 per cent.

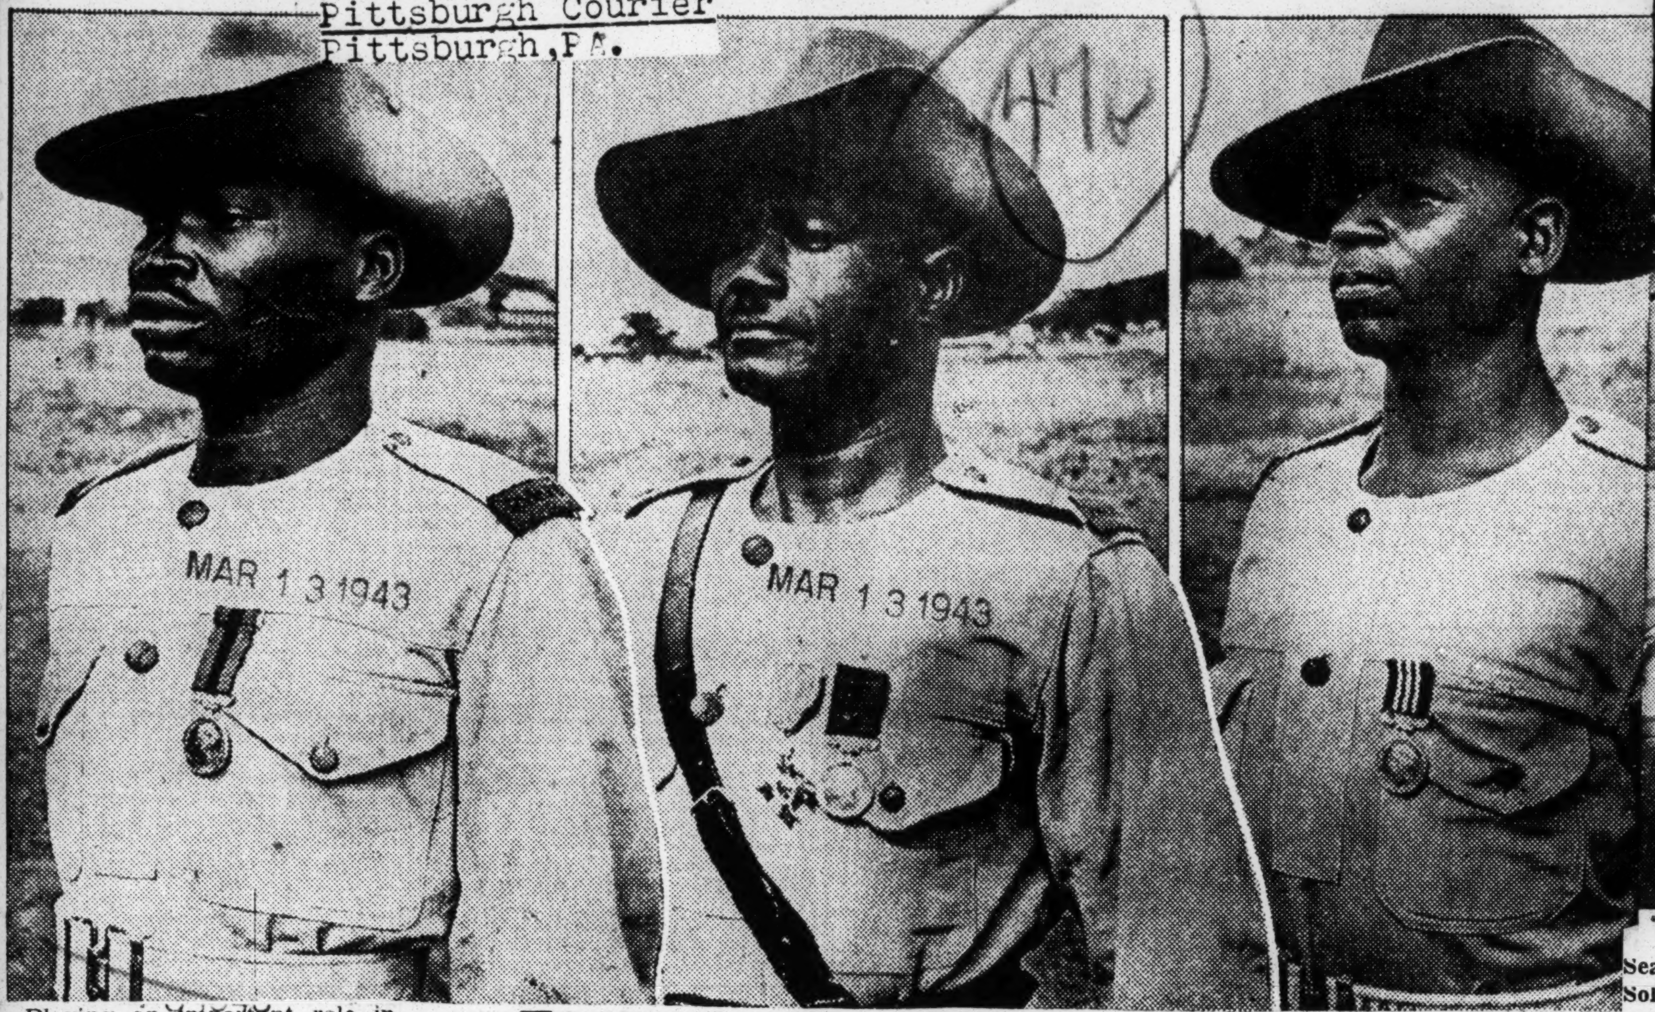
MAY 6 1943

In a simple operation, Fletcher used a welding pin extension made of copper piping in his innovation. The device was recommended by the Board of Individual Awards to merit widest possible use throughout the shipbuilding industry.

MAY 6 1943

HEROES OF ROYAL WEST AFRICAN FRONTIER FORCE RECEIVE DECORATIONS

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.



MAR 1 3 1943

MAR 1 3 1943

Playing an important role in the East African campaign, fighting men of the Royal West African Frontier Force, recently took time out for impressive ceremonies at which some of their gallant warriors were presented with awards for bravery in action.

At the left is Pvt. Bukare Frafra, Gold Coast Regiment, Royal African Frontier Force, who was awarded the Imperial Distinguished Conduct Medal for gallantry in the East African campaign. He was wounded twice.

MAR 1 3 1943

Center photo is of Regimental Sergeant Major Llanyer Degarti of the Gold Coast Regiment. He was the first Gold Coast officer to receive the coveted M.B.E. (Member of the Order of the British Empire.) in this war. Nineteen years in the service he holds other bravery and conduct awards.

MAR 1 3 1943

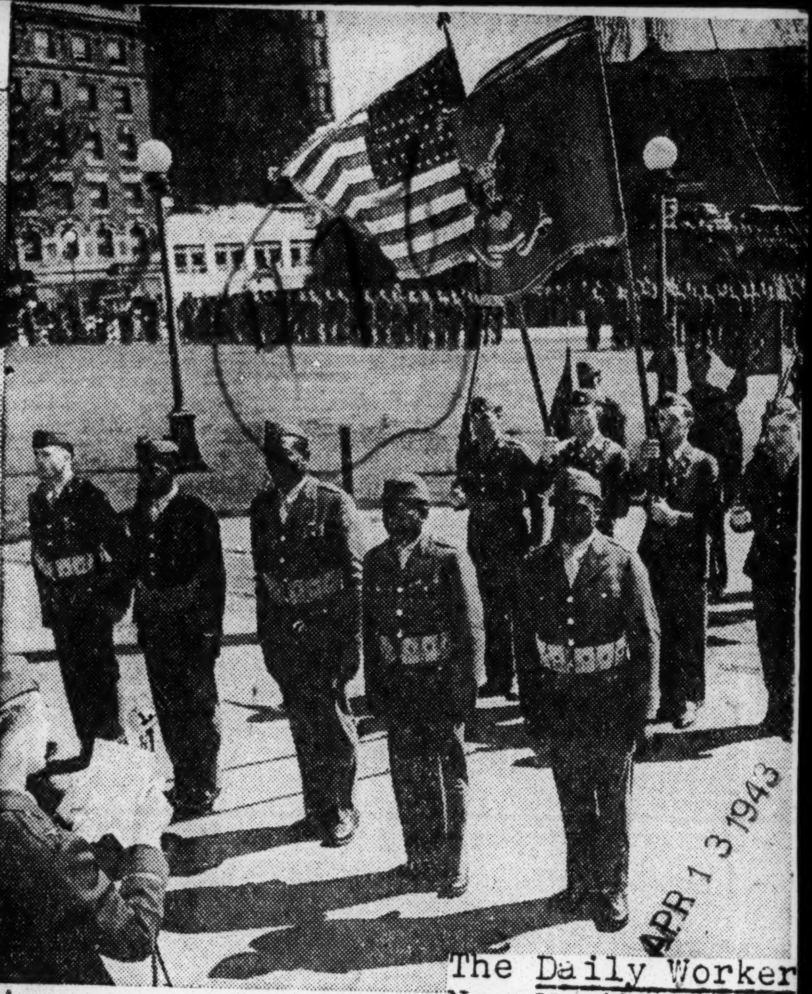
At the right is Pvt. Seidu Issalia of the famed regiment, who was also awarded a medal for bravery under fire in the East African campaign.

First Lady Decorates Heroes

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

APR 1 3 1943

APR 1 3 1943



APR 1 3 1943

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

Pvt. Charles E. Whiteley is shown (top) being decorated on Seattle's court house lawn by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt who pinned the Soldier's Medal on his tunic. The Negro soldier had earned the reward by participating in the heroic rescue of trapped workers in the Frye Packing plant when a Boeing bomber crashed into the building with a death toll of more than thirty. Whiteley and other Negro soldiers who were passing by rushed to the rescue. Below, Col. George F. Heney reads the citation from President Roosevelt to (left to right) Corp. Kenneth J. Cristner, Pvt. Lonnie Ancorum, Pvt. Sam Morris, Pvt. Bruce Singletary and Pvt. Whiteley, who took part in the rescue. All were honored by Mrs. Roosevelt who pinned similar awards on their tunics.

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Mess Attendant Awarded For Bravery in Action

FEB 1 3 1943

FEB 1 3 1943

A 20-year-old mess attendant, who unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken aircraft carrier, U.S.S. Lexington, during the Battle of the Coral Sea, and assisted in removing injured personnel trapped below decks, has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal, the Navy Department announced this week.

The heroic young mess attendant, one of five enlisted men similarly honored from the Lexington's crew, is Elvin Bell, an orphan who formerly resided with his aunt, Miss Marie Lofton, Jamaica, N.Y. He has been promoted from mess attendant, third class, to mess attendant, second class.

FEB 1 3 1943

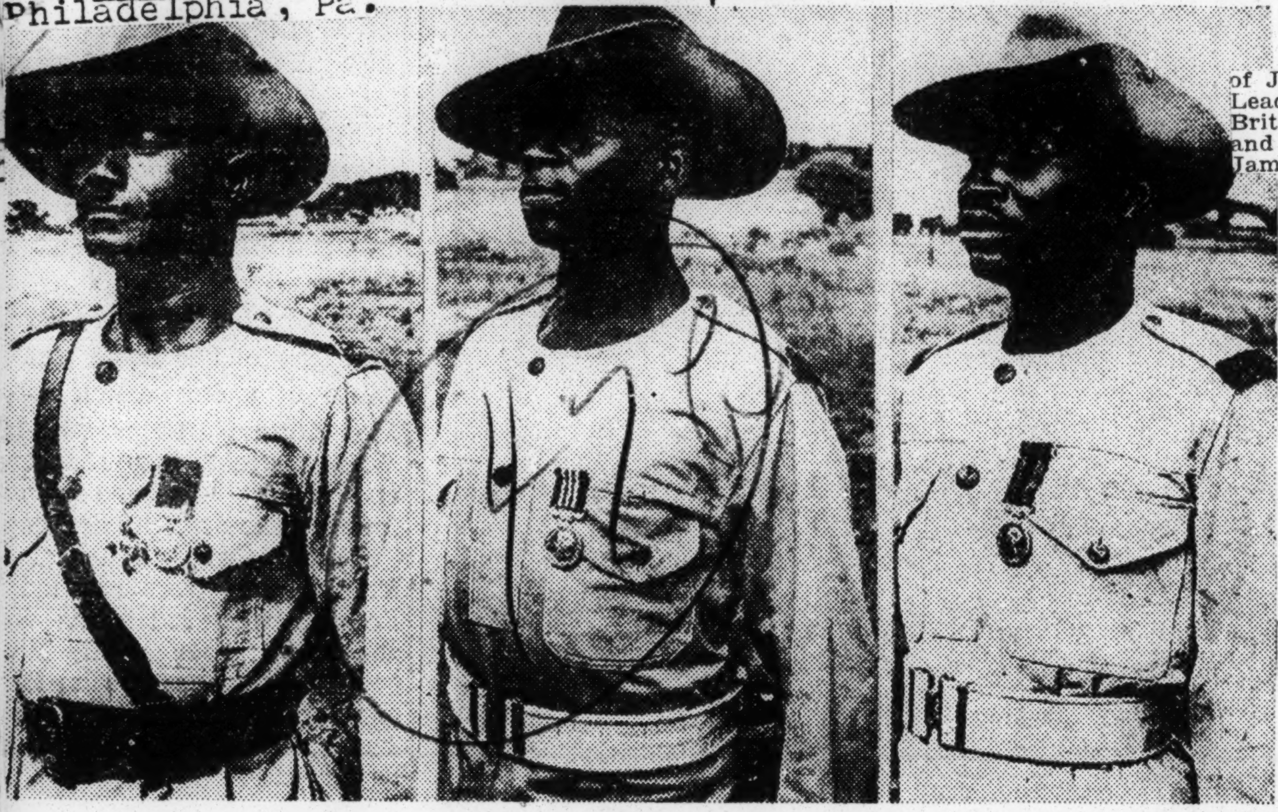
Bell, who attended Jamaica High School for one and a half years and later served in the Civilian Conserv...ion Corps, applied for enlistment in the Navy on July 18, 1941, and reported for active duty immediately.

47b-1943

Bravery Knows No Color

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

March 13, 1943



Left: Regimental Sergeant MAJOR LLANYIER DAGARTI, of the Gold Coast Regiment, Royal West African Frontier Force, was the first Gold Coast Soldier to receive the M.B.E. (Order of the British Empire) in this war, for continuous gallantry and devotion to duty while under fire in the East African campaign. His magnificent example of coolness and courage inspired his battalion. Nineteen years in the service, he holds Good Conduct and Long Service medals. March 13, 1943

Center: Private SEIDU ISSALIA, Gold Coast Regiment, Royal West African Frontier Force, has received the Military Medal for bravery in the East African campaign. While acting as a runner to his platoon commander, he was shot through the groin taking a message to company headquarters. Despite his wounds, he crawled on, delivered the message and crawled back to his platoon commander to inform him that his mission had been accomplished. He was granted an immediate award for this conspicuous act of gallantry.

Right: Private BUKARO FRAFRA, Gold Coast Regiment, Royal African Frontier Force, who has been awarded the Imperial Distinguished Conduct Medal for gallantry in the East African campaign. As a member of a patrol sent out to find the way over a ravine and across a tank trap, he worked his Bran gun forward to within 50 yards of the tank trap, inflicting seven casualties on an enmey party working beyond it. Under very heavy fire, he was wounded, but refused to give in. He stuck to his gun until it was knocked out of action and he was wounded a second time. He is one of the first three African soldiers to receive the Imperial D. C. M. –(British Official Photos from OWI). March 13, 1943

DECORATED BY KING-GEORGE

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By GEORGE PADMORE

LONDON, April 15—(Censored)—Quite a number of colored West Indian airmen serving with the Royal Air Force have already distinguished themselves in action over Germany.

The latest islander to be awarded the "Distinguished Flying Medal" for gallantry is Sergeant W. K. Hynam of Barbados.

The young flyer, whose job is to release the bombs, went to Buckingham palace to receive his medal from King George.

RECENT PROMOTIONS

The following West Indians have been promoted recently: Flight Lieutenant D. D. Barnard of St. Lucia, to Squadron Leader; Pilot Officer Ian Bourne of Trinidad, to Flying Officer. Bourne is now a prisoner of war; Cadet C. W. Branch of Antigua, to 2nd Lieutenant; Leading Aircraftsman D. DeVerteuil of Trinidad, to Pilot Officer; Leading Aircraftsman A. W. Gooding of Barbados to Pilot Officer; Leading Aircraftsman E. L. Grant of British Guiana, to Pilot Officer; Sergeant W. H. Ironside of Trinidad, to Pilot Officer; Cadet S. Knaggs of Trinidad, to Second Lieutenant; Leading Aircraftsman E. A. H. Lawrence of St. Vincent to Pilot Officer; Pilot Officer J. Maura of Bahamas, to Flying Officer; Sgt. J. A. B. Robinson of Jamaica, to Warrant Officer; Cadet P. J. C. Smith of Bermuda, to Second Lieutenant; Cadet R. A. Taylor of Bermuda, to Second Lieutenant; Corporal A. W. Wood of Jamaica for Second Lieutenant; Leading Aircraftsman G. Wood of British Guiana, to Pilot Officer, and Pilot W. A. W. Strachan of Jamaica to Flying Officer.

---

2 Soldiers Decorated in North Africa

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Navy Steward's Gun Crew Gets Credit for Bringing Down Nazi Plane; They're Expert Shoppers

MAR 13 1943

By OLLIE STEWART

War Correspondent of the Afro-American Newspapers with U.S. Troops in Africa

[Copyright. Republication in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE IN NORTH AFRICA, Feb. 16.—Because of wounds received as the result of enemy action, two soldiers of a quartermaster battalion near here have been awarded the Purple Heart.

Both men continued working in a warehouse during an enemy air bombardment until relieved from duty and taken to the hospital. They have now recovered and rejoined their unit.

The first colored soldiers to be decorated here since the opening of the North African campaign, they are Pvt. Russell Coleman of Linden, N.J., and Pcf. James Cornwell of Chester, S.C.

Congratulated by Chaplain

Presentation was made by the battalion commander before the assembled battalion. Chaplain L. M. Durden, only colored officer in the unit, congratulated the recipients on behalf of the hard-working outfit.

The citation reads: "Awarded the Purple Heart for wounds received as result of enemy action on the morning of December 31, 1942."

MAR 13 1943

Others on Duty

Among men likewise on duty during the air raid, but uninjured were Pfc. William S. Thomas, 218 Kater Street, Philadelphia, former AFRO-AMERICAN newsboy, and Pvt. Sidney Alexander, New York, who is proud of a letter he received from Louis Armstrong. Sidney's brother, Danny, a dancer, of the team of Danny and Edith, works with Armstrong's band.

Others include:

Technician Fifth Grade Wilbur Edwards, New York, who pines for letters from Miss Beatrice Anderson, 255 W. 114th Street; Cpl. Charles Hicks, Long Island, who wants word from Miss Beatrice Massey; Staff Sgt. Gid Alston, Norfolk, Va.; Pfc. Harold Turner, New York; Pvt. William McGrew, Chicago;

Cpl. George Greenfield, Brooklyn; Pvt. Charles Parks, New York; Pfc. Waymon Robinson, Stamford, Conn.; Pvt. Richard Cutler, Wilmington, N.C., and Pvt. Robley McFarlane, St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, who has lived many years in New York.

Staged Variety Show

Two days before presentation of the awards, the unit was entertained at a variety show featuring St. Ralph Billingslea, emcee, former singer with Chicago Playboys' Orchestra. Tap dancers were Cpl. Lonnie Howard, New York, whose father, Lionel Howard, now has a band, and Pfc. Chuddy Johnson, Albany, New York, professional dancer before induction.

A novelty trio included Private First Class Johnson, Sgt. Harry F. Jones, Pittsburgh, and Cpl. William Miller of Texas. Staff Sgt. Charles Verra of Boston was soloist.

Navy Stewards Good Shoppers

Three interesting navy men visited me this week. They are Chief Steward Bonney Montgomery, New York, with twenty-four years of service to his credit; First Class Steward William Taylor, 813 Avenue A, Norfolk, Va., and First Class Steward Ralph C. Cooper, 2025 Pine Street, Portsmouth, Va.

One of their jobs is buying of food for officers of their ships and on shopping excursion with them I was amazed at the manner in which they selected and bargained for the best foods in markets where no English is spoken. But they speak several languages as result of their travels all over the world.

Credited with One Plane

In air raids they take battle stations at anti-aircraft guns with the rest of ship's crew. Taylor's gun crew is credited with shooting at least one German plane out of the sky. MAR 13 1943

Other seamen met recently are: James Walker, Louisville, Ky.; Archie L. Rainey, former AFRO-AMERICAN newsboy, St. Petersburg, Fla.; John H. Stewart, Augusta, Ga.; Edward and R. L. Franklin, McCormick, S.C.; H. C. Brankley, Jackson, Tenn.;

Richard Bell, Orange, N.J.; Theodore N. Brown, Savannah, Ga.; Johnny Carter, Houston, Texas; Jesse Bowie and Wilbert Hankton, Birmingham; Albert Redden, Columbia, S.C.; James Buford, and Joseph Carson, Bowling Green, Ky.

The Worker
New York, N. Y.

Four Negro Soldiers Get High Award

JUN 28 1943

Four Negro Infantrymen have been awarded the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious services at Guadalcanal, March 27, 1943, during a bombing attack by enemy planes.

The men who received the decorations are Pfc. Ben W. Pettis, Senatobia, Miss., Pvt. Jessie Harris, Tuskegee, Ala., Pvt. Verne O. Neal, Ruleville, Miss., and Pvt. Henry Smith, Jr., Good Pine, La.

The citation stated that the four soldiers left the comparative safety afforded by a slit trench and advanced some 250 yards over open terrain, exposed to bombing from an enemy air raid, in order to assist in evacuating casualties. This undertaking was accomplished although enemy action continued causing impenetrable dust and confusion prevailed. Exceptional coolness and efficiency during exposure to danger were displayed while evacuating the wounded.

Awarded Silver Star

Jan 30, 1943

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa

Private First Class MACK B. ANDERSON, Engineers, of 211 North Austin street, Brenham, Texas, who manned a machine gun against Japanese planes attacking an airfield in the Asiatic war theatre. His gun was in open terrain since the firing pit had not been completed. Under continuous fire from the attacking airplanes, he shot his gun in return until it went out of action, then he continued firing with his automatic pistol while several Japanese fighters definitely centered their attack on him. He was awarded the Silver Star.—(U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo).

Jan 30, 1943

1-30-43

Receives Soldier's Medal For His Heroism

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

WINS SOLDIER'S MEDAL—Private James H. Burnam, 325 West Hickman Street, Winchester, Kentucky, is shown receiving soldier's medal from his commanding officer, Colonel Ewart G. Plank, of Washington, D. C., at ceremonies conducted in England.

Messman Wins Navy Medal for Heroism

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

FEB 13 1943

WASHINGTON

Elvin Bell, 20-year-old mess attendant, has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal for heroism displayed during the Coral Sea Battle, the Navy Department announced this week.

Bell, who was one of the five enlisted men on the U.S.S. Lexington similarly honored, unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken aircraft carrier and assisted in removing injured personnel trapped below decks.

FEB 13 1943

Home in Jamaica

Before enlisting in the navy on July 18, 1941, Bell, an orphan resided with his aunt, Miss Marie Lofton, at 139-08 114th Avenue, Jamaica, N.Y. His citation reads:

"For distinguished heroism while serving aboard the U.S.S. Lexington during the battle of the Coral Sea on May 8, 1942.

"Voluntarily joining a repair party fighting fire in an area frequented by violent explodings of gasoline vapor and ammunition, Bell, although emerging in an exhausted condition unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken carrier and assisted in removing injured personnel who had been trapped below decks.

FEB 13 1943

Reporter Witnessed Rescue

"His courageous initiative and utter disregard for his own safety were in keeping with the highest tradition of the United States Naval Service."

An eyewitness account of Bell's feat was cabled to this country by Stanley Johnston, a war correspondent aboard the stricken carrier, soon after the loss of the U.S.S. Lexington was announced.

The other men receiving awards were white.

FEB 13 1943

Coral Sea Hero

FEB 13 1943

ELVIN BELL,

20-year-old mess attendant of Jamacia, N.Y., who has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal for distinguished heroism during the battle of the Coral Sea on May 8, 1942. According to his citation, Bell unhesitating entered the most dangerous section of the stricken aircraft carrier USS Lexington and assisted in removing injured personnel trapped below decks.

Another Messman Gets Navy Medal

Informer

Feb 13, 1943

A 20-year-old Negro mess attendant, who unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken aircraft carrier, U. S. S. Lexington, during the Battle of the Coral Sea, and assisted in removing injured personnel trapped below decks, has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal, the Navy Department announced this week.

The heroic young mess attendant, one of five enlisted men similarly honored form the Lexington's crew, is Elvin Bell, an orphan who formerly resided with his aunt, Miss Marie Lofton, at 139-08 114th Avenue, Jamaica, N. Y. He has been promoted from mess attendant, third class, to mess attendant, second class.

Feb. 13, 1943

Enlisted In '41

Bell, who attended Jamaica High School for one and a half years and later served in the Civilian Conservation Corps, applied for enlistment in the Navy on July 18, 1941, and reported for active duty immediately.

Informer

His citation reads:

"For distinguished heroism while serving aboard the U. S. S. Lexington during the battle of the Coral Sea on May 8, 1942. Voluntarily joining a repair party fighting fire in an area frequented by violent explodings of gasoline vapor and ammunition, Bell, although emerging in an exhausted condition unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken carrier and assisted in removing injured personnel who had been trapped below decks. His courageous initiative and utter disregard for his own safety were in keeping with the highest tradition of the United States Naval Service."

An eyewitness account of such a rescue was cabled to this country by Stanley Johnston, a war correspondent aboard the stricken carrier, soon after the loss of the U. S. S. Lexington was announced. Johnson's account declared:

"It was Commander Mort Seligman's task to direct the rescue. I heard him call on the men around him: 'There are three men in frame So-and-So. That's below the fire. To reach them, one of you must go around the fire and through passage X.'

"A young colored mess attendant stepped forward. I could not see his face for he was wearing a smoke helmet. He saluted and quietly said: 'I'll go, Sir.'

I Know The Way

"'Sure you know how to reach them?' the Commander asked.

"'Yes, Sir. I know the way.'

"'Do you realize that you might never make it, might never come back?'

"'Yes, Sir. I do. But I would like to try just the same.'

Texas

"Right then. On your way. And good luck to you. We'll be waiting for you.'

Feb. 13, 1943

"He went. Through long passageways and down several flights of steel steps deep into the vast hull. But he was sure of his way. This fine colored lad did come back what's more—he brought the three men with him."

Other enlisted men receiving the Navy and Marine Corps Medal for heroic action aboard the U. S. S. Lexington included Walter S. Cochrane, pharmacist's mate, (2 c); Douglass Moore, storekeeper, (2 c), Paul Meuleveld, store keeper (3 c) and Walter L. Stacy, seaman (1 c).

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

TUSKEGEE MAN IS CITED FOR BRAVERY

WASHINGTON, June 3—(AP)—The Army's Legion of Merit has been awarded to four Negro enlisted men for exceptionally meritorious services on Guadalcanal, Secretary Stimson announced Thursday. They were:

Pfc. Ben W. Pettis, Senatobia Miss.; Pvt. Jessie Harris, Tuskegee, Ala.; Pvt. Verna C. Neal, Ruleville, Miss., and Pvt. Henry Smith, Jr., of Good Pine, La.

JUN 4 1943

The identical citations for the four infantry men read:

"For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service on March 27, 1934, at Guadalcanal, by leaving the comparative safety afforded by a slit trench and advancing some 250 yards over open terrain, exposed to bombing from an enemy airplane in order to assist in evacuating casualties."

GUADALCANAL HEROES GET MERIT AWARDS

Pittsburgh, Pa
Courier

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 10—Calling especial attention at his press conference to the award of the Legion of Merit to four Negro enlisted men for exceptionally meritorious service at Guadalcanal in the Pacific theatre of war, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson stated last week that these awards "served to show that our Negro troops are fighting in combat in one of the most difficult of our fighting terrains."

JUN 1943

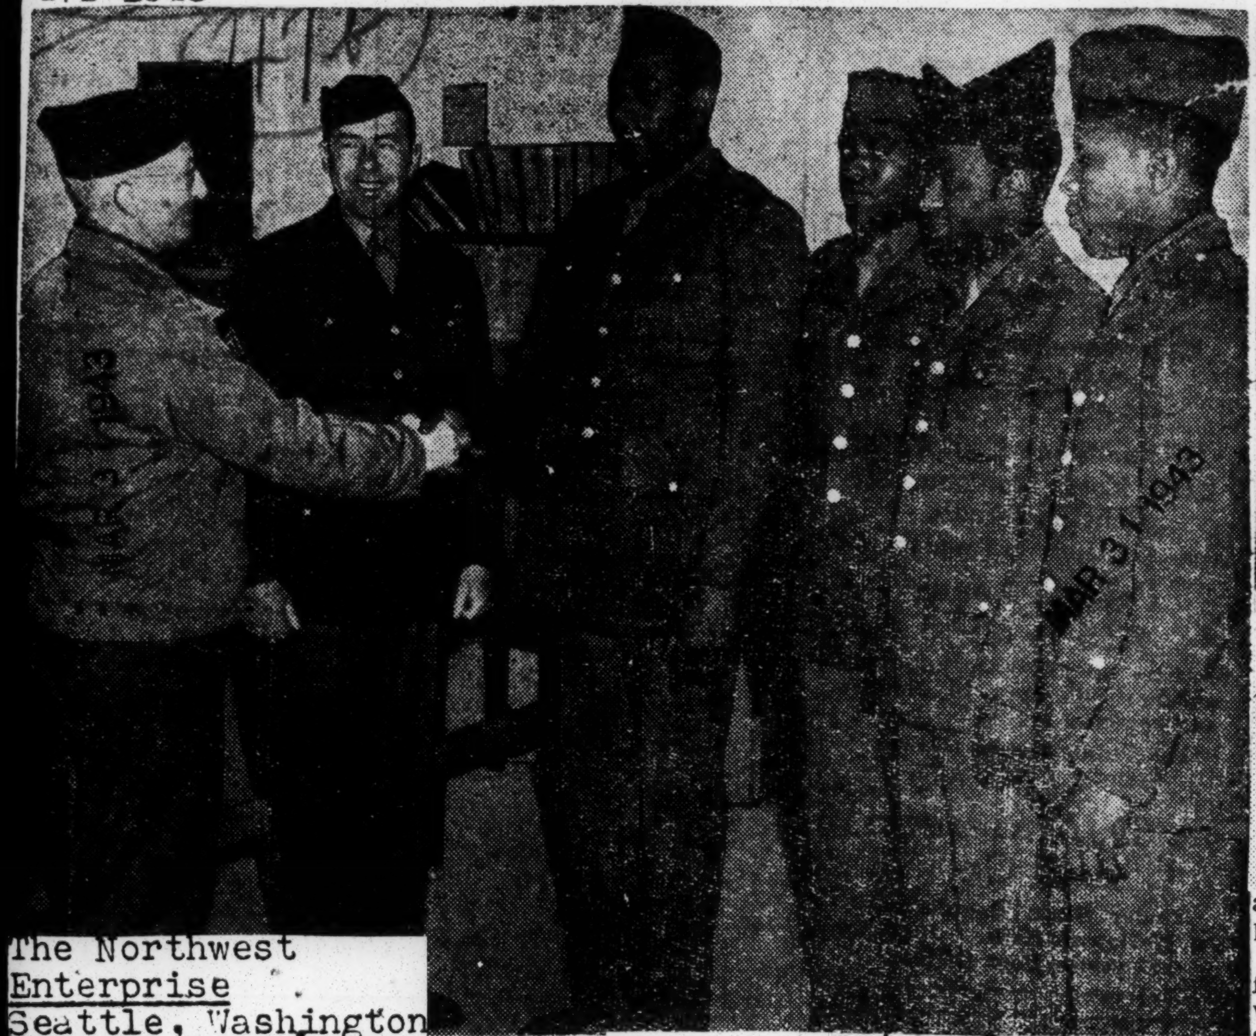
The men who received the awards said Secretary Stimson were Pfc. Ben W. Pettis, infantry, of Sonatobia, Miss.; Pvt. Jess Harris, infantry of Tuskegee, Alabama; Pvt. Verna C. Neal, infantry of Ruleville, Miss. and Pvt. Henry Smith Jr., infantry of Good Pine, Louisiana.

CITATION

The citation describing the heroic action of these Negro soldiers read:

"For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services on March 27, 1943 at Guadalcanal, by leaving the comparative safety afforded by a slit trench and advancing some 250 yards over open terrain, exposed to bombing from an enemy air raid, in order to assist in evacuating casualties. This undertaking was accomplished, although enemy action continued, causing impenetrable dust, and confusion prevailed. Exceptional coolness and efficiency during exposure to danger were displayed while evacuating the wounded."

47b-1943



MAR 3 1 1943

The Northwest Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

HEROISM RECOGNIZED—Col. C. M. S. Skene congratulating five soldiers who are to reeciva the Soldier's Medal for saving ten lives in the Frye plant disaster. The soldiers, from left to right, are Corporal Kenneth J. Cristner and Privates Sam Morris, Charles E. Whiteley, Bruce Singletary and Lonnie Ancrum.

—(Picture by Post-Intelligencer Staff Photographer.)

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

Texan Lad Awarded Silver Star For Heroism During Japanese Zero Attack

FEB 6 1943

ASIATIC THEATER. — A Silver Star combat decoration has been awarded to Private Mack B. Anderson, United States Army, of 211 North Austin street, Brenham, Texas, for bravery.

During a recent attack by Japanese Zero fighters on an airfield somewhere in India, Private Anderson, while under continuous fire from the attackers, manned a machine gun until it went out of action, then continued firing with his automa ic pistol while several Japanese fighters definitely centered their attack on him.

The conduct and bravery of the whole Engineer unit of which Private Anderson is a member, was warmly praised by both Brigadier General Clayton Bissell, commander of the Air Forces operating in the China-Burma-India theater, and Brigadier General Caleb V. Haynes, commander of the India Task Force.

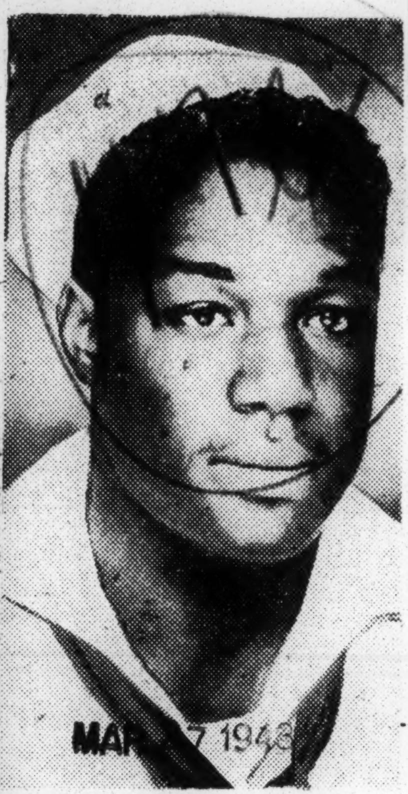
FEB 6 1943

General Bissell wired Major Donald L. Jarrett, executive officer of the organization: "Reports say the conduct of the Negro troops was magnificent in their return to duty, and the damage to the airdrome was repaired almost immediately after the strafing ended. I desire you and your troops to know the performance of your duty is in line of the best traditions of the Army."

Three others praised were Sergeants Clarence T. Jackson of Washington, D. C.; Elmer Stephens of Cleveland, Ohio, and Ralph Snell of Dotham, Alabama. These men were instrumental in getting the field back into condition after the attack.

FEB 6 1943

Downed 4



MAR 27 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

DORIE MILLER,

who was awarded the Navy Cross for heroism at Pearl Harbor when he manned a machine gun on the battleship Arizona after members of the gun crew had been put out of action, is officially credited by the Navy Department this week with having brought down four Jap planes.

In addition, "Miller swam to shore and helped in a flying field operation," the department reveals. This is the first official account which credits Miller with actually bringing down planes.

MAR 27 1943

All previous accounts have referred only to his carrying his wounded captain to a place of safety and his manning the gun.

For this heroism, Miller received only promotion from second class to first class mess attendant and an increase in pay from $60 to $66 a month.

Medal to Kansas Citian

The Call
Kansas City Mo

Elbert Phillips One of Nine to Qualify at Iowa

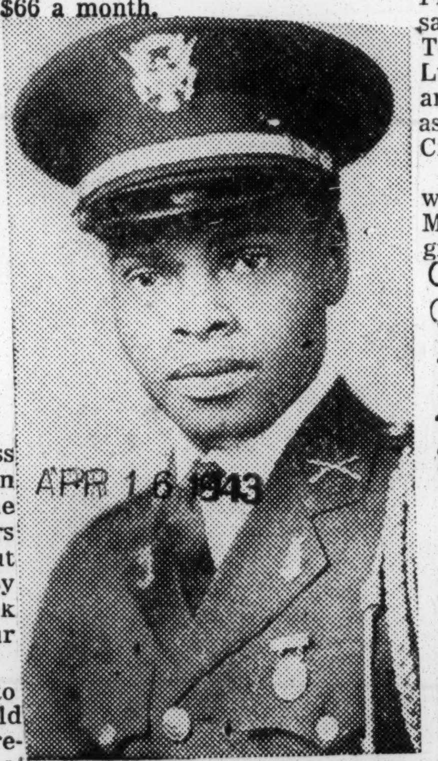
Elbert Phillips Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Phillips Sr., 411 W. 43rd St., has recently been admitted to the "Pershing Rifles," at the University of Iowa, where he is a freshman. Elbert was the first Negro ever to become a member, second in the Big Ten since the organization first began in 1814.

APR 1 6 1943

this organization but he won the Expert Manual of Arms Medal in the open competition among freshmen and sophomore R. O. T. C. cadets. His recommendation has been sent in for a commission as sergeant but as yet no official notice has been posted.

Mrs. Phillips, his mother, is the former Miss Trohelious Oliphant of Waxahachie, Texas, and is a product of Wiley college, Marshall, Texas. She has been in Kansas City for 18 years. Mrs. Phillips is president of the Kansas City Council of Parents and Teachers, a member of the St. Luke A. M. E. church, Westport and has been employed one year as a machine operator at the Lake City ordnance plant.

She has another son, Basil, 12, who is a student at Penn school. Mrs. Ollie Oliver is Elbert's grandmother.



APR 1 6 1943

ELBERT PHILLIPS JR.

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

Farmer Who Saved Army Flyers Gets Citation Award

MAY 1 6 1943

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 13.—Robert Clayton Moss, 25-year-old farmer, who pulled two white cadets from a flaming plane at the risk of his own life, has been cited for heroism by the army and given a cash award of more than $100.

MAY 1 6 1943

The cadets were saved from the burning ship by Moss when it crashed into flames near Matthews, Ga. The cadets were from the Georgia Aero Tech school, and were listed as Paul Hite and John Francis Hogan.

In his citation of Moss Lt.-Col. Henry C. Huglin, school commandant, declared: "By your prompt and fearless actions in the face of possible serious gasoline explosion, you saved both cadets from serious injury and probably saved their lives. . . . On behalf of the United States army, I want to thank you for your splendid action and commend you for your heroism and courage."

MAY 1 6 1943

Augusta residents raised a fund of $137 for Moss and in addition students at the school presented him with an unannounced sum.

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
June 4, 1943

TUSKEGEE MAN IS CITED FOR BRAVERY

WASHINGTON, June 3—(AP)—The Army's Legion of Merit has been awarded to four Negro enlisted men for exceptionally meritorious services on Guadalcanal, Secretary Stimson announced Thursday. They were:

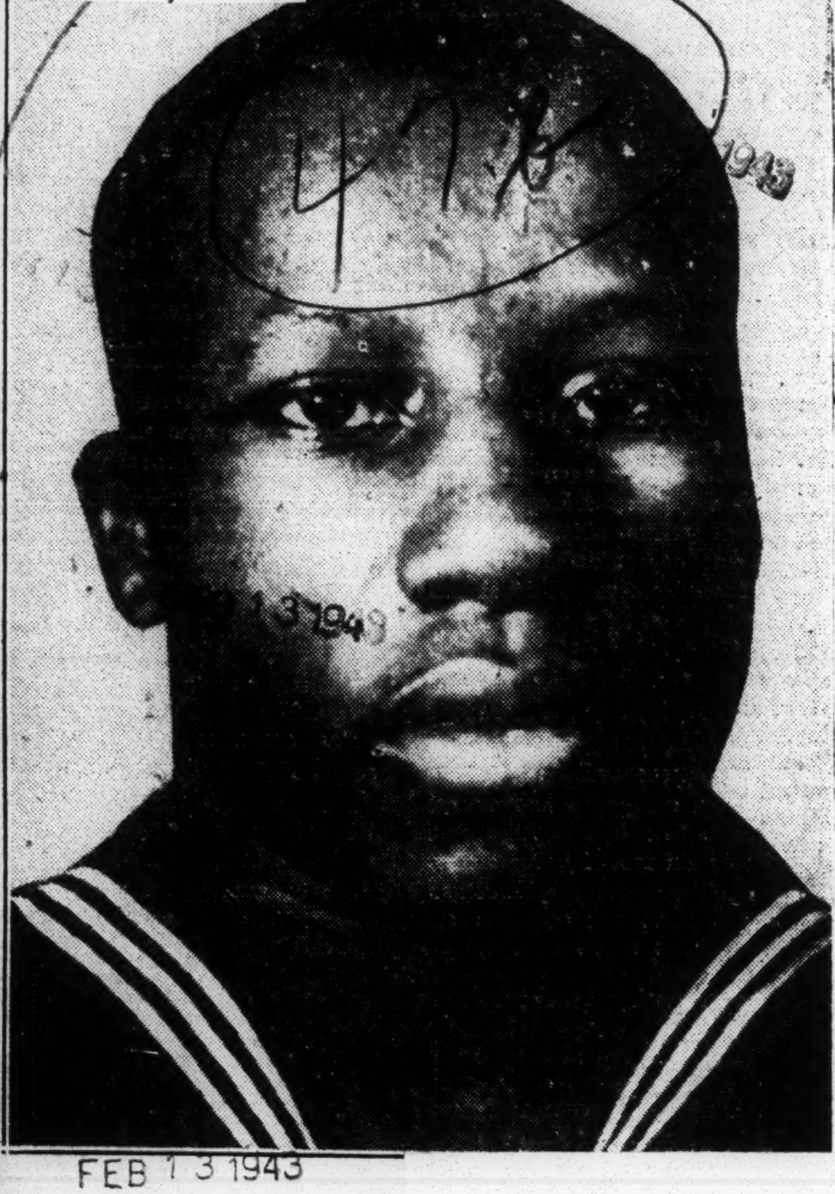
Pfc. Ben W. Pettis, Senatobia, Miss.; Pvt. Jessie Harris, Tuskegee, Ala.; Pvt. Verna C. Neal, Buleville, Miss., and Pvt. Henry Smith, Jr., of Good Pine, La.

The identical citations for the four infantry men read:

"For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service on March 27, 1934, at Guadalcanal, by leaving the comparative safety afforded by a slit trench and advancing some 250 yards over open terrain, exposed to bombing from an enemy airplane in order to assist in evacuating casualties."

Awarded The Navy And Marine Corps Medal

New York Age
New York, N. Y.



FEB 1 3 1943

Heroic Elvin Bell, 20-year-old Negro mess attendant, of Jamaica, L. I., who has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal, for his heroism aboard the stricken aircraft carrier, U. S. S. Lexington, during the Battle of the Coral Sea.

20-Year-Old Negro Mess Attendant Awarded Navy And Marine Corps Medal For Heroism

FEB 1 3 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A 20-year old Negro mess attendant, who unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken aircraft carrier, U. S. S. Lexington, during the Battle of the Coral Sea, and assisted in removing injured personnel trapped below decks, has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal, the Navy Department announced this week.

The heroic young mess attendant, one of five enlisted men similarly honored from the Lexington's crew, is Elvin Bell, an orphan who formerly resided with his aunt, Miss Marie Lofton, at 139-08 114th Avenue, Jamaica, N. Y. He has been promoted from mess attendant, third class, to mess attendant, second lcass.

Bell, who attended Jamaica High School for one and a half years and later served in the Civilian Conservation Corps, applied for enlistment in the Navy on July 18, 1941, and reported for active duty immediately.

His citation reads:

"For distinguished heroism while serving aboard the U. S. S. Lexington during the battle of the Coral Sea on May 8, 1942. Voluntarily joining a repair party fighting fire in an area frequented by violent explodings of gasoline vapor and ammunition, Bell, although emerging in an exhausted condition unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken carrier and assisted in removing injured personnel who had been trapped below decks. His courageous initiative and utter disregard for his own safety were in keeping with the highest tradition of the United States Naval Service."

An eyewitness account of such a rescue was cabled to this country by Stanley Johnson, a war correspondent aboard the stricken carrier, soon after the loss of the U. S. S. Lexington was announced. Johnson's account declared:

"It was Commander Mort Seligman's task to direct the rescue. I heard him call on the men around him: 'There are three men in frame So-and-So—. That's below the fire. To reach them, one of you must go around the fire and through passage X.'

"A young colored mess attendant stepped forward. I could not see his face for he was wearing a smoke helmet. He saluted and quietly said: 'I'll go, Sir.'

"'Sure you know how to reach them?' the Commander asked.

"'Yes, Sir. I know the way.'

"'Do you realize that you might never make it, might never come back?'

"'Yes, Sir. I do. But I would like to try just the same.'

"Right then.' On your way. And good luck to you. We'll be waiting for you.'

"He went. Through long passageways and down several flights of steel steps deep into the vast hull. But he was sure of his way. This fine colored lad did come back. And what's more — he brought the three men with him."

Other enlisted men receiving the Navy and Marine Corps Medal for heroic action aboard the U. S. S. Lexington included Walter S. Cochrane, pharmacist's mate, (2|c); Douglass Moore, storekeeper, (2|c), Paul Meuleveld, storekeeper (3|c) and Walter L. Stacy, seaman (1|c).

Army Heroes Are Decorated

Daily World.
Atlanta, Georgia

MAR 1 4 1943

CAMP CAMBELL, Ky.—(SNS)—General Eberle is shown planning the Soldier's Medal on Lt. Murray G. Gordon, Edgewood, Rhode Island, while Pfc. Cleo T. Coleman of Fitzgerald, Ga., awaits his decoration for heroism displayed when both jumped into a stream and rescued a soldier from drowning.

News
Birmingham, Ala

Negro Farmer Given Citation For Heroism

MAY 4 - 1943

AUGUSTA, Ga.—(AP)—A 25-year-old Negro farmer who pulled two cadets from a flaming plane at the risk of his own life has been cited for heroism by the Army and given a cash award of more than $100.

The cadets were saved from the burning ship by Robert Clayton Moss when it crashed in flames April 9 on a farm near Matthews, Ga. The cadets were from the Georgia Aero Tech School, and were listed as Paul Hite and John Frances Hogan.

Lt. Col. Henry C. Huglin, school commandant, in his citation of the Negro, declared "By your prompt and fearless actions in the face of a possible serious gasoline explosion you saved both cadets from serious injury and probably saved their lives. . . . On behalf of the United States Army I want to thank you for your splendid action and commend you for your heroism and courage."

Local residents raised a fund of $137 for Moss and in addition students of the school presented him with an unannounced sum.

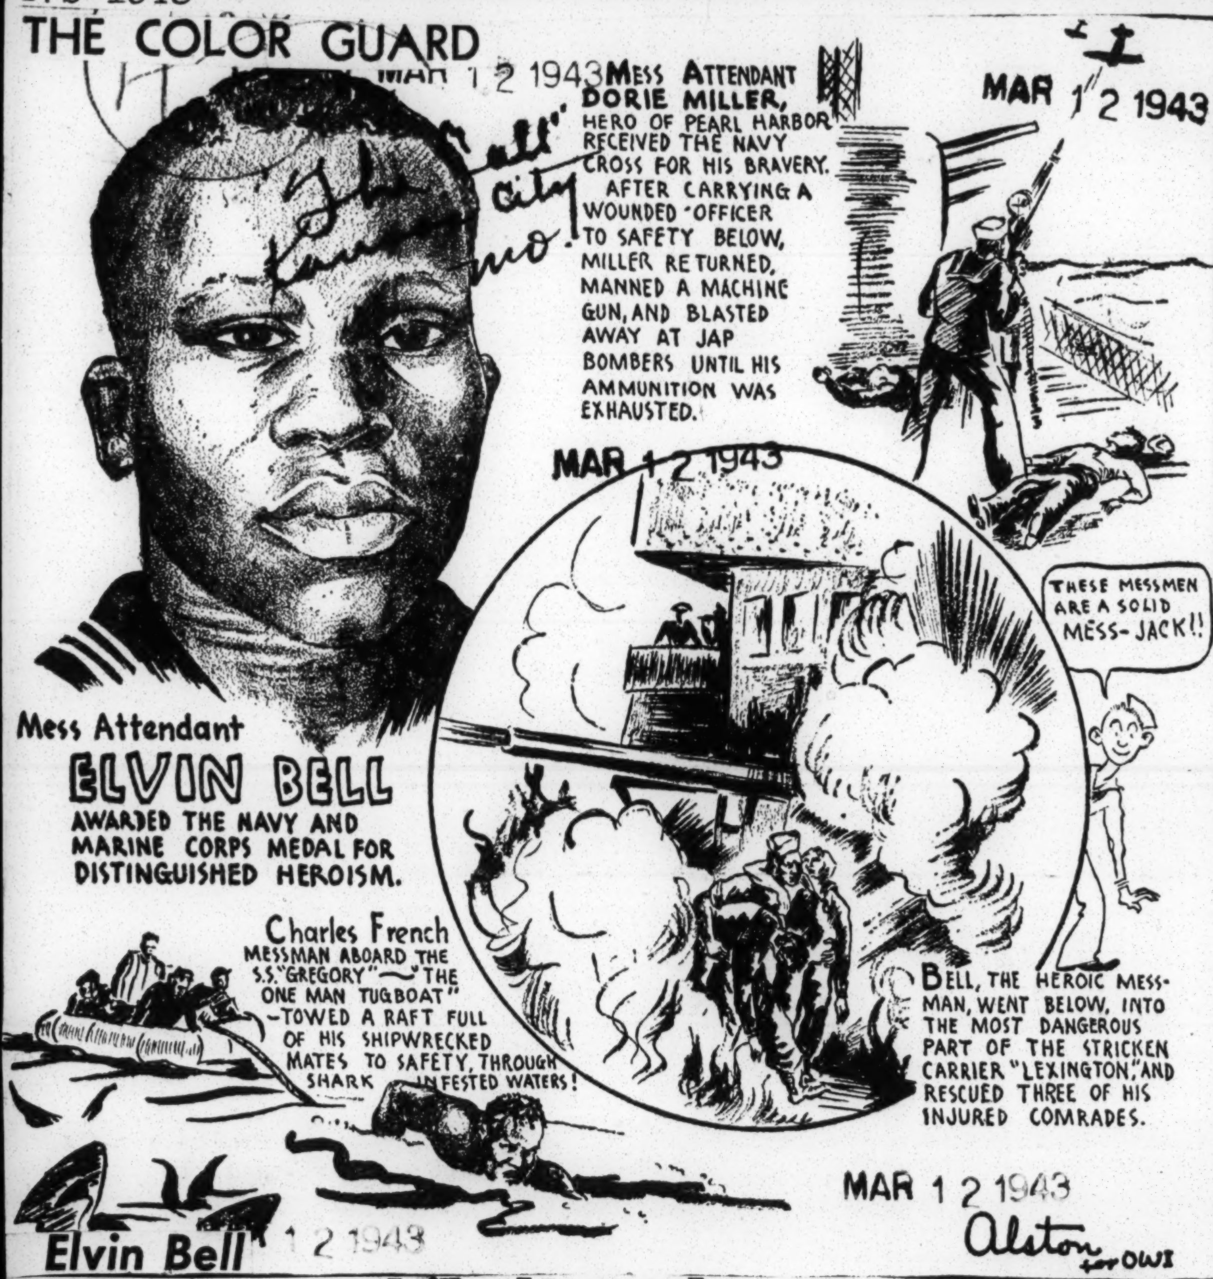
Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

Negro Soldier Gets Medal for Saving Drowning Pal

JUN 9 1943

LONDON, June 9 [Wednesday]—(AP).—The soldier's medal has been awarded to Pvt. William R. Preston of 438 Frederick street, Detroit, Mich., member of a Negro unit, the headquarters of the European theater of operations of the United States army announced today. Preston, the citation said, plunged into the sea, tied himself to a floundering soldier and kept him afloat until those on shore rescued both.

47b-1943



THE COLOR GUARD
The Call Kansas City Mo.
MESS ATTENDANT DORIE MILLER, HERO OF PEARL HARBOR RECEIVED THE NAVY CROSS FOR HIS BRAVERY. AFTER CARRYING A WOUNDED OFFICER TO SAFETY BELOW, MILLER RETURNED, MANNED A MACHINE GUN, AND BLASTED AWAY AT JAP BOMBERS UNTIL HIS AMMUNITION WAS EXHAUSTED.
Mess Attendant ELVIN BELL AWARDED THE NAVY AND MARINE CORPS MEDAL FOR DISTINGUISHED HEROISM.
THESE MESSMEN ARE A SOLID MESS-JACK!!
Charles French MESSMAN ABOARD THE S.S."GREGORY" — "THE ONE MAN TUGBOAT" — TOWED A RAFT FULL OF HIS SHIPWRECKED MATES TO SAFETY, THROUGH SHARK INFESTED WATERS!
BELL, THE HEROIC MESSMAN, WENT BELOW, INTO THE MOST DANGEROUS PART OF THE STRICKEN CARRIER "LEXINGTON," AND RESCUED THREE OF HIS INJURED COMRADES.
Alston for OWI
Elvin Bell
MAR 12 1943

Officer and Enlisted Man Save a Drowning Camp Campbell Soldier

Kansas City Call

Pfc. Cleo T. Coleman Swam to Rescue Of Soldier Who Nearly Drowned When His Jeep Overturned Into Red River

Kansas City, Mo.

CAMP CAMPBELL, Ky. — (Spl.) — Soldier's Medals were awarded an officer and an enlisted man in a formal ceremony here last Wednesday afternoon.

Lt. Murray G. Cordin and Pfc. Cleo T. Coleman, both of the 365th Engineer General Service Regiment received the citations before the entire regiment. The troops were massed in formation on the Second Army parade grounds at the post.

Brig. Gen. George L. Elberle, assistant commanding general of the 98th Division presented the medals in the name of the President of the United States and of Lt. Gen. Ben Lear, commanding general of the second army.

Lt. Col. Frank A. Pettit, commanding officer of the 365th Engineers, accompanied the general on the formal inspection of troops which preceded the presentation. It was through his efforts that the men received the awards.

After the troops had passed in review before the officers and the decorated men, General Eberle left by car for his headquarters at Camp Breckinridge.

The citation reads, "For heroism displayed in rescuing a soldier from drowning in a stream near Camp Campbell, Ky., on December 28, 1942."

"The heroism displayed by Lt Cordin and by Pfc. Coleman reflects great credit upon them selves and the military service," the citation coments.

Prompting the awards was the rescue of Pvt. William D. Jackson, 40th signal construction battalion, who was nearly drowned when his jeep overturned into the swirling waters of the Red River near Camp Campbell.

Pfc. Coleman, who was standing on the bank, immediately jumped in and swam to the entirely submerged vehicle. Pvt. Jackson could not swim and was floundering helplessly in the middle of the stream until the rescuer reached him.

At the same time Lt. Cordin had jumped into the water from upstream and had swum quite a distance to help. The bank was too steep and high to permit crawling out, and the rescuers had to cling to overhanging branches until a boat arrived to pick them up.

Except for the ducking, no one was injured. The jeep remained completely covered by water for almost another day before it could be removed.

Both men were fully clothed when they made the rescue. Pfc. Coleman had to dive several times before finally bringing Jackson to the surface, the citation remarks.

Lt. Cordin is originally from Edgewood R. I., but now makes his home with his mother in Philadelphia.

Pfc. Coleman is from Fitzgerald. Ga. Pvt. Jackson's home is at 1103 Laurel Street, Texarkana Ark.

BEAUFORT NEGRO GETS NAVY CROSS

Augusta, Ga. Herald
June 12, 1943

WASHINGTON, June 12—(AP)—President Roosevelt has awarded the Navy Cross to William Pinckney, Negro cook, third class, for his extraordinary heroism aboard the Aircraft Carrier Enterprise during the battle of the Santa Cruse islands last October.

Pinckney, 28, is the son of Renty Pinckney, of Beaufort, S. C., (no street address given).

His citation said that Pinckney was working in the ammunition handling room when a heavy bomb struck, killing four of his five companions and knocking him unconscious. When Pinckney regained consciousness and started to escape he found a shipmate also trying to get out. The wounded man fell unconscious, however, and Pinckney "unmindful of his own danger," the Navy said, carried his comrade to safety.

Commends Three Negro Soldiers for Their "Courageous Action"

Augusta Ga. Her
May 5, 1943

Three Negro soldiers of Daniel Field have been commended by Col. Cornelius E. O'Connor, commanding officer of the airbase, for their courageous action "beyond the call of duty" in attempting to rescue the members of a bomber crew trapped in their flaming plane following a crash recently.

The men commended are Cpls. Melvin Cook and Charles L. Craig, of the 7th Aviation Squadron, and Pvt. John D. Hilson, of the 1954th Ordnance Company.

At a formal retreat parade last week, the three were called to the front of all Daniel Field troops massed in formation, and the letters of commendation read. The commendations become part of the soldiers' individual records.

The crash, in which the three men braved flames and disregarded "imminent danger of exploding ammunition and fuel tanks," occurred on April 13, about a mile south of Daniel Field. The seven members of the crew were injured fatally.

In his commendation of Corporal Craig, who was first of the three to arrive on the scene, Colonel O'Connor said: "The complete disregard of your own personal safety in approaching the airplane to assist an injured crew member to safety, even though you realized that there was imminent danger of explosion and had also been burned about your hand, reflects great credit upon you, the Army and the Army Air Corps of which you are a member."

Of Corporal Cook, who was at the scene seconds after Craig Colonel O'Connor said: "Regardless of the fact that the accident proved fatal to the aircraft's entire crew, you displayed unusual initiative in proceeding to the other side of the burning aircraft in order to locate trapped crew members and direct rescue squads to their location . . . Your alertness and prompt action . . . is commendable."

Hilton was cited for his action in moving up to the flaming plane and with rope and grappling hook, extricating several of the crew. In the citation to Hilton, Colonel O'Connor stated "You demonstrated outstanding courage in removing the bodies of five members of the crew from the burning wreckage. Your conduct is all the more meritorious when the fact is considered that men trained to work in that type of danger were not able to approach the flames to extricate these bodies. Your performance at this disaster was far above and beyond the call of duty and clearly demonstrates a spirit of outstanding self-sacrifice and courage."

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Negro Soldier Honored For Saving Comrade

London, June 9 (Wednesday) (AP)—The Soldier's Medal has been awarded to Pvt. William R. Preston, Detroit, member of a Negro unit. for heroic conduct. the headquarters of the European theater of operations of the U. S. Army announced today.

Preston, citation said, plunged into the sea, tied himself to a floundering fellow soldier who had been knocked into the water and kept him afloat until those on shore were able to pull both to safety.

MAR 12 1943
MAR 5 1943
JUN 9 1943

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

European photo

HEROES IN NEW GUINEA—Corp. Harvey Crandle (right), who swam thru burning gasoline and exploding ammunition to drag a pilot from a plane that had crashed in a river, and Pfc. Julius Franklin, who waded in to help bring the flyer ashore, wearing the medals awarded them.

Won 3 Medals at 15; Ready to Fight at 40

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.

MAY 7 1943

FORT SILL, Okla. — M. Sgt. William A. Johnson, sergeant-major of the 100th Ordnance Battalion, is not the only Negro soldier to have received the Distinguished Service Cross, the Croix de Guerre, and the Purple Heart in World War 1, but he is probably the only soldier to have received those awards at the age of 15.

Enlisting in Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 5, 1918, shortly after reaching his 15th birthday, Pvt. Johnson, who claimed to be 18, received his basic training at Camp Logan, Texas, and at Camp Stuart, Va., and was sent overseas immediately, arriving in France, March 27, with the 370th Infantry, where he saw action in St. Mihiel at Oise and at Aisne and was then stationed in the defensive sector.

On Oct. 9, 1918, Pvt. Johnson and two comrades were carrying ammunition and signal rockets to the front line, during which Pvt Johnson's legging became untied He called to his two companions to proceed while he re-wrapped his legging, adding that he would catch up with them as soon as he had finished.

Barely were the words out of his mouth when a German 88 shell exploded between him and his two companions, seriously wounding the two others but leaving him unscathed.

Relaying the carrying of the two men to the rear, Johnson was almost out of the danger zone when he was struck in his right shoulder by a piece of shrapnel while still carrying one of the wounded men. He was wounded a second time in the leg by a machine gun bullet. Despite the two wounds, he reached safety with his two comrades.

In recognition of his action, Pvt. Johnson was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross by the American government and the Croix de Guerre by the French government. He was later awarded the Order of the Purple Heart for having been wounded in action.

MAY 7 1943

Johnson, then a private first class, remained in the hospital in France until April 4, then returned to New York. Reenlisting immediately for one year, Pfc. Johnson was sent to Fort Huachuca, Ariz., where he was assigned to the 10th Cavalry. He left the service upon the completion of the one year enlistment and became an embalmer.

He reenlisted in the army, April 30, 1942, and was assigned to Camp Sutton, N. C., for training, arriving at Fort Sill, August 19, where he was advanced to his present rank.

I'm ready to go across any time," he says, and "I hope it'll be soon."

MAY 7 1943

Risked Lives In Crash of Bomber, Trio Commended

MAY 9 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Formal Retreat Parade Held In Heroes' Honor

AUGUSTA, Ga. (SNS)—Three colored soldiers of Daniel Field, Augusta, have been commended by Col. Cornelius E. O'Connor, Commanding Officer of that Air Base, for their courageous action "beyond the call of duty" in attempting to rescue the members of a bomber crew trapped in their flaming plane following a crash recently.

The men commended are Cpls. Melvin Cook and Charles L. Craig of the 7th Aviation Squadron, and Pvt. John D. Hilton of the 95th Ordnance Company. At a Formal Retreat Parade Friday, the men were called to the front of Daniel Field troops massed in formation, and the letters of commendation read. The commendations became part of the soldiers' individual records.

CREW IS KILLED

MAY 9 1943

The crash, in which the three braved flames and disregarded "imminent danger of exploding ammunition and fuel tanks" occured on April 13. about a mile south of Daniel Field. The seven members of the crew were injured fatally.

In his commendation of Cpl. Craig, who was first of the three to arrive on the scene, Col. O'Connor said: "The complete disregard of your own personal safety in approaching the airplane to assist an injured crew member to safety, even though you realized that there was imminent danger of explosion and had also been burned about your hand, reflects great credit upon you, the Army and the Army Air Corps of which you are a member."

Of Cpl. Cook, who was at the scene seconds after Craig, Col. O'Connor said "Regardless of the fact that the accident proved fatal to the aircraft's entire crew you displayed unusual initiative in proceeding to the other side of the burning aircraft in order to locate trapped crew members and direct rescue squads to their location.... Your alertness and prompt action ...is commendable.."

CITED FOR COURAGE

MAY 9 1943

Hilton was cited for his action in moving up to the flaming plane and with rope and grappling hook, extricating several of the crew. In the citation to Hilton, Col. O'Connor stated "You demonstrated outstanding courage in removing the bodies of five members of the crew from the burning wreckage. Your conduct is all the more meritorious when the fact is considerede that men trained to work in that type of danger were not able to approach the flames to extricate these bodies. Your performance at this disaster was far above and beyond yond the call of duty and clearly demonstrates a spirit of outstanding self-sacrifice and courage."

Craig, 26 is the son of Mrs. Carrie Craig 362 Glenn Avenue, Bloomineburg, Pa. He has been in the Army since July, 1941.

Cook, 21, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Cook, 4279 Wallace St. Philadelphia, Pa. He was inducted into the Army on Sept. 15, 1942. Hilton, 32, farmed at Bolivar, West Virginia before entering the Army in November last year. His mother is Mrs. Lizzie Landis 1014 Carpenter St., Camden, N. J.

Soldiers Medal Awarded Heroes Of Bomber Crash

APR 10 1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

SEATTLE, Wash. — Four colored soldiers and a white enlisted man were this week awarded the Soldier's Medal for their heroic efforts in the February 18 fire at the Frye Packing Plant.

APR 10 1943

The fire, which occurred when a four-motored Boeing bomber crashed into the main building, claimed 32 lives. Ten persons were rescued by the five army men, each of whom made several trips into the burning building to extricate victeims. The recommendation was made by Lieut. General John L. DeWitt, commanding general of the Western Defense Command.

Named for the awards were: Lonnie Anscrum, Greensburg, N. C.; Bruce Singletary, Mullins, S. C.; Charles Whiteley, Smithfield, N. C.; Sam Morris, Chicago, Ill., all privates, and Corp. Kenneth J. Christner, white, of Port Huron, Mich.

Recommendations said the men were being considered by General DeWitt for their "heroism" and for their "utter disregard for personal safety." The men were notified through Col. C. M. Skene, under whom they serve as an antiaircraft detail.

APR 10 1943

The Soldier's Medal is awarded men who have performed outstanding acts of bravery not on the actual field of battle.

Southern Negro Mother of 4 Sons In Army Awarded 'Medal of Honor'

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 14.—First Negro mother in the South to receive a "Medal of Honor" is Mrs. Theresa Stockard, who has given four sons to her country's armed forces.

The medal was awarded by the Emblem of Honor Association of New York, and was presented to her at Nashville's City Hall here by Mayor Thomas L. Cummings.

Mayor Cummings told Mrs. Stockard in the presentation ceremony that he hoped her boys would return safely "when the victory has been won."

"I congratulate you and fully appreciate your fine contribution to the cause of human freedom," he said.

MAY 15 1943

Mrs. Stockard's eldest son, Henry, 27, is a corporal in an engineering detachment which has just taken part in the victorious rescue of North Africa from the Axis.

The three other sons, all privates, are still training in this country. Thomas, 24, is a military policeman at Keesler Field, Miss.; William, 22, is an ambulance driver at the Salt Lake City, Utah, air base; and Edward, 20, now at Camp Clark, Texas, is to be transferred soon and trained as a radio technician.

PM
New York, N. Y.

Negroes Honored

The War Dept. has announced the award of the Legion of Merit to Pfc. Ben W. Pettie, Senatobia, Miss., Pvt. Jessie Harris, Tuskegee, Ala., Pvt. Verna C. Neal, Ruleville, Miss. Pvt. Henry Smith, Jr., Good Pine, La. The awards were for exceptionally meritorious service on Guadalcanal. All are Negroes.

47b-1943

While Rioting Sweeps Nation U.S. Honored These Black Heroes

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

JUN 26 1943

May 22—Charles Jackson French, mess attendant, commended for heroism in saving 15 mates aboard raft off the Solomon Islands. . . . Cpl. James B. Stewart, Sgt. Francis D. Bland, Pvt. Frank Johnson, awarded Purple Heart in Tunisian campaign. . . . Robert Clayton Moss, Georgia farmer, cited for saving white army cadet from burning plane. . . . Pvt. James H. Murnam received Soldier's Medal for heroism in England.

May 29—Navy names Destroyer Escort vessel for Leonard Roy Harmon, mess attendant, awarded Navy Cross for "extraordinary heroism."

June 5—President Roosevelt commends Negro support of war effort in greetings to NAACP conference. . . . Pfc. Ben W. Pettis, Pvt. Jess Harris, Pvt. Verna C. Neal, Pvt. Henry Smith, Jr., infantrymen, awarded Legion of Merit by Secretary Stimson for heroism on Guadalcanal.

June 12—Harry Alexander Seymour, Jr., seaman, and Marion Green, officer's cook, awarded Silver Star by Navy for conspicuous bravery. . . . Lester Everett Pullian, chief boatswain mate, awarded Purple Heart by Navy. . . . George McElroy, mess attendant, Purple Heart for action at Guadalcanal.

June 19—William Pinckney, awarded Navy Cross by President Roosevelt for "extraordinary heroism" in battle of Santa Cruz. . . . Pvt. William R. Preston, awarded Soldier's Medal in England. . . . Pvt. Edmund W. Collins, wins Purple Heart in South Pacific. . . . First race fliers see action in battle of Pantelleria.

June 26—Joseph Cross, mess attendant, gets Navy and Marine Corps Medal as 'best Japanese spotter" on submarine in Pacific. . . . Staff Sgt. Dennis Holt and Sgt. J. P. Mays awarded Legion of Merit in South Pacific. . . . Sgt. Hannibal H. Moore and Pvt. Henry Jackson win Soldier's Medal on maneuvers with Third Army in Louisiana.

JUN 26 1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Cited For Rescue Of White Soldier

AUG 7 1943

FORT BENNING, Ga.—(ANP)—Pfc. Hezekiah Lyons, a mess cadreman attached to the fifth company, third student training regiment was cited last week by Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of the infantry school for "meritorous conduct beyond the lne of duty."

The mess attendant was credited with saving the life of Pvt. Calvin W. Rayburn, a white soldier attached to Co. B, 176th infantry, who was swimming in the swift currents of the Chattahoochee river while the fifth company was on its recent bivouac there.

Pfc. Lyons has been in the army since January 20, 1942, and completed his basic training at Camp McClellan, Ala. For the past 15 months he has been attached to the fifth company and has maintained an excellent record. The youth is 24 years old and is a native of Pittsburgh, but his family now lives in Sarasota, Fla. Before entering the army he worked as a chef.

Although Lyons, a modest fellow, refuses to talk about his heroism Captain John D. Austin, executive officer of the fifth company, has recommended that he be cited for his rescue of Rayburn,

AUG 7 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Cited For Bravery

Elias Corbin, who has worked at the Charleston, South Carolina Ordnance Depot since 1919, treasures an official commendation for his brave conduct during an explosion 18 years ago, in which he was the only laborer who did not immediately flee the magazine. Corbin remained at his post of duty, in danger of his life and removed ammunition from the smouldering source of the explosion.

JUN 5 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Accurate Sight Leads To Sinking Of Enemy Ships

ABOARD A SUBMARINE IN THE PACIFIC — (ANP) — Rear Admiral Charles A. Lockwood, commander of submarines in the Pacific, Friday pinned a ribbon emblematic of the navy and marine corps medal on Joseph Cross, 21, for sighting enemy ships leading to sinkings both by day and night.

JUN 17 1943

Cross is believed to be the first Negro lookout ever to be awarded the medal. He, along with D. J. Snyder, 22, white, now torpedoman's mate, 3rd class, of Pittsburgh are among the very few lookouts decorated. Both received the navy and marine medal Friday. Both sighted enemy ships leading to sinkings both by day and night, and each won the lookout's contest for which officers of their ship gave $75 each.

Adm. Lockwood, in presenting the awards, said:

"I am glad to see lookouts are getting medals. They are the eyes of our submarines. The lookout is a very important man in your organization.

"Some ships give lookouts prizes. They feel that perks up lookouts and is very good insurance for the ship."

JUN 17 1943

Lt. Commander Phillip S. Ross, 37, Tucson, Ariz., and Annapolis, the submarine's captain, said that Cross "seems to see as well nights as days. He's our best Jap spotter."

Cross, a year ago, worked in a photographic studio at New Orleans. When he decided to enlist, submarines had the greatest appeal. He went to boot camp and then into submarine service.

JUN 17 1943

Submarine "Lookout" Gets Marine Medal

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Picture on Page 11

ABOARD A SUBMARINE IN THE PACIFIC, (ANP)—Rear Adm. Charles A. Lockwood, commander of submarines in the Pacific, Friday pinned a ribbon emblematic of the navy and marine corps medal on Joseph Cross, 21, for sighting enemy ships leading to sinkings both by day and night.

Cross is believed to be the first colored lookout ever to be awarded the medal. He along with D. J. Snyder, 22, white now torpedo mcgmate 3rd class, of Pittsburgh, are among the very few lookouts decorated. Both received the navy and marine medal Friday. Both sighted enemy ships, leading to sinkings both by day and by night, and each won the look-outs' contest for which officers of their ship gave $75 each.

SOLDIER GETS HERO'S MEDAL

Defender
Chicago, Ill.—

ORLANDO, Fla.—Sgt. Willie B Goodson, Fairfield, Ala., who is stationed at the army air forces school of applied tactics, will soon be awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism for risking his life to save that of an officer.

Sgt. Goodson, whose mother is Rosie Lee Taylor, Oneonta, Ala., is being awarded Soldier's Medal for rushing into telegraph poles falling from a railroad flatcar and dragging Lt. Donald P. Rush, Boston, construction officer of Goodson's unit, from beneath the pile where he was trapped.

Lt. Rush had climbed to the top of the flatcar to release the brakes holding the poles in order to unload them.

In leaping from the car, the lieutenant slipped, was struck by a pole and suffered a broken ankle.

Before he could drag himself free, other falling poles began to pile up on him.

At great personal risk, Sergeant Goodson ran to the lieutenant's side, secured him beneath the arms and dragged him to safety.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

2 Win Soldier's Medal For Heroism In British Blast

FEB 6 1943

LONDON.—In an impressive ceremony, held amid the crackling of nearby anti-aircraft guns, Lt. Vernon G. Adams, Kittanning, Pa., and Sgt. Ernest Johnson, Cunningham, Ala., a Negro, and both members of an American engineer unit stationed in England, were decorated with the Soldier's Medal by Major General John C. H. Lee, commanding Services of Supply, European Theatre of Operations.

The officer and enlisted man received the awards for heroism displayed on September 8, 1942, when a small brick building located near their camp was partially destroyed by an explosition of land mines stored within. Three British soldiers working in the building were injured. As two of the injured staggered from the building, thick with explosive fumes and full of unexploded land mines, Lt. Adams and Sgt. Johnson with no regard for their own safety rushed into the structure and succeeded in removing the remaining injured men.

In praising both men for their "distinguished and heroic service," Maj. Gen. Lee pointed out that the names, Adams and Johnson, were rich in the tradition of American history. "Here we are together," he said, "the Adams and the Johnsons side by side with the British. There will be times when we again will be able to help them, and they to help up. Together we will go on to win."

FEB 6 1943

Mother Receives Medal For Son

Pittsburgh Pa.
Courier

APR 3 1943

CUERO, Tex., April 1—A proud Gold Star mother, with tear-dimmed eyes and a heart burdened with deep sorrow, was signally honored last week when she received a commendation from the President of the United States and a Navy Cross, posthumously awarded her son for distinguished service in the battle of Guadalcanal.

CARED FOR WOUNDED

The mother, Mrs. W. D. Carroll, received the citation for her son, Leonard R. Harmon, mess attendant, first-class, who was killed in action after displaying "extraordinary heroism" aboard the U.S.S. San Francisco in the Solomon Islands during an engagement with the Japanese navy on November 12 and 13, 1942. The citation came in the form of a letter from Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy.

The citation specifically pointed out that the youth's extarordinary heroism was during action against enemy Japanese forces with 'persistent disregard for his own personal safety.' Under these conditions, it was revealed, Harmon rendered invaluable assistance in caring for the wounded and in evacuating them to a dressing station.

KILLED RESCUING OTHERS

Harmon, in addition to manifesting loyalty in behalf of an injured executive officer, 'deliberately exposed himself to hostile gunfire in order to protect a shipmate, and as a result of the courageous action, lost his own life in action, the citation also disclosed.

The Knox letter, submitted for President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, asserted that Harmon's "heroic spirit of self-sacrifice; maintained above and beyond the call of duty, was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States naval service." The Cuero mayor has also designated Apr 11 as a day set aside for exercis honoring Harmon, a letter from the boy's mother states.

Leonard Roy Harmon was 25 years old. He was born in De Witt county, January 21, 1917, the second son of Jaunita Harmon Carroll. His father died in 1922, four small children surviving him. Leonard was four years of age at the time. When Leonard was of high school age, his mother married W. D. Carroll, coach and instructor at Daule High school here, where the dead naval hero starred in basketball and baseball, was a member of the glee club and sang 'lead' in the quartet. Leonard was graduated from Daule

VOLUNTEERED FOR NAVY

Harmon's first attempt to get in the United States Navy, for which he volunteered, was unsuccessful, his mother revealed. She said the handicap was a minor heart ailment—and Leonard was bitterly disappointed. Later, it was stated, Dr. G. A. King, a competent physician, was engaged and the physician enabled the boy to qualify.

Surviving the departed hero other than his mother and step-father are a grandmother, more than 80 years old; a brother Cornelius Sr., in the U. S. Civil Service at the Navy Air Base in Corpus Christi; an older sister, Pauline, who is a mechanical helper at Duncan Field in San Antonio; and a younger sister, Mrs. Constance Harmon-Edwards, who is teaching in the county system in El Paso. His step-father is now principal of Alice Wilkins school in Port Lavaca, but his mother retired from the teaching profession two years ago to nurse her own invalid mother who died last July.

Navy Cross Won By Third Negro For Rescuing Mate

Chicago, Ill. Defender

WASHINGTON — William Pinckney, 20-year-old third class cook from Beaufort, S. C., this week became the third Negro to win the Navy Cross in World War II.

Following the footsteps of Dorie Miller, whose heroism at Pearl Harbor won him the award, Pinckney was given the coveted medal by President Roosevelt this week. Second winner of the Navy Cross was the late Leonard Royd Harmon, who lost his life on the U.S.S. San Francisco.

Pinckney's courage in saving a shipmate during a battle with strong Japanese naval forces near the Santa Cruz Islands in the South Pacific brought him the Navy Cross.

Serving on the aircraft carrier Enterprise, which has earned the name "Old Lady of Mars" through its fight against the Nipponese, Pinckney was knocked unconscious when a heavy bomb exploded nearby during the Battle of Santa Cruz on October 26.

Pinckney had been working at his battle station in the ammunition handling room when the explosion hit. Four of his five companions were killed and Pinckney flattened by the impact.

Pinckney regained consciousness and started groping his way through burning entangled wreckage to an open hangar deck hatch. He was just about to escape when he saw a shipmate, the only other survivor of his party, struggling up through the hatch.

The man suddenly fell unconscious either from the smoke or fumes or from his wounds.

The Beaufort cook, unmindful of his own danger, lifted his comrade through the hatch to safety before he battled his way out of the burning, smoke-filled compartment.

In announcing the award for Pinckney, the citation by the Navy Department said:

"By his dauntless courage in saving his comrade's life at great risk to his own, Pinckney upheld the highest traditions of the U. S. Naval Service."

Secretary of Navy Frank Knox also announced this week that the sponsor for the first Navy vessel to be named after a Negro will be the mother of Seaman Harmon. She is Naunita Harmon Carroll of Cureo, Tex., who will join in the ceremonies at the launching of the destroyer escort vessel, U. S. S. Harmon, named for her son.

Harmon was a mess attendant whose "extraordinary heroism" won him the Navy Cross posthumously.

Harmon, who was 26 years of age, lost his life during action against enemy Japenese forces in the battle of Guadalcanal, November 12 and 13, 1942. Throughout the engagement, he assisted in caring for the wounded and evacuating them to dressing stations aboard the ship, and, according to the citation accompanying the Navy Cross award, displayed "unusual loyalty in behalf of the injured executive officer." He was killed when he deliberately exposed himself to hostile gun fire to protect his shipmates.

The U.S.S. Harmon is under construction at the plant of the Bethlehem Steel company, Hingham, Mass., and is expected to be launched some time this summer.

JUN 26 1943

"I'm No Hero," Local Boy Who Faced Jap Fire Tells Informer

Houston, Texas Informer

HOUSTON.—"Don't get me wrong, I am no hero; what happened to me could have happened to anybody," stated George McElroy, the mild mannered and very modest Houstonian, who recently was awarded the Navy's Purple Heart award for his meritorious service while on duty with the fleet in the Southwestern Pacific, in an exculsive intreview with the Informer.

McElroy declined to accept any glory for the part he played or the experiences that he went through in this great struggle of America's fight for freedom, not wanting to take any of the limelight from the countless other Negro Americans, who are daily proving to the world that they are a great fighting machine if given the opportunity. But despite the youth's endeavor to shun the spotlight, the service that he has rendered and the part he has played in this global war cannot go unnoticed.

Under Constant Attack

It was while on duty in the Southwest Pacific theatre of war that McElroy's ship was sunk, and he had to drift for days in the vast waters of the Pacific on a life raft. His ship had previously been stalked by a Jap submarine for a couple of days and for those days they were under constant attack. McElroy, the only Negro on the warship, left his post of ship's cook and went on deck to take his battle station.

During the height of the battle, with McElroy at his battle station, a 22 mm gun aboard the ship was displaced by an enemy shell and the gun fell across McElroy's back causing a partial paralysis. Other members of the crew lifted the gun off McElroy. After fighting off most of the attacking Jap ships and planes, McElroy's ship was finally torpedoed and all were forced to abandon.

Wounded, the local lad got on a raft and the days of drifting followed. For three days McElroy was aboard the raft with no water or food. The only moisture he received while on the raft was that which he sucked from a wound on his wrist. A Jap plane saw the raft and machine-gunned the wounded and defenseless men aboard. It was only by the Grace of God that the men survived the ruthless machine gun attack of the blood thirsty Japs.

McElroy was rescued by an American vessel near Guadalcanal and taken to the island for medical treatment. Later ships and planes were employed to return to the gallant Americans to the naval hospital at San Diego.

Besides the Purple Heart award, the Houstonian has six campaign bars for active service before Pearl Harbor; action in the Southwestern Pacific; action in the European theatre of war; service in the American defense area; and veteran of Foreign Wars.

McElroy enlisted in the Navy in July of 1940 and received his training at the navy's midshipman school in New York. He saw service with the Atlantic patrol and worked on the lend lease destroyers sent to England by the United States. In December of 1941 McElroy was transferred to the Navy recruiting office as a recruiting officer, the first Negro ever to hold such a post here. When the Japs made the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, McElroy was at his post here. But soon afterwards he was transferred to the West Coast, where he went into immediate action.

Although the injuries he received in action have caused the Navy to give him an honorary discharge from service, McElroy's urge to take another crack at the Axis rats still burns like a flaming torch. Recently he tried to enter the Army Air Corps but was turned down because of his physical disabilities. McElroy's determination to do something else in the great struggle of the democracies was undaunted by his inability to get in the service, and he now has secured a defense job where he can make them so others can use them.

McElroy, a former Informer newsboy and writer, is a graduate of St. Nicholas school of this city and is a popular member of the younger set. His brother, Hugh McElroy, Jr., is also in the navy and is now on active duty somewhere in the South Pacific theatre of war.

McElroy showed members of the Informer staff some Japanese occupational money used in the Philippine Islands. He stated that the Japs have on hand occupational money that they expect to use in this country. The bills that he showed were of one shilling valuation.

JUN 12 1943

GEORGE McELROY, former Informer news boy and reporter, who was presented the navy's Purple Heart award for his heroic service in the line of duty.

Louis "Pinch Hits" for Hero at Fort Ceremony

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

FORT LEONARD WOOD, Mo.—Sergeant Joe Louis Barrow, world's heavyweight boxing champion, received the Soldier's Medal on behalf of Private Boyd S. Ivey, hero of a drowning rescue attempt at Fort Leonard Wood on July 14, 1943, recently, when he came to the Fort for an exhibition bout.

Private Ivey, a former member of the 33rd Engineer Training Battalion, is now convalescing in a Michigan hospital and will receive his medal from Louis. His award was in recognition of a "valiant attempt to save the life of a drowning soldier at Fort Leonard Wood in July."

A few weeks after the incident to which reference was made in the War Department award, Private Ivey was the victim of another accident which later resulted in the amputation of a leg. He was recently moved from O'Reilly General Hospital, Springfield, Mo., to the medical rehabilitation center at Battle Creek, Mich.

Corporal is Also Commended

At the review which was held on the 28th Training Battalion's drill field, Corporal George L. Sims of the 35th Engineer Training Battalion was also commended. He received a citation for his prompt action and demonstration of other soldierly qualities in bringing about the recapture of a prisoner who escaped from a train while being returned to Fort Leonard Wood from Muskogee, Okla., the night of September 18, 1943.

Both the coveted Soldier's Medal and the commendation were presented by Brigadier General Creswell Garlington, Commanding Officer of the Engineer Reception Training Center.

Columbia Negro Is Decorated For Heroism

Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, Oct. 24—(Special)—Sgt. Robert Hayes, 28, of Columbia, S. C., member of a Negro detachment of the Corps of Engineers at a remote army post, has been awarded the Soldier's medal for heroism.

Without thought of their own lives he and another soldier, heavily encumbered by equipment, plunged into icy water of an Arctic-bound stream to rescue an officer who had slipped from a wharf.

A special ceremony was held for the award of medals to the two heroes and the presentation was made by Brig. Gen. L. D. Worsham of the Northwest division. He flew many miles to be present as the engineering detachment is located far from the nearest railhead.

Nearly all non-military spectators were Hudson's Bay post Indians.

47b-1943

Birmingham, Ala., News
August 15, 1943

CROSS PRESENTED—Maj. Gen. Harry F. Hazlett (left above), commanding general of Replacement and School Command of the Army Ground Forces in Birmingham, presents the Distinguished Service Cross to Emma Gaines (right), awarded posthumously to her grandson, Pvt. George Watson, for extraordinary heroism in the South Pacific in giving his life to save several of his comrades.

Pvt. Watson, Negro Soldier, Is Given DSC Posthumously

He could have saved himself but he chose to save others, and for his heroic action, Pvt. George Watson, a young Negro soldier of Birmingham, was awarded posthumously the Distinguished Service Cross. The award was made Saturday by Maj. Gen. Harry F. Hazlett, commanding officer of Army Ground Forces Replacement School Command in Birmingham, to the soldier's aged grandmother who had raised him since birth.

Emma Gaines, in her small but neat little home at 1085 North Brittain Street, received the award as she lay bedridden from a recent illness.

"He was a fine boy," she said between soft sobs. "I brought him up ever since he was a small baby, for his mother and father both died soon after he was born."

In solemn words, Gen. Hazlett told the grandmother and the small group of friends and neighbors who had gathered: "To us of the Army, the Distinguished Service Cross is a priceless treasure. It is awarded only to persons who distinguish themselves by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against the enemy."

Pvt. Watson was awarded the medal for heroism in action near Porlock Harbor, New Guinea, on March 8, 1943, when the ship on which he was aboard was attacked by enemy bombers. When the ship was abandoned, Pvt. Watson, instead of seeking to save himself, remained in the water assisting several of his comrades. Weakened by his exertions, he was dragged down by the suction of the ship and was drowned.

Gen. Hazlett said further: "The president has directed that this Distinguished Service Cross be presented to Emma Gaines, the hero's grandmother. I consider it an honor and a privilege to do so.

"George Watson died in the shining splendor of high courage and utter unselfishness," he continued, "true to the best traditions of the American soldier, an inspiration to every real American."

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Unsung Pearl Harbor Navy

Hero Is Found

Helped Rescue Survivors In Bombed Ship

JUN 1 1943

By "SCOOP" JONES
Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA—(A N P)—Rambling around this island looking for unusual news material I really found something to print—an unsung Pearl Harbor navy hero, unknown to most of us. He's Cpl. Fred W. Taylor, whom the commander-in-chief of the U. S. Pacific fleet cited for bravery in the rescue of part of th[illegible] S. S. Oklahoma after it had capsized at Pearl Harbor.

JUN 8 1943

It appears that the battleship was put out of commission in the waters of the harbor while Jap Zeroes swarmed the sky. Bombs were exploding everywhere. Cpl. Taylor, along with a group of white drillers launched a small boat and set out to free, from their trapped position in the hull of the ship, what was left of its survivors. The rescue lasted for several hours and through the entire procedure the men were exposed to the hazards of the aerial attack.

The citation commanding Cpl. Taylor reads: "For heroic and most efficient work with utter disregard of his own personal safety in assisting in the rescue of 32 members of the U. S. S. Oklahoma, which had capsized during the attack on the fleet in Pearl Harbor, territory of Hawaii, by Japanese forces on Dec. 7, 1941. It was due to his untiring efforts in face of great hazards that the rescue work was continued until all known survivors had been released from the hull of that Ship."

Cpl. Taylor spent eight months in Hawaii as one of the only two colored first class drillers (a civil service appointment) in Uncle Sam's naval shipyard. Five of these months were spent prior to the Nips' surprise attack. He has had an interesting taste of this war. He became ill shortly after the Pearl Harbor affair and was honorably discharged from the Pacific branch of the navy with a possibility of transfer to the Philadelphia shipyard. He return- to America in March of '42, slightly "bomb happy," for a much needed rest and to await action on his pending transfer. However as luck would have it the draft board stepped in to the picture.. classified him as I-A....and inducted him into the army in June, 1942. Fourteen days after his induction he received official confirmation of his transfer—but too late.

While at Fort Belvoir, Va., receiving his basic training for the engineer corps, he was promoted to the rank of corporal, which is an unusual procedure for army train- centers. Then in January, '43, he was shipped to foreign service duty. Arrived in Australia and was sent up to New Guinea with other casualty replacements in April just in time to get a dose of one of the Japanese biggest air raid on this area.

Honor 'Yank' Who Shot a Nazi Airplane

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Lieut. Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Ind., the Negro flyer who shot down a Nazi Folke-Wulf 190 plane in the battle of Sicily, was honored as the "Yank of the Week" on the Blondie radio program over the CBS network Monday night.

JUL 23 1943

In honor of Lieut. Hall's feat, 400,000 cigarettes are being sent to the soldiers in North Africa. Each week the program honors a "Yank" and sends cigarettes to his theater of war.

Lieut. Hall, a member of a famous Negro pursuit squadron trained at Tuskegee, was the first Negro flyer to down a Nazi plane.

Displayed Unusual Courage In Fight

Pittsburgh, Pa.
Courier

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Courier War Correspondent)

LONDON, June 10 — (Via Cable) — King George posthumously awarded the Victoria Cross, highest British military honor, to a colored officer, Second Lieut. Koana Niuakiwa Ngarimu, native New Zealander of the Maori tribe, for outstanding gallantry and leadership during fighting against the Axis in Tunisia.

Hurling stones at Germans and Italians when his ammunition was exhausted, the Maori was found dead across the bodies of enemies he had killed and crippled before they got him.

EPOCHAL COURAGE

Describing Ngarimu's bravery, the War Office disclosed that the lieutenant, commanding a platoon, was given the task of attacking and capturing vital hill positions held in considerable strength by the enemy. Ngarimu led his men with great determination, displaying courage and leadership of the highest order. He was himself first on the hill top, personally annihilating at least two enemy machine-gun posts. The remainder of the enemy fled. Under cover of a most intensive mortar barrage, the enemy counter-attacked and Ngarimu ordered his men to stand up and engage the enemy man-for-man. This time, they did with such telling effect that attackers were literally mowed down. Ngarimu personally killed several, was twice wounded—once by [illegible] fire and later by shrapnel in the leg, but he refused to leave his men. Darkness found Ngarimu and his depleted platoon on the rock face of the forward slope of the hill with the enemy in a similar position on the reverse slope for a 20 yards distance.

Throughout the night, the enemy repeatedly launched fierce attacks but each attack was beaten off entirely by Ngarimu's inspired leadership. Morning found Ngarimu still in possession of the hill, but only he—with two unwounded men—remained. Reinforcements were sent. The enemy again counter-attacked during which charge Ngarimu was killed, defiantly facing the enemy with his tommy gun at his side. As Ngarimu fell his body rested almost on top of Germans he himself had killed. Some of the wounded enemy testified to Ngarimu's outstanding courage and fortitude.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Medal For Heroism Awarded Soldier

CAMP LOCKETT, Calif. — Pvt. Charles E. Burton, colored cavalryman from Coatesville, Pa., this week was awarded the Soldier's Medal for Heroism for risking his life to save a fellow soldier.

The two men were riding on an automatic railroad car, when suddenly Burton saw a train bearing down on them from the opposite direction. Burton pushed his companion from the car, then jumped himself when the train was only 30 feet away.

APR 24 1943

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

Launch 1st U. S. Warship Named for Negro Hero

Quincy, Mass., July 26 [Special].—The first American warship to be named for a Negro was launched yesterday at the Fore River yard of the Bethlehem Steel company. The vessel, the destroyer Harmon, honored the memory of Hero Navy Mess Attendant Leonard Roy Harmon, who gave his life aboard the U. S. S. San Francisco during the battle of Guadalcanal. Sponsor of the ship was his mother, Mrs. N[illegible] Harmon Carroll of Cuero, Tex. Harmon was awarded the navy cross posthumously for extraordinary heroism.

JUL 27 1943

NAVY MEN GET PURPLE HEART, SILVER STARS

Pittsburgh, Pa.
Courier

JUN 7 1943

SAN DIEGO, Cal., June 10—Conspicuous bravery and wounds incurred in action against the enemy won Silver Star medals and the Purple Heart for three Navy enlisted men in ceremonies recently at the U. S. Naval hospital, Corona, Calif.

Capt. H. L. Jenson (MC), USN., commanding officer of the hospital, made the presentations before assembled staff officers and enlisted personnel and patients.

Silver Star medals were awarded to Harry Alexander Seymour Jr., seaman first-class, USN, of Phoenix, Ariz., and Marion Green, officer's chief cook, USN., of McClellansville, S. C., who is still confined to a wheelchair.

The Purple Heart, for wounds received during the Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, went to Lester Everett Pullian, chief boatswain's mate, USN., of South Gate, Calif.

Six M. P.'s Cited For Bravery In Riot

Informer
Houston, Texas

SHENANGO, Ga.—(ANP)— For their part in helping quell a riot Sunday night between white and colored soldiers, in which one Negro was slain and six wounded, six Negro military police were Wednesday cited for bravery by Col. Zim E. Lawhon, post commander.

The citation read:

"In the face of grave danger to themselves, when men around them had become excited and lost their self-control, these men remained at their posts of duty the night of July 11-12. This high sense of duty is most gratifying and should serve as an inspiration to the whole command.

JUL 24 1943

Heroism Brings Soldier's Medal

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

By RANDY DIXON
(Courier War Correspondent)

LONDON, June 17 (Via Cable) —Pfc. William Preston of Detroit was, this week, awarded the Sol

...er's medal as additional recognition for his act of saving a companion from almost certain drowning. As already reported by this correspondent, Preston previously received recognition for his act of heroism in the form of a commendation on a parchment scroll from the Royal Humane society.

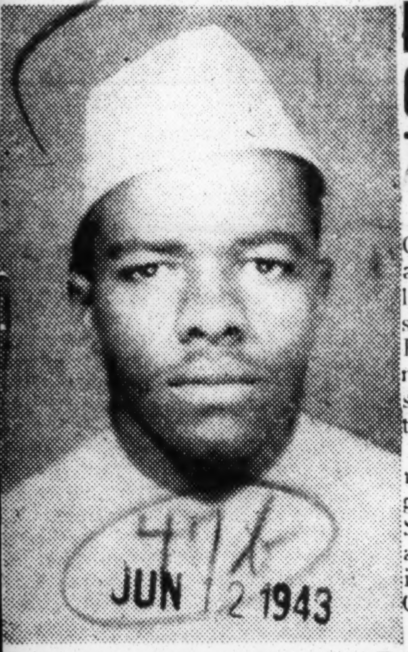
According to the citation from the U. S. forces, Preston, "without hesitation and at great risk to his own life, plunged into the icy waters, secured a rope and tied it around the drowning soldier and himself, thereby enabling those on shore to pull them both to safety.

Colonel Henry Wingate, depot commander, presented the award, which was delayed because General Dwight Eisenhower, the issuing authority, was assigned to the North African theatre of operations and could not act on the matter immediately. The rescue took place last August.

JUN 9 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Purple Heart



JUN 12 1943

Staff Sergeant Francis D. Bland, 23, of 116 Fifth avenue, Macon, Ga., has been awarded the Purple Heart for wounds received in fighting around Sidi Bou Zid on April 6. The award was made by the Northwest African Air Service. Sgt. Bland is a member of an air base security battalion. Also decorated was Pfc., Frank Johnson of Miami, Fla., and James B. Stewart, white, of Enterprise, Ala., for wounds received at the same time.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Negro Who Saved Life Of Soldier Cited In England

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND — For heroic action in saving a soldier from drowning, Pfc. William R. Preston of Detroit, Mich. was awarded the soldiers' medal here Tuesday. The heroic incident occurred in August, 1942, when the victim was hurled into the water between the pier and the boat.

According to the citation, Preston, without hesitation and at great risk to himself, plunged into the icy water, fastened a rope around the drowning soldier and himself, thus enabling those on shore o pull both to safety.

Colonel Henry Wingate, Depot Commander, presented the award. The presentation was delayed because General Eisenhower, the issuing authority, was assigned to the Noroth African theatre of operations at the time.

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

MESS ATTENDANT CITED FOR EFFORT TO SAVE 15 MEN

Washington, May 27—(ANP)—Charles Jackson French, 23, mess attendant, was highly commended last week by Adm. William F. Halsey, Jr., commander in the South Pacific, for attempting to save 15 men adrift on a raft under enemy shell fire by swimming and towing the raft out of danger.

According to the citation in the incident occurred during an engagement with the Japanese in the Solomon Islands, Sept. 5. French and his men had survived the sinking of the destroyer transport Gregory.

The citation stated: "After the engagement, a group of about 15 men were adrift on a raft which was being shelled by Japanese naval forces. French tied a line to himself and swam for more than two hours without rest, thus attempting to tow the raft. His conduct was in keeping with the highest traditions of the naval service.

JUN 4 1943

Another Messman Hero

The Union

A commendation has been awarded Charles Jackson French, a Negro Mess Attendant, for his courage in attempting to save a group of his shipmates on the U.S.S. GREGORY from shelling by Japanese naval forces following the sinking of that ship.

Cincinnati, Ohio

After the engagement, a group of about fifteen men were adrift on a raft which was being deliberately shelled by Japanese naval forces French tied a line to himself and swam for more than two hours without rest, thus attempting to tow the raft. His conduct was in keeping with the highest traditions of the Naval Service.

French, Mess Attendant, Second Class, U.S.N., is 23 years olds, from Foreman, Ark.

MAY 27 1943

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Six M. P.'s Who Quelled Riot Cited for 'Courage'

SHENANGO, Pa. — (ANP) —For their part in helping quell a riot Sunday night, between white and colored soldiers in which one Negro was slain and six wounded, six Negro military police were Wednesday cited for bravery by Col. Zim E. Lawhon, post commander.

The citation read:

"In the face of grave danger to themselves, when men around them had become excited and lost their self control these men remained at their posts of duty the night of July 11-12. This high sense of duty is most gratifying and should serve as an inspiration to the whole command."

JUL 23 1943

THANKS FOR RESCUE

Chicago Ill Defender

JUN 12 1943

471

Lieut. Benjamin Craig of Fayetteville, W. Va. (left) and Sgt. Hannibal Moore of Long Branch, N. J., talk over the narrow escape Lieut. Craig had from drowning during a river crossing while on maneuvers in Louisiana. Sgt. Moore came to the aid of the lieutenant when the swift moving current of the river got the best of him.

LOSS OF HAND NO HANDICAP

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

APR 10 1943

Undaunted by his experiences and loss of a hand while serving his country in combat duty in the Solomon Islands recently, Quincy Tillman, 24-year-old seaman, recently honorably discharged from the service because of his injury, went to work for Uncle Sam as a draftsman at a California shipbuilding company.

Negro Soldier to Be Awarded For Saving Officer's Life

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Not all heroes are born in battle.

Sergeant Willie B. Goodson, Negro, Fairfield, Ala., who is stationed at the Army Air Forces School of Applied Tactics, Orlando, Fla., will soon be awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism by Brig. Gen. Hume Peabody, commandant of AAFSAT, for risking his life to save that of an officer.

Sergeant Goodson, whose mother is Mrs. Rosie Lee Taylor, Oneonta, Ala., is being awarded Soldier's Medal for rushing into telegraph poles falling from a railroad flatcar and dragging Lt. Donald P. Rush, Boston, construction officer of Goodson's unit, from beneath the pile where he was trapped.

Lt. Rush had climbed to the top of the flatcar to release the braces holding the poles in order to unload them.

In leaping from the car, the lieutenant slipped, was struck by a pole and suffered a broken ankle.

Before he could drag himself free, other falling poles began to pile up on him.

At great personal risk, Sergeant Goodson ran to the lieutenant's side, secured him beneath the arms and dragged him to safety.

Birmingham, Ala., News
October 4, 1943

Negro Commended For Rescuing Flier

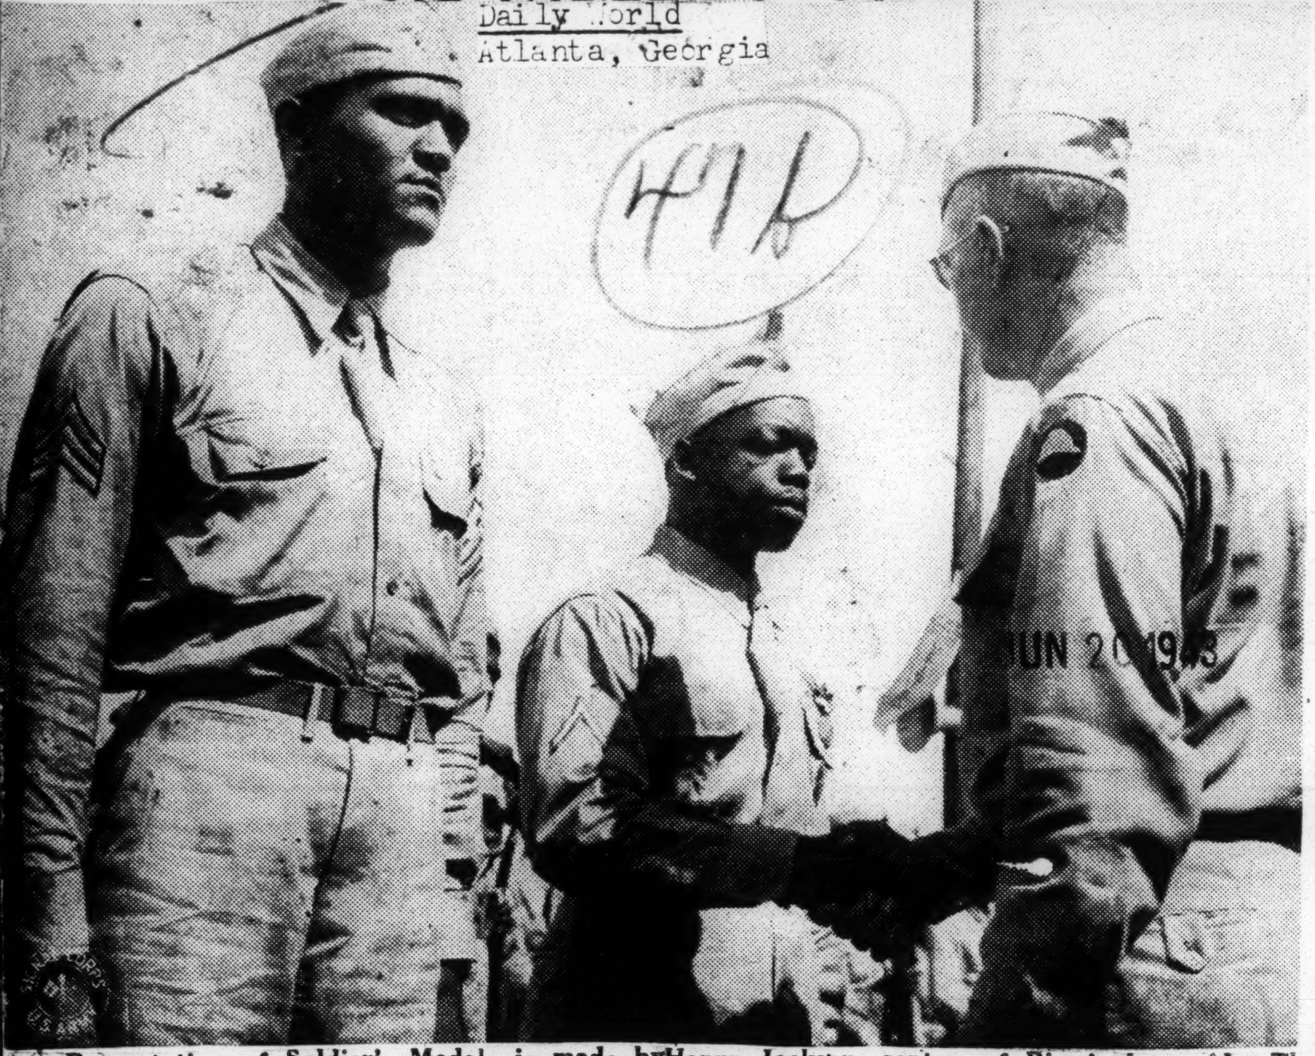
TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(AP)—Maj. Gen. T. J. Hanley, Jr., commanding general of the Eastern Flying Training Command, Sunday commended R. C. Daniels, Negro civilian worker at the Army Airfield here, for saving the life of a Negro pilot trapped in a burning plane.

Gen. Hanley said Daniels acted "in keeping with the best traditions of the American spirit of unselfish sacrifice" in rescuing the pilot, identified as Lt. Andrew H. Doswell.

47b-1943

Given Soldiers' Medals For Heroic Conduct

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



47b

JUN 20 1943

Presentation of Soldier's Medals is made by Brig. Gen. Joseph Lehman, right, to Sgt. Hannibal Moore of Long Branch, N. J., left, and Pvt. Henry Jackson, center, of Birmingham, Ala. The medals were awarded for heroic conduct during the Third Army maneuvers in Louisian

JUN 20 1943

Boy Hero Of World War 1 Is Again On Active Duty

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

FORT SILL, Okla., March 25—Master Sergeant William A. Johnson, sergeant-major of the 100th Ordnance Battalion, is not the only Negro soldier to have received the Distinguished Service Cross, the Croix de Guerre, and the Purple Heart in World War I, but he is probably the only soldier to have received those awards at the age of 15.

Enlisting in Toledo, Ohio, January 5, 1918, shortly after reaching his 15th birthday, Private Johnson, who claimed to be 18, received his basic training at Camp Logan, Texas, and at Camp Stuart, Va., and was sent overseas immediately, arriving in France, March 2, 1918, with the 370th Infantry, wher he saw action in St. Mihiel at Oise and at Aisne and was then stationed in the defensive sector.

CARRIED WOUNDED PALS TO THE REAR

On October 9, 1918, Private Johnson and two comrades were carrying ammunition and signal rockets to the front line, during which time Private Johnson's legging became untied. He called to his two companions to proceed while he re-wrapped his legging, adding that he would catch up with them as soon as he had finished.

Barely were the words out of his mouth, when a German 88 shell exploded between him and his companions, seriously wonding the two others, but leaving him untouched.

Relaying the carrying of the two men to the rear, Johnson was almost out of the danger zone when he was struck in the right shoulder by a piece of shrapnel while still carrying one of the wounded men. He was wounded a second time in the leg by a machine gun bullet. Despite the two wounds, he reached safety with his two comrades.

GETS THREE MEDALS

In recognition of his action, Private Johnson was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross by the American government and the Croix de Guerre by the French government. He was later awarded the Order of the Purple Heart for having been wounded in action.

Johnson, then a private first class, remained in a hospital in France until April 4, then returned to New York. Reenlisting immediately for one year, Private First Class Johnson was sent to Fort Huachuca, Arizona, where he was assigned to the 10th Cavalry. He left the service upon the completion of the one year enlistment and became an embalmer.

He reenlisted in the Army in 1942, and, after training at Camp Sutton, he was assigned to Fort Sill, where he has advanced to his present rank.

"I'm ready to go across any time," he says, "and I hope it'll be soon."

MAR 27 1943

MAR 27 1943

SWIM THRU FLAMES TO SAVE FLYERS

St. Louis Argus St. Louis
St. Louis, Mo.

Bravery Wins Three In New Guinea Decorations For Valo

Three Negro heroes of a U. S. Army Engineers unit were accorded high military honors recently and decorated by an American Brigadier General for gallantry in the New Guinea area, an Office of War Information outpost reported this week.

JUN 25 1943

The heroes, given Soldiers' Medals for an action which took place several months ago, were Pfc. Julius P. Franklin, Pfc. Harvey Crandle and Pvt. James Scott.

The soldiers distinguished themselves when a fighter plane crashed into a log while taking off from an aerodrome to intercept enemy fighters overhead. The plane plunged into a river near the airstrip and its petrol and ammunition were ignited. Pfc. Franklin jumped into the river, swam through the flames and pulled the pilot clear. Pfc. Crandle and Pvt. Scott waded into the river and helped Franklin drag the pilot ashore at the risk of their lives.

The entire organization of Negro engineers staged full dress parade for the ceremony which took place in a clearing the unit had carved out of thick scrub for the air forces. It was the unit's first full dress parade with its own band since April, 1942, for the Engineers had been in action in hazard missions during that period.

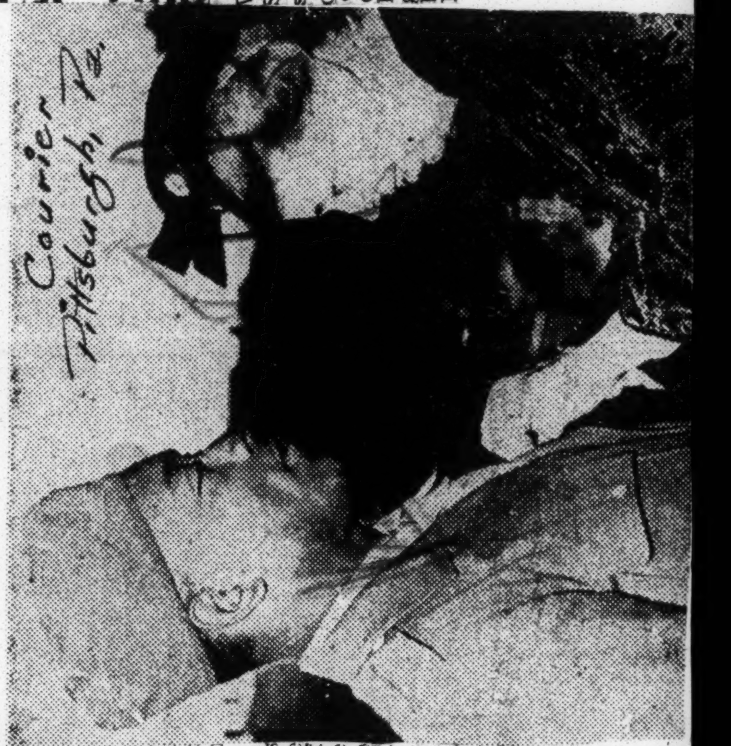
The Negro organization had suffered some casualties, but its members fulfilled the orders of the American High Command and were praised by General Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters.

JUN 26 1943

The ceremony marked the first time that Negro troops had been so honored in the Australian theatre of war.

"FIRST LADY" DECORATES A HERO

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.



Pvt. Sam Morris of Seattle, Washington, was awarded the Soldiers' Medal for helping to save 10 people when a bomber crashed into the Fry Packing company plant in Seattle several days' ago. Morris, a former heavyweight fighter from Chicago received a double honor by having his award pinned on by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

APR 17 1943

FDR Awards Youth Navy Cross Medal

NEW YORK Amsterdam NEWS
NEW YORK N.Y.

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt has awarded the Navy Cross to William Pinckney, Negro cook, third class, who carried an unconscious shipmate from a smoke-filled compartment to the safety of the Hangar Deck of the Carrier Enterprise, the Navy Department announced on Saturday. The citation reads:

JUN 26 1943

"For extraordinary heroism while serving aboard the USS Enterprise during an engagement with enemy Japanese forces near the Santa Cruz Islands in the South Pacific last Oct. 26. When a heavy bomb exploded in the near vicinity, Pinckney, standing at his battle station in the ammunition handling room, was knocked unconscious when an explosion hit the ship. Four of five of his companions were killed.

"Pinckney, regaining consciousness, groped his way through burning entangled wreckage to a point under an open hangar deck hatch. Just as he was about to escape, he found a shipmate, the only other survivor of his party, struggling up through the hatch.

"When the man fell unconscious either from wounds or from smoke and fumes, Pinckney, unmindful of his own danger, lifted his comrade through the hatch to safety before he himself battled his way out of the burning smoke-filled compartment. By his dauntless courage in saving his comrade's life at great risk to his own, Pinckney upheld the highest traditions of the U. S. Naval Service."

JUN 26 1943

Pinckney is 20 years of age and is the son of Ritney Pinckney of Beaufort, S. C.

Good Conduct Pays

130 Soldiers Rewarded For Splendid Behavior

Pittsburgh Pa. Courier

JUL 10 1943

FORT WASHINGTON, Md., July 8—Good Conduct ribbons for "exemplary behavior, efficiency and fidelity" were awarded to 130 enlisted men of the Service company (colored) of the Service Battalion, Adjutant General's school at a presentation review last week.

The awards were made by Brig. Gen. Herbert C. Holdridge, commandant, in the presence of all troops stationed at Fort Washington drawn up in parade formation. After the ceremony the troops passed in review.

The ribbon represents an unblemished record during at least a year's service and is made a part of each man's permanent service record.

The names and addresses of the members of the Service company receiving the ribbons follow:

OKLAHOMA

Sgt. Bocker T. Banner, Langston.

TEXAS

Sgt. Samuel Farmer, Gainesville.

FLORIDA

Sgt. Charles Long, Jacksonville.
Pvt. Walter E. Jackson, Pensacola.

PENNSYLVANIA

T/5 Guy D. Neal, Grove City.
Pvt. David E. Jones, Duquesne.

NEW YORK

S/Sgt. Elwood [illegible], Buffalo.

NEW JERSEY

Pvt. Walter F. Downs, Camden.

OHIO

Sgt. Sylvester Walker, Mansfield.

MINNESOTA

Sgt. Fowell B. Fulbright, Hugo.

ARKANSAS

Sgt. D. C. White, Texarkana.
Pvt. James Walker, Cotton Plant.
Pvt. Roger Williams, Grady.

WEST VIRGINIA

Pvt. Jesse Turk, Clarksburg.

VIRGINIA

T/Sgt. Cleveland Woodson, Richmond.
Sgt. Thomas M. Walker, Phenix.

NORTH CAROLINA

Sgt. Lee E. McClinton, Greensboro.
Cpl. Warren H. Greenfield, Seven Springs.
Cpl. Edward S. Harris, Jr., Raleigh.
Cpl. Charles R. Marbley, Morehead City.
Pfc. McNair Covington, Durham.
Pfc. Edgar W. P. Murphy, Lexington.
Pfc. Clarence Oliver, Thomasville.
Pfc. Leroy H. Thompson, Fairmont.
Pvt. Joseph Ballard, Gates.
Pvt. Milford Barnes, Goldsboro.
Pvt. Harding H. Carr, Warsaw.
Pvt. Clarence A. Coleman, Wise.
Pvt. James B. Evans, Rocky Mount.
Pvt. Leroy Forbes, Mt. Olive.
Pvt. Percy A. Harrell, Corapeake.
Pvt. Herbert Holmes, Goldsboro.
Pvt. Samuel Hoskie, Como.
Pvt. William Leggett, Lumberton.
Pvt. James E. Pickett, Morehead City.
Pvt. Eugene Porter, Armour.
Pvt. Lucian H. Rhodes, Rose Hill.
Pvt. Roger B. Roberts, Lexington.
Pvt. David J. Sharpless, Chinquapin.
Pvt. David Stokes, Teachey.
Pvt. Elwood Thomas, Beaufort.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Pvt. Leroy Caughman, Columbia.
Pvt. Moses Jenkins, Rembert.
Pvt. Otis Moore, Sumter.

GEORGIA

Cpl. Malcolm R. Chaires, Atlanta.
Pfc. Johnnie C. Hector, Athens.
Pvt. Elick L. Anderson, Bainbridge.
Pvt. Alfred Brown, Savannah.
Pvt. John W. Bryant, Savannah.
Pvt. Marion A. Hill, Athens.
Pvt. James Nealy, Richland.
Pvt. Theodore R. Small, Quitman.
Pvt. Willie S. Williams, Atlanta.
Pvt. Eugene B. Young, Jr., Athens.

TENNESSEE

Sgt. Homer E. Purdy, Pinson.
Cpl. Jesse W. Scott, Nashville.
Pfc. Clarence Johnson, Rockwood.
Pfc. Lushous Kelly, Chattanooga.
Pfc. Charles Larry, Memphis.
Pfc. [illegible], Elizabethton.
Pfc. Ephraim S. Sweat[illegible], [illegible]ertown.
Pvt. Henry D. Anderson, Elkton.
Pvt. Albert N. Bradley, Rogersville.
Pvt. John Gentry, Brentwood.
Pvt. Joe J. McCray, Nashville.
Pvt. Earl L. Moraney, Chattanooga.
Pvt. Nathaniel H. Proctor, Lebanon.
Pvt. William A. Smith, Nashville.
Pvt. Ivory M. Stegall, Jackson.

LOUISIANA

Pfc. James Jones, Pfc. Albert C. Kelly, Pfc. Frank Marshall, Pfc. Earl Moon, Pfc. Clifford L. Pavageau, Pfc. Julius J. Toval, Pfc. Albert Williams, Pvt. Alvin U. Angrum, Pvt. Nelson J. Gaspard, Pvt. Lawrence A. Grandpre, Pvt. Aaron Handy, Pvt. Woodrow W. Harris, Pvt. James J. Herbert, Jr., Pvt. Ambrose M. Johnson, Pvt. David E. Jones, Pvt. Robert B. Logwood, Pvt. Wm. Moore, Pvt. Charles J. Porter, Pvt. Sidney J. Smith, Jr., Pvt. Charles Strader, Jr., Pvt. Lawrence Thiel, Jr., Pvt. Harvey Tilton, Pvt. Edward Wilcox, Pvt. Eldridge Williams, Pvt. Clarence T. Wilson, all for New Orleans.

Cpl. George E. Stephens, Gretna.
Pfc. Charles E. Weber, Thibadant.
Pvt. Melvin J. Andry, Triumph.
Pvt. Captain Brown, Westlake.
Pvt. Henry Charles, Rayne.
Pvt. Leo J. Green, Zachary.
Pvt. Louis Jones, Gretna.

MISSISSIPPI

T/4 Henry L. Coree, Shannon.
Cpl. Joseph E. Johnson, Little Rock.
T/5 Henry C. Conerway, Armory.
Pfc. Willie M. Cook, Oxford.
Pfc. Fred A. Crocektte, Oxford.
Pfc. John T. Grady, Jackson.
Pfc. Webster T. Herron, Piney Wood.
Pfc. Norman Jack, Shaw.
Pfc. Claud Sparkman, Vicksburg.
Pvt. Willie B. Bankhead, Corinth.
Pvt. John Brandon, Okolona.
Pvt. Victorie Buchanan, Phil[illegible]
Pvt. O. Q. Gillespie, [illegible]
Pvt. Willie [illegible] Graham, Corinth.
Pvt. Benajmin F. Henderson, Raymond.
Pvt. Henry Jackson, Ergemont.
Pvt. James W. Jackson, Hermanville.
Pvt. John H. Morris, Scott.
Pvt. Ralph A. Newman, Bovina.
Pvt. Leslie Oliver, Oxford.
Pvt. John C. Pegues, Oxford.
Pvt. Henry L. Smith, Toomsuba.

ALABAMA

Cpl. Roscoe C. Gaillard, Pritchard.
Pvt. Lovell Truss, Renfroe.
Pfc. Lowon Worthy, Birmingham.
Pvt. Calvin Heard, Malone.

JUL 10 1943

JUL 10 1943

47k

NON-COM RESCUES DROWNING OFFICER

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

SOMEWHERE IN LOUISIANA, June 10—Sgt. Hannibal Moore, Long Branch, N. J., was commended by his regimental commander last week for heroism in rescuing Lt. Benjamin Craig, Fayetteville, West Va., from drowning.

Col. Everett Yon, commander of the Infantry Regiment of which Sgt. Moore and Lieutenant Craig are members, commanded the sergeant for his quick thinking, skillful swimming and courage.

EXPERT SWIMMER

Sergeant Moore is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sewell J. Moore of 233 Potter avenue, Long Branch. He is transportation sergeant of his unit. A highly competent swimmer, he has swam distances as great as seven miles.

Lieutenant Craig, a graduate of the Infantry Officer Candidate school, Fort Benning, Ga. He is intelligence officer of his battalion. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Craig, reside in Fayetteville.

JUN 12 1943

SUBMARINE MEN DECORATED

47k

Courier Pittsburgh Pa.

JUN 26 1943

This U. S. submarine lookout "team" today has been credited with contributing "in a large measure to the success" of their ship on war patrols. Donald J. Snyder, torpedoman's mate third class, USN, left, and Jos. Cross, steward's mate first class USN, are shown in this photograph shortly after they had been decorated with the Navy and Marine Corps medal by Rear Admiral C. A. Lockwood Jr., Commander Submarine Force, U. S. Pacific Fleet. Snyder's home is 5935 Rodgers street, Lincoln Place, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Cross' home 2510 Thaliam street, New Orleans, La.—Int. News Photo.

JUN 26 1943

93rd Sergeant Rescues Officer From Drowning

JUN 12 1943 Chicago Ill. Defender

SOMEWHERE IN LOUISIANA — Sergeant Hannibal Moore of Long Branch, N. J., was commended by his regimental commander this week for heroism shown in rescuing Liutenant Benjamin Craig of Fayetteville, West Va., from drowning.

During a difficult river crossing problem, Lieutenant Craig was swimming in a swiftly moving current, he lost the fight to the current, and called for help. Sergeant Moore, who was swimming nearby came to his aid and pulled him to shore, where other soldiers lifted the exhausted pair from the river.

Colonel Everett Yon, commander of the infantry regiment of which Sergeant Moore and Lieutnant Craig are members, commended the sergeant for his quick thinking, skillful swimming, and courage. All that Lieutenant Craig has to say, is, "if it hadn't been for Sergeant Moore, whew."

JUN 12 1943

Sergeant Moore is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sewall J. Moore of 233 Potter avenue, Long Branch, N.J. He entered the army August 18, 1941, and is transportation sergeant of his unit. Prior to entering the armed service he studied voice at the Weigster Studios, New York City. A highly competent swimmer, he has swum distances as great as seven miles.

JUN 12 1943

Lieutenant Craig, a graduate of Infantry Officer Candidate School, Fort Benning, Ga., entered the army February 17, 1941, and received his commission in August, 1942. He is intelligence officer of his battalion. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Craig reside in Fayetteville.

The rescue came in the midst of strenuous field training in the Third army maneuver area, climaxing nearly two months of battle conditioning.

HEROISM ON THE HOME FRONT

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

MAR 20 1943

For heroism displayed in rescuing an eight-year-old child from drowning in Michigan's icy Flint River last December, Arthur W. Freeman, 28-year-old Negro sergeant of the 889th Basic Training Squadron of Tuskegee Army Flying School, received the Soldier's Medal for valor at a ceremony before massed squadrons of Negro enlisted men, aviation cadets and tactical officers. Major Gen. Ralph Royce, commanding Army Air Forces Southeast Training Center, is shown awarding the medal to Sgt. Freeman.—International News photo.

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
October 5, 1943

ARMY MAN LAUDS TUSKEGEE NEGRO

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Oct. 4—(AP)—Commendation from a high Army officer has come to R. C. Daniels, Negro civilian worker at Tuskegee Army Air Field.

Maj. Gen. T. J. Hanley, Jr., commanding general of the Eastern Flying Training Command, cited Daniels for saving the life of a Negro pilot from a burning plane.

Gen. Hanley said Daniels risked his life to rescue the pilot, Lt. Andrew H. Doswell, "in keeping with the best traditions of the American spirit of unselfish sacrifice."

47k

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Mississippian Awarded The Legion of Merit

Staff Sergeant Isaac McGrew Jr., member of an infantry regiment operating in the South Pacific Area, has been awarded the Legion of Merit, the War Department announced this week He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac McGrew, Sr., Route 5, Yazoo City, Miss.

47k

47b-1943

Award 2 Soldiers Legion Of Merit

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Announce Assignments, Promotions Of Soldiers In South Pacific Area

SOMEWHERE IN THE PACIFIC—SNS—News of awards, assignments and promotions of Negro troops from the Pacific area are increasing weekly. Most recent news tells of the award of the Legion of Merit to two soldiers from Alabama and Louisiana by Lieutenant Millard F. Harmon, Commanding General of the Army Forces in the South Pacific area.

JUN 2 1943

Staff Sergeant Dennis Holt, 3600 Douglas Road, Birmingham, Alabama, received his award as chief of a Battalion Wire Section, for leading his men to wire trails, through miles of difficult jungle. They carried wire up to a mountain top observation post and frequently crossed miles of water to nearby islands in alls orts of bad weather.

Sergeant J. P. Mays of Tullulah, Louisiana, as regimental wire chief, directed the field operation of installing and maintaining the wire-lines of widely-dispersed regiment. He negotiated difficult and unexpelled terrain with limited supplies, using pack horses instead of wire-laying equipment. Placed on limited duty, because of physical conditions brought about by his activities, Sergeant Mays, heedless of his condition, continued his work which ofen required attention from 14 to 18 hours a day, and through his efforts, uninterrupted communications were maintained.

PROMOTIONS

Three promotions in the Area in the ranks of an Engineer Battalion, which received its basic training at Camp Shelby, Mississippi, are those of Jack Hayman, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Morris Lee, Vidalia, Louisiana, and Thurman Vaughn, Nahville, Tennessee.

Hayman was promoted from Sergeant to Staff Sergeant. Before the Army, he had been a First Sergeant in the Civilian Conservation Corps stationed at Westport, Pennsylvania, after which he had worked in the Department of Agriculture in that state. The Sergeant is now in the Medical Detachment of his Battalion, where he is proving invaluable as a surgical assistant.

Morris Lee was promoted to Sergeant. He is a graduate of Southern University, Scotlandville, La., where he obtained a B. S. degree, and majored in Agriculture and woodwork. He later taught these subjects before joining the Army.

Thurman Vaughn was promoted to Technician 4th Grade. He is a first cook and is known as one of the best men in his line in the regime. His specialty is layer cake, which is in much demand whenever he can get the making to produce one.

ASSIGNMENTS

A soldier who earned the chance to beccome a candidate for Officers School, while serving far away from home is Sergeant E. O. Armstrong, brother of Mrs. Clavant Strains, 995 Yearger Street, Knoxville, Tennessee.

JUN 2 1943

A former student of Knoxville College, he joined the Army in February, 1942. After completing his basic training at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, he reported to an Engineer Battalion at Elgin Field, Florida, and was later transferred to his present unit, where he rose to the rank of Corporal within a few weeks.

In October, 1942, the unit embarked for the South Pacific Area, where it is now stationed.

Helped To Rescue 32 From Bombed Ship

Courier

Unsung Pearl Harbor Naval Hero, Now In Army, Found In New Guinea

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

By "SCOOP" JONES

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, June 24—(ANP)—Rambling around this island looking for unusual news material, I really found something to print—an unsung Pearl Harbor Navy hero, unknown to most of us. He's Cpl. Fred W. Taylor, whom the commander-in-chief of the U. S. Pacific fleet cited for bravery in the rescue of part of the crew of the U.S.S. Oklahoma after it had capsized at Pearl Harbor.

JUN 26 1943

It appears that the battleship was put out of commission in the waters of the harbor while the Japanese Zeros swarmed the sky. Bombs were exploding everywhere. Cpl. Taylor, along with a group of white drillers, launched a small boat and set out to free, from their trapped position in the hull of the ship, what was left of its survivors. The rescue lasted for several hours and through the entire procedure the men were exposed to the hazards of the aerial attack.

GIVEN CITATION

The citation commending Cpl. Taylor reads. "For heroic and most efficient work, with utter disregard of his own personal safety, in assisting in the rescue of 32 members of the U.S.S. Oklahoma, which had capsized during the attack on the fleet in Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii, by Japanese forces on Dec. 7, 1941. It was due to his untiring efforts in face of great hazards that the rescue work was continued until all known survivors had been released from the hull of that ship."

FAILED TO GET TRANSFER

Cpl. Taylor spent eight months in Hawaii as one of the only two colored first class drillers (a Civil Service appointment) in Uncle Sam's naval shipyard. Five of these months were spent prior to the Nips' surprise attack. He has had an interesting taste of this war. He became ill shortly after the Pearl Harbor affair and was honorably discharged from the Pacific branch of the Navy, with a possibility of transfer to the Philadelphia shipyard. He returned to America in March of '42, slightly "bomb happy," for a much-needed rest and to await action on his pending transfer. However, as luck would have it, the draft board stepped into the picture . . classified him as A-1 . . and inducted him into the Army in June, 1942. Fourteen days after his induction he received official confirmation of his transfer—but too late.

JUN 26 1943

While at Fort Belvoir, Va., receiving his basic training for the engineer corps, he was promoted to the rank of corporal, which is an unusual procedure for Army training centers. Then in January, 1943, he was shipped to foreign service duty. Arrived in Australia and was sent up to New Guinea with other casualty replacements in April, just in time to get a dose of one of the Japanese biggest air raids on this area.

JUN 26 1943

Lookout "Team"

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

This U. S. Submarine lookout "team" today has been credited with contributing "in a large measure to the success" of their ship on war patrols. Donald J. Snyder, torpedoman's mate third class, USN, left and Joseph Cross, steward's mate first class, USNR, are shown in this photograph shortly after they had been decorated with the Navy and Marine Corps Medal by Rear Admiral C. A. Lockwood, Jr., Commander Submarine Force, U. S. Pacific Fleet. Snyder's home is 5935 Rodgers street, Lincoln Place, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Cross' home, 2510 Thaliam street, New Orleans, La.

JUN 26 1943

Two Who Risked Lives To Save Officers, Given Medals

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Southern Boys Plunge Into Artic-Bound Stream To Effect Rescue

EDMONTON, ALBERTA, Canada—(SNS)—In a far-north setting that macked of a Robert Service ballad, two members of a U. S. Engineer combat unit were awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism. The War Department announced this week.

Without thought of their own lives, they had gone plunging into an Arcticbound stream to rescue an officer who had slipped from a wharf.

The soldiers were Sergeant Robert Hayes, 27, Columbia, South Carolina, and Technician Fifth Grade Hubert Massie, 23, of Waynesboro, Virginia. Brigadier General Ludson D Worsham of the Corps of Engineers, now directing the Northwest Division, was the awarding officer.

Aside from the heroism involved and the Army's recognition of it several factors were contingent with that ceremony which resulted perhaps in broader scope, toward acknowledgement of the fine spirit-at-large displayed not only by Hayes and Massie, but by all the fellow soldiers of their outfit.

WILL BE TOLD LATER

At a later date, Army officials now point out, the name and number of this unit can be written with pride into the open book. Today, however, such facts must be kept veiled for reasons of security.

The salient the (when details of the work of this unit are revealed) will probably deal with a story how young men from the Gulf State cotton-fields, from one-mule fields of the Carolinas, from tobacco-sheds of the Virginias and a few from the midwest mills, all were drawn together in common cause and then went into one of the strangest toughest battles ever fought by human beings.

It was a battle against the elements of nature; it was one for survival of the fittest.

It was a strange battle, because those same young men (brought up to the friendly sun) had been chosen by virtue of their pre-Army work to do an important job in this far-northern spot in Canada. But it was a cold Canada they arrived in, fiercely so; meaner than they ever dreamed of back where the catfish bite and the jasmine grows.

BUILT OWN CAMP

It was a tough battle because they had to fend for themselves. No one put their camp there for them; they cut the logs and built the structures with their own hands. They fought solitude; for the place was only a Hudson's Bay post to begin with. They fought homesickness; for home far to the friendlier south.

According to Army observers, the point that all-out historians will stress is this:

The record of this Combat Engineer unit will show that Negro troops of the U. S. Armed Forces are probably the most adaptable men on earth. They can do a job anywhere under the sun—and in the far north where there is no sun. They can take it, and they can do with staunch American loyalty, and without question.

Indeed, the men of this now-unnamed group were hand-picked with careful designation—and for one of the toughest jobs of all. This in itself would seem to be an obvious indication of a streamlined Army's keen eye toward picking the right men at the right job—and this job called for all-around specialists with staying-power.

The camp is well-rovisioned, and the food is good. For recreation, and the boys like fun despite the pressure of their labors, facilities of the American Red Cross shows to fine advantage.

Four church services are available each Sunday including two at J. A. Clement was pastor of an a Roman Catholic Mission which has gained fine reputation for its work among the Eskimo people. Chaplain (Captain) influential church in Boston before the war. His choir can hold its own anywhere.

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
October [illegible], 1943

MISSISSIPPIAN WINS AWARD FOR VALOR

WASHINGTON — St. Sgt. Isaac McGrew, Jr., Negro member of an infantry regiment operating in the South Pacific area, has been awarded the Legion of Merit, the War Department announced this week. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac McGrew, Sr., Route 5, Yazoo City, Miss.

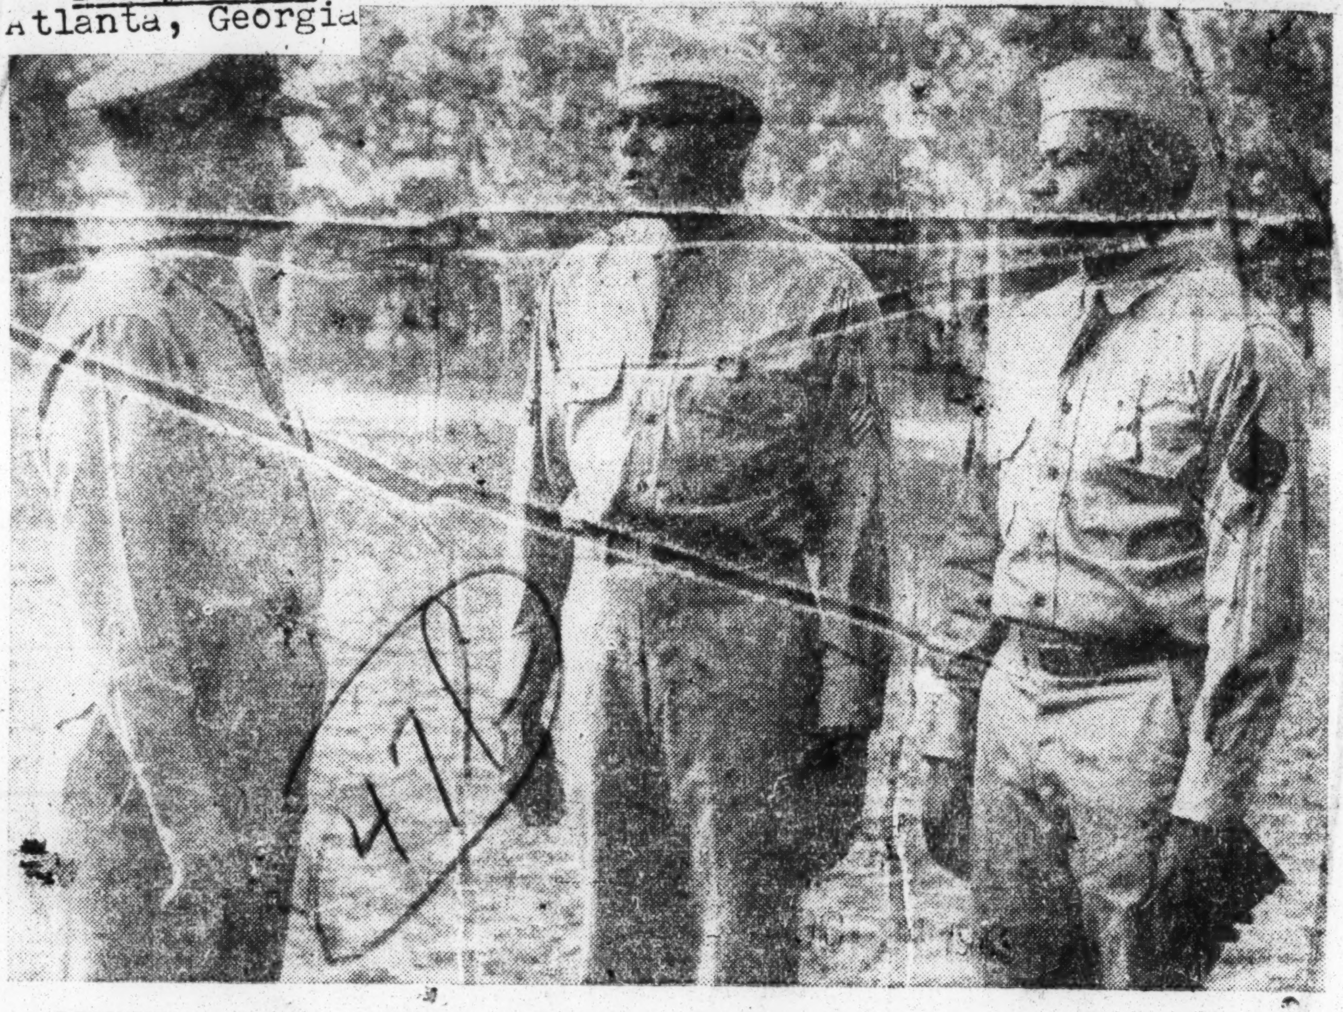
The citation, dated Aug. 25, 1943, is as follows:

"For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services of merit in the South Pacific area, from May 15, 1942, to Feb. 20, 1943. During this entire period Sgt. McGrew was primarily responsible for the successful installation and maintenance of 300 miles of wire under the most rigorous of tropical, climatic and terrain conditions.

"Equipped with only infantry tables of basic allowance equipment, Sgt. McGrew improvised methods for overcoming numerous obstacles of nature and never failed to accomplish an assigned mission. By long hours, ingenuity and perserverance he performed remarkable feats of accomplishment."

Get Soldiers' Medals For Rescue Of Officer

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



47R

SOMEWHERE IN CANADA — Brigadier General Ludson D. Worsham of the Corps of Engineers is pictured here with Sergeant [illegible]ert Hayes, left, and Technician [illegible]bert Massie, shortly after he p[illegible]'s Medal to the two for heroism displayed when they rescued an officer from a river in Canada. The scene of the award is an undisclosed camp in Northern Canada.—(U. S. Army Photo)

Hero And Officer He Saved

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

47R

ORLANDO, Fla. — (SNS) — Not all heroes are born in battle. Sergeant Willie B. Goodson, Negro, Fairfield, Ala., who is stationed at the Army Air Forces School of Applied Tactics, Orlando, Fla., will soon be awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism by Brig. Gen. Hume Peabody, commandant of AAFSAT, for risking his life to save that of an officer.

Sergeant Goodson, whose mother is Rosie Lee Taylor, Oneonta, Ala., is being awarded Soldier's Medal for rushing into telegraph poles falling from a railroad flatcar and dragging Lt. Donald P. Rush, construction officer of Goodson's unit, from beneath the pile where he was trapped.

Lt. Rush had climbed to the top of the flatcar to release the braces holding the poles in order to unload them.

In leaping from the car, the lieutenant slipped, was struck by a pole and suffered a broken ankle. other falling poles began to pile up on him.

At great personal risk, Sergeant Goodson ran to the lieutenant's side, secured him beneath the arms and dragged him to safety.

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

Wins Merit Awad

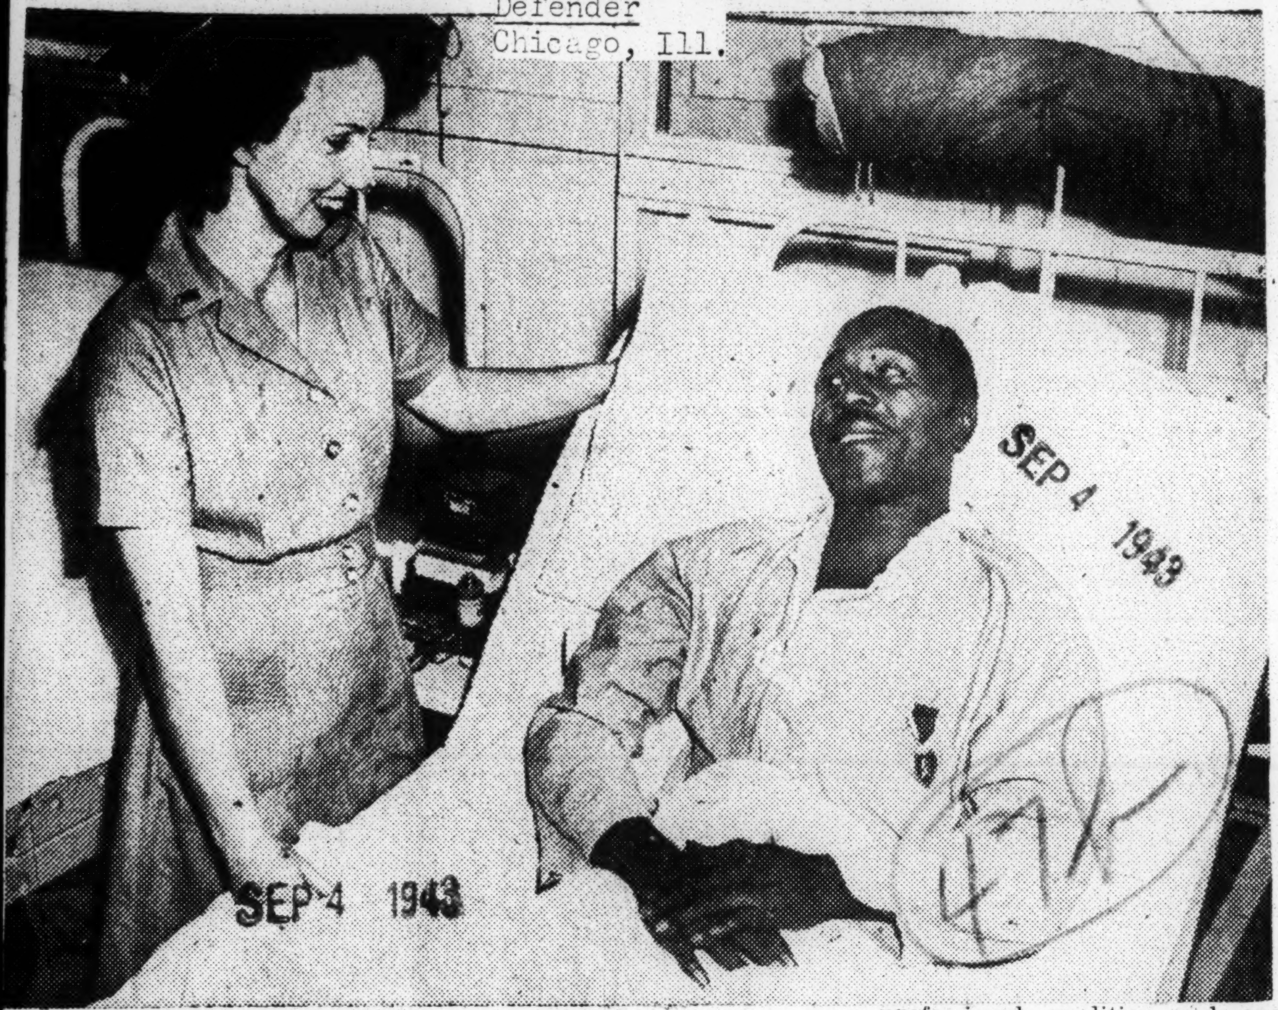
DEC 1943

THE LEGION OF MERIT for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services as first sergeant of Company H, 25th Infantry," went October 30, 1943 to First Sergeant Samuel M. Baker, Detachment M. C., Fort Huachuca, Arizona. Sergeant Baker also holds the Soldier's Medal. His native home is Nashville, Tenn.—Photo by U. S. Army Signal Corps.

47b-1943

WINS PURPLE HEART IN SOUTH PACIFIC

Defender
Chicago, Ill.



SEP 4 1943

Pvt. James Barker, assigned to an Engineer unit in the South Pacific, receives the congratulations of Lieut. H. E. Bebble, nurse, at an advanced base army hospital. He was recently awarded the Purple Heart, was wounded in action on a South Pacific island. Private Barker's sister, Julia, lives at 110 West 126th street, New York City.

Yazoo Negro Awarded Legion of Merit in Pacific

Yazoo City, Miss., Herald
October 15, 1943

Sgt. Isaac McGrew, Whose Mother Lives on Rt. 5, Receives High Award for Service

A dispatch from the United States Army Headquarters in the South Pacific announces that under the direction of the President, Staff Sergeant Isaac McGrew, Infantry, has been awarded the Legion of Merit award by Lt. General Millard F. Harmon, commanding United States Army Forces in the South Pacific Area.

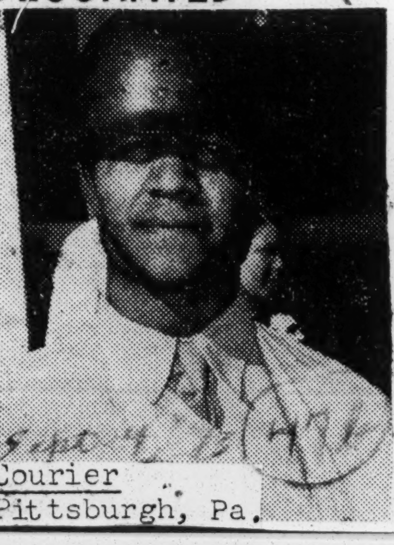
Sgt. McGrew, negro, is the son of Leanna McGrew, who resides on Route 5.

The dispatch read: "for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services of merit in the South Pacific area, from May 15, 1942, to February 20, 1943. During this entire period Sergeant McGrew was primarily responsible for the successful installation and maintenance of three hundred miles of wire under the most rigorous of tropical, climatic, and terrain conditions. Equipped with only Infantry battalion T/BA equipment, Sergeant McGrew improvised methods of overcoming numerous obstacles of nature and never failed to accomplish an assigned mission. By long hours, ingenuity and perseverance he performed remarkable feats of accomplishment. He was throughout these arduous months invariably pleasant, attentive to detail, and considerate of others. His enthusiasm, ability, professional qualities and exceptionally faithful service over an extended period of time set an example of unselfish devotion to duty to all who came into contact with him."

Sergeant McGrew enlisted in the Army about two years ago and saw service in Army camps in the States before being shipped to foreign service in April of last year. Congratulations are extended to him on the honor that has been placed upon him.

47b

DECORATED



Sept 4 '43

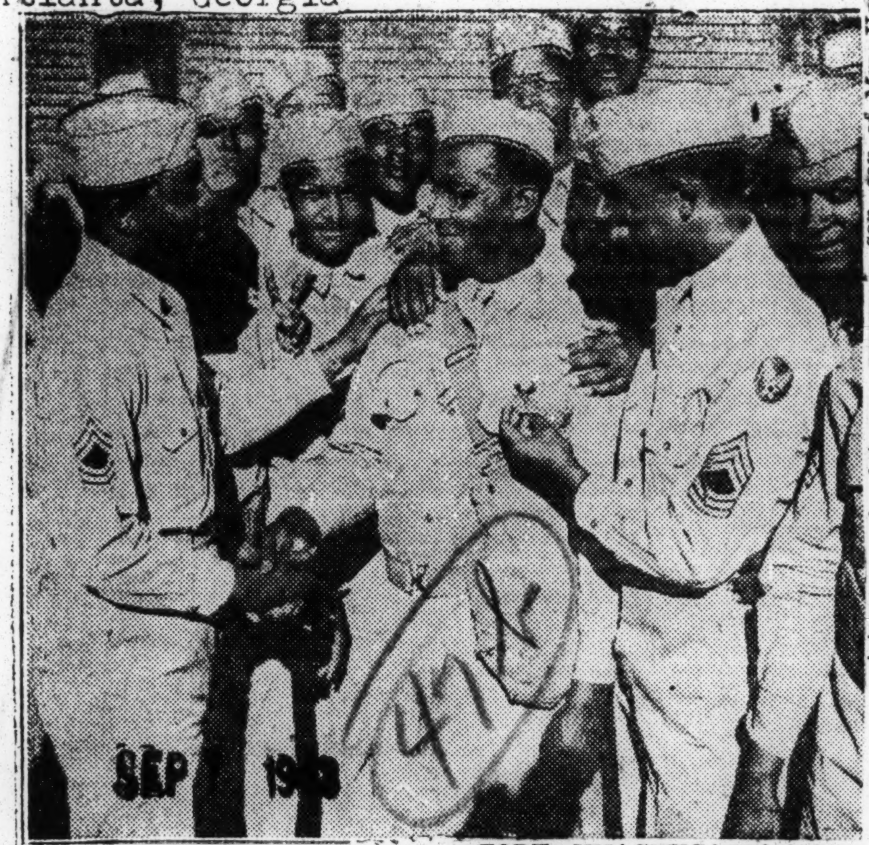
Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Saluted by the entire First Regiment for his calm courage, 1st Sgt. Theodore R. Roach of Cleveland, Ohio, received the Legion of Merit Medal for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service." The medal was pinned on by Brig. Gen. Wallace C. Philoon, commanding general of IRTC at an impressive ceremony at Fort McClellan, Alabama. Sergeant Roach saved many of his comrades from injury and death by his coolness after being hit by a shell in maneuvers.

SEP 4 1943

Congratulate The New Hero

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



SEP 7 1943

ROME ARMY AIR FIELD, N. Y.—First Sergeant Horace J. Porter of New York City congratulates Corporal John D. Hilton a few minutes after Corporal Hilton was awarded the Soldier's Medal today for heroism. Admiring the Medal is Master Sergeant Arthur Giron of Opelousas, Louiisana. Corporal Hilton was awarded the Soldier's Medal at a Review of the Rome Army Air Field, Rome, New York, by Brigadier General C. P. Kane, Commanding General, Rome Air Service Command. Corporal Hilton, of Bolivar, West Virginia, is one of Air Service Command's ground crew members whose job it is to "Keep 'em Flying."

SEP 7 1943

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

Soldier Achieves Honor At School For His Unit

FORT HUACHUCA, Arizona — Technician Fourth Grade Leroy A. Patton of Greenville, Ala., Battery clerk of Headquarters Battalion Artillery, won laurels for his unit and the Division during a recent period of study at the Army Administration School for Enlisted Men at Atlanta, Georgia," says the "Buffalo," camp paper of the 92nd Division.

Because of proficiency in the course which teaches administrative duties, he was given an efficiency rating in soldier psychology, clerical habits, mess accounting, filing, general property accounting authorized abbreviations, typing,, organizational property and types and other supplementary clerical subjects.

Sergeant Patton attended Lomax-Hannon College at Greenville where he was a basketball letter man.

AUG 14 1943

---

13 Purple Heart Awards In Pacific

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia
1943

By "SCOOP" JONES

WITH AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES IN NEW GUINEA—(A N P)—Among latest developments of the week, 13 men were decorated as a result of receiving wounds doing a Jap air attack, while working at a New Guinea port. All men are valuable truck drivers, who haul tons of supplies daily to and from the docks.

SEP 6 1943

They are: Pvts. Lester L. Butler, 252 Fair St., Savannah, Ga.; Arthur S. Watson, 260 E. 142nd St., New York; Gilbert H. Morris, 122 Crawford St., Duquonne, Pa., son of Mrs. Estelle Morris; Izear Jackson, son of Mrs. Hattie Pless, Rayville, La.; William L. Thorne, son of Mrs. Sarah Ashay, 5 Momie Place, Charleston, S. C.; Booker T. Evans Jr., son of Mr. Booker T. Evans, Sr., Houston, Miss.; Robert T. Crews, Jr., son of Mrs. Annie Crews, 160 Minus St., Greenville, S. C.; Abron Irwin, son of Mrs. Cora Irwin, Box 116, Monud Bayou, Miss.; James E. Guilford, son of Mrs. Nancy B. Guilford, 115 Hassison St., Boston; Albert H. Latourse, 26 Dean St., Glentock, N. J.; Wilson Lee Jr., 1009 Avenue S., Pratt City, Ala.; Joe Hardy, son of Mrs. Janie Hardy, 136 Vine St., Roanoke, N. C., and Alfonzo Smith, son of Mrs. Lula Smith, New York.

The citation for the awards, which was by order of Col. Geoffrey Galwey, an advance base commander, read: "For wounds received in action near....March 8, 1943. The formal presentation of awards was last week.

Among the 18 men receiving promotions were Staff Sgts. Harold J. Morris, Jackson, Miss., and Gaston E. Jernigan, Whiteville, N. C., from the rank of sergeant. S-Sgt. Morris' promotion also carries with it the title of company transportation sergeant. His job is to supervise traffic and maintenance of vehicles and heavy motorized equipment [illegible] his outfit. S-Sgt. Jernigan becomes his company's construction foreman. His promotion came as result of outstanding carpentry work in erecting one of the largest hospitals on this base.

SEP 6 1943

SEP 5 1943

Others receiving promotions were: (promoted to Sgt. from Pfc.) James Smith, Plaquemine, La., (promoted to Cpl.) Thomas H. Wiggins, Natchez, Miss., William W. Jones, Charles City, Va., Sexton E. Caldwell, Bethany, La., George W. Walker, Fountain Inn, S. C., Blano Spearman, [illegible]ensville, Miss., Harold Spotts[illegible] Shelby, Va., Elvin L. Cooper, Baton Rouge, La., Benjamin J. Jackson, Glenn, Ga., Bennie Lewis, Midville, Ga., Willie Rogers, Shreveport, La., Preston Tassin, Garyville, La., Cleo Moore, Sumrall, Miss., Wolfred J. DeSilva, New Orleans, Johnnie A. Jones, Tallulah, La., and Overton Thacker, Nashville.

A HERO AND TWO LOVELIES

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

SEP 18 1943

Steward Second-Class James Pettaway of the U.S. Navy is the object of much admiration and interest since his return from action in the current conflict against the Axis in which he earned the distinguished "Purple Heart" award. Above he is shown receiving the admiration of two lovely hostesses, Jerry Woods, left, and Eunice Farris, of the Fremery USO club. Miss Farris is inspecting the hero's medal.—Joseph photo.

SEP 18 1943

World War 1 Soldier Gets Purple Heart After 19 Years

Daily World Atlanta, Georgia

CAMP LEE, Va. — (SNS) — In a Veterans' hospital in 1933, Cpl. Thomas Robinson, now of Company D, 11th Quartermaster Training Regiment, was informed by a doctor that a Purple Heart award was being held for him by the War Department in Washington.

AUG 25 1943

Robinson roved the country with the Pullman Car Company after his discharge, which prevented the Government catching up with him to pin on his decoration won in France with the 92nd Division.

Inducted into the service at his native Chicago, he was sent to France from Camp Upton, L. I., N. Y. Among the battles in which he saw action were Motz and Meuse-Argonne.

It was at the front in 1918 that Robinson realized that he had been gassed. He was moved back from hospital to hospital, finally reac[illegible]se where he spent months. [illegible] recovering he left the hospital without permission in an endeavor to reach his outfit. Awaking in a hotel near Paris he inquired what the shouting was for which he heard out side. "The war is over," someone said.

Robinson returned to the states in 1919. He left Chicago immediately after his return to America leaving no address, a fact which required the War Department 19 years to track him.

gation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of a com[illegible] field by Carter's employer at the sawmill. The case was presented to the Grand Jury by Albert J. Tully, U. S. Attorney for the Southern District of Alabama.

AUG 25 1943

Our Boys In Pacific Area Knock Out All Obstacles

SEP 18 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Several Are Awarded Purple Heart, Soldier's Medal; Distinguished Service Cross Goes to Private of Quartermaster Regiment.

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, Sept. 16—Through virgin jungles and across unconquered mountains, Negro engineers in the Southwest Pacific have swept all obstacles before them in their zeal to "make a way" for the spearhead of warfare in this theatre. Like some genie with a magic wand, they have spun a network of roads, whipped out steel carpets for landing fields, raised airdromes and built docks where none had appeared before.

Negro engineer troops constitute a substantial number of engineers in this theatre. Their performance has been most creditable, both as units engaged in important engineer activities and as individual soldiers in discharge of their duties.

IN MOST FORWARD AREAS

These Negro engineers were among the troops in the most forward areas and were subject to many air attacks during the land and a[illegible] campaigns in Papua and New Guinea. [illegible]rated both behind the lines and in the forward areas. Of the Engineer Service Troops cited by the War Department General Orders for outstanding performance of duty with honor and distinction, the following units were commended:

- 2 Engineer General Service units.
- 1 Engineer dump truck unit.
- 1 Ordnance ammunition unit.
- 1 Port unit.
- 1 Quartermaster truck unit.
- 1 Company of Quartermaster truck unit.
- 1 Detachment chemical decontamination unit.
- 1 Quartermaster railhead unit.

SEP 18 1943

LIST INDIVIDUAL DECORATIONS

The Distinguished Service Cross

GEORGE WATSON, Private — Quartermaster Regiment. For extraordinary heroism—on March 8, 1943. Next of kin: Mrs. Cora Jackson (sister), 2703 Washington avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

Award of Soldier's Medal

JULIUS S. FRANKLIN, Private First Class — Engineer Battalion. For heroism displayed on June 25, 1942, near an airdrome, New Guinea. Charleston, S. C.

HARV[illegible] CRANDLE, Private First Class—Engineer Battalion. For heroism displayed on June 25, 1942, near an airdrome, New Guinea. Greenville, N. C.

JAMES SCOTT, Private — Engineer Battalion. For heroism displayed June 25, 1942, near an airdrome in New Guinea. Montgomery, Ala.

JOSEPH KUKENDALL, Corporal—Quartermaster Truck Regiment. For heroism—on July 8, 1942. San Antonio, Texas.

WASH MURDOCK, Sergeant — Ordnance Company (Am). For heroism displayed near Port Moresby, New Guinea, on September 15, 1942. Detroit, Mich.

Award of the Purple Heart

HE[illegible]AN JACKSON, Private First [illegible] Medical Detachment

Engineer Regiment. For wounds received as a result of an enemy air attack in New Guinea, May 14, 1943. Pittsburgh, Pa.

18 1943

LEWIS JOHNSON, Private—Engineer Regiment. For wounds received as a result of an enemy attack in the vicinity—New Guinea, May 14, 1943. Chicago, Ill.

NATHANIEL McCALL, Private—Engineer Regiment. For wounds received as a result of an enemy air attack in New Guinea, May 14, 1943. Wildwood, Fla.

CHARLES KYLES, Private First Class — Engineer Regiment. For wounds received in an enemy bombing raid on camp area, January 27, 1943. Carbondale, Ill.

ALBERT V. DUKE, Private — Ordnance Company, (Am). For wounds received in action near Port Moresby, New Guinea, January 27, 1943. Chicago, Il.

OTIS RICHARDS, Private First Class—Quartermaster. For wounds received in action at Port Moresby, New Guinea, on September 5, 1942. Los Angeles, Calif.

ROBERT R. JUSTICE, Sergeant—Engineers. For wounds received as a result of enemy action, during a bombing raid at New Guinea, May 14, 1943. Chicago, Ill.

WILLIE WILLIAMS, Private First Class—Engineers. For wounds received as a result of enemy action during a bombing raid, New Guinea, May 14, 1943. Fayetteville, N. C.

GEORGE L. HARVEY, Private—Engineers. For wounds received as a result of enemy action during a bombing raid at New Guinea, May 14, 1943. Yates, Mo.

CRESS PATTERSON, Private—Engineers. For wounds received as a result of enemy action during a b[illegible] raid, May 14, 1943. Tampa, F[illegible]

WOODROW W[illegible], Private—Engineers. For w[illegible] received as a result of enemy action during a bombing raid at New Guinea, May 14, 1943. State Line, Miss.

JOSEPH SINGLETON, Private. Engineer Regiment. For wounds received in action near Buna, New Guinea, on December 17, 1942. Bains, La.

SEP 18 1943

Choicagoan Wins Soldiers' Medal For Brave Rescue

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

LONDON.—The Soldier's Medal was this week bestowed upon Private First Class William R. Preston, 4646 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill., a member of a Quartermaster Unit.

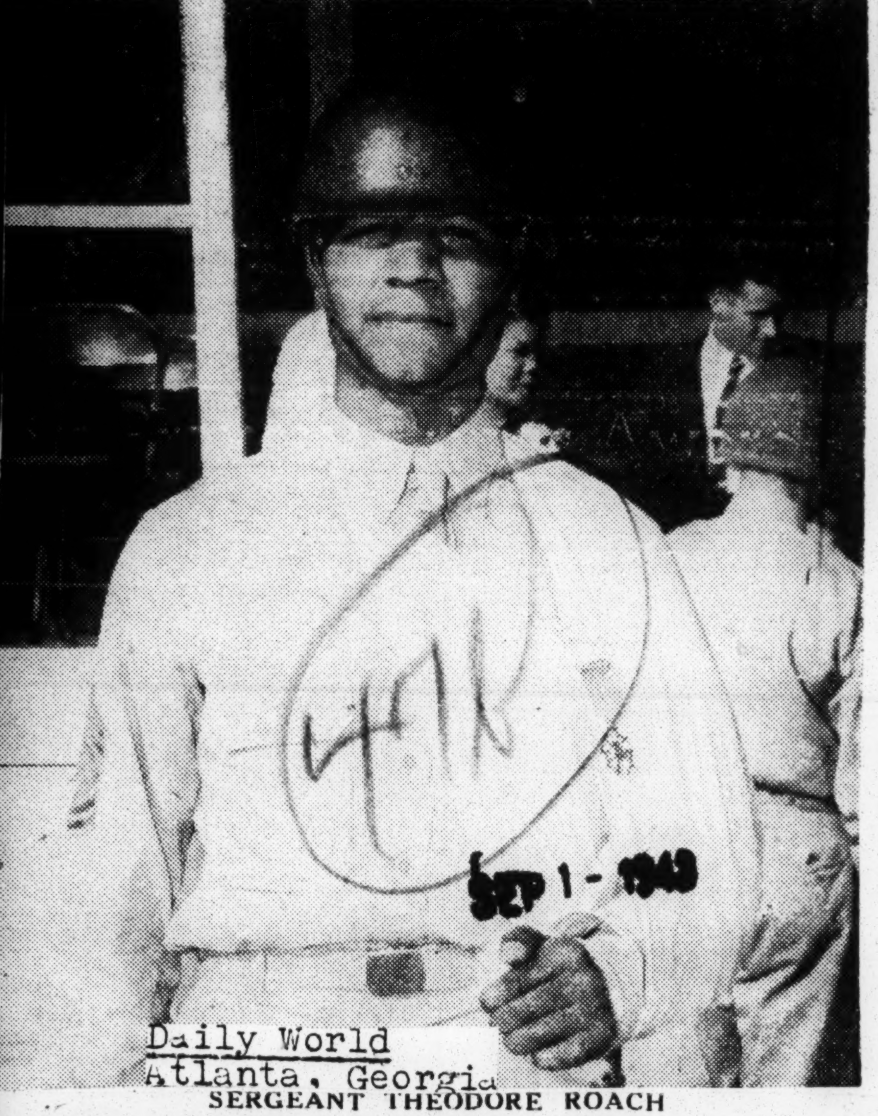
He earned the medal by saving the life of one of the men in a port battalion, of which he was then a member, who was struck by a load of steel swinging from a crane and knocked into the water between pier and ship.

The award was made by Colonel Henry A. Wingate of Washington, D.C., Depot Commander, and the citation read: "Private Preston, without hesitation and at great risk of his own life, plunged into the icy waters, secured a rope and tied it around the drowning soldier and himself, thereby enabling those on shore to pull them both to safety."

JUL 3 1943

47b-1943

His Bravery Brings Award



SEP 1 - 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

SERGEANT THEODORE ROACH

FORT McCLELLAN, Ala.—(SNS) — While the entire First Regiment saluted him for his calm courage, First Sergeant Theodore M. Roach, 25, from Cleveland, received the Legion of Merit Medal in ceremonies at the Infantry Replacement Training Center here and was cited by the War Department for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services."

Legion Of Merit Medal

Awarded Sergeant At Fort Mc Clellan

SEP 1 - 1943

FORT McCLELLAN, Ala. -- (SNS) — While the entire First Regiment saluted him for his calm courage, First Sergeant Theodore R. Roach, 25, from Cleveland, Ohio, received the Legion of Merit Medal in ceremonies at the Infantry Replacement Training Center here and was cited by the War Department for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service."

Sergeant Roach is the son of Richard M. Roach, 2244 East 87th Street, Cleveland, and lived there before joining the Army almost seven years ago.

The medal was pinned on Sergeant Roach by Brig. Gen. Wallace C. Philoon, commanding general of the IRTC, at a retreat parade in which the First Regiment, Negro training unit at Fort McClellan passed in review to honor the sergeant.

The act of courage for which he was decorated occurred while he was leading the rookie soldiers of his company through one of IRTC's infiltration and mental conditioning courses several weeks ago.

The infiltration course is a no-man's land of tree stumps, brambles, ditches, shell holes, and barbed wire through which Infantry trainees must crawl with rifles and fixed bayonets while machine guns lay a blanket of zipping slugs 36 inches over them.

Despite all possible safety precautions, and through no fault of his own, Sergeant Roach was hit in the left arm. The bullet shattered the forearm and elbow, a painful and bleeding wound.

Cognizant that an outcry or show of fear from him might panic the young soldiers all about him and cause them to rise up into the deadly machine gun fire, Sergeant Roach quietly passed a "cease firing" signal to the control officer.

"His coolness in this emergency," said the War Department citation, 'has been an inspiration to all the trainees in his company and reflects credit on the military forces of the United States."

"Leadership starts with example," General Philoon told the men of the regiment and several hundred spectators as he awarded the medal, "and First Sergeant Roach has demonstrated the finest type of leadership — by example. His action was an inspiration to us all, an example which stimulates us all to greater efforts."

Pointing out that the greatest casualties in battle are among the poorly trained, General Philoon said it was the job of the IRTC to so train men that good habits formed here will go with them into combat.

"The war of the Infantry soldier is a rough, tough, dangerous game," he said. "We must accustom soldiers to battle conditions — its sounds, its hardships and dangers. We must have infiltration courses, village fighting courses and combat firing. We may feel certain that battle training here saves hundreds of lives overseas.

"Planes may bomb and tanks may roar through the lines, but it is the job of the Doughboy to fight on, pressing ever forward, on foot, tired, hungry, thirsty, even wounded, knowing full well that the battle is being won only if he and his buddies are going forward to kill or capture the enemy.

"There is no service less glamorous, none more glorious."

Sergeant Roach entered the Army soon after finishing high school at Ironton, Ohio. His wife and their daughter live in nearby Anniston.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

13 Privates Win Purple Hearts In New Guinea

By ENOC P. WATERS
(Defender War Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA—At a special formation last week, 13 privates, members of one of the two famous quartermaster regiments which made history in establishing a motor transport service between Mt Isa and Birdum in Australia last year, were awarded Purple Hearts in recognition of wounds suffered by them as a result of enemy action near Porlock Harbor on March 8.

SEP 11 1943

The men were designated as recipients of the award in a general order issued August 15 by Col. Chanucey Galwey, commanding advanced base D.

Witnessing the presentation of the awards was Col. Miller, regimental commander and his official staff and the unit stationed in this area.

Soldiers honored at the ceremony were Pvts. Lester L. Butler, Savannah, Ga.; Arthur S. Watson, New York City; Gilbert H. Morris, Duquesne, Pa.; Izear Jackson, Rayville, La.; William L. Thorne, Charleston, S. C.; Booker T. Evans Jr., Houston, Miss.; Robert T. Crews Jr., Greenville, S. C.; Abron Irwin, Mound Bayou, Miss.; James E. Guilford, Boston, Mass.; Albert H. Latourse, Glentock, N. J.; Wilson Lee Jr., Pratt City, Ala.; Joe Jardy, Roanoke Rapids, N. C.; and Alfonze Smith, Buffalo, N. Y.

New York Times
New York, N. Y

Army Honors Heroic Negro

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Nov. 7 (U.P.)—Corp. Mark R. Sloan Jr. of Pittsburgh, Pa., a Negro soldier in the Fifty-fourth Aviation Squadron, stationed at Mather Field, has received the Soldier's Medal for heroism in rescuing another member of the squadron from drowning.

NOV 8 1943

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

SOLDIER A HERO IN FIRE

Brooklyn Man Wins Medal for Saving a Woman in Britain

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7 (AP)—The Soldier's Medal has been awarded to Corp. Jerome L. Collier, Negro, of 369A Madison Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., for saving the life of a British woman trapped by fire on the second floor of her home last May 14, United States Army Headquarters announces.

Corporal Collier, a member of an engineering unit, removed the woman by a window and lowered her to Corp. Charles Robinson of 828 St. Nicholas Avenue, New York City.

Corps. Richard H. Hill of 36 eBthel Avenue, Morristown, N. J., and James Smith of Conagrove, S. C., and Corporal Robinson formed a bucket brigade until firemen arrived on the scene.

AUG 7 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

For Bravery Beyond The Call of Duty, Soldier Wins Distinguished Service Cross

AUG 28 1943

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 26—"For conspicuous bravery above and beyond the call of duty," a hero of the New Guinea campaign was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service cross. The award was received last Saturday by Mrs. Emma Gaines, grandmother of Pvt. George Watson, who, in an extraordinary display of heroism gave his life to save several of his comrades in the South Pacific.

Pvt. Watson

The award was made by Major General Harry F. Hazlett, commanding general of Replacement and School Command of the Army Ground Forces in Birmingham, to the soldier's aged grandmother as she lay bedridden from a recent illness. The ceremonies were held in Mrs. Gaines' home at 1085 North Brittain street, before a group of neighbors who had gathered for the occasion.

JAPANESE BOMBERS SINK SHIP

Private Watson was awarded the medal for bravery in action near Portlock Harbor, New Guinea, on March 8, 1943, when the ship he was aboard was attacked by Japanese bombers. When orders were issued to abandon the ship, Pvt. Watson, without a thought of saving him[illegible] the water to assist [illegible] of his comrades to safety.

Weakened by this exertion, he was dragged down by the suction of the ship and was drowned.

General Hazlett told the grandmother and a small group of friends: "To us of the Army, the Distinguished Service cross is an priceless treasure. It is awarded only to persons who distinguish themselves by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against the enemy.

PRAISES WATSON

"The President has directed that the Distinguished Service cross be presented to Mrs. Emma Gaines, the hero's grandmother. I consider it an honor and a privilege to do so.

"George Watson died in the shining splendor of high courage and utter selfishness, true to the best traditions of the American soldier, an inspiration to every real American."

(Editor's note: The Distinguished Service cross is the second highest award in the armed services, only rated above it is the Congressional Medal of Honor. Pvt. Watson is the first Negro to win this medal in World War II.

"He was a fine boy," said Mrs. Gaines between soft sobs from her neat little bed. "I brought him up ever since he was a small baby, for his mother and father both died soon after he was born."

One of the witnesses at the ceremony was Grover Gillins, white, employer of Watson before he voluntarily joined the service in 1941. Watson was a graduate of Parker High school and has a brother Johnny Hill Watson, in the Navy.

AUG 28 1943

HONOR MAN HONORED

Defender
Chicago, Ill.
SEP 10 1943

478

Mrs. Joe Louis, wife of the world's heavyweight boxing champion, presents honor man certificate to Bluejacket Ellis Newton of 2433 Flora avenue, Kansas City, Mo., at recent recruit graduation exercises at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill. Mrs. Louis was introduced to the nearly 1,000 men who were on the field by Lt. D. O. Van Ness (center), commanding officer of Camp Robert Smalls, one of the three Negro training camps at Great Lakes. — U. S. Navy photo from OWI.

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

IT HAPPENED IN ALABAMA

AUG 20 1943

Last week a Major General of the United States Army entered a small house in Birmingham, and there awarded to a bedridden old colored woman the Distinguished Service Cross, a posthumous award for bravery in action on the part of her grandson, a young negro soldier, Pvt. George Watson.

Pvt. Watson earned this medal for extraordinary heroism near Porlock Harbor New Guinea, last March, when an American ship was attacked by enemy bombers. The ship was abandoned, and Watson, instead of seeking to save himself, remained in the water assisting his comrades, until, weakened by his exertion, he was dragged down by the suction of the ship and drowned.

General Hazlett, in making the award, said, "George Watson died in the shining splendor of high courage and utter unselfishness, true to the best traditions of the American soldier, an inspiration to every real American."

Other Alabama negroes [illegible] die in various parts of the world as this conflict runs its course, and many more will experience new disciplines and learn new skills in Uncle Sam's great Army. They will return to Alabama better equipped to serve themselves and their communities.

Meanwhile, all of us can share with the negro community its pride in the heroism of Pvt. Watson.

News
Birmingham, Ala.

AMERICAN INSPIRATION

AUG 20 1943

To an aged, bedridden Negro woman Saturday came one of the highest awards that Uncle Sam can bestow. Emma Gaines, Birmingham Negress, received from the hands of an Army dignitary the Distinguished Service Cross won by her grandson, Pvt. George Watson, who died as a hero in the South Pacific.

"He could have saved himself, but he chose to save others." These words began the story of the presentation as told in the Birmingham paper. "Pvt. Watson was awarded the medal for heroism in action near Porlock Harbor, New Guinea, on March 8, 1943, when the ship which he was aboard was attacked by enemy bombers. When the ship was abandoned, Pvt. Watson, instead of seeking to save himself, remained in the water assisting several of his comrades. Weakened by his exertions, he was dragged down by the suction of the ship and was drowned."

It is not difficult to imagine the emotions of this woman as she received the cross which the child she raised from infancy won. The Birmingham News reporter states that she was sobbing softly during the ceremonies.

Here is a story that will evoke emotions everywhere it is told. It is a story that will make a catch come to the throat of even the hardest man. For Maj. Gen. Harry Hazlett, commanding officer of the Army Ground Forces Replacement School Command in Birmingham, told Emma Gaines: "George Watson died in the shining splendor of high courage and utter unselfishness, true to the best traditions of the American soldier, an inspiration to every real American."—Anniston Star.

"ABOVE THE CALL OF DUTY"

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

AUG 28 1943

478

Brig. Gen. C. P. Kane, commanding general of Rome Air Service Command, pinning the Soldier's Medal on Cpl. John D. Hilton, of Bolivar, W. Va. Corporal Hilton received the medal for bravery last April when single-handed, he removed the bodies of six men from an Army bomber which crashed near Daniel Field, Ga. A member of Air Service Command's 1954th Ordnance Depot company, Hilton will serve with one of Air Service Command's "Keep 'Em Flying" ground crews.

News
Birmingham, Ala.

Pvt. Watson, Negro Soldier, Is Given DSC Posthumously

AUG 5 1943

He could have saved himself but he chose to save others, and for his heroic action, Pvt. George Watson, a young Negro soldier of Birmingham, was awarded posthumously the Distinguished Service Cross. The award was made Saturday by Maj. Gen. Harry F. Hazlett, commanding officer of Army Ground Forces Replacement School Command in Birmingham, to the soldier's aged grandmother who had raised him since birth.

Emma Gaines, in her small but neat little home at 1085 North Brittain Street, received the award as she lay bedridden from a recent illness.

"He was a fine boy," she said between soft sobs. "I brought him up ever since he was a small baby, for his mother and father both died soon after he was born."

In solemn words, Gen. Hazlett told the grandmother and the small group of friends and neighbors who had gathered: "To us of the Army, the Distinguished Service Cross is a priceless treasure. It is awarded only to persons who distinguish themselves by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against the enemy."

Pvt. Watson was awarded the medal for heroism in action near Porlock Harbor, New Guinea, on March 8, 1943, when the ship on which he was aboard was attacked by enemy bombers. When the ship was abandoned, Pvt. Watson, instead of seeking to save himself, remained in the water assisting several of his comrades. Weakened by his exertions, he was dragged down by the suction of the ship and was drowned.

Gen. Hazlett said further: "The president has directed that this Distinguished Service Cross be presented to Emma Gaines, the hero's grandmother. I consider it an honor and a privilege to do so.

"George Watson died in the shining splendor of high courage and utter unselfishness," he continued, "true to the best traditions of the American soldier, an inspiration to every real American."

47b-1943

Natives Remove Victims From Burning Plane

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

AUG 23 1943

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

LONDON—(ANP)—When the chronicles of World War II are written, historians will have a great deal to say about the bravery of African soldiers and civilians alike. Africa's soldier sons are brave in the face of danger and quick and intelligent in action. When faced with difficult problems they solve them in the speediest and simplest manner. Their bravery is innate.

Now here is a tale of four of Africa's civilians who showed resource and intrepid courage. In the most remote regions of Africa, as in the quiet farmlands of Britain, people know that when a bomber comes down in flames that there is peril — for the rescuer as much as for the pilot trapped in the wreckage. In Africa, as in Britain, there are men to act.

Prompt and courageous action by four natives — their names are Chemweno Arap Chepkoiyou, Cheboi Arap Chepkuri, Kiverange Wa Maharia and Kimngech Arap Kigen — was responsible for saving the lives of the survivors of a Royal Air Force plane which recently crashed near Elderet, Kenya.

DARED BLAZE

All four were working on the Eureka estates at the time of the accident. Although the aircraft caught fire immediately it struck the ground, the natives climbed in, without hesitation, amid burning wreckage and exploding ammunition, to extricate the crew.

For this valorous deed the four men have been awarded the George medal, second-highest of Britain's awards for civilian bravery, by King George IV.

Chemweno Arap Chepkoiyou told the story afterwards.

"I am a squatter (small farmer) on the Eureka estates, where I look after my own cattle. I was herding my stock near the trees on the right hand side of the road that leads to the Wheat Shamba, when at about ten o'clock in the morning I saw an aeroplane pass over the farm.

"It was not very high in the air and was going in the direction of Sergoit rock. It turned above the rock, then left the forest, and, losing altitude, crashed in the Wheat Shamba.

"As soon as I realized it was going to crash, I went quickly toward it. As I ran, the aircraft, which was skidding along the ground, struck some rough place and turned over and over until it finally came to rest.

"I found one European lying on the ground by the tip of the left wing and from him, I gathered that help was wanted by the others in the plane. At that time the left wing was on fire from underneath. This later caused a grass fire.

ALL CLIMBED IN

"At the same time as I arrived, Cheboi, Arap Chepkuri reached the scene. We left the injured men lying outside the aircraft and went to the nose to investigate. Kiberenge Wa Machiria came hurrying up to help. We went round to the right hand side of the nose, climbed in and lifted out a man with a broken leg. His legs were pinned by a piece of metal and we had to free them Then we were joined by Kimngoch Arap Kigen. We laid the injured man from the aircraft on the wheat stubble.

"By this time ammunition had begun to explode all around us. We returned to the aircraft and carried the man lying by the tip of the left wing to the Wheat Shamba, as the grass was taking a big hold.

"By this time the ammunition was exploding badly and we were rather frightened, but we returned again to remove from under the wreckage the body of the third man, vmfOma ETAOIN ETAOI who had been killed in the crash."

All four men are quite cool about it. It was not a nice experience — but they knew their job, and they did it well.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Camp Honors Hero Who Saved 6 In Plane Crash

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON. — Rome honored Johnny Hilton last week. It was Rome Army Airfield in New York, not Rome, Italy.

The soldiers of Rome Army Airfield turned out in full to do Hilton honor. The band played just for him, and Brig. Gen. C. P. Kane, commanding general of the Rome Air Service Command, pinned the Soldier's Medal for valor on his chest. Hilton is 33 years old and a Technician Fifth Grade in an Ordnance Depot company. As an Air Service Command soldier, he is part of the vast Army of ground crew men who "Keep 'em Flying." He is quiet and bespectacled. Six months ago he was a farmer in Bolivar, W. Va.

Last April 13, he displayed "courage far and above the call of duty," which would have done credit to any veteran of Guadalcanal, when he dragged six bodies from a blazing plane, which had crashed near Daniel Field, Ga.

Here is Hilton's own story, as he modestly tells it:

"I was leaving the mess hall about 5 p.m., when I heard a crash like two locomotives colliding, and I saw a cloud of smoke about three quarters of a mile away. I ran to the scene of the accident and saw the blazing bomber. It was burning so hot that the surrounding grass had caught fire, and the firemen had to put out the fire in the grass before they could reach the plane.

"I saw one of the bodies lying face up, partly out of the plane, and pinned between the landing gears. I ran to the plane, slipped a rope around him, and pulled him clear.

"Alongside him was another man, badly twisted and burned, and I had to remove part of the red hot fuselage and the magazine of a .50 caliber machine gun to get him out, he was buried so deep in the flames. He was still burning when I pulled him to the grass."

According to witnesses, Hilton then "returned repeatedly to the blazing wreckage against the advice of everyone present, to pull the victims to safety." The heat was so intense that firemen had to play water on him as he worked. Hilton continued:

"I don't know how many bodies I pulled out, but they told me later there were six. My only concern was to get the bodies out of the burning wreckage. I felt this my first duty as a soldier and performed it to the best of my ability."

In making the award, Brig. Gen. Kane said: "We of the Air Service Command, are proud to have soldiers of your calibre within the command. The officers and men and civilian employes of the Rome Air Service Command, and especially your fellow soldiers in the Ordnance Depot company, are proud of you.

"As Commanding General of the Rome Air Service Command, I have been chosen to make this award, and I should like to assure you that we, at the Rome Army Air Field, are grateful that we have been privileged to have a small part in paying tribute to a brave American."

Hilton then stood with the General as the latter reviewed the Rome Army Air Field troops as they marched by in review and saluted.

According to Lieut. Edward J. Kwak, commanding officer of the Ordnance Depot company, Hilton was amazed that so much fuss should be made over what he considered a trivial matter. Lt. Kwak said:

"I told him to take the day off, but he wouldn't do it. He said he was needed on duty and he would prefer to work. He even refused a three-day pass because he believed it would be letting his buddies down."

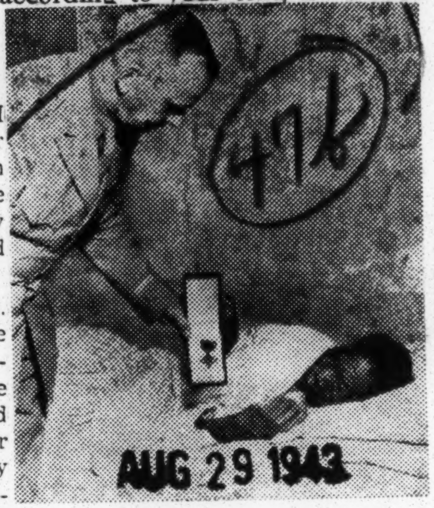
PM
New York, N. Y.

For Hero's Grandmother

Dear Editor:

Your picture of Maj. Gen. Hazlett presenting the Distinguished Service Cross to Mrs. Emma Gaines for her grandson, Pvt. George Watson, "who died rescuing comrades when their ship was bombed off New Guinea," calls for action.

Enclosed please find check for $25. Perhaps many other PM readers, who feel as we do about the magnificent services rendered by our Negro compatriots, also feel it a privilege to do something concrete for this grandmother who, according to your text, is "bedridden in her humble Birmingham, Ala., home."



47b

AUG 29 1943

New York Marion and Irene

The check has been sent to Maj. Gen. Harry F. Hazlett, Chief of Staff, Headquarters, Replacement and School Command, Army Ground Forces, Birmingham, Ala., to be forwarded to Mrs. Gaines.

Georgia Seaman, 17, Hero In Recent Sicilian Drama

AUG 21 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

WITH U. S. AMPHIBIOUS FORCES, Aug. 19—When 16-year-old Arthur James Goodwin of Dasher High school, Valdosta, Ga., used to spend his time in the library poring over periodicals and books about military aviation and used to take his pennies—earned on a job with a dry cleaner—to buy plane [illegible] and build models, it is almost [illegible] that the youth had no idea that some day, off the war-torn shores of Sicily, he would help the United States in averting devastating attacks by German airplanes.

Detailed at first as a messboy aboard an assault transport, Goodwin, on the way across the Mediterranean on the unknown destination, which, ultimately, was to prove the invasion of Sicily, was made a member of the gun crew. He heard lectures and read text on plane identification and so pronounced was his knowledge of planes that his instructors were immediately electrified, whereupon the youth was moved from an aft gun to a gun on the bridge, where his great sight could be utilized.

In his new role, Goodwin, only 17 now, proved so indispensable in identifying enemy and friendly planes that he never was removed from the bridge until recently, pulling the long sighting shifts on sandwiches and coffee in between catnaps sandwiched between air raids.

Correct and unfailing identification is no easy task, because enemy and Allied planes get mixed up, especially during action at sea, but this difficulty did not phase the Georgia boy. He accurately "spotted" the first German Focke-Wulf 190's which bombed Allied landing beaches. When Allied Spitfires attacked this enemy aircraft, Goodwin prevented Americans from firing upon them. He was the first person on ship to identify a trio of German JU 88's which sizzled in to attack the U.S. convoy. The Americans were ready. Later, Goodwin prevented his mates firing upon Allied Mustangs, friendly planes.

Goodwin has been promoted to steward's mate second-class—but his only plane ride, so far, was at a county fair in his native home—Valdosta.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Naval Vet At 23, Youth Is Recipient Of Purple Heart

OAKLAND, Cal. — The United States navy, through Personnel Chief Randall Jacobs, bestowed the Purple Heart citation upon Officers' Steward 2nd Class James Pettaway, here last week.

Although Pettaway is only 23 years of age, he now holds an honorable discharge from the navy after five years of service, during which he saw action in three major battles. It was in one of these, the action around Guadalcanal, that Pettaway suffered the wounds which won him his discharge. It was also here that he performed the feat which won him the Purple Heart award.

It was early morning of August 9, 1942, when the skipper called all the men on deck and told them they were about to enter their toughest fight. "Just do the best you can," he said, "and may God bless you all."

Japanese planes came in from every direction. Pettaway recalls, and several were hit before one got in a good hit. Enemy straffing had put a large number of the crew out of action and Pettaway had just turned to lend a hand to a fellow-seaman, B. E. Randolph, of St. Louis, when a Jap shell fragment felled him.

Regaining consciousness sometime later, Pettaway is said to have heard his name being called and Randolph's pleas not to leave him. After a lengthy search in the dark, he obtained two life jackets, put one on himself and the other on his companion, and jumped into the water.

They had barely left the deck of the ship before it settled and sank beneath the waves. At daybreak the men sighted a life-raft and climbed aboard. Later a U.S. destroyer picked them up and kept them until transfer to a hospital ship could be effected.

Taken to a naval hospital, the shrapnel was removed from Pettaway's chest and shoulder, after which he was returned to this country and placed in a base hospital. On his release from bed, he returned to this city and sought a job as guard at the naval depot here, convinced that he can aid his country.

SEP 18 1943

Pettaway enlisted in the navy in 1938, and during the ensuing years has seen service in Panama, South America, Iceland, the West Indies and Greenland. The three service stars he possesses represent the part he played in the actions of the Coral Sea, Midway and Guadalcanal.

Pettaway has three sisters in addition to his parents, the Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Pettaway, the former pastor of the First Baptist church in Okmulgee, Okla.

WINS PURPLE HEART

SEP 18 1943

Miss Jerry Woods is an interested admirer of James Pettaway's "Purple Heart." Jerry is a war worker and spends her spare time at the De Fremery USO club in Oakland, Calif., where she is a popular addition to many parties.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Georgia Messman Is Hero Of Big Sicily Invasion

WITH U. S. AMPHIBIOUS FORCES. — (ANP) — Because the navy does not have a rating for plane spotters, an unsung messman on an assault transport active in the invasion of Sicily will have to continue his menial task for the duration.

He is Arthur James Goodwin, a 17-year-old enlisted man from Valdosta, Ga.

Goodwin proved his mettle when the push for the beaches began. Dropping his plates he took a position on the bridge and with keen eyes glued to the sky, identified enemy aircraft for the gun crew long before they had a chance to drop their bundles of death.

The young seaman was so indispensable that he was ordered to remain at his post from Friday to Monday night without relief. Only catnaus, coffee, sandwiches, and the burning patriotism in his fighting heart were able to see him through the trying assignment.

With an alacrity and accuracy that amazed the captain and crew alike Goodwin picked out Focke-Wulf 190s, German Ju 88s and directed fire toward them. Never once did he fail to recognize our aircraft, the Mustangs, the Spitfires, and the Beaufighters.

The difficulty of Goodwin's job is emphasized because during the fierce attacks American planes became mixed with enemy fighters. Although it required the highest brilliance in observation, the messman was equal to the task. Asked how he recognized a Mustang, Goodwin laconically replied:

"I know 'em by their square wingtips"

There was only one instance when the young seaman admitted fright and that was when enemy planes dropped explosives 100 feet away from his ship. The big boat quivered and reeled but escaped damage.

Shortly after coming aboard ship Goodwin was moved up to a gun crew and required to attend plane identification classes. His ready knowledge of planes caught the imagination of instructors and he was elevated to a gun on the bridge, a job calling for a steward's mate and second class rating.

The youth's familiarity with the planes dates back to his school days in Valdosta when he spent his spare moments reading through books on military aviation in the library. Later, with pennies he earned from work with a dry cleaner, he bought plane parts and constructed model airships. He little knew then how valuable these efforts would be now to his Uncle Samuel.

Goodwin's only trip in an airplane was taken at a county fair in Valdosta before he joined the navy. And he can't remember the type of ship it was!

WINS SOLDIERS MEDAL FOR REMOVING BODIES FROM BURNING BOMBER

AUG 18 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

By ERNEST JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — For extracting the bodies of five soldiers from a burning medium bomber, and at the risk of himself becoming engulfed in the flames, or being caught in the tank explosion, T-Sgt. John . Hilton, of Bolivar, W. Va., has been awarded the soldiers medal for heroism, the War Department disclosed Thursday.

At the time of the incident, Sgt. Hilton was assigned to the aviation squadron at Daniel Field, Augusta, Ga. Recommendation for the citation was made by Cornelius E. O'Connor, company air corps, commanding Daniel Field, and early this month, the medal was pinned on Hilton by Brig. Gen. C. P. Kane, commanding officer at the Rome Air Field, Rome, N. Y., where the hero is stationed.

AUG 18 1943

It was [illegible] April [illegible] a B-26 medium bomber flew over the Daniel Field carrying its human cargo. "I was leaving the mess hall about 5 p. m. when I heard a crash like two locomotives colliding, and I saw a cloud of smoke about three-quarters of a mile away," Sgt. Hilton said, in describing the deed.

"I ran to the scene of action and saw the blazing bomber. It was burning so hotly that the surrounding grass had caught fire, and the firemen had to put out the grass before they could reach the plane.

"I saw one of the bodies lying face up, partly out of the plane, and pinned between the landing gears. I ran to the plane, slipped a rope around him and pulled him clear."

With similar coolness and courage, St. Kane Hilton succeeded in dragging the other men from the plane, although they later succumbed. Hilton's action however, saved the bodies from being burned beyond recognition.

AUG 18 1943

The men of his new company paraded out and the band played on the day the medal was presented to him. In making the award, Gen. Kane said: "The officers, men and civilian employes of the Rome Air Service command, and especially your fellow soldiers in the ordnance depot company, are proud of you.

"As commanding general of the command, I have been chosen to make this award and I should like to assure you that we, at the Rome Army Air Field, are grateful that we have privileged to have a small part in paying tribute to a brave American."

AUG 18 1943

47b-1943

Carries On Despite Discharge

SEP 18 1943

Injured Seaman Saved Mate; Gets Purple Heart Award

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

OAKLAND, Calif., Sept. 16—A veteran of three great sea battles at 23, recipient of the Purple Heart, and now honorably discharged from the Navy, James Pettaway, officers' steward 2nd class, is now doing his part for victory by serving as guard at the Naval Depot here in Oakland. Pettaway, injured at Guadalcanal aboard the U.S.S. Vincennes, a cruiser, survived shrapnel wounds and was able to help save a fellow seaman, B. E. Randolph. It was for this that he received the Purple Heart award.

The youngster enlisted in the Navy on October 11, 1938, in Birmingham, Ala. Prior to Guadacanal, se saw action in the great Coral Sea battle and at Midway. He describes the action at Guadacanal vividly. He tells how he saw many Jap planes downed by gunfire from the Vincennes before it was finally hit.

EVERYTHING WENT BLACK

SEP 18 1943

Shortly before the ship went down he heard his name called and turned around to see Randolph, a seaman from St. Louis, struggling toward him, injured. He went to his mate's assistance and as he struggled toward a cabin he heard two shell-bursts and then everything went black for him.

He regained consciousness when he heard Randolph calling: "Pettaway, Pettaway, don't leave me." Groping in the dark for several minutes, Pettaway managed to secure life-jackets for them and together they jumped into the water. That was at 2 a. m., August 9. It wasn't until day-break that they found a life-raft.

At about 9 a. m. the two men were picked up by a destroyer. There were 27 colored men on the Vincennes, 18 were saved, 9 were lost. The injured men were put on a hospital ship and taken to a naval hospital. Pettaway had received shrapnel wounds in his left side and shoulder.

SAW SERVICE IN MANY SHIPS

When finally reutrned to the States, Pettaway was well on his way to recovery and hoped for another shot at the enemy. In spite of his anxiety to return to action, the Navy saw fit to give him his discharge. He secured the job at the Naval depot, feeling that through this medium he would be still taking a part in the war effort.

In his four years and 10 months of service, he has been in Panama, South America, Iceland, West Indies and Greenland. His family, which is justly proud of its only boy, live in Okmulgee, Okla. Pettaway has twin sisters and another sister besides his mother and father, Rev. and Mrs. [illegible] Pettaway. Reverend Pettaway is pastor of the First Baptist church in Okmulgee. Pettaway speaks of the treatment he received in the various hospitals as "tops."

SEP 18 1943

Receives Purple Heart

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

SEP 4 1943

Private James Barker, assigned to an engineer unit in the South Pacific, receives the congratulations of Lieut. H. E. Bebble, nurse, at an advanced base army hospital. He was recently awarded the Purple Heart, and was wounded in action on a South Pacific island. Private Barker's sister, Julia, lives in New York City.

Soldier Wins Medal For Rescuing Woman

AUG 14 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By RANDY DIXON
(Accredited U. S. War Correspondent)

LONDON, Aug. 12—(Via Cable)—The third colored American soldier within three months was decorated when Cpl. Jerome L. Collier, Wednesday, received the Soldier's Medal for valor in saving a British woman from almost certain death, May 15. Ceremonies held at a South Anglian base featured the decoration with drum and bugle corps, and several companies participating as Colonel Thrasher, commanding officer of the SOS, pinned on the medal and inspected troops.

Thrasher said, "We have honored a brave man who risked his life to save another's. I'm proud of such men in the army to get recognition, one must deserve it. I'm proud of this man; I'm proud of his unit; I'm proud to be its commanding officer."

SOLDIER'S FEAT DESCRIBED

The official citation read, "For heroism displayed May 15 when he rescued a British woman from almost certain death during a fire in a church at Hampstead, without regard for his personal safety, Corporal Collier obtained a ladder and entered the room of the second-story burning building and rescued the woman hopelessly trapped. Collier's prompt heroic action saved the woman's life. The heroism displayed by Collier on this occasion reflected great credit upon himself and upon the military service."

AUG 14 1943

Collier, 20, who resides at 369-A Madison street, Brooklyn, N.Y., explained that, when passing the building, he detected the fire, secured a ladder and passed the woman out to T/5 Charles Robinson, 829 St. Nicholas avenue, New York City, while T/5 Richard Hill, 36 Bethel avenue, Moorestown, N.J., and James Smith, China Grove, N.C., bucket-brigaded, extinguishing the fire before firemen arrived.

FATHER IN SERVICE TOO

Collier's father, Frank Collier, a U.S. Navy veteran recalled at the outbreak of the war, is now in active service as a steward. His mother, Mrs. Fannie Collier, and sister, Winifred, reside in Brooklyn. His sister is a government parachute maker. Captain Boyle of Newark, N.J., Collier's company commander, expressed pride in the achievement of "his soldier."

AUG 14 1943

---

13 Heroes in S. Pacific Get Purple Heart

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

By SCOOP JONES

NEW GUINEA—(ANP)—Thirteen men were decorated last week with the Purple Heart for wounds received here during a Jap air attack on an airport last March.

[illegible] are:

Pvts. Lester L. Butler, Savannah, Ga.; Arthur S. Watson, New York; Gilbert H. Morris, Duquenne, Pa.; Izear Jackson, Rayville, La.; William L. Thorne, Charleston, S.C.; Booker T. Evans, Jr., Houston, Miss.; Robert T. Crews, Jr., Greenville, S.C.; Abron Irwin, Mound Bayou, Miss.; James E. Guilford, Boston; Albert H. Latourse, New Jersey; Wilson Lee, Jr., Pratt City, Ala.; Joe Hardy, Roanoke, N.C., and Alfonzo Smith, New York City.

SEP 11 194

Promoted men include:

S/Sgts. Harold J. Morris, Jackson, Mich., and Gaston E. Jernigan, Whiteville, N.C., from sergeant; Sgt. James Smith, Plaquemine, La., from private first class; Thomas H. Wiggins, Natchez, Miss.; William W. Jones, Charles City, Va.; Sexton E. Caldwell, Bethany, La.; George W. Walker, Fountain Inn, S.C.; Blane Spearman, Greensville, Miss.; Harold Spottswood, Shelby, Va.; Elvin L. Cooper, Baton Rouge, La.; Benjamin J. Jackson, Glenn, Ga.; Bennie Lewis, Midville, Ga.; Willie Rogers, Shreveport, La.; Preston Tassin, Garyville, La.; Cleo Moore, Sumrall, Miss.; Wolfred J. DeSilva, New Orleans; Johnnie A. Jones, Tallulah, La., and Overton Thacker, Nashville, Tenn., all to the rank of corporal.

Gets Purple Heart

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

WALTER DAVIS, 26, cook second class, USN, of 3616 Hale Avenue, Birmingham, Ala., who was presented the Purple Heart Medal on Friday for wounds received while serving as a member of an anti-aircraft gun crew aboard the battleship South Dakota in a battle off the Solomon Islands last year. Captain J. W. Allen, commanding officer of the Philadelphia Naval Hospital, made the presentation during ceremonies held at the hospital.

---

2 Get Medals for Heroism in Italy

Afro-American

DEC 4 1943

By OLLIE STE[illegible]
Baltimore, Md.
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in North Africa

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

DEC 4 1943

ALLIED AIR BASE, Italy. — (By Cable)—Posthumous award of the Soldier's Medal for Heroism was made July 27 to T/Sgt. Edsel A. Jett, 505 Burkett Street, Taylor, Texas.

Jett, swimming with a group of fellow soldiers from the fighter squadron at a beach in Sicily, noticed Pvt. James Lockhart, New York City, a non-swimmer, being carried out to sea by a strong undertow. A good swimmer, Jett attempted a rescue, but the rough sea pulled him under and he lost his own life in the attempt.

His "gallantry and utter disregard of self reflects great credit upon himself and the armed forces of the United States."

His mother, Mrs. Eva B. Jett, survives.

New Yorker Given Medal

DEC 4 1943

Award of the Soldier's Medal for Heroism in the same episode went to Sgt. Henry Laguna of New York City. Laguna was in the group wher. Jett lost his life attempting to rescue Lockhart.

Despite the undertow and rough sea, Laguna managed to reach Lockhart and brought him to shore. Lockhart was as good as new the next day, and Lagune was none the worse for his gallant performance. Jett was one of the best liked and efficient men in the squadron.

DEC 4 - 1943

The octagonal soldier's medal, authorized by Congress, July 2, 1926, is presented to persons who "while serving in any capacity with the army of the United States shall hereafter distinguish themselves for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy."

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

Russia Honors Colored Flyer

By CHATWOOD HALL

MOSCOW. — Via Wireless — Sultan Ahmet-Khan, brown-skinned Tartar (in U.S. he would be a colored man) and one of the aces in the Soviet Air Force, was among leading flyers in the Red air fleet recently awarded the title "Hero, Soviet Union Order of Lenin" and the Gold Star.

This swarthy Soviet air ace has sent many Fascist Junkers, Fock Wulfes, Heinkels and Messerschmidts dashing to earth in flames over the Russian steppes. He is not only respected by the Red air fleet, but by the Fascist air vultures who carefully avoid contact with him.

SEP 11 1943

The fact that this man, who in America would be considered colored, recalls a statement made recently by Premier Joseph Stalin, who declared:

"They (the Germans) formerly called all our flyers Russians, but they have seen that our fighters—and with all good fighters—are not only Russians but Turcomans, Kazakhns, Uzbekhs, Azerbaldhans and others."

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

WINS SOLDIER MEDAL FOR PLANE RESCUE

AUG 28 1943

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 (ANP) —For extracting the bodies of five soldiers from a burning medium bomber, and at the risk of himself becoming engulfed in the flames, or being caught in the tank explosion, T. Sgt. John D. Hilton, of Bolivar, W. Va., has been awarded the soldiers medal for heroism, the War Department disclosed on Thursday.

Formal Review Marks Awarding Of Medalsat Huachuca

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

DEC 4 1943

Attending a formal review recently at Fort Huachuca (Arizona) were, left to right: Major General D[illegible] McCoa[illegible]ommanding General Ninth Service Command, Mrs. [illegible] E. Springle, Sgt. Samuel M. Baker, and Colonel E. N. Hardy, Post Commander. The occasion marked the aw[illegible] two medals, the Distinguished Service Cross to Mr. Sprinkle for [illegible]son an[illegible]gion of Merit, to Sgt. Baker.

Soldier Saves Three Sailors

AUG 27 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

SOMEWHERE IN THE PACIFIC WAR [illegible], Aug. 19—Private Jesse Evans [illegible] N. J., has received the commendations of his superior officers for his work in the rescue of three sailors from the waters adjoining a United States island base.

Evans, a former machinist in Dover, N. J., plunged 40 feet over the side of a boat on which he was working to aid the three men when he saw a small home-made sailing boat capsize in the rough waters. He helped one of the trio keep another of the sailors afloat until they were able to be pulled ashore and [illegible] jumped back into the water to [illegible] the [illegible] to another of the victims wh[illegible] partially conscious.

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Negro From Louisville Wins Purple Heart

SEP 1 1943

Award of the Purple Heart medal to John Guy Rhea, 2509 W. Madison, steward, second class, in the U. S. Navy, for wounds received as result of enemy action in the South Pacific Area June 30, [illegible], was announc[illegible] a communication by Admiral William F. Halsey received yesterday by his wife, Mrs. Jewell McNari Rhea.

Rhea, who visited Louisville on furlough last December [illegible] taking part [illegible] invas[illegible] of North Africa [illegible] believed to be the first Louisville Negro decorated in this war. He has been in the Navy nine years and serves as gunner of a 20-mm. gun as well as being steward.

Defender.
Chicago, Ill.

DEC 4 1943

Cited For Rescue Of British Girl

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Defender London Correspondent)

LONDON.—For the heroism he displayed while saving the life of an English girl trapped by fire in her house, Corporal Jerome Collier, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was presented the soldier's medal in special ceremonies here last week.

Presentation was made by Col. Charles Thresher, commander of the Southern base engineers, and the order was read to the assembled troops by Capt. Michael Boyle, company commander.

Collier, a former Boy Scout leader and church custodian, rescued the girl from the second story of her home last May. Aiding in the rescue were Cpls. Charles Robinson of New York, Richard Hill of Morristown, N. J., and James Smith of China Grove, N. C.

After discovering the fire and warning the occupants, the soldiers were told a girl was sleeping on the second floor. Collier went up a ladder, kicked the glass from a windon, lifted the girl and handed her groundwards safely.

The four men then organized a bucket-brigade and fought the flames until firemen arrived.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

NOV 27 1943

PETTY NAVY REWARDS FOR HEROES

The Navy has given us two more heroes to rank with Dorie Miller, who distinguished himself at Pearl Harbor.

Christopher Columbus Sheppard of Norfolk, and Ernest Gardner of Baltimore, a steward's mate, second class, manned a four-inch gun on the destroye[illegible] which on a dark night battled it out with two German submarines until both were sunk.

Neither of the men is a regular gunner. They are messmen, and in battle they serve as loaders to pass the shells up to the guns. They got a chance to fire the big guns themselves when the regular crew was blinded by smoke.

There will be promotion and a citation of sorts for both men for outstanding valor and seamanship. But these are petty rewards for bravery.

If the Navy wants properly to repay these men and others like them, willing to risk their lives for our country's safety, it will repeal the regulations that "prohibit mixed crews on fighting ships."

NOV 27 1943

It will be ashamed of last week's announcement of Secretary Knox that we can employ colored seamen only on small shore and harbor craft and things of that sort and for shore duty.

It will disavow the statement of Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of navy personnel, who last week told the Publishers' Association, "We expect to commission a few colored men."

The reward that heroes like Sheppard and Gardner deserve is the opportunity to serve in any branch of the service for which they can qualify and the chance to be promoted on the basis of merit only.

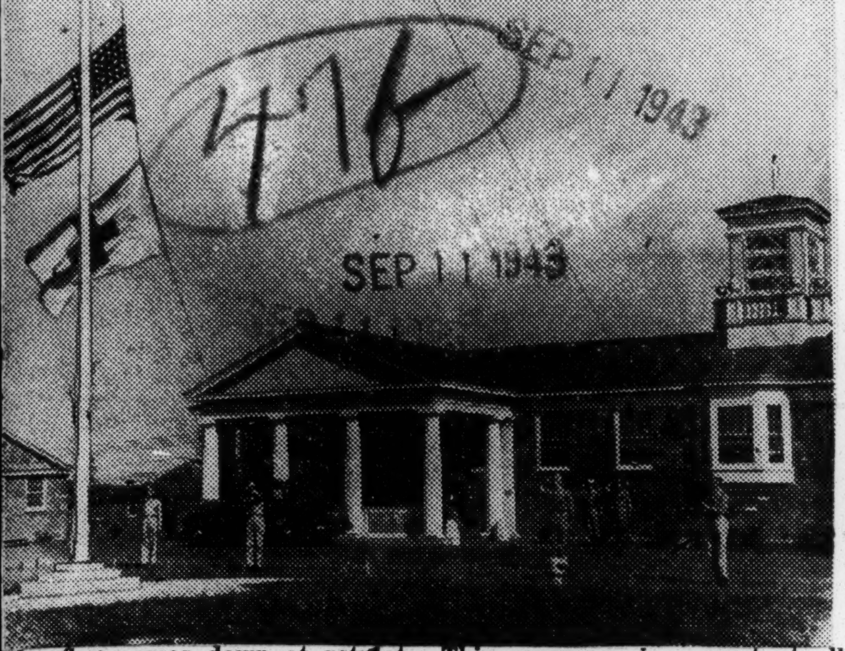
47b-1943

The Democratic Way of Life Is More Than a Theory with Patients at Army Hospital in Virginia

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

That story must have been a good one, judging by the smiles of these soldier-patients at the Woodrow Wilson General Hospital at Staunton, Va. Left to right: William B. Ward of Abbeville, Ala., Cpl. Joseph Lesnick of Bridgeport, Conn., and Sgt. Robert W. Maley Boston, Mass.

A bed's as good as any other place for a whist game. Left to right (clockwise): Pfc. Servele Kelly of Columbia, La., Pvt. John T. Kleinbach of Wellesville, N.Y., Pvt. Custer L. Shelton, Jr., of Fairmount, W.Va., Pvt. John S. Ware of St. Louis, Mo., and Pvt. Benjamin H. Osickey of Cleveland, Ohio.



The flag comes down at retreat. This ceremony is a must at all army posts.

Pvt. Severle Kelly of Columbia, La., checks up on his weight in the post exchange at the Woodrow Wilson General Hospital in Staunton, Va., while Pvt. Everett Rollins of Boston (center) and Pvt. James W. Dobbins of Columbia, Tenn., look on.

Democracy in Action Found in Virginia at U.S. Hospital for Wounded Soldiers

Treated as Equals, Men Play, Chat, Read with No Thought of Race

By O. S. McCOLLUM

Editor, Richmond AFRO-AMERICAN

STAUNTON, Va.—If you are looking for a place where you'll find the democratic idea in action, try visiting the Woodrow Wilson General Hospital here.

Woodrow Wilson is the big new army hospital, where wounded, sick and other injured soldiers are fighting their way back to health.

The hospital is five miles from Staunton, a short distance from Fishersville.

Nestled in the Shenandoah, its one-story red brick buildings sprawl over the valley.

Many from North Africa

A few months ago the first trainload of men from North Africa was brought in.

More have come since, and there are hundreds now at the hospital receiving all the care and sympathetic treatment men suffering from shock, wounds and disease could desire.

Because a small percentage of colored men were used in combat duty in Africa, there are comparatively few colored patients in the hospital.

They are treated just like every other patient, and that means that everything possible to make them happy and to help them to recover is being done for them.

They are not segregated, and they enjoy the same comradeship and every facility extended to others.

If you go through a ward you are likely to see those who are able to get about playing cards, reading or chatting without any thought of race.

In the post exchange, which is one of the most popular spots at the hospital, and in the mess halls it is the same.

No Bitterness, No Self-Pity

In addition to democracy, you'll find another desirable quality at the hospital and that is the cheerfulness of the patients.

The shock from bursting bombs, the pain from wounds caused by land mines, and the diseases that fell some men have not made these colored and white soldiers bitter or self-pitying.

Lieut. Col. C. K. Titus, who is chaplain, morale officer, public relations officer and a few more things thrown in, can tell you plenty of jokes told by the men about how they were wounded.

Most of the men who don't smile easily are on the more serious side of suffering.

Chaplain Titus Lauded

Chaplain Titus, a tall, hearty Community Church minister from Missouri, has done a big job in keeping morale high.

He walks more than once each of corridors connecting the buildings.

You'll find him popping in and out of wards, library and recreation rooms almost any minute, and all the men have a cheery smile and greeting for him.

All of the soldiers here as patients did not have the opportunity for foreign service. Some have become seriously ill in camps. Some have been injured in accidents in camps or on maneuvers.

Many Ailments Common

While many of those returned from North Africa are suffering from wounds, numbers are recovering from such ailments as high blood pressure, asthma and arthritis.

Pvt. William B. Ward of Abbeville, Ala., who served in North Africa, is being treated for high blood pressure.

In the army nineteen months, he was abroad for six and a-half months.

A member of a quartermaster outfit, he underwent many bombings after the invasion. His outfit served near Casa Blanca.

Ex-Teacher. Ala. A. & M. Grad

Pvt. Ward is a former teacher, and a graduate of Alabama A. and M. College. He was a supply clerk while in active duty.

Sgt. Robert W. Maley of Boston served with a port battalion. He was bombed in England as well as in Africa.

In directing unloading of ships in North Africa, he narrowly escaped death on occasions, but is in the hospital because a heavy crane hook struck him on the head at Oran.

Former Shop Steward

He formerly was a shop steward while with the United Fruit Company.

Corp. David Montgomery of Atlanta served with a port battalion also, and was hurt in an explosion.

Pvt. James W. Dobbins of Columbia, Tenn., who was with the engineers, served in Africa for five months. He has been a soldier for sixteen months.

Served in Africa, Ireland

Pfc. Servele Kelly of Columbia, La., who entered Africa with the Allied invasion forces, landed at Oran, where the shooting was rough. He also served in North Ireland.

With a quartermaster outfit, and subjected to plenty of danger, he came back for medical treatment rather than surgical.

He was a musician and teacher before entering the army.

White soldiers here point out that not only were the colored ones a big factor in transportation, engineering and in stevedore work, but they also were a blessing in artillery.

The 240-millimeter howitzer, just about the biggest thing that rolls on wheels and shoots, provided a welcome barrage for white infantrymen advancing on the Axis forces in the Tunisian campaign, they say.

Performed Like Veterans

Two of the wounded soldiers said that colored artillerymen handled these big guns as if they had been doing so for years.

The hospital here, commanded by Col. Sidney L. Chappell, has army nurses and doctors who are assisted in caring for the patients by enlisted men of the medical corps.

SEP 1 1943

Soldiers, along with civilians, do clerical work, and they are occupied with the hundred-and-one jobs of supply and maintenance.

Civilians operate the laundry, cook and serve the food and work as maids and in other capacities.

Some employees are from far away states, but many local people have jobs.

The nearby mountain communities and valley towns have furnished many white women for jobs in the laundry and mess halls as well as in the offices.

---

4 Win Medals

Journal and Guide

Awarded By King George IV

Norfolk. Virginia

Extricate Flyers From Wreckage In Remote Region

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

LONDON —(ANP)—When the chronicles of World War II are written, historians will have a great deal to say about the bravery of African soldiers and civilians alike. Africa's soldier sons are brave in the face of danger and quick and intelligent in action. When faced with difficult problems they solve them in the speediest and simplest manner. Their bravery is innate.

Now here is a tale of four of Africa's civilians who showed resource and intrepid courage. In the most remote regions of Africa, as in the quiet farmlands of Britain, people know [illegible] when a bomber comes down in flames that there is peril—for the rescuer as much as for the pilot trapped in the wreckage. In Africa, as in Britain, there are men to act.

Prompt and courageous action by four natives—their names are Chemweno Arap Chepkoiyou, Cheboi Arap Chephuri, Kiverange Wa Macharia and Kimnegch Arap Kigen—was responsbile for saving the lives of the survivors of a Royal Air Force plane which recently crashed near Eldoret, Kenya.

EXTRICATE CREW

All four were working on the Eureka estates at the time of the accident. Although the aircraft caught fire immediately it struck the ground, the natives climbed in, without hesitation, amid burning wreckage and exploding ammunition, to extricate the crew.

For this valorous deed the four men have been awarded the George medal, second highest of Britian's awards for civilian bravery, by King George IV.

Chemwene Arap Chepkoiyou told the story afterwards.

"I am a squatter (small farmer) on the Eureka estates where I look after my own cattle. I was herding my stock near the trees on the right hand side of the road that leads to the Wheat Shamba, when at about ten o'clock in the morning, I saw an aeroplane pass over the farm.

"It was not very high in the air, and was going in the direction of Sergoit rock. It turned above the rock, then left the forest, and, losing altitude, crashed in the Wheat Shamba.

RAN TOWARD PLANE

"As soon as I realized it was going to crash I went quickly toward it. As I ran, the aircraft, which was skidding along the ground, struck some rough place and turned over and over until it finally came to rest.

"I found one European lying on the ground by the tip of the left wing and from him I gathered that help was wanted by the others in the plane. At that time the left wing was on fire from underneath. This later caused a grass fire.

"At the same time as I arrived, Cheboi Arap Chepkuri reached the scene. We left the injured man lying outside the aircraft and went to the nose to investigate. Kiberenge Wa Macharia came hurrying up to help. We went round to the right hand side of the nose, climbed in, and lifted out a man with a broken leg. His legs were pinned by a piece of metal and we had to free them. Then we were joined by Kimngech Arap Kigen. We laid the injured man from the aircraft on the wheat stubble.

AMMUNITION EXPLODES

"By this time ammunition had begun to explode all around us. We returned to the aircraft and carried the man lying by the tip of the left wing to the Wheat Shamba, as the grass fire was taking a big hold.

"By this time the ammunition was exploding badly and we were rather frightened, but we returned again to remove from under the wreckage the body of the third man, who had been killed in the crash."

All four men are quite cool about it. It was not a nice experience—but they knew their job, and they did it well.

Gets Medal

Journal and Guide

Norfolk, Virginia

AUG 21 1943

Jerome L. Collier of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been awarded a soldier's medal by the commander of the Base Section of the American Army in England for saving the life of an Englishwoman trapped in her home.

Brooklyn Soldier Gets Soldier's Medal In England

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Corporal Jerome L. Collier, 23, of 369A Madison street, Brooklyn, has been awarded the soldier's medal in England for saving the life of a British woman trapped in her home.

Cpl. Collier was given his medal by the commander of the Base Section of the American Army. Afterwards Collier stood with the commander to take the salute as several detachments of colored soldiers marched past.

FATHER IN NAVY

The soldier entered the service in June, 1942, and has been overseas since September. Frank L. Collier, his father, is in active service with the United States Navy, having been called out of retirement in June, 1942, to resume his post as an officers steward first class.

He has two sisters working in war industries and a brother, who works in the Pearl Harbor Navy Yard. His mother, Mrs. Fannie Collier, resides in Brooklyn.

Cpl. Collier was active in Boy Scout activities. After his early training as a scout cub, he was a leader in Troop 198. He is a member of the Concord Baptist Church and sang in the junior choir.

Awarded D.S. Cross

Journal & Guide

Posthumously

Norfolk. Va

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(ANP)—The coveted Distinguished Service Cross was awarded here posthumously Wednesday to Pvt. George Watson for "courage and bravery far beyond the call of duty."

AUG 28 1943

The presentation was made by Major Gen. Harry F. Hazlett, commanding officer, replacement and school command, Birmingham, to Mrs. Emma Gaines, indigent and bedridden grandmother of the youthful hero.

Circumstances surrounding Pvt. Watson's act of bravery which cost him his life were not disclosed by the Army. Citing that Watson "could have saved himself, but chose to save others," Gen. Hazlett in his presentation statement said, "George Watson died in the shining splendor of high courage and utter unselfishness, true to [illegible] tradition of the American soldier. His act is an inspiration to every real American."

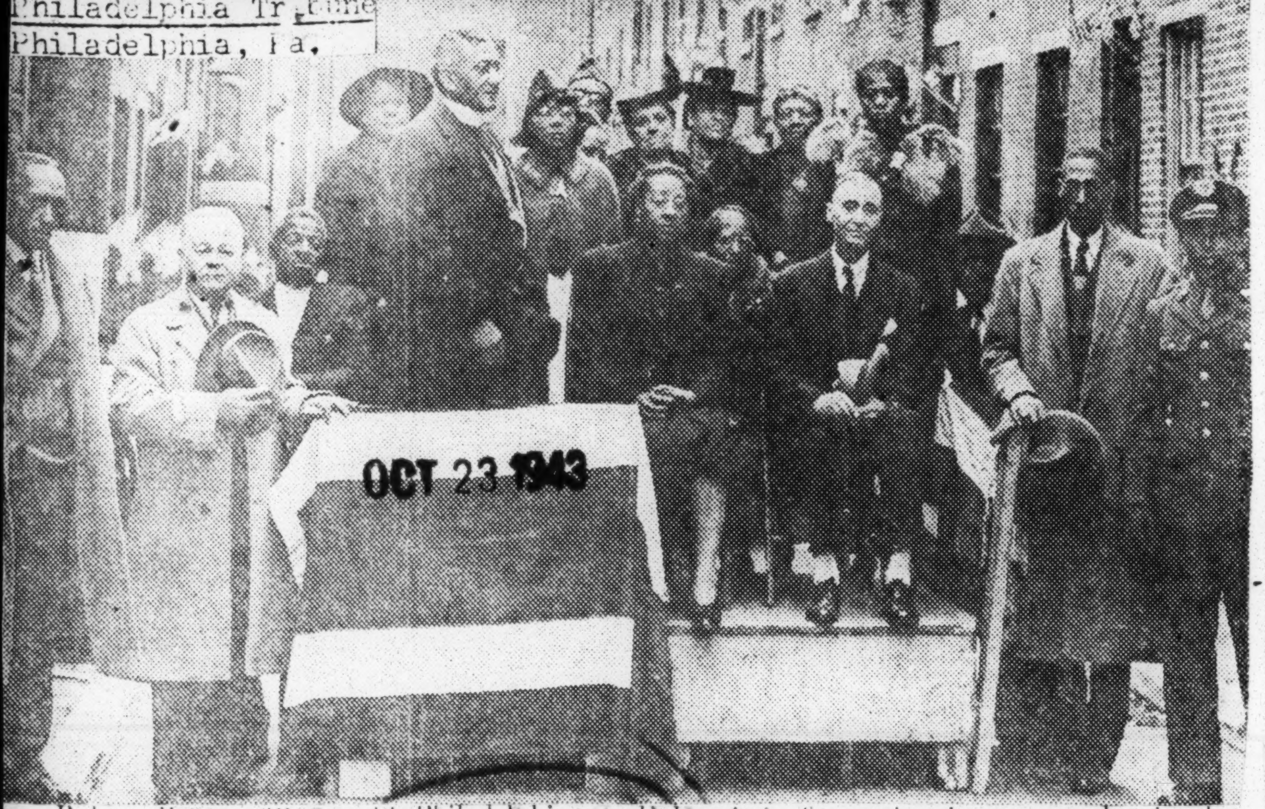
AUG 28 1943

The ceremony was held at Mrs. Gaines' residence and was witness by Grover Gillins, white, for whom Watson worked before his voluntary enlistment in 1941. A graduate of Parker High School he has a brother, Johnny Hill Watson, in the Navy.

47b-1943

War Hero Honored

Philadelphia Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.



OCT 23 1943

Robert Brown, 19-year-old Philadelphian and the city's first colored war casualty in the Pacific, was honored last Sunday at a flag raising in the 1600 block Naudain street. Reading, left to right, front, are: George Thompson, civilian aide in the local [illegible] recruiting office; Ernest Copeland, Rev. Robert H. Tabb (standing on platform), Mr. and Mrs. Brown, the hero's parents; and State Representative Lewis Mintess, with his arm around a servicemans' shoulder.

OCT 3 1943

War Hero Honored At Flag Raising

Tribune.
Philadelphia, Pa.

OCT 23 1943

Robert Brown, 19, of 1731 Naudain street, Philadelphia's first war casualty of the Pacific, was honored last Sunday at the unfolding of a service flag in the 1700 block of Naudain street.

The flag carried 44 blue stars and one gold star, which represented boys in service that came from the 1700 blocks of Waverly, Lombard, Rodman and South streets.

The Rev. Robert Tabbs gave the in[illegible] Mintess, Charles H. Hopkins, Lt. Shipps Post V. F. W.; Dr. Adolphus Anderson, president of Pennsylvania Elks, Attorney David Asbury and George Thompson of the War Department were guest speakers.

Other participants were: Clifton Kelly who sang the Drum and Bugle Corps of Lincoln Post 89, and Ernest Copeland, master of ceremonies.

The Rev. Tabbs dedicated the flag and also made the presentation of the gold pin to Mrs. Edna Brown and the blue Star pin to the o[illegible]

The committee [illegible]mbers were: Mrs. Minnie Boddie, Mrs. Resa Norris, Mrs. Edna Brown, Mrs. Sarah Mack, Stella King, Agnes Monroe, Jessie Brown, Bessie Saunders, and Moore, Annie Green, Catharine Laura Hayes.

Relatives of the honored servicemen were Dora Carpenter, Eudene Bryant, Enoch Taylor, Irene Royster, Julian Freeman, Minnie Boddie, Mildred Green, Wilbright Slappy, Alberta Spellman, Christina Houston, Mary Cofield, Charles Pratt; Elizabeth Moore, Velma Johnson, Georgie Byrd, Louise Hughes, Laura Cooper, Eddie Wooden, Elise Williams, Marie Molore, Sallie Quartelbaum, Catharine Cuiggs, Esther Munson, Annie Clash, Lula Thomas, [illegible] Dorothy Evans, Ada Carter, Adell Harper and Pearl Pratt.

Soldier Gets Medal; Saved 5 From Death

Philadelphia Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

WASHINGTON, (ANP)— For extracting the bodies of five soldiers from a burning medium bomber, and at the risk of becoming himself engulfed in the flames or being caught in the tank explosion T-Sgt. John D. Hilton of Bolivar, West Va., has been awarded the soldiers medal for heroism, the war department disclosed Thursday.

At the time of the incident, Sgt. Hilton was assigned to the aviation squadron at Daniel field, Augusta, Ga. Recommendation for the citation was made by Cornelius E. O'Connor, company air corps, commanding Daniel field, and early this month the medal was pinned on Hilton by Brig. General C. P. Kain, commanding officer at the Rome Air field, Rome, N. Y., where the hero is stationed.

Earn[illegible] Distinction

NOV 20 1943

Philadelphia Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

First [illegible] BAKER, already holder of the Soldier's Medal, has been awarded the Legion of Merit for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services as first sergeant of Company H, 25th Infantry." Sergeant Baker, whose home is in Nashville, Tenn., is attached to Detachment, M. C., Ft. Huachuca, Ariz. —U. S. Army Signal Corps photo.

Risk Fire To Pull Out Plane Crew

Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Four Civilians Are Awarded the George IV Medal

AUG 27 1943

By RUDOLP[illegible]UNBAR

LO[illegible]N— (ANP) — When the chronicles of World War II are written, historians will have a great deal to say about the bravery of African soldiers and civilians alike. Africa's soldier sons are brave in the face of danger and quick and intelligent in action. When faced with difficult problems they solve them in the speediest and simplest manner. Their bravery is innate.

Now here is a tale of four of Africa's civilians who showed resource and intrepid courage. In the most remote regions of Africa, as in the quiet farmlands of Britain, people know that when a bomber comes down in flames that there is peril — for the rescuer as much as for the pilot trapped in the wreckage. In Africa as in Britain, there are men to act.

Awarded Medal

Promp[illegible]d courageous action by four natives — their names are Chemwene Arap Chepkoiyou Cheboi Arap Chepkuri, Kiverange Wa Macharia and Kimgech Arap Kigen — was responsible for saving the lives of the survivors of a Royal Air force plane which recently crashed near Eldoret, Kenya.

All four were working on the Eureka estates at the time of the accident. Although the aircraft caught fire immediately it struck the ground the natives climbed in without hesitation, amid burning wreckage and exploding ammunition, to extricate the crew.

For this valorous deed the four men have been [illegible]ded the George me[illegible] second highest of Britain's awards for civilian bravery, by King George IV.

Tells the Story

Chemweno Arap Chepkoiyou told the story afterwards.

"I am a squatter (small farmer) on the Eureka estates, where I look after my own cattle. I was herding my stock near the trees on the right hand side of the road that leads to the Wheat Shamba, when at about ten o'clock in the morning, I saw an aeroplane pass over the farm.

"It was not very high in the air, and was going in the direction of Sergoit rock. It turned above the rock, then left the forest, and losing altitude, crashed in the Wheat Shamba.

"As soon as I realized it was going to crash I [illegible] quickly toward it. As I ran, the aircraft, which [illegible] skidding along the ground, struck some rough place and turned over and over until it finally came to rest.

After the Crash

"I found one European lying on the ground by the tip of the left wing, and from him I gathered that help was wanted by the others in the plane. At that time the left wing was on fire from underneath. This later caused a grass fire.

"At the same time as I arrived, Cheboi, Arap Chepkuri reached the scene . We left the injured man lying outside the aircraft and went to the nose to investigate. Kiberenge Wa Macharia came hurrying up to help. We went round to the right hand side of the nose, climbed in, and lifted out a man with a broken leg. His legs were pinned by a piece of metal and we had to free them. Then we were joined by Kimnech Arap Kigen. We laid the injured man from the aircraft on the wheat stubble.

'By this time amunition had begun to explode all around us. We returned to the aircraft and carried the man lying by the tip of the left wing to the Wheat Shamba, as the grass fire was taking a big hold.

"By this time the ammunition was exploding badly and we were rather frightened, but we returned again to remove from under the wreckage the body of the third man, who had been killed in the crash."

All four men are quite cool about it. It was not a nice experience — but they knew their job, and they did it well.

SEP 18 1943

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

D.C. OFFICER AMONG PRIZE WINNERS—Second Lieutenant James J. Johns, representing the Basic Flying Training Squadron at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, is shown above receiving the award of a $100 check for his squadron whose efforts resulted in winning the "Area Beautification" contest. Awarded the prize is Commanding Officer Noel F. Parrish, Corpus Christi, Texas. From left to right are seen 1st Lieut. Frank L. Drye, of Tuskegee, bandleader of the 313th AAF Band at TAAF; 2nd Lieut. [illegible], of Alliance, Ohio, and 2nd Lieut. Emory Smith, of Washington, D.C., representing the Advanced Flying Squadron (3rd place winner) at Tuskegee.—Tuskegee Army Air Field Photo.

DEC 30 1943

PM
New York, N. Y.

Seaman John R. Robinson of Rochester, N. Y., is congratulated by Rear Adm. Lyal A. Davidson, who presented him with the Purple Heart. Robinson was wounded during the bombing of the U.S.S. Savannah in the invasion of Salerno.

WINS PURPLE HEART FOR HEROISM IN ITALY

Daily World Atlanta, Georgia

DEC 19 1943

By JAMES A. SANDERS
Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY—(ANP)—Private Thurman D. Ramsey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ramsey, 416 E. 51st Street, Chicago has been awarded the Purple Heart for injuries received as the result of enemy action. Private Ramsey was wounded by shrapnel during an air raid while posted as a sentinel over a vital military installation.

The 23 year old engineer was born in Nashville, attended Wendell Phillips high school in Chicago and at one time of his inducton was assistant manager of the Johnson Florist Shop in Detroit. Ramsey is the first enlisted man of his outfit to be decorated. An award of the Purple Heart to Lt. Norman E. Andrews, white, Orangeburg, S. C., of the same regiment preceded Ramsey's by a week.

Asked how he felt about his conduct during those trying moments Ramsey said, "Shucks, any one ofthese guys would have done the same thing. When a fellow is posted as a guard, he doesn't quit his post until properly relieved, does he? Ah! It was nothing. Got a match?"

Pvt. Ramsey's conduct under fire is typical of thousands of Negro youth who are giving their last full ounce of devotion to this global [illegible] his comrades [illegible]s theater has most deeply impressed upon him what sort of a place America would be to live in if the swastika were to reach across the Atlantic.

Mississippian Awarded The Legion Of Merit

Age
New York, N. Y.

NOV 20 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Staff Sergeant Isaac McGrew, jr., member of an Infantry regiment operating in the South Pacific Area, has been awarded the Legion of Merit, the War Department announced this week. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac McGrew, sr., Route 5, Yazoo City, Mississippi.

The citation, dated August 25, 1943, is as follows:

"For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services of merit in the South Pacific area, from May 15, 1942 to February 20, 1943. During this entire period Sergeant McGrew was primarily responsible for the successful installation and maintenance of three hundred miles of wire under the most rigorous of tropical,, climatic and terrain conditions.

"Equipped with only Infantry Tables of Basic Allowance equipment, Sergeant McGrew improvised methods for overcoming numerous obstacles of nature and never failed to accomplish an assigned mission. By long hours, ingenuity and perseverance, he performed remarkable feats of accomplishment."

Age
New York, N. Y.

2 Soldiers Of Engineer Combat Unit Awarded Soldier's Medal For Heroism In Far Northern Outpost

NOV 20 1943

EDMONTON, ALBERTA, Canada.—In a far-north setting that smacked of a Robert Service ballad, two members of a U. S. Engineer combat unit were awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism, the War Department announced this week.

Without thought of their own lives, they had gone plunging into an Arctic-bound stream to rescue an officer who had [illegible] from a wharf.

The soldiers were Sergeant Robert Hayes, 27, Columbia, South Carolina, and Technician - fifth grade Hubert Massie, 23, of Waynesboro, Virginia. Brigadier General Ludson D. Worsham of the Corps of Engineers, now directing the Northwest Division, was the awarding officer.

Aside from the heroism involved, and the Army's recognition of it, several factors were contingent with that ceremony which resulted perhaps, in broader scope, toward acknowledgment of the fine spirit-at-large displayed not only by Hayes and Massie, but by all the fellow-soldiers of their outfit.

At a later date, Army officials now point out, the name and number of this unit can be written with pride into the open book. Today, however, such facts must be kept veiled for reasons of security.

The salient theme (when details of the work of this unit are revealed) will probably deal with a story how young men from the Gulf State cotton-fields, from one-mule fields of the Carolinas, from tobacco-sheds of the Virginias and a few from the midwest mills, all were drawn together in common cause and then went into one of the strangest, toughest battles ever fought by human beings.

Battle Against Nature

It was a battle against the elements of nature; it was one for survival of the fittest.

It was a strange battle, because those same young men (brought up to the friendly sun) had been chosen by virtue of their pre-Army work to do an important job in this far-northern spot in Canada. But it was a cold Canada they arrived in, fiercely so; meaner than they ever dreamed of back where the catfish bite and the jasmine grows.

It was a tough battle because they had to fend for themselves. No one put their camp there for them; they cut the logs and built the structures with their own hands. They fought solitude; for the place was only a Hudson's Bay post to begin with. They fought homesickness; for home was far to the friendlier south.

According to Army observers, the point that all-out historians will stress is this:

The record of this Combat Engineer unit will show that Negro troops of the U. S. Armed Forces are probably the most adaptable men on earth. They can do a job anywhere under the sun—and in the far north where there is no sun. They can take it, and they can dish it out. All this they can do with staunch American loyalty, and without question.

Indeed, the men of this now-unnamed group were hand-picked with careful designation—and for one of the toughest jobs of all. This in itself would seem to be an obvious indication of a streamlined Army's keen eye toward picking the right men, at the right time, for the right job—and this job called for all-around specialists with staying-power.

The camp is well-provisioned, and the food is good. For recreation, and the boys like the fun, despite the pressure of their labors, facilities of the American Red Cross shows to fine advantage. There is also a baseball field where a score board shows that at some undetermined date, the "Galloping Domino" team had defeated its visitors 7—0.

In [illegible] with sportsmanship, one baseball team came right out in the camp newspaper and admitted defeat because the winning team had outplayed them at every turn.

Four church services are available each Sunday, including two at a Roman Catholic mission which has ga enfni ufilHRD RA RA A is expressed about the camp band are proud of their men—and earned has gained fine reputation for its Music-minded soldiers with an eyepride on a reciprocal basis is one work among the Eskimo people. for all-out balan[illegible] it will be of the best fighting assets in any Chaplain (Captain) J. A. Clement lop-sided unt[illegible]get about eightman's army. was pastor of an influential church bass h[illegible]others agree that the in Boston, Massachusetts before the band is a corker.

war. His choir can hold its own Life goes on here at a great pace.
anywhere. and it goes cheerfully. A group of Varying opinion (perhaps accord- understanding officers take pains to ing to the mood of the moment) see that it does. Certainly, they

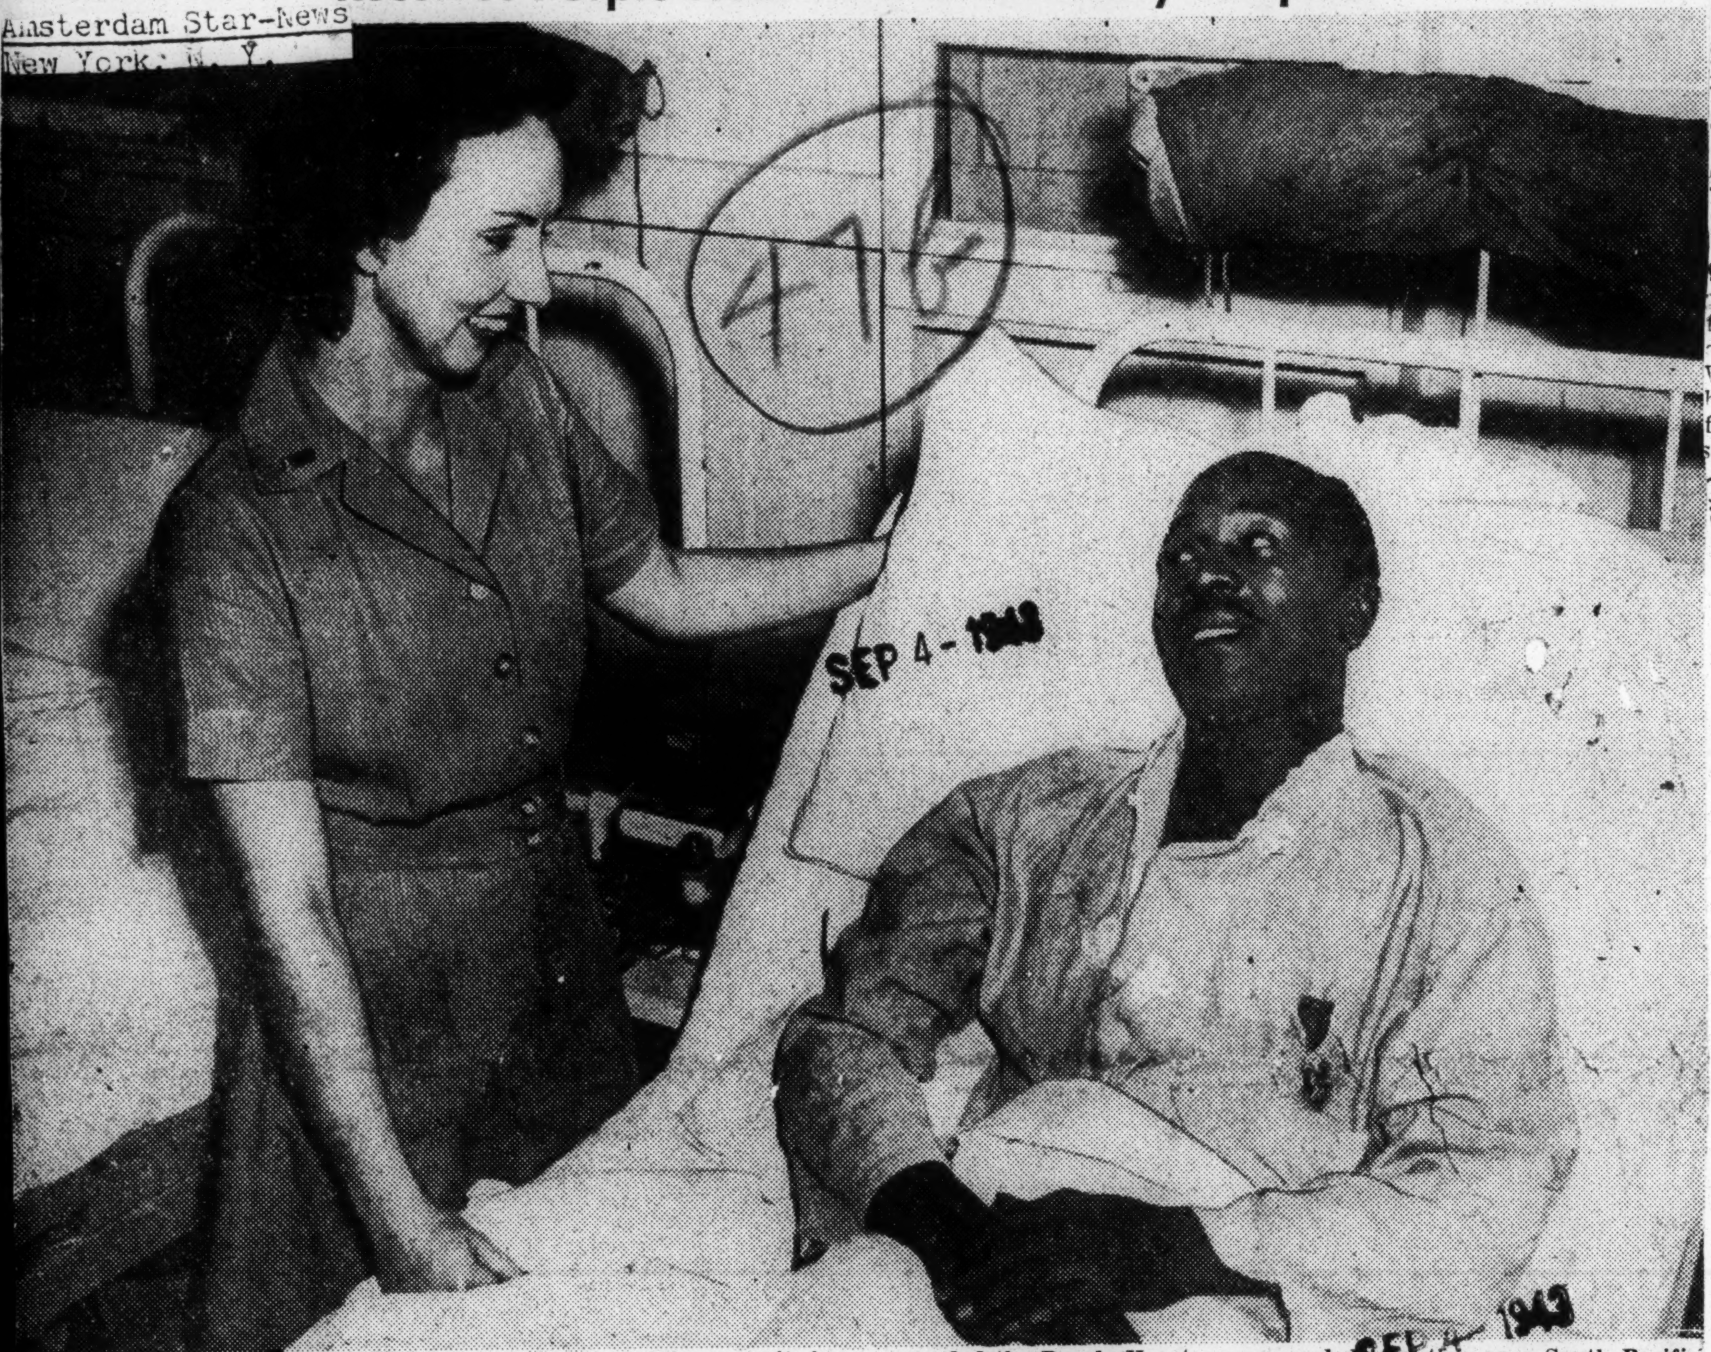
47b-1943

Receives Purple Heart Award At Army Hospital

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.



SEP 4 - 1943

PRIVATE JAMES BARKER, ASSIGNED to an engineer unit in the South Pacific, receives the congratulations of Lieutenant H. E. Bebb[illegible], nurse, at an advanced base Army hospital. He was recently awarded the Purple Heart, was wounded in action on a South Pacific Island. Private Barker's sister, Julia lives at 110 W. 126 St., New York City. —U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo

---

The "Gallant Colored Soldier" Of U. S. Further In Ranks Of Heroes

Argus

Have Received 31 Congressional Medals, 57 Distinguished Service Crosses In Wars

St. Louis, Missouri

(By War Department B P R)

In the current global war the Negro has definitely established himself in the hierarchy of distinguished soldiers.

Citations In 1943

Private George Watson, of Birmingham, Alabama, received the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in the Southwest Pacific on March 8, 1943.

For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services at Guadalcanal, on March 27, 1943, four Negro youths received the Legion of Merit. They were Private First Class Ben W. Pettis, Senatobia, Miss.; Private Jesse Harris, Tuskegee, Ala.; Private Verna C. Neal, Ruleville, Miss.; and Private Henry Smith, Jr. Good Pine, La.

Sergeant Charles M. Baynes, of Chicago, Illinois, was awarded the Silver Star for heroic conduct exhibited on June 26, 1943, near an American air base. Another Silver Star award went to Private Mack B. Anderson, of Brenham, Texas for bravery in India in 1942.

Many others have been honored in this war, their awards ranging from the Distinguished Service Cross to the Good Conduct Medal.

Between the years 1[illegible]2 and 1926, soldiers serving all-Negro outfits were awarded 31 Congressional Medals of Honor and 57 Distinguished Service Crosses. Since the War Department record of those honored makes no reference to race, it is presumed that there are others.

First authorized by act of Congress in 1862, the Medal of Honor, often referred to as the Congressional Medal of Honor because it was "presented in the name of Congress," is the highest decoration awarded by the United States Government.

Saved "Old Glory"

The Distinguished Service Cross, the next highest honor, was instituted by executive order in January, 1918, and confirmed by Congress July 9, 1918.

First instance in history of the award of the Medal of Honor to a Negro was in 1863 when Sergeant William H. Carney, Company C. 54th Massachusetts Colored Infantry, received the Honor for conspicuous gallantry at Fort Wagner, South Carolina, on July 18 of that year.

The citation stated, in part, that "when the color sergeant was shot down, the soldier grasped the flag, led the way to the parapet, and planted the colors thereon: When the troops fell back he brought off the flag, under a fierce fire in which he was twice severely wounded."

DEC 3 - 1943

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

COLORED SOLDIER AWARDED "PURPLE HEART" BY ARMY

By James A. Sanders
Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY, Dec. 23 (ANP)—Pvt. Thurman D. Ramsey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ramsey, 416 E. 31st street, Chicago, has been awarded the Purple Heart for injuries received as the result of enemy action. Pvt. Ramsey was wounded by shrapnel during an air raid while posted as a sentinel over a vital military installation.

The 23 year old engineer was born in Nashville, attended Wendell Phillips high school in Chicago, and at the time of his induction was assistant manager of the Johnson Florist shop in Detroit. Ramsey is the first enlisted man of his outfit to be decorated. An award of the Purple Heart to Lt. Norman E. Andrews, white, Orangeburg, S. C. of the same regiment preceded Ramsey's by a week.

Asked how he felt about his conduct during the trying moments, Ramsey said, "Shucks, any one of these guys would have done the same thing. When a fellow is posted as a guard, he doesn't quit his post until properly relieved, does he? Ah, it was nothing. Get a match?"

Pvt. Ramsey's conduct under fire is typical of thousands of Negro youth who are giving their last full ounce of devotion to this global war. What he and his comrades have seen in this theater has most deeply impressed upon him what sort of a place America would be to live in if the swastika were to reach across the Atlantic.

DEC 24 1943

Argus
St. Louis, Mo.

WINS LEGION OF MERIT IN NORTH AFRICA AREA

Sgt. McDade Performs Outstanding Work

CASABLANCA, Morocco —1st Sergeant Claude McDade, Bordentown, New Jersey, now serving with a Quartermaster Truck Regiment of the Fifth American Army in North Africa, has been awarded the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services.

His citation reads in part: "As First Sergeant of Company D and later of Company H. he has been one of the outstanding non-commissioned officers of the regiment. He has been an excellent example to the enlisted men of the regiment and his persistently maintained a high state of discipline among subordinates. Upon the activation of Comany H. he was of the greatest assistance in selecting, assigned and training personnel. At all times he has maintained a soldierly bearing.

SEP 3 - 1943

exhibited unusual qaulities of leadership and superior initiative."

Sergeant McDade was gradated from Tuskegee Institute, Alabama in 1935. He served for [illegible] years in the ROTC and was a student-major. Following graduation he immediately entered the Army, serving 4 years with an Infantry regiment at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

SEP 3 - 19

Age
New York, N. Y.

Camp Robert Smalls Given Navy "E" For General Excellence

SEP 18 1943

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — There is a new flag flying below the national colors on the Camp Robert Smalls' flagpole at the U. S. Naval Training Station here — the Navy "E" award for general excellence.

Camp Smalls was presented the award recently by Captain J. S. Freeman, executive officer of the Training Station, under a new program of inter-regimental competition between Great Lakes' three Negro regiments. The camp was judged the most proficient of the three in its training activities during a three-week period

The first winner in the program, Camp Smalls will not be able to rest on its laurels during the current three-week period. Men of Camp Lawrence and Camp Moffet are both determined to capture the second contest and see the flag flying in their respective camps before the [illegible] of the month.

SEP 18 1943

Inaugurated by Cmdr. D. W. Armstrong, assistant recruit training officer in charge of Negro training, the new program calls for judging of the regiments on the basis of professional duties, infantry drill, inspection, swimming, physical training and rifle range drill.

Mother Of Naval Hero

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

AUG 7 - 1943

Invitation to Achievement

Last week the first United States war ship to be named in honor of a Negro member of the Naval forces was launched at the Bethlehem Steel Company's Fore River Yard at Quincy, Mass. The Destroyer Escort, U. S. S. Harmon, named for Leonard Roy Harmon, mess attendant, first class, killed in action November 13, 1942, is a concrete and positive answer to those die-hard critics who claim that the Negro's progress has been hampered, even cut off by this war. The naming of the Harmon is proof that the failure is not a "blackout" in recognition and honor for the Negro.

47

The U. S. S. Harmon is a monument to a new kind of progress and achievement that this nation hardly dreamed of two years ago. It is significant that the U. S. S. Harmon and the Liberty Ships — Booker T. Washington, Frederick Douglass, George Washington Carver and John Merrick — named for prominent Negro civilians, all came under the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the most criticized American President since Abraham Lincoln. It is significant that most of the national progress the Negro in recent years has made, has been born since the war started. This progress is the symbol of a higher recognition of the achievements our race is making despite all odds.

AUG 7 - 1943

At the same time, we are not unmindful of the fact that Negroes have crashed the gate and gained the right to serve in the Navy, hitherto lilywhite. And we are not unmindful of the fact that Negroes cannot become commissioned officers in this same Navy that includes today in its fleet a Destroyer Escort ship named for a Negro, who had lived, might never have advanced in the Navy's ranks.

AUG 7 - 1943

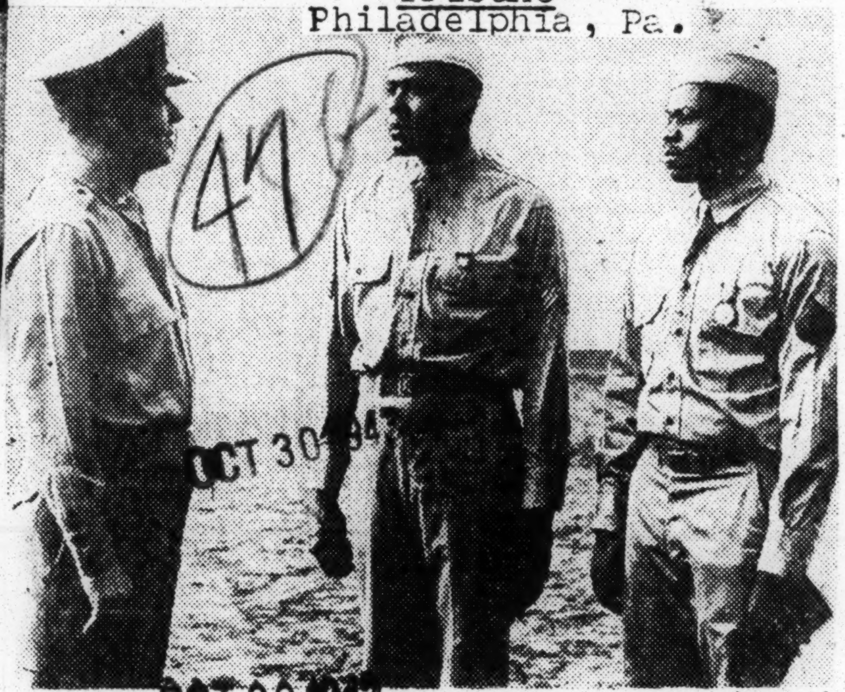
The case of Leonard Harmon and the U. S. S. Harmon for which his mother was brought all the way from Texas to christen, did not come through ballyhoo; through whining that it cannot be done; that the door is closed tightly against us; that because we are colored, we will never get anywhere. It comes through achievement; the sacrifice of blood and life; the sweat of the brow and the tears and prayers of millions, both white and black, who believe the future will not be dark and who demonstrate that the present can be made as rosy as tomorrow through their perseverance and hard work.

If Harmon had not exposed himself to enemy bullets to save a wounded comrade, the race would not be honored by having one of its members elevated to the role of national recognition as was Leonard Harmon. If achievement was not the means whereby we can be sure of what we gain, the Navy's doors would not have been opened to us, war or no war, as they are today. Negroes in the Coast Guard, Negroes in the Marines, Negroes in the Air Corps, even though Jim Crow, represent the trend of times, and possibly, the new tomorrow which we all should strive to achieve and bring into reality.

AUG 7 - 1943

Heroes Get Medal

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.



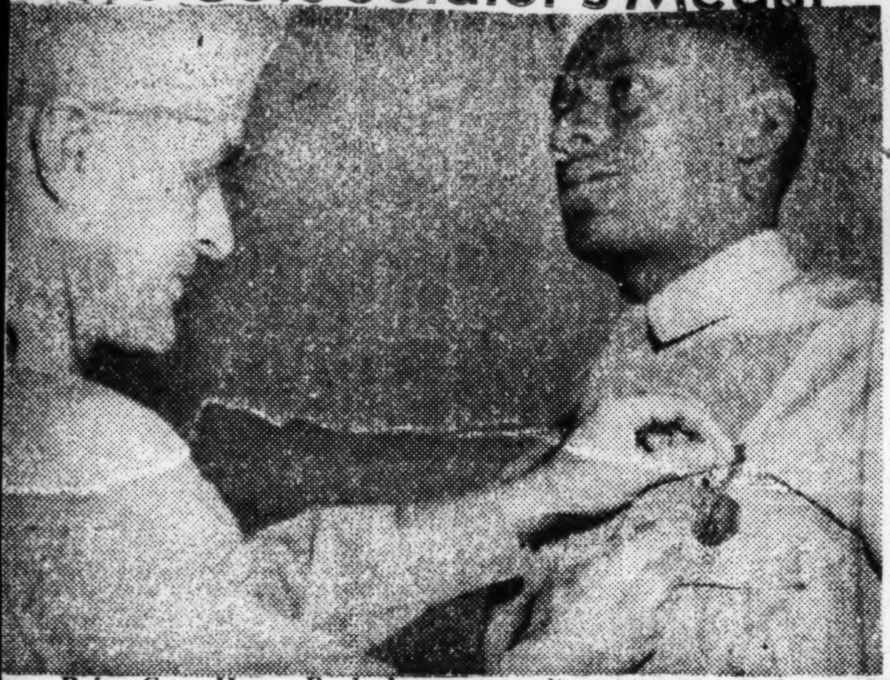
47

OCT 30 1943

Brigadier General [illegible]dson D. Worsham of the Corps of Engineers, is seen with Sgt. Robert Mays (left) and T 5th Grade Hubert Massie, after presenting them the Soldier's Medal for heroism displayed in rescuing an officer from a Canadian river. The award was made at an undisclosed camp in Northern Canada.—U. S. Army Photo.

47b-1943

Hero Gets Soldier's Medal



Brig. Gen. Hume Peabody, commanding general of the Army Air Forces Tactical Center, Orlando, Fla., pins the Soldier's Medal on Sgt. Willie B. Goodson, Negro, for heroism after he had risked his life to save an officer who had fallen beneath telegraph poles falling from a railroad flatcar being unloaded.

Ala. Soldier Gets Medal For Bravery

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia
NOV 27 1943

ORLANDO, Fla.—(S N S)—Brig. Gen. Hume Peabody, Commanding General of the Army Air Forces Tactical Center here, presented the Soldier's Medal for heroism to Sgt. Willie B. Goodson, Negro, Fairfield, Ala., recently at a formal retreat ceremony, for his quick action in saving the life of an officer by rushing into logs falling from a rail car to pull him to safety.

Sgt. Goodson, who is a member of a Signal Construction Battalion at the Tactical Center, was aiding in unloading telegraph poles from a railway flat-car when Lt. Donald L. Rush, Boston, Construction Officer for the battalion, climbed to the top of the poles to release braces holding them in place.

As the poles began to slide from the car, the lieutenant leaped down, but turned his ankle in jumping from the car and before he could drag himself to safety other poles began piling on his body.

At great personal risk, Sgt. Goodson ran to the officer's side, secured him beneath the arms, and pulled him to safety.

Goodson is the son of Rosie Lee Taylor, Oneonta, Ala.

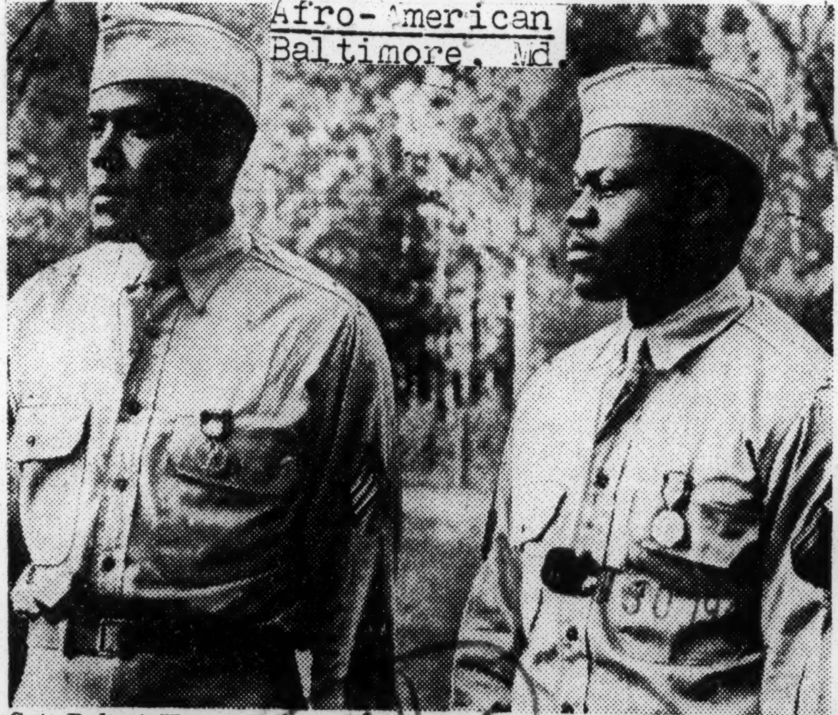
WEST VIRGINIAN DECORATED

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

First Sergeant Horace J. Porter, of New York City, congratulates Cpl. John D. Hilton, a few minutes after Corporal Hilton was awarded the Soldier's Medal recently for heroism at Rome Air Field, New York. Admiring the medal is Master Sergeant Arthur Giron, of Opelousas, La. Corporal Hilton was awarded the Soldier's Medal at a review at the Rome Army Air Field, Rome, N. Y., by Brigadier General C. P. Kane, commanding general Rome Air Service command. Corporal Hilton of Bolivar, W. Va., is one of the Air Service command's ground crew members whose job it is to "Keep 'em Flying."

Get Medals for Heroism

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.



Sgt. Robert Hayes, left, and Technician Fifth Grade Hubert Massie, shortly after they were awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism displayed when they rescued an officer from a river in Canada. The scene of the award is an undisclosed camp in Northern Canada.

OCT 30 1943

Make Thirteen Purple Heart Awards; Eighteen Promotions In New Guinea

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
SEP 1943

WITH AEF IN NEW GUINEA, Sept. 9—(ANP)—Among latest developments of the week, 13 men were decorated as a result of receiving wounds during a Japanese air attack, while working at a New Guinea port. All men are valuable truck drivers, who haul tons of supplies daily to and from the docks. They are Pvts. Lester L. Butler, Savannah, Ga.; Arthur S. Watson, New York; Gilbert H. Morris, Dequesne, Pa.; Isaiah Jackson, Rayville, La.; William L. Thorne, Charleston, S. C.; Booker T. Evans, Jr., Houston, Miss.; Robert T. Crews, Jr., Greenville, S. C.; Abron Irwin, Mound Bayou, Miss.; James E. Guilford, Boston; Albert H. Latourse, Glentock, N. J.; Wilson Lee, Jr., Pratt City, Ala.; Joe Hardy, Roanoke, N. C.; and Alfonzo Smith, New York.

The citation for the awards, which was by order of Col. Geoffrey Galwey, an advance base commander, read: "For wounds received in action near . . . . . March 8, 1943." The formal presentation of awards was made last week.

PROMOTIONS MADE

Among the 18 men receiving promotions were Staff Sgts. Harold J. Morris, Jackson, Mich., and Gaston E. Jernagin, Whiteville, N. C., from the rank of sergeant. S/Sgt. Morris' promotion also carries with it the title of company transportation sergeant. His job is to supervise traffic and maintenance of vehicles and heavy motorized equipment of his outfit. S/Sgt. Jernigan becomes his company's construction foreman. His promotion came as a result of outstanding carpentry work in erecting one of the larges hospitals on this base.

Others receiving promotions were (promoted to sergeant from private first class) James Smith, Plaquemine, La. (promoted to corporal); Thomas H. Wiggins, Natchez, Miss., William W. Jones, Charles City, Va.; Sexton E. Caldwell, Bethany, La.; George W. Walker, Fountain Inn, S. C.; Blane Spearman, Greenville, Miss.; Harold Spottswood, Shelby, Va.; Elvin L. Cooper, Baton Rouge, La.; Benjamin J. Jackson, Glenn, Ga.; Bennie Lewis, Midville, Ga.; Willie Rogers, Shreveport, La.; Preston Tassin, Garyville, La.; Cleo Moore, Sumrall, Miss.; Wolfred J. DeSilva, New Orleans; Johnnie A. Jones, Tallulah, La., and Overton Thacker, Nashville.

IONORED IN MUSKEGON

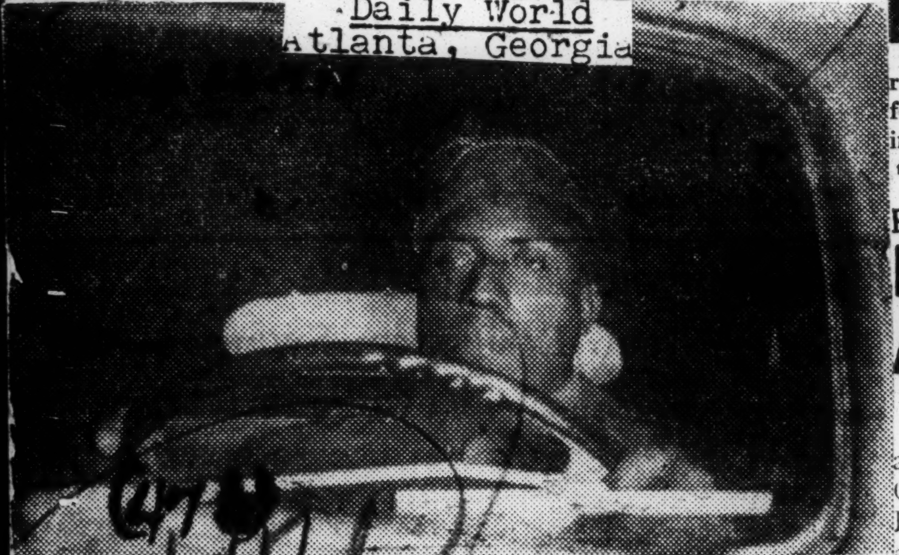
Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Sept 14, 1943

John L Frazier, 31, of 81 East Muskegon avenue, Muskegon, Mich., president of the International Molder and Foundry workers union, receiving the Army-Navy "E" award. Frazier, a graduate of Bishop college, Marshall, Texas in 1937 has for the past six years resided in Muskegon, where he has taken a very active part in all civic and community affairs. He is president of the local N.A. A.C.P. The West Michigan Steel Foundry where Frazier is president of the union hires approximately 600 workers; about 100 of that number are Negroes.

Saves A Life, Promoted

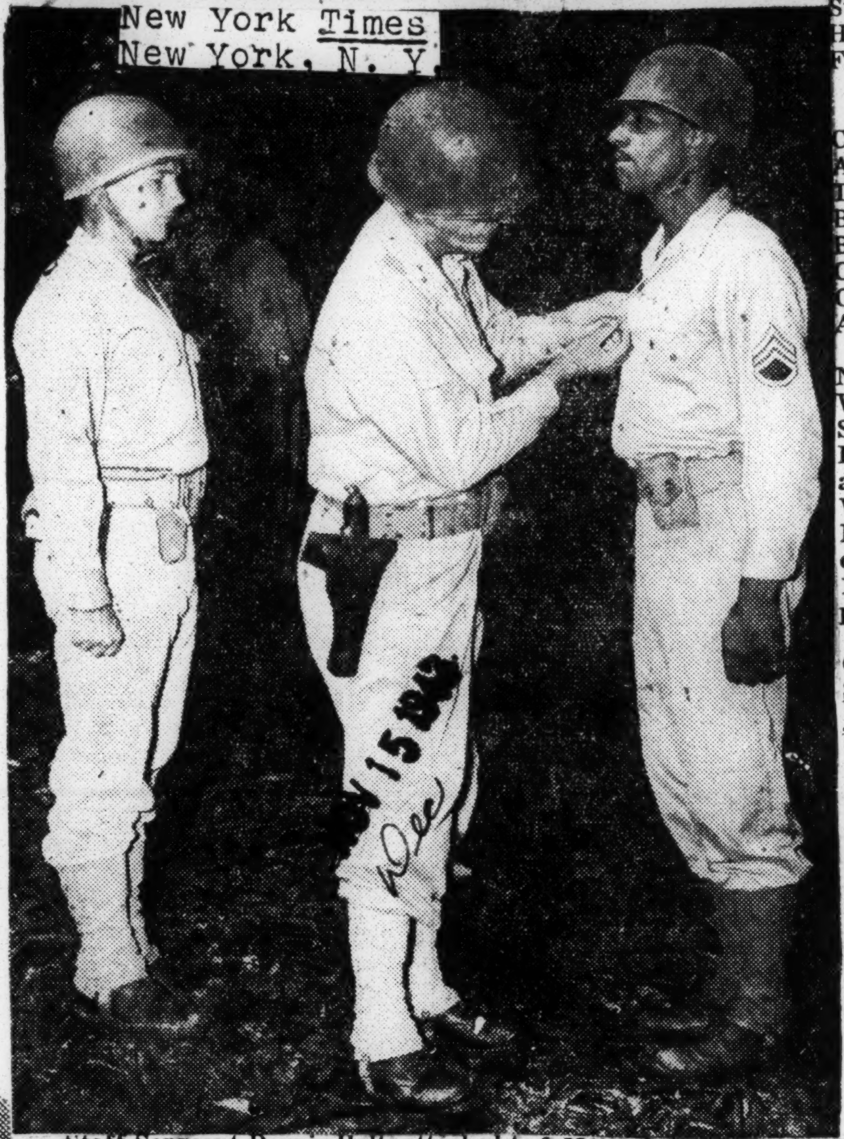
Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



....Quick thinking on the part of Pvt. Rainous Danzy, Quartermaster Detachment, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., truck driver, recently saved a life in Baltimore. A woman stepped in front of the truck Pvt. Danzy was driving and only the quickest thinking enabled him to apply the brakes as fast as he did, stopping on a split second with the woman leaning on the front fender of his truck. In recognition of his meritorious performance, Danzy received a Pfc rating although he had been in the detachment only one week —(ANP Photo.) ....

A HERO DECORATED IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC

New York Times
New York, N. Y.



NOV 15 1943

Staff Sergeant Dennis Holt, attached to a Negro infantry regiment, receives from Maj. Gen. Oscar W. Griswold the Legion of Merit award for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service." Lt. Col. James B. Wells, battalion commander, stands at the left.

The New York Times (U. S. Signal Corps)

NOV 15 1943

Capts. Lemuel Curtis, 67 Pliney Street, Hartford, Conn.; Charles Hall, Brazil, Ind.; George Roberts, Fairmont, W.Va.;

Nineteen First Lieutenants

First Lieuts. Sidney Brooks, Cleveland, Ohio; Herbert Carter, Amary, Miss.; William Campbell, Tuskegee; Herbert Clark, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Charles Dryden, Bronx, N.Y.; Clarence Jamison, Cleveland; James Knighten Tulsa, Okla.; Allen Lane, Demopolis, Ala.; Erwin Lawrence, Cleveland;

Lee Rayford, 1822 Ninth Street, Northwest, Washington; James Wiley, Pittsburgh; Willie Ashley, Sumter, S.C.; George Bolling, Pheobus, Va.; Samuel Bruce, Seattle; Willie Fuller, Tarboro, N.C.; Walter Lawson, Newton, Va.; Paul Mitchell, 908 Howard Road, Southeast, Washington; Louis Purnell 181 W. Weaver Street, Philadelphia; Graham Smith, Ahoskie, N.C

Second Lieuts. John Rogers, Chicago; Spann Watson, 122 Hohn Street, Hackensack, N.J.

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

[illegible] Medal to New Jersey Private

NOV 27 1943

U.S. [illegible] Headquarters, South Pacific—The award of the Soldier's Medal to Private Jesse E. Evans, son of Mrs. Mamie Evans, 37 Flagler Street, Morristown, N.J., has been announced by the War Department.

The citation states that Private Evans in "disregarding his personal safety, dived from the deck of a vessel to the rescue of two men who had been thrown into the water when a small boat capsized in a strong current."

NOV 27 1943

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster Awarded Dead Air Hero

DEC 11 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The award of the Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal to First Lieutenant Paul G. Mitchell, 808 Howard Road, S. E., Washington, D. C., has been announced by the War Department.

Lieutenant Mitchell, who was assigned to the 99th Fighter Squadron, was reported killed in action in the North Africa area on August 11, 1943.

DEC 11 1943

The Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster was given for "meritorious achievement while participating in 10 sorties against the enemy."

---

25 of 99th Flyers Given Air Medal

Baltimore, Md
Afro-American

By OLLIE STEWART

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN SICILY—(By [illegible] Censored)—The Air Medal was awarded to the following members of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, August 30, for meritorious achievement while participating in ten sorties against the enemy:

Lieut. Col. Benjamin Davis, 1421 S Street, Northwest, Washington;

47b-1943

Plaque for Service Men

SEP 11 1943

476

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

MRS. VERA GANDY views the plaque unveiled at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture agency, where her husband, Charles Gandy, was honored with other former employees of the company now in the armed services. Families of all soldiers of both races attended the ceremonies.

Given Medal

AUG 21 1943

Amsterdam Star-Ne
New York, N. Y.

CORPORAL JEROME L. Collier, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Collier, of 369A Madison St., Brooklyn, was awarded the Soldier's Medal in England for saving the life of a British woman who was [illegible]ed in a fire in her home. Cpl. Collier, a m[illegible] of the Engineering Unit, removed the woman through a window and lowered her to Cpl. Charles Robinson, who stood below. Robinson is a New Yorker and resides at 828 St. Nicholas Ave.

AUG 21 1943

Many Have Been Honored In This War For Bravery

DEC 4 1943

476

Do not [illegible]

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In the current global war the Negro has definitely established himself in the hierarchy of distinguished soldiers. Pvt. George Watson, of Birmingham, Ala., received the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in the Southwest Pacific on March 8, 1943.

For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services at Guadalcanal on March 27, 1943, four Negro youths received the Legion of Merit. They were Pfc. Ben W. Pettis, Senatobia, Miss.; Pvt. Jesse Harris, Tuskegee, Ala.; Pvt. Verna C. Neal, Ruleville, Miss., and Pvt. Henry Smith, Jr., Good Pine, La.

AWARDED SILVER STAR

Sgt. Charles M. Baynes, of Chicago, was awarded the Silver Star for heroic conduct exhibited on June 26, 1943, near an Algerian air base. Another Silver Star award went to Pvt. Mack B. Anderson, of Brenham, Texas, for bravery in India in [illegible]

DEC 4 1943

Many others have been honored in this war, their awards ranging from the Distinguished Service Cross to the Good Conduct Medal.

Between the years 1862 and 1926, soldiers serving in all-Negro outfits were awarded 31 Congressional Medals of Honor and 57 Distinguished Service Crosses. Since the War Department record of those honored makes no reference to race, it is presumed that there are others.

First authorized by act of Congress in 1862, the Medal of Honor, often referred to as the Congressional Medal of Honor because it was "presented in the name of Congress," is the highest decoration awarded by the United States Government.

The Distinguished Service Cross, the next highest honor, was instituted by executive order in January, 1918, and confirmed by Congress July 9, 1918.

First instance in history of the award of the Medal of Honor to a Negro was in 1863 when Sgt. William H. Carney, Company C, 54th Massachusetts Colored Infantry, received the honor for conspicuous gallantry at Fort Wagner, South Carolina, on July 18 of that year.

DEC 4 1943

HEROIC SOLDIER

The citation stated, in part, that "when the sergeant was shot down, the soldier grasped the flag, led the way to the parapet, and planted the colors thereon. When the troops fell back he brought off the flag, under a fierce fire in which he was twice severely wounded."

And so down through the years the number of Negroes who have won acclaim for valor has become legion.

* * *

AWARDS OF CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR—1862 TO 1926

(Awarded for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in action against the enemy.)

NAME	ORGANIZATION	YEAR	Place Achievement
Sgt. E. L. Baker, Jr.	10th U.S. Cavalry	1898	Santiago, Cuba
Pvt. Wm. H. Barnes	38th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va.
1st Sgt. P. Beaty	5th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va.
Pvt. Dennis Bell	10th U.S. Cavalry	1898	Tayabacoa, Cuba
Sgt. Thomas Boyne	9th U.S. Cavalry	1879	Nimbres Mts, N.M.
1st Sgt. J. Bronson	5th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va.
Sgt. W. H. Carney	54th Mass. Colored Inf.	1863	Fort Wagner, S. C.
Sgt. John Denny	9th U.S. Cavalry	1879	Las Ani. Can., N.M.
Sgt. Decatur Dorsey	39th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Petersburg, Va.
Sgt. C. A. Fleetwood	4th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va.
Pvt. Jas. Gardiner	36th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va.
Sgt. J. H. Harris	38th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	New Mkt. Hts., Va.
Sgt. Thos. Hawkins	6th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Deep Bottom, Va.
Sgt A. B. Hilton	4th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va.
Sgt M. M. Holland	5th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va.
Cpl. Miles James	36th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va.
Sgt. H. Johnson	9th U.S. Cavalry	1879	Milk River, Colo.
Sgt. Geo. Jordan	9th U.S. Cavalry	1880-1881	Ft. Tulerso, N.M., & Carizo Canyon N.M
1st Sgt. Alex Kelly	6th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va
Pvt. Fitz Lee	10th U.S. Cavalry	1898	Tayabacoa, Cuba
Sgt. Wm. McBryar	10th U.S. Cavalry	1890	Arizona
1st Sgt. Rbt. Pinn	5th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va.
Sgt. Thomas Shaw	[illegible] U.S. Cavalry	1881	Carizo Can. N. M.
Sgt. E. Stance	9th U.S. Cavalry	1870	Kickapoo Spr., Tex
Pvt. W. Thompkins	10th U.S. Cavalry	1898	Tayabacoa, Cuba
Pvt. Charles Veal	4th U.S. Colored Troops	1864	Nr. Richmond, Va.
Pvt. Aug. Walley	9th U.S. Colored Troops	1881	Cuchillo Negro Mountains, N. Mex
Pvt. G. H. Wanton	10th U.S. Colored Troops	1898	Tayabacoa, Cuba
1st Sgt. M. Williams	9th U.S. Cavalry	1881	Cuchillo Negro Mountains, N. M.
Cpl. W. O. Wilson	9th U.S. Cavalry	1890	Sioux Campaign
Sgt. Brent Woods	9th U.S. Cavalry	1881	New Mexico

DEC 4 1943

AWARDS OF THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS

(Awarded for extraordinary heroism in action under the provisions of the act of Congress approved July 9, 1918)

ALL OF THE FOREGOINGG AWARDS WERE GIVEN IN 1918

NAME	ORGANIZATION	Place Achievement
Pfc. R.Breckenridge	Co. H 365th Inf.	Ferme de Bel-Air, F
Cpl. Russell Pollard	Co. H 365th Inf.	Bois-Frehault, Fr.
Pvt. George Bell	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Sgt. Roy A. Brown	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Pfc. Will Clincy	Co. F. 366th Inf.	Frapelle, France
Pvt. Alex Hammond	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Cpl. Van Horton	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Pvt. E. L. Merrifield	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Pvt. Tom Rivers	Co. G. 366th Inf.	Bois-de-la-Voivrotte France
Pvt. Joe Williams	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Pvt. John Baker	Co. I. 368th Inf.	Binarville, France
Pfc. T. H. Davis	San. Det. 368th Inf.	Binarville, France
Pfc. E. H. Handy	Co. B. 368th Inf.	Binarville, France
Pvt. Joseph James	Hq. Co. 368th Inf.	Binarville, France
Pvt. Bernard Lewis	Co. A. 368th Inf.	Binarville, France
Pfc. Lewis Watkins	Co. A. 350th M. G. Bat.	Eply, France
Sgt. Wm. Butler	Co. L. 369th Inf.	Maison-de-Champagne, France
Cpl. Elmer Earl	Co. K. 369th Inf.	Ripont Swamp, Fr
Pvt. E. McCowin	[illegible] K. 369th Inf.	Ripont Swamp, Fr
Pvt. Wm. Sandford	Med. Det. 369th Inf.	Ripont River, Fr.

Sgt.	Robert Barnes	Co. L. 370th Inf.	Mont de Sanges, Fr
Pvt.	William Cuff	2nd M.G. Co., 370th Inf.	Mont de Sanges, Fr
Pvt.	Leroy Davis	Co. L. 370th Inf.	Mont de Sanges, Fr
Sgt.	Lester Fossie	Co. M. 370th Inf.	F'me-de-la R'v'e, Fr
Pvt.	James Fuquay	Co. H. 370th Inf.	Guillimet F'm., Fr.
Sgt.	Ralph Gibson	Co. H. 370th Inf.	Beaume, France
Pvt.	W. G. Hurdle	3rd M.G. Co. 370th Inf.	Ferme La Folie, Fr
Pvt.	Spirley E. Irby	Co. H. 370th Inf.	Beaume, France
Sgt.	Mat. Jenkins	Co. F. 370th Inf.	Vauxaillon, France
Pvt.	A. Johnson	Hq. Co. 370th Inf.	Mont des S'n'es, Fr
Pvt	Andy McCall	M.G. Co.. 370th Inf.	F'me de la Riv., Fr
Pvt.	C. T. Monroe	Hq. Co. 370th Inf.	Mont-de Sanges, Fr
Pvt.	H. L. Pearson	M.G. Co. 370th Inf.	Ferme La Folie, Fr
Pvt.	Tom Powell	Co. H 370th Inf.	Beaume, France
Cpl.	E. Thompson	Co. L. 370th Inf.	Mont-de-Sanges, Fr
Cpl.	Isaac Valley	Co. M. 370th Inf.	Vraincourt, France
Pvt.	Alonzo Walton	3rd M.G. Co. 370th Inf.	Rue Larcher and Pont-d'Any, Fr.
Pfc.	N. C. White	Co. F. 370th Inf.	Vauxaillon, France
Pfc.	Alf. Williamson	Med. Det. 370th Inf.	Beaume, France
Pvt.	Willie Boston	M.G. Co. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt.	Reuben Burrell	M.G. Co. 371st Inf.	Cham. sect., France
Pvt.	Charles Butler	M.G Co. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Sgt.	Thomas Cooper	Co. K. 371st Inf.	Trieres Farm. Fr.
Pvt.	Junius Diggs	Co. G. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt.	Burton Holmes	Co. C. 371st Inf.	Nr. Hill 188, Fr.
Cpl.	Sandy E. Jones	Co. C. 371st Inf.	Nr. Champ., Fr.
Sgt.	L. McClelland	Med. Det. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt.	Ellison Moses	Co. G. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt.	Walley Stewart	Hd. Co. 371st Inf.	Nr. Bussy Frm., Fr.
Pvt.	Bruce Stoney	Med. Det. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt.	T. Webster	M.G. Co. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt.	C. Crawford	Hq. Co. 372nd Inf.	Nr. Bussy Frm., Fr.
Pvt.	George Gross	Co. D. 372nd Inf.	Nr. Sechault, Fr.
Pvt.	S. H. Johns	Co. L. 372nd Inf.	Nr. Bussy Frm., Fr.
Pvt.	C. Merrimon	Co. L. 372nd Inf.	Nr. Bussy Frm., Fr.
Sgt.	Ira M. Payne	Co. A. 372nd Inf.	Nr. Sechault, Fr.
Pvt.	C. R. Van Allen	Co. L. 372nd Inf.	Nr. Bussy Frm., Fr.

DEC 4-1943

The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan.

WINS PURPLE HEART FOR HEROISM IN ITALY

DEC 24 1943

By James A. Sanders

Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

4

Somewhere In Italy, Dec. 24.—(ANP)—Private Thurman D. Ramsey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ramsey, 416 E. 31st street, Chicago, has been awarded the Purple Heart for injuries received as the result of enemy action. Pvt. Ramsey was wounded by shrapnel during an air raid while posted as a sentinel over a vital military installation.

DEC 24 1943

The 23 year old engineer was born in Nashville, attenden Wendell Phillips high school in Chicago, and at the time of his induction was assistant manager of the Johnson Florist shop in Detroit. Ramsey is the first enlisted man in his outfit to be decorated. An award of the Purple Heart to Lt. Norman E. Andrews, white, Orangeburg, S. C., of the same regiment preceeded Ramsey's by a week.

Asked how he felt about his conduct during those trying moments, Ramsey said, "Shucks, any one of those guys would have done the same thing. When a fellow is posted as a guard, he doesn't quit his post until properly relieved, does he? Ah! It was nothing. Got a match?"

Pvt. Ramsey's conduct under fire is typical of thousands of Negro youth who are giving their last full ounce of devotion to this global war. What he and his comrades have seen in this theater has most deeply impressed upon him what sort of a place America would be to live in if the swastika were to reach across the Atlantic.

Dorie Miller Is Given Tribute By Sec. Of Treasury

Informer
Houston,
Texas

SEP 4 1943

476

WASHINGTON.—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., paid a glowing tribute to the heroism of Dorie Miller, Negro messman, first class, USN, in an address before the forty-third annual meeting of the National Negro Business league, at Bethel AME church, Baltimore, Maryland, on Wednesday night, August 25.

"Many of us would gladly pay our last dollar if we could wear the Navy Cross which was won by Dorie Miller at Pearl Harbor, the Secretary declared.

Miller's citation erad:

"For distinguished devotion to duty, extraordinary courage and disregard of his own personal safety. While at the side of his captain on the bridge, Miller, despite enemy strafing and bombing, and in the face of a serious fire, assisted in moving his captain, who had been mortally wounded, to a place of greater safety, and later manned and operated a machine gun directed on enemy Japanese attacking aircraft, until ordered to leave the bridge."

SEP 4 1943

Appealing for support of the third War Loan drive, which opens September 9, Mr. Morgenthau said:

"In this war we can't all join up but we can all help . . . Our boys are willing to fight day and night and give their lives; and they are eager to turn over every available cent to buy bonds to help them do a still better job. We here at home who are only asked to lend our money, certainly ought to do at least as well in buying bonds as our men on the battle fronts."

SEP 4 1943

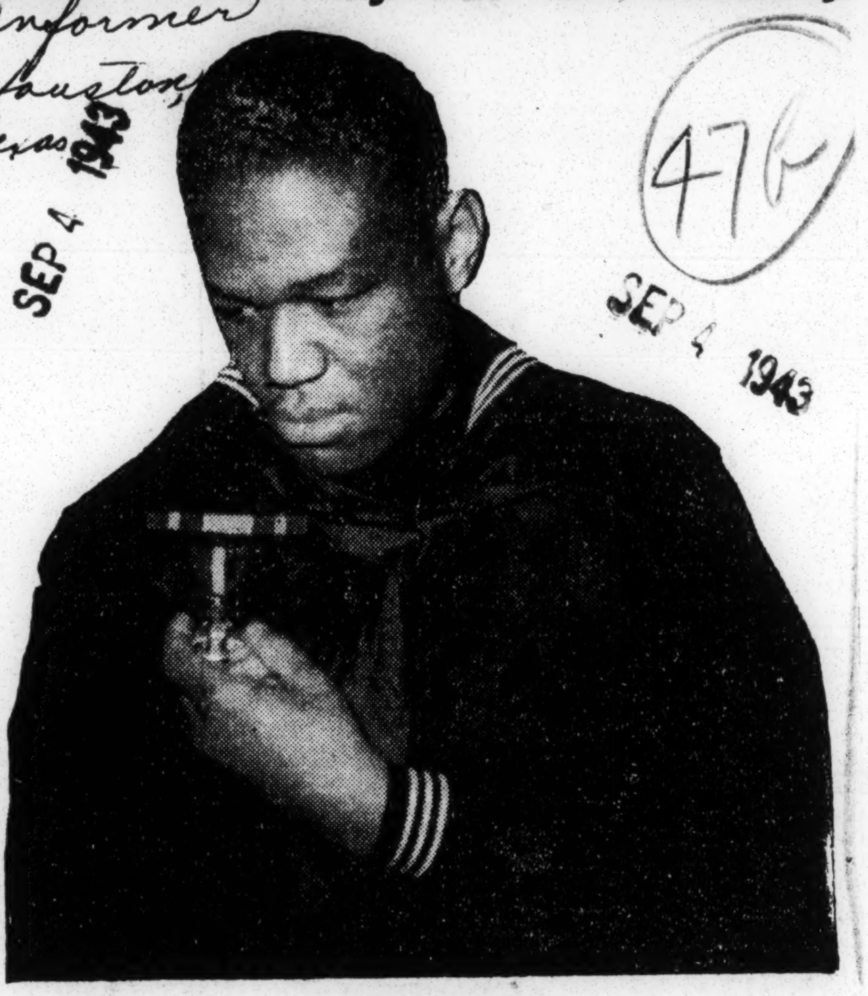
The treasury secretary was introduced by Mayor Theodore McKeldin of Baltimore.

Addresses also were made by Willard W. Allen and William Pickens [illegible] staff.

Representatives of Negro insurance companies attending the convention pledged to buy two million dollars worth of bonds in the Third War Loan drive. They have already invested four million dollars in war bonds. Several other business groups attending the meeting made pledges of large purchases in the forthcoming bond drive.

SEP 4 1943

Dr. J. E. Walker of Memphis, Tennessee, president of the league, presided.



DORIS MILLER

SEP 4 1943

476

47c-1943
Afro-American
Baltimore. Md.

Induction Was Unfair, Dixie Editor Charges

JAN 30 1943

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(ANP)—Emory O. Jackson, managing editor of the Birmingham World, is seeking release from the army, blaming his induction on January 11 on prejudice of the all-white Dothan, Ala., draft board.

C. A. Scott, general manager of the chain to which Jackson's paper belongs, is supporting his efforts on the grounds that the latter's position entitled him to deferment.

JAN 30 1943

Appeals Futile

Jackson was teaching in Dothan when he registered in 1940. He became managing editor of the World in July, 1941. The Dothan board refused to transfer his registration here and allegedly ignored his request for reclassification.

The State appeal board rejected a similar request last month, although Selective Service headquarters in Washington considers newspaper managing editors among essential employees of communications industries.

JAN 30 1943

CHAPLAIN'S AIDE

Chaplain's Aide at Fort Bragg, N.C., is Corporal Velton Randall of Dallas, Tex.

NAACP Addresses Query To Manpower Head After Voluntary Enlistments Are Ordered Stopped By President

NEW YORK CITY—Urging that Negro Americans be accorded the right to share fully in the duties and responsibilities of the war crisis, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People addressed this week to Paul McNutt, director of the War Manpower Commission, a group of questions bearing upon the effective utilization of Negro manpower and womanpower in the armed forces and in industry.

The NAACP reminded McNutt of his recent statement that drafted men would be allowed to state their preference concerning the branch of the army, navy, marine or coast guard in which they wished to serve since the Selective Service System has been placed under WMC and will be administered through the WMC chairman.

Will Negroes Have Choice?

The NAACP asked if this statement meant that the preference of draftees to serve in the navy, coast guard and marine corps will be respected without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. The association further asked if the present practice of excluding Negroes from serving at commissioned officer level in each of these services would be abandoned.

JAN 2 1943

Pointing to McNutt's authority to issue regulations with reference to the training program for the armed forces, including reserve components and women's auxiliary groups, in non-federal educational institutions the NAACP asked if McNutt intended to issue an order that "all such facilities be open and available to qualified persons without regard to race, creed, color or national origin."

Union Situation Cited

2 - 1943

The NAACP communication also reiterated that the president's order which conferred additional authority on the WMC had been slanted for the most effective mobilization of manpower and womanpower and the elimination of waste due to disruptive recruitment and asked exactly what steps the WMC would make to rectify the continuance of situations in which employers and unions refused to accept qualified Negro workers because they are Negroes.

McNutt was also asked if in the event of his establishing an advisory committee composed of government or private groups, Negroes would be appointed to such a committee.

News
Birmingham, Ala.

Married Men Are Furnishing Alabama's March Draft Quota

Seventy-five per cent of Alabama's draft boards have tto dip heavily into their registrations of married men to fill thier March draft calls, State Selective Director Gen. B. Smith announced Thursday.

But single men will take care of the April and May calls if those becoming of age fill the present selective service expectancy, Gen. Smith said.

MAR 4 - 1943

In June and July the state boards expect to dip back into their married listings again and if requirements of the armed forces continue as heavy in the late Summer and early Fall, the boards will have to call on married men with one child.

The young men becoming of age, supplemented by men with collateral dependents, will well take care of the April and May requirements, Gen. Smith explained, but stated that all figures and plans were based on estimates of present needs and plans were not certainties.

The selective service director said that Alabama had only drafted about 10 per cent of its available manpower and that draft requirements had only taken 11 per cent of farm labor. Heavy losses, as high as 33 per cent in some sections, he said was due more to men being attracted to high paying industrial jobs than to levies by the armed forces.

MAR 4 - 1943

Drafting of white and Negro manpower is proceeding on the basis of population distribution, approximately 65 per cent of the draftees being white and 35 per cent Negro. Many Negroes, once deferred because of illiteracy and social diseases, are now being taken into the service with the armed forces providing proper educational and health control measures to fit them for active duty, the director said.

Gen. Smith praised the cooperative and efficiency of the draft boards throughout the state and emphasized their giving each draft case the closest scrutiny before issuing a call to service.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

McNutt Wants Negro Draft Quota Raised

MAR 13 1943

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11 (ANP)—Draft more Negroes for the Army, regardless of the past rulings and considerations of percentages, is the plea of Paul V. McNutt, who sees in this step the elimination of the necessity for drafting whites in other classifications. McNutt has pointed out that the percentage system has kept more Negroes out of the Army than any other method. By eliminating this method of calling draftees for the Army and by taking Negroes in all branches of services, Army, Navy, Marine Corps, without regard for the percentage quota, an easement on the number of whites being called will be effected.

MAR 13 1943

NO COMMENT FROM WAR DEPARTMENT

McNutt did not clarify his statement nor elaborate on it when made to his press conference, last week, however, his statement was clear enough to be understood.

War Department officials had no comment to make on the elimination of their percentage calling system.

Knoxville, Tenn., Journal
February 28, 1943

Army Negro Personnel Totals 450,000 Men

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27 (AP)—Negro personnel in the Army now totals more than 450,000, with men in every branch of the service, the War Department reported today.

More than 60,000 are serving outside the United States. They include more than 25,000 in the Pacific and about 10,000 in North Africa.

In addition, the department said, "a completely organized and well-trained Army Air Force Pursuit Squadron composed of Negro personnel will be committed to combat soon."

PM
New York, N. Y

McDermott Indicates Increased Draft of Negroes

MAY 11 1943

Col. Arthur V. McDermott, New York Selective Service chief, indicated today that Negroes are now going to be given more opportunity to get into the Army.

He said Negroes would make up 20 per cent of the June draft quota.

Previously, because of the Army's rule that no more than 10 per cent of the Nation's males in the Army can be Negroes, many of them here have not been called for induction despite 1-A classification. As a result, they have found it difficult to get jobs.

MAY 11 1943

Washington Post
Washington, D. C.

125 Negroes From Washington Take Places in Armed Forces

Seventy-eight Washington soldiers, 43 sailors and 4 marines, all Negroes, inducted into the armed forces May 7, will report for active duty tomorrow.

MAY 13 1943

To the Army go:

James B. Allen, John R. Taylor, William Reynolds, John D. Hill, Willie McWilliams, Russell Hawkins, Wilbert J. Washington, Hayes B. English, Clyde W. Looper, Edward W. McDowell, jr., Cornell Hailey, Hayes W. Blake, Floyd White, Eugene M. Wilson, Cleophus Jasper, William A. Maedel, James E. Stanley, Carrol T. Stephney, Wortha E. Lyles, Ernest Harris, jr., Philip A. Wright, Clarke P. Gordon, Calvin C. Campbell, Thomas E. Pinkert, Allen E. Johnson, Arthur J. Clement, jr.

John H. Safrit, Seaborn Walker, William J. Cook, Calvin L. Harris, Maurice O. Hawkins, James E. Phelps, James W. Thomas, Ezra R. Greer, Gordon E. Lee, Robert E. Nelson, Leroy A. Winston, Fitzhugh R. Murfree, Carl Buckner, Alfred E. Spencer, Edward Stevenson, Calvin I. Edwards, Robert B. Quillings, Reginald A. Lowe, Solomon W. Mayo, John N. Maddox, Julian C. ass, Artis T. Wilson, Richard M. Marshall, jr. Ralph Rose, Thomas J. McElrath, Samuel Fitzgerald.

Edward Howard, jr., Clarence N. Lewis, Edward E. Henderson, Charles A. Tyler, Thompson, James H. Kelley, jr., Howard J. Buccey, Theodore S. Jackson, James B. Streator, Arthur L. Givand, ergil W. Speare, Richard J. Simon, John B. Porter, Herbert M. Jasper, Leroy Cobb, Reuben C. Jenkins, Joseph Battle, James H. Kennedy, jr., James L. Jones, jr., Joseph Dawkins, Robert L. Scroggins, James S. Harris, Herbert H. Thomas, Russell W. Bowler, jr., George W. Lanham, William J. Rice.

MAY 13 1943

To the Navy go:

Jessie Jones, Adam Savage, Carl Fornesberg, Milton K. Alexander, Pery Haywood, Miller R. Smith, William C. Taylor, Oscar Jones, Alexander Truesdale, Nathaniel Washington, Raymond L. Davis, Arthur W. Johnson, Guy West, James D. Payne, Joseph Robinson, Gordon E. Glass, George E. Knight, James E. Henson, Justin W. Day, Ervin Goodman, Jerry Bassett, George E. Jackson, Nelson L. Anderson, Melvin J. Colston, Luther Henry, William F. Jeter, Joseph Montgomery, Thommel Minnick, Arthur Jackson, Fred O. Tolliferreo, Walter J. Young, James W. Boyd, John H. Clark, Charles T. Smith, Joseph Harper, Frederick W. Nelson, Lee G. Skipper, John H. Harrison, Roman Taylor, Jake S. Dailey, Otis C. Fuller, Roy Meredith, Herbert Taylor.

To the Marine Corps go:

Wardell Andrews, Lacy E. Anderson, Venston K. Kirkley, Dunbar H. Stewart.

World-Telegram
New York, N. Y.

City Draft Quota 20 P. C. Negroes

MAY 10 1943

Twenty per cent of all men to be inducted into the armed forces in this city during next month will be Negroes, Col. Arthur B. McDermott, New York City Director of Selective Service, said today.

MAY 10 1943

"It can be assumed," he stated, "that the army now is ready to equip and establish a number of Negro regiments."

The percentage of Negroes inducted heretofore has been at the rate of about 7 per cent here. The percentage is to be increased radically because there is a large group of Negroes classified 1-A unable to get jobs because of their classification.

MAY 10 1943

Colonel McDermott clarified "a widespread misapprehension" that all registrants with dependency deferments must obtain jobs in war production plants or risk loss of the dependency status. That impression, he said, is erroneous.

"If every registrant in the city," he said, "were to leave his present occupation to obtain work in an airplane factory or a shipyard or a munitions factory or the like, the results would be disastrous to the welfare of the community."

Nation
New York, N. Y.

Race and the Draft

Dear Sirs: I have recently returned from Fort Huachuca, Arizona, where I served as Assistant Field Director, American Red Cross, with the 93rd Division, which is 100 per cent Negro. My experience there opened my eyes as never before to the conditions that exist among the Negroes, and I want to pass on to you a few of the facts that I learned while on duty with the Negro troops.

It is indisputable that the Southern draft boards have shown great prejudice in their selection of draftees. This statement was made to me by both white and colored officers. Out of a division of 15,000 to 18,000 men, approximately 2,000 are being discharged for physical disability. Many men obviously unfit for army service were inducted. During one period men were being discharged at the rate of 60 to 70 a day. I can understand how the local draft boards took these men, but I cannot understand how they passed the medical examination at army induction centers if these were conducted with any degree of honesty. MAY 29 1943

Hundreds of these misfits are being weeded out at Fort Huachuca. They are placed in casual companies, deprived of all extra clothing, mess-kits, and personal equipment, and have not been paid for months. Whether this is due to inefficiency or plan, I do not know. I do know that dozens of these poor devils came to our office asking for small comfort loans so they could purchase razor blades, toilet articles, and other necessities. I do not know whether similar conditions exist in other camps or not.

MAY 29 1943

Other phases of the situation I cannot discuss because it would be revealing military information. It is unnecessary for me to write about the social conditions revealed to me by my case work with the Negro soldiers. All that is an old story to you. But the convictions I held when I came to Huachuca were deepened by my experience there, short as it was.

MAY 29 1943

Morale work among the Negro troops is futile and absurd. Actually, these men have nothing to fight for; yet only one man of the hundreds I interviewed at Huachuca expressed his sense of injustice bitterly. He did so with tears in his eyes because he is a young husband and father who was drafted from Mississippi and is afraid that his house will be sold out from under him in his absence. This leads me to my last point, which is that a majority of the draftees at Huachuca seem to be married and many of them are fathers. Evidently it has been the practice of the Southern boards to draft married Negroes and family men before similar classes of whites were called.

ROBERT WORMSER

Santa Barbara, Cal., April 14

Draft Board Induction Decreed For Students Not Already In R.O.T.C

Alabama Colleges Are Designated To Conduct Army Training Courses

ATLANTA—(AP)—Fourth Service Command officers have announced that college students not already enlisted in the Army Reserve Corps will be able to get in only after draft induction and 13 weeks of Army basic training.

The announcement was made Thursday in connection with the disclosure that students already in the reserve corps will be called to active duty within two weeks after completing the first academic term ending after Dec. 31, 1942.

Under separate arrangement, students enrolled in special fields such as officer training, medicine and engineering are exempt from this provision, but will definitely be called.

The enlisted reserve corps in U. S. colleges will be open to soldiers between 18 and 21 who have completed basic training, who are accredited high school graduates and have a score in the Army general classification test of 110 or better.

Fourth Service Command headquarters pointed out that members of the enlisted reserve corps will be in uniform, part of the Army, and will draw $50 a month, regular Army pay. They will be under command of Army officers, receive academic instruction from civilian school authorities but will be subject to regular army discipline.

The Army is not "taking over" schools, but is contracting for use of part of their facilities, the remaining facilities being used for instruction of civilian students.

The rule on medical (including veterinary and dental) and technical engineering students allows them to complete the current school quarter, semester, or other academic period, beginning in January, 1943, before being called to active duty, and detailed to continue their medical studies under contracts with medical schools made by the War Department.

Commissioned medical students in the administrative medical corps may resign their commissions at the beginning of the program, be inducted as privates and be detailed enlisted reserve medical students.

Enlisted reserve corps students taking technical engineering courses will remain in an inactive status until completion of the academic term which begins in 1943.

Advanced R. O. T. C. students, in their second year of advanced training, will remain in school until graduation, providing graduation occurs before June 30, 1943.

The following schools in the Fourth Service Command area were among those selected for engineer training:

University of Alabama, Auburn, Georgia Tech, Mississippi State College.

Colleges selected by the Army for the Army specialized program include Tuskegee Institute.

Colleges selected by the Army for aviation cadet training include:

Alabama — Birmingham-Southern College, University of Alabama and Tuskegee Institute.

Mississippi—Mississippi State College.

Bibb Selective Service Sends 141 Negro Men

Macon, Ga., Telegraph
June 4, 1943

Names of 141 Bibb county Negroes, who reported this week at Fort Benning for induction ineo the Army, were released yesterday bl local boards 1 and 2 of the selective service system. The list includes 92 from board 1 and 49 from board 2.

From Board 1: J. C. Vickers, Hezzie Green, Dennie Holt, J. L. Brisley, Eugene Evans, Willie, McKinney, Fred James Canady, Andrew Lee Burney, Willie Bob Mitchell, Willie Albert Cofer, Eugene Clark, Jack Cicero, Joseph Theodore Stokes, Ernest McGruder, Robert Cecil Powell, Herbert Grier, Green Wilder, Frank Randall, Jessie Mims, James Walk, Oscar Booker, Arthur Cats, Alex Howard, John Wesley Woodson, Rawlings Carswell, Eddie Jackson, Pelmon Harris.

Eddie Hill, William Walker, Gus Penn Jr., Arthur Edge, Cornelius David Henry, T. J. Causey, Henderson Crutchen, Joseph Ciaro Thomas, Wilson Beckham, Eugene Casgile, Leonard Morgan, Robert Lee Morris, Jessie Charlie Williams, Jessie Hatcher, Dorseltia Bryant, Willie Ross, Walter Andrews Jr., M. C. Collier, Albert Jones Rhiner, Joseph White, Robert Basley, Phenix Smith, Alonzo W. Odum, J. C. Johnson, Bonner Dallas Murry, George Thomas, Collie Woodson, Orrin Gabriel Bonner, Ruby Johnson Burney, George Burns Johnson, Willie Tyler, Arnedy Dukes, James Hopkins, Harry Lee Davis, Mads Nelson, Azariah Chambliss, Bill Watters, Willie Walter Thomas, Charlie Lee Hillmon, Joe Frank Bell, Rudolph Spencer, Robert Hicks, Chester Arthur Wheeler, Morris Haygood, Herman Rozier, John Westley Hollingshed.

Willie Peyton Reynolds, Ray James Conoway, Cornelius Williams, Emmett Wesley Williams Jr., William Leonard Adams Jr., James Davis Jr., Brooks Brown, Thomas Adosijah Shipman, Tommy Lee Edwards, George Jackson, Horace Elder, Cleveland White, Lewis Linder, Helrose Brooks, Otis Lee Harrell, James Jack Orr Jr., Lewis Herman Howard, Ananies Meadows, and Early Mays.

From Board 2: T. C. Sims, Robert Goodman, Johnnie Lee Hall, Sing Lee Gladdin, Carroll Everett May, John Henry Turk, Paul Felts, Lee Harper, Cornelius Johnson, Top Ernest Pitts, Alex James, Alfred Dewitt Green, Henry Stubbs Jr., Willie Howard, Will Davis, Robert Lee Sutton, Willis O'Neal, Willie C. Ingram, Quillie Gigger, David Otis Pitts, Willie Howard, Solomon Wilburn, Stephen Lawson Jr., Freddie Renfroe, Leon Lockett, Roy Jackson Scott, Ned Ed Buckles, James Benn, Marion Green Johnson, Richard Williams, Noah Grimes, Robert Irving Jewell, Jonnie Lee Glover, John Barion Standifer, Adolphus Rhines, Wilma Parker, Richard Gerald Lain, Atis Clay Lawson, James David Ford, Willie Leonard Willims.

Sidney Reginald Irving Jr., Ulysses Adkins Jr., Willie Robert Dixon, Sims Green Jr., Freddie Grier, Robert Lee Burden, Roland Basil Colbert, Willie Davis, and Charlie James Rhodes.

Army To Get 125,000 Dads In Alabama

Selective Service Head Says Call For Fathers Will Begin In August

—v—

Montgomery, Ala. — Approximately 125,000 fathers in Alabama face military service, according to unofficial calculations, and their drafting, Adj. Gen. Ben Smith, state director of Selective Service, said Tuesday, will begin in August.

Actual breakdown of classifications by various state draft headquarters is not authorized by Washington.

However, since Alabama's averages in the past have followed closely the national scale, "round figure" comparisons on a population basis of the new draft classifications for Alabama show:

210,000 men in the 18-37 age classification of whom 14 of 16 of the physically fit Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt predicted would be in uniform by the end of the year.

185,000 married men of 18 through 37.

125,000 of these are fathers.

Between 1600 and 2000 reach their 18th birthday monthly and from this group replacements will be drawn.

General Smith said fathers, as defined by new Selective Service regulations, are those whose child was not born later than June of last year.

An estimated 140,000 are now in 3-A in the state, but reclassification will shift many of these.

General Smith declared that contrary to a generally accepted opinion, Negroes are being called up for induction in Alabama on a population ratio; about 35 Negroes to every 65 whites.

He admitted, however, that a greater number of Negroes are rejected for physical disability—principally syphillis—so that actually a greater ration of whites are going into military service.

An opinion has persisted in Alabama that Negroes were being inducted on a national population average basis, rather than on a state basis.

General Smith said the "OVC" had been abolished. This was a former branch of service—Officers Volunteer Corps — where those of 3-A classification could take an officer's course. Should they fail in examinations, they could, upon application, return to civilian life. With induction of 3-A's imminent, the special class was no longer advisable.

Atlanta, Ga., Constitution
July 26, 1943

SELECTEES REJECTED.

LOUISVILLE, Ga., July 25.— Out of 43 Negro selectees sent on the July quota from Jefferson county — which was the entire quota for that race—only 12 of them "stuck," the others being rejected. This is a little more than 25 per cent of the Negroes showing up as fit.

ASK PROBE OF BOARD DRAFTING EDITOR

Pittsburgh Courier

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 5—(ANP) —Col. James N. Keelin, Jr., director of Selective Service of Georgia, has been called upon to investigate Albany (Georgia) Draft Board No. 1, which, it is charged, showed prejudice in the Army induction of Editor A. C. Searles, of the Southwest Georgian, an Albany weekly newspaper. The request for investigation came from C. A. Scott, Southern vice president of the Negro Newspaper Publishers' association and general manager of the Atlanta Daily World.

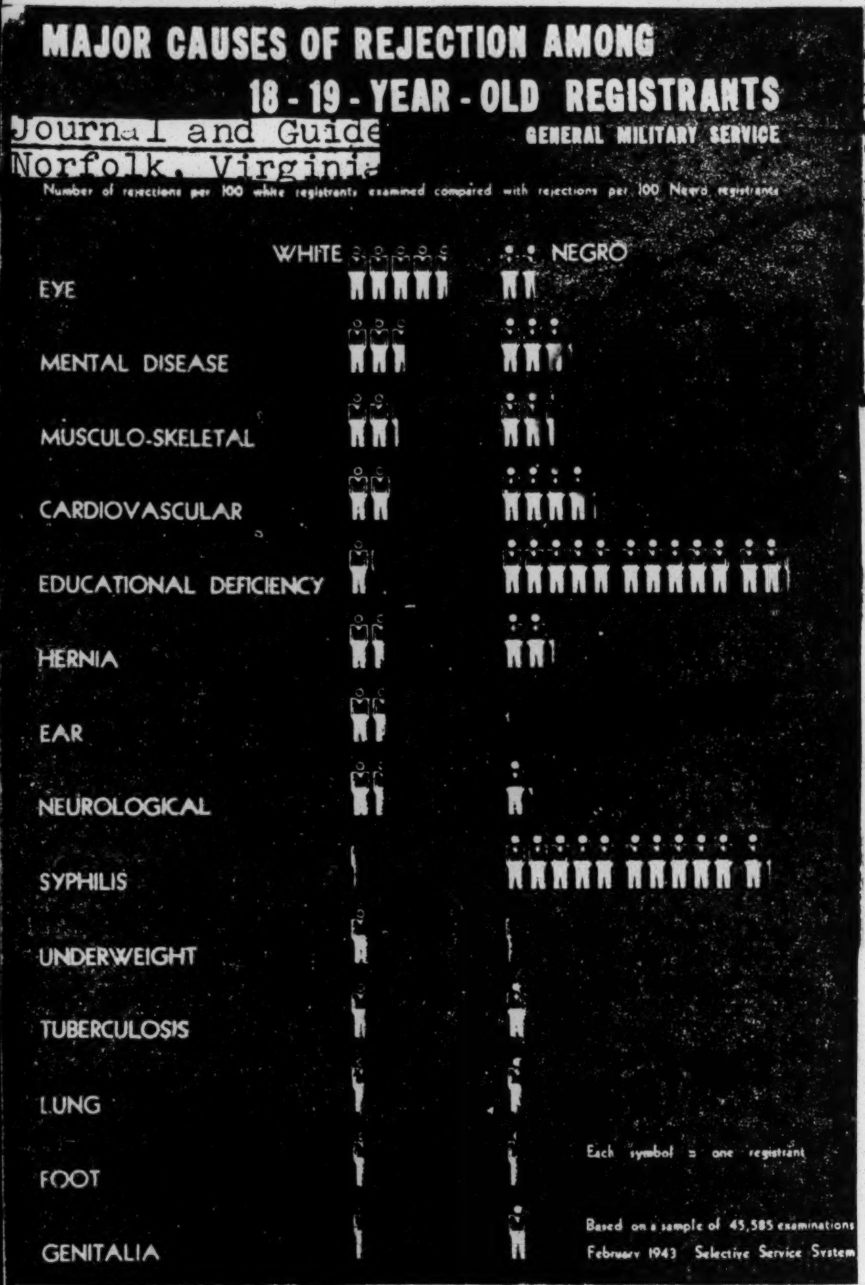
Charleston, S. C., News-Courier
September 15, 1943

158 Negroes Called By Draft Board No. 16

Selective service board No. 16, Mount Pleasant street, has ordered a total of 158 negro men to report for induction into the armed forces. Eighty-three will report tomorrow and the others on Friday

47c-1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia



Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

OCT 30 1943

Miss Orieanna Collins

Mrs. Pauline B. Butler

RECRUITING FOR U. S. CADET NURSE CORPS

Miss Orieanna Collins, R. N., and Mrs. Pauline B. Butler, R. N., who are touring Negro colleges as a part of a Nation-wide endeavor to recruit 65,000 new student nurses this year to meet growing war needs. They explain career opportunities open to the college woman by the new U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps. The Corps is under the supervision of the Division of Nurse Education, U. S. Public Health Service, Federal Security Agency. Both nurses are graduates of Harlem Hospital School of Nursing in New York City and have done advanced work in public health nursing.

—U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps Photo from OWI

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

The Watchtower

By Roy Wilkins

AUG 7 1943

THE WAR and the Selective Service system are revealing one of the greatest crimes committed against Negroes in this country: the failure of the states in the South to give them an education which will make them functioning, useful members of society.

Mr. Wilkins

Negroes have always known about these educational disadvantages, but we have been alone in our complaints except for the small minority of whites which recognized the problem. The great mass of white people was ignorant of the extent of unequal schooling.

Now the draft of men for the armed services has brought the facts out to public view. A sub-committee of the Senate Education and Labor Committee has just made a report revealing that 28 men out of every 1,000 have been rejected by Selective Service because they did not have a fourth grade education. Otherwise these men were qualified for military service.

There were no rejections for illiteracy in Wyoming, but Georgia had the highest rate (including both whites and Negroes) of 136.32 per 1,000. This means that 13½ per cent of the men called in Georgia did not have a fourth grade education.

But the Negro rate in Georgia was much worse, 256.29 per 1,000. This means that more than one-fourth the Negroes called up were rejected.

For us it has the ominous meaning that one-fourth of our men in Georgia between the ages of 18 and 38 do not have as much as a fourth grade education. How can they take their place in society as useful citizens?

A Sad Plight

This means they cannot get good jobs. They cannot earn much money. They cannot buy decent homes. They cannot afford to rear their own children properly. They cannot get a decent education for their own children. And so it goes in a vicious circle.

Southern white peopel, closing their eyes to the records made by Negroes in [illegible] where education is available, [illegible] Negroes cannot learn and therefore must be kept in an inferior status. First they deprive us of a chance to learn and then use the ignorance they have created as a reason for depriving us of citizenship rights.

In passing, also, we must pay our respects to that old lie of southern white people that "white people pay the taxes so Negroes should be glad to get any schooling they can." This is not true. Everyone who works and spends pays taxes. The poor Negro sharecropper may not own any land or any taxable personal property, but he pays taxes in the goods he creates with his labor for the plantation boss. No one except a Main Street economist from Waycross, Ga., or some similar place in Dixie would voice such nonsense, but it only demonstrates once more the bankruptcy in brains and morals (in the broad sense) of a good part of the white South.

A Foolish Fear

The South, of course, fears the Negro. It is afraid to let him get an education, so it says over and over again that he cannot learn—and it proves it by depriving him of even a fourth grade education.

There are a few signs, here and there, that some white southerners are being recruited—by the war—to the cause of better education for the Negro. They are moving in sheer self-defense, for they see groups of Negro men being left at home while their sons are being called to fight, and perhaps to die. It is a great pity that this should be the motivation, but anything that helps the Negro to more education is welcome, and will benefit both whites and Negroes in the long pull ahead.

Memphis, Tenn., Com'rcial Appeal
December 10, 1943

Most Guilty

Having disposed of nine negroes found guilty of refusing to obey Selective Service summons for physical examination, a Federal court jury at Jackson finally got around to the most guilty of the group, a minister who had so ill-advised the members of his flock, and convicted him of violating the Selective Service Act, too.

His offense lay in the bad advice he gave the others and his admonition to them not to have anything to do with war. In fact, he admitted that one of his congregation who had "taken up" with war lost his membership. In the cases of the nine errant members who will spend the next three years in prison instead of doing something helpful for their country, the Government was willing to concede their status as conscientious objectors, but rightfully refused to recognize existence of any right to interpret the law for themselves.

Very wisely, too, it hit at the real source of obstructionism by getting the man who preached it. Of the 10 sinners his was the greatest sin. Having been so zealous a shepherd it is only meet and proper that he should not be separated from his flock and that all should lie down together in the same pen.

There's an obvious moral in this incident for all who think that personal philosophies transcend the law of the land in war or any other time.

The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan

DEC 17 1943

Pvt. Swigler, Drafted Editor, In Public Relations Branch

Fort Benning, Ga., Dec. 17. (ANP).—Pvt. Lewis O. Swingler, managing editor (on leave) of the Memphis World, and one of the few Negroes of the country holding a journalism certificate this week was assigned to the public relations office, Fort Benning, Maj. R. J. Hammergren, director, announced.

Attached to the special service office, Fort Benning's Reception center, Pvt. Swingler is expected to cover the many news sources of the reception center relating to the Negro service men as they get their first taste of military life.

Graduating from Nebraska university in 1931, Swingler was awarded the A. B. degree and journalism certificate. He came to Memphis a month later to take over the editorial department of the then two-week-old Memphis World and over a period of 12 years helped to build this publication into one of the best known Negro papers of the country. The Memphis World now has a circulation [illegible] extends to readers of North Mississippi ,East Arkansas, and scores of out-of1state communities of West Tennessee. A member of the Scott Newspaper Syndicate, it is the only Negro semi-weekly in the midsouth.

Fort Bennings new public relations man also served as editor-in-chief of the Sphinx, official organ of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, for a period of eight years. He was still head of this nationally circulated magazine at the time he reported for service last month.

DEC 17 1943

Omega Psi Phi fraternity, another national Negro Greek letter society, awarded the Omega trophy to Swingler for his outstanding contribution in the newspaper field in 1938. This award is presented annually to non-members of the fraternity for achievements in special fields of useful endeavors.

DEC 17 1943

Pvt. Swingler, in 1939, was invited by LeMoyne college, Memphis, to set up a course in journalism, which he taught for three years thereafter. It is one of the few Negro colleges to introduce journalism into its curriculum. Many of Swingler's students have decided upon journalism as a life vocation.

WORLD VIEW

Defender
Chicago, Ill

By JOHN ROBERT BADGER

OCT 9 1943

Jim Crow In The Armed Forces

SOREST POINT in the domestic situation for Negro-Americans is the way we have to fight in order to fight. This fact was demonstrated at the recent race relations conference at Hunter college in New York City.

Called to formulate a program to prevent repetition of the outbreak which recently raged in Harlem, the conference brought together people of many occupations and social strata. Significantly, the discussion on Jim Crow in the armed forces formed one of the largest panels.

A correct orientation was given the discussion at the outset. Several speakers emphasized the necessity of viewing the whole problem in its international context. That is to say, the tendency to regard the question as the government versus the Negro was disavowed, and the discussion regarded the problem as essentially a problem of United States military efficiency in the war to destroy Hitlerism.

The advantage of this orientation is evident. It places all champions of Jim Crow in the armed services in the category not simply of enemies of the Negro people, but of enemies of the nation as well.

That this orientation was accepted at the beginning of the discussion is a tribute to the clarity with which Negro leadership has learned to cope with the problems of the struggle for first-class citizenship.

Proposals And Comment

OTHER IMPLICATIONS of this orientation will become increasingly important as the war continues, but first it is worthwhile to comment on some of the proposals by the delegates.

One proposal on which agreement seemed immediate was for adoption of the principle of mixed divisions by the Army. This is not a new proposal. But it retains all the force of an innovation, principally in view of the support given it by the experience of Negro troops in the field. Though no unit of Negroes, with exception of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, has seen combat service to date, the experience and training of Negroes in action close to the firing lines and in the auxiliary services is a strong argument for abrogating the principle of segregation.

OCT 9 1943

The responsibility for making this change was shown to rest squarely with the War Department. One speaker cited a recent Oklahoma case in which the authority of the army was sustained in a test with local customs. An officers' club was upheld in its right to serve liquor in a territory which state law decreed should be dry.

The point established by this ruling was deemed applicable not only to the central question of segregation within the armed forces, but also to all situations in which local authorities are permitted to violate the rights of any person in the uniform of the United States. At this point, another proposal demanded that Attorney General Francis Biddle exercise his authority and fulfill his duty by prosecuting all local officials and individuals charged with violating the rights of Negro servicemen.

OCT 9 1943

Other proposals included: (1) a move to censure Navy Secretary Frank Knox for his reiteration of the principle of segregation for the WAVES; (2) a demand that the armed services begin a systematic campaign for education on the problems of race relations; (3) a call for an intensive pressure campaign on the War and Navy Departments immediately, since, according to several informed speakers, the opportunity for achieving some success by pressure is especially favorable now.

Other Implications

THE TIME FACTOR acquires special significance in view of the recent Quebec conference and its decisions regarding the war against Japan. From all available information, the fulfillment of these decisions is under way and a mighty Allied blow at Burma is in the making. Your columnist has also learned that the bulk of Negro troops in this country may be used in the Pacific theater—another factor complicating the situation.

It is a commonplace that issues and forces in the Pacific theater have projected the problems of racial relations to the fore. Japan's main ideolagical weapon is the race-war doctrine, by which she hopes to enlist native peoples into a crusade against the so-called "white" nations.

In view of this Nipponese strategy, it is entirely understandable why United States strategists should wish to use Negro troops for the re-conquest of Asiatic lands and peoples. But if this may deceive the natives, unless it is accompanied by the democratization of the armed forces, it will not deceive the Negro troops. Therein lies a danger which must be faced and removed. Uncle Sam must imperatively look to the morale of his Negro troops, lest they be unable to fulfill their high mission in Asia, and squander their lives in vain.

OCT 9 1943

More than that, our victory in the Pacific will be soon or late, cheap or precious, in accordance with the way we deal with the problem of race.

4

47c-1943

WAR TRAINING BLANKS FOR NEGROES READY

Newport [illegible] Press
March 29, 1943

Application blanks for the qualifying tests to be given Firday for the army specialized training program, for Negro youths, are now available and may be had by application to the dean's office at Virginia Union university, Richmond according to announcement yesterday by Dean Thomas H. Henderson.

Properly filled out, these applications will admit qualified high school seniors or recent graduates to the tests. Each applicant may indicate on his blank whether he prefers the army or the navy, which includes the marine corps and coast guard.

From those who successfully complete the tests candidates for the army specialized training program will be selected to attend colleges under contract to the respective services. Students selected for the army program must undergo further screening during 13 weeks of basic military training before they are finally qualified for college attendance.

Students chosen for the navy program, after selection by the office of naval procurement, will be detailed directly to college. Students who attend college under either of the programs will be under military discipline on active duty in uniform with pay. All expenses, including tuition, food, housing, books and uniforms, will be paid by the army and navy.

C. W. Florence, professor of education, and Dr. Arthur P. Davis professor of English at the university, will serve as supervisors for the qualifying examinations. Since Virginia Union university will be the only place designated for Negro youths, those who are interested must obtain applications at once.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Continue Fight On Draft Quota

NEW YORK — (ANP) — A decision to challenge further the constitutionality of draft quotas based on color by appealing from the refusal of the Brooklyn Federal Court this month to grant a writ of habeas corpus to Winfred Lynn, Negro draftee of New York City, was announced by the American Civil Liberties Union.

The court's denial of the writ was based on the contention that Lynn had suffered no damage because of color in being called as one in a group of 50 Negroes requested of his draft board by the Army last September, rather than in numerical order.

PLAINTIFF'S CONTENTION

In answer, Arthur Garfield Hays, A. C. L. U., council representing Lynn, charges that "since the theory of the government is that to serve is a privilege, it is definitely discriminatory to choose men out of turn when such selection depends in part upon the color of the inductee." Hays cited the provision of the Selective Service act that "in the selection and training of men for service there shall be no discrimination on account of race or color." 2-13-43

47c

Lynn's appeal to the federal court will be the third court contest of his induction on ground of discrimination. Shortly after his board first called him, he sought a writ in the Brooklyn federal court which the judge denied, holding that an induction order cannot be challenged until the draftee has submitted to it.

Following the court's decision, Lynn then offered himself for induction and sought release from the Army on another writ. Denial of this second writ on the ground of "no damage" is the basis for the union's scheduled appeal.

Officer Studies Rejections In Negro Draft

Columbus. Ga., Enquirer-

Lt. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, executive assistant to Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service, national headquarters, Washington, was a visitor to Fort Benning this week on a tour of colored reception and induction centers in the southeast.

Of special interest to Colonel Johnson is the high rate of rejections among colored youths in this section because of failure to meet minimum intelligence standards. September 9, 1943

Studying the situation from all angles, Colonel Johnson is trying to determine the cause of this shortcoming, whether due to lack of opportunity, lack of application or whether the standards set are too high to reach the mental developments of colored youths of a corresponding age to white. Colonel Johnson hopes to find the reason and work toward correction.

His visit to the special training regiments at the reception center were gratifying in that he could see positive results in the training program, he declared.

A native of Washington, D. C., and the son of a minister, Colonel Johnson is a graduate of Howard College, Washington, and practiced law in the District and also in North Carolina before being called to active duty in 1940.

Colonel Johnson served in World War I as a captain in the field artillerq.

Before returning to Washington he will visit Camp Bragg, N. C.; Fort Jackson, S. C.; New Orleans, La.; LaFayette, La., and Camp Shelby ,Miss.

Washington Post
Washington, D. C.

108 Men Report Tomorrow

JUN 18 1943

Thirty-one Washingtonians, inducted into the naval forces June 12, and Arnold M. Deerfield, inducted into the Army June 5, will report for active duty tomorrow.

To the Navy go:

Paul A. Jackson, jr., Arthur F. Winterfeldt, George E. Downey, Frank L. Strachan, Wallace B. Swetland, Richard D. Jackson, Covie S. McPeak, William R. Layner, James R. Mizell, Norman C. Sweeney, jr., Vincent D. Manni, George L. Biggs, James K. Crockett, Bernard C. Goodwin, Kenneth R. Deane, Benjamin L. Steerman, Edward C. Kelly, Nathan G. Weiss, Eldred M. Johnson, George V. Schaeffer, Glenn C. Satterfield, Vernon P. Robey, Henry R. Fisher, William J. Campbell, Frederick Baxter, William Swann, Manuel S. Keyser and Garth L. Divelbiss.

To the Marine Corps go:

Robert L. Beaton, Paul M. Deaner and Francis B. Raffo.

Seventy-six Washington Negroes, inducted into the Army June 5, will also report for active duty tomorrow. They are:

William F. Magruder, Lawrence E. Day, Lindsey C. Murray, Carlisle F. Cherry, Joseph L. Owens, Howard R. Foster, Jesse B. Chase, William A. Barnes, Franklin T. Hill, Louis M. Briscoe, James A. Hawkins, Nathaniel L. Tonkins, Lee Eaddy, Doras L. Hoyle, Porter M. Petaway, Clarence Young, Samuel G. Durham, Gordon L. Davis, Nathaniel Jones, Thornton L. Giles, Edward McCauley, Samuel R. Fortune, Elmer J. Herndon, Alexander Hawkins, Moses A. Brown, James O. Hunter, Bernard L. London, Frank W. Robinson.

Joseph J. Hamilton, Melvin Newman, James Posey, John H. James, Moses Beckham, Luther Harriss, Levi M. Jenkins, Charles J. Stroman, Ernest Hall, jr., Daniel Haggins, Walter J. Segers, Filbert H. Rowley, jr., Orris Toney, Cuthbert M. Patrick, Earl N. Ward, Arthur S. Sharpe, Edward L. Williams, Katto Wright, jr., Earl Simms, Everett C. King, Grover Coleman, John B. Brooks, Henry O. Campbell, Charles G. Warner, Floyd Rogers, George V. Brown, Richard A. Wheaton, Leslie J. Williams.

David G. Smith, Walter E. Williams, Louis J. Street, Harold M. Brooks, Robert L. Collins, Lorenzo H. Powell, Edward P. Medley, James Agurs, Howard Smith, Henry H. Carmon, James Lewis, James L. White, Thomas C. Jenkins, Levi G. Williams, James C. Washington, Allen G. Gibson, Sylvester B. Whiting, Thomas L. Gray, Albert O. Davis and John E. Briscoe.

JUN 18 1943

Washington Post
Washington, D. C.

65 Army, 25 Navy

90 Negroes From D. C. Join Colors

JUL 7 1943

Sixty-five Washington Negroes, inducted into the Army June 24, will report for active duty tomorrow. At the same time, 25 Negro men will report for service with the Navy.

To the Army go:

JUL 7 1943

Samuel L. Rue, Lafayette Ballard, John D. Jones, Lawrence B. Lanier, Joseph D. Sindab, Lorenzo M. Forbes, jr., Andrew S. Goffney, Clifton Hall, James Greene, Charles Coleman, Melvin H. Hatton, Robert F. Twitty, John C. Martin, Wilbert C. Jones, Johnnie A. Hunter, Herman Pearsall, Markley G. Hendricks, Lucius McKoy, Willie E. Cannon, Leroy Harvey, Francis X. Fauntleroy, Albert H. Mills, James Lee.

George Farmer, Joseph Saunders, George W. Caldwell, William H. Hatcher, jr., Thomas M. Murphy, James H. Johnson, Robert H. Roberts, Albert Upshur, Joseph T. Taylor, Duvall A. Tyler, George Precia, Richard D. Kennedy, Edward White, Gene E. George, Lathan W. Stringfellow, Richard W. Poole, James Bailey, William D. Quander, William J. Saunders., Wardell C. Rich, Charles H. Morris.

Claude Tolliver, Nathaniel D. Lewis, Blayton P. Taylor, Harry E. Gough, Rufino R. Garrido, Oliver W. R. Jackson, Carl N. Henson, David Jones, Frederick W. Barnes, Walter Spriggs, Plato T. Jones, Henry A. Harris, Andrew J. Jefferson, Clifton B. Smith, George W. Fuller, jr., James W. Caldwell, William H. B. Budd, John B. Taylor, Paul E. Banks, Wilbert W. Baylor, John D. Kelly.

The following Negroes, inducted into the naval forces July 1, will report for active duty on Thursday, July 8.

JUL 7 1943

To the Navy go:

Leroy R. Gravette, Linwood Brooks, Willie A. Lovett, Charlie F. Watson, Joseph C. Panell, Robert C. Minor, John C. Burnhart, Leslie James, George B. Reid, Byron A. Waters, Eddie L. Washington, Leroy P. Stewart, James O. Ferguson, Demosthenes McDow, Howard Woods, David Rose, Claude L. Hines, Warner G. Walker, Albert A. Jackson, Arthur A. Jackson, Arthur King, jr., Joseph A. Scott.

To the Marine Corps go:

Oliver A. Barnes, John B. Limpkin, Thomas F. Spears, jr., Roger I. Thomas.

Robert V. Herbst also will report to the Army tomorrow.

Washington Post
Washington, D. C.

99 Inductees To Report Here Tomorrow

Ninety-nine inductees from Washington will report for training tomorrow. Thirty-seven will serve in the Navy and Marine Corps while 62 will train for the Army.

JUN 1943

Those reporting for the Navy and Marine Corps are:

Navy (white):

Kenneth J. Bowie, Merritt, C. Cordon, John N. Layman, jr., Bernard C. Tierney, Vaughan A. Morrison, Alfred L. Leftwich, Joseph L. Toland, William H. Lanahan, Clyde E. Arpette, Ricie E. Duggin, Elmer T. Patton, Charles A. DeBaecke, Irving Budman, Charles P. McIntosh, jr., Keith Sutphin, Francis E. Walker, Louis J. Gabriel, William H. McDonald, Joseph P. Graziano, John J. Riordan, Russell O. Leigh, jr., Darrell J. Gass, Edward Rysdyk, Frank A. Constantino, Lawrence R. Matthews, Albert L. Powell, jr., Elmer F. Wolfrey, Louis O. LaJoise, Robert S. Thrift, George L. Booze, John E. Tafer, Arthur G. Anderson, Harrison M. Danielson, Charles F. Rotchford.

Navy (colored):

Wilbur Clifton Wallace.

Marine Corps (White):

Mills E. Bell, Raynard E. White, jr.

Those reporting for Army duty are:

Army (white):

John J. Wilson, jr., Frank E. Winingder, Chester F. Surba, Wilford G. King, Walter L. McCabe, Floyd M. Drury, Carl M. Hudson, Joseph W. Otutt, Richard A. Belfield, jr., Charles N. Chase, William E. Goodrick, James E. Gordon, William L. Arrington, John B. Croft, Wesley W. Jones, Albert A. Cohen, Milford M. McGuire, Thomas E. Hill, Francis X. Gooding, Charles F. Pentz, Joseph S. Keegan, William M. Burdette, jr., Ira H. Hansen, Thomas E. Collins, Solly Fort, Albert D. McCoy, Edward F. Fallon, Alec Cramer, Aubrey E. Shoemaker, John M. Williams, Charles D. Gersten, Josiah S. Pender, Joseph Brettschneider, Alfred J. Hobbs, Claude H. Keyes, Russell A. Biggs, Russell T. Nichols, Harry J. Macon, Edgar L. Baysinger, John Chevalier, jr., George H. Sedgley, Robert C. Sagliano, Francis J. McGrath, John C. Gavin, Richard A. Schlademan, David W. Gregory, John H. Earle, Robert O. Kinsey, Leon Goldberg, Guy R. Williams, Oliver N. Tucker, jr., Weston C. Jackson, Charles W. Miller, Crafton H. Jenkins, Daniel J. King, Felix B. Bustle, Leighton W. McFarland.

JUN 1943

Army (colored):

Isiah B. Williams, George E. Barnes, Earl T. Payne, Judson Malone, Charles H. Jackson.

Washington Post
Washington,

99 Inductees to Report

JUN 1943

Twenty-five Washingtonians, inducted into the naval forces June 14, and Edgar M. Hickman, inducted on the same day into the Army, will report for active duty Monday, the District Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

To the Navy go:

Stanford L. Chilcoat, Francis W. Miller, Anthony A. Tassa, Albert D. Schmutzer, Robert E. Flood, John G. Bing, David H. Hardester, Jesse L. Ward, Martin Slafkes, Harold G. Kreamer, Herman D. Chesivoir, Roy H. Barbee, Richard L. Charles, Estes C. Winebarger, Albert Feldman.

George W. Maske, Gray M. Nottingham, Earl W. Faircloth, George H. Kelley, Howard M. Wipf, Morton Beroza, Lloyd P. Coblentz, Bert R. Day.

To the Marine Corps go:

James G. Birney, Walter N. Jacobus.

Seventy-three District Negroes, inducted into the Army June 7, also will report for active duty Monday. They are:

alter R. Ingram, Ossie A. Freeman, nas J. Johnson, Edward A. Williams, us C. Wilson, Fred B. Smith, Benjamin Dixon, Leroy Chapman, Walter Drew, nry W. Bolden, William Miles, Elmer E. pencer.

Theadore T. Little, David Jefferson, Utah Windon, Walter E. Grigsby, Victor E. Travers, John T. Ballinger, Russell K. Butler, Charles B. Sears, William J. Addison, George W. Brown, Marvin T. Coley, Henry Williams, Highland Warner, William S. Simmons, jr., Charlie T. Fuller.

Mack D. Hamilton, Leonard T. Williams, Clark J. Smith, John A. Mosby, Oscar M. Granger, Albert S. Woods, George L. Ausbrooks, Paul A. Corbin, Howard O. Jackson, muel W. Anderson, Atlee Prince, L

C. Day, Johnny Kendell, Rudolph Payne, Arley A. Sanford.

Ellsworth May, Kermit W. Hawkins, Pernell Amaker, George T. Jordon, James R.

Downes, Robert B. Walker, Raymond A. Harrison, Alpheus A. Carroll, Joseph B. McCormick, James King, Howard A. Payne, William R. Foreman.

Douglass L. Miller, Paul A. Blackwell, Charles L. Timbers, Carrington C. Tolliver, Albert S. Richardson, James W. Brown, Asahel C. Abrams, McCoy M. Gibson, jr., Andrew Jackson, ethel D. Wiley, jr., John T. Hunter, Harold H. Sims, Joseph N. Swann, George B. Brooks.

Joseph M. Black, Arthur L. Dunican, Robert Jones, Leonard A. Scott, Oliver W. Dandridge.

Retaliation Against The Pen

JUN 23 1943

A. C. Searles, editor and publisher of The Southwest Georgian, is in the army now. Editor Searles feels very strongly that the exposure by his newspaper of the midnight abduction and lynching in January of Robert (Bobby) Hall at Newton, Georgia, had much to do with his induction.

Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

47c

One thing is true, the circumstances surrounding his case, the speed with which he was assigned reclassification following the exposure, together with the complete ignoring of an Occupational Deferment status to which he undoubtedly was entitled, lend strength to his contentions.

Now is is possible the lynching report published in the Southwest Georgian had no bearing on the fact that Editor Searles is now in the Army. But the facts at hand indicate otherwise. If this story had no influence on the editor's induction, why did Draft Board Number One at Albany on February 8, exactly two days after the appearance of the lynching story, notify Searles to report for a physical examination? And Searles charges that he was never permitted to appear before the Local Board nor send his case to the Appeal Board.

Editor Searles' case emphasizes more perhaps than any previous occurrence of the necessity of Negroes being on the Local Draft Boards. We have contended in these columns several times previously that as a protection against the misuse of the draft power we must have representation on the boards. In other sections and even two other southern states we have a voice in the operation of the Selective Service law.

JUN 23 1943

We believe that his draft board might have with profit, measured the worth and merit of such a useful man on the homefront over against what he might mean on the battle front.

He is needed to help build and strengthen morale on the home front with his newspaper. Moreover, the Negro Newspaper Publishers, meeting last week in Louisville, Ky., not only went on record as opposing the manner and method of discrimination in Searles' case but pledged in addition to conduct an investigation with recommendations to the War Department. We believe there is strong merit in Searles' contentions.

Draftee Won't Enter J.C. Line

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

47c

BROOKLYN, N.Y.—Determination not to enter a jim-crow line at the army induction center here was expressed last week in a letter to his draft board by Alfred A. Duckett, feature writer and special correspondent for the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers.

JUN 12 1943

Duckett, whose induction was scheduled for June 7, referred to the reported practice of placing colored draftees in separate lines from the whites and making them wait until all the latter were disposed of.

"I am willing to fight and give my life for the preservation of the democratic ideals on which this nation was founded," he told the chairman of Draft Board No. 15

Demands Fruits of Democracy

"I am unwilling to subject myself to a system of segregation and discrimination at the very beginning of my army career and in a city which is supposed to observe the standards of democratic rights."

Commenting on the likelihood of his being sent to a southern camp where racial abuses are common, Duckett continued:

JUN 12 1943

"I intend then and now to get every iota of the democratic rights that it is possible for me to get. I do not propose to offer my life in defense of democracy abroad and not realize its fruits at home.

"If it is treason to defend, by word and deed, the things we are supposed to be defending with our lives, and then make the most of it."

Negro Rejectments

Winnsboro, S. C. News & Herald

47c

Senator Maybank is right, the high rejection of Negroes eligible for military service is a serious matter, much more serious than appears on the surface. Illiteracy is the main cause.

The senator is quoted as saying that the rejections are about 50 per cent of the eligibles among the Negroes. This is frightful. It means that if 50 per cent of the Negro eligibles are unfit for any form of military service they are largely unfit for most civil life. This means a dead load of paralyzed limbs for the body politic to carry. It is a fearful load. And no State can hope to be happy and prosperous and carry such a load. The low value, and inefficiency of ignorant labor, and the cost of supervision are great.

August 5, 1943

Not only this but there is injustice in taking married white men to fill the places made vacant by these ignorant Negroes. And this must be done to make up the State's quota.

We believe Senator Maybank's protest to Major General Hershey, director of Selective Service, is justified. We can but believe that the military authorities have been too exacting. Some place, it seems, could be found for many of these rejections. They, when so used, would save the lives of many married white men, and themselves would be fitted for better lives of usefulness when the war is over.

Who is responsible for such a condition? The Society for the Advancement of Colored People says that it is because the State has not supplied the educational facilities for these Negroes. There is some weight to this. It has been a serious omission on the part of the State, and it seems, if married white men are to supply the vacancies, right dearly is the State to pay for it. It is an omission that should be corrected, and full justice should be done the Negro race in education.

But that is not the whole trouble. There is need for self examination on the part of the Negro race itself. If there had been proper ambition many of the illiterates could have secured education despite the handicaps. Self-help must be instilled before any race or people may hope to find a place in the sun.

As the charming Madam Chiang, supported by Holy Writ, said to President Roosevelt, "God helps those who help themselves."

There are serious lessons for both whites and Negroes to learn from this condition.

There are enough educated Negroes in South Carolina to drive illiteracy out of their race by determined, cooperative effort. Those eligible Negroes for military draft, with intensive training, may be moved out of the illiterate class, by members of their own race, if there is determined effort to do so. It is up to the educated Negroes to prove their worth.

There is no better place to start than in Fairfield. Let the educated Negroes of Fairfield set an example to the world. Le them get to work and drive out illiteracy.

Race pride should prompt such action. And such action will warrant race pride.

• EDITORIAL COMMENT

Sumter, S. C. Daily Item
September 15, 1943

A BAD SHOWING

(Greenwood Index-Journal)

47c

Forty-one per cent of all Negroes in South Carolina examined for induction into the armed forces have been rejected.

Thirty-one per cent of all whites in South Carolina examined for induction into the armed forces have been rejected.

Both percentages are the highest in the United States, a report from Washington says.

If there is anything in that showing to shout about we fail to get it.

Negro Fathers Will Leave This Month

Talladega, Ala., Mountain Home
October [illegible] 1943

47c

A group of Negro pre-Pearl Harbor fathers will leave from Talladega the later part of the month, Otis R. Burton, head of the local draft board, said Wednesday.

He said it was necessary to call the Negroes because of the large Negro quota set for October.

White fathers probably will be included in the November call, Mr. Burton said.

Clayton, Ala., Record
October 15, 1943

COLORED SELECTEES LEAVE FOR EXAMINATION AT FT. BENNING

Wednesday, October 13, a number of selectees left Clayton for Ft. Benning, Ga., for examination. One, who had already been examined, was sent for induction.

Those leaving for examination were:

William Dace, Clayton.
James Lee Lynn, Route 2 Louisville.
C. L. McInnis, Route 2, Louisville.
Bennie Walter Gordon, Clayton.
Warren Douglas Daniels, Rt 1, Comer.
Laimon Jackson, Route 2 Clayton.
Jaree Pugh, Route 3, Louisville.
Eddie Martin, Clayton.
Walter Nobles, Louisville.

For Induction into Army:
Braxton B. Anderson, Mt Andrew.

47c-1943

Argus

St. Louis. Missouri

About 400,000 Negroes Have Been Inducted Into Service; 38.4 of La. Selectees

JAN 1 - 1943

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 —Negroes are being inducted into the Army through Selective Service in the same proportion that Negro registrants bear to total registration, and Negro soldiers are now on duty in most of the overseas theatres where other American troops are stationed, the Office War Information announced today.

JAN 1 - 1943

The OWI cited official records of the Bureau of Selective Service, War Manpower Commision, which reveal the following facts about Negroes in the armed services.

(1) Although Negroes constituted 9.8 percent of the total population in the last census, Negro selectees and volunteers constituted 10.1 percent of all persons inducted into the Army through Selective Service by October 31, 1942 which would mean about 400,000.

(2) In 9 out of 14 southern and border states, the percentage of Negroes inducted into the Army through Selective Service exceeded the percentage of Negroes registered in those states.

(3) During the 1940-41 period Negroes constituted 16.1 percent of the total number of volunteers entering the Army through the Selective Service System.

OWI pointed out that there are Negro units in Great Britian, Ireland, North and West Africa (including Liberia), Australia, New Guinea, Hawaii, Alaska and the West Indies.

Rumors that Negroes were not being inducted into the Army in comparable percentages have been circulated in various sections of the country, OWI declared.

Bureau of Selective Service statistic reveal that in southern states on Oct. 31, 1942, Negroes constituted 38.4 of all Selective Service inductions in Louiasana; 34.5 percent of all similar inductions in Florida, 34, percent in Alabama, 27.8 percent in North Carolina, 27.2 percent in Virginia 9.4 percent in Texas, 19.1 in Maryland, 9.1 percent in Kentucky ad 7.2 percent in West Virginia. In each of these states the percentage of Negroes inducted exceeded the percentage of Negroes registered under Selective Service.

JAN 1 - 1943

In four states the percentage of Negro inductions either equalled the percentage of Negro registrations or closely approximated the proportion. Negroes constituted 44.2 percent of all Selective Service inductions in Mississippi, 34.0 percent of all similar inductions in South Carolina, 32.5 percent in Georgia, 21.3 percent in Arkansas, and 18.5 percent in Tennessee.

47c

Daily World

Atlanta. Ga.

Negroes In Armed ForcesEstimated At 530,000

Great Drain On Manpower Is Being Felt First Time By Race

By AL WHITE

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—The terrific drain on the manpower of the nation necessary to supply the needs of the three great movements now afoot will soon bring about changes in the manner of handling the situation. Everyone knows it is absolutely mandatory that the military and armed forces are supplied with manpower; they know it is equally obligatory to staff factories to keep the armed forces rolling; they know it is a positive fact that the great agricultural needs for manpower must also be met. Therefore the serious problem. With the manpower resources dwindling, it is well to consider the situation as far as the Negro is concerned.

47c

Looking back Lt. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, aide to Brig. Gen. Lewis Hersey in the selective service system, recently stated that the percentage of Negroes in the armed forces had reached the objective of 10.6 per cent. Taking figures from a press conference held by Sec. of War Stimson, in which it was said there were now 5,600,000 men in the armed forces, this gives the Negro approximately 530,000 men in service.

QUOTAS MAY RULE

JAN 24 1943

Under the new plans for manpower which eliminated voluntary enlistments from the navy and marine corps, placing their needs under the Manpower commission it is highly probable that the same rules will be applied to these two branches of the service, that is the percentage quota. Through such an arrangement, the two branches would profit greatly. The type of recruit they would get would be far above those they have accepted from the Negro race in the past.

No definite plan has been worked out on this score as yet but it is giving the naval and marine authorities plenty to think about.

In the industrial field, most of the men are being replaced in certain types of factory work by women. In some plants, women do all but the most laborious work. As far as the Negro is concerned the males have almost reached the saturation point as far as being absorbed in industry is concerned. It is with the female Negro workers that difficulties, are now arising.

JAN 24 1943

GAIN IN EMPLOYMENT

Negroes have made great gains in employment in certain industries an outstanding example of which is the aviation field. In 1940, there were only 4,940 persons engaged in this work in the entire United States with no Negroes employed at all, except in menial posts. By 1941, the figure had grown to 360,000, with a mere 250 Negroes working at skilled and semi-skilled tasks. In September, 1942, an estimated 40,000 Negroes were employed in the field, a teriffic increase over 1940. They are said to now represent .3 percent of the total employment in the aircraft industry.

It is pointed out that the greatest employment of Negroes in aircraft industries is on the west coast with Lockheed, Consolidated, Douglas, North American and Vultee showing the way.

Over in the east, where one of the great industrial centers lies, some 1,000 Negroes are employed in aircraft factories, with one employer alone using this number and crying for 600 additional. His chances for getting them apparently are very slender, it is reported.

SOUTH STILL ADAMANT

Negroes have made consistent gain in the ship-building industry with the west coast and the busy yards of the east giving employment to thousands of colored workers. In the south, despite claims that there would be 10,000 jobs opened for Negroes following the Birmingham hearings, little has been accomplished except in the non-defense plants, the heavy industries and in one or two shipsyards. In this section there is little importance attached to the training of Negroes for work in defense plants. In some instances, Negroes have been upgraded and given additional pay in shipyards which are under union domination.

In the midwest, especially in Detroit area, there may be some 2,000 or 3,000 Negroes males unemployed. This is due to their own failure to try to get work. Most of the trouble in Detroit is due to the failure of manufacturers to hire Negro women. Thousands of white women are being hired, but Negroes are being given the go-by. This has led to the ordering of a public hearing by FEPC in this section, with certain companies being cited to the FEPC for failing to adhere to President Roosevelt's non-discriminatory order.

In New England, the work shortage has been partially solved by the sudden influx of Negroes from Harlem, who week-end at home after a full week in the defense plants. It is only in the smaller towns, it is reported, that difficuly occurs and this is chiefly in the employment of women.

Tribune

Philadelphia Pa.

Inducting More Negroes Than Whites For Combat

JAN 2 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Reports that Negroes were not being inducted in a comparable percentage to whites were nullified Friday when the Office of War Information released figures proving that they are entering the Army in the same proportion which Negro draft registrants bear to total registration.

47

Using official records, the OWI disclosed these facts:

JAN 2 1943

Although Negroes constitute 9.8 per cent of the population, they have furnished 10.1 per cent of all persons inducted up to October 31. The figure includes volunteers and selectees.

Negroes made up 16.1 per cent of the total number of volunteers entering the Army through Selective Service during 1940-41.

The percentage of Negroes inducted in nine of the 14 Southern and border states exceeded the percentage registered.

In most of the overseas war areas where other American troops are stationed, Negro soldiers are on active duty.

---

ournal and Guide

orfolk, Virginia

Registrant Hits Snag In Claim Of Selective Service Jim Crow

JAN 16 1943

NEW YORK, N. Y.—In a second attempt to test the legality of segregation in the United States Army, Wilfred Lynn, Jamaica, L. I., gardner, struck a snag when his motion for a habeas corpus writ was dismissed.

47c

Following a hearing in Brooklyn Federal Court last Wednesday during which Colonel Arthur V. McDermott, New York City Selective Service director, described the "quota system" used for inducting selectees, Judge Marcus B. Campbell dismissed Lynn's request for a writ.

JAN 16 1943

Recently imprisoned because of his refusal to respond to a draft call into a segregrated Army unit, Lynn was told by Federal Judge Byers that he could not legally contest the Army's induction procedure until after he had submitted to induction.

BROTHER DEFENDS

Acting through his attorneys. Conrad Lynn, his brother, and Arthur Garfield Hays of the American Civil Liberties Union, Lynn submitted to induction and immediately sought to take the case back into court, renewing his contention that the Selective Service "quota system" not only violates Selective Service law which provides for no discrimination, but is further in violation of the Constitutional rights of Americans.

Judge Campbell ruled however that it had not been shown that Lynn had been inducted either earlier or later than he would have been had there been no quota system. The American Civil Liberties Union announced that the ruling will be appealed.

Constitution
Atlanta, Georgia

Negro Draftees Return Because of Diseases

FEB 5 1943

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

SPARTA, Ga., Feb. 4.—A large percentage of the Negro draftees being sent from here to Fort Benning for induction into the Army are being returned because of diseases. Some of them are given treatment at the Hancock Health Clinic when they return from the fort and a few months later are included again in the list. Some of them have been inducted after a second or third trip but many more of the Negroes are returned than the white draftees who are sent to Fort McPherson.

Only enforced treatment will remedy the situation, it is said.

FEB 5 1943

Camden S. C. Chronicle
January 22, 1943

COLORED SELECTEES ORDERED REPORT AT FORT JACKSON

The following list of colored selective service men were ordered to report to Fort Jackson on January 12:

Arthur Williams James Chestnut, Minion Duren, Jacob Cornelius Laney, Roosevelt Gripper, Johnnie Brevard, Jr., Willie Moses Gripper, Willie James Kershaw, Jimmie Lee Murphy, John Murphy, Johnnie Adams Butler, Heyward Lee, Gilbert Taylor, John Miller, Grover Alexander, John Wesley Knox, James Shropshire, Charlie Shelley Huckabee, James Jimmie Deas, Robert Thomas Murphy, John Moses Jackson, Frank Brevard, George Nelson, James Belton, David Lee Jackson, Willie Davis, Ira Evans Williams, Robert Harriott, Lewis Murphy, George Alexander, Joseph Jackson, Henry Johnson, Eddie Lee Jackson, Willie Johnson Drakeford.

47C

Also, Amon Reynolds Collins, Jr., Theodore James Whitaker, Sam Furman, James Joe, Eugene Anderson, Dick Thomas Holiday, James Carter, Ezell Royal. Herbert McLaughlin Duren, Mitchell Woods, Dan Williams, James Pogue. Robert Kershaw, Leroy Bobbie Nelson, Isaac Leonard Boyd, John Tucker, Jr., George Washington Rainey, Jr., Frank Fortune, Willie J. Truesdale, James Edward Tucker, James Enoch Clyburn, Vanie Drakeford, Lester Belton, Eddie Robinson, Theodore George Thomas, Minford Adamson, Oliver Williams, Henry James, Steve Harriott, Elmore Salmon, Stephen Bradford, Moses Drakeford.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Curiosity Costly for Draft Dodger

JAN 12 1943

NEW YORK.—The curiosity of Leon Collins caused him to be among seventy-one draft violators arrested by FBI agents here last week.

Collins sat on the running board of the agents' car and watched while they were seizing a suspect in Harlem. After the agents returned with a man named Mitchell Hunter they also arrested Collins when he was unable to produce a classification card.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Charge Prejudice To Alabama Draft Board

JAN 21 1943

Publisher Lays Racial Bias To Dothan Draft Board In Taking Of Managing Editor; To Seek Release

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(SNS)—

Emory O. Jackson, managing editor of the Birmingham World has been inducted into the Army over the protest of C. A. Scott, Administrator of the Estate of W. A. Scott which owns and publishes the paper. The Estate also owns and publishes the Atlanta Daily World and the Memphis World.

Jackson, who has been connected with the editorial department for several years and since July, 1941 has performed the duties of managing editor, was ordered for induction January 11th, and after a seven-day furlough returned to the Army Monday, January 18th.

47C

In commenting on Jackson's induction, C. A. Scott, who is also general manager of the Scott papers, said, "This is a clear case where a man was inducted into the Army because of racial prejudice. Jackson feels this way about it and so do I."

JAN 21 1943

After conferring with Negro leaders in Birmingham, Publisher Scott said he would seek Jackson's release from the Army because he actually feels Jackson could do more to win the war for democracy and freedom in civilian life as editor than he could in the Army.

JAN 21 1943

Last October the National Headquarters of Selective Service issued a bulletin in which managing editors and many other newspaper employes were classed as civilians holding jobs essential to the war effort and therefore should be considered for occupational deferment. It is on this ground that Jackson's release will be sought.

TRANSFER REFUSED

JAN 21 1943

Jackson was ordered for induction December 2, 1942, originally by Draft Board Number One at Dothan, Ala., where he was teaching in 1940 at the time of the first registration. When he returned to Birmingham, his home, to begin full time employment with the World as editor, Jackson requested the transfer of his registration to a Birmingham board but the Dothan board refused the request.

On December the first, the Dothan board having refused to grant the publisher of the World a deferment for him, Jackson requested the board to transfer his induction to a Birmingham board. The transfer of INDUCTION was granted whereas a transfer of registration had been refused.

When teaching in Dothan, Jackson was very active in civic and educational movements.

Jackson and Scott visited the State Headquarters of Selective Service on December the 2nd at Montgomery in an effort to get a deferment for Jackson because of his importance to the welfare of the Birmingham World, the state's oldest and only semi-weekly which is widely read.

JAN 21 1943

After the conference with Lt. Col. C. O. Jarrell, Assistant State Director of Selective Service, the two newspapermen left Montgomery feeling favorable consideration would be given their case.

LETTER TO COL. JARRELL

In a letter to Col. Jarrell dated December 4, Publisher Scott wrote in part:

"As previously stated the induction of Jackson will make it just about necessary for the suspension of the paper because we do not have in mind a man who could carry on the work. Even in normal times there is a shortage of trained newspaper men and women in our race. So under the war condition a competent editor is hardly to be found.

47C

"Also as I stated the policy of the paper is definitely an aid to our war efforts. We have received communications from a number of government agencies acknowledging the support we have given. We have received letters of appreciation from the Navy, Marine Corps, U. S. Employment Service, the Treasury Department, War Production, Department, War Production Board, Selective Service in Washington Department of Agriculture and several other government agencies."

JARRELL REPLIES

In a communication dated December 11, Col. Jarrell replied: "Further investigation of this case has revealed that the registrant was employed in Birmingham as distribution agent for your newspaper and that paper actually was printed in Atlanta. In view of these facts, and further consideration of the fact that the registrant was delinquent, after being ordered to report for induction, the Local Board was instructed to proceed with his induction."

In answer to Col. Jarrell's letter of December 11th, C. A. Scott wrote:

JAN 21 1943

"I must say that your letter dated December 11 in reference to our request for deferment of E. O. Jackson, Managing Editor of the Birmingham World, is both surprising and disappointing.

"The following statement in your letter 'Further investigation of this case has revealed that the registrant was employed in Birmingham as distribution agent for your newspaper and that the paper actually was printed in Atlanta' lends us to believe tha you do not have a correct understanding of Jackson's status in our organization. The Birmingham World is owned by the Estate of W. A. Scott but the paper is edited and published in Birmingham. Jackson's position is not a distributor for the paper but managing editor. It is our understanding that Selective Service Headquarters in Washington have ruled that newspaper managing editors are considered as persons holding essential civilian jobs. Then, of course, on this basis, we contend that Jackson is entitled to a deferment. We hope you will grant this.

"However, if you do not plan to give further and favorable consideration to Jackson's deferment, please advise us by telegram collect the next step we can make in the matter of an appeal."

Contrary to what Col. Jarrell stated in his letter of December 11, Jackson was not delinquent in reporting for induction because on December 1 the Dothan Board has granted him a transfer of induction to a Birmingham Board which was to set another date for his induction.

Dated December 15, C. A. Scott received collect the following telegram:

JAN 2

"Replying to your letter December 14, this Headquarters will take no further action in the case of E. O. Jackson under jurisdiction Local Board One, Houston County. No appeal is allowable. Registrant must follow instructions of Local Board for induction."

Signed: Smith, Alabama State Director Selective Service"

Feeling that he did have the right to appeal the case to higher authority because of its merits C. A. Scott wrote Lt. Col. Campbell, C. Johnson, Assistant Director of National Selective Service Headquarters at Washington. D. C. but this office finally decided not to intervene and grant Jackson a deferment.

In a case similar to Jackson's last year the National Headquarters overruled a Texas Board and the Texas State Director of Selective Service in granting a six months deferment to James Andrews, editor of a Texas weekly on the grounds that "Negro Journalists are needed to keep up Negro morale in war time." But there was a repercussion from the ruling because one of the members of the Local Board resigned in protest.

Five former employes of the Atlanta Daily World are now serving in the armed forces.

47c-1943

Negroes in the Army

New Republic New York, N. Y.

THE SEGREGATION of colored troops in our armed forces is producing [illegible]onical situations in the mechanics of the draft. The Navy, Air Corps, Marines and variously specialized branches of our military establishment can only use a limited number of Negroes. That has the inevitable effect of slowing up the rate at which the latter are inducted, and, conversely, of accelerating the rate at which white selectees are being called up. This is markedly evident in the South.

The other day, Rep. Charles E. McKenzie, of Louisiana, spoke up in deep anguish against this state of affairs. The local boards, he pointed out, can do nothing about the situation. Their hands are tied. The fault is in Washington, which is deliberately keeping Negroes out of the draft; while white men, pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, mind you, are compelled to go. "Has it come to pass," Mr. McKenzie asks, "that the color of a man's skin is the basis for his being deferred even if he is single and has no dependents?" To buttress his argument, he quoted a remarkable editorial from The Morehouse Enterprise, Bastrop, Louisiana.

It would seem that the first batch of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers has left Morehouse parish; and that there are 267 colored men in 1-A who are kept at home because there has been no "colored call." It just isn't fair. The editorial goes on to say with charming ingenuousness: "Simply because the government doesn't seem to want Negroes in the armed service is no excuse. It is race discrimination and the colored men in Morehouse Parish feel that it is putting them in an inferior classification."

Representative McKenzie has not yet perfected any plan which makes it possible for his constituents to eat their cake and have it too. He is certain, however, that "such discrimination is detrimental to the morale of the nation." We may not be talking about the same thing, but you aren't kidding, Mr. McKenzie!

Navy Station Discrimination Upheld By Knox

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Knox [illegible]

Difference In

Chevron Ratings

NEW YORK CITY — (SNS) — In a letter to the NAACP, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox in effect approves of jim crow within the limits of naval stations.

On November 19 the NAACP wrote Knox reporting complaints from the Norfolk, Va. Naval Air Station that buses running within the station for the convenience of Navy personnel compelled Negroes to sit in the rear and whites in the front. With respect to this complaint Knox has replied under date of December 17:

UPHOLDS CUSTOM

"With regard to the matter of alleged segregation on buses at the Naval Air Station, Norfolk, the Navy Department is making every effort to handle matters pertaining to enlisted personnel so that there will be a minimum of embarrassment to [illegible] Negro. In all cases, however, the procedure which will best further the interests of the Navy is of primary importance, and the administration of personnel will always be handled with this primary objective in mind."

Secretary Knox also admitted that he had received several complaints on the ins[illegible] for chief cooks and stewards, [illegible] either Negro or Filipino. This insignia, which heretofore has been the same as other chief petty officers in the Navy, has been changed so that men in these ratings are wearing a small "c" on sleeve[illegible] short straight bars underneath.

The regular chief petty officers of the Navy have three chevrons and an eagle. Secretary Knox declares: "Obviously the purpose has not been to differentiate between white and Negro Chief Petty Officers as there are many Negro Chief Petty Officers in various ratings other than Chief Cooks and Chief Stewards, all of whom wear the Chief Petty Officer uniform."

NO COMMISSIONS

Secretary Knox, in addition, makes the following astonishing statement: "In addition, Negroes are eligible for advancement in any of the many ratings in the Navy and all those who reach [illegible] status of Chief Petty Officer will wear the uniform of their rating."

It is well known that Negroes have been barred from commissions in the Navy.

Negro Rejects 4 Times That Of White Men

Journal & Guide

Selective Service Statistics Reveal Sharp Disparity

Norfolk. Va.

(See Editorial, Page 8)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The rate of rejection of registrants for service in the armed forces under the Selective Service System is four times as great among colored registrants as it is among white registrants, according to the second report of Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service.

Statistics on the cause of rejection at local board and induction stations show that 2,170 white registrants were rejected in the months of April, May and June, 1942. The rate of rejection was 27.8 per 1,000 for white registrants.

The rate of rejection was 112 per thousand for colored registrants. The combined rate of rejection per 1,000 registrants was 38.2

MANY ILLITERATES

In the same period, a total of 1,228 colored registrants were rejected for illiteracy.

There were 245,038 registrants in the two registrations prior to the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, who made their mark on their registration cards because they could not write their names. A little more than 125,000 were white and 220,052 were colored.

375,059 INDUCTED

"This disparity," says General Hershey in his report, "is greater when we remember there are 10 times as many white persons as Negroes in the United States."

In the period from November, 1940, to December, 1942, inclusive, there [illegible] total of 476,728 colored registrants called for military duty. Of that number 375,059 were inducted.

They constituted a part of the manpower pool of 3,015,550 colored men who represent 10.4 per cent of the 29,029,125 registrants between the ages of 18 and 45.

Globe & Independent

Nashville, Tenn.

DADDY OF 12, NOW IN ARMY, DRAWS CHECK FOR $328

Mississippian Had Been Getting Only $12 A Week "Before The Duration"

JACKSON, Miss., [illegible]—(ANP)—P[illegible] Booker's salary sudden[illegible] zoomed from $12 a week to $328 a month, when the U. S. government considered the fact that its recent inductee into the army at Camp Shelby is the father of 12 children.

Booker, a porter, his wife and 12 children all reside together. Figuring that his wife will receive $50 a month, the first child $30, and each remaining child $20, Booker's check reached the grand total of $328, a monthly stipulation. The children range in age from 14 to two months, the first three being by a previous wife.

Named Treasury Department Aide

Argus

St. Louis, Missouri

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 10 —The Treasurer Department announces the appointment of J. Finley Wilson, noted fraternal leader, as a consultant to the Inter-racial Section of the national organization [illegible] of the War Finance Staff. Mr. Wilson will help promote the Third [illegible] War Loan drive, which opens September 9, among Negro fraternal groups. He has already begun his new duties.

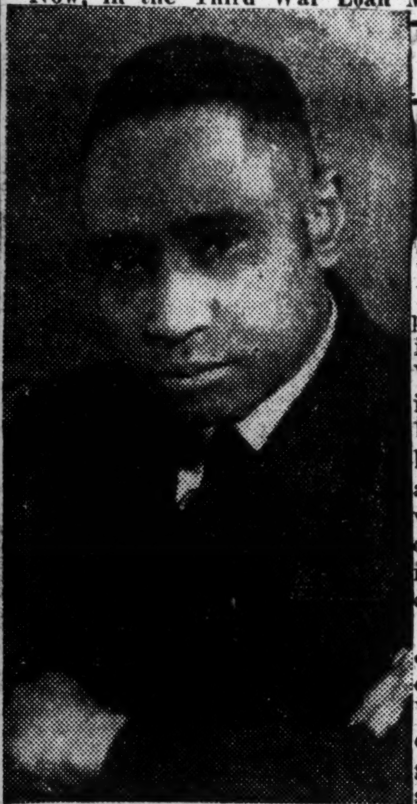
Mr. Wilson has been Grand Exalted Ruler of the Improved Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of the World for more than 21 years. This organization has local lodges in almost every city and town in the United States as well as affiliated lodges in [illegible], Panama, the British West Indies and in several South American countries. It has the largest membership of any Negro organization in the world. He was born in Nashville, Tenn., in 1881, the son of a minister.

"THE SPIRIT OF BEALE STREET"

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Here is the bomber that Negro citizens of Memphis, Tenn., paid for in War Bonds of the Second War Loan last Spring, and named after their famous street "where the blues began". It is a four-motored Consolidated Liberator, and $303,000 was raised for it.

Now, in the Third War Loan Memphis Negroes have set a goal of over two million dollars to have a Flying Fortress dedicated to the street "which is representative of the civic life of the Memphis Negro", according to Chairman George W. Lee, of the Negro Division of the Memphis War Finance Committee.



Lt. Geo. W. Lee, Memphis, Tenn., author, business man, and civic leader, who, as National Chairman of the Elks War Bond Committee, has set the Fraternity's Third War Loan goal at $5,000,000; and reports steady progress through his six regional chairmen.

The Lynn Case — A Civil Liberties Test of a Jim Crow Army

New Leader
N. Y.

From DWIGHT MACDONALD

To the Editor:

So far there has been very little publicity given to an extremely important civil liberties case: the Winfred Lynn case. Since the case is expected to come up before the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here in New York on December 8, and since it squarely raises the whole issue of the Jimcrow policies of the Army, your readers may be interested in a brief account.

The Lynn Case is a habeas corpus action, brought by a Negro draftee now in training on the West Coast. Lynn is asking to be discharged from the Army on the grounds that he was selected in a segregated Jimrow quota (all-Negro) and that this method of selection is specifically forbidden by the Draft Act of 1940, Section 4a, of which states that "in the selection and training of men under this Act . . . there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race or color."

Winfred Lynn feels so strongly about Army Jimcrow that when he was originally drafted, he wrote a letter to his draft board—he was a Long Island landscape gardener in civil life—offering to serve in a democratically organized army but refusing to enter the present Jimcrow army.

After a period in jail, Lynn was finally induced to submit to induction in order to make a test case, the courts refusing even to hear the case unless he first obeyed the law. All of us who love justice are fortunate that Winfred Lynn is willing to make a stand for his convictions.

Arthur Garfield Hays, acting for the American Civil Liberties Union, has argued Lynn's case in a lower court already and will again appear before the Circuit Court of Appeals. I am told that this is the court on which Jerome Frank and Learned Hand sit, and so we may expect a relatively liberal attitude on the part of the bench. It seems highly unlikely, however, putting it mildly, that the court will decide for Lynn.

Hays and the A.C.L.U. are prepared to carry the case directly to the Supreme Court. It will raise not only the great issue of the Army's discriminatory treatment of colored draftees—an issue, incidentally, which no other case in this war has raised—but also the question of anti-Negro discrimination practiced not by some Southern state but by an agency of the Federal Government itself.

A National Citizens Committee for Winfred Lynn has been formed to raise funds for the case and to give it some publicity. Among its sponsors are Alex Rose, Broadus Mitchell, John Haynes Holmes, A. Philip Randolph, George Schuyler, Willard Townsend, and Algernon Black. It has just issued a leaflet describing the case in detail, which may be obtained by writing the committee at 1 West 125th St., New York 27, N. Y.

People's Voice
New York, N. Y.

Remove Jimcrow Signs At West Point Hospital

WEST POINT, N. Y. — At West Point Military Camp, New York, segregation signs appeared on hospital and lavatory doors. The signs read: "Colorod Enlisted Men," and "White Enlisted Men."

The NAACP made representations to the War Department concerning this matter, and it has been advised by Truman K. Gibson, Jr., Acting Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, that all segregation signs at West Point have been removed.

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Dr. Robert Weaver Given Occupational Deferrment

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, 35, chief of the minorities group section of the special placement bureau, War Manpower Commission, was given an occupational deferrment by the Selective Service Board of Appeals, it was announced this week.

Classified in 1-A by his local Board, Dr. Weaver appealed from his Board's decision, on the ground that his work was essential to the promotion of the war.

Selective Service Rejections: A Lesson

Journal & Guide

THERE is food for sober thought in the facts disclosed in the second report by Selective Service on the rejection rate for men called for military service. According to General Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, the rate of rejection of Negroes is four times that of white registrants. For the former the rate is 112 per one thousand, and for the latter 27.8 per one thousand. The combined rate of rejection was 38.2 per thousand.

Norfolk, Va

Among the reasons for rejections are physical or moral unfitness and illiteracy. In the latter category there were 1,228 colored men rejected during the three month period of April, May, and June, 1942.

The rates of rejection are not surprising if one is familiar with the environmental conditions in which the two races live. On the matter of illiteracy, the facts concerning the unequal educational provisions made for the two races, particularly in the deeper South and in the rural areas in all of the dual-system states, plus the virtual non-enforcement of the compulsory attendance laws where Negroes are concerned, make impossible any other results than the shocking rejection rate. The facilities provided, the per-student expenditures, the drawback of salary differentials are taking their toll.

One perhaps overlooked by-product of this situaiton is that, since the draft boards will continue to call other eligible selectees until the colored quotas are filled, a higher percentage of the physically and morally fit and educated Negroes will be called into the armed services than from the white group. Assuming an equality of casualties and disabled men, a larger proportion of the flower of the race among Negroes will be lost than from other racial groups. That is not a prospect to be faced without misgivings.

Similiarly, on the score of physical unfitness and other reasons for rejections, America has only itself to blame. It has definitely proscribed the Negro group to the underfed, poorly housed, and underpaid Forgotten Man category. Squalid living, unavoidable under a vicious social system, is not a factor making for good health.

The Negro has not had adequate general hospital facilities, he has a disproportionate share of the welfare centers and tuberculosis sanatoriums, he has makeshift or no public parks and playgrounds, nor municipal recreation centers and swimming pools.

His public schools are not equipped for physical training courses in too many cases, often where the state laws require them in high

But the Negro's actual and relative disqualification for military service is a drain on American man-power that ought not to exist. If America is to build for a more secure future, it will take to heart the findings of the Selective Service officials and begin to spread the benefits of democracy to all the people in equal measure.

47c-1943

Army Is Still Rejecting More Negro Than White

AUG 1 8 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

47c

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (ANP) — Negroes continued to be rejected in greater proportions than whites, according to the annual report of the selective service administration, just out, with illiteracy and venereal disease as the prevalent reasons. But at the same time, however, selective service was oble to furnish to the armed forces in 1942, 275,059 men.

The section of the voluminous report dealing with Negroes was written by Lt. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, administrative assistant to Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, SSA chief.

Negroes represented 18.7 of all persons that had been classifed as 4-F in 1942, as a result of which the calls for Negroes to meet quotas had to be hiked up considerably.

"The high rejection rate for educational deficiency remains one of the unsoved problems among Negro registrants," the report said. According to a four-month study of problem, it is five times that among whites. Up to the end of the year, no program had been worked out to remedy the problem. The unequal educational facilities of the south are blamed for this condition, and the inclusion of Negro educators in conferences on the subject is recommended.

But the "most important" cause of rejections is venereal disease. While local civic communities are trying to help the situation, a remedial program is being planned. In addition to this, the report says there must be a recognition of the "social aspects of these diseases," if there is to be any real solution.

Registration figures reveal that Negroes represented 10.4 per cent of the nation's manpower total between the ages of 18 and 45. Some 476,728 were called up to the end of the year, while 375,059 were inducted. Beginning the middle of last year calls for Negroes were stepped up. In July 50,000 or 14.4 per cent received greetings, and throughout the year the figure was always above 40,000.

The bulk of those classified were in 1A and 1B. Only 3 per cent of Negro registrants were deferred on industrial grounds. Conscientious objectors were few representing but 2.2 per cent of the total.

There were "considerably less than" 100 cases of draft evasion among Negros in 1942, and most of these were failure to register, to return questionaires, and giving incorrect names and addresses. One suicide because of the racial discrimination in the armed forces was recorded, in addition to one attempt at suicide. Six men refused to report to induction centers for the same reason.

Herndon Hits Draft Slander

Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

AUG 7 1943

47c

Angelo Herndon, in a statement made yesterday to the press declared [illegible] he h[illegible]ed for deferment from his Local Draft Board "because I felt that I could best serve my country in the post I now occupy as editor of the Negro Quarterly." His statement follows:

Statement by Angelo Herndon Re. Draft Deferment:

I resent the slander impugning my loyalty to fight for my country against the Axis. As a Negro, my devotion and loyalty to America dates back to the American Revolution for independence, the war of 1812, the Civil War, the first World War, and the Civil War in Spain, where my brother gave his life when America did not yet realize the danger of Fascism.

I am not evading the draft and I am willing at all times to defend my [illegible]ry. I a[illegible] for deferment from [illegible] Local Draft Board because I felt that I could best serve my country in the post I now occupy as editor of the Negro Quarterly. The draft board will make the final decision in this matter and not the newspapers.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Illiteracy At Benning Studied By Col. Johnson

SEP 16 1943

Sees Results In Training Program Just Inaugurated

47c

FORT BENNING—(ANP)—Lt. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, executive assistant to Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service, was a visitor to Fort Benning this week on a tour of colored reception and induction centers in the southeast.

Of special interest to Col Johnson is the high rate of rejections among colored youths in this section because of failure to meet minimum intelligence standards. Studying the situation from all angles, Col. Johnson is trying to determine the cause of this shortcoming, whether due to lack of opportunity, lack of application or whether the standards set are too high to reach the mental developments of colored youths of a corresponding age to white. Col. Johnson hopes to find the reason and work toward correction.

His visit to the special training regiment at the reception center was most gratifying in that the could see posiive results in the training program, he declared.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga

To Reject Half Of 1-A's: Report

AUG 30 1943

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — A sad commentary on the physical condition of America's young men is shown in the statement from Brig. Gen. Hershey of the Selective Service board when he says that of the more than 1,000,000 men available in Class 1-A for induction into the Army, over half of them will be found physically unfit and rejected for this and other causes. He bases his figures on wha tthe draft has shown in the past.

47c

This announcement was made in connection with the announcement on the drafting of "fathers" needed to fill the complement and demands for inductees during the last half of the year. Nearly half a million fathers face this call, according to Gen. Hershey, of which the percentage of Negroes will range between ten and thirteen per cent of the total number. Where they will be called from depends upon the filling of questionairres where 1-A's [illegible] Objections to the use of [illegible] in [illegible] draft when so many able bodied apparently healthy young men infest the street corners, have been raised in many places. Many believe they would be more useful both during and after the war, if they were put in the army and given medical and educational attention instead of leaving them floating around to prey on the civilian population.

AUG 30 1943

News
Birmingham, Ala

Near Half Alabamians Rejected For Service, Latest Reports Show

AUG 29 1943

Physical And Mental Ailments Given Reason For High Percentage

BY CARROLL KILPATRICK
Special Washington Correspondent for The News

WASHINGTON — Approximately half of all Alabamians who have reported to selective service for induction into the Army or Navy have been rejected for physical or mental reasons, the latest report of the Selective Service System reveals.

The exact percentages are not available, [illegible] months are given and [illegible] high rejection of 58.2 per cent in July and August, 1942, and a low rejection of 41.2 per cent in September and October, 1942. In November, 1942, 45.7 per cent were rejected in the state.

AUG 29 1943

47c

The District of Columbia and Florida have the highest rejection rates in the country. But Virginia, North and South Carolina, Mississippi and Alabama are close behind.

In Alabama 33,246 persons had been rejected at induction stations up to Nov. 30, 1942. A smaller number had been rejected by their local boards.

[illegible] Mississippi, where the white population only slightly outnumbers the Negro population, 49,240 white men were called in the first two years of Selective Service and 34,075 were accepted. In the same period, 45,941 Negroes were called and 28,092 were accepted.

AUG 29 1943

DRAFT REJECTS TOP 25 PER CENT

AUG 27 1943

U. S. Figures Show Alabama Above Average With 32.8 Per Cent

Birmingham Post
Birmingham, Alabama

47c

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Selective Service statistics showed today that during 26 months of drafting men for the armed forces 27.8 per cent of the 5,043,135 sent to induction stations were rejected as unfit for the Army, physically or otherwise.

The statistics, contained in the annual report of the Selective Service System, covered the period from the first inductions in 1940 through Nov. 30, 1942. No breakdown was presented which would show how many were rejected for physical disabilities, or for such reasons as mental disorders and illiteracy.

1,400,840 Rejected

AUG 27 1943

The number rejected during the 26-mo[illegible] period was 1,400,840. Of these [illegible],184,456 were whites, 26.6 per cent of the 4,451,692 forwarded to induction stations by draft boards The board also sent 591,443 Negroes and of these 216,384, or ~~36.6 per~~ cent were rejected.

South Carolina had the largest percentage of rejections. It sent 59,647 men to induction stations which rejected 21,033, or 35.3 per cent. The rejection of whites was 31.6 per cent, and of Negroes 41 per cent.

Michigan followed closely with rejections of 34.4 per cent and other states with high rejections were Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia, Alabama and Vermont.

The figures for Alabama showed that 101,232 men were sent, of which 33,246, or 32.8 per cent, were rejected. Of these 61,258 sent were whites of which 16,258 were rejected. Negroes sent were 39,974, of which 16,294 were rejected.

Wyoming Record Best

The best record was made by Wyoming which sent 7892 men to induction stations and had only 1031 or 13.1 per cent turned back. A perfect record on a racial class of inductees was reported for North Dakota which sent 10 Negroes to induction stations and had 10 accepted by the Army.

AUG 27 1943

Trailing Wyoming for low percentages of rejections were Utah, Kansas, Washington, Iowa, South Dakota, Nevada and Connecticut.

The figures presented little evidence that states in any particular region had higher rates of rejections than others.

News
Birmingham, Ala

Voice Of The People

SEP 15 1943

A WORD OF PRAISE

To the Editor of The News:

So often we fail to give credit to the Negro when he deserves it. I for one am guilty, so that I might redeem myself just a bit, I'm writing this to the "Voice of the People."

I carried my brother to town Sunday night to catch a bus to return to Wheeler Dam after a 10-day furlough here. When I left the bus station it was 10:30 p.m., so I decided to pick my husband up as he got off from work at 11 p.m.

However, at Third Avenue and 17th Street, I was stopped by a Negro woman air raid warden (or whatever title she has. Anyway she wore an official band). I asked her to let me continue my journey as I was afraid I'd miss my husband. The reply was an emphatic "No," so I switched off my motor and remained there until she gave me the "go" signal.

Her block was in total darkness in a few seconds and she stopped [illegible], streetcar and pedestrian with great efficiency. It was a beautiful piece of work and I feel like our "hats" should go off to her. This Negro woman's name is Hattie Sherman, age 76 years. She has lived on Third Avenue for 34 years.

MRS. GLAZE ROBERSON.
1600 Almeda Avenue Southwest.

Post
Washington, D. C

Illiterates Exempt

Senator Maybank's proposal to induct physically fit illiterates into the Army is well worth consideration on its merits. Several hundred thousand men who could pass the physical tests have been rejected because of inability to satisfy the Army's literacy requirements. In his own State of South Carolina Senator Maybank points out that "some 2000 white inductees and another 10,000 colored have been released from the Army since the start of the year because they could not meet literacy tests." Abandonment of literacy tests would greatly reduce the number of fathers whom it will be necessary to call up for service. While that is not a conclusive argument, it is one of a number of good reasons for urging a change in policy.

Unquestionably illiteracy is a personal handicap automatically [illegible] individual from many kinds of Army training calling for a knowledge of reading, writing and arithmetic. But, as Senator Maybank says, there are plenty of assignments that call for brawn rather than brain. Moreover, the illiterate man may be a person of high native intelligence, better able to use his head in an emergency than a fellow soldier who has had a certain amount of formal education. Certainly the shockingly high proportion of illiterates in some of our Southern States would not be interpreted to mean that the people there are of a generally lower order of intelligence than those living in other sections. The chief cause of illiteracy in final analysis is private poverty that encourages evasion of laws compelling school attendance and public poverty that is responsible for inadequate educational facilities and lax enforcement of compulsory school laws.

AUG 30 1943

In all probability, therefore, thousands of husky illiterates now on the rejected list would make much better soldier material if handled properly than fathers of families. The latter are likely to be past the peak of physical effectiveness and almost certain to be mentally disturbed by separation from their families.

Daily World
Atlanta. Ga

Chicago Youth Leader Seized By Federal Men

Faces Trial For Deserting CPS Camp

AUG 4 - 1943

DETROIT — (ANP) — Joseph Guinn, well-known youth leader and former president of the Chicago NAACP youth council, was seized here last week by agents of the FBI and returned to Coshocton, O., to stand trial for abandoning his post at the civilian public service camp there for conscientious objectors.

AUG 4 - 1943

The militant leader in young people's movements left the camp several weeks ago as a protest to the regimentation of camp life and the subjection of civilian public workers to "slave labor" tasks. He had been in the camp since early 1942.

Guinn, a religious conscientious objector, charged that camp officials were suppressing religious freedom, and referred to the irony of this practice in a country founded upon the basic principles of religious freedom.

Declaring that CPS camps are in effect operated for the conscription and punishment of individuals holding religious beliefs contrary to that of the majority, Guinn said he "could come to no other decision than to disassociate myself from a system that invalidated my fundamental Christian philosophy."

"NO LONGER FREE"

Continuing, Guinn said that the commander of the camp issued a memorandum which stated that: "Every assignee . . . who reports to camp is under control of the director of selective service. He ceases to be a free agent and is accountable for all of his time, in camp and out, 24 hours a day. His movements and his actions are subject to control and regulation. He ceases to have certain rights and is granted certain privileges instead.

"These privileges can be restricted or withdrawn without his approval or consent as punishment, during emergencies or a matter of policy. He may be told when, where and how to work, what to wear and where to sleep. He can be required to submit medical examinations and sanitations. He may be moved from place to place and from job to job, even to foreign countries, for the convenience of the government, regardless of his personal feelings or desires."

This order was followed by others of a like nature stated Guinn, who termed the one providing farm labor from the camp personnel to nearby farmers, as particularly vicious.

AUG 4 - 1943

The individual, by this order, is compelled to work for private citizins without pay," revealed Guinn. "Conscript labor is a slave labor regardless whether the employer is the government or a fellow citizen, and as such is reprehensible to any individual who believes in freedom."

High Rejection Rate Of Negro Draftees Continues

Defender
Chicago. Ill

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)— Negroes continue to be rejected in greater proportions than whites, according to the annual report of the selective service administration, just out, with illiteracy and venereal disease as the prevalent reason.

But at the same time, however, selective service was able to furnish to the armed forces 275,059 men in 1942.

The section of the voluminous report dealing with Negroes was written by Lt. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, administrative assistant to Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, SSA chief.

Negroes represented 18.7 of all persons that had been classified as 4-F in 1942, as result of which the calls for Negroes to meet quotas had to be hiked up considerably.

"The high rejection rate for educational deficiency remains one of the unsolved problems among Negro registrants," the report said. According to a four-month study of problems, it is five time that among whites. Up to the end of the year, no program had been worked out to remedy the problem. The unequal educational facilities of the South are blamed for this condition, and the inclusion of Negro educators in conferences on the subject is recommended.

But the "most important" cause of rejections is venereal disease. While local civic communities are trying to help the situation, a remedial program is being planned. In addition to this, the report says there must be a recognition of the "social aspects of these diseases" if there is to be any real solution.

Registration figures reveal that Negroes represented 10.4 per cent of the nation's manpower total between the ages of 18 and 45. Some 476,728 were called up to the end of the year, while 375,059 were inducted. Beginning the middle of last year calls for Negroes were stepped up. In July 50,000 or 14.4 per cent received greetings, and throughout the year the figure was always above 40,000.

The bulk of those classified were in 1A and 1B. Only 3 per cent of Negro registrants were deferred on industrial grounds. Conscientious objectors were few representing but 2.2 per cent of the total.

There were "considerably less than 100 cases" of draft evasion among Negroes in 1942, and most of these were for failure to register, to return questionaires, and giving incorrect names and addresses. One suicide because of the racial discrimination in the armed forces was recorded, in addition to one attempt at suicide. Six men refused to report to induction centers for the same reason.

47c-I943

Director Hershey Discusses Negro Induction Problems

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Pointing out that there has been no change either in the basic legal prohibition against racial discrimination nor in the administrative provision for promoting sound racial relations in the Selective Service, Director Lewis B. Hershey, in his second annual report to President Roosevelt, discusses in detail the problems encountered in the induction of Negroes into the armed forces from December 7, 1941, to December 5, 1942.

47c

The report, Selective Service in Wartime, devotes a chapter to the racial problems faced by the Selective Service organization, and to the steps taken by the Office of the Director to overcome difficulties. Lt. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, executive assistant to the director of Selective Service, has been responsible for the racial relations work of the organization.

Chapter XIII of the report, "Negroes and Selective Service," declares:

"There has been no change either in the basic legal prohibition against racial discrimination nor in the administrative provision for promoting sound racial relations in the period since Pearl Harbor. The original Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, contained the basic legal prohibitions against racial discrimination.

"The first provision is that 'within the limits of the quotas determined under Section 4 (b) for the subdivision in which he resides, any person, regardless of race or color, between the ages of 18 and 36, shall be afforded an opportunity to volunteer for induction into the armed forces of the United States for the training and service prescribed.'

"When persons up to 45 years of age were made liable for military service by the act of December 20, 1941, the ages in this group were also extended. The second provision, more general, applied to all 'in the selection and training of men under this act, and in the interpretation and execution of the provisions of this act, there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race or color.'"

Memphis, Tenn., Com'rcial Appeal
October 2, 1943

HOPE IS REVIVED HERE FOR INDUCTION CENTER

Memphis May Be Considered, Officials Indicate

OGLETHORPE STILL USED

From The Commercial Appeal
Nashville Bureau

NASHVILLE, Oct. 1.—Prospects for reconsideration of the proposal to establish an induction center at Memphis for West Tennessee selectees were seen Friday, should Fort Oglethorpe eventually be dropped as a point of induction for Tennesseans, and become wholly a WAC reception and induction station.

47c

The proposal to establish an induction center at Memphis was tossed out several weeks ago by National Selective Service officials because of the expense involved. However, since Fort Oglethorpe is to cease being a reception center on Nov. 1 for selectees and be taken over as a reception center for WACs, State Selective officials declared there was a possibility it might later be dropped even as an induction station for selectees, and, should this occur, efforts to get an induction station at Memphis might be reopened.

Opening For Memphis

These officals pointed out that should Camp Forrest, near Tullahoma, be the only induction station in the state, there might be difficulty experienced in handling all Tennessee selectees at this point.

They emphasized, however, that Fort Oglethorpe would not cease to be an induction station on Nov. 1, but that Tennessee selectees would continue to be sent there after that date, later to be sent to Camp Shelby, near Hattiesburg, Miss., for assignment after their acceptance into military service.

The order removing Oglethorpe as a reception center, they pointed out, in no wise affects it as an induction center and at the present time state headquarters is still setting up its plans for the induction of Tennessee selectees there, and will continue to do so until ordered to do otherwise.

Both Stations Used

At the same time, these officers pointed out that Camp Forrest would continue to be an induction station for Tennessee white selectees, and the policy of alternating between the two induction stations—Fort Oglethorpe and Camp Forrest—would be followed much the same as it has been in recent months. The officals said the facilities available determined which induction center would be used at the time a contingent of selectees was scheduled to move.

Camp Forrest, likewise, will continue to be the point of induction for all Tennessee negro selectees, who will then go to Fort Benning, Ga., for reception into the armed forces, and eventual assignment to services.

Reopen Campaign, Chandler Urges

The change in plans for inducting selectees should "give us an opportunity to reopen" the campaign to obtain an induction center for Memphis, Mayor Chandler said last night.

"Since changes are contemplated in the induction centers for Selective Service men in Tennessee, this will give us an opportunity to reopen our effort to have Memphis designated as the West Tennessee induction center," the Mayor said. "This should have been done long ago."

Brownsville, Tenn., States Graphic
September 17, 1943

Two Get Out Of Jail Just In Time to Go To Army

(Union City Daily Messenger)

Tap Fry and George Turner, colored, who were arrested by Sheriff W. O. Walker Wednesday night on charges preferred by Lilly May Lennox, colored, relative to the theft of her watch, were released from the county jail this morning, and at 8:55 the two boarded an N. C. & St. L. Train with a group of colored selectees bound for an Army induction center.

47c

"We thought it would be far better to let Uncle Sam have these men and proceed with his plans of winning the war just as soon as possible than to keep them in jail," the sheriff said.

SELECTIVE SERVICE REJECTIONS: A LESSON

Weekly Review
Birmingham, Ala.

There is food for sober thought in the facts disclosed in the second report by Selective Service on the rejection rate for men called for military service. According to General B. H. Hershey, Selective Service director, the rate of rejection of Negroes is four times that of white registrants. For the former rate is 112 per one thousand, and for the latter 27.8 per one thousand. The combined rate of rejection was 28.2 per thousand.

Among the reasons for rejections are physical or moral unfitness and illiteracy. In the latter category there were 1,228 colored men rejected during the three-month period of April, May, and June, 1942.

47c

The rates of rejection are not surprising if one is familiar with the enviromental conditions in which the two races live. On the matter of illiteracy, the facts concerning the unequal educational provisions made for the two races, particular in the deeper South and in the rural areas in all of the dual-system states, plus the vital non-enforcement of the compulsory attendance laws where Negroes are concerned, make impossible any other results than the shocking rejection rate. The facilities provided, the per-student expenditudes, the drawback of salary differentials are taking their toll.

One perhaps overlooked by-product of this situation is that, since the draft boards will continue to call other eligible selectees until the colored quotas are filled, a higher percentage of the physically and morally fit and educated Negroes will be called into the armed services than from the white group. Assuming an equality of casualties and disabled men, a larger proportion of the flower of the race among Negroes will be lost than from other racial groups. That is not a prospect to be faced without misgiving.

Similarly, on the score of physical unfitness and other reasons for erjections, America has only itself to blame. It has definitely proscribed the Negro group to the underfed, poorly housed, and under-paid Forgotten Man category. Squalid living, unavoidable under a vicious social system, is not a factor for good health.

The Negro has not had adequate general hospital facilities, he has a disproportionate share of the welfare centers and tuberculosis sanatoriums, he has makeshift or no public parks and playgrounds, nor municipal recreation centers and swimming pools.

His publi cschools are not equipped for physical training courses in too many cases, often where the state laws require them in high schools. Public and private clinics are few and far between. The state and local health programs, for him, are mostly on paper. Between all these handicaps, he is remarkably healthy, everything considered.

But the Negro's actual and relative disqualification for military service is a drain on American manpower that ought not to exist. If America is to build for a more secure future, it will take to heart the findings of the Selective Service officials and begin to spread the benefits of democracy to all the people in equal measures.

Unequal Facilities Cause of High Negro Rejections, Says Colonel

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Back at his desk in the headquarters of the Selective Service System after 32 days' absence, Colonel Campbell C. Johnson, executive assistant to Selective Service Director Major General Lewis B. Hershey, had, (1) completed a 3,400-mile tour of Army induction stations from North Carolina to Louisiana, (2) been promoted from lieutenant colonel to colonel.

On his tour of induction stations, Colonel Johnson sought answers to these questions: Why the righ rate of Negro rejections for failure to pass the Army's minimum intelligence standards? Why the low percentage of those meeting the Army's physical requirements standards?

When interviewed, he had this to say: "I concluded my tour with the conviction that the root of the trouble lies in the inadequate educational facilities gence but also in lower standards of health as a direct consequence.

"Negro youth must be given a chance. Because they have not been given equal opportunities for learning, the Army is paying the penalty. However, the Selective Service has managed, despite these handicaps, to recruit eligible youths to the extent that today Negroes comprise above 10 per cent of the men inducted into the armed forces through the Selective Service System."

Colonel Johnson, a graduate of Howard University, is a member of the Board of Parole of the District of Columbia and of the bar of the District of Columbia and of North Carolina. His rise in rank began in 1917 when he was promoted to first lieutenant of infantry; by October 1918, he had risen to the rank of captain, becoming a major in September 1929. Promoted to lieutenant colonel in 1942, he received his latest elevation on September 21, 1943.

Captain Benson D. Mitchell is assisstant to Colonel Johnson. He is a graduate of Howard University and was assigned to the Selective Service System in June 1942.

Charleston, S. C., News-Courier
October 30, 1943

Negroes Go to Fort Jackson

Darlington, Oct. 29.—Special: One hundred and two Darlington negro men left here on Thursday morning for Fort Jackson, where they will undergo their physical examinations for induction into the United States army. The group is among the largest to leave here for selective service men in recent months.

47c

Knoxville, Tenn.-Journal
Oct. 30, 1943.

8500 Tennessee Fathers Involved In Next Draft

NASHVILLE, Oct. 29 (AP)—Approximately 8500 fathers, including whites and Negroes, will be involved in the December selective service quota for Tennessee, State Selective Service Director T. A. Frazier estimated today.

Advance estimates of the call will be mailed tomorrow to local boards, General Frazier said.

Total December delivery figures are restricted, he added.

Negro Hired By State Files Affidavit

1943

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 24 (AP)—Charges that Houston Settle, Negro porter for the State Insurance Division, was refused re-employment after being drafted and then rejected by the Army, were made public today at Republican headquarters here along with a statement that the case was being reported to Washington.

The charges were made in an affidavit bearing Settle's name and witnessed by Joseph R. Carpenter, attorney, notary public and a Republican leader. County Judge Boone Hamilton said, that in his capacity as Franklin County re-employment committeeman he was writing the National Re-employment Service in Washington a report on the matter.

Another Man Given Job.

Insurance Director Sherman Goodpaster said he gave Settle's job to another Negro after other porters in the building told him that Settle had gone to the Army and been accepted and that as a result he had no job to offer the man on his return. He said Settle did not tell him he was leaving.

Goodpaster also said that when Settle came back asking for reinstatement he asked him why he had not told him he was going and explained he had filled the job because he heard Settle had been accepted.

The insurance director declared he sent Settle to Democratic organization headquarters in an effort to get him another job and also telephoned another department head where he heard there was a vacancy in an effort to find a job for the man.

Johnson Says Case Unusual.

Told of the charges, Gov. Keen Johnson said, "If that's true, it's one out of fifty or seventy-five cases. The general policy has been to restore men to their jobs or give them another job and it's been my purpose to adhere to that. That's the first I've heard of it."

Settle's affidavit said he was a resident of Frankfort, that he was drafted October 7 and that Goodpaster told him he hoped he would fail to be accepted as he was a "faithful and efficient employe."

He added he was sent to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., and rejected after a week or ten days, and returned here to get back his post, but Director Goodpaster informed him the place had been filled and the latter had since refused to reinstate him.

Affidavit Tells of Appeals.

Settle's affidavit continued: "I appealed to Mr. Goebel Harrod, clerk of Franklin County Draft Board No. 46, and he advised me to contact the National Re-employment Service. By them I was advised to contact the Franklin County Re-employment committeeman for Local Board No. 46.

"The re-employment committeeman called Commissioner Sherman Goodpaster and asked him to reinstate me in my former job, whereupon said committeeman was advised by Sherman Goodpaster that the committeeman would have to take up the matter with the local Democratic organization and Mr. Martin Smith, Democratic Senatorial candidate for the Twentieth Senatorial District, in order to secure a job for me.

"I heard the committeeman state to Mr. Goodpaster that there was no reason for him to contact or get permission of the Democratic organization as this boy has been called to the Army, and it was the duty of the commissioner (Goodpaster) to reinstate me—to which statement Mr. Goodpaster said definitely that he would not reinstate me, and that he has since failed and refused to re-employ me."

47c

No White, Few Negro Fathers Will Answer October Draft Calls

Talladega Home
Octobe

No white pre-Pearl Harbor fathers will be called in October quotas, Otis R. Burton, chairman of the Talladega Draft Board No. 1, said Thursday.

It may be necessary to call a few Negro fathers because of extra heavy Negro quotas for October, he said.

Mr. Burton said it will be November before pre-Pearl Harbor white fathers would be called in Talladega.

47c

Bedford County Has 7,330 Men Registered In Selective Service

Shelbyville, Tenn. Times
October 14, 1943

Records at the local Selective Service Board show that there are 7,330 men registered in Bedford county. Of this number 2,104 are men registered from age 45-65, which leaves 5,226 men registered age 18-45. Of these registered Bedford countians 1,368 are in the armed forces, which includes 918 white inductees with 244 white men enlisted; 205 negro inductees and one negro enlisted. There are a number of volunteers among the inducted which were not enumerated, however past publications of men leaving in service have revealed a good percentage have been volunteers, which has been in keeping with the name "Volunteer State."

Recent inventory in the office of the Selective Service Board has brought the above figures as of October 1 and the following figures show the number listed in each class as of October 1, released by the local S. S. B: White men—921 inducted, class 1-C (member of the armed forces in the United States); 244 enlisted, class 1-C; 117 in class 1-A (available for military service); 3 class 1-A-L (limited service men); 15 class 2-A (man necessary in his civilian activity); 120 class 2-B (man necessary to war production program); 175 class 2-C (single men deferred by reason of his agricultural occupation or endeavor); 1050 class 3-A (Pre-Pearl Harbor Fathers); 171 class 3-C (man deferred both by reason of dependency and agricultural occupation of endeavor); 20 class 3-D (man deferred by reason of extreme hardship and privation to wife, child, or parent); 14 class IV-D (minister of religion or divinity student); 567 class IV-F (Morally unfit, physical or mentally unfit); total classifications 3417; 23 unclassified; 10 cancellations; 27 deceased; bringing the total to 3477 men registered between age 18-37; 988 in class between ages 38 to 45, making a grand total of 4465 white men registered between ages 18-45.

Colored men—205 inducted class 1-C; 1 enlisted class, 1-C; 58, class 1-A; 4 class 11-B; 14 class 11-C; 114 class (Pre-Pearl Harbor Fathers); 20 class 111-C; 3 class 111-D; 4, class IV-D; 158 class IV-F; total classifications 580; 2 unclassified; 7 cancelled; 7 deceased; total colored registrants 596 between age 18-37; 165 men between age 38-45, makes a total number of colored registrants 761.

The above figures of both white and colored registrants makes a total number of 5,226 registrants between ages 18-45. There are 2,104 men both white and colored registered between ages 45-65 making the grand total of 7330 men registered in Bedford county.

This recent inventory as taken by Miss Melvin Isom, chief clerk, and Mrs. Gladys Nelson, clerk, assisted by Mrs. Sarah McGill indicates a great deal of careful work performed in this office and accurate records in compliance with the Government office kept by the clerks. Members of the board are Franklin Boyd, chairman; Virgil Hastings and Charles H. Eblen, all volunteer workers who show every courtesy possible in meeting questions or problems which come up before them, giving careful consideration to all alike.

Belton, S. C. News
November 4, 1943

28 Negroes Called By Local Board Number 7

The following list of negro registrants will be inducted into the U. S. Army through the Belton Board Selective Service during the month of November:

Emanuel Earle, Junius Cunningham, Allen Williams, Raymond Kennedy, George Hermon Arnold, Robert McCullough, Bravell Young, M. C. Mitchell, Paul Harrold Hagood, Leo Jacobs, Lorenza Sitton.

Also Alvin White, John Frank Fuller, Samie Fields, Albert Smith, Walter Little, Johnny Gambrell, Aaron Ware, E.V. Donald, Marion T. Simmons, Odis Latimer, Harvey Junior Jackson, Joe Henry Cobb, S. T. Garrison, Cody Harris, Jhonnie Greene, John Roy McDavid and Fred Junior Robinson.

47c

Washington Post
Washington, D. C.

Camp Lee To Be Negro Troop Center

OCT 2 1943

By the Associated Press

Camp Lee, Va., Oct. 1.—White inductees of the Third Service Command will be received in the future at Fort George G. Meade, Md., and New Cumberland, Pa., instead of at Camp Lee, Capt. E. Gerlach, adjutant of the reception center, announced today.

OCT 2 1943

Under the policy Camp Lee's reception center will receive Negro troops who formerly were inducted from throughout the Third Service Command at Fort Meade. Discontinuance of the 1303d Service Unit as a reception center for white troops became effective September 30 but a few casual groups of white troops will be received until October 7.

Captain Gerlach said the same service command will serve as the Negro reception center.

The 1303d came into being at Camp Lee, March 4, 1941, when the first group of selectees arrived at the reception center for processing. Before that time the only group here was the cadre of which some were members of the medical department.

OCT 2 1943

At the time of the 1303d's arrival, the entire post was situated in what is now the present reception center and the camp had just begun to function as a quartermaster replacement training center, a medical replacement training center and a reception center which supplied many of the men for the two other branches.

47c

Maryville, Tenn. Enterprise
November 4, 1943

ARMY TAKES EIGHT COLORED SELECTEES

The following listed colored selectees left from Blount County Local Board No. 2, this week:

Walter Lewis Mann, Odell Coleman, George Raymond Brown, Eddie Roscoe Dowdle, L. V. Williams, Samuel Edward Blair, John B. Smith, Clarence Wesley Brown.

The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan.

HAROLD LINDSEY NOT MAD ENOUGH TO FIGHT

AUG 20 1943

Harold Lindsey, 30 years old, says he tried twice to adapt himself to army routine and twice failed. Arrested at his home, 2016 North Fifth street, he is being held for a third effort.

Inducted early this year he got as far as Ft. Leavenworth, decided he wanted no part of it, and caught the next bus home. The draft board ordered him to try again a few weeks later and he got a little further. He donned a uniform but took it off that night as soon as he got home and hung it in the closet.

AUG 20 1943

"I just don't feel mad at nobody, somehow," he explained to Detective Harry Hartung at police headquarters today while awaiting the arrival of the military police, "I ain't no good at

47c

Darlington, S. C., News & Press
November 4, 1943

102 Colored Men Leave for Exams.

102 Darlington Negro men left Thursday for examinations for induction into the U. S. Army.

Clinton, S. C. Chronicle
November 4, 1943

19 Negroes Left Monday for Jackson

Nineteen Negro selectees left Monday morning, Nov. 1, for Fort Jackson, Columbia, for physical examination and possible induction into the armed services.

They were sent by local board No. 50, and were:

Sam Reeder Williams, Washington, D. C.
Theodore Roosevelt Clayton, Princeton.
Thomas Harris, Youngstown, Ohio
Marion Taylor, Rt 1, Clinton.
Lewis Cornelius Burnside, Clinton
Oscar Lee Dunlap, Greensboro N. C.
Samuel Copeland, Clinton.
R. V. Todd, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Proverb McMorris, Baltimore, Md.
W. C. Copeland, RFD, Clinton.
Blakely Bates, Henderson, N. C.
Loyd Watts, Richmond, Va.
Sammie Acie King, Rt. 3, Clinton.
James Curtis Johnson, Rt. 1, Honea Path.
Johnnie Walter Pyles, Rt. 3, Clinton.

The group was among the largest to leave from here in recent months.

47c-1943

Negro Youth Must Be Given Chance, Says Col. Johnson

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

OCT 5 1943

Selective Service Official Is Back from Tour of Southeast

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(S N S)—Back at his desk in the headquarters of the Selective Service System after 32 days absence, Colonel Campbell C. Johnson, executive assistant to Selective Service Director Major General Lewis B. Hershey, had, (1) completed a 3400-mile tour of Army induction stations from North Carolina to Louisiana, (2) been promoted from lieutenant colonel to colonel.

On his tour of induction stations, Colonel Johnson sought answers to these questions: Why the high rate of Negro rejections for failure to pass the Army's minimum intelligence standards?—Why the low percentage of those meeting the Army's physical requirement standards?

When interviewed, he had this to say: "I concluded my tour with the conviction that the root of the trouble lies in the inadequate educational facilities in lower standards of health as a direct consequence.

"Negro youth must be given a chance. Because they have not been given equal opportunities for learning, the Army is paying the penalty. However, the Selective Service has managed, despite these handicaps, to recruit eligible youths to the extent that today Negroes comprise above 10 per cent of the men inducted into the armed forces through the Selective Service System

Colonel Johnson, a graduate of Howard University, is a member of the Board of Parole of the District of Columbia and of the bar of the District of Columbia and of North Carolina. His rise in rank began in 1917 when he was promoted to first lieutenant of Infantry; by October 1918 he had risen to the rank of captain, becoming major in September 1929. Promoted to Lieutenant Colonel in 1942, he received his latest elevation on September 21, 1943.

Captain Benson D. Mitchell is assistant to Colonel Johnson. He is a graduate of Howard University and was assigned to the Selective System in June 1942.

Jackson Tenn Sun
November 15, 1943

COLORED SELECTEES SENT BY BOARD FOR ARMY EXAMINATIONS

Local Board No. 1, Selective Service, today sent a contingent of colored Selectees for their final examination and induction into the service. Those leaving with this group are:

Sylvester Glenn, 312 Tanyard, (volunteer); Louis McVeigh, 438 Merry Lane Courts, (volunteer); Rocherster Epperson, Route 3, Bells; William Bradley, 111 Murray; Lonell Fowler, 110 Iron; James Turner, Care 7-UP Bottling Co.; Emerson Tomlin, 208 Beasley;

Samuel Taylor, 114 Tanyard; Leroy Brown, 215 Conger; Robert Hunt, 225 Meadow; Leroy Horton, 202 Hale; Charlie Isable, 141 Boone; Allie Everett Taylor, 113 Carson Alley; Belden Lancaster, 3312 Calumet Ave., Chicago, Ill.; Isaac Sharp, 116 Middleton;

Otis Price, 410 Institute; Robert Samuel Lyons, 348 Stonewall; Curtis Elmer Miller, 1702 Maypole, Chicago, Ill.; Delany Worthy, 470 S. Market; James Cornelius Banks, 507 Day; Curtis Howard, 548 Church; Melvin Fant, 1749 W. 13th St., Chicago, Ill.; James Robert Douglass, 503 Etheridge, Humboldt, Tenn;

James Madison Howell, 218 Stonewall; Luster Duckworth, 253 Middleton; Rufus Fred Jamerson Cole, 4218 Wabash, Chicago, Ill.; Anderson Jones, Jr., 2310 S. State St., Chicago, Ill.; Odell Shipp, 412 Eastern; Willie Border, 523 North Cumberland; William Edward McCorry, 118 Farrar; Jessie Willie Watkins, 5015 S. Calumet, Chicago, Ill.;

Perry Jones, 100 Woodruff; Caliph McKnight, 111 Beasley; John Wesley Ballard, 515 Day; John Wesley Cummings, 111 Johnson; Wesley Poe, 563 Short; James Smith, 354 Eureka; Abbie Pearson, 112 First St.

Charlie Smith, 594 Merryland Courts; Nathaniel Willo Crum, 351 First; Tom Theus, 719 Middleton; Raymond Waddell Reaves, 409 Mobile; Chester Fulton Johnson, 315 Second; Edd Bird, 326 Tanyard; Frank Bray Moore, 420 E. 39th St. Chicago, Ill.; James Donald Martin, 563 Short;

Hulton Lacy Cooper, Route 2, Tiptonville, Tenn.; Frazell Bond, 509 N. Church; Tom Poston, 4011-A Evans, St. Louis, Mo.; Willie T. Chatman, 419 Shannon; Charles Eugene Gray, 126 Taylor Alley; James Estes Britt, 114 Spoke; Grady Huntspon, 533 Cumberland; Willie Green Tanner, 227 Meadow.

Jasper Abbitt, 1629 Maryland St. Gary, Ind.; Wardell Yarbrough, 330 Hale; Elmore Johnson, 480 Shannon; Thornton Parrot, Route 1, Rossville, Tenn.; Henry Clay Robertson, 1702 Maple, Chicago, Ill.; Henry Carthel Brown, 254 Otk; R. B. Thues, 114 Sycamore; Frank Ward, 311 Allen Alley;

George Kidd, 317 Second; Eddie Foster, 326 Second; Booker T. Farr, 434 S. Liberty; Nathan Spencer, 105 N. W. 10th St., Miami, Fla.; Kid Patrick, 337 Burks Alley; Richard Greene, 1330 Campbell; Arzell Sanford; Care Pantlind Hotel, Grand Rapids, Mich.; James Henry Watkins, 339 South;

Eugene Cisco, 445 S. Liberty; James Roy Hurt, 104 Pine; Leslie Lawrence Coates, 210 Eastern; L. C. Fly, 123 Collier Alley; Frank Tidwell, 106 Orchard; James Harris Edward Utley, 108 Laconte; Smith Billups, 233 South; Isiah Cooper, Jr., 161 Wilkerson;

Lincoln Kendricks, Jr., 636 Third; Alveyde Chatman, 524 N. Church; Ross Elton Granberry, Jr., 150 Pine; Fred Brown, Jr., 222 Lane; Enloe Voris Hopper, 114 Neff; Tracey Barnes, 127 Railroad; Foster Bridges, 110 W. Orleans; Otis Ford, 118 White; Emmett Hayes, 227 Middleton.

Boards Continue List Of Draft Delinquents In Jefferson County

Birmingham, Ala., News
November 7, 1943

23 Names Are Reported; Panel In Warrior Points Out Six White, 12 Negro

Names of draft registrants judged to be delinquent by their local boards continued to be listed Saturday, in Jefferson County.

Local Board No. 14 reported that two men who appear on their records as Negroes are now considered delinquent. Their names and last addresses as listed by the board are Clinton Murry, (rear) 3540 North 27th Street, and Willie Miller, 2404 North 18th St.

Judged to be delinquent by Local Board No. 2 are these three, whose races and last addresses are as obtained from board records; White—Willie Ralph Gann, Route 1, Theodore, Ala., care Mrs. Harvey Henson. Negro—Joe Moody, 1616 Rice Street, Columbia, S. C., and Arthur Baker, 651 Adams Street, Detroit, Mich.

Local Board No. 5, Warrior, Ala., reports the following, with races and last addresses as shown on board papers:

White—Thomas Ivan McCluskey, Route 1, Cullman, Ala.; Robert J. Naylor, Route 2, Moulton, Ala.; William Alfred Adams, 113 Washington Avenue, Richmond, Calif.; Jack Lois Malone, Lewisburg, Ala.; Jack Lee Webster, 1353 East 47th Place, Chicago, and James Loftis Robertson, 309 Third Avenue, Bessemer.

Negro—Mum Smith, 421 Dowell Avenue, Powderly, Ala.; Ruben Delothe, Lewisburg, Ala.; Howard Cooper, 428 Dowell Avenue, Powderly; Frank Robert George Thomas, Jr., Box 139, Route 1, Birmingham; Cleveland McBride, Box 725, Route 1, Birmingham; James Hawkins, 922½ Ninth Street, West, Palm Beach, Fla.; Reed Hardin, 412 Carmichael Avenue, Powderly; Astor Emmett Davenport, care J. O. Greathouse, Warrior, Ala.; Willie Clark Pecues, 2221 Avenue E. South, Birmingham; Elisha Gooden, care Southern Pacific Railroad Company, Los Angeles, Calif.; James Adamson, J-92 Hudson House., Vancouver, Wash.; Prince Albert Welch, Stone Webster Engineer Corporation, Knoxville, Tenn.

COLORED SELECTEES INCLUDE A FATHER WITH SIX CHILDREN

Jackson, Tenn. Sun
November 18, 1943

Will Ozier, colored farmer of Routs 1, Bells, who has six children, is among the men from this county leaving today from Local Board No. 2, Selective Service, for final examinations preparatory to induction into the service.

Lee E. Clegett of 124 Farrow St., Jackson, with five children, and Q. T. Pearson of Michigan with four children lead the approximately half of colored Selectees in this call The list follows:

Sam Crooms, Rt. 5, Jackson; Leonard Hays, Spring Creek; George Vantreese, Rt. 1, Oakfield; Mack Weaver, Rt. 1, Pinson; Will Ozier, Rt. 1, Bells; Lee Edward Clegett, 124 Farrow S., Jackson; Odesma Morgan, 3841 Cook Ave. St. Louis, Mo.; Thurman Stinson Eulester Cox, Rt. 7, Humboldt;

Grady Lee, 237 Sycamore St., Jackson; Willie Martin, Rt. 2, Jackson; Robert Hammons, Clinton, Kentucky; Clate Collier, Rt. 2, Pinson; George Allen McGaughy, Rt. 2, Medon; Q. T. Pearson, 402 Fisher St. Kalamazoo, Michigan; Letoy McFadden, 270A Hickory St., St. Louis, Mo.; James Givens, Rt. 4, Jackson;

James Anderson, Rt. 1, Oakfield; Willie Lee Grim, 717 Walnut St., Osawatomie, Kansas; Louis Reed, Bemis; A. D. White, 110 Sycamore St., Jackson; Littlerd Croom, Rt. 3, Jackson; Clarence Arthur Harrison, 224 Franklin St., Jackson; Herman Dodson, Rt. 2, Jackson; Ernest Walker, 110 Sycamore St., Jackson;

J. C. Briett, Rt. 7, Humboldt; Henry Curtis Poe, 744 E. Baltimore St., Jackson; Hoover Ammons, 49½ Bush St., Pontiac, Michigan; Charlie Blackwell, Bemis; Elmer Fuller, Rt. 1, Medon; Herman Flournoy, Rt. 3, Jackson; Gollie Benson, Rt. 1, Oakfield; Fennessee Gardner, Rt. 5, Jackson; Mathis Ross Jones, Rt. 1, Oakfield;

James Hopper, Rt. 1, Denmark; Ernest Shaw, Rt. 1, Denmark; Thomas Fuller, Mercer; Hozell Mayes, Arnold Alley, Jackson; Willie Lee Transou, Rt. 1, Denmark; James McCoy, Rt. 5, Jackson; Johnnie Lee Jordan, Bemis; Emmett Washington, Rt. 2, Jackson; Roger, Rt. 2, Mercer; Leonard Floyd Reid, Rt. 3, Milan;

Uriah Lincoln Freeman, Rt. 2, Denmark; J. C. Hill, Malesus; Cephus Williams, 2124 Madison St., Gary Indiana; Wiley Rhodes, 524 Nowen Ave., Chicago, Ill.; J. D. Rucker, 200 No. California, Chicago Ill.; Harrison Jones, Alamo; R. B. Mercer, Rt. 4, Jackson; Nelson Montgomery, Rt. 2, Denmark; Pete Albert Woodson, Rt. 1, Pinson;

Allen Delton Manley, Rt. 2, Denmark; Martin McClellan, Jr., Rt. 7, Humboldt; Murdic Fuller, Jr., Rt. 2, Mercer; J. T. Lacey, Rt. 2, Jackson; Lofton Oscar Holloman, Mercer; Henry Lee Huddleston, Rt. 1, Jackson; Eevoy Ellison, Rt. 2, Bells; Sam Hawkins, Rt. 1, Denmark; Eugene Crump, Rt. 2, Jackson;

Alvoid Long Rt. 2, Jackson; Adam Vann, Rt. 1, Bells; Harvey James Brown, Rt. 5, Jackson; Thomas Jefferson Martin, Jr., Rt. 1, Jackson; Melvin Cole, Rt. 2, Jackson; Eugene Womack, Rt. 2, Denmark; Robert Stinson, Rt. 7, Humboldt; Nolen Hardin, 1513 Hawkins St., Nashville; Richard Lee Nichelson, Rt. 1, Denmark;

Guy Nathan Turley, Spring Creek; Rufus Wade Franklin, Rt. 5, Jackson; Frank Lee Weddle, Rt. 2, Denmark; Baby Ruth Willies, Rt 1, Jackson; Ben David Thompson, Rt. 1, Medon; Whittie Bond, Burnswich, Ga., Tom Daniel, Jr., Rt. 5, Jackson; Matthew Bivens, Rt. 2, Denmark; Willie Lee Flakes, Rt. 2, Medon; Chester Clark, Rt. 1, Oakfield; Wiley Willious Williams, Rt. 2, Lamar, Mississippi (Del) Frank (Preacher Flournoy, Rt. 3, Jackson; Jessie Lee Godwin, Rt. 4, Jackson; Fletcher Rucker, Rt. 2, Jackson; Millard Croom, Bemis, Tennessee.

---

12 Negro Selectees Sent To Jackson

Clinton, S. C. Chronicle
October 28, 1943

Clinton draft board No. 50 sent the following 12 Negro selectees to Fort Jackson on Thursday, October, 21, for induction into the army:

Aron Willie Gallman, Mill Brook, N. C.

D. V. Jones, Laurens.

Johnnie Mark Duckett, Clinton.

Robert Adkinson, Washington, D. C.

John Wesley Fuller, Zellwood, Fla.

Paul Fleming, Cedartown, Ga.

Nathaniel Harris, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Marcellus Dillard Davis, Rt. 2, Clinton.

Tommie Pitts, Charlotte N. C.

Thomas Young, Clinton.

Rivers Dawkins, Rt. 2, Whitmire.

Marion Anderson, Waterloo.

Army Reveals More Whites Than Negroes Rejected

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

OCT 3 1943

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Approximately 750,000 men have been lost to the United States army because of illiteracy it has been revealed by "The Alphabet and the Army," an article appearing in the March issue of the Journal of the National Education association. The figure representing about 50 divi-ins not including the 18-19-year-olds, has raised pointed questions concerning the educational systems of various states, most of which are southern.

47c

Of the 750,000 rejectees, education deficiencies hit 500,000 whites as opposed to 250,000 Negroes, which dispels popular belief that the illiteracy problem is confined to Negro educational standards notably discriminatory in the south. The number of whites released by the army because they failed to pass the army test for illiteracy — ability to read an ordinary newspaper indicating training equivalent to a fourth grade education — is shown by the record to be proportionately higher than among Negroes.

ILLITERACY SECTIONAL

While army intelligence is not available on the states having the highest illiteracy rates, the U. S. Census reveals that with one exception, they are located in the south. The 1940 census showed that one out of seven Americans 25 years of age and over could be classified as "functionally" illiterate on the basis of army definition.

Among the 18-19-year-olds selective service reports that about 12 per cent of Negro registrants have been rejected for educational deficiency along with one per cent of whites in the same age group. It is believed that the south's educational policies with respect to the minority group is responsible for the high Negro rate.

MONEY IS LACKING

The general population over 25 years old, according to census figures, reveals 7,300,000 whites as funcually illiterate and 2,700,000 Negroes. Of the whites, 4,200,000 are native born.

The states having the highest illiteracy rate are Tennessee, Arkansas, Virginia, North Carolina, New Mexico, Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Louisiana. Lowest illiteracy rates are to be found in Utah, Oregon, Idaho, Iowa, Washington, Nebraska, Kansas, Vermont, Wyoming and Maine. They range from four to seven and a half per cent.

OCT 3 1943

The states with highest illiteracy rates are inferior in monies expended for education, number of pupils in classes, average teacher salary and length of school year. Many persons believe that the only solution to the problem is a federal subsidy to elevate the standards in schools of backward states.

OCT 3 194

Chester S. C. Reporter

Oct. 11 1943

Colored Men For October Induction

47c

The following colored men will be called for induction in October by Selective Service Board, No. 20:

William Edward Little, Coley Houser, Wallace Gist, John Robert Archie, Ben Chisholm, James Roosevelt Stewart, Lawyer Worthy, Jimmie Wilks, Jack Small Murphy, John Hugh Caudle, John Reece, Felix Calvin Gist, Willie Brice ,Willie Cureton, Marion Jas. Hemphill, John Henry Jackson, Mannie Nickles, Lucius Barnes, Robert Whitlock, Joseph Caldwell, Robert Lee Lowry, Hack Jeter, William Chisholm, Mack Carter, Cal Hames, Joe Williams, Abe Haynes, Robert H.Tobias, Wardell Chambers, Rufus Kee, Johnnie John Caldwell, Jesse Hughes, George B. Hinton, Esper Robbins, Hick Sanders, Walter Tobias, Jr., Robert Neal, Charlie Toliver, Sam Borcey Hick, McKinley Hall, Cecil Sanders, Henry Archie, Jesse Ferguson, Bay Wilks, Arthur Darby, Audrey Hayes, King David Wylie, Elbert Halsey, George Henry Black, Oror Hughes, Joe Banks Gilmore, Hilliard Crosby, William David Worthy, Charley Clowney, Lawrence Israel Carter, John Rollingson Chisholm, J. B. Gorden, Johnnie James Pressley, Haze Sanders, William Tom McLinton, Coleman Bagwell, Ross Graham, Orvet Cromer, David Carthell Clark, Jr., James Hudson, John C. Abraham, John Henry Wright, John William Stroud, Willie Weathers, William Ervin, William Davis Chisholm, James William Douglass, Joe Willie Williams, Ernest Walker, Sylvester Shannon, Sumter Junior Dixon, Roscoe Williams, James Clyde Mobley, Fred Walker Brown. Robert Lee Craig, Jr., David Ferguson, John Robert Pearson, Mackers Darby, Robert Kennedy, Leroy Douglas, Jake Price, Herman Carnell Cole, Burnett Walker, Wyman Mobley,Walter Jennings Willfrie, Jr., Calvin Brown,George Dixon, John Barnes Carter,Charlie Wilks, Amos Washington, Johnnie Miles Strother, George William Simpson, Willie Brown, Gettie Anderson, Tommie Lee Johnson, Joe Robbins, David Ferguson, David Paul Simpson, Glasper Parks, Willie Be Sanders, Walker Young, Frank Killian, William Jennings, William James Howard, Woods Dunaford, L. B. Steele.

Charleston, S. C., News Courier

November 5, 1943

Draft Board No. 16

Calls 87 Negro Men

47c

Eighty-seven negro men have been ordered by Selective Service Board No. 16 to report at board headquarters, 30 Mount Pleasant street, on November 11 to be sent to Fort Jackson for indiction into the army. The men are the following:

George Elmore White, James Oree, Ervin Brown, Alexander Ravenel, Julius Simmons, Cyrus Sams, Leo Williams, Jackson Governor Nesbit, Charles Robinson, George Perry, Jr., Robert Williams, James Donnom Washington, Robert Collins, Julius Allen, Hazel David Brown, Benjamin (Friend) White, John Wigfall, Charles N. Bradley, Timothy Smalls, John Ladson, James Rock, Willie Pinckney.

Also, Charlie Williams, Julius Richardson, Joseph Lambright, Rufus Kelly, Aaron McGinnis, Richard Calhoun Able, Eddie Flood, Lenon Edwards, Frank Ellis, John Lucius McKinney, Pharisee Clark, Henry Simmons, Louis Lucious Ellis, Dan Deas, George Swinton, Frank Grant, Elijah Ham, Joe Martin, Esau Morris Simmons, William J. Hamilton, Hardin (Boy) Duggins, Elijah Bradley.

Also, Quincy Knox, Lewis Morrison, Jr., Philip Jefferson, Melvin Washington, Joseph Harper, Jr., Joe McClary, Francis Cecil Rofers, Ett Rivers, Clarence Brown, Junius Fulton, Moses Moultrie, James Williams, James Smith, Ernest Jerome Williams, Buster Harvin, Elijah Blake, Tom Weathers, Leroy Clifford, Robert Wilson Edwards, James Lee Carter.

Also, Alfred Simmons, James Aiken, Marion Wilford Jenkins, Willie Middleton, Charlie Kressie Taste, Julian Henderson, Jr., Henry Butler, Jossy Simmons, Paul Green, Jacob Commings, Charles Junior Alston, Hezekiah Drayton, Amos Hilton, James (King) Johnson, Luke Read, Wesley Gilliens, Charlie Simpson, Pohn Bennett, Jr., Pirter German, Albert Way, Daught (Brother) Peterson, Arthur Jenkins and William Murray.

Newberry, S. C., Observer & Herald

October 26, 1943

Colored Men To Report For Final Exams Nov. 2nd

Both Boards Send Groups

47c

The two local selective service boards have announced the names of the colored selectees from the local boards which will report on November 2nd to Fort Jackson for final physical examinations.

The following is the list from Board No. 58:

John Calvin Dominick, Robert Lee Blair, Grady Lee Douglas, Eddie Bigham Mathis, Pierce Coleman, Albert Cannon, Olin Clark, Robert Butler, S. T. Davis, Dewey Aughtry, Caseilo Jones, Jodie Johnson, Robert B. Graham, James Rutherford, Nathaniel Caldwell.

The following is the list from Board No. 59:

Leonard Lomax, Walter Clark, Allen Pee, Willie James Longshaw, Willie Griffin Pinkney, Johnnie Williams, George Brown, Johnnie Mack, James Whitner, Ervin Toland, George Howard Sims, James Heller, Jr., George Adam Counts, Jr., Thomas Berley Wise, Haskell Suber, Major Burton, James Arthur Higgins, Forest Lee Robinson, J. W. Pitts, Irineious Wheeler, Edd Wilson, Nathaniel Gilliam, Dallas Hizeal, John Henry Martin.

EIGHT "OBJECTORS" FAIL TO REPORT TO LOCAL BOARD NO. 2

Jackson. Tenn. Sun

47c

Eight colored men who claim to be "Conscientious Objectors" failed to report to local Board No. 2, Selective Service, today under the first call for men of this classification this board has had.

Information obtained from the office of the Board shows that [illegible] Church of God at Medon, and have been advised by their pastor to refrain from meeting Selective Service requirements.

November 18, 1943

The call for these conscientious objectors is for final examination preparatory to sending them to a work camp. No military service is contemplated, according to Board information. Had they reported as instructed, and passed their examinations, they would have been returned to this county until needed at a work camp.

Under Selective Service regulations, names of these eight will now be turned over to the United States Attorney General for further action.

Included in this group are Joe Oliver McBride, Henry Lee Reaves, Marshall Neal Thompson and Edgar Houston Darr Thompson, all of Route 1, Medon; Namon Marshall, David Marshall and C. M. Thompson of Route 5, Jackson; and Robert Marshall of 544 S. Liberty St.

Six Negroes Accepted From Colored Call

Batesburg, S. C., News

October 29, 1943

47c

Only six negroes were accepted for military service from the group sent to Fort Jackson Oct. 22 for examination. The call was for 29 men, which makes the percentage accepted unusually small. Three were assigned to the army, while the other three went into the navy.

Accepted for the army are: Odessa John Geiger, Irmo Rt. 1; Trance Nichols, Batesburg; Richard Marion Wise, Lexington, Rt. 4.

Accepted for the navy are: Walter Henry Adams, Leesville, Rt. 3; James Earley Summers, Lexington, Rt. 2; and Benson Leon Coleman, Irmo.

The Northwest Enterprise

Seattle, Washington

Army Engineers Need Skilled Negro Workers

47c

A special call for skilled Negro construction workers to volunteer for service with the Army Engineers was issued this week by Lieutenant Colonel Ralph A. Tudor, U. S. District Engineer, Portland.

SEP 1 1943

"The Corps of Engineers is activating a large number of highly specialized Negro airdrome construction battalions," Colonel Tudor stated. These organizations require specialists who have had experience in all types of construction work, particularly those having to do with the operation and maintenance of highway construciton machinery, but the list includes a large number of other skilled trades such as carpenters, construction foremen, electricians, demolition men, et al."

SEP 1 1943

Colonel Tudor made public a letter written under the date of July 16, 1943, to the chief of engineers by headquarters of the Army Air Forces which quoted Brigadier General O. S. Godfrey, chief air engineer, as stating:

"I feel that the district and division engineers are to be commended for the splendid job they have done in the selection and procurement of construction specialist personnel We are trying to carry on by granting these men early promotions in recognition of their great value to the corps. I trust that our continuing efforts will bring an increasing number of these fine construction men into the military service in the corps of engineers.

SEP 1 1943

"I have only one suggestion to offer in this continuing program, that greatest stress be placed on the recruitment of qualified Negro inductees. We have a large number of colored units. The need is greater than in white units and I realize the recruiting field is very limited.

A representative of the Portland district engineer will interview applicants for voluntary induction in the Corps of Engineers at 625 Pittock block to determine their technical qualifications. Upon approval the men will be given a letter of assignment which earmarks them for an Engineer regiment where their services are most needed.

LOCAL NEGROES SENT TO ARMY

Walhalla, S. C. Courier

November 11, 1943

The following colored selectees, sent to Fort Jackson by the Walhalla draft board, were inducted last Friday:

Grover Hunter, Westminster; Jeff Rogers, Walhalla, Rt. 2; Eddie Bradley, Jr., Westminster Star Route; Jefferson Davis Richardson Walhalla. Joe Nathan Taylor, West Union, and Johnnie Grant, Walhalla, Rt. 1, were transferred to Pennsylvania for induction.

47c-1943

"Ft. Huachuca's Hell On Earth"; Exposé Reveals

SEP 11 1943

Amsterdam Star-News
New York. N. Y.

TUSCON, Ariz. (ANP).—Confidential information has been obtained by the Associated Negro Press of startling and sensational discriminatory practices imposed upon soldiers of the 92nd infantry division stationed at Fort Huachuca. Sources cannot be revealed for fear of reprisals upon the informants.

Scandal Threatens

The shameful situation threatens to develop into a national scandal, and more important, according to observers, unless the federal government and the army high command takes immediate, fortright action to correct the disgraceful conditions, it is believed that all the fury of an overseas batltefield will explode in his desert community.

Black American soldiers who a few months before had entered the U. S. army filled with patriotic determination to help win the war for democracy, even to the point of sacrificing their lives, are now reported to be enmeshed in the doldrums of frustration and despair as a direct result of the heartbreaking, inhuman treatment meted out to them by commanding general and white officers alike.

Shocking Charges

Specifically the shocking charges made by army personnel attached to the fort included the following:

1. That the comamnding general, E. M. Almond, of Anniston, Ala., refers to his Negro charges both in and out of their presence as "niggers."

2. That the commanding general is formulating plans to convince the War Department to ship the division for combat duty, although the division is miserably unprepared for such service.

3. That Gen. Almond is not a top flight commander and was not assigned to a white unit because he lacked necessary qualifications. The War Department foisted him upon the Negro group it is charged because it was necessary to place him somewhere.

4. That the commanding general orders the post Gestapo to hold a "shakedown" of enlisted personnel after each live ammunition practice to detect possible bullets secreted away for an allegedly planned "insurrection."

5. That a quota system operates in the making and promotion of Negro officers with few ever reaching the rank of first lieutenant. Most of the Negro officers are "frozen" at the second lieutenant level.

6. That enlisted personnel is trained with obsolete combat weapons and not given instructions in modern methods of warfare. Instead, training consists almost exclusively of marches and drills around the confines of the army post.

Confusion?!?!

7. That although present conditions on the military reservation have existed ever since the division moved into Arizona last May, Atty Truman K. Gibson, Jr., acting civilian aide to the secretary of war, and Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, inspecting general from the inspector general's office, Washington, on a recent inspection here found conditions to be "in excellent shape, morale "high," training "good," and the overall picture "gratifying."

"Slaveocracy"

Personnel at the army post are said to be greatly puzzled over how they can reconcile the vicious dictums of Gen. Almond and his staff of white officers to preachments of a nation pledged in a war to carry the four freedoms and democracy to the far corners of the world. Rumors are being circulated in Tuscon that the soldiers are so restive under the "slaveocracy" rule at the camp that a flareup of serious proportions is expected almost momentarily. Only positive intervention of the federal government with drastic punishment delivered upon the heads of responsible authorities is seen as a possible palliative.

Particularly bitter are the men over the statements accredited to Atty. Truman K. Gibson and Gen Benjamin O. Davis that conditions are "in excellent shape," training "good," morale "high' and the overall picture "gratifying.' Enlisted men who said the two high officials were at Fort Huachuoa recently to investigate the post must have known that the reservation is a "key of dynamite" if they had their eyes open.

47c

SEP 11 1943

HIT REVENGE DRAFT OF GA. RACE EDITOR

Chicago Defender

Probe Of Board Asked By Scott — See Link To Lynch Expose

Chicago, Illinois

ATLANTA. (ANP) — Col. James N. Keelin Jr., director of selective service of Georgia, Saturday was called upon to investigate Albany (Ga.) Draft Board No. 1, which it is charged showed prejudice in the army induction of Editor A. C. Searles, of the Southwest Georgian, an Albany newspaper.

The request for investigation came from C. A. Scott, southern vice president of the Negro Newspaper Publishers' association and general manager of the Atlanta Daily World.

Searles' case was recently discussed with national selective service officials in Washington by Mr. Scott and members of the publishers executive committee. It was contended at this conference and at the annual association meeting in Louisville that Searles was eligible for deferment under Selective Service Occupational Directive No. 29, which states that managing editors and other essential employes of newspapers are eligible for consideration for deferment. Searles was refused a deferment and was inducted the first week in June this year.

Prior to Searles' induction, he expressed the belief that the speed with which he was given re-classification grew out of the exposure by his newspaper of the midnight abduction and lynching of Robert Hall at Newton, Ga., on Jan. 29.

According to Mr. Scott, further evidence shows that the Albany local board attempted to intimidate the man that Editor Searles left to carry on his paper by sending police after him and threatening to put the FBI on him and the paper because of the board's displeasure with an article that appeared in the June 26 issue. As a result of the pressure that the local board brought on the new publisher, the publication of the paper was suspended.

Col. Keelin was asked to investigate the board because "this type of action is a serious threat to the existence of the Negro press," which Mr. Scott contended "is essential to our war effort by printing news of interest to Negroes and thereby keeping up their morale."

47c

AUG 7 1943

Globe & Independent
Nashville. Tenn.

Put Illiterates In Army Before Fathers, Is Plea

DEC 10 1943

Mass Meeting In Chicago Wants Gov't To Draft 500,000 Colored Men

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 9—(ANP)—Utilization of 500,000 single Negro illiterates before drafting pre-Pearl Harbor fathers for noncombat service, was urged at a mass meeting of the National Negro council Monday at the Metropolitan Community church.

A resolution adopted also urged the government to make provision for a primary education for these illiterates. The group requested that President Roosevelt issue an executive order "prohibiting the war department from its present undemocratic policy of segregating and discrimination against a million Negro soldiers by denying Negroes combat service and relegating them to engineer labor and miscellaneous divisions."

Other requests were that a higher quota of Negro nurses in the army, admission of Negro women as WAVES and SPARS, and defeat of the Senate proposal for soldier voting Congress neglected to protect the rights of Negro soldiers to cast a ballot in the southern poll tax states."

47c

DEC 10 1943

Amsterdam Star-News
New York. N. Y.

Bias Claimed In Dixie Case

Say Publisher Was Eligible For Deferment Under Ruling

ATLANTA, (ANP)—Col. James N. Keelin Jr., director of selective service of Georgia, Saturday was called upon to investigate Albany (Ga.) Draft Board No. 1, which it is charged showed prejudice in the army induction of Editor A. C. Searles, of the Southwest Georgian, an Albany weekly newspaper. The request for investigation came from C. A. Scott, southern vice president of the Negro Newspaper Publishers' association and general manager of the Atlanta Daily World.

Searles' case was recently discussed with national selective service officials in Washington by Mr. Scott and members of the publishers executive committee. It was contented at this conference and at the annual association meeting in Louisville that Searles was eligible for deferment under Selective Service Occupational Directive No. 29, which states that managing editors and other essential employes of newspapers are eligible for consideration for deferment. Searles was refused a deferment and was inducted the first week in June this year.

Prior to Searles' induction, he expressed the belief that the speed with which he was given re-classification grew out of the exposure by his newspaper of the midnight abduction and lynching of Robert Hall at Newton, Ga., on Jan. 29.

According to Mr. Scott, further evidence shows that the Albany local board attempted to intimidate the man that Editor Searles left to carry on his paper by sending police after him and threatening to put the FBI on him and the paper because of the board's displeasure with an article that appeared in the June 26 issue. As a result of the pressure that the local board brought on the new publisher, the publication of the paper was suspended.

Col. Keelin was asked to investigate the board because "this type of action is a serious threat to the existence of the Negro press," which Mr. Scott contended "is essential to our war effort by printing news of interest to Negroes and thereby keeping up their morale."

On Feb. 6, Searles carried an article regarding the Hall lynching naming the Baker county sheriff and two deputies as perpetrators of the crime. Quite a furore resulted. Immediately after the appearance of the article, the draft board reacted. Searles was then 3-A, but two days after the appearance of his paper in Albany, was ordered to report for a physical examination. Three days after the examination he received a card indicating that he had been re-classified to 1-A. Searles asserted that he was not given the opportunity to appear before the board, nor to appeal the classification.

On the same date that Searles reported for induction, June 19, the Southwest Georgian carried a signed article by the editor stating that he was not opposed to service in the army, but felt that his board had not dealt with him fairly.

Then on June 26, Albany Local Board No. 1 addressed an unsigned card to "Editor-Publisher of Southwest Georgian" directing an appearance before the board on June warning him not [illegible]ore it. Thisbout the suspension of their only 28 and ordering that a copy of the was interpreted by Mr. Scott as be-ource of information about Southwest Georgian be brought to ing a [illegible] misuse of local boardegroes.

the board's headquarters. Typed power and a pointed effort to inon the card and underscored in red timidate the Negro press.
were these words, "Bring This The pressure tactics of the Al-Subpoena With You." bany board, it was felt, were so
The man whom Searles had left plainly evident that those left in to carry on his paper answered this charge deemed it unwise to continue Subpoena" after a police officer had publication of the newspaper. Read-called at his office [illegible] day before ers of the paper are quite concerned

47c

AUG 7 1943

Proportion of Negroes in Army High, Says Hershey's Report

Kansas City Call Kansas City, Mo.

SEP 24 1943

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Official information that 375,059 Negroes have been inducted into the army out of a total of 476,728 called for military service from a list in excess of [illegible] registrants, is contained in the second report of the operation of selective service for 1942 submitted to the President April 3. The number of inductees is "higher than the proportion of the population and of the registrations."

The report, covering the period from Dec. 7, 1941, to Dec. 5, 1942, was prepared under the direction of Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director, who stated that Negroes are serving in all "overseas theaters where American troops are stationed." It has just been released in book form.

Hershey's report also revealed that the number of Negroes now in service represents 10 per cent of registrants between the ages of 18 and 45 distributed through the U. S. but most of whom are concentrated in southern states under jurisdiction of the third, fourth and eighth service commands.

"There is no state entirely without Negro registrants, although North Dakota has only one 100th of one per cent," stated the summary. "Mississippi on the other hand, has the largest proportion of Negro registrants, 48.6 per cent. The largest actual number of Negro registrants is in Georgia. There are 230,511 Negroes in a total registration in the state of 66,266."

1.8 PER CENT ENLISTED

Statistics show that only 1.8 per cent of Negroes appear in Class 1-C, (enlisted) undoubtedly as a result of restriction placed upon voluntary enlistments of Negroes by the army, navy, marine corps and coast guard, continued the report. This situation has brought unfavorable reaction from both Negroes and whites, declared the report, but it added that selective service was not responsible. All requisition must come from the war department which the service simply fills, it is said, and the war department has several times imposed restrictions on the induction of Negroes because "facilities were not available for the reception and training of Negro soldiers."

"Editors of Negro newspapers, leaders of Negro organizations, and interested citizens of both races expressed dissatisfaction over the situation and demanded that Negroes constitute a proportionate part of the war army," informs the paper. "The war department finally announced that it was necessary to make light calls for Negroes in the early months of the year 1942, for the reasons stated, but that the calls would be increased in the later months so that by the end of 1942, at least 175,000 Negroes would be called for army service. With the aid of this release, selective service was able to reassure Negroes regarding their participation in the army and to tell them that they would be permitted to bear their share of the fight for the preservation of democracy throughout the world. A definite threat to the patriotic enthusiasm of Negro citizens was thereby removed.

BOARDS MISUNDERSTOOD

Much of the same condition prevailed with respect to enlistment of Negro officer candidates, said Hershey's report. Many state and local boards misunderstood that Negro officer material was desired and it was necessary to issue a directive to them expressly asking for officer candidates. This situation was cleared up although not in a wholly satisfactory manner due to the continued "inherent uncertainty" in the volunteer office candidate program.

Rejection of Negroes for physical, mental or moral reasons, represent 18.7 per cent of the total, the report went on. A smaller percentage was disclosed in Class 11-A and 11-B, occupational deferments, due in part, said the paper to "the fact that ordinarily many Negroes do not occupy key positions in the industries [illegible] regarded as essential because of their "lack of technical training, to union discrimination, and to discriminatory employment policies." Only 1.2 per cent are officials deferred by law, and 2.2 per cent are deferred because they are conscientious objectors.

According to the report the greatest cause for rejection of Negroes by tre army is venereal disease, but illiteracy likewise presents a serious problem. A four month's study made by selective service during the summer and early fall of 1941 indicates that the rate is five times that of whites.

EDUCATORS INTERESTED

"Several groups of educators in states most seriously affected have expressed interest and concern in the problem and have undertaken to extend their facilities and personnel so as to make some contribution in this direction," the report said. "It would be helpful if all conferences of the war department, the selective service system, the office of education and other government agencies directed toward the relief of this situation would include Negro educators. In the sections of the country where the largest number of illiterates is found, educational systems for Negroes and whites are separate.

"In the planning of programs to increase the functional literacy of registrants in these sections of the country, Negro educators could do constructive work on the planning groups so as to give the most intelligent and experienced direction to plans that are projected for operation among illiterate Negroes."

List Number Of Men Rejected

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

State Selective Service officials, with headquarters in Atlanta, stated Thursday that the percentage of inductees rejected in Georgia was 33.3 instead of 27.8, as reported by officials in Washington.

Statistics released from the nation's capital were compiled in an anual report of the Selective Service System, covering the period from the first inductions in 1940 through November, 1942 .

The breakdown from Washington showed that the number sent to Georgia induction stations in the 26-period was 89,373 with a total of 24,889 rejections. Of this total, 58,004 were white with 14,298 rejected, and 31,369 Negroes with 10,591 rejected.

State officials indicated that the percentage of rejections were high at present because, "we are scraping the bottom of the barrel and reaching men who do not represent the average physical condition."

Figures for other Southern states follow:

South Carolina—Total sent, 59,647, with 21,033 rejected, for percentage of 35.3. Of these, 36,460 were white, with 11,521 rejected; Negroes, 23,187, with 9,512 rejected.

Alabama — Total sent, 101,232, with 33,248 rejected, for percentage of 32.8. Of these, 61,258 were white, with 16.952 rejected; Negroes, 39,974, with 16,294 rejected.

Florida — Total sent, 67,384, with 20,487 rejected, for percentage of 30.4. Of these, 44,463 were white with [illegible],626 rejected; Negroes, 22,921, with 7,861 rejected.

Tennessee — Total sent, 109,579, with 33,248 rejected, for percentage of 25.8. Of these, 84,731 were white, with 18,554 rejected; Negroes, 24,848, with 9.763 rejected.

Virtually All Convicted Are Religious Fanatics

Negroes Represent Less Than 2 Per Cent Of Draft Dodgers Jailed

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

SEP 11 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 9—Fewer than 100 Negro draft dodgers, or less than two per cent of the total 6,116 persons convicted of Selective Service Act violations from October 1940 to June 30, 1943, have been convicted and are now serving terms ranging from nine months to 15 years in 11 federal prisons, according to information made public here this week by Asst. Atty. Gen. Wendell Berge, in charge of the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice.

Practically all of the Negroes convicted are members of sects or organizations opposing compliance with the Selective Service Act. Of 73 Negro draft dodgers named this week by the Federal Bureau of Prisons as inmates of federal prisons, 54 were members of the Negro Moslem cult; 17 members of the International Reassemble of the Church of Freedom League, Inc.; one a member of the Moorish Science Temple and one a member of the Ethiopian World Federation.

LONG SENTENCE

The stiffest sentence—15 years in Leavenworth penitentiary—was received by Ethelbert A. Broaster of New Orleans, La., leader of the International Reassemble Church of Freedom League, Inc., charged with counseling others to evade the draft. All others convicted received sentences ranging from nine months to five years, with a majority of them three years, except Roynell Lawson, a ring leader in Broaster's organization, who was sent to Leavenworth for eight years, three months and six days on a conviction for draft evasion.

The largest number of convictions was in Chicago and New Orleans, accounting for 37 and 17, respectively; the remainder being New Jersey with ten, Kansas with seven and Michigan and the District of Columbia with one each.

NOT "FIFTH COLUMNISTS"

None of the persons convicted was proved to have had any connections with alien or enemy agents. The Negro Moslem cult—like Jehovah's Witnesses, which according to Berge, accounted for 1,253 of the persons convicted does not recognize the Government of the United States as their sovereign. Members of this cult deny that they are Negroes and renounce "slave names" given them at birth as "degrading." They adopt Moslem names or else resort to the practice of adding the Moorish title "Bey" to the names given them at birth. Many of those convicted are listed in prison records only by their first names and the letter "X". Thus prison records show "John XX" and "John 3X" as inmates of the Sandstone federal prison; "Winifred B. Bey, Sr." at the Springfield prison; "Emmanuel Mohammed" (Robert Bridgeman) at Milan prison.

DOUBTFUL STATUS

Although these cultists claim to be conscientious objectors, this is not the reason for their conviction. Mr. Berge pointed out that the violators who profess conscientious objection are fined and imprisoned for the same reason as are other violators of the Selective Service Act, not because of their beliefs or scruples regarding war. Machinery has been set up under the Act, he said, to pass upon the validity of claims for exemption on grounds of conscientious objection. If the claim is not granted, and the person then refuses to perform full or limited service to which he is ordered, his status is the same as any other violator of the Act. His professed status as a conscientious objector, Mr. Berge said, is merely incidental to his actual status as a lawbreaker.

47c-1943

Segregation Means Discrimination

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

AUG 28 1943

It is trite but true that segregation means discrimination, and the recent report of the Selective Service administration on the drafting of Negroes proves it once more.

This report asserts that a disproportionate number of colored selectees were rejected because of illiteracy and venereal disease largely, and that they represented 18.7 of all persons classified as 4-F in 1942.

These are the ills and handicaps imposed by poverty, jim-crowism and discrimination, for it is axiomatic that they decrease with economic opportunity, adequate educational and medical facilities, proper housing and wholesome cultural atmosphere.

The fact that this disproportion of Negroes was rejected for military service for these reasons is an indictment of this civilization and a mockery of democracy.

The report tells us that as as a result of this high proportion of colored 4-F's, "calls for Negroes to meet quotas had to be raised considerably."

This is a confession that the non-discriminatory clauses in the Selective Service act are being violated by setting up a Negro quota and a white quota instead of a State quota.

It means that the system of jim-crow units upon which the Army and Navy stubbornly insist makes for discrimination against Negroes because a large number of Negroes were drafted who should not have been drafted for the reason that other Negroes were rejected and a "Negro quota" had to be filled.

Without a segregated system, men would be selected as their order numbers were called, regardless of so-called race, but with a segregated system the draft boards select "Negroes" rather than Americans in 1-A.

The United States and her Allies seem on the road to winning this war for democracy and freedom, but after victory, what will she have actually won if this vicious and all-pervading system of jim-crowism remains and continues to grow stronger and stronger?

What shall it profit a nation to win the whole world, yet lose its soul?

THE HORIZON

BY P. L. PRATTIS

AUG 28 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

SEVERAL weeks ago, the writer posed a simple problem in arithmetic for Courier readers and other Negroes. It was pointed out that during the last 80 years the Japanese in this country, who now number approximately 120,000, had accumulated two billion dollars in wealth. Against these figures was set the fact that American Negroes during the last 80 years had also accumulated two billion dollars in wealth. There are thirteen million American Negroes. The figures do not speak too well for Negroes. This writer then speculated on the possibility of increasing the total wealth of Negroes in this country quickly through the purchase and saving of War Bonds. It was shown that if five million Negroes purchased one $25 bond each month — and held on to it— the purchases would amount to one hundred and twenty-five million dollars in one month . . to one billion dollars in eight months . . . to two billion dollars in 16 months . . and to three billion dollars in 24 months, or two years.

Mr. Prattis

In other words, through the purchase and saving of War Bonds, American Negroes might accumulate in the next two years one and one-half times the wealth they have amassed since Emancipation. Spread out among thirteen million Negroes, the obligation would amount to only $1.79 a week for each. Some could not afford that much. Others could afford much more. It seems that the job could be done through proper organization.

It was suggested that some of our organizations, with an eye on our economic future, might be disposed to try to organize Negroes to save War Bonds. The problem to solve was the organization of Negroes to save.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT OFFERS SOLUTION

AN answer—possibly a solution—to the problem has come. The answer has come through the National Organization Division of the United States Treasury. Mr. J. L. Houghteling, head of that division, is interested that Americans—not just Negroes—should save their bonds to aid their security in the post-war period. He believes that in the conversion to peace endeavors, the money of all Americans is going to be needed. He believes that part of the future of the common man in America is going to depend on how much money the common man is going to have in his pocket.

As a consequence, Mr. Houghteling has placed the resources of his division behind a national Five-Year Savings Plan to be promoted through small units in every State in the Nation. Americans are going to be asked to organize themselves into units of not more than 100 persons to save War Bonds TOGETHER. The Treasury department will foster the organization of these WAR BOND SAVINGS clubs among Negroes and whites. One such club with 100 members, saving one $25 bond together each month, can save bonds with a maturity value of $2,500 in one month, with a maturity value of $30,000 in one year and with a maturity value of $150,000 in five years. The proposition is as simple as that.

If these War Bond Savings clubs can be organized throughout the nation, among Negroes and whites, the common man will come out of the war with billions of dollars in his collective pocket. Organized in these units, he will be able to look around and to consider ways of using his money collectively to advance his cause. The joint saving of these bonds is going to improve the promise of the future for [illegible]

WILLARD ALLEN ORGANIZES UNITS

MR. WILLARD ALLEN, well known fraternal leader, who is now an executive in the Organizations Division of the Treasury department, has already gone to work to promote saving through the organization of War Bond Savings clubs. Six such clubs have already been set up in Baltimore. One healthy club with nearly five thousand dollars in bonds in its treasury is operating in Pittsburgh. It has been operating less than two months. At the convention of the National Negro Insurance association in Chicago, the proposal for a Five-Year Savings Plan, as presented by Mr. Allen, was endorsed. The proposal is to be placed before the National Negro Business league at its convention in Baltimore, when Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, will address the delegates.

The idea is simple and clear. Anybody can organize a War Bond Savings club with the idea of having 100 persons save one $25 War Bond together every month or every two months. All any such club has to do to get somewhere is to stick to its plan. The savings mount rapidly. There is no risk. The bonds of each member belong to him. Nobody can use them or cash them but him. But by saving with others, he can become a part of a force more powerful than he would be alone. Anyone interested in organizing such a unit, or who already has an organization and wishes to become a part of the Five-Year Savings Plan, should write to Mr. Willard Allen, War Finance Division, Treasury Department, 14[illegible] G Street, N.W., Washington. D. C. Mr. Allen will be glad to help you to organize and to make your organization an integral part of the national Five-Year Savings Plan.

Treasury Endorses Idea to Organize War Bond Savings Clubs Based on Five-Year Plan

---

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala

Army Rejections

Eye defects were the chief cause of rejection among white 18 and 19-year-old Selective Service registrants called up for physical examination by local boards and induction stations during December, 1942, and January and February, 1943, whereas for Negroes in the same age group and during the same period the leading cause for rejection was educational deficiency. Col. Leonard G. Rowntree, Medical Reserve Corps, United States Army; Kenneth H. McGill and Thomas I. Edwards, PhD., Washington, D. C., report in The Journal of the American Medical Association for Sept. 25.

The next nine leading causes of rejection among white registrants in decreasing order of occurrence were mental disease, musculoskeletal (muscle and bone) defects, cardiovascular (heart and blood vessel) defects, ear defects, hernia, neurologic defects, educational deficiency, underweight and mental deficiency.

The remaining nine leading causes of rejection among Negroes in the same age group were syphilis, cardiovascular defects, mental disease, musculoskeleta defects, hernia, eye defects, neurolgic defects, mental deficiency and tuberculosis. Half of the rejections of Negro youths resulted from educational deficiency or from syphilis.

"In the following broad groups of defects," the authors explain, "white youths had higher rejection rates than Negroes: eyes, ears, nose, kidneys, nervous system, feet, endocrines, overweight and underweight.

"In the following broad groups of defects, Negro youths had higher rejection rates than white youths: tuberculosis, cardivoscular disease, hernia, genital disease, syphilis, gonorrhea, skin disease, educational deficiency and mental disease."

It is explained that in compiling the data, registrants have been counted as rejected if they were not accepted for general military service. "However," the authors say, "a substantial number of registrants who were not acceptable for general military service were inducted for limited service. If these men accepted for limited service only had been counted as inducted for the purposes of this paper the rejection rates would have been lower, particularly for rejections due to defective vision and musculoskeletal defects."

Of the white youths called up for physical examination, 23.8 per cent were rejected either at local boards or at induction stations, whereas the rejection rates for Negro youths was almost twice as high, 45.5 per cent.

The rejection rates for 18 and 19 year olds ar eonly slightly lower than those for older registrants, but the authors warn, "caution should be exercised in drawing conclusions from thi ssince . . . a large proportion physically fit youths were not liable for examination either (a) because of previous enlistment in the armed forces, (b) because of programs that postponed examination and induction until a course of training has been completed or (c) because of employment in war industry or agriculture.

"The most striking difference between the two racial groups concerns the high rate of rejections among Negroes for educational deficiency and for syphilis. Educational deficiency accounted for 121.7 rejections per thousand Negro youths examined, or for 26.7 per cent of all Negro rejections. Syphilis accounted for 112.0 rejections per thousand examined, or for 24.6 per cent of all Negro rejections. . . . Eye defects and mental disease, the leading causes of rejection among white youths, ranked seventh and fourth respectively among Negro youths. . . . Musculoskeletal defects are in third place among white youths and in fifth place among Negroes, cardiovascular defects are fourth in importance among white youths and third among Negroes. E[illegible] defects and underweight appear on the list of ten leading causes of rejection among white youths but are not important as causes of rejection among Negroes. Conversely, syphilis and tuberculosis, listed among the first ten causes of rejection for Negroes, are lower in order of importance among white youths. . . ."

SEP 28 1943

It is explained that determination of educational deficiency and of mental deficiency was made at induction stations on the basis of tests designed to measure the individual's capacity to absorb basic training.

Summary Of Draft Problem

(1) Hamilton Fish, New York Republican congressman, tells House of Representatives between 200,000 and 300,000 men could be added to the armed forces without difficulty if colored men who have been rejected fo[illegible]tary service because of a lack of education were rescre[illegible] [illegible] reclassified.

(2) It wa[illegible]sclosed that 641,000 colored draft registrants under the Selective Service Act had been rejected for military duty, nearly as many as were accepted—688,000.

(3) Mr. Fish declared that after two years of war he knew of no colored infantry combat troops being used in Europe or any other theatre of operations.

(4) Should these men, rejected for military duty because of education, be reclaimed, he told the House of Representatives, it would not be necessary to draft so large a number of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers.

(5) Sterling fighting record in first World War of soldiers lacking in education was cited by Congressman Fish as brilliant.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk. Virginia

New York Republican Declares 300,000 Rejected For Lack Of Education Can Be Reclaimed As First Class Fighting Men

4

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Rescreening and reclassification of 641,000 rejected colored draft registrants as a means of obtaining 200,000 or 300,000 additional men for the armed forces was urged by Representative Hamilton Fish, Republican, of New York, during debate last week on the bill to halt the further drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers until the induction of all other eligibles. Mr Fish said the armed forces could obtain an additional 200,000 or 300,000 men with[illegible] any difficulty if colored men who have been re[illegible] for military service because of a lack of educa[illegible] were rescreened and reclassified.

Selective Service figures showing the number of colored men rejected because of illiteracy, Mr. Fish said, "were startling."

SOME OF BEST UNABLE TO READ OR WRITE

Mr. Fish, who served as an infantry commander of colored troops in World War I, said that some of the best men in the 369th Infantry, whose colors were decorated with the Croix de Guerre, were unable to read or write.

"One of the best men in my outfit, George Jackson, of Goshen, New York," he said, "could not read or write, yet he could take a machine gun apart and put it together again, blindfolded, when hardly anybody else could do it with their eyes wide open.

"It does not require educational qualifications or school or college certificates, or ability to read and write to shoot a rifle, or to have good eyesight, to be able to march and fight in defense of your country."

NEARLY 50 PERCENT CALLED REJECTED

Mr. Fish disclosed that a total of 641,000 colored draft registrants under the Selective Service Act had been rejected for milit[illegible] duty and th[illegible]olored reg[illegible] induc[illegible] 688,000.

[illegible] said most of the rejections of colored registrants were due to a lack of educational qaulifications.

"I submit," he said, "there ought to be a rescreening and reclassification of all these rejected Negroes. They want to serve in the armed forces, but they are shut out largely because of that single fact that they are not able to read and write.

"I submit that they will make just as good soldiers if properly trained; and they will shoot just as well if they have the proper eyesight.

They are physically strong. Most of them from the South come off the farms and are healthy specimens and will probably make good soldiers.

"So, if you want manpower in the Army, if you want to increase it by two or three hundred thousand, then I suggest you rescreen or reclassify these 641,000 Negroes who have been rejected under the Selective Service Act."

ON BATTLE FRONT IN 12 MONTHS IN LAST WAR

Mr. Fish added that the United States has "been in this war twenty-three months—on the 7th of December it will be two years. In the last war colored troops were on the front line fighting within twelve months after war was declared. I know that to be a fact because my own reg[illegible] was in the front [illegible] A[illegible] 1918.

"Almost two years have gone by and I do not know of any colored infantry combat troops anywhere, either in Europe or in the far Pacific or anywhere else in a combat zone.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The only combat unit in the North African theatre of operations, as reported by the Guide war correspondent recently was the 99th Fighter Squadron, first Air Corps tactical unit sent overseas. A squadron, it is well known, consists of less than 300 men, including ground crews, mechanics, pilots, armorers, communications and ordnance technicians. The Guide correspondent wrote last May that there were no colored combat troops in all of North [illegible]ica. Since then he has reported seeing no Negro fighting soldiers in Sicily or England, despite thorough searches for them.)

"They are serving as stevedores, noncombat engineers, in quartermaster detachments, and in unloading transports, but practically none of the 600,000 colored soldiers are in combat units fighting in the front line where they want to be and where they ought to be and have a right to be, the same as any other America[illegible] [illegible]ops."

The House, with only one dissenting vote, last Tuesday passed the bill to halt the further drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers until the induction of all other eligibles.

NOV 6 1943

47c-1943
Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Selective Service Rejections: A Lesson

THERE is food for sober thought in the facts disclosed in the second report by Selective Service on the rejection rate for men called for military service. According to General Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, the rate of rejection of Negroes is four times that of white registrants. For the former the rate is 112 per one thousand, and for the latter 27.8 per one thousand. The combined rate of rejection was 38.2 per thousand.

Among the reasons for rejections are physical or moral unfitness and illiteracy. In the latter category there were 1,228 colored men rejected during the three month period of April, May, and June, 1942.

The rates of rejection are not surprising if one is familiar with the environmental conditions in which the two races live. On the matter of illiteracy, the facts concerning the unequal educational provisions made for the two races, particularly in the deeper South and in the rural areas in all of the dual-system states, plus the virtual non-enforcement of the compulsory attendance laws where Negroes are concerned, make impossible any other results than the shocking rejection rate. The facilities provided, the per-student expenditures, the drawback of salary differentials are taking their toll.

One perhaps overlooked by-product of this situaiton is that, since the draft boards will continue to call other eligible selectees until the colored quotas are filled, a higher percentage of the physicially and morally fit and educated Negroes will be called into the armed services than from the white group. Assuming an equality of casualties and disabled men, a larger proportion of the flower of the race among Negroes will be lost than from other racial groups. That is not a prospect to be faced without misgivings.

Similiarly, on the score of physical unfitness and other reasons for rejections, America has only itself to blame. It has definitely proscribed the Negro group to the underfed, poorly housed, and underpaid Forgotten Man category. Squalid living, unavoidable under a vicious social system, is not a factor making for good health.

The Negro has not had adequate general hospital facilities, he has a disproportionate share of the welfare centers and tuberculosis sanatoriums, he has makeshift or no public parks and playgrounds, nor municipal recreation centers and swimming pools.

His public schools are not equipped for physical training courses in too many cases, often where the state laws require them in high schools. Public and private clinics are few and far between. The state and local health programs, for him, are mostly on paper. Between all these handicaps, he is remarkably healthy, everything considered.

But the Negro's actual and relative disqualification for military service is a drain on American manpower that ought not to exist. If America is to build for a more secure future, it will take to heart the findings of the Selective Service officials and begin to spread the benefits of democracy to all the people in equal measure.

The Northwest
Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

Million Men Rejected by Army For Illiteracy

AUG 25 1943

Washington, Aug [illegible]—Almost 1,000,000 men have been rejected because of illiteracy, according to a report made recently by a Senate Education and Labor subcommittee.

Citing figures of the Army Induction Board, the report of the Senate group stated that 28 out of every 1,000 men called up for induction were rejected because they had not attained a fourth-grade education. Otherwise they were qualified for military service.

The rate of rejection per 1,000 men ran from zero in Wyoming to 136.32 in Georgia. The rate for Whites ran as high as 107.11 in Tennessee, and for Negroes as high as 256.29 in Georgia.

47c

Defender
Chicago. Ill.

SEP 4 1943

Detailed Report On Draft Setup Bares Discrimination In Army And War Jobs

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON. — Pointing out that there has been no change either in the basic legal prohibition against racial discrimination nor in the administrative provision for promoting sound racial relations in the Selective Service, Director Lewis B. Hershey, in his second annual report to President Roosevelt, discusses in detail the problems encountered in the induction of Negroes into the armed forces from December 7, [illegible] to December 5, 1942.

His report devotes a chapter to the racial problems faced by the Selective Service organization, and to the steps taken by the office of the director to overcome difficulties. Lieut. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, executive assistant to the director of Selective Service, has been responsible for the racial relations work of the organization.

The chapter "Negroes and Selective Service" reveals:

"Negroes in 1940 constituted 9.7 percent of the population and 10.4 per cent of the total registration. There was placed in the various subdivisions of Class 1-A, 18.9 per cent of the Negro registration, with classification still incomplete, and there was actually inducted 12.4 per cent of the total Negro registration. A total of 476 728 Negroes was called for military duty, and 375,059 were inducted. This is part of the manpower pool of 3,015,550 Negroes who constitute 10.4 per cent of the 29,029 125 registrants between the ages of 18 and 45.

"While the little over 3,000,000 Negro registrants included in the first. second, third and fifth registrations are, in general, distributed throughout the United States, they are largely in the Third, Fourth and Eighth Service commands Geographically, this represents the southern part of the United States. There is no state entirely without Negro registrants, although North Dakota has only one-hundredth of one per cent. Mississippi, on the other hand, has the largest proportion of Negro registrants—48.6 per cent. The largest actual number of Negro registrants is in Georgia There are 230 511 Negroes in a total registration in the state of 668,266.

Cites Restrictions

"It will be noted that the larger percentage of Negroes has been placed in classes immediately available for general or limited military service. Correspondingly, it will be noted that a relatively smaller number of Negroes who were placed in the deferred classes have been engaged in essential industry or essential agriculture, although the proportion of agricultural workers is greater than industrial workers. In short, comparatively few Negroes are deferred on industrial grounds, particularly in proportion to the number registered. The number of Negroes enlisting in the armed forces is small. This is true also of the number of conscientious objectors.

"A low percentage of Negroes appears in Class 1-C (enlisted) which contains registrants who voluntarily enlisted in the military service. The small proportion of Negroes. 1.3 per cent, is undoubtedly due to the restrictions on voluntary enlistment of Negroes in the army navy. marine corps and coast guard. This fact has caused unfavorable reaction in many communities with large Negro populations where it is felt that a disproportionate number of white men are being called to military service.

"The Selective Service System has made every effort to keep the calls for Negro and white registrants in balance in every local board throughout the country. With the cooperation of the army, it has been able to maintain this balance in calls through the Selective Service system, but the ability of white men to enlist freely in all of the armed forces contrasted with the restrictions placed on Negro enlistments has distorted the picture.

T[illegible] Calls For Men

"Classes 2-A, and 2-B, which represent men deferred for occupational reasons, contain relatively few Negroes. They were only 3 per cent of the registrants deferred in Class 2-A, which represents men deferred as necessary in jobs connected directly with essential civilian occupations. The proportion of Negroes is even smaller in Class 2-B, men holding necessary jobs directly connected with the war effort. The proportion of Negroes in this classification is 1.3 per cent. This is due in part at least. to the fact that ordinarily many Negroes do not occupy key positions in the industries now regarded as essential, due to their lack of technical training, to union discrimination, and to discriminatory employment policies.

"In class 4 B, officials deferred by law, there are a small number of Negroes, only 1.2 per cent. Negroes likewise are very sparsely represented among those given deferred classification in Class 4-E as conscientious objectors available only for civilian work of national importance. They are 2.2 per cent of this classification.

"Negro rejections constituted 18.7 per cent of the total in Class 4-F. These rejections are on physical, mental or moral grounds.

"One of the problems carried over from the peacetime Selective Service was the problem of calling Negro registrants according to their order numbers and in numbers that approximated the proportion of the total population. They wanted to participate in the war effort and in the training program. On the other hand, the War Department reduced the calls for Negroes after Pearl Harbor with the explanation that there was a lack of reception and training facilities for Negroes at the time.

"Editors of Negro newspapers, leaders of Negro organizations and interested citizens of both races expressed dissatisfaction over the situation and demanded that Negroes constitute a proportionate part of the war army. The War Department finally announced that it was necessary to make light calls for Negroes in the early months of the year of 1942, for the reasons stated, but that the calls would be increased in the later months so that by the end of 1942, at least 175,000 Negroes would be called for army service. With the aid of this release Selective Service was able to reassure Negroes regarding their participation in the army and to tell them that they would be permitted to bear their share of the fight for the preservation of democracy throughout the world. A definite threat to the patriotic enthusiasm of Negro citizens was thereby removed.

Evasion

"During the year, a number of cases of registrants, which number considerably less than 100 individuals among over 3,000,000 Negro registrants, were indicted for evasion of the Selective Service Act Some of these men were accused of such ordinary offenses as failing to register, falsifying questionnaire. failure to return questionnaire. and incorrect name and address on registration card. In some cases the failure to register or to report was based on the teachings of the religious sect to which the registrant belonged. There were some curious cases. Membership in one sect was alleged to change the registrant's nationality, membership in another changed his race. Another modified the basis for the computation of age so that the registrant considered himself either beyond or under the age of liability.

"One group of registrants did not comply with the law because the religious sect to which they belonged taught them not to engage in expeditionary warfare. There were at least three cases where registrants charged with failure to report for induction contended that their failure was due to incorrect racial designation not connected with the teaching of a religious sect. There were two arrests for failure to report to conscientious objector camps. There was one suicide and one attempt at suicide to evade service in the army because of alleged racial discrimination. Six men refused to report for induction because of the same reason. The small number of cases indicate clearly that evasion of the law was not a serious problem among the Negroes.

Racial Discrimination

"In all but one of these cases based on racial discimination the prejudice complained of was either in the country at large or in the armed forces. In one case, the defense was based on the grounds that separate calls issued by the Selective Service System for white and Negro registrants was a violation of the provision in the Selective Training and Service Act that 'In the selection and training of men under this act and in the interpretation and execution of the provisions of this act, there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race or color.

"The court denied the writ of habeas corpus in this case, holding that the man was bound to obey the order to report for induction and that any right he might have in the circumstances would certainly not exist until he had submitted himself to the induction process. Further activity in this case is expected.

"Several confidential studies have been made during the year under the auspices of the Bureau of Intelligence, Office of War Information, to determine the attitude of Negroes toward governmental agencies and programs. All of these studies have reported that Negroes believe the Selective Service System has operated with fairness. Some objections were met by investigators but these had to do with the treatment of Negro soldiers within the army and, according to one of these reports, 'their objections do not, of course, reflect on the handling of the Selective Service.'"

Jasper, Ala., Eagle
November 21, 1943

Colored Selectees To Leave November 1—

The following group of colored selectees, now home on 21-day furlough, will leave for Fort Benning, Ga., November 1 for induction into the armed forces.

Edgar D. Jordan, Ozesie C. Harris, Maxey Joe Williams, Ercy Lee Gibbs, Allen Bigby, Jr., Leander McDavid, John Wesley Henderson, Will Young, Jr., and Columbus Esan Sparks.

World-Telegram
New York, N. Y.

Father of 12 Inducted

By the Associated Press:

JACKSON, Miss., 1943.—Perry Booker, 36-year-old Negro porter, has been inducted into the army at Camp Shelby, and his wife and 12 children will receive an allotment of $320 a month. Three children are by a former wife.

Sheffield (Ala.) Standard & Times
November 12, 1943

ARMY ACCEPTS NEGROES

The following negroes have been accepted for the armed services, Mrs. Birdie Esslinger, clerk of Colbert county draft board, No. 1, announced Friday: army—Cleveland Holiday, Josh F. Ford, Sidney M. Hodges, Jr., Olion Baker, Jr., Harry Emmett Ricks, transfer from board 14, Birmingham; Irvin Waddle, transfer from board No. 7, Washington, D. C.

Sheffield (Ala.) Standard & Times
October 22, 1943

FIVE NEGROES ACCEPTED

The following negro registrants have been accepted for the army and navy from Colbert county draft board, No. 1, Mrs. Birdie Esslinger, clerk, reported Tuesday: Army: Willie L. Loveless, James L. Eady, Oscar Lovelace. Navy: Robert F. McCray, Roger W. Hayes.

Angelo Herndon Ordered Into 1-A Despite Activity

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

NEW YORK (ANP) — Angelo Herndon, principal in the sensational Georgia chaingang case of 1933, was ordered re-classified from 2-A to 1-A last week by Col. Arthur D. McDermott, selective service director for New York City, despite his essential activity as editor of the popular magazine, the Negro Quarterly.

Herndon was granted a six month deferment last May 2 by his local draft board because national headquarters of selective service at Washington have declared editors and other top executives of news publications "essential." Col McDermott, however, personally appealed the deferment before Appeals Board, which ordered the reclassification.

While organizing Negro and white tenant farmers in Georgia in 1933 Herndon was arrested and convicted for insurrection because as a Communist, under state law, he was considered a "potential revolutionary." The case attracted international attention and the decision was finally reversed by the U. S. Sureme Court in 1937 in a 5 to 4 decision.

Few Negroes Are Deferred: McNutt Sees Nothing Wrong

New York, N. Y.
Daily Worker

WASHINGTON (A N P)—Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower chairman, does not think that the low proportion of deferments given Negroes because of their essentiality in either war plants or necessary civilian activity is any reflection upon efforts being made to secure placement of Negroes and their upgrading in industry.

He revealed this viewpoint at his press conference last Monday.

According to figures contained in the 1943 report of the selective service system, only 3 percent of those in class IIA and 1.3 of those in II-B were Negroes. The first covers those essential to civilian activity while later are engaged in defense work.

EYE DEFECTS BAR MANY IN ARMY'S TESTS

Birmingham, Alabama

Mental Diseases High On List; Some Barred By Lack Of Education

Birmingham Post

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—The leading causes of draft rejections among 18 and 19 year olds are reported by Col. Leonard G. Rowntree, Kenneth H. McGill, and Dr. Thomas I. Edwards, of national headquarters of the Selective Service System, in the forthcoming issue of The Journal of the American Medical Assn.

For white youths, the 10 leading causes of rejection during December, 1942, and January and February, 1943, were, in decreasing order of occurrence: eye defects, mental disease, musculoskeletal defects, heart and blood vessel defects, ear defects, hernia, neurologic defects, educational deficiency, underweight and mental deficiency.

Lack Education

For Negroes during the same period the 10 leading rejetion causes were: educational deficiency, syphilis, heart and blood vessel defects, mental disease, musculoskeletal defects, hernia, eye defects, neurologic defects, mental deficiency, and tuberculosis.

Of the white youths called for physical examination, 23 per cent were rejected at local boards or induction stations. The rate was almost twice as high for Negroes, 45.5 per cent. The rates are only slightly lower than for older registrants, but the Selective Service officials point out one should be cautious in drawing conclusions from this.

Large numbers of physically fit 18 to 19 year oldes entered the armed forces by enlistment, and the Selective Service figures do not cover findings on these youths. An additional number are in schools or colleges and their examinations are postponed until after this training period. Still others are deferred because of employment in war industry or agriculture.

Standards Revised

Comparison of rejection causes between the 18 and 19 year old and the older men called up previously cannot be made very rapidly, because standards for eyes, teeth, and educational qualifications have been revised and increased attention given to psychiatric examination.

Between November, 1940, and May, 1941, the 10 leading causes of rejection for white and Negroes combined, ages 21 to 36, were: teeth, eyes, heart and blood vessel defects, musculoskeletal defects, mental and nervous defects, hernia, ears, feet, and tuberculosis and other lung defects.

Let's Do Our Part And Contend For Full Reward

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

We are impressed with the seriousness of the charges of cold indifference and sometimes, manifestly unfair treatment, of our soldiers and would-be soldiers, on the part of some Draft boards in local communities in the South. Such terms as "nigger" and "boy"; an occasional whipping by civilian police or train conductors; a jailing here or a killing there; all these add up to a most unpleasant and unhealthy picture for the Negro soldier and the Negro people. They most certainly do not help build morale nor cheer would-be-soldiers to look with pleasant anticipation upon the time when they will enter the service of their country.

We believe and fondly hope that local and National Selective Service officials will speedily end such bad acting on the part of such draft boards. Every sensible and sane step should be taken to ameliorate these conditions and to see that draft board officials take a more considerate view of the men who are committed to defending them in battle with their blood and their lives.

Our concern in this message however, is with the attitude of a small group of leaders, scarcely enough to be serious. In their efforts to correct these evil practices and to bring about conditions more conducive to morale-building, unwittingly, they have allowed themselves to be maneuvered into a position of mild indifference on the matter of the struggle in which we are engaged. They profess to see in the treatment of soldiers and civilians and the violence to citizens through race riots and so forth, a determination on the part of certain Americans that we shall have no part of the Four Freedoms.

We are prepared to admit the truth of such a view. But we are unprepared to go along with leaders, however well-meaning they may be, who despite the hardships and disappointments our boys face in the Armed services of their country, would give up the struggle for a better and brighter day; for a bigger and better America. Such a view, we contend, is the shortsighted one and can lead only to defeat and frustration of aim and purpose.

Benning 'Agricultural College' Plans To Train Soldiers in Food Arsenal

Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

BENNING, Ga., Dec. 27.—(AP)—The infantry plans to turn out a few farmers, as well as fighters.

Negro infantrymen who have attended agricultural school or who have had actual farming experience will be invited to attend an "agricultural college" at this largest infantry training center. Applicants will be given an opportunity to pick up training that will assure them an improved status in civilian life.

Instruction of the men will follow the infantry school pattern of "preparation, demonstration and application" and will embrace virtually every phase of farming—soil treatment, planting, crop rotation and animal husbandry.

Classes will be conducted along a schedule which will not interfere with the students' assigned duties and military training. Instructors will be officers in the Third Student Training Regiment who possess agricultural degrees or who were successful farmers before entering the Army.

The regiment acquired a 30-acre farm from the now inactivated Second Student Training Regiment which had operated it for two years. As in the past, crops harvested will be used to supplement rations of the regiment.

Colonel John D. Hill, regimental commander, placed Captain Jack D. West, commanding officer of Company C, in charge of the project. A garden tractor was bought to use in planting seasonal crops. Farm textbooks, pamphlets and studies submitted by leading agricultural colleges in the southeast will form a reference library for the students.

All Colors Unite In Battle For Right

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

47c Camps

It takes all races, creeds and colors to win democracy's great battle against the Axis. Shown here is a class in business training at Camp Gordon Johnston, Fla. Under Mrs. Lucy T. Ball, head instructor and her able assistants Misses Nancy Chambers, Gladys Fuhlbrugge and Helen Duffy, this class in shorthand and typing are getting additional training that will help to beat the Axis now and will prove advantageous after the duration. — (Photo by Corp. Bill Lyles.

Morale Sags At Camp Forrest As Jim Crow Rules With Iron Hand

NOV 6 - 1943

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

By DETON J. BROOKS
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

TALLAHOMA, Tenn.—This little town tacked on the map just a stone's throw from Camp Forrest is where General Sherman started his march to the sea during the Civil War.

And the whites both in town and in camp never seem to forget it. They seem determined to convince Negro troops here that war is just what General Sherman said it was.

Jim Crow rules the roost with an iron hand at Camp Forrest. Colored soldiers at this Tennessee armored post bitterly complain at the treatment they get here.

War is what General Sherman called it — at least to the Negro soldiers.

In talking to hundreds of soldiers and officers during a recent tour of this maneuver area, they cited any number of humiliating incidents which they have suffered and which tend to eat away morale so necessary in developing an effective fighting force.

'Black Plague'

Here's a description one northern-born soldier gave me of Camp Forrest: "My unit as well as all colored units, with the exception of the WACs, are isolated in one section of the camp, as if by contact we'd give our white brothers-in-arms the 'black plague.'

"When we are fortunate enough to get into the camp theatre, we're segregated. Any time there's a good picture, they won't let us in. They tell us it's crowded.

"They bar us from the camp library. Why they even refused to let a captain of the 931st Field Artillery Battalion stay in there. Yet there's no library for us. Since they put the captain out, they're building a dinky addition to our recreation hall. But as yet that's not finished.

"The facilities that we do have, like our recreation hall, and Post Exchange, are small and inadequate. While the white boys have large buildings with separate game room and reading rooms, ours are one-room affairs.

"The post command seems to spare no efforts to let us know that we are different, something apart from the other soldiers."

I visited in Tullahoma and found conditions equally as bad as the soldiers described within it. The colored USO center is located near the end of town in what is known as the Negro district. There is one medium-sized lounge room, a kitchen and a room which could pass for an office. This in contrast to four large, spacious buildings for white troops which are strategically located in various sections of the village.

The very location is depressing. All around the center are hovels and shacks, as bad as the worst to be found elsewhere in the South. The director of the USO club is a Chicagoan and former football player of Fenger high school by the name of Emmet Spurlock. Together with his wife and curly-headed little 10-year-old son, he is forced to live in a trailer because the whites won't rent him a decent house. He is striving manfully to carry on a real recreation program under the most impossible handicaps.

Can't Get Train Tickets

The railroad station is another rotten spot. Colored soldiers complain that they often miss their train when leaving on short precious furloughs because the clerks in the station won't sell them tickets until after all the whites have been waited on. Then it is too late to catch the train.

The soldiers say further that no matter how many men are travelling, they are allowed only one Jim-Crow car. If this is overcrowded they either have to ride in the baggage car or forfeit their travel privileges.

With the exception of the colored USO club, there is no decent place for a Negro soldier to go in town. Tullahoma is the typical southern village which is still fighting the Civil War. It will be remembered that it was from this town that a white soldier attached to the Illinois 33rd division had to be escorted back to camp by military police as a protective measure for asking to see where General Sherman started his march to the sea.

Southern Commander

Investigation shows that all attempts to improve conditions for Negro troops in this camp have been blocked by post commanders. It was during the administration of Col. Millard F. Waltz that the theatre incident involving officers of the 931st Field Artillery Battalion occurred. It was Col. Waltz who, backed by MP's carrying tommy guns, ordered these officers to leave the theatre for sitting in the non-segregated section. Col. Waltz, a southerner by birth, made no provision for Negro troops.

He has since been relieved by Col. Frank T. Addington, another southerner who boasts Virginia as his home. It is reported that he is an ardent believer in segregation although he is trying to make some provision for the recreation of colored troops. It is he who is building the "dinky" library addition. And he has given Negroes a couple of nights a month in the post dance hall.

The net effect of these conditions is extremely low morale among the troops. The northern boys and the more intelligent southern ones are bitterly and deeply resentful. They only go into Tullahoma when they have to. They spend most of their time in the camp areas.

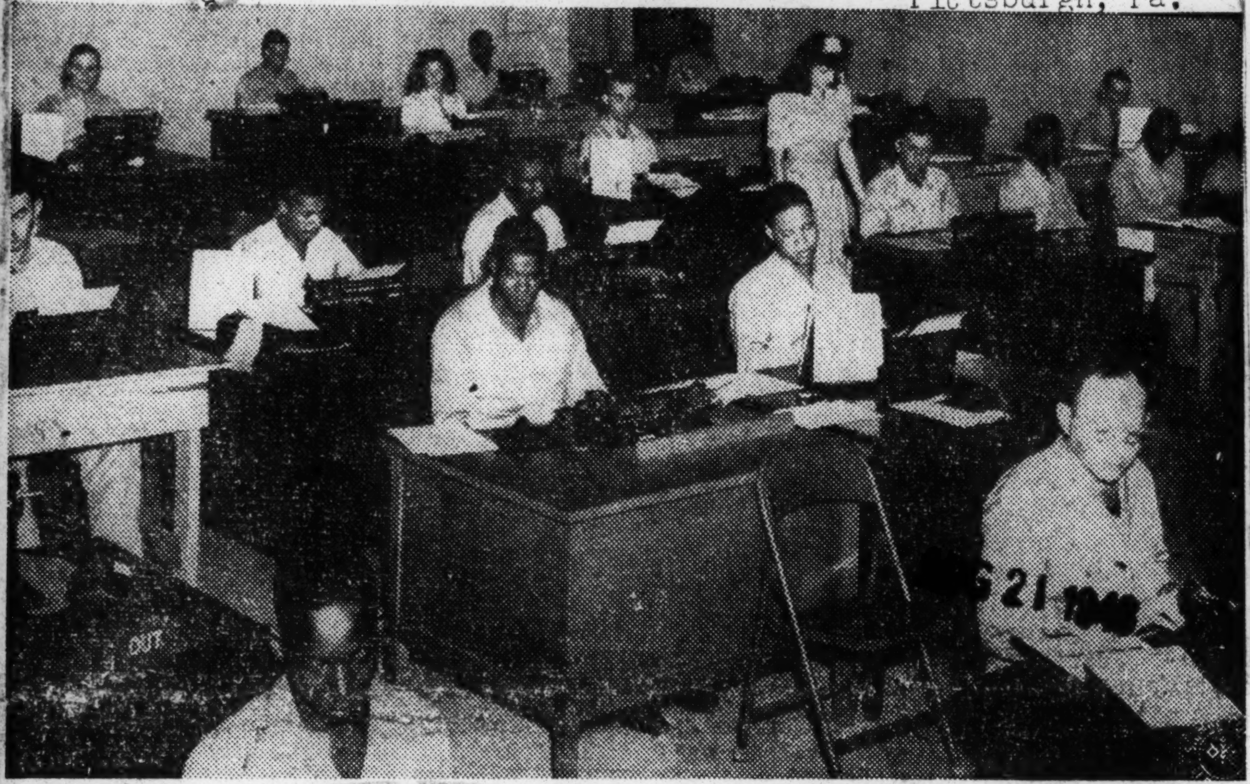
The lower calibre southern boys, most of whom are in the engineering units, are not as resentful, but their appearance belies the state of their morale.

They are dirty, some of them look as if they haven't had a bath for a month. Their uniforms are untidy. They don't have the snap and zip which is a natural part of a fighting man.

Apparently their white officers are doing nothing to inject into them the feeling that they are part of a proud fighting American army which is destined to make a world safe for the democratic ideology.

DEMOCR[illegible] IS THE KEYNOTE HERE

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.



AUG 21 1943

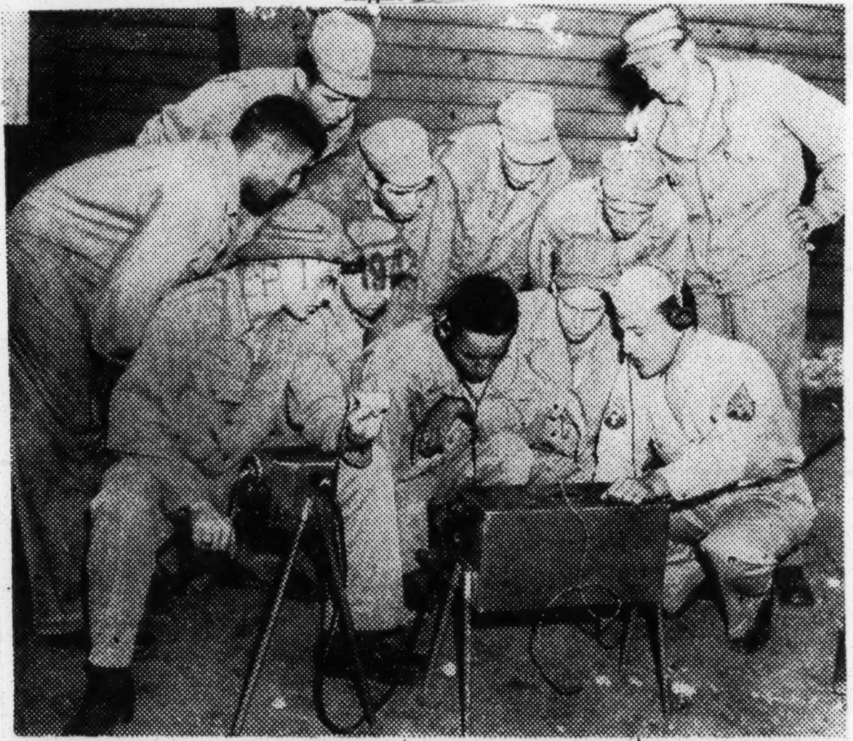
It takes all races, creeds and colors to win democracy's great battle against the Axis. Shown here is a class in business training at Camp Gordon Johnston, Florida. Under Mrs. Lucy T. Ball, head instructor and her able assistants, Misses Nancy Chambers, G[illegible] Fohlbrugge, and Helen Duffy, this class in shorthand and typing, are getting additional training that will help beat the Axis now and will prove advantageous after the war.—U.S. Army Signal Corps Photo.

1C

AUG 21 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

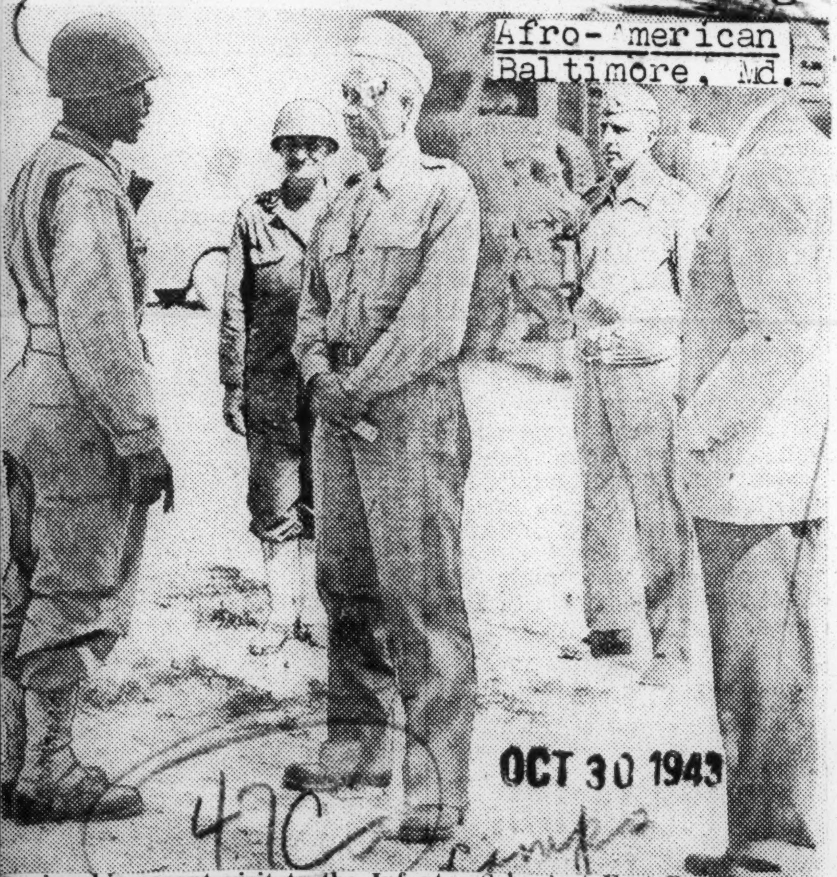
Sgt. Henry Camp, instructor in the radio division, enlisted men's department, Eastern Signal Corps Schools, Fort Monmouth, checks on the progress of a soldier-student. He is T/5 Leslie Wheeler of Montclair, N.J. Wheeler is a graduate of Montclair High School and a former radio repair student at the New York Technical Institute's night school.



Technician Fourth Grade Bert Savitt instructs signal corps students in the operation of field radio sets at the enlisted men's school, Fort Monmouth. In center is Pvt. Thomas Green of 503 E. Market Street, Xenia, Ohio. In civilian life, Green was a junior aircraft mechanic. He was inducted into the army last April.

Member of Parliament at Benning

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.



OCT 30 1943

47C Camps

During his recent visit to the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., Ronald Tree, British member of Parliament, stopped to question Lt. Charles H. Borican, of Bridgeton, N.J., concerning his studies in an officers' basic class of the First Student Training Regiment. Photo shows Lt. Borican, Brig. Gen. George H. Weems, assistant commandant of the infantry school, and Mr. Tree.

OCT 30 1943

Discharged Soldier Hates Dixie Camps

SEP 4 1943

Says Officer Attacked Him in Va.; Has Served at 6 Different Camps

BALTIMORE—Conditions confronting colored soldiers in the South were called "detestable" this week by Howard Daniels, of 322 N. Fremont Avenue, who was honorably discharged last Saturday from the army.

Mr. Daniels, who charged he was attacked by a white lieutenant at Camp Gordon, Ga., said that he has served at Fort Dix N.J.; Fort Meade, Md., Fort Shenango, Pa.; Fort McClellan, Ala. Camp Robinson, Ark., and Camp Gordon.

According to Daniels, the officer grabbed him last December at Camp Gordon. For an officer to deliberately lay a hand on an enlisted man is against army regulations, he pointed out.

Pugnacious Officer Transferred

He reported the incident to the AFRO and the matter was taken up with the War Department. Shortly after he learned of this action, Daniels said, the officer was transferred.

The former soldier said that the most vexing problem facing colored soldiers is the humiliation and inconvenience they are forced to endure while traveling.

He said that at Camp Gordon and Camp Robinson he found the jim crow transportation system particularly vexatious.

Soldiers at these posts often are not able to get back from furlough on time because buses carrying whites refuse to pick them up, and special buses for them run irregularly, Daniels complained.

Unfair Curfew Exists

At both these camps there is an 11:30 p.m. curfew in nearby towns for soldiers, but it is not enforced as far as white soldiers are concerned, Daniels added.

He also told of an incident in which a colored woman, riding in the rear of a bus, according to the laws of Arkansas, was forced to give up her seat to a white man.

SEP 4 1943

Daniels is the son of Mrs. Victoria Daniels, of the Fremont Avenue address. He is 34 years old and has two brothers and one sister. He said that he hopes to find a war job.

47c

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Soldiers Of Two Races In Free-For-All At Texas Post

JUL 3 1943

SHEPPARD FIELD, Texas—A clash between Negro and white troops resulted in a free-for-all fist fight here last week but, fortunately, brought serious injury to no one.

According to reports, a command of the 301st Training Group (white) and a unit of the 19th Aviation Squadron (colored) collided as they were marching on the drill field, the collision a direct result of refusal on the parts of officers in charge to give an order which would clear the way for the approaching column.

As the two columns charged into each other, one of the white non-commissioned officers is said to have hurled an epithet at the Negro troops, whereupon a general melee occurred.

With both groups composed of approximately three platoons, numbers of the opposing commands were about even. Aside from a few bloody noses and one or two black eyes, little physical damage was done.

Blame Detroit Riots

Army officials blamed the clash on the feeling provoked by radio reports of racial riots which swept Detroit the same day of the fight here.

Platoon leaders of both units were called to headquarters and lectured on the seriousness of the disorder, and were advised that racial friction would not be tolerated here.

The squadron commander of the 19th Aviation outfit called for an immediate report from non-commissioned officers should there be an indication that trouble is to be resumed. Calm has been restored and it is rumored in some quarters that court martials are in prospect for some of the soldiers of the 301st.

JUL 3 1943

For several days after the disorder, military policemen were stationed at the two bus stops where soldiers meet as they leave or enter the post.

47c

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Segregation Is Ended at Devens

AUG 27 1943

FORT DEVENS, Mass.—Efforts to segregate colored troops in the post theater were frustrated here last week when Mrs. M. K. Dugger, principal hostess at the 366th Service Club asked Captain Mann for an explanation.

According to Mrs. Dugger, southern WACs stationed here objected to sitting in the theater with the colored soldiers and someone issued an order for the troops to sit to one side.

This order had been in effect three days before it was called to Mrs. Dugger's attention. She immediately took it up with Captain Mann, who is in charge of the theater.

"I told him," Mrs. Dugger said, "that we cannot go down South and change the customs down there and we shouldn't let them come up here and force their customs upon us."

Captain Mann had the order rescinded.

47c

Selfridge Field Scandal

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

SEP 20 1943

Why has there been such a flagrant miscarriage of military justice at Selfridge Field? Why was Col. William T. Colman, convicted by general court-martial of careless use of firearms and on four counts of drunkenness, punished only with demotion to the rank of captain, ineligible to promotion for three years? Why was the former commandant of a large Army air base, who gave a shabby "everything went black" excuse for the shooting and wounding of Pvt. William McRate, Negro chauffeur, acquitted of the charge of assault with intent to do bodily harm?

Colman first faced charges of violation of 29 Articles of War, including misappropriation of government property, fraudulently obtaining transfers of enlisted personnel, accepting a gift from a government contractor, and conduct "unbecoming an officer and a gentleman." The court denied his motion for dismissal on the protest that he had been suffering from a mental disorder, proceeded with what appeared to be patent attempts to whitewash the offender. The whole case reeks with the strictured justice of L'affaire Dreyfus in reverse.

SEP 20 1943

If there is ever a time when the Army cannot risk [illegible] prestige at home, this is it. If there is ever a time when the personal, parental and proud feelings with which United States citizens regard their fighting arms cannot be placed in jeopardy, that time is now. Ours is a civilian Army, not a force of medieval mercenaries. Its officers must—and have done so until now — maintain an antiseptic respectability to hold the public confidence.

The Selfridge Field case is not closed. The court-martial verdict is not effective until approved by the War Department. Surely this scandalous blot on an otherwise soldierly wartime record will be erased, and justice done, when the proceedings are reviewed in Washington.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

SEP 20 1943

47c

Tribune Chicago, Illinois

THE SELFRIDGE FIELD VERDICTS.

SEP 23 1943

Lt. Col. Charles G. White has been ordered dismissed from the army by court martial. He was found guilty of seven offenses while he was executive officer at Selfridge field.

The verdict is in striking contrast to that reached in the case of his superior, Col. William T. Colman, who was commanding officer at the field. Col. Colman was found guilty of five offenses, including drunkenness, and he had shot and wounded a soldier for no cause at all, but Col. Colman suffered no greater penalty than reduction in rank from colonel to captain.

SEP 23 1943

The two verdicts, taken together, make no sense, and to say that is certainly not to suggest that the punishment of Lt. Col. White was excessive. If the junior officer deserved what he got, Col. Colman deserved at least as much. He got drunk at least as often and when drunk his conduct was more degrading and its consequences more serious. In addition, he was the commander and as such bore a measure of responsibility for the acts of his executive subordinate. It was Colman's business to know what was going on at his post.

SEP 23 1943

The verdict of the court martial leaves Colman a captain in the army and as such responsible for the lives and welfare of any men entrusted to his command. The discrepancy between the two verdicts needs a lot more explaining than has yet been forthcoming.

47c

Tribune Chicago, Illinois

CAPT. COLMAN GETS A PENSION.

NOV 12 1943

William T. Colman, who as commandant at Selfridge field, Mich., frequently got drunk and on one occasion shot a [illegible] is being retired from the army on pension by order of the secretary of war. A court-martial which found him guilty penalized him only by reducing his rank from colonel to captain. The sentence was grossly inadequate, particularly in view of the severer sentences imposed on a number of Colman's subordinates.

NOV 12 1943

The war department reviewed the case after public opinion had demanded that Col. Colman should be more severely punished. The action of the secretary of war is as much an insult to the United States army and to the American taxpayers as was the penalty meted out by the original court-martial.

Capt. Colman has been in the army 15 years. A man who has been employed in a private industry for 15 years and is discharged for drunkenness and the wanton shooting of a fellow employe certainly would not be retired on pension.

NOV 12 1943

If the Roosevelt administration expects the army to have respect for military justice, there will have to be another review of the Colman verdict.

47c

Atlanta, Georgia Daily World

Ex-Colonel Colman Still Unassigned

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Michigan — (ANP) — Col. William T. Colman, tried by a general court-martial from September 6 to September 14, will not be assigned to military duties until the findings of the court are approved and announced. Meantime, he will continue to rank as a colonel, although the court's verdict ordered his demotion to captain with no opportunity of promotion for three years.

Review of the case probably will not be started for at least six weeks. The court reporter who served during the Colman trial will be unable to start transcription of the record until he completes the reporting of proceedings in the current case of the United States Vs. Lt. Col. Charles G. White. The reporter estimates that he will require a month to transcribe the Colman case record.

These facts were announced by

Col. William L. B[illegible] commanding officer of Selfridge Field, who stated that Col. Colman still is stationed at this base without duty status.

47c

Investigation of Colman Court-Martial Demanded

Post
Washington, D. C

SEP 16 1943

By the Associated Press

Repre[illegible] O[illegible] (Democrat) of New York demanded of War Secretary Stimson yesterday an investigation of the court martial of Col. William T. Colman, saying, "The morale of the Army and of the public will be shattered by the retention of such specimens within our armed forces."

The New Yorker also demanded that Colman be suspended from all duties until the inquiry was completed. Earlier Representative Shafer (Republican) of Michigan described the outcome of the court martial as a travesty and said he would ask the Military Affairs Committee to review the case.

Colman, former commanding officer at Selfridge Field (Mich.) Air Base, was convicted by a general court martial of violating the articles of [illegible] and faces a demotion to the [illegible] with no chance for promotion for three years. He was found guilty of careless use of firearms in the shooting and wounding of a Negro private, and on four charges of drunkenness on duty.

If press accounts are accurate "[illegible] this man is allowed to remain [illegible] officer of the Army of the United States," O'Toole wrote Stimson, "I could not blame any civilian or member of the Army from failing to have respect for those who [illegible] known [illegible] officers and gentlemen by act [illegible] Congress."

Shafer asserted "we can not have confidence in our military if we are going to allow officers to escape with nominal penalties for serious offenses."

The verdict against Colman is subject to review by the War Department here and the sentence will not take effect until finally approved.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

OCT 2 1943

Colman Whitewash Stirs Cry for War Dept. Probe

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson last Thursday told his press conference that he was taking steps to expedite the review by the War Department of the court martial proceedings in the case of Col. William T. Colman, former commandant at Selfridge Field, Mich.

The Secretary was asked whether he had acknowledged receipt of a letter from Representative Donald L. O'Toole, Democrat, of New York, asking an investigation by the War Department of the court martial.

Mr. Stims[illegible]plained [illegible] the routine pro[illegible] is for [illegible] record of each court martial trial to be reviewed first by the appointing authority, which in this case was the commanding general of the Third Air Force, Tampa, Fla. Finally, th[illegible] record is e[illegible]ed by the Judge Advocate General of the War Department.

Hasn't Received Record

The record of the Colman court martial, Mr. Stimson said, has not yet reached the War Department, but "I am taking steps to expedite the process in this case."

Rep. Paul W. Shafer (Rep., Mich.) characterized the light sentence given Colonel Colman as "a damned shame." Congressman May was chairman of the House investigating committee whose investigations last May brought about the officer's [illegible] martial.

Con[illegible] Andrew J. May, chairm[illegible] the House Military Affairs Committee, said:

"I do not know at this time whether the committee will take any further action in the Colman case. However, it was at our request that the War Department began its investigation of the court martial and if the War Department fails to take adequate steps following its investigation, I am certain that the committee will take further action."

Convicted of Drunkenness

Colman was acquitted of twenty-three charges against him and was found guilty on five minor counts of reduced charges. He was convicted of being drunk on duty in wartime while in charge of an important air base and training center, but the court held that such instances of drunkenness did not constitute "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman" but was only conduct th[illegible] worked against pr[illegible] military discipline.

He shot [illegible] wounded Pfc. William McRae, a colored soldier. The original count charged that the shooting of McRae was an assault with intent to do bodily harm, but the court modified the charge and found him guilty of only careless use of firearms.

He was sentenced to demotion to the rank of captain — the rank he held before the war — and to be placed at the bottom of the list of captains and not be promoted for three years.

Some members of Co[illegible] regard the sen[illegible] a mild slap on the wrist and are insisting that the War Department undertake a searching review of the court martial proceedings or the House Committee on Military Affairs conduct an investigation of the court martial.

"Education for Negro Troops" Pamphlet Issued at Camp Stewart Is Contradictory

People's Voice
New York, N. Y.

AUG 28 1943

CAMP STEWART, Ga. — A directive, "Educational Program for Colored Troops," was recently handed out [illegible] to brigade, group and battalion commanders and officers of Negro units at the Anti-A[illegible] Center. The following "suggestions" are included:

- An officer heading Negro soldiers must "accept his troops as they are, not with some preconceived notion of what they should or might be."
- "Generalities about Negroes as about everything else, are usually inaccurate. Some individuals will be well-educated and possessed of a ready intelligence. For the most part, however, as an examination of AGCT scores will reveal, Negro soldiers have had less opportunity for education and are consequently less able to assimilate knowledge rapidly and accurately;
- "Most men want to 'do right,' and the men who 'do right' will never have any trouble with military law";

"Background

One section of the directive includes "background" material to be passed along to the soldiers:

- "The American Negro has come a long way since the days of slavery. Let us look back and see how little protection a slave had under the law. . . ."
- "Most slave-owners were good-hearted, Christian people who liked for everybody around them to be happy. They were, as a rule, good to their slaves. Of course, there were bound to be some cruel owners and overseers who made their slaves miserable";
- "Many Negroes helped end slavery. But the American Negro could never have gotten out by himself. Slavery came to an end because thousands of white people thought it was wrong, and that every human being in this country should enjoy the blessings of freedom won by the blood of patriots in the Revolution";
- "[illegible] SLAVE HAD PRACTICALLY NO RIGHTS AT ALL, YOU WILL FIND THAT YOU NOW HAVE AS MANY RIGHTS AS ANYONE ELSE UNDER THE LAW. THIS IS ESPECIALLY TRUE IN THE ARMY. . . ."
- "You are treated in the Army like any other soldier. You get the same pay, the same food, the same equipment, the same shelter, the same careful doctor's care. The government has spent a lot of money to give you movies, service clubs and other things for your entertainment";
- "IN THE ARMY THERE IS NO DISCRIMINATION AMONG SOLDIERS, AS LONG AS EVERYONE BEHAVES HIMSELF [illegible] A SOLDIER. THE COMMAND[illegible]AL AT CAMP STEWART [illegible]D HIS STAFF GUARANTEE THAT THERE WILL BE NO DISCRIMINATION BETWEEN WHITE OR COLORED."
- "A good soldier doesn't have time to fool with his hometown politics, or to go around telling other soldiers how the country ought to be run. Any question about white people and black people will never be settled by barracks talk. Let's forget these things for the time being, buckle down to real soldiering [illegible] this war."

Complete Contradiction

The next "pointer" is a complete contradiction of the assertion made that "there will be no discrimination between white or colored" at the camp.

- "We have seen that soldiers who do not respect and obey military law are sure to get into serious trouble. Soldiers who do not obey the civil laws and respect the customs of the place they happen to be ARE ALSO HEADED FOR TROUBLE";
- "YOU ARE IN GEORGIA. WHILE YOU ARE HERE, YOU MUST OBEY THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF GEORGIA. THE LAWS OF GEORGI[illegible]Y NOT BE LIKE THE LAWS OF NEW YORK OR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, etc., BUT THAT MAKES NO DIFFERENCE";
- "SOME OF YOU MAY NOT UNDERSTAND WHY YOU CAN'T GO EVERYWHERE WHITE FOLKS GO IN GEORGIA. IT'S BECAUSE THE LAW SAYS SO."

There follows a list of "suggestions" as to the best way to get along in Georgia:

- "Be p[illegible] and respectful in any talk yo[illegible]ve with white people. Don't try t[illegible] conversation with white [illegible]angers. Stay out of white places, and sit where you are supposed to sit on trains and buses. Above all, don't say or do anything that somebody might take as an insult to any white or colored woman. In short, remember your manners";
- "You are in the South. Things have been as they are in the South for a long time, and they will PROBABLY CONTINUE TO BE THAT WAY FOR A LONG TIME. If you start any arguments or disturbances over those things, you will get nowhere, settle nothing, and get yourself in trouble";
- "It was a pretty smart man who said: 'When in Rome, do as the Romans do.'"

CAMPS

47c-1943

Did the Bullets Boomerang? New Republic

According to the camp's public-relations office, a group of Negro soldiers, after a [illegible] with white troops, broke into a supply building in their battalion area, armed themselves with rifles and ammunition and began firing into the area occupied by the whites. New York, N. Y.

AUG 23 1943

Camp

Camp authorities identified the dead soldier as Pvt. Norman Taylor, 20, a Negro of Rosedale, Kansas. The six wounded, also Negroes, were admitted to the station hospital for treatment of gunshot wounds. —From an account of the recent rioting at a Greenville, Pa., army camp in The New York Daily News.

AUG 23 1943

Kansas City Call

Camp Lee for Negro Troops

Kansas City, Mo.

RICHMOND, Va. — (ANP) — Camp Lee will no longer receive white selectees, but only Negro troops who formerly were inducted from throughout the Third Service command at Fort George G. Meade, Md., announced [illegible] E. A. Gerlach, adjutant of the Camp Lee reception center.

OCT 9 1943

He stated discontinuance of the 13022d service unit as a reception center for white troops became effective Sept. 30.

47c-1943 Camps

Peoples Voice
New York. N. Y.

Camp Crowder Newspaper Owes Apology To Negro Soldiers for Insulting Ad

SEP 11 1943

CAMP CROWDER, Mo.—The Message, official camp newspaper, hurled a blatant insult into the faces of its Negro and fair-minded white personnel by carrying a large and boldly written advertisement of a drive-in restaurant named Hopton's located in Neosho, a nearby town.

The ad announces that the eatery features "N——r Chicken."

Ironically enough, this camp paper was awarded first place by Creighton University for "excellence" in journalism in a contest among Army units in the Seventh Service Command.

PV thinks an apology is due the Negro soldiers in camp, an apology that will require courage to print, but these Negro boys are American soldiers.

SEP 11 1943

47C Camps

Shocking Charge Made By Soldiers At Arizona Camp

SEP 6 1943

General's Attitude Toward Charges Hit As Frustration

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

TUSCON, Ariz.—(ANP)—Confidential information has been obtained by the Associated Negro Press of startling and sensational discriminatory practices imposed upon soldiers of the 92nd infantry division stationed at Fort Hunchuca. Sources cannot be revealed for fear of reprisals upon the informents.

The shameful situaten threatens to develop into a national scandal, and more important, according to observers, unless the federal government and the army high command takes immediate, forthright action to correct the disgraceful conditions, it is believed that all the fury of an overseas battlefields will explode in this desert community.

SEP 6 1943

FRUSTRATION AND DESPAIR

Black American soldiers who a few months before had entered the U. S. army filled with patriotic determination to help win the war for democracy, even to the point of sacrificing their lives are now reported to be enmeshed in the doldrums of frustration and despair as a direct result of the heart-breaking, inhuman treatment meted out to them by commanding general and white officers alike.

Specifically the shocking charges made by army personnel attached to the fort are:

1. That the commanding general M. Almond, of Anniston, Ala. refers to his Negro charges both in and out of their presence as "N . . .s."

2. That the commanding general is formulating plans to convince the war department to ship the division overseas for combat duty, although the division is miserably unprepared for such service.

SEP 6 1943

3. That Gen. Almond is not a topflight commander and was not assigned to a white unit because he lacked necessary qualifications. The war department foisted him upon the Negro group it is charged because it was necessary to place him somewhere.

"SHAKEDOWN" AFTER PRACTICE

4. That the commanding general orders the post Gestapo to hold a "shakedown" of enlisted personnel after each live ammunition practice to detect possible bullets secreted away for an allegedly planned "insurrection."

5. That a quota system operates in the making and promotion of Negro officers with [illegible] ever reaching the rank of first lieutenant. Most of the Negro officers are "frozen" at the second lieutenant level.

SEP 6 1943

Information has trickled out of the camp that several white officers including one colonels have been severely beaten up or killed in altercations with enlisted personnel. The officers are also said to stand far behind the lines during firing practice with live ammunition, because they fear a sharpshooter might train his sights upon them and revenge mistreatment.

6. That enlisted personnel is trained with obsolete combat weapons and not given instructions in modern of warfare. Instead, training consists almost exclusively of marches and drills around the confines of the army.

7. That the food served in mess halls at Fort Huachuca is the "worst in the army."

SEP 6 1943

8. That although present conditions on the military reservation have existed ever since the division moved into Arizona last May, Atty Truman K Gibson, Jr., acting civiliian aide to the secretary of war, and Brig. Gen Benjamin O. Davis, inspecting general from the inspector general's office, Washington, on a recent inspection here found conditions to be "in excellent shape," morale "high," training "good, and the overal picture "gratifying."

Personnel at the army post are said to be greatly puzzled over how they can reconcile the vicious dictums of Gen Almond and his staff of white officers to preachments of a nation pledged in a war to carry the four freedoms and democracy to the far corners of the world. Rumors are being circulated in Tuscon that the soldiers are so restive under the "slave-ocracy" rule at the camp that a flareup of serious proporticsn is expected almost momentarily. Only positive intervention of the federal governments with drastic punishment delivered upon the heads of responsible authorities is seen as a possible preventative.

SEP 6 1943

Soldiers complain that at a recent meeting of mess officers and mess sergeants Gen Almond deplored the alleged waste of food and declared before the mixed group:

"There is too much waste in these mess halls. These N. . . s eat too damn much meat and bread and not enough vegetables."

IS UNIT UNPREPARED

Added to this stinging [illegible] are the alleged plans of Gen. Almond to heighten his stature in the army by sending unprepared men overseas as a fighting unit. One army private said that "if the Japs are Germans saw us coming they would laugh themselves to death."

SEP 6 1943

"Instead of training for combat through the techniques of handling issued weapons, the men are trained to walk miles upon miles over the rocky mountainous terrain," charged a disgusted soldier.

47C Camps

Afro-American
Baltimore. Maryland

Secret Order on Bias Issued by War Dept.

NOV 20 1943

Army Alters Policy on Colored Papers and Treatment of Troops

UNDERSTANDING, DIPLOMACY URGED

Earlier Ban Against Colored Newspapers Is Rescinded

BULLETIN

Despite a War Department ruling to the contrary, the AFRO-AMERICAN is still being barred from this army post by order of Capt. Buell A. Williamson, camp intelligence officer.

NOV 20 1943

CAMP FORREST, Tenn. — Issuance of two special communications, including a secret directive by the War Department on the treatment of colored soldiers, was revealed here following an investigation by the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers on Wednesday.

The secret communication, sent to service command headquarters and regimental executives, listed as War Department Memo W600-13-43, captioned "Policy in Regard to the Negro," goes into detail as to treatment of colored soldiers, especially those under white officers.

White officers in command of colored units were instructed to talk with their men and to read colored newspapers in order to understand the racial problems. It was pointed out that the morale of colored soldiers is alarmingly low.

NOV 20 1943

Warns Against Offending

Whenever a colored unit, especially one under supervision of colored officers, becomes militant, do not use any drastic methods in an attempt to suppress it but act with utmost care and diplomacy, the directive advised, adding: Always be on the alert not to offend officers and men.

This directive and the recent ruling by the War Department rescinding the orders of some service commands barring various publications, especially colored newspapers from camps, is believed to be the result of the militant fight waged by officers of the 931st Field Artillery.

The artillery unit is the only group stationed at Camp Forrest which has all colored officers. Formerly a part of the famous 8th Illinois Regiment, the group is headed by Lieut. Col. Marcus H. Ray, Chicago chemist.

Newspaper Ban Lifted

The order from General Suders chief of public relations, rescinding the barring of newspapers, was issued after a series of protests were made by relatives and friends of men attached to the 931st Battalion.

NOV 20 1943

An order dated November 3 from the service command at Atlanta, barred the men from receiving newspapers.

Colored publications included the AFRO-AMERICAN, Pittsburgh Courier, People's Voice, Chicago Defender, Norfolk Journal and Guide and the Boston Chronicle.

The ruling stated that all subscriptions for magazines, newspapers and publications for all units on the Camp Forrest post had to be forwarded to the post intelligence officer for approval.

Officers Won't Talk

When a clear interpretation of the order was requested by officers of the 931st Artillery, they were advised that as a unit the men could not receive colored papers nor could the hostess at the service club for colored men nor officers purchase papers for the club, barracks, day rooms or post exchange.

Queried by an AFRO investigator, Colonel Ray declined to make a statement. "I am unable to give any statement as it would be in violation of military regulation. I suggest that you contact the intelligence officer of the post," the unit commander said.

Efforts to obtain an interview or statement from the intelligence officer or the commander of the post also proved futile. Each headquarters officer questioned pleaded lack of authority to give public statements.

47C Camps

Charge Soldiers Overworked At Camp Stewart

AUG 18 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Complaint Filed With War Department

AUG 18 1943

Complaint that Army Officers at Camp Stewart, near Savannah, were overworking men attached to the "limited service" outfit had been filed with the War Department in Washington, Tuesday.

The soldier making the complaint stated that increased prejudice has been shown colored soldiers since the conflict at the camp a few months ago in which two white military policemen were killed and three seriously wounded. An application for a furlough to return to his Chicago home in order to get the guarantee of a civilian job (he is 39 years of age and physically incapacitated), has been consistently ignored and worked heaped upon him, the informant says.

According to the complaint made to the War Department the colored soldiers receive improper medical attention, inhuman treatment, refusal of leaves, improperly cooked food, have to work unreasonable hours, day and night, including Sundays, and regardless of ailments are "snapped up" by officers, given "ragged salutes" and unnecessary detail.

Many of the men go "over the hill" in an attempt to get some rest, returning later to face imprisonment in the guardhouse, the complainant added, terming the camp "a disgrace to the U. S. Army." The writer said he was "over the hill" at the time the letter was written, trying to prevent a "possible nervous braekdown as I could not stand the ordeal any longer."

AUG 18 1943

47C Camps

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa

NOV 13 1943

Courier Protest Brings Army-Stabbing Probe

[SEE PICTURE ON PAGE 4] NOV 13 1943

Following a formal protest by The Pittsburgh Courier to the U. S. War Department, the case of Pvt. Ellis Robinson of Greensburg, Pa., stabbed Sunday, Oct. 24, by First Lieutenant William Sammons, his company commander at Camp Swift, Texas, has been brought out in the open and the commanding officer has been subjected to an Army general court-martial.

4 1 C

According to a War Department statement, corroborated by the Post Intelligence Officer at Camp Swift, Private Robinson refused to obey a direct command from Lieutenant Sammons and the act so infuriated the officer that he picked up a bayonet and stabbed the sodier in the arm. Robinson, the report states, was confined in the hospital one day. He is stationed with Company 'A', First Battalion, 132nd Engineer Regiment.

REFUSED TO DIG

The tr[illegible] bet[illegible]e commanding [illegible]dier is said to have started over an order to Private Johnson to do some digging, which the soldier allegedly stated he would rather go to the stockade than do. After Robinson's refusal to do the chore, the commanding officer reportedly ordered one of the sergeants to stick him with the bayonet but the sergeant balked, whereupon Lieutenant Sammons himself stabbed the soldier who, it is stat[illegible] [illegible]ot try to defend [illegible].

NOV 13 1943

Private Robinson, the last report on whose condition was just "fair," is the son of Mrs. Minnie Robinson, connected with Hoyle's restaurant in Greensburg.

'Ain't Slavery Grand'—School Days Army Style

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

(Special to the Defender)

CAMP STEWART, Ga. — Race discrimination has existed in Dixie for a long time and there's not a thing that Negro soldiers can do about it.

Slave owners were fine people who just loved to make everyone happy.

No, it's not Rankin talking—it's Brig. Gen. E. A. Stockton, commanding the anti-aircraft training center here at Camp Stewart.

The general's ideas on an educational program for Negro troops in this area were incorporated into a 12-page document this week for his fellow officers and the above is his idea of education.

Copies of the report entitled "Educational Program for Colored Troops" have been obtained by the Defender and are startling in their defense of Jim Crow.

Typical of the "education" prescribed for colored soldiers at Camp Stewart is a section which reminds them that they are in Georgia and that they must not expect to "go everywhere the white folks go in Georgia." Still another example of the "enlightenment" felt necessary is one which warns Negro troops not to look upon "every little inconvenience as racial discrimination."

Recommends Spy System

Accompanying the course of "education" are suggestions to unit commanders to set up a system of espionage of their own, this for the ostensible purpose of avoiding friction before it develops. Excerpts from this section of the document read as follows:

"Remember, racial trouble spreads like wildfire. Mass hysteria and mob violence develop in an incredibly brief time. Once a riot starts, it is too late to find out what's going on in your outfit. You must know what your men are doing and thinking all the time.

The most helpful thing in this respect is constant observation on your part. You can also use your S-2 Section and organize a counter-subversive system. Select as secret agents qualified and patriotic men in each barracks. Instruct these men carefully and secretly. Give them code names and have them mail their reports to you except in emergencies.

"Examine the reading matter that circulates among your men. Some of it, often innocently appearing, may be seditious and highly inflammatory."

Advises Lecture on Slavery

A lengthy dissertation on slavery and what it meant to Negroes, for some unaccountable reason, is included in the suggestions for topics of talks by the officers. The result is that Negro boys from New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut and other liberal states find themselves sitting in conference listening to lectures based on the following Army information:

"Most slave-owners were good-hearted, Christian people who liked for everyone around them to be happy They were, as a rule, good to their slaves. Of course there were bound to be some cruel owners and overseers, who made their slaves miserable.

Many able Negroes helped end slavery. But the American Negro could never have gotten out by himself. Slavery came to an end because thousands of white people thought it was wrong, and that every human being in this country should enjoy the blessings of freedom won by the blood of patriots in the Revolution.

"Many Negroes did not understand their new freedom. They flocked to town, thinking that freedom meant they didn't have to work any more, somebody would take care of them while they led the 'life of Riley.' A great deal of hard work was necessary, by great educators like the Negro, Booker T. Washington, before the American Negro got where he is today.

"Whereas a slave had practically no rights at all, you will find that you now have as many rights as everyone else under the law. This is especially true in the Army. Every offender under military law is guaranteed a fair trial."

Tells Soldiers They Must Behave

More excerpts from the "educational" course of instruction, these directed to the soldiers themselves, read thus:

"In the Army there is no discrimination among soldiers, as long as everyone behaves himself like a soldier. The Commanding General at Camp Stewart and his staff guarantee that there will be no discrimination between white or colored.

"A good soldier doesn't have time to fool with his home town politics, or to go around telling other soldiers how the country ought to be run. Any question about white people and black people will never be settled by barracks talk. Let's forget these things for the time being, buckle down to real soldiering, and win the war.

"We have heard that our soldiers in England are given rules on how to get along with the English people, who have many habits and customs different from ours.

"Our soldiers in Africa were given rules on how to get along with the Mohammedans, and other people who live there.

"Our soldiers in Sicily have been told how to treat the people there.

"You are in Georgia. While you are here, you must obey the laws of the State of Georgia. The laws of Georgia may not be like the laws of New York, or the District of Columbia, or Pennsylvania, or Illinois; but that makes no difference.

"Some of you may not understand why you can't go everywhere white folks go in Georgia. It's because the law says so.

Be Polite to "White Folks"

"Whether or not they did this where you came from, and no matter what you think about it, it is your duty to do exactly as the law says, and to accept the customs of the people, while you are in Georgia.

"Be polite and respectful in any talk you may have with white people. Don't try to start conversations with white strangers. Stay out of white places, and sit where you are supposed to sit on trains and buses.

"You are in the South. Things have been as they are in the South for a long time, and they will probably continue to be that way for a long time. If you start any argument or disturbances over these things, you will get nowhere, settle nothing, and get yourself in trouble."

Finally, instructors are advised that "the colored soldier should be taught to avoid a 'chip on the shoulder' attitude and to avoid babying himself with the belief that every little inconvenience he suffers is racial discrimination."

Through this method the Army expects to avoid a repetition of the clashes here in June, which resulted in the death of one and injury to four others.

BAYONET VICTIM

NOV 13 1943
Courier Pittsburgh

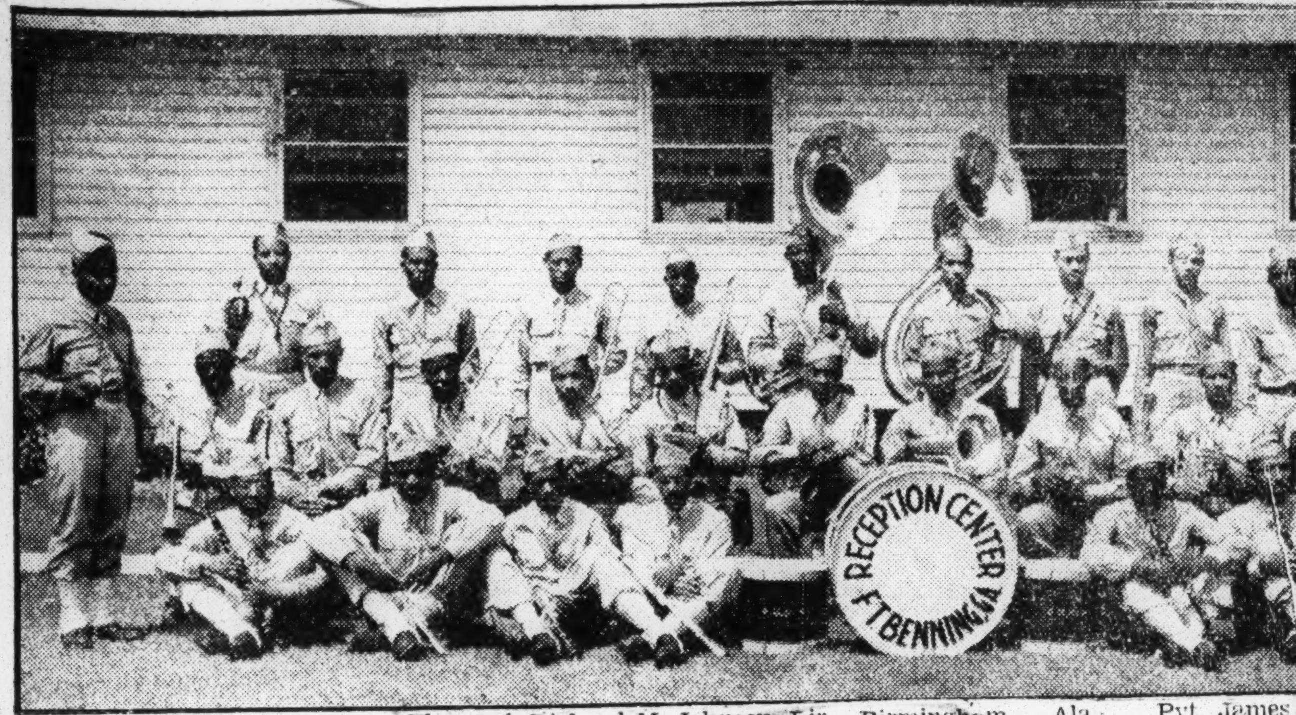
When Pvt. Ellis Robinson of Greensburg, Pa., reportedly refused to obey a direct command from First Lieutenant William Sammons, company commander of an engineering regiment at Camp Swift, Texas, he was stabbed in the arm with a bayonet by the irate officer and, later, was confined to a [illegible]ital for emerge[illegible]treatment.

NOV 13 1943

Lieutenant Sammons, for his act, has been subjected to an army general court-martial.

Camps

Ft. Benning's Crack Band Of Reception Center



OCT 2 1943

Members of the Band of the Reception Center, Fort Benning, Ga Left to right, standing from row S-Sgt. Horace O. Jackson, Birmingham, Ala., Asst. Bandleader; sitting, Sgt Walker P. Jackson, Birmingham, Ala., Pfc. Willie J. Hill Thomasville, Ga.; Cpl. Frank Stevenson, Mobile, Ala.; Cpl. Henry L McDowell, Shelby, N. C.; Pfc. Fred E. Taylor, Atlanta, Ga.; Sgt. Robert Harrell, Jr., Nashvlle, Tenn., Sgt Lawrenc C. Iszard, Jacksonville. Fla.; Cpl. Richard M. Johnson, Birmingham, Ala.; and T-Sgt. Alton A Davenport (standing) bandleader, Birmingham, Ala.

Second Row, kneeling left to right Pfc. Will M. Douglas Gallatin, Tenn.; Pvt. Wilton Robinson, Birmingham, Ala.; Cpl. Richard W. Judge, Atlanta, Ga.; Pfc. Owen Hunt, Jr., Memphis, Tenn.; Pvt. George Woodruff, Birmingham, Ala.; Sgt. Thomas W. Flowers, Dixon, Tenn.; Pfc. Frank Jackson Birmingham, Ala.; Pvt. James Young, Johnson City, Tenn.; Pfc. Thomas B. Dunlap, Memphis, Tenn.; Cpl. Archie A. Clark, Sarasota, Fla.; Pvt. Jacob Claye Birmingham, Ala.; Pfc. Moddie Swanigan, Birmingham, Ala

Third row, standing left to right: Cpl. Edwin F. Driskell, Atlanta, Ga.; Sgt. Clyde M. Ewell, Nashville, Tenn; Pvt. Howard Young, Johnson City, Tenn.; Cpl. Frontis Brooks, Rock Hill, S. C.; Pfc. Herman Dawson, Albany, Ga.; Pfc William M. Holmes, Mobile, Ala. Pfc. William A. Shorter, Atlanta Ga.; Pvt. Ira J. Wells, Mobile, Ala. Sgt. James Ben, Bessemer. Ala.; Pfc. Willie Mitchell, Atlanta, Ga.

Bandsmen not in picture: Pfc. Charles E. Gilbert, Miami, Fla. Cpl. Theodore J. Lawson, Nashville, Tenn., and Sgt. William H Stovers, Indianapolis, Ind.

(CREDIT U S. ARMY SIGNAL CORPS PHOTO)

Court Martial For Youth Charged With Leading Protest Group On Jim Crow

The Plaindealer 7 1943
Kansas City, Kan

March Field, Cal.—Because his protest against a color ban in the post movie and service club almost led to a bloody armed outbreak here, a 19-year-old soldier from Tulsa, Okla, today faced a 25-year sentence at hard labor.

He is Clarence A. Richardson, a young private formerly attached to the 1887th Engineer Aviation Battalion. He was given this severe punishment for allegedly telling a second lieutenant to "move out of the way" and for being recognized as one of a group of Negro soldiers who attempted to storm a supply room where arms and ammunition were stored here on June 14.

AUG 27 1943

A War department spokesman stated Monday that Richardson's sentence is subject to review by the 9th Service command, at Salt Lake City. The same spokesman declared that the matter of separate theaters and service clubs is to be investigated by the army within the very near future.

Chief prosecution witness was an officer, who sought to quiet the men but was ordered out of the way when they attempted to enter a building in which arms were known to be stored. All efforts to reason with them or to control them were futile, the lieutenant declared, and Richardson was particularly abusive in his remarks to the officer.

A large group of men reported for the discussion and, led by Richardson, voiced strenuous objection to be being barred from the theater and service club because of their color. Major Potter stated that he was unable to identify anyone in the group other than Richardson.

Richardson and two others were recognized as spokesmen for the group as they "appeared by their manner of speech and the language they used to be at least educated to a state above the average for colored people," according to testimony.

So tense was the situation at this point that one of the men is reported to have called out to Major Potter that he "would just as soon die here at home fighting riots as to go across and be killed somewhere else."

Defied Lieut. Colonel

Second Lt. Emilio A. Munoz, according to the information, was sent by Major Potter to the supply room in order to forestall any possible move of the men in the direction of the ammunition and guns. A short time after his arrival, the men are said to have concluded their conference with Major Potter and, not having been satisfied, started for the store room.

Lt. Munoz faced them in front of E. Nettleton, passing them as they stood in front of battalion headquarters, attempted to get some semblance of order by calling out to them to fall in. He was greeted by jeers and reminders that he "had better get going."

Failing in his attempt to control the group, Lt. Munoz declared he retired to the door of the supply room but the men continued to advance on him.

At this point the story was taken up by 2nd Lt. Edwin R. Childs, duty officer for the day who, as such, was detailed at the store room. He reported seeing the group of soldiers advancing on the place in a menacing attitude and of locking the door to keep them out.

After arming himself with a .45 caliber sub-machine gun, Lt. Childs said he opened the door in response to their demands that he do so "or they would tear it down." The officer is then said to have defied them to "make one step in that door."

The men replied to the effect that he might get some of them but he couldn't get them all before they got him. His rejoinder is said to have been "I might not get them all but I would get a whole lot more of them than they would get of me because I had 700 rounds of ammunition and they didn't have any."

Had Previous Record

Both Lt. Munoz and Lt. Childs are reputed to have identified Richardson as the leader of the group during the whole time. The latter declared he heard Richardson tell Lt. Munoz to step aside because they didn't want to hurt him.

Knox's Negro Soldiers Make Good Sentries

OCT 4 1943

Courier-Journal
Louisville. Ky. OCT 4 1943

By Sgt. James Goble

Fort Knox.

IT'S THE first time the Negro soldiers of the 18th Battalion's Company "C" at the Fort Knox Armored Replacement Training Center have been on guard duty.

Pvt. Leon E. Dorsey, son of Mrs. Leenanna Dorsey, 925 S. Clay St., Louisville, and the late Thomas J. Dorsey, Sunday School superintendent for twenty years at the city's Lampton Baptist Church, marches up and down his beat inside the tank park.

There is pride in the look on his face, in the way he carries his rifle, in his jaunty steps. Tonight he is king. He is the nation's guardian of many costly tanks. And he can stop anyone in the nation who comes [illegible] them, his sergeant, his captain, the general, even the President. He marches along, 120 steps to the minute. His back is straight; his chin up. He reaches the end of his beat and halts with a click of his heels. He does a smart about-face, and marches back. It's 3 o'clock in the morning, but he isn't sleepy. A soldier can't be sleepy on this job.

ON ANOTHER side of the park marches Pvt. Alvin Jones, Barlow, Ky. He frequently glances at the row of tanks alongside his beat. They crackle in the growing cold. He stops and shines his flashlight on one, then marches on.

His lips move silently as if he is reciting his general orders. Every guard must know all eleven of them. Officers of the guard might appear at any moment and question Private Jones about them. If he can't recite them as they are written in the Soldier's Handbook, he will be relieved of duty as a guard and sent back to his barracks. Maybe he will have to do K. P.; maybe he will be restricted during the weekend.

His lips the words of General Order No. 1: "Take charge of this post and all Government property in view." He smiles as if he might be thinking of the hep-cat version of that order, which is making the rounds at Army posts: "Strut in style and keep both glimmers on the jernt."

Or General Order No. 8: "Give the alarm in case of fire or disorder," and its jitterbug version: "Beat my chops and throw a four-alarmer at a real hot jernt or a truck driver's hold."

•

THE smile leaves his face. This is no time for anything that is not serious. He marches on. The gun on his shoulder grows heavier. A truck drives up to the tank park entrance. A dark form gets out of the truck and starts into the park. Private Jones runs toward the gate. But before he gets there, Private Dorsey yells, "Halt." The form stops. "Who's there?" yells Private Dorsey. The dark form says, "Corporal of the guard." Private Dorsey says, "Advance and be recognized." The dark form advances.

"I've brought guards to relieve you," says the corporal. "You and Jones give me your rifles and take off. You can get a couple of hours' sleep before daylight."

The privates walk toward the gate, yawning. Their reign is over. They now are just plain soldiers. Nothing exciting happened on their posts. But they did their part in seeing that it didn't.

OCT 4 1943

Jacksonville, N. C., Record
October 26, 1943

Davis Ready For New Negro Battalions

CAMP DAVIS, Oct. 26.—They set up a first class service club in three days. In four days they put a complete PX together and opened for business on the fifth. Meanwhile they stocked a library, furnished a chapel, and prepared a guest house and an officers' club.

That's how Camp Davis moved this week to welcome two battalions of Negro combat troops who are being stationed here for training. One of the biggest and swiftest conversion jobs ever undertaken at Davis was nearly complete as the new troops moved in.

The rush job was ordered when word was received here suddenly of the arrival in a few days of two new battalions.

A block of barracks was prepared for the newcomers around Fourth and D streets. Tennis and volleyball courts in the area were readied for immediate use.

After inspecting all facilities Col. Adam E. Potts, camp commander, said the new troops will have one of the most complete and comfortable layouts on the post. He congratulated post workers on their speedy job of remodelling and furnishing the area buildings, which were vacant just prior to the arrival of the men.

The new service club, cafeteria and soda fountain facilities, to be known as Service Club No. 6, once was a recreation hall. In three days complete kitchen facilities were moved in and set up, and the big main dining hall decorated and furnished to feed more than 100 at a time.

The club now is complete down to the juke box, which was in operation to greet the new troops. Boogie-woogie made up most of the record selections, which was swell with everyone concerned. Work now is being completed on special game and recreation rooms in the same building, and office facilities for the hostess.

Also available to the new units is the Service Club No. 3, at the post detachment, with its enlarged floor for dancing and party events.

Supervision of the service club and general recreational layout for the new men is in the hands of F-Sgt. Harvey Hall, who has been collecting ideas during his 29 years in the Army.

The new library used to be a guardhouse, but you'd never recognize it now. The area's ten-room guest house once was an officers' day room, before the remodelling blitzkrieg struck it. The officers' club and chapel were not in use, but now are ready for a busy schedule of activities.

Camp Stewart's Pinup Girl

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Press Photo Service

OCT 2 1943

CAMP STEWART, Ga. — Pretty Anna Mae Winburn, the directress of the International Sweethearts of Rhythm, all-girl band was chosen pin-up girl for Camp Stewart's fighting unit by Pfc. Allen L. Herndon (Chicago) who headed committee. Miss Winburn and her band played to a jam-packed house in the Windy City, recently, and is scheduled for Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 1; Lawton, Okla., Oct. 2 and Wichita, Kas., Oct. 3.

Soldiers Found Guilty In Duck Hill Shooting

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

SEP 18 1943

CAMP M'CAIN, Miss., Sept. 16—(ANP)—Six soldiers from Southern states attached to the 470th Quartermaster truck regiment, Third army, have been found guilty of firing shots from Garand rifles on the town of Duck Hill last July 5, and sentenced to serve sentences ranging from 10 to 15 years at hard labor in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Seven others under heavy guard at the camp, likewise accused in the raid, were tried on September 10.

The men whose sentences have been approved by Gen. Hodges, commander of the Third army with headquarters at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., have already been shipped to the penitentiary. They will also be "dishonorably discharged from the services of the United States, forfeiting all pay and allowances" due them, stated the court-martial decision.

Those under sentence are Cpl. Larue Steele, Pvt. James Harris and Pvt. Elijah Outlaw, each given 15-year terms; and Pvts. Thomas E. Webb, Ray Brookshire, and Thomas Decker, who were given 10-year terms.

ATMOSPHERE TENSE

The men under sentence were said by officers at the camp to have organized a miniature platoon to attack the city of Starkville 80 miles distant but became dismayed at prospects of the long journey, and decided to fire upon nearby Duck Hill.

Trouble had been brewing here ever since the Negro soldiers arrived several months ago with Duck Hill citizens noticeably hostile to the army men. Knowledge that a Negro civilain, accused of murder, had been lynched several years ago, was not conductive to the morale of the Negro soldiers and added reports that a white woman had been assaulted resulting in a flood of MPs concentrated in the area and Duck Hill declared "out-of-bounds" for the Negro soldiers aggravated the situation. Negro soldiers have been repeatedly mistreated in Starkville which further made the atmosphere here tense.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

SEP 5 1943

NORTH CAMP HOOD, Texas—(SNS)—The newly activated 133rd Tank Destroyer Battalion is the first Negro unit to be formed at the Army's only Tank Destroyer Replacement Training Center at North Camp Hood.

Noncommissioned officers who will train the enlisted personnel of the 133rd TD Battalion have arrived and are undergoing orientation, while trainees from all over the country are expected to arrive in the near future. Here they will learn Tank Destryer tactics and become fully cognizant of the meaning of the TD motto, "Seek, Strike, Destroy."

Lt. Col. William S. Halcomb is the battalion commanding officer, with Major H. W. Dabber serving as executive officer. The adjutant is 1st Lt. John W. Foust.

Democracy Rules In Florida Camp

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

CAMP GORDON JOHNSTON, Fla.—(S N S)—In connection with the War Department educational program, civilian and military personnel of both races at Camp Gordon Johnston, Fla., are attending night classes in typing and shorthand.

Under head instructor, Mrs. Lucy T. Ball and her able assistants, Misses Nancy Chambers, Gladys Fuhlbrugge and Helen Duffy, the school got underway last week with an enrollment of approximately 185 students. Classes are held 5 nights per week, three nights for beginners and two nights for the advanced students.

Many opportunities are being offered military personnel under the present educational program. Those who are ambitious enough to use their off time in the pursuit of furthering their education often find instructors and subject matter available to them that was almost an impossibility in civilian life. Such is the case at Camp Gordon Johnston, Mrs. Ball, the head instructor is on leave at the Gulf Camp from Wiley Business School in Chattanooga, Tenn.

With the splendid progress now being made in the business training school, steps are being taken to organize other types of classes so that GI Joe might return to civilian life a much wiser man than when he first donned the uniform.

Under command of Colonel Walter E. Smith, Camp Gordon Johnston is located 59 miles southwest of Tallahassee, Florida's capital, on the beautiful Gulf of Mexico and is one of the nation's outstanding amphibious warfare training centers.

47c1943

Colonel On Trial At Michigan Field

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

SEP 13 1943

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich. —(ANP)—When Lt. Col. Paul A Petree of the medical corps, chief of neure-psychiatric division of the Percy Jones General hospital, Battle Creek, Mich., quoted Col. W. T. Walden, former commanding officer of Selfridge field, as saying, "I have given orders repeatedly that a Negro chauffeur should never be permitted to drive my car," a point was introduced which was never before made public in official announcements of the case.

The statement was the first reference in the trial to the circumstances of the shooting of Pvt. Willie McRae, a chauffeur at the army air base here by Col. Colman last May.

On cross-examination by Capt. Phillip D. O. O'Connell, the trial judge advocate, Petree said Colman had told him he had been drinking the night before the shooting and that he had gone to his offce to get two revolvers.

Col. Petree further quoted Colman as having asked: "Which do you think would be most in my favor, amnesia or alcoholism?" Asked to give this opinion as to the reason for the outburst which caused the shooting, the witness said it might have been amnesia, alcohol, or general mental disorder.

Aside from being accused of the shooting of Pvt. Willie McRae, Col. Colman, who is under trial by a court-martial, has other counts against him of having violated the articles of war. Numbered among these are repeated instances of drunkenness, having fraudulently obtained transfers of enlisted men, accepted a gift from a government contractor, and misappropriated government property.

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

SEP 23 1943

COURT MARTIAL WHITEWASH COL. COLEMAN

Last week Col. William T. Coleman, former commandant at Selfridge Field, Michigan, was found guilty by a court martial of careless use of fire arms and four counts of drunkeness. The colonel was relieved from his command after shooting his chauffeur, a Negro soldier.

He was tried on about forty charges some growing out of favoritism and the misuse of his official position for private gain. His counsel contended in defense that the colonel was a sick man mentally and thus not responsible for the acts he committed.

The court martial found him guilty of some of the charges but undoubtedly went a long way in fixing punishment in their effort to save the colonel rather than do justice as they were sworn to do. It appears that the soldier was shot without provocation, and it was a traversity of justice not to have found the colonel guilty of at least assault with intent to do great bodily injury.

We are inclined to say the court martial was as rotten as the colonel himself. Here was an officer in charge of thousands of men and millions of dollars worth of property belonging to the people; a man who by his rank had been trusted to discharge his duties faithfully and with fairness to all. On the other hand, here was this colonel whose conduct proved to be that of a tramp—a hoodlum and who by his own testimony and the plea of his counsel was unfit mentally to administer the duties assigned him, and yet Colonel Coleman is now Captain Coleman with a chance left to continue his dishonorable conduct upon the members of his unit.

The army has suffered a terrific jolt by this whitewash and the Bystander believes that rotten decision of the court martial should not be allowed to stand.

Camp

Colonel Pleads He Can't Remember Shot At Driver

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

SEP 18 1943

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich. —A plea that he did not remember shooting a Negro chauffeur was the defense of Col. William T. Colman when he took the witness stand this week in his defense during court martial proceedings.

Colman, who was removed from his command at Selfridge Feld following the shooting of Pvt. William McRae, his Negro driver, told the court martial:

"Gentlemen, not for the life of me, so help me God, can I remember one other thing. That's my story. I have had four months to think it over and read testimony. There are things in there that I am reported to have said.

Tells of Picnic

Colman then told of a picnic which he attended the evening of the shooting. He said his wife, Jane, and Lt. Col. Sam Westbrook accompanied him on the picnic and they had a bottle of whisky, about half full.

"I know there was not more than half a fifth," he said, "because there was some question about whether it was worth taking. I don't know who mixed the drinks. I think I mixed the first, but I was more interested in cooking a steak.

"We had a fire going and I was turning the steak. On my first or second drink I could see the bone in the steak, and from that time on the one person I can remember is Maj. John Lucas (the medical officer who examined Colman after the shooting).

"Testimony shows that half a bottle of liquor was drunk in headquarters. I can't tell you. As far as I'm concerned, that bottle of liquor still is in the left hand drawer of my desk, as it was put there many months ago.

Stimson Asked to Probe Colman Court-Martial

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—Representative O'Toole (D., N. Y.) demanded of War Secretary Stimson today an investigation of the court-martial of Col. William T. Colman saying "the morale of the Army and of the public will be shattered by the retention of such specimens within our armed forces."

The New Yorker also demanded that Colman be suspended from all duties until the inquiry is completed. Earlier, Representative Shafer (R., Mich.) described the outcome of the court-martial as a travesty and said he would ask the military affairs committee to review the case.

Faces Demotion.

Colman, former commanding officer at the Selfridge Field, Michigan, Air Base, was convicted by a general court-martial of violating the Articles of War and faces a demotion to captain with no chance for promotion for three years. He was found guilty of careless use of firearms in the shooting and wounding of a Negro private, and of drunkenness.

If press accounts are accurate "and this man is allowed to remain as an officer of the Army of the United States," O'Toole wrote Stimson, "I could not blame any civilian or member of the Army for failing to have respect for those who are known as 'officers and gentlemen' by Act of Congress."

Shafer asserted, "We cannot have confidence in our military if we are going to allow officers to escape with nominal penalties for serious offenses."

The verdict against Colman is subject to review by the War Department here and the sentence will not take effect until finally approved.

Ousted Selfridge Head Claims Losing Memory After Drinking

Louisville, Ky.
Courier-Journal

Picture on Pict

Selfridge Field, Mich., Sept. 12 (U.P.)—Col. William T. Colman, ousted Selfridge Field commander charged with twenty-nine violations of the articles of war, testified in his own behalf today he could not remember anything about the shooting of Pfc. William McRae last May 5 which precipitated an investigation of his administration at the air base.

Colman told of going on a picnic for relaxation from the strain of "constant investigations behind my back" and the shifting of Selfridge from one Air Forces command to another.

The apparent tenor of his testimony was to convey to the nine Air Forces colonels sitting in judgment that his mental condition had been aggravated by wartime pressure, Army red tape and especially by Army indecision concerning the status of the Silfridge and Oscoda, Mich., air bases.

Bases Transferred

He explained that for twenty years Selfridge and Oscoda had been practically the same base, for administrative purposes, but that last September Oscoda had been taken over by the Third Air Force and Selfridge by the Air Service Command, thereby relieving the commander of Selfridge as the ex-officio commander of Oscoda.

Last March, however, Selfridge was taken over by the Third Air Force and reunited with Oscoda, he testified.

Since Colman was relieved of his command last May, Selfridge and Oscoda have been transferred from the Third to the First Air Force.

With this as a background, Colman told of a picnic May 4, the day of the night of the shooting, at which he is charged with being under the influence of liquor.

"I don't remember who mixed the drinks," Colman said. "I was more interested in cooking a steak and I had a fire going and was turning it from side to side.

"It was on either my first or second drink I could see the bone—and gentlemen, from that time on I can remember only one thing (until the shooting). I leaned over the fireplace—I can remember that as distinctly as if it were yesterday—and from there on I can't remember. I don't remember eating the steak and I don't remember coming to headquarters."

Seek Facilities For Ft. Huachuca

NOV 15 1943

Atlanta Daily World

TUCSON, Ariz. — (ANP) — Maj. Gen. E. W. Almond of Ft. Huachuca last week made a plea for more recreation facilities for Negro troops in Tucson, when the American Legion entertained a group of officers from nearby military units that had arrived for the Armistice day parade.

He said that the army makes no distinction as to color. that each man must prove himself on an individual basis and that Negro troops must and do meet the same standard as other troops.

The men at Ft. Huachuca have met the standards demanded of American fighting men, insisted Maj. Gen. Almond, in asking that facilities for these men in the towns they visit be in accordance with their service.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

Shooting Colonel Pleads Not Guilty

SEP 17 1943

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich. — Col. William T. Colman, deposed commander of the Selfridge Field Air Base, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before a general court-martial of nine colonels last Monday on charges of shooting a colored soldier and misappropriation of government property.

Seven charges of alleged violations of articles of war were lodged against Colonel Colman, who has been held under military arrest since May 5, following the shooting of Pfc. William McRae of Morven, N.C. McRae has since been returned to duty.

Colman also was charged with illegal procurement of personnel, including the "fraudulent and unlawful procurement of the transfer of Pvt. (now lieutenant) Benson Ford, son of Edsel Ford, to Selfridge Field on October 15, 1942.

Soldier Shot "by Mistake"

Other charges included the misappropriation of $1000 worth of government property, including an $800 electric generator, a $175 refrigerator, and five beds worth $5 each, and misuse of the labor of civilian government employees at the Oscoda Air Field.

It is not believed that the shooting of McRae was connected with any of the irregularities with which Colman is charged, but was the result of mistaken identity. McRae had had no trouble with Colonel Colman.

Camps Can't Bar Negro Newspapers

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia
NOV 17 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS) — After a conference here last week, the War department issued an order that no officer in the field is hence forward to ban or question the introduction of any tpye military installation.

The action was taken after numerous complaints had been made that officers in the field at some posts had prevented the circulation of Negro publications. The action was a direct outgrowth of the barring of Negro newspapers from Camp Forrest, Tenn. Whereas most of the other complaints were unsubstantiated reports, the War department secured a copy of an order issued by a field officer in the Camp Forrest case.

According to Truman K. Gibson, Jr., Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, in the future the question of admission of publications to military posts "can only be decided in Washington." This order is expected to end the practice of some military commanders of acting on their own feeling about Negro publications.

Col. Colman's Court-Martial In Shooting Case Opened

Post
Washington, D. C.
SEP 9 1943

Selfridge Field, Mich., Sept. 8. — Capt. W. Stanley Dolan, assistant trial judge advocate, today told members of the courtmartial trying Col. William T. Colman on charges alleging 29 violations of the Articles of War, that the Government proposed to show that Colonel Colman was "a careless, drunken man."

Colonel Colman, relieved as commandant of the Army air base here following the shooting and wounding last May of Pvt. William McRae, a Negro chauffeur, has pleaded innocent to all the charges, and offered testimony designed to show he was suffering from a mental disorder at the time of the shooting.

Captain Dolan said the Government would seek to show that Colonel Colman would have shot the officer of the day or anybody else who happened to be within range at the time McRae was shot.

The Government would also show, Captain Dolan said in an opening statement to the court, that Colonel Colman once asked his girl secretray, "Haven't you got a boy friend you want transferred here?"

Later, Captain Dolan said, the girl's cousin, a saxophone player, enlisted at Selfridge as a parachute rigger, and was assigned to the field band by Colonel Colman.

The Government proposed to show, Captain Dolan continued, that Colonel Colman was given the continuing use of a summer lodge near Oscoda, Mich., by Herman Granse, representative of a Bay City, Mich., firm erecting buildings at Selfridge, after the colonel arranged to have Granse's two soldier sons transferred to the field.

Transfer of one of the sons, Captain Dolan said, was arranged within a few hours of his scheduled embarkation for an overseas theater of operations.

The trial before eight colonels and one lieutenant colonel, was resumed today after the court late yesterday in a 10-minute closed session denied a defense motion to dismiss seven of the most serious charges against Colonel Colman on the grounds of insanity.

THE STOCKTON PROGRAM

AUG 21 1943

The bad features of General E. A. Stockton's educational program for colored soldiers at Camp Stewart, Ga., were admirably stated by John Jasper's exclusive dispatch to the AFRO last week.

Reminding colored soldiers that they once were slaves wasn't at all tactful. Millions of whites are slaves today to Hitler. The Romans regarded the Britons as "too dumb" to be slaves and counselled against bringing them home as prisoners.

Today we have the British conquering the Romans and regarding the Italian people as inferior fighters. That is how the times change. Today's slave is tomorrow's master.

The Germans kicked the Russians around for centuries. The "stupid Russian" was a German household word. Now it's Russia's turn to master the Germans. There is no color line to slavery. If we lose this war by failing to rebuke intolerant generals like Stockton, we, colored and white, shall be slaves to Japan and to Germany.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

The inconsistency of the Stockton directive is equally manifest in his thesis that the law is the Golden Rule, but colored troops must accept segregation and the customs of the South or else expect punishment.

That is quite an indigestible meal for colored soldiers. Maybe General Stockton never heard that an army travels on its stomach.

These illogical and discordant passages of the Stockton bulletin becloud its excellent features—and it has some fine points.

For example, it proposes to hold officers responsible for the enlisted men, on the theory that there are no bad regiments, only regiments with bad colonels.

It puts officers on notice that epithets are not to be used and every man in uniform is a soldier—an important cog in the war machine.

Soldiers are to have the regulations governing desertion, absence without leave, disrespect for officers, mutiny, sedition, murder, rape, sodomy, theft, forgery and perjury, repeated again and again until they know them thoroughly.

In general, if we are going to have better soldiers, we must have responsible officers, who will quit making excuses and make good.

General Stockton's program is the first in this war instructing officers and men at length in the important problem of getting along with each other and with the community. In the main, it is bad medicine. But it does attack the problem. That is its chief virtue.

47c-1943

CAMPS

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Comments on General Stockton's Order to Soldiers at Camp Stewart, Ga.

EDITOR'S NOTE:

General Stockton ordered officers and soldiers in a program of education issued July 29 to observe the Golden Rule, segregation, the laws of Georgia, the customs of the South, and to be polite to white people—Italic

Comments from Philadelphians on the directive of Brigadier General Stockton follow:

HERBERT E. MILLEN, assistant director of public safety:

"At this time, when all people of the world are fighting for the Four Freedoms, we colored Americans, whose Chief Executive is one of the underspoken exponents of the Four Freedoms, should not be compelled to submit to the treatment and attitude which we find in the Southern States, particularly in Georgia, Mississippi, and Florida.

"Many young men who have lived in the North where some semblance of freedom is accorded them, suddenly find themselves in the armed forces in these Southern States where customs have not changed in the last 75 years, where treatment of the colored citizen is such that it is but little higher than that accorded slaves before the Emancipation.

Should Begin at Home

"Since we are fighting for democracy, it should be started at home where the preachments we hear from the pulpit, over the radio and from the Senate chamber itself should become a reality.

"The instruments of death being used by the Axis powers are no discriminators of persons. Black people, white people, brown people, all members of the human family, are subject to destruction at the hands of these instruments of war and we colored Americans who have contributed more than our quota by our willingness to serve and our ability to sacrifice should receive a larger measure of fair play.

"The attitude of General Stockton is no worse than the attitude of some of the leaders of the countries who comprise the Axis powers."

Spaulding "Shocked"

AUG 21 1943

THEODORE O. SPAULDING, president, NAACP:

I am shocked by the excerpts I've seen of the directive which I'm advised was issued by Brigadier General Stockton on July 29. The implications which can be drawn from the statements in this directive reveal an attitude dangerously Fascist-like towards colored people who by right of heritage are entitled to all of the rights of citizenship.

"It is hard for me to imagine our military department knuckling so completely to undemocratic customs as evidenced here. There is small wonder that we note on every hand from soldiers of color a sarcastic vein of ridicule about the 'ideals of democracy' for which we are fighting.

"If this directive is a true indication of War Department attitudes. I fear for the future of America."

Henry "Not Surprised"

MAGISTRATE EDWARD W. HENRY:

AUG 21 1943

"I'm shocked and yet I'm not surprised. Such conditions are a disgrace to this country. They are more of a disgrace to the U.S. Army from the Commander-in-Chief down. If such conditions cannot be corrected by the Commander-in-Chief or those next in authority, they should be corrected by congressional action.

"I have a verbal report from a private in the army who was stationed in that same camp. He said that the colonel commanding that outfit in addressing them on one occasion said: 'We are going to try to make soldiers of you young men and don't be just a bunch of n - - - - - s, but act like soldiers.'

"No group of men on earth, black or white, native-born or foreign-born can submit to such outrageous treatment without protesting, and I'm proud that some of our boys have the courage to protest, while others are, unfortunately, thoroughly cowed.

"I think we owe it to our God and to our country to insist that the South is not the whole government, even if it is riding in the saddle and that obnoxious Southern customs are not the law of God and must be corrected by praying or fighting. That is the way I feel; that is the way millions feel."

HAROLD A. LETT, secretary, New Jersey Urban League:

One of the reasons for Judge William Hastie's resignation from his War Department post was his inability to get the Army to issue an educational pamphlet to white soldiers.

General Stockton's statement, therefore, merely supports the conviction of any liberal-minded person that the Army is working to strengthen anti-colored attitudes in American life. General Stockton warns soldiers that if Hitler won the war, colored and whites "would be thrown back into slavery," and that "Hitler thinks the only people on earth fit to live well are his own breed of supermen."

Then, he adds, "The laws of Georgia provide for segregation" of white and colored people. Has General Stockton compared his views and the laws of the South with Hitler's philosophy which he says should be destroyed?

MRS. R. P. MILBURN, white, chairman of Newark Interracial Council:

General Stockton's statement is disgusting to those working for interracial harmony and goodwill. It was stupid and tactless and will only intensify race hatred.

It may be truthfully said, "When in Rome, do as the Romans do," but that refers to one who voluntarily goes to Rome. The colored soldiers in Georgia went sent there by the United States Government and not because they wanted to go there. They are wearing the uniform of this country and should certainly be treated according to the laws of the nation—not Georgia.

I would hate to live in Georgia and if I did I would certainly fight to end racial segregation which is a disgrace to our democratic ideals.

MRS. RUTH OLDS, counsellor War Department's Office of Dependency Benefits, Newark:

General Stockton's directive is an insult to intelligent American citizens and a blow in the face of colored soldiers who are fighting to preserve a democracy in which they have shared very little.

It is most unfortunate that many of the responsible leaders in the prosecution of our war effort think as he does, even though they may not be as frank. The North may have won the Civil War ut the South certainly won the peace and is strongly entrenched in our national life. General Stockton should e removed for making such a statement which certainly is demoralizing to the men under his command and detrimental to the war effort. They recently ordered a trial for Chaplain Fuller who expressed his disapproval of un-American practices among soldiers. I wonder what will be the attitude of the War Department towards General Stockton?

J. MERCER BURRELL, veteran of World War I and Newark attorney:

This is the most insulting statement since General Ballou's infamous order issued to the students of the 17th Provisional Training Regiment Officers Reserve Corps at Fort Des Moines, Iowa in July, 1917. On this occasion the General threatened to court-martial any officer-candidate who resented segregation in theatres and public places of Des Moines, even though the State of Iowa did have a Civil Rights Law of sort.

General Stockton's directive is an insult to colored soldiers under his command as well as a gratuitous insult to the entire race by a military official who evidently seeks to destroy the morale of citizens.

The General shows himself to be an un-reconstructed rebel who still believes that Abraham Lincoln was wrong and slavery was a benevolent institution.

THOMAS L. PURYEAR, Newark housing head and chaplain in World War I:

This fellow Stockton is wearing an American uniform but he is certainly representing Hitler.

I am astounded that this sort of malicious propaganda can come from a high Army officer. This is the kind of loose, prejudiced talk that sets off the race frictions in this country. In as much as General Stockton's order is now known, tihs disservice to the colored soldiers under his command disqualifies him for further service in the Army of the United States.

He has sown the seeds for future race riots, because the soldier in uniform builds up a resentment which he may silently accept, while in the service, but will be bitterly and violently expressed when he returns to civilian life.

Only a weakness in the leadership of the War Department prevents the General from being immediately dismissed for harboring and promoting un-American views while representing the government.

WILLIAM .R JACKSON, Newark YMCA secretary:

The future of all that America holds dear hangs in the balance, while misinformed and misunderstanding persons in high positions in the Army continue to breed dissension among the men they are sworn to lead.

If Black Americans are giving their lives to maintain the diabolic customs of the South, the laws of Georgia, face segregation, Jim Crowism and white superiority, then all the "blood, sweat and tears" which have been spent on th ehomefronts and battlefields of the world have been in vain. Nazism is the same, whether practiced by a German Dictator or an American Army officer. A veneer of "Georgia culture" cannot cover up Nazi methods, even though they are practiced in America.

Undermining the morale of men in the armed services of this country is treason. General Stockton should be removed—and all others like him who know democracy only as a word and not a way of life.

Constitution
Atlanta, Georgia

Words of Wisdom

There are many Negro troops stationed at Camp Stewart. Some of them are of the south, but many are draftees from the Negro sections of northern cities, such as Harlem in New York and the Negro areas of Detroit, Chicago, Philadelphia, etc.

SEP 10 1943

Brigadier General E. A. Stockton, in command of the antiaircraft center at Camp Stewart, is the author of a 12-page booklet entitled "Educational Program for Colored Troops." It has been issued to every Negro at the camp. It would serve a good cause if it could be put in the hands, as required reading, of every Negro in every southern camp.

The following paragraphs, words of highest wisdom for those to whom they are addressed, are taken from General Stockton's booklet:

"A good soldier doesn't have time to fool with his home town politics, or to go around telling other soldiers how the country should be run. Any question about white people and black people will never be settled by barracks talk. Let's forget these things for the time being, buckle down to real soldiering, and win the war.

SEP 10 1943

"We have heard that our soldiers in England are given rules on how to get along with the English people, who have many habits and customs different from ours.

"Our soldiers in Africa were given rules on how to get along with the Mohammedans, and other peoples who live there.

"Our soldiers in Sicily have been told how to treat people there.

"You are in Georgia. While you are here, you must obey the laws of the state of Georgia. The laws of Georgia may not be the laws of New York, or the District of Columbia, or Pennsylvania, or Illinois, but that makes no difference.

"Some of you may not understand why you can't go everywhere white folks go in Georgia. It's because the law says so.

SEP 10 1943

"Whether or not they did this where you came from, and no matter what you think about it, it is your duty to do exactly as the laws say, and to accept the customs of the people, while you are in Georgia.

"Be polite and respectful in any talk you may have with white people. Don't try to start conversations with white strangers. Stay out of white places, and sit where you are supposed to sit on trains and buses.

"You are in the south. Things have been as they are in the south for a long time, and they will probably continue to be that way for a long time. If you start any argument or disturbances over these things, you will get nowhere, settle nothing, and get yourself in trouble."

Inspection At Fort Huachuca Thorough

Atlanta, Georgia
Daily World
SEP 11 1943

FT. HUACHUCA, Ariz.—(ANP)—Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis and Acting Civilian Aide Truman K. Gibson Jr., spent a week here recently giving Fort Huachuca and the 92nd division an inspection which was a bit out of the ordinary. The officials conferred with officers from the commanding general on down. They held conferences in groups, singly and sometimes repeated them. In addition and perhaps more important they talked individually with several hundred soldi[illegible] Gen. Davis and Gibson saw personally every soldier on the post who had filed a complaint. They ran down every rumor which came to them before they got here or which they heard after they arrived. If anything was wrong with the 92nd either as to morale or physical well being they appeared determined to find out what it was.

Observers felt their progress was slowed somewhat by the calibre of many of the men. It is said that complaints come frequently from men whose intelligence quotients do not rate high. Man after man when pressed regarding his troubls is said to have explained that their training and education had been neglected; they just could not understand the things they were to do or why they had to do them. These cases prove graphic indictments of the [illegible]ional preparedness which [illegible] democracy gives our citizens.

Many of the gripes come from men who have just become discontented without specific reasons. Occasionally this applies to officers. The 92nd has a considerable number of officers especially in the ower grades who have emerged rom the ranks because of natural bility and passed through officer andidate training schools but hose total educational training ould be classed perhaps as deficient.

Some of the 60 officers who were or had been in disciplinary school were an example. There were rumors that these men had been found guilty of misdemeanors and more or less railroaded into this school. Every officer in the school was interviewed and given an opportunity to express himself. It is reported to have developed that practicall[illegible] of them [illegible] pleaded guilty to the charg[illegible] assessed against them and that in most cases they refused to plead other than guilty. Charges varied from drunkness to foul language and conduct unbecoming an officer.

There appears to be some question as to whether the Davis-Gibson report will be made public. It is certain, however, that from Maj. Gen. [illegible]mond on [illegible], the entire division has now a thorough understanding of what Washington headquarters expects of it while men who feel they have had a grievance [illegible] certain of an impartial investigation on [illegible] merits of the case.

SEP 11 1943

PX MANAGER

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Promotion of Mrs. Jewel Maxine Garland to manager of the Fourth Regiment post exchange, Fort Warren, Wyo., has been announced in the Quartermaster Replacement Training center. Just 26 years old, Mrs. Garland is one of the youngest and perhaps the only woman PX manager in the States. On her staff of 11 employees are three men.

Brilliant Array Of Ex-College Stars To Play With Ft. Benning

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia
SEP 27 1943

Pfc. JOHN L. ROBINSON

FORT BENNING, Ga.—(SNS)—Under the able tutelage of Capt. Charles R. Houghland, head coach, of Notre Dame fame, and assisted by Lt. Hugh Martin of the University of Alabama, Sgt. Nelson T. Archer of Morehouse College, and Cpl. John H. Spriggs of Alcorn College, a strong [illegible] team is expected from a squad of fifty (50) men.

Led by the All-American Macon Williams of Florida A. and M. College, the Tigers rapidly round into shape. Other stalwarts to appear in the line-up are: Leo T. Harrison, teammate of Williams at Florida A. and M., Franklin Banks, All-American quarterback of Bluefield College, V. H. Henderson of N. C. College, Arthur Lacey of Clark College, "M[illegible]" Cheatham of Alabama State, James Williams, John "Honey" Smith, Bruce Mackey, L. Rogers, and George Hollingsworth of Morris Brown, Lonnie Gaines, Warren Baugh, Richard Baugh, Nathaniel Smith, and Lewis Crews of Alabama A. and M. College, George Hall of Dillard University, Stanford Smith, Albert Williams, J. Sullivan of Morehouse, John L. Pitts of Talladega, John Moulton of Knoxville College, Hosea Hudson and Jesse Gibson, Miles College, Collier Carson of Benedict College, J. Martin, W. J. Monroe, and others.

With a fast backfield averaging 185 lbs., behind a 200 pound line the Tigers expect to take on all opponents. A tough schedule has been arranged consisting of such teams [illegible] Clark College, Atlanta; Georgia 3rd S. T. R. Panthers, Ft. Benning, Florida; Florida A. and M. Rattlers; Alabama State Hornets; Tuskegee Tigers; and other Southern Conference teams to be announced later.

SEP 27 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sun-Tanned Yank Commandos Wear Dagger Emblems

By E. W. BAKER
Courier War Correspondent

AUG 28 1943

CAMP CLIPPER, Calif., Aug. 26—Down the steps flanking the stage of the huge 93rd Division Desert Bowl sprightly tripped long lines of lithe, brawny, erect soldiers to the tune of the especially-composed "Ranger Song;" last Tuesday night.

Intermittent blasts of explosives with accompanying blasts of light in the darkened amphitheatre heightened the military atmosphere as they nudged into the bars of the new song sung to the music of "It's A Grand Old Flag."

Halting in front of the raised platform, these men, approximately one officer and two non-coms from each unit of the division, proudly watched their representatives receive certificates of proficiency and authorization to wear a six-inch cloth red dagger on a blue field attached to their uniform. The dagger is the official emblem of the Rangers.

These men were graduates of the 93rd's Ranger course and are outstanding examples of the art of manly mayhem, the living embodiments of all-out offense, tougher, faster, better trained than any enemy they may be called upon to meet in mortal combat.

They are now going through the division developing other sun-tanned Yanks in methods to use their strength and resourcefulness against scientifically-developed human beasts in Germany and Japan, with an essence which is an utter disregard of all rules of sportsmanship and fair play.

LEARN DEADLY ART OF KILLING

For [illegible] ago, these men had had their ear drums pressed back by the concussion of heavy dynamite charges in their training, their flesh torn in barbed wire entanglements over which they hurled their bodies and formed human bridges so that their companions could forge ahead, their heads bobbing just a few inches under a stream of deadly machine-gun bullets, and had themselves flung over the backs of opponents in the art of killing with the bare hands.

As these men stood before him, Maj. Gen. Raymond G. Lehman, commanding general of the 93rd Division, with unabashed satisfaction declared: "You don't need these special awards. Your attitude of self-assurance and your soldierly bearing proves to me that you're good and know that you're good."

He led his audience into confidences about his plan for the division—Rangers All—to have every man under his command able to beat the fanatic military enemy maniacs at anything they can offer. He emphasized how the training will enable each man to protect his own life.

In picturesque, vigorous language, General Lehman predicted: "We'll run the enemy to the end of the earth . . . break their backs and their necks in their own backyard . . ."

HARD WORK AHEAD

Although the general warned the men of the hard work, discomfitures, and sufferings they must undergo before wearing the Ranger dagger, his program caught the popular fancy, elicited profuse applause, and led to the new greeting about the camp, "Hi, Ranger," and an apparent determination of the 93rd to merit the salutation.

"You have the gratitude of the division for your work," General Lehman told hard-bitten, soft-talking Lt. Col. A. M. Murray, Ranger commandant, then handed him a certificate of commendation. Similar presentations were made to more than three-score assistant instructors.

Introduced by Col. Stanley M. Prouty, Chief of Staff, Colonel Murray gave a detailed story of Ranger training.

In the development of these men to become the deadliest killers of all, they are taught the use of the hand as a blade, the fist as a bludgeon, use of fingertips to blind, the edge of the hand to cripple or stun.

They learn that delicate military operation of night patrolling, making their own Molotov cocktails to destroy tanks and pillboxes, construction and destruction of booby traps which the Germans and Italians used so effectively in Tunisia, shooting from hips at targets which bob up unexpectedly.

Along with the general physical conditioning, the men also learn the art of camouflage, how to snipe and stalk the enemy, ambushing, and close combat with all the weapons at their disposal.

BAND COMMENDED

The officers receiving the Ranger awards and the units they represented follow: 1st Lt. Wilbur C. Goodwin, 318th Engineers and 25th Infantry; 1st Lt. Lemuel S. Brown, 368th Infantry; 1st Lt. Robert Stormont, Division Artillery, Reconnaissance Troop, Signal Corps, Quartermaster Corps, and Division Headquarters.

The 368th Band was lauded for presentation of the Ranger song and music during the exercises and great ovations were given when the following were commended by [illegible]: Cpl. William Kyle, regimental headquarters, arranger of the song; Staff Sgt. Robert L. Taylor, for orchestration of each instrument; 1st Sgt. Antone Delhousaye, band leader, and Col. James R. Urquhart, commanding 368th Infantry.

AUG 28 1943

47c-1943

Camps

NEW OUTBREAKS IN ARMY CAMPS; SOLDIER DIES, 6 HURT

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois
1943

On the heels of race violence believed to have been aggravated by reports of mistreatment of Negro soldiers stationed in the South comes reports this week of another series of racial outbreaks between Negro and white soldiers. In one instance a Negro soldier was shot to death and six others wounded during an encounter between white and colored soldiers at Camp Shenango, Pa., last Sunday evening.

The official post report stated:

"Friction between white and colored troops which developed at the Shenango Personnel Replacement depot Sunday evening resulted in the death of one Negro soldier and the wounding of six more. All the men are now being treated at station hospital." The slain soldier was identified as Pvt. Norman Taylor, 20, of Rosedale, Kas.

CAMP STEWART PROBE LOOMS

JUL 13 1943

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Secretary of War Henry Stimson this week assured the NAACP that it plans to act against the deplorable condition revealed in a recent memorandum to the War department on the treatment of Negro soldiers stationed at Camp Stewart.

"We appreciate your sincere interest in the welfare," wrote Secretary Stimson, "of the Negro officers and enlisted men, who are stationed at Camp Stewart, and assure you that the War department is taking action to see that there will be no just cause for complaint as to the personnel and facilities under its jurisdiction."

JUL 13 1943

NEGRO SOLDIERS STRIKE AFTER TROUBLE IN JACKSON

FLORA, Miss., July 15.—Negro soldiers in training at the Mississippi Ordnance plant a few miles north of this town, according to authortative reports reaching here, went on strike Thursday morning following disorders in Jackson, the state capital, Wednesday night.

The immediate cause of the strike is said to have been the allaged serious beating of one of their number, and the alleged of several of their wives and women companions, a number of whom were put in jail by civilian policemen in Jackson Wednesday night. The arrests were made after Negro soldiers and military and civilian policemen became involved in what is reported to have threatened to a serious incident, which brought a large number of military and civilian police scurrying to Negro neighborhoods."

Rumors to the effect that the soldier who had been beaten in Jackson Wednesday night had died, which quickly spread throughout the city, have since been proved false. It was learned from reliable sources that the soldier was being treated at the camp while suffering from one or two scalp wounds.

During the Thursday morning demonstration at the camp, it was reported that three Negro military policemen, from whom the wounded soldier was taken by civilian police and beaten, had to be rushed out of camp for safety because of threats made by the soldiers who held them at fault for giving the soldier over to the custody of white civilian officers.

JUL 13 1943

What was the immediate cause of the Wednesday disturbance in Jackson has been the subject of many conflicting rumors and reports. The disturbance began a few hours after a large number of the soldiers on pay day leave fro mthe Jackson Air base and the Mississippi Ordnance plant reached the heart of the Negro neighborhood. No white civilians were involved in the dispute, it was said.

JUL 13 1943

Officers Stop Soldiers Brawl

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

SHEPPARD FIELD, Texas, July 1—Sympathetic and cool-headed action probably prevented a serious racial outbreak among white officers and men, colored platoon leaders and soldiers here June 21 when the 301st Training group met the 19th Aviation Squadron group.

As the platoons marched into each other, a white sergeant reportedly uttered a charge to his men in which he used a baneful expression quickly resented by the colored platoon leaders and their men, who, it was said, were given a 'fall out" command—and fist fighting broke out.

The major and two white lieutenants abandoned their cars and ended the disturbance before anyone could be critically hurt, according to information, and then the men were given a sympathetic lecture and a plea for self-control and patriotism, after which total peace was restored. However, special military patrolmen were assigned to keep order after duty hours.

JUL 13 1943

Reports Reveal Fort Bragg To Move Negroes

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia
1943

Combat Troops Being Changed To Service Units

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(A N P)—Reports from an unofficial source revealed that large groups of Negro troops had been transferred from Fort Bragg to other points and that eventually there would not be any Negroes in the nation's largest army post.

It was further said that cadres and shipments of field artillery soldiers were being transferred almost daily to organize service companies and quartermaster units. Most of these soldiers are from one of the country's crack artillery units and had outpointed white troops in frequent tests on the range.

OCT 6 1943

A band from a training unit which is led by Chief Warrant Officer J. J. Brice, is also making preparations to move to an unannounced destination. Brice was at one time leader of a famed engineer band serving in North Africa with a task force.

OCT 6 1943

It was also believed that no more Negroes would be trained at that installation for field artillery since most Negroes overseas are doing labor tasks. WACs stationed there are replacing many soldiers in such duties as ward attendants, truck drivers and general warehouse work.

Riot Rumors Grip Evansville, Ind.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

By JULIUS HOLDER

JUL 13 1943

EVANSVILLE, Ind.—(ANP) — Soldiers, war workers, and others of the civilian population were gripped with jitters the past weekend as sinister rumors of race war were circulated throughout the city. The fear sensation was heightened with the noticeable absence from streets and boulevards of the usual overflow of soldiers from nearby Camp Breckenridge.

An 'out of bounds' order issuing from the fifth corps area headquarters at Ft. Hayes in Columbus, O., resulted in the huddling of soldiers on leave into jeeps and trucks for Camp Breckenridge and the paratroops base on the outskirts of town.

Dame rumor began her work at a local war plant Friday when it revealed that former white employes of the concern had telephoned a message to Negroes that a contingent of white paratroopers was planning to descend upon the city Saturday and start a riot. The soldiers were said to be moved to revenge for the alleged stabbing of a paratroop officer by three Negro youths several days ago.

RUMORS PILE UP

Rumor piled upon rumor until it was almost accepted as a fact that the officer had died from his wounds and the paratroopers had stolen several machine guns. The whole situation created a tenseness that threatenoded to break out into open violence. That there was some basis for apprehension was seen in an order from the police department requiring Derbyville business men to close thier stores early and civilians to remain off the streets.

JUL 13 1943

Late Friday steel-helmeted military police were placed on guard duty in all sections of Evansville. Heavily populated Lincoln avenue and the Fifth street district drew special attention with a concentration of patrols. The service men were fully equipped and rode around in jeeps and commando cars.. They were augmented Saturday by a large company of Negro military policemen from Camp Breckenridge.

Dr. C. E. Rochelle, an active worker in community affairs, was contacted by the Evansville Argus and asked to commment upon the situation. Dr. Rochelle said that rumors of race wars were vicious propaganda and tended to disrupt vital war activity. (Several score Negro war workers were reported absent from their jobs during the crisis.)

SHOULD BE PUNISHED

"Those who peddle such rumors should be punished and to the fullest extent of the law," he said. "I feel that Chief of Police Freer, Col. John D. Kelley and others responsible for the augmented police forces that patrolled Evansville streets during the week end should be commended very highly for their cooperative efforts to thwart any attempts that might have been made to cause any trouble in the city and to allay the fears of those who took the rumors to heart."

PURELY RACIAL AFFAIR

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa

(Official U. S. Army Statement)

JUN 19 1943

CAMP STEWART, Ga. — Post authorities announced today that one military policeman was killed and four wounded during a riot of colored troops here last night.

No white soldiers were involved in the disturbance, other than the MPs, and no colored soldiers were injured, it was added.

Cause of the riot has not been determined and a board of officers was appointed immediately to investigate.

First reports indicated that colored soldiers had been stirred up by "false and malicious" rumors that colored girls were being molested.

Major E. P. Scott, Provost Marshall, said only one shot was fired by the MP's during the time they were fired on by the colored soldiers.

Quiet was restored by 12:30 a. m., there have been no further disturbances and the post has returned to normal, Major Scott added.

Dead was:

Pfc. Ronie E. Findsey, 22, Valdosta, Ga.

Wounded were:

Staff Sgt. John L. McEachern, 31, Homestead, Mont.

Sgt. Charles W. Almand, 24, Atlanta, Ga.

Sgt. William V. Brown, 24, New York City.

Pvt. Merlin B. Hotchkiss, 20, Perry, N. Y.

1943

---

200 SOLDIERS IN FLARE-UP

Pittsburgh Pa. Courier

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif., July 1—It required military and civilian authorities—even with the aid of tear gas bombs and other modern riot-breaking devices—more than an hour to throttle a violent racial flare-up between about 200 white and colored soldiers from nearby army camps here Wednesday, June 23, on Higuera street, this city's main thoroughfare.

JUL 3 1943

In order to halt the smashing of store windows, stoning of each other, and general rioting by the servicemen—and a few civilians—Col. L. E. Goodier Jr., representing Col. Henry T. Bull, Camp San Luis Obispo commanding officer, ordered all military traffic stopped and dispelled civilians from the streets.

ORDERED OUT

The trouble reportedly was the result of the refusal of Danny Chisea, proprietor of a local night spot, to serve colored soldiers after a USO dance around 9:30 p. m., following which white soldiers—already in the place—are said to have stormed the Negro servicemen, ordering them out of the place. According to information, the colored soldiers did leave the business place, but, as soon as they reached the sidewalk, retaliated sharply with the result that general confusion broke out.

Soldier Riot Due To Overcrowding

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa

JUL 24 1943

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Overcrowding of that portion of Camp Shenango assigned to colored troops was offered this week by the Mercer County, Pa., NAACP branch as one of the reasons for the July 11 outbreak at the Army camp.

The national office of the NAACP has submitted to Secretary of War Stimson information gathered by the Mercer County branch which says that causes for the disturbance are: (1) Insufficient living and recreational facilities on the post for colored troops. (2) Overcrowding of that portion of the camp assigned to colored troops. (3) [illegible] colored chaplains or commissioned officers on the post. (4) Failure of the commanding officer to foresee the handicaps or recognize approaching danger, as well as regarding the riot as just a passing incident. (5) Lack of courtesy towards soldiers and citizens by white military police. (6) Releasing of only that part of the facts of the case which might incriminate the colored soldiers and influence the minds of the reading and listening public.

The NAACP is continuing to check a report that three Negroes and four white soldiers were killed.

JUL 24 1943

JUL 24 1943

Negro Slain, Six Wounded In Army Riot

PM
New York, N. Y

Special Correspondence

JUL 13 1943

GREENVILLE, Pa., July 13.—Seven Negro soldiers were shot, one fatally, in a gun fight at the Shenango Personnel Replacement Depot, near here, following a clash between Negro and white soldiers.

Although the trouble occurred Sunday evening, only sketchy details were released by the camp's Public Relations Office.

The camp announcement related that trouble started about 9:30 p.m. when a dispute arose between white and Negro soldiers at a post exchange.

Col. Zim E. Lawhon, post commander, intervened and addressed the quarreling men, pointing out that serious consequences might arise if the dispute continued.

Inquiry Underway

Peace was restored, the report continued, but later in the evening "an undetermined number of Negro soldiers" broke into a supply building, armed themselves with rifles and ammunition "and began firing into the area occupied by the whites."

What happened after that was not disclosed. Col. Lawhon could not be reached by PM with a request for additional information.

The camp announced that Pvt. Norman Taylor, 20, of Rosedale, Kan. was killed and that the six other men were in the post hospital with gunshot wounds.

It was announced that an investigation was under way by a board of inquiry appointed by Col. Lawhon.

Disturbance Is Laid To 'False, Malicious Rumor'

Daily World

No Participating Soldiers Wounded; MP's Are Victims

Atlanta, Georgia

JUN 1943

CAMP STEWART, Ga.—(SNS)—One white military policeman was killed and four others wounded during a riot of troops here Wednesday night, Captain Walter H. Dustmann, Jr., public relations officer, reported Thursday.

Dustmann said that no white soldiers were involved in the disturbance other than military police and officers and that none of the Negro soldiers participating was injured.

Cause of the riot was not immediately determined. Captain Dustmann said, first reports indicated that Negro soldiers had been stirred up by a rumor that Negro girls were being molested. The rumor was declared to be "false and malicious."

Private Ronie E. Lindsey, 22, of Valdosta, Ga., was shot and died immediately. The wounded included: Staff Sergeant John L. McEachern, 31, of Homestead, Mont.; Sergeant Charles W. Almond, 24, of Atlanta; Sergeant William B. Brown, 24, of New York City; Private Merlin B. Hotchkiss, 20, of Perry, N. Y. McEachern was reported in serious condition.

According to Major E. P. Scott, provost marshal, only one shot was fired by military police. He claimed that the military officers were fired on intermittently by the soldiers.

Quiet was restored shortly before midnight and Major Scott said there had been no further disturbance on the post.

A board of officers was appointtd immediately to investigate the disturbance.

JUN 1943

Situation Tense for Long Time

Kansas City, Mo.

Separate Busses Among Grievances Of Our Soldiers

CAMP STEWART, Ga. — The killing of a white MP on June 9 at Camp Stewart, Ga., and the wounding of four others by bullets allegedly fired by Negro troops was seen this week by the N. A. A. C. P. as the culmination of unsatisfactory conditions which have existed at the camp for months.

The MP who was killed was Private First Class Ronie E Lindsey of Valdosta, Ga. The wounded men were Staff Sergeant John L. McEacher, Homestead, Mont.; Sergeant Charles W. Almand, Atlanta, Ga.; Sergeant William V. Brown, New York City and Private Merlin B. Hatchkill, Perry, N. Y.

The N. A. A. C. P. has submitted to the Department of Justice the report of an investigator immediately dispatched to the scene.

The N. A. A. C. P. report revealed these findings:

Transportation Bad

The transportation situation is and for a long time has been, a rasping issue. Separate buses are operated for white and Negro soldiers, in the ratio of about one for Negroes, six for whites, and this despite the fact that Negro soldiers are approximately 40 per cent of the camp personnel.

The taxicabs in Hinesville (nearest town to Camp Stewart) refuse to ride Negro soldiers.

There is high resentment among Negro soldiers of the Nazi-racial attitude of the white officers in command. Interviewed Negro officers and enlisted men all insisted that the situation could not be remedied so long as they remained under command of Colonels Gross and Ochs, both of German extraction, and General Spiller, who was characterized as being "definitely in sympathy with the whole policy of discrimination."

Negro MP's are without authority. Negro soldiers and civilians resent this, and resent that all MP's stationed in Savannah are white, even those designated to patrol the most thickly settled Negro areas.

Recreational facilities for Negro soldiers are glaringly inadequate. There are no provisions made at all for the recreation of Negro officers. Fifty persons crowd out the Negro USO. The Negro service club has a total floor space coverage of 100 by 200 feet. Contrastingly, white officers have a service club; the white USO is a spacious two-story building; white enlisted men have a service club with floor space measuring 350 by 500 feet.

Meagre facilities are provided for treatment of Negro soldiers afflicted with venereal diseases. White civilians nurses in the camp hospital have refused to handle Negro patients, and in Savannah there is only one prophylactic station for colored soldiers.

In two known instances, Negro soldiers have been kicked by white officers. On one occasion the officer was not identified; on the other, the officer's punishment was to be transferred to another post.

Contributing also to the tension which resulted in the violent outbreak of Thursday, the investigator pointed out, were numerous other factors.

Relations of Negro soldiers with local law enforcement officers have been generally bad. Racial segregation signs were posted on toilets at the prison stockade (a Negro officer reports he was brusquely asked: 'Can't you read?" when he used a toilet marked "For White Only").

Negro officers generally are subjected to unnecessary humiliating treatment.

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

CLEAN UP THE 92ND DIVISION

SEP 6 1943

According to the Associatel Negro Press, the 92nd infantry division at Fort Huachuca is rife with discriminatory practices; that unless something tangible is done, the situation may develop into a national scandal.

Specifically the shocking charges made by army personnel attached to the fort are:

1. That the commanding general, E. M. Almond of Anniston, Alabama, refers to his Negro charges both in and out of their presence as "niggers."

2. That the division is miserably unprepared for combat service.

3. That General Almond is not a top flight commander and was not assigned to a white unit because he lacked necessary qualifications.

4. That the commanding general orders the post Gestapo to hold a "shakedown" of enlisted personnel after each live ammunition practice to detect possible bullets secreted away for an allegedly planned "insurrection."

5. That a quota system operates in the making and promotion of Negro officers with few ever reaching the rank of first lieutenant. Most of the Negro officers are "frozen" at the second lieutenant level.

6. That enlisted personnel is trained with obsolete combat weapons and not given instructions in modern methods of warfare.

7. That the food served in mess halls at Fort Huachuca is the "worst in the army."

SEP 9 1943

8. That although present conditions on the military reservation have existed ever since the division moved into Arizona last May, Atty. Truman K. Gibson, Jr., acting civilian aide to the secretary of war, and Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, inspector general from the inspector general's office, Washington, on a recent inspection here found conditions to be "in excellent shape," morale "high," training "good," and the overal picture "gratifying."

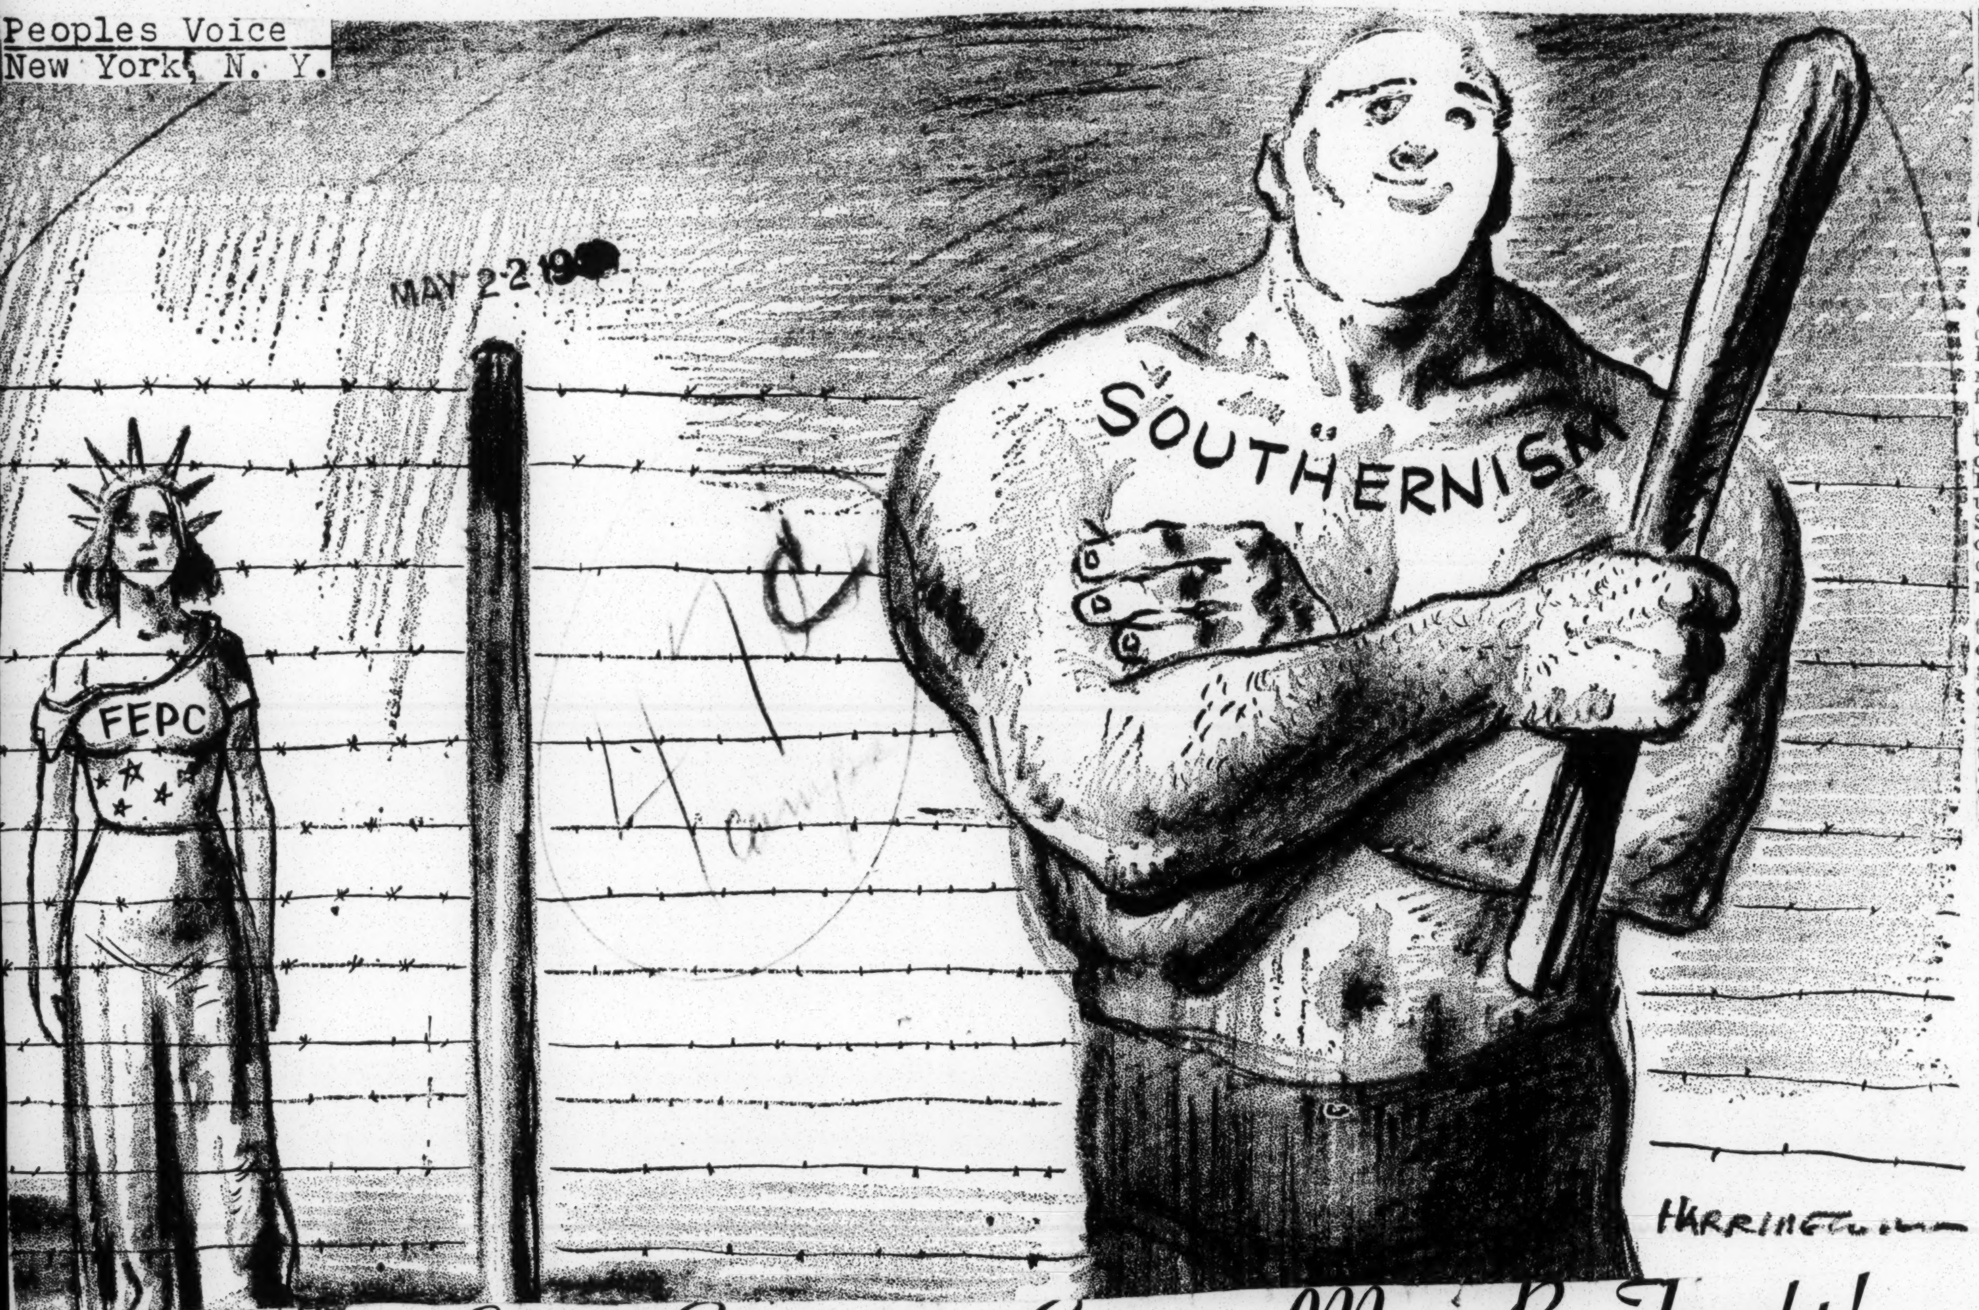
The N. A. P. has prepared two articles telling if its investigation. If true—and we doubt that such an accusation would be made without a thorough investigation—the commanding general should be removed and the division put [illegible] an efficien bases. And if this is not done, the record of the division will be a flop.

SEP 9 1943

The Bystander does not condemn all white officers, but the war department was foolish to assign a commanding general to this divisiron unless he was thoroughly in sympathy with the aims and ambitions of the Negro and had their confidence for no soldier is going to respect or fight for a man whom he hates.

And if Mr. Gibson and Mr. Davis made glowing reports of high morale and excellent shape of the men of the division in spite of the existance of all of the things the A. N. P. charges, they are contributing to the downfall of the unit.

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.



MAY 22 1943

Hitlerism at Camp Stewart in Georgia Must Be Fought!

"We Cannot Be Bought"—EDITORIAL POLICY OF THE PEOPLE'S VOICE—"We Will Not Be Sold."

THE SITUATION facing the noncommissioned officers of the 369th in Camp Stewart, Georgia, is extremely serious. It has already developed into a most bitter conflict between Southernism and the New Negro.

The 369th is not just another group of soldiers. They are better trained than the majority of their white and Negro brethern in the armed forces. There is not an anti-aircraft group anywhere that is their superior. They are the pride of Harlem. There are thousands of friends and relatives in New York City who are personally interested in their welfare. These men have not been getting the best deal.

It has been suggested in some quarters that they be moved from Camp Stewart. To me this would not solve the problem. To me the only solution of the problem would be to Democratize Camp Stewart. It is not the men of the 369th who need to be investigated but the officials of Camp Stewart.

47c

Army life is not an easy life and there can be no guarantee of creature comforts, either at home or abroad. Yet, on the other hand, BLACK FIGHTING MEN ARE ENTITLED TO THE SAME—NO MORE OR NO LESS—THAT WHITE FIGHTING MEN RECEIVE. They are entitled to equal facilities, equal treatment and the guarantee of the best possible health standards. According to the hundreds of letters that are pouring in these are not being met now.

MAY 22 1943

We can't change these conditions by moving the group to a northern camp, nor can they be changed by the men of the 369th going AWOL. They can only be changed by an aroused citizenry, black and white, compelling the War Department to investigate and make the necessary changes immediately.

MAY 22 1943

I talked to a regiment, off the record, a couple of months ago and I told them: "You are in the army to fight Hitler. You let we who are on the homefront fight American Hitlerism." This is still true. The men in the armed forces should keep us informed of all that is unAmerican and unDemocratic but leave the fight up to us.

In time of war the army is a power unto itself. The army is the law. On the other hand, in a Democratic country in the midst of Four Freedom's conflict, the army must never lose its sensitivity to the peoples' wishes and desires. The people must be heard. Whenever there is a refusal to hear them, and the powers that be become insentitive to the people, then we have reduced our fighting men and our conflict to a totalitarian basis.

KEEP SOLDIERS AT MISS. CAMP

Pittsburgh Pa.
Courier

JUL 10 1943

CENTERVILLE, Miss., July 8 (ANP)—Not only will Negro soldiers now stationed at Camp Van Dorn remain there, but they will not be disarmed, it was learned from reliable sources this week.

Following an outbreak here between Negro soldiers and white civilians, Mississippi's Governor, Paul B. Johnston, had sent an urgent wire to Secretary of War Stimson calling for the removal of the Negro soldiers from this community in "the interest of racial harmony."

Later representation was made to Camp Van Dorn's commanding officer by local officials that Negro soldiers, stationed there, be completely disarmed. Taking a firm stand, the commanding officer was reported to have refused this request on the grounds that "to disarm troops who are being trained for combat duty would be a disgrace to the United States."

47c
Camps

The Negro people of New York are extremely concerned over the problem of Camp Stewart, Georgia. More than our concern it is the concern of every right thinking, black and white member of this Democracy. It must lay heavy on the conscience of America. There can be no full victory until that conscience is purged. As a war measure steps must be taken and taken immediately.

This is the open advice of one who knows intimately the hearts and minds of the masses of people who are fighting at home and abroad. We repeat again: "WE CANNOT DEFEAT HITLER ABROAD AND LET HITLERISM RUN UP AND DOWN THE STREETS OF AMERICA."

MAY 22 1943

Adam Clayton Powell

Mississippi Governor Scared When Negro Soldiers Say They Came to Clean Up His State

June 5, 1943

June 5/19

JACKSON, Miss. — War Department investigation of a regiment was asked by Gov. Paul B. Johnson yesterday following colored soldier, Sunday and a re- the shooting of a Camp Van Dorn quest for action from Mayor Omer Carroll of Centerville, near the camp.

The Governor said he had asked Senators Eastland and Bilbo of Mississippi to advise the Secretary of War of the Centerville situation and to seek immediate investigation and action.

Incorporated in the request to the Senators was the telegram from Mayor Carroll, which read:

"Urgently request that steps be taken to have the 364th Infantry, colored, recently ordered here to Camp Van Dorn from Phoenix, Ariz., be removed by War Department to northern station. This regiment is fomenting race riots and openly boasts that they have come to clean out Mississippi. Have had no trouble with other colored troops until arrival of this regiment from Arizona some days ago. Consider this request of utmost urgency as serious race riots are lowed to remain here."

expected if this regiment al-

City Marshal Robert J. Knighton reported that Sheriff Richard Whitaker shot and killed a colored private from Camp Von Dorn Sunday when the soldier resisted arrest by military police and attempted to take a military policeman's gun.

Col. R. E. Guthrie, commanding officer of Camp Van Dorn described the trouble as "an individual incident" and said there had been "a little emotional disturbance among colored troops and some unrest among the people of Centerville."

"The situation is under control and we anticipate no difficulty," he added.

Col. Guthrie said Sheriff Whitaker told him he fired on the soldier in Centreville after a warning.

June 5, 1943

Columbia, S. C., State

June 11, 1943

MP Killed When Negro Troops Riot At Camp Stewart

Camp Stewart, Ga., June 10— (AP)— Capt. Walter H. Dustmann, Jr., public relations officer reported today that one military policeman was killed and four others wounded during a riot of Negro troops here last night.

He said no white soldiers were involved in the disturbance other than military police and officers and none of the Negro soldiers was injured.

Captain Dustmann said first reports indicated the Negro soldiers had been stirred up by a "false and malicious rumor" that Negro girls were being molested.

Pvt. Ronie E. Lindsey, 22, of Valdosta, Ga., was shot and killed. The wounded, all military policemen: Staff Sgt. John L. McEachern, [illegible] Homestead. Mont.; Sgt. Charles W. Almond, 24, Atlanta; Sgt. William B. Brown, 24, New York City; Pvt. Merlin B. Hotchkiss, 20, Perry, N. Y. The condition of McEachern was reported serious.

Maj. E. P. Scott, provost marshal, reported only one shot was fired by military police. The latter, he said, were fired on intermittently by the Negro soldiers.

Quiet was restored shortly after midnight and Major Scott said there had been no further disturbance on the post.

A board of officers was appointed immediately to investigate.

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Illinois

931st Artillery Moved To Georgia After 'Incident'

MAY 29 1943

CAMP GORDON, Ga. — (ANP)— The 931st [illegible] artillery battalion, an all-Negro outfit from commanding officer down, has been moved from Camp Forrest, Tenn., where 10 officers were recently ejected from a post theatre as 50 white military policemen held tommy guns on them, to this camp to participate in scheduled army maneuvers.

The 931st is headed by Lt. Col Marcus H. Ray and is composed mainly of soldiers from Chicago who were part of the 184th field artillery regiment until it was ordered disbanded several months ago.

MAY 29 1943

Members of the battalion expressed themselves as better satisfied with its accommodations than those found in any of the other seven camps to which the unit has been sent. Facilities for Negro soldiers are complete with a large service club, hostess house, post exchange, theatre, cafeteria, library and good transportation system.

The march by motor from Camp Forrest gave white southerners their first glimpse of a Negro fighting force equipped with artillery and live munition from 155 mm. guns down.

MAY 29 1943

Amsterdam Star-News

New York. N. Y.

Officers Ejected From Army Show

MAY 22 1943

MP'S with Tommy Guns Order Lieutenant Out Of Tenn. Post Theatre

CAMP FOREST, Tenn., (ANP) —A row in Post theater No. 2 last week by 5 military policemen armed with tommy guns climaxed a long standing friction regarding post theaters. The excitement occurred when the MP's ejected from the theater 10 Negro officers of the 931st Field artillery.

MAY 22 1943

Col. M. F. Maltz, post commander of Camp Forrest, stamped the Negro officers "objectionable."

Formal charges against the post commander were filed by Lt. Col. Marcus H. Ray, Negro battalion commander, who was summoned to the theater and advised that 10 of his officers had been told to get out because their presence was "objectionable."

Lt. Ray ordered his officers to leave. At this time the place was surrounded by military police who paraded about with drawn tommy guns.

MAY 22 1943

Incite to Riot Charged

Ray is said to have filed formal charges against Col. Waltz under the articles of war charging him with attempting to incite a riot.

Trouble regarding post theaters began brewing on the day the [illegible] from Fort Cus- [illegible] some 250 members of the unit were ordered out [illegible] theatre No. 1 at pistol point by M. P.'s. They had refused to take jim crow seats on the contention that the post was federal property and therefore not subject to state jim crow laws.

When they were ejected they were compelled to form outside the theater in a drainage ditch off the road while sub-machine guns of a whole military police company were ready to go off.

Saved the Day

Lt. Col. Ray's arrival on the scene saved the day, there was no bloodshed.

MAY 22 1943

After that whites were granted the middle section of the theater and the right section was labeled "colored." It was then that the Negro soldiers decided to turn to Post Theater No. 2.

The 10 officers ejected from the theatre were 1st. Lts. John A. Rector, David W. Pelkey, Lawrence Langford, Robbin E. L. Washington, Welton I. Taylor and Ernest Davenport; 2nd Lts. Byron Minor, James Dunn and Ernest V. Williams, and Warrant Officer Milton J. Winfield Jr.

ASK PROBE OF CAMP ASSAULT ON PRIVATE

Bee

Chicago, Ill.

JUL 25 1943

FT. BENNING, Ga., July 22— (ANP) — The company commander of Co. L has asked that the provisional truck regiment make an investigation of the slugging last week of a private attached to his company by a white civilian policeman on the army post while two white military police stood silently by.

The soldier, Pvt. Jasper Williams, suffered a deep gash on his forehead as a result of the attack that required four stitches.

According to reports, Pvt. Williams was assaulted by Sheriff N. B. Wright of nearby Cusseta, when the later became incensed because the soldier failed to use "sir" in addressing him. The officer had approached Williams earlier in Cusseta and questioned him about a man he was seeking named "Gilbert."

Later, after Williams ha[illegible] turned to camp he encountered the sheriff again and was subjected to further questioning. Pvt. Williams replied, "No, I haven't seen the person you are searching for" in answer to the officer's query. The sheriff, angrily demanded, "Nigger you are lying to me. Don't you ever say sir to a white man?" whereupon Williams was slugged with the policeman's gun.

The attack occurred on the military reservation and was viewed by two white MP's named Spurrier and Beasley, neither of whom attempted to prevent the assault. Williams was returning to his company after having spent part of the day in Cusseta on pay-day leave.

Bystander

Des Moines, Iowa

FT. JACKSON GETS CHAPLAIN

Fort Jackson, S. C. (ANP)—For the first time in many months, Negro troops at Fort Jackson will have the services of a chaplain of their own race.

Maj Wiley R. Deal, chief of the Fort Jackson Chaplain's branch, revealed that 1st Lt. Llewellyn T. Thornhill has been assigned to this post for duty with the 274th Quartermaster battalion.

Chaplain Thornhill was educated at Wilberforce university and Payne Theological seminary.

From "Paradise to Hell"

Kansas City Call

'From Hawaii to Camp Stewart,' Says Soldiers

Kansas City, Mo.

From Paradise to Hell!

This statement sums up the story told by fire sergeants of the United States army, now attending the Midland Radio school, here, of their transfer from overseas duty in Hawaii to Camp Stewart, Ga.

The five sergeants, all former members of the famous 369th division, are: Sgts. Ulysses S. Pitts, Dion Norwood, Nelson Carrington, Arthur Richardson, all of New York, and Sgt. George Peet of Chicago, Ill.

19 Years in Service

A combined total of 19 years in the armed service is offered by this quintet of soldiers who one and all wear bars of recognition for years of good conduct and excellence in tasks assigned.

In Hawaii they were members of the radio section of the 369th division, and their outstanding work in this department led to their applications being accepted for further study in the radio division of the army.

The Paradise to Hell story?

Well, on June 21, 1942, the famous 369th division was ordered to Hawaii to guard this United States possession against further attacks by the Japanese.

At this time the route travelled by these men was infested with Japanese means of destruction including submarines, destroyers, dive bombers, etc. The men were tense and filled with wonderment as to what lay in store for them, if and when they arrived in Hawaii.

Natives Welcome Them

The division arrived intact and procded to carry out its mission.

After routine procedures had been carried out during the first few days in Hawaii the men went in search of recreation and to explore the habitats of the island.

To their pleasant surprise they found the natives warm in their welcomes and extending of courtesies. The native women mingled and socialized with the soldiers freely and conversed with them as best they could.

The native men were cordial in their hospitalities and introduced the men to the recreational facilities of the island.

Find No Discrimination

During the nine months' stay in Hawaii these five men say that they built up several close friendships with the natives and that on numerous occasions groups of natives would come over to the camp and put on shows for them including the world famous hula dance.

They related that the USO headquarters on the island served both white and Negro troops stationed there, and that no discrimination was shown them either in use of facilities or invitations to social affairs given by the organization.

The members of the 369th were made welcome at the USO at all times and the directors in charge seemed to be over-eager to serve them and aid them in any problem that might be confronting them.

Although work came first, the social periods of the day were spent very enjoyable.

As one of the men put it, "paradise was really in the offering. For once in my life I felt like a free man and not as a tool."

Start Toward Hell

With the filing of their applications for advanced training in the field of radio these five men started on their journey to what they termed a "living hell."

Their applications were accepted by high army officials, and the five left Hawaii for Camp Stewart, Ga., where they were to be stationed until a new class for radio technicians was opened.

The return trip was made in caution but without any serious attacks by enemy ships or planes.

At last they reached Camp Stewart—the arrival at "hell."

On reporting at Camp Stewart the five were told that no accommodations were available and so they were placed in a broken down garage where the leaky roof, filth and other debris created an excellent breeding place for disease.

Protest To Washington

Several days of this type of living soon had a line of the men, some from other camps, at the door of the camp hospital seeking treatment for colds and other similar diseases, and also had aroused the resentment of the men so high that they took liberty to write officials in Washington to see what could be done about it.

On learning that an investigation was to be made the officials at Camp Stewart promptly found desirable accommodations for the men and removed them from the rat-infested garage.

"Nothing as usual was done about the conduct of the officials in charge," said one of the men, "but we were reprimanded for not being able to take it."

The men told a pitiful story of the poor transportation facilities for the Negro soldiers stationed at Camp Stewart, relating that oftimes men with week-end passes were compelled to stay in camp and give up their pleasures solely because the white operators of the bus lines would pass them up and at most only take a load or two of them into town.

Can't Ride Buses

One of the soldiers said, "If there happened to be a large contingent of white soldiers going into town you could almost look at your pass and forget it," for all the white soldiers were certain to be taken first."

The soldiers relate that a constant program of discrimination is carried out not only in the surrounding towns but directly in the camp against the Negro soldiers.

One of them said that he did not know where he would be attached following his training here but that he would rather be sent directly to a combat zone than to be returned to the deluge of unjustices heaped upon colored soldiers at Camp Stewart.

Asked if they would like to be returned to their former unit, the 369th, still stationed in Hawaii, they answered almost to the man that they would.

They said it was a mighty good feeling to breathe the air purified by the absence of discrimination and prejudice that was ever present in Hawaii.

—Ernest L. Brown Jr.

Nashville, Tenn., Banner

Paris Off Limits To Negro Troops

October 21, 1943

Paris, Tenn., Oct. 21—(Special)—Paris has been placed off limits to Negro Army troops, Police Chief Eran Butler was notified late Wednesday by Col. Frederick Dodge.

The order was issued from Camp Tyson in an effort to quell disturbances that have occurred in Paris recently and were climaxed Saturday when a city police car was damaged, Chief Butler said.

The Camp Stewart Rebellion

Afro-American

Baltimore, Maryland

That is exactly what it was—a revolt. The 100th Regiment of Coast Artillery, a colored unit, had as much segregation as it could stand last week and went berserk.

It fired 5,000 rounds of ammunition, an amazing quantity considering 24 rounds are regarded as sufficient for one soldier to carry into battle.

Firing lasted from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m before ammunition was exhausted and tempers cooled.

The fact that after all that shooting only one person was killed and five wounded is the best indication that the revolt was an expression of outraged dignity and humanity rather than a desire to kill.

It was a breach of discipline, an indefensible violation of army regulations that must be punished.

But others must share in the blame for this revolt.

The War Department had full notice of the intolerable segregation and jim crow at Camp Stewart. The newspapers had been full of it. Brigadier Geenral B. O. Davis had made an investigation and report to the Inspector General's department. Soldiers had written to newspapers and to their families at home, and their commanding officers had brushed aside these complaints by throwing up their hands and declaring that they could no nothing about them.

The Camp Stewart revolt appears to serve notice that the South can carry its segregation and its lack of respect for an army uniform too far.

There is no segregation in Federal post offices and public parks in the South; why should there be in a Federal army camp?

This newspaper has repeatedly given this advice to colored men in the armed services: You fight the enemy, let civilians keep up the battle for citizenship on the home front.

We think that admonition is wise and practical, but what good is any preachment if Federal authorities permit the States to take over the regulation of facilities in U.S. Army camps?

The rebellious 100th Regiment will be punished. It expected that. But we call upon the President to remove also the commanding officers of Camp Stewart. They are unfit to command troops.

We call upon the President to end racial discrimination in Federal army camps wherever they are located.

We say to Mr. Roosevelt that the war on the home front has lasted long enough. The American people are tired of it. He can end it. He ought to do it now. We expect him to do it.

Stage Summer Olympics At Camp Pickett, Virginia

Daily World Atlanta, Georgia

CAMP PICKETT, Va. — (SNS) — Heated battles of strength, speed and endurance highlighted the Summer Olympics held recently by the Medical Replacement Training Center at this camp.

An all-day meet, the Olympics saw more than 2,000 picked athletes strive for personal and regimental honors, while more than 15,000 spectators cheered them on.

Several outstanding Negro soldier-athletes participated in the cavalcade of sports and aided the Third Regiment to garner a total of 185 points and carry off the commanding general's cup.

The Olympics, — which comprised 27 different competitions — were staged as part of the Medical Replacement Center's after-duty athletics which augment the regular physical training program designed to condition Medical Soldiers for the arduous and dangerous battlefield tasks that lie ahead of them.

One of the most prominent athletes taking part was Corporal Joshua Williamson, who held several national sports championships before he entered the army and who has since his induction carried off honors in various meets.

Corporal Williamson won the high jump competition in the Olympics with a leap of 6' 4". He also was a member of the team that won the 440-yard relay race and took first place in the standing broad jump, doing 9' 8½". Corporal Williamson's home is at 303 North Delaware Avenue, Atlantic City, N. J.

Second place in the high jump went to Corporal Estell Harper of 1136 Ames Street, Hammond, Ind., who cleared the bar at 6' 3". Cpl. Harper is a former student of the Agricultural and Technical College of Greensboro, North Carolina, and also attended Hammond Technical High School. Like Williamson, Harper was active in scholastic sports.

Another Olympics ace was Pvt. Chester Thomas who won the 100-yard dash in 11 seconds flat. Thomas, who lives at 2176 East 93rd St., Cleveland, Ohio, also was a member of the 440-yard relay team and paced first in the running broad jump with a leap of 22' 5". In an unofficial extra jump, Pvt. Thomas did 23'.

Pvt. Allen Scisco of 406 Turtle Street, Dowogiac, Michigan, took third place in the running broad jump with a leap of 20' 6" and also competed in the 100-yard dash.

Corporal Evermont Robinson of 283 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y., carried off first honors in the 440-yard run and Pvt. Charles Wilson of New York City placed third. Robinson also was a member of the winning 440-yard relay team.

Among other athletes competing were: Corporal Hoax Brown of 55 Ward St., New Brunswick, N. J.; Pvt. Grady Jackson of 2033 Cornell Road, Cleveland, Ohio; Pvt. Frank Ellis of 814 Third Avenue, Huntington, West Virginia; Pvt. Strickland Millerd of 511 Sanford Avenue, Sanford, Fla.; Pvt. Pedro Swiggins, of 365 Hensel Avenue, Springfield, Ohio; Pvt. Milton Estelle of 1905 St. Ceritus Avenue, Long Beach, Calif.; Pvt. James E. Flint of 250 Marston St., Detroit, Mich., and Pvt. William White of 732 North 42nd St., West Philadelphia, Pa.

Army Investigates Negro-White Battle in South's 'Powder Keg'

PM
New York, N. Y.

By JAMES B. O'HANLON

JUN 11 1943

A military board of inquiry today was investigating the fatal clash between Negro troops and white military policeman at Camp Stewart, Ga., the culmination of a situation which Negro leaders have called a "powder keg."

In the clash, which occurred Wednesday night but was not announced until late yesterday, one MP was shot dead and four others wounded by bullets fired by Negro troops, according to Camp Stewart authorities.

The official reason given was that the Negroes had been stirred up by "false and malicious rumors" that Negro girls were being molested. Beyond that bare announcement, the Army gave no details.

47c

Camps

Explosive Situation Existed

Whatever the immediate reason for the clash, Negro leaders in New York say any spark would have touched off the explosive situation that has existed there for months. They have received so many complaints from soldiers of their mistreatment by white officers that Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, the only Negro who wears a star, was sent there recently by the War Dept. to investigate conditions.

JUN 11 1943

One of the principal causes of friction in the camp, according to Walter White, executive secretary of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, has been the presence of 211 picked men from the New York 369th Regiment, a Negro unit.

This regiment is stationed in Hawaii, but the 211 were returned to this country as instructors. White says there have been reports that some of the green white officers resented these instructors' superior knowledge, and treated them accordingly.

Col. William V. Ochs, commandant, told PM by telephone that the clash was not a riot between Negro and white troops.

"Negro MPs and Negro regiments joined with the white men to quell the fight," he said. Col. Ochs said it was true that "some have felt they were being mistreated," but every case is investigated.

"But after all, this is Georgia," he said. "And I'm not responsible for the presence of Negro troops or Southern white troops in this camp. We know what these Negro boys are up against and we even lean over backward to make them feel better."

47c

Camps

Buses an Issue

Col. Ochs presumably was referring to one of the principal sore spots—the private bus line which is the only transportation to Savannah. Negroes complain they are not allowed to ride the bus with white men, that only occasionally does a bus arrive at camp "for Negroes only."

White, of the NAACP, said other principal causes of the situation are an almost complete lack of recreational facilities for Negroes, whereas those for whites are excellent; complete segregation and overcrowding. He said some white civilian nurses in the camp hospital had refused to handle Negro patients.

LET'S REMOVE THE CAUSE

New York Age

WHEN 2,000 PEOPLE gathered at the Alexander Hamilton High School in Brooklyn on Sunday to join the fight of the Save Our Soldiers Committee and Brooklyn NAACP for the boys in Camp Stewart, Georgia, a real demonstration was given of the unity of the Negro people on this situation.

JUN 5 1943

There are several thousand Negro troops stationed at Camp Stewart, Georgia.

Move the 369th — and then what.

John Yancey, chairman of the committee, said in a statement to this paper last week that it is less important to move the 369th than it is to remove the crackers who are in power at Stewart who are making life unbearable for the Negro soldiers.

47c

Camps

We must not be selfish about this thing.

We will solve nothing by running away from it. That is the same thing our Government has been doing.

New York, N. Y.

We will solve the situation if our Government looks things squarely in the face and admits openly and angrily that the Civil War-waging South is impeding the war effort.

Our Government will not and cannot be forthright about it until we are the same.

We hope that the representaions made to Washington will take into consideration some definite line of action to let black Americans train to fight and die for their native land in any part of that native land.

JUN 5 1943

The Civil War will have to stop so that World War II may continue and be concluded victoriously.

That is what the Government needs to tell the South.

That is what Negro people and white democrats need to instruct their Government to tell the South.

Military Policeman Killed, Four Wounded In Soldiers Race Riot

Informer

Houston, Texas

CAMP STEWART, Ga.—(ANP)—One military policeman was killed and four wounded during a riot of Negro troops here Thursday night, post authorities announced.

JUN 19 1943

The only white soldiers involved in the disturbance were the MPs. No Negro soldiers were injured. The cause of the riot has not been determined. A board of officers was appointed to make an immediate investigation.

47c

Camps

The board's first reports revealed that the Negro soldiers were stirred up by "false and malicious rumors" that Negro girls were being molested by white troops, said post headquarters.

Only one shot was fired by the MPs during the time they were fired on by the Negro soldiers, according to Maj. E. P. Schott, provost marshall, who added that quiet was restored by 12:00 a. m. after which there was no further disturbances, and that the post has now returned to normal conditions.

JUN 19 1943

The dead are, Pfc. Ronie E. Lindsay, 22, Valdosta, Ga., who died almost instantly when he was struck by a bullet. The wounded are S/Sgt. John L. McEachern, 31, Homestead Mt., Sgt. Charles W. Almand, 24, Atlanta; Sgt. William V. Brown, 24, New York, and Pvt. Merle B. Hotkiss, 20, Perry, N. Y.

Cuthbert, Ga., Leader
September 2, 1943

SOUND ADVICE

Brigadier General E. A. Stockton, commanding the new anti-aircraft center at Camp Stewart, where many negro troops are stationed, has issued a 12-page document entitled "Educational Program for Colored Troops." This document among other things, includes this advice:

"In the Army there is no discrimination among soldiers, as long as every one behaves himself like a soldier. The commanding general at Camp Stewart and his staff guarantee that there will be no discrimination between white and colored.

47c

Camps

"A good soldier doesn't have time to fool with his home town politics, or to go around telling other soldiers how the country should be run. Any question about white people and black people will never be settled by barracks talk. Let's forget these things for the time being, buckle down to real soldiering, and win the war.

"We have heard that our soldiers in England are given rules on how to get along with the English people, who have many habits and customs different from ours.

Our soldiers in Africa were given rules on how to get along with the Mohammedans, and other people who live there.

"Our soldiers in Sicily have been told how to treat people there.

"You are in Georgia. While you are here, you must obey the laws of the State of Georgia. The laws of Georgia may not be the laws of New York, or the District of Columbia, or Pennsylvania, or Illinois but that makes no difference.

"Some of you may not understand why you can't go everywhere white folks go in Georgia. It's because the law says so.

"Whether or not they did this where you came from, and no matter what you think about it, it is your duty to do exactly as the laws say, and to accept the customs of the people, while you are in Georgia.

"Be polite and respectful in any talk you may have with white people. Don't try to start conversations with white strangers. Stay out of white places, and sit where you are supposed to sit on trains and buses.

"You are in the South. Things have been as they are in the South for a long time, and they will probably continue to be that way for a long time. If you start any argument or disturbances over these things, you will get nowhere, settle nothing, and get yourself in trouble."

That is sound advice and if followed there will be no further difficulties at Camp Stewart or any other negro camp.

Charleston, S. C. News Courier
November [illegible]

In Store for the South

To The News and Courier:

I was interested in the letter (November 3) from "A South Carolinian, from an army camp in Kansas". The only "offense" he commited was under-statement; and, of course, one has to be careful of what he says in the army.

The writer, who had some service in 1918, has had an opportunity to observe the changes brought about in 25 years. The negro enjoys a quite different status in Franklin's army from his counterpart in Woodrow's army. A negro doctor at Fort McPherson (Atlanta) examined the result of the smallpox vaccination given me at the reception center. This negro official was attached to the headquarters of the Fourth Service command.

47c

While at Fort Oglethorpe (still in Georgia), I saw negroes of the M. P. officers' candidate school sleeping in the same barracks and eating in the same mess halls with white students.

Naturally, if such things went on in the South, the sky was the limit north of the Ohio. At Fort Custer (Michigan), the M. P. duties for the post were taken over by a negro outfit from Chicago. These blacks took a great delight in "calling down" a Southerner for the slightest infraction of military regulations.

And, don't let anyone tell you otherwise, the lawyer politicians who represent the South in congress are fully aware of the aforementioned conditions, because they have been told. They evidently rely on our innocuous press to keep the white South from learning. If every Southern city had a News and Courier, the white citizenry would be better informed.

As I gathered from numerous conversations with so-called educated Northerners, the principal purpose of our military effort was to make conditions better for "minorities". I was told in no uncertain terms that, when the remainder of the world had been attended to, the white Southerners would be forced to give the negro "complete equality", which meant doing away with segregation and prohibitions against intermarriage. My talks with individuals were and are being confirmed by such "newspapers" as PM, which is indirectly supported by the public treasury.

The South Carolinian "exiled" in Kansas has made a good beginning, but the "dear peepul" have not been told the half of it.

However, maybe they'll get a new postoffice in Green Swamp, and the 56 corporations that have 95 per cent of the war contracts will pay off.

A SOUTH CAROLINIAN WHO WAS IN THE ARMY.

Atlanta.

47c-1943

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

House Probe Of Selfridge Causes Split

MAY 30 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27 —Difference of opinion has developed between Chairman May of the House military affairs comittee and committee member Paul Shaffer of Michigan as to the scope of investigational authority that was granted in connection with the group's probing of the shooting of a Negro private by Col. William T. Colman, commanding officer of Selfridge field, Mich., but since relieved of the post.

On Friday Congressman Shafer announced a report of his visit to Selfridge field, where the shooting of Pvt. William McRae occurred, in which he said of Col. Colman that his "conduct was well-known throughout the post and to citizens of nearby cities," and that he was "on the verge of a nervous breakdown." Further, his report said that "if the inspector general's office (of the War department) had properly functioned," Colman would have been hospitalized weeks ago.

MAY 30 1943

Chairman May immediately took issue with Shafer saying that the latter had made an "unauthorized" investigation. Not only was May angry because the Michigan representative had made public the report of his findings, but also, as he said, because he had no authority to go beyond certain limits. The investigation, according to May, was only intended to determine the relation of the incident to the "war effort and war contracts and not to a matter within the jurisdiction of the military court."

MAY 30 1943

Shafer insisted that the committee had "placed no restrictions on the investigation whatever." "My report probably isn't liked by some of the higher officials in the War department," he said, "and that is the reason the committee chairman has described my investigation as 'unauthorized.'" The congressman maintains that he will have the support of the majority of the committee "to the limit." He has asked the military committee to insist upon an early report on progress by the War department's inquiry, without 'white-washing" the facts.

47

Negro Soldiers Strike After Trouble In Jackson

Weekly Review
Birmingham, Ala.

FLORA, Miss., July — (ANP) — Negro soldiers in training at the Mississippi Ordnance plant a few miles north of this town, according to authoritatiev reports that reached here, went on strike Thursday morning following disorder in Jackson, the state capitol, Wednesday night.

JUL 17 1943

The immediate cause of the strike is said to have been the alleged serious beating of one of their number, and the alleged abuse of several of their wives and women companions, a number of whom were put in jail by civilian policement in Jackson Wednesday night. The arrests were made after Negro soldiers and military and civilian policement became involved in what is reported to have threatened to a serious incident, wihch brought a large number of military and evilian policemen scurrying to Negro neighobrhoods.

Rumors to the effect that the soldiers who had been beaten in Jackson Wednesday night had died, which quickly spread throughout the city, have since been proved false. It was learned from reliable sources that the soldier was being treated at the camp while suffering from one or two scalp wounds.

JUL 17 1943

During the Thursday morning demonstration at the camp, it was reported that three Negro military policemen, from whom the wounded soldier was taken by civilian police and beaten, had to be rushed out of camp for safety because of threats made by the soldiers who held them at fault for giving the soldier over to the custody of white civilian officers.

What was the immediate cause of the Wednesday disturbance in Jackson has been the subject of many conflicting rumors and reports. The disturbance began a few hours after a large number of soldiers on pay day leave from the Jackson Air Base and the Misisssippi Ordnance plant reached the heart of the Negro neighborhood. No white civilians were involved in the dispute.

JUL 17 1943

Camps

47c

War Dept. Silent As Mobs Rule

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

Camp Stewart, Georgia, Van Dorn, Mississippi Called 'Hellholes!'

Civilian defiance of the elementary principles of democracy and a vicious disregard of its effect on the morale of the very men being trained to defend these same civilians from Germans, Japanese and other enemies of the United States, threaten to explode into widespread race warfare in the Southland as southerners continue ever increasing pressure on Negroes in uniform.

JUN 19 1943

Reports from widely separated points in the South, from Georgia, from Mississippi, from Texas, tell of Negro soldiers being shot down in cold blood by civilian police and citizens. Stories of greater measures of discrimination and segregation being heaped upon colored soldiers stationed at the various camps, and of threats of violence and humiliation more searing and painful than actual enemy bullets and bayonets are coming in from all sections.

Groups Protesting

Northern organizations—the NAACP, the National Negro Congress, the Workers Defense League, the International Labor Defense, and others are flooding the War Department at Washington with protests and demands for investigation and action, but little or no results have been noted.

JUN 19 1943

Prominent liberals have been outspoken in the current reign of terror, but their voices have been drowned in the old Rebel Yell of the Civil War resounding from Capitol Hill, in Washington, where a band of southern congressmen and senators are pushing the demands of their constituents in poll tax states ahead of the war effort and victory.

JUN 19 1943

Observers have tied the current wave of lawlessness against colored soldiers in the South to the visit of President Edwin Barclay of Liberia at the White House. The visitor was quartered in exclusive Blair Mansion in Washington where state visitors are entertained. He was the first Negro in the history of the nation to be so honored. In addition, he was a dinner guest at the White House where President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained him in the same style they had previously entertained Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain and other heads of Allied governments.

Background of Terror

Silhouetted against a background of terror across which rode the hooded figures of the Ku Klux Klan and other white supremacy gangs, the Negro's plight Down South in this, the second year of the war for the United States, is being compared with that of the Jews in Poland, Czechoslovakia, and other countries when the Nazis moved in. Horror stories are being spread among the Negro civilian population both north and south about the relentless pressure being exerted on colored people. Focused in Washington, capital of the nation, the virus of racial discrimination and kindred evils is rapidly being spread into such liberal strongholds as New York and Boston by transplanted southerners.

The open defiance of the government by southerners is being watched on all sides in blank amazement. The inactivity of the War Department in seeing to it that the men it has in uniform are given protection while getting ready for the major battle, has stumped even the most astute students of rational policy and action. That civilians can step in and lynch soldiers in the uniform of the United States with slight interference is a situation that is reducing the morale of the 15,000,000 Negroes almost to the complete disintegration point.

JUN 19 1943

47c

CONFISCATE DEFENDER IN DIXIE CAMP

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

White MP's Seize Papers, Eject Salesmen At Camp Rucker

CAMP RUCKER, Ala. — What appears to be a determined bid to bar Negro newspapers from seven U. S. army camps of the South, and this one in particular, reached a climax here last week when the Chicago Defender was taken away from salesmen who were forcibly ejected from the post.

JUL 24 1943

According to reports direct from eyewitnesses, white officers and military policemen seized Defender representatives as they entered the grounds, confiscated the papers and chased them away. When the soldiers for whom they were intended returned to the post from details, no explanation was given them as to the whereabouts of their papers or the reason for the action.

Similar steps are said to have been taken in Mississippi camps, where both the Defender and the Pittsburgh Courier appear to have aroused the ire of anti-Negro elements. In some cases, this resentment toward the Negro press has spread into the cities.

According to reports, Ted Rushing, young newsboy at Carthage, Miss., had his papers taken and destroyed by a group of white men last Friday, after which he was given a light whipping with the promise of something worse if caught trying to sell any more Negro newspapers in the town.

At Hattiesburg, Miss., near Camp Shelby, one of the largest camps in the country, salesmen of northern Negro newspapers are reported to have been told by police that no further sales of the papers would be permitted in Hattiesburg.

JUL 24 1943

In Brandon, Anslem J. Finch, columnist of the Pittsburgh Courier, is reported to have been called into question, by prominent white Brandon citizens regarding his connections with the Courier.

47c

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

Negro Troops Arouse Ire Of Mississippians

Van Dorn Camp, Scene Of Shooting, Brings Army Inquiry

Camps

47c

CENTREVILLE, MISS., June 1. —(AP)—Colonel R. E. Guthrie, commanding officer of Camp Van Dorn, declined comment today on an announcement by Mayor Omer Carroll, of Centreville, that two officers were being sent here from Washington to investigate disturbances in which negro troops stationed at the camp figured.

Carroll said Senator Eastland (D), Mississippi, informed him that the inspector general's department was dispatching the officers in response to an appeal yesterday from Gov. Paul B. Johnson for an investigation of the 364th Infantry, negro, which Carroll charged "is fomenting race riots."

The mayor's protest forwarded by Johnson urged that the regiment be moved by the War Department away from Mississippi.

Col. Guthrie said the camp had been "placed under some restrictions as a precaution to prevent any possible flare-up and the situation is under control." These restrictions prevent groups of soldiers from collecting, he said.

One negro soldier was reported shot and killed by the Wilkinson County sheriff Sunday while resisting arrest and Carroll said today a group of negro soldiers marched down Centreville's main street late Saturday night "shoving everyone from their path."

JUN 2 1943

Col. Guthrie said his provost marshal arrived on the scene during the latter incident while local officers were taking the soldiers in charge and returned the soldiers to camp calmly.

He said one negro soldier was shot and slightly wounded by a negro military policeman in camp but that "no serious harm has been done."

"We are still watching the situation," he said.

Birmingham Post
Birmingham, Alabama

MP IS KILLED

IN NEGRO RIOT

Four Others Wounded When Troops Resent Charge Of Molesting Girls

By United Press.

CAMP STEWART, Ga., June 11.—Camp Stewart authorities today prepared to launch an investigation of a riot of Negro soldiers at the post Wednesday night in [illegible] one military policeman was [illegible] and four others wounded.

JUN 11 1943

Capt. Walter H. Dustmann Jr., public relations officer, said that no white soldiers, other than the military police detachment and officers, were involved in the disturbance. No Negro soldiers were injured.

Georgian Is Slain

Pfc. Ronie E. Lindsey, 22, of Valdosta, Ga., was the military policeman slain in the riot. He was shot and died almost instantly.

The wounded soldiers were listed as: Sergt. John L. McEachern, 32, Homestead, Mont., Sergt. Charles W. Almand, 23, Atlanta, Ga., Sergt. William V. Brown, 23, New York City, and Pvt. Merlin B. Hotchkiss, 20, of Perry, N. Y. McEachern was reported still in serious condition.

MP's Fired One Shot

Camp Provost Marshal Maj. E. P. Scott, said only one shot was fired by the military police. The Negroes were reported to have fired several times on the MP's.

Captain Dustmann said it was reported that the Negro soldiers had been stirred up by what were officially described as "false and malicious rumors" of Negro girls being molested.

47c

Constitution
Atlanta, Georgia

Camp Stewart Soldiers Riot; One Is Killed

CAMP STEWART, Ga., June 10.—(AP)—Captain Walter H. Dustmann Jr., public relations officer, reported today that a military policeman was killed and four others wounded during a riot of Negro troops here last night.

JUN 11 1943

He said no white soldiers were involved in the disturbance other than military police and officers and none of the Negro soldiers was injured.

Cause of the riot was not immediately determined but Captain Dustmann said first reports indicated the Negro soldiers had been stirred up by a "false and malicious rumor" that Negro girls were being molested.

Private Ronie E. Lindsey, 22, of Valdosta, Ga., was shot and died almost instantly. The wounded: Staff Sergeant John L. McEachern, 31, of Homestead, Mon.; Sergeant Charles W. Almond, 24, of Atlanta; Sergeant William B. Brown, 24, of New York city; Private Merlin B. Hotchkiss, 20, of Perry, N. Y. The condition of McEachern was reported serious.

Major E. P. Scott, provost marshal, reported only one shot was fired by military police. The latter, he said, were fired on intermittently by the Negro soldiers.

Quiet was restored shortly after midnight and Major Scott said there had been no further disturbance on the post.

A board of officers was appointed immediately to investigate.

47c

Camp Stewart Riot Lasted For 3 Hours

1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

False Rumor Blamed for Uprising of 100th Regiment

369th N.Y. TROOPS ARE NOT INVOLVED

Colored Colonel Who Rescued Wounded Is Cited

SAVANNAH, Ga.—A false rumor started the recent Camp Stewart riot in which a military policeman was killed and four others injured.

JUL 3 1943

Reports indicate that the rioting lasted for three hours, that 5,000 rounds of ammunition were fired by men alleged to be members of the 100th Regiment of Coast Artillery. The dead and injured are all military policemen.

47c

The 100th Regiment Coast Artillery unit was composed mostly of Southern boys and stationed at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., before coming to Savannah.

The men were dissatisfied there with army treatment because an officer, not of their regiment, advised town merchants not to serve them.

False Report

The rumor that started the Stewart riot declared that a colored woman, visiting her soldier husband, had been beaten to death by two policemen in Hinesville, a "one-horse" town near Camp Stewart.

JUL 3 1943

The husband, who was knocked down by the MP when he aided his wife, later died.

This rumor was false, but the soldiers believed it.

Organized at 8

They began to organize around 8 p.m., then ran to their battalion areas to get rifles and ammunition. When they returned they did not travel as a mob, but scattered as snipers. It was more or less guerilla warfare in the hospital area.

A bus was riddled with bullets and the driver was shot in the neck. The passengers, first told to lie on the floor, were later told to get out of the bus and seek shelter.

JUL 3 1943

Firing at 10 P.M.

Firing was said to have begun at 10 p.m. and lasted until 1 a.m. During that time 5,000 shots were fired.

One rifle shot started it. Unverified reports are that machine guns and tommy guns took it up from there and fire was all around the various barracks.

One rifle fired by a soldier stopped a jeep of military police.

Half-track tanks, mounting 37 millimeter guns, were sent up to the area of the 100th Regiment, but there was no fight there, so the tanks had to await further orders.

Casualties, one dead and six injured.

Next day the post exchanges shut down early and half-track tanks were dispersed throughout the area.

369th Not Involved

Soldiers of the 369th New York Infantry who came here under Col. DeMaurice Moses, were not involved. When the difficulty arose, Colonel Moses rallied his battallion in an effort to stem the trouble.

He braved the fire of the snipers, picked up a wounded man and carried him to safety. The man afterward died, and it is understood Colonel Moses is recommended for a decoration.

Another story of how the riot began is that two MP's walking through the riot area were ordered to halt. When they failed to stop a voice cried out, "There go the MP's let them have it."

As the shots rang out, one fell mortally wounded and the other was injured.

Some 5,000 shells from expended cartridges were picked up on the grounds, it is reported.

It is believed that the soldiers secreted ammunition in Michigan and brought it to Georgia with them.

General McCroskey Said Alls' Well at Stewart, Then Came the Riot

Afro-American

This interview with Brigadier General S. L. McCroskey, white, commander at Camp Stewart, near Savannah, Ga., was given the AFRO one week before the tremendous riot in which a military policeman was killed and four injured. For three hours (10 p.m. to 1 a.m.), the soldiers of the 100th Regiment Coast Artillery shot up the camp, firing five thousand rounds of ammunition.

JUN 26 1943

Baltimore, Md.

WHO IS GEN. McCROSKEY?

Brig. Gen. S. L. McCroskey, 50, native of Washington State, was a chaplain in World War I. He came to Camp Stewart from command of an antiaircraft brigade in NYC. He served three years in Panama, 4 years at Fort Monroe, 2 years in Hawaii.

General McCroskey served on the staff of the Chief of the Coast Artillery and a year as Executive Officer at Camp Davis, N.C.

His wife, the former Helen M. Stevens, of Glenridge, N.J., is residing in Washington, D.C.

47c

The General Talks

By ALFRED DUCKETT
(Exclusive)

CAMP STEWART, Ga. — General McCroskey's special statement for the AFRO follows:

The several battalions of colored troops at Camp Stewart are here for the purpose of undergoing basic and advanced technical training to prepare them for the important role of fighting against hostile airplanes.

The Antiaircraft soldier is a very important one in this war. In effect, he is a front line soldier wherever he may be, in an active theatre, because the whole theatre is a front line for attack by hostile aviation.

47c

Our Soldiers Work Hard

The colored soldiers here are learning their jobs very satisfactorily. They work hard and for the most part show tremendous interest in learning. As their training progresses they recognize the need for precise, individual work and for well-co-ordinated teamwork.

JUN 26 1943

There have been from time to time adverse comments by certain individuals concerning the morale of the colored troops or concerning their treatment in camp. These criticisms are not justified by the facts in the case.

There is too much tendency on the part of some people seeking notoriety to exaggerate to tremendous proportions small incidents and, because of them, to say that everything is all wrong. In any large body of troops there are bound to be isolated cases of trouble and there are always a few malcontents.

Agitators Must Go

If agitators and trouble-makers would get out and stay out, or if their energy could be diverted to useful work, the colored soldier would like it much better. He is no softie and he doesn't want to be pampered and petted any more than the white soldiers do.

His officers have his welfare at heart and they are as interested in his morale and training as they are in their own, for the whole unit must learn to fight as a team and it will succeed or fail only as a team.

I believe thoroughly that the colored soldier will give a splendid account of himself when put to the test. It is up to us here to prepare him in the very best manner possible. If he honestly tries, he does excellently. If he is lazy and doesn't care, he does poorly; just like any other individual in any other occupation in the world.

Signed

S. L. McCROSKEY
Brigadier General, USA,
Commanding

Editorial

Affably courteous General McCroskey, as chief of Stewart's Antiaircraft training, has under his immediate supervision ninety per cent of the colored troops at the camp. So diplomatic is General McCroskey that the investigator at Stewart is tempted to give him a clean bill of health in relation to the vicious conditions which exist at the camp.

JUN 26 1943

47c

It is an obvious fact, however, that the General's defense of conditions indicates either an unbelievable ignorance of conditions or an attempt to cover them up in what is truly a gracious manner.

The General's statement indicates an amazing similarity to that of Colonel Ochs, especially in his refutation of racial discriminations and his reference to "agitators and troublemakers."

No Single Instance of Unfairness

It is only fair to say that throughout our investigation at the camp we found no single instance in which the General himself was charged with unfairness against colored troops or display of any vestige of prejudice.

The fact remains however, that he is in charge of an overwhelming majority of the colored soldiers and it is fantastic to suppose that he is unaware of what they are forced to undergo.

MUST AVOID JACKSON

Jackson, Tenn. [redacted]

Jackson has been officially declared off limits for all negro enlisted men stationed at Camp Tyson near here, Col Frederick Dodge announced Thursday night.

This action followed by 24 hours Colonel Dodge's placing Paris off limits for negro soldiers of a Second Army unit stationed at Camp Tyson.

October 24, 1943

Colonel Dodge said the order placing Jackson off limits applied to all "colored enlisted soliders of the Second Army and the Barrage Balloon Training Center at Camp Tyson."

The off limits orders followed clashes between negro soldiers and police in both Jackson and Paris within the past two weeks.

Riot Flares At Camp Stewart As M.P. Beats Soldier's Wife

People's Voice New York N.Y.

Camps

JUN 19 1943

CAMP STEWART, Ga.—The need for immediate action of the War Department to take measures to eliminate brutalities and injustices against Negro soldiers in the South was brought home with double-barreled force here last week with the outbreak of a riot between Negro soldiers and white guards resulting in the death of a white M.P., the wounding of 4 other M.P.'s, all white.

The disturbance, long feared by Negro press and national civic organizations all of which have asked for action on the mistreatment of soldiers, followed the alleged beating by a white M.P. of a New York girl visiting her husband in camp..

RUMORS SPREAD

Rumors spread like wildfire thruout the camp following the assault upon the soldier's wife, and the beating of the husband by a guard when the boy went to investigate the clubbing.

One report insisted the girl was dead as the result of a fractured skull; another that the husband had also succumbed to his injuriees.

According to the version received from a reliable source, the soldier's wife arrived in camp on Friday night and stayed in the guest house provided for visitors. She went out Saturday, it is said and came in after taps, causing an altercation with the guard at the gate.

Although the latter could have taken the girl into custody should he have desired, during the argument he allegedly clubbed her over the head. She was taken to the hospital suffering from concussion of the brain.

TROUBLE STARTS

Tension ran high all day Monday and Tuesday. Wednesday, June 9, about 6:30 p.m., Negro soldiers are supposed to have gone down to the gate ready to settle the score. The guards were drawn from the area where they were supposed to be, and are reported to have proceeded into the area occupied by the 100th anti-aircraft outfit of the 369th.

For a few minutes all was quiet and then hell broke loose. Negro soldiers opened fire and the firing is said to have lasted from 8:00 p.m. to 3:00 a.m., ceasing at dawn.

TWO IN CUSTODY

Although peace has been restored and an investigation under way, tempers of the men are still running high. While no arrests have been made, two Negro soldiers are said to be in temporary custody because of wounds which have not been explained.

Because of communications received in New York on Monday coming directly from the camp, and asking for an investigation into what was reported as the death of the soldiers wife, PV contacted Truman Gibson, Acting Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War.

Gibson stated by telephone from Washington that he had received no information of such a killing, but said a board of inquiry was investigating the riot.

Pa. Camp Gets First Officer After Riot

~~Courier~~ Afro-American

Baltimore, Md.

JUL 24 1943

SHENANGO, Pa.—Four days after the race riot at Camp Shenango in which one soldier was killed and six others injured, Captain Arganoh E. Martin, a chaplain, was transferred here to become the post's lone colored officer.

A board of inquiry, appointed by Col. Zim E. Lawhon, post commander, is continuing its investigation to determine the exact cause and to fix the blame for the trouble.

A report that a second colored soldier had died of injuries received during the riot was denied by the press relations office in a statement to the AFRO.

Transferred from Lee

Captain Martin, who was transferred from Camp Lee, Va., took over his new duties at the Shenango Replacement Depot on Thursday. A resident of the Eastern shore of Maryland and a Methodist, the chaplain entered the army on July 24, 1942.

He is a graduate of Clark University and Gammon Theological Seminary. His wife, Mrs. Olivia E. Martin, is residing at Petersburg, Va., and his two sons are government employees.

Causes Unknown

In the riot here July 11, Pvt. Norman Taylor, 20, of Rosedale, Kans., was killed and six other soldiers of both races received minor injuries, according to official reports.

The first outbreak was reported at 9:30 p.m., when a white and colored soldier had an altercation in a post exchange. The exact cause of the disturbance is not known, but it is reported that disparaging remarks were passed by soldiers of both groups.

6 MP's Praised

Col. Lawhon intervened and temporarily quieted the disorder. Later, another outbreak between groups of soldiers resulted in gunfire being exchanged.

The following day, Col. Lawhon cited six colored military policemen for meritorious service in attempting to quell the riot. When interviewed by the AFRO, the commander declined to make a statement as to the exact causes of the outbreaks.

ARMY RESPONSIBLE FOR TENSIONS

One colored soldier was killed and six colored and white soldiers were injured in a clash at Camp Shenango, Pa.

The AFRO's Levi Jolley, first on the scene, reported that one of the causes was the establishment of what 1,300 men recently arrived from Fort Belvoir, Va., called a jim crow post exchange. Afro-American. Baltimore, Md.

Before the arrival of the Belvoir contingent, all soldiers used the same post exchange.

AFRO readers who want to get an idea of the soldiers sensitivity to jim crow should read two articles in this issue. One by Max Lerner on the front page is titled "Drive J. C. from the Army." In the other, Mrs. Mary Bethune recites the hardships which she suffered in the South. Asked how she endured them, Mrs. Bethune replied, "I was born the daughter of a slave, but the young people today won't stand for what I went through."

Camps

JUL 24 1943

Memphis, Tenn., Com'rcial Appeal
September 11, 1943

Swift Army Justice

A few weeks ago a number of negro soldiers attached to a unit then stationed at Camp McCain, Miss., managed to seize a number of rifles and a quantity of service ammunition and set out to terrorize the countryside. They "shot up" the town of Duck Hill and endangered the lives of a large number of citizens.

Military authority immediately undertook a scrupulous investigation, and through an investigative process of elimination, and other evidence, finally identified the offenders. They were brought to trial before a court-martial, vigorously prosecuted and fairly defended. Eight have been convicted and sentenced to long terms in military prisons.

The civilian population of this area recognizes the thoroughgoing manner in which the Army has handled this situation and will find no fault with the verdicts which, we believe, should receive the widest possible publicizing on the theory that they will act as deterrents to any who may think that the Army takes kindly to that sort of behavior. Military justice is not only swift but very sure.

Soldier Says Men Treated Worse Than Dogs in Texas

Afro-American
Baltimore Md

JUN 10 1943

BRYAN FIELD, Tex. — Members of the 325th Aviation Squadron here are being treated "worse than dogs," said a soldier in a letter to the AFRO this week requesting an investigation of conditions at the camp.

The soldier said that they were getting on the bus one day and when they didn't move fast enough an MP pushed them and said, "Come on, get on that damned bus, N----s."

No Colored MP's

When the men said they were not used to being called names, the soldier says the MP snatched one of the boys and slapped him in the face, and when he tried to defend himself, the MP's, provost marshal, and civilian police drew their guns.

"We have no colored MP's here or weapons with which to defend ourselves," he added.

"This drinking water gave me stomach trouble and I went to the hospital. When I got back, I was ordered to get on my hands and knees to scrub the barracks in our company. They said we were gold-bricking," the letter continued.

"We had five sergeants and eight corporals when the 325th came to this field, but they have all been busted because they wanted to transfer to other camps on account of bad treatment."

WAR DEP'T. URGED TO ACT ON CAMP STEWART

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

JUL 10 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 8—The deplorable conditions of Negro soldiers at Camp Stewart, Ga., as revealed by a recent NAACP investigation was reported this week to the War Department. Camp Stewart accommodates some 25,000 white soldiers and 15,000 colored soldiers.

The War Department was informed that an investigator from the national office of the NAACP who "has talked with large numbers of soldiers and civilians in Savannah and neighboring communities and at Camp Stewart itself, has found three principal causes of unrest and tension."

The first of the causes, the report stated, has to do with the limited quantity and segregated pattern of recreational service facilities on the post. The second concerns the inadequacy of transportation facilities. The third is the attitude and policy of certain ranking white officers.

NO CLUB FOR RACE OFFICERS

The report pointed out that Negro soldiers have a service club covering a ground space of approximately 100x200 feet while the white service club covers a ground space of 350x500 feet.

For white officers there is a club, but for Negro officers there are no recreational facilities at all. At the camp there are three guest houses where guests and members of the families of white officers may be accommodated. There are no such facilities for guests and

United States Government To Blame For Abusive Treatment Of Soldiers

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

JUN 19 1943

ALL good Americans regret the rioting between colored and white troops in several army camps in the deep South.

According to an eye-witness report The TRIBUNE learns that two MP's are dead and four are injured as a result of rioting at Camp Stewart in Georgia.

47c
Camps

These incidents should not be considered [illegible] either by the Army or the American public. They are directly traceable to the refusal of Americans to deal honestly with the race problem.

Ever since the Civil War, the South has contended and this nation has agreed that the racial problem was local; that the Southern white people were able to handle the racial problem.

This position is absolutely wrong. The racial problem can not be localized and the worst people in the world to handle it are Southern whites, because they are determined that colored citizens shall not be accorded equality of opportunity.

The United States Government is largely to blame for anything that might happen because it has followed a policy of appeasement. It has permitted the South to violate every principle of the Constitution. Because of this weak policy, the Army of the United States of America must bend the knee to prejudice and is unable or unwilling to protect its colored soldiers.

JUN 19 1943

Unfortunately for America, those forces in American life which are determined to oppress colored people are running head-on into forces equally as determined not to be oppressed.

M.P. Killed And 4 Hurt At Camp Stewart

The Plaindealer,
Kansas City, Kan.

NAACP Claims Deplorable Jim Crow Setup Of Dixie And Mean Officers Is Cause Of So Many Race Riots and Killings

Camp Stewart, Ga.—The killing of a white M.P., on June 9 at Camp Stewart, Georgia, and the wounding of four others by bullets allegedly fired by Negro troops was seen this week by the NAACP as the culmination of unsatisfactory conditions which have existed at the camp for months.

1943

47c
Camps

The M.P. who was killed was Private First Class Ronie E. Lindsey of Valdosta, Ga. The wounded men were Staff Sergeant John L. McEacher, Homestead, Montana; Sergeant Charles W. Almand, Atlanta, Ga.; Sergeant William V. Brown, New York City and Private Merlin B. Hotchkill, Perry, N. Y.

The NAACP has submitted to the Department of Justice the report of an investigator immediately dispatched to the scene.

The NAACP report revealed these findings:

The transportation situation is, and for long has been, a rasping issue. Separate buses are operated for white and Negro soldiers, in the ratio of about one for Negroes, six for whites, and this despite the fact Negro soldiers are approximately 40% of the camp personnel. The taxicabs in Hinesville (nearest town to Camp Stewart) refuse to ride Negro soldiers.

JUN 18 1943

There is high resentment among Negro solders of the Nazi-racial attitude of the white officers in command. Interviewed Negro officers and enlisted men all insisted that the situation could not be remedied so long as they remained under command of Colonels Gross and Ochs, both of German extraction, and General Spiller, who was characterized as being 'definitely in sympathy with the whole policy of discrimination."

Negro M.P'5s are without authority. Negro soldiers and civilians resent this, and resent that all M.P.'s stationed in Savannah are white, even those designated to patrol the most thickly settled Negro areas.

Recreational facilities for Negro soldiers are glaringly inadequate. There are no proviisons made at all for the recreation of Negro offcires. Fifty persons crowd out the Negro USO. The Negro service club has a total floor space coverage of 100x200 feet. Contrastingly, white officers have a service club; the white USO is a spacious two-story building; white enlisted men have a service club with floor space measuring 350x500 feet.

Meagre faciilties are provided for treatment of Negro soldiers afflicted with veneral diseases. White civilian nurses in the camp hospital have refused to handle Negro patients, and in Savannah there is only one prophylactic station for colored soldiers.

JUN 18 1943

In two known instances, Negro soldiers have been kicked by white officers. On one occasion the officer was not identified; on the other, the officer's punishment was to be transferred to another post.

Contributing also to the tension which resutled in the violent outbreak of Thursday, the investigator pointed out, were numerous other factors. Relations of Negro soldiers with local law enforcement officers have been generally bad. Racial segregation signs were posted on toilets at the prison stockade (a Negro officer reports he was brusquely asked, "Can't you read?" when he used a toilet marked "oFr White Only"). Negro officers generally are subjected to unnecessarily humiliating treatment.

relatives of Negro officers. The colored service club has been without a senior hostess since January, 1943. There is resentment, the NAACP report revealed, of the post commander's excuse that a qualified Negro woman is not available in the neighboring community. The colored service club is supervised by a white lieutenant, acting as special service officer although it is said to be the policy of the Army that Negro officers be placed in charge of such facilities, the report claimed.

JUL

Segregated post exchanges are provided for Negro troops who are denied service in the more completely stocked main post exchange.

Neither Negro officers nor enlisted men are permitted to go to the several theatres reserved for white soldiers, the NAACP report charged.

M. P. Killed In Georgia Camp Riot

Kansas City Call

False Rumors Said to Have Caused Trouble

Kansas City, Mo.

CAMP STEWART, Ga.—(ANP) — One military policeman was killed and four wounded during a riot of Negro troops here Thursday night, post authorities announced.

JUN 25 1943

47c

The only white soldiers involved in the disturbance were the MPs. No Negro soldiers were injured. The cause of the riot has not been determined. A board of officers was appointed to make an immediate investigation.

The board's first reports revealed that the Negro soldiers were stirred up by "false and malicious rumors" that Negro girls were being molested by white troops, said post headquarters.

Only one shot was fired by the MPs during the time they were fired on by the Negro soldiers, according to Maj. E. P. Schott, provost marshal, who added that quiet was restored by 12:00 a. m. after which there was no further disturbances, and that the post has now returned to normal conditions.

JUN 25 1943

The dead are: Pfc. Ronie E. Lindsey, 22, Valdosta, Ga., who died almost instantly when he was struck by a bullet. The wounded are S. Sgt. John L. McEachern, 31, Homestead Mt.; Sgt. Charles W. Almand, 24, Atlanta; Sgt. William V. Brown, 24, New York, and Pvt. Merle B. Hotkiss, 20, Perry, N. Y.

Columbia, S. C., State
November 1, 1943

Station Complement Gets Drum And Bugle Corps, Choral Group

Fort Jackson's station complement, for the first time in its history, had its own drum and bugle corps yesterday with the transfer of a group of colored soldiers from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., to this post.

The 23-piece drum and bugle corps has been organized for more than a year as part of the Headquarters detachment at the Georgia army post. At Fort Oglethorpe the corps was under the command of Col. Duncan Richart, who recently was made post commander at Fort Jackson.

Also included in the group of soldiers transferred to Fort Jackson was the Fort Oglethorpe Choral group made up of 40 excellent voices. They also are expected to be an addition to this post where they will entertain for soldier gatherings, radio programs and other post functions. The choral group is lead by T. Sgt. John S. Fleming and is reported to include some very fine singers.

At Fort Oglethorpe Colonel Richart had taken much interest in both the drum and bugle corps and the choral group and encouraged their development into an accomplished musical organization.

The drum and bugle corps was under the direct command of Capt. H. A. Eggert at Fort Oglethorpe, who also will be transferred to Fort Jackson.

The transfer of Negro soldiers to Fort Jackson resulted when Fort Oglethorpe became a WAC training center.

BRAVERY

Guardian
Boston, Mass.

Orchids to Mrs. Madeline K. Dugger, senior hostess at the 366th Service Club at Fort Devens, for preventing efforts of Southern white Jim Crow zealots to segregate Negro soldiers in the post theatre.

SEP 1 1943

Guardian

It seems that some Southern W A Cs objected to sitting in the same audience with Negroes wearing, like themselves, the uniform of the United States Army as a symbol of their risking their lives and fortunes in defense of our country against Axis enslavement. As usual, weak-kneed Northern white officers cravenly capitulated to the Southern prejudice akin to the Fascist r[illegible] which the United Nations are combating and ordered the troops to sit on one side of the auditorium until Mrs. Dugger, as befits the widow of a colonel, intervened courageously after the order had been in effect for three days without her knowledge. She immediately saw the officer in charge of the theatre. "I told him that we cannot go down South and change the customs down there and we shouldn't let them come up here and force their customs upon us." Courage exhibited by this lady prevailed over bigots. Mrs. Dugger performed a service in improving morale which is worthy of official recognition in the form of a medal. — Boston Chronicle

SEP 1943

47c
Camps

47c-1943

Camps

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga

Heads First P-X

47c

FEB 8 1943

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala.—Captain Harold Martin, who in private life was public health director at Minor State Teachers College, Washington, D. C., is the first of his race to head a post exchange for the U. S. Army. A $50,000 annual business, the post exchange sells everything from officers' uniforms to shoe strings. Captain Martin was the first of his race to graduate from Norwich University, receiving his B. S. degree in engineering.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Soldiers Call Georgia Camp One of Worst

1943

By ALFRED A. DUCKETT
(Exclusive to AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers)

NEW YORK—Two hundred clean-cut American soldiers, formerly members of the 369th Coast Artillery (anti-aircraft), now stationed at Camp Stewart, Ga., where they were transferred from overseas duty in Hawaii, charge that they have been insulted, kicked and beaten by white officers and forced to live in the midst of disease and filth.

They have appealed to friends to implore Washington to move them elsewhere.

Miss Colored Officers

A spokesman said:

"Our colored officers have been taken from us and attached to another unit, leaving us without any moral support whatsoever. We are now under white officers, the majority of whom are young and inexperienced, fresh from Southern colleges, so when we're right, we are wrong.

"The food is terrible and sanitary conditions are the most deplorable we have ever witnessed. It seems that army regulations do not even exist down here. One sergeant, while rectifying a mistake, was allegedly told by a captain from Mississippi:

"'This camp is the toughest camp in the United States. We make our own laws down here.'"

MAY 8 1943

~~Fine Recreation~~ Provided For All Negro Soldiers

Negro troops at Fort Jackson are being provided with every recreational facility that officials of the post are in position to supply.

A large area of ground near Post Service Club No. 3 is being readied for the construction of a concrete court which will be utilized for outdoor basketball games, badminton and hand ball. In addition, this space will be the site of an outdoor terrace for open-air dances and other outdoor events.

The USO-Camp Show unit, "Looping the Loop" will be at the new Post Theater No. 5, in the Negro section on Thursday night for 7 and 9 o'clock performances. This is one of the War Department's new theaters on the post for the use of Negro servicemen. However, the house is not quite ready for motion pictures, as the sound equipment is still being installed.

Columbia, S. C., State
November 25, 1943

Fort Jackson Negro Choir to Sing Today

Fort Jackson's excellent 40-voice Negro choir, composed of soldiers from the 23rd Quartermaster group, will be heard in a program of sacred music at 7:15 this evening in Chapel No. 18.

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

Camp Stewart Situation:

MAY 22 1943

Gen. Davis to Make Investigation; B'klyn Forms Citizens' Committee

MAY 22 1943

47c Camps

PV directed a challenge to the whole country last week—a challenge which, thank God, has not gone unanswered. We asked our readers what they were going to do about unspeakable conditions at Camp Stewart down in Georgia, where Jimcro is riding high, wide and handsome. And immediately letters and calls from parents and friends of boys in the 369th poured in pledging assistance in cleaning up the camp.

The paper was hardly off the press before it received a telegram from Truman K. Gibson, Jr., acting Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War in Washington. It read: "With reference to Camp Stewart, am advised that General Davis of the Inspector General's office is now making an investigation."

And immediately Brooklyn came through, too. With Charles Kellar, brilliant young attorney as its motivating spirit, Brooklyn has organized a Save Our Soldiers committee with John T. Yancey as chairman. Indications are that other communities will soon follow suit.

MAY 22 1943

SOS PLANS RALLY

Acting on behalf of the Brooklyn committee, which is coordinating its efforts with the Brooklyn branch of the NAACP, Kellar directed the following letter to the Commanding Officer of Camp Stewart and to the Adjutant General's office in Washington:

"Currently, there is a rumor to the effect that a considerable number of men are confined to their barracks because they had the temerity to write their relatives and friends about the abominable conditions prevailing. I have been instructed by the Citizens Committee representing the most important groups in the borough, to write you and ask you to investigate this situation immediately and apprise the committee of your findings. The situation is very real with us. Please do not table this matter."

The SOS has forged right on ahead and will sponsor a joint rally in cooperation with other community groups at the Boys High School, Marcy and Putnam aves., Sunday, May 30, at which prominent speakers will appear. This meeting bids fair to being one of the most successful of its type in recent years.

MAY 22 1943

BULLETIN may 27, 1943

Special

Allegedly in protest against the barbarous treatment of the 369th Regiment at Camp Stewart, two corporals—Murphy and Simpson—went A.W.O.L. and came here. The two men surrendered at Governor's Island last Saturday, but their presence here was not known until a few minutes before PV went to press.

MAY 22 1943

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

'Investigation' of 369th Camp Slows; Who's Kidding Who?

MAY 29 1943

CAMP STEWART, Ga.—With all due credit to Brigadier General Davis, highest-ranking Negro army officer, who was sent down here to "investigate" living conditions and alleged discriminatory treatment of soldiers of the famous 369th anti-aircraft and coast artillery recently returned from Hawaii and now stationed at Stewart for special training, the air has far from cleared.

According to a letter received from a musician in one of the leading dance bands which recently played a date in Savannah, Ga., 42 miles from camp, and whose brother is a member of the 369th outfit at Stewart.

MAY 29 1943

DRESS UP FOR DAVIS

"While I was at Camp Stewart, word was sent for the boys to evacuate the garage (where they were sleeping) and move into the barracks because the C.O. got word that Brigadier General Benjamin Davis was to visit the camp the following day in regard to the many complaints the boys have sent him. Of course, the boys refused to leave because they wanted General Davis to see just how their conditions are."

From a 369th soldier's letter received by PV this week:

"I would like for you to make public the following:

"We had just left the hall where General Davis had just promised us that he would eliminate Military Police brutalities upon colored soldiers.

MAY 29 1943

"Arriving at the Service Club with four or more other soldiers, and incidentally there were many witnesses, the M.P. approached us and said, "get out of here." Then he asked me for my ticket to the Service Club which I immediately showed him. The M.P. (named in the letter) then said: "Get the hell on in." I told him I would. The M.P. then threw a punch at me which I attempted to block. Then three or four jumped upon me with clubs and with drawn guns, beating me over the head and face while other M.P.'s stood by with drawn guns."

MAY 29 1943

THREATENED HIM

The letter states how the soldier was forced to enter a truck with three M.P.'s, one of whom sat in back of him with a gun trained on his back, and said: "If you move, I'll blow your brains out." Another M.P. (also named in the letter): "Sat next to me and gave me one of the most brutal and unmerciful beatings ever witnessed by any human being. While clubbing me, he said, "You ———, I'm going to kill you and no one will know the difference." If the M.P. sitting in the rear had not stopped him by saying, "For God's sake stop before you kill him!" . . . he would have carried out his threat."

Informer Houston Texas

NEGRO SOLDIERS ABUSED BY WHITE OFFICERS AT CAMP STEWART, GEORGIA

NEW YORK CITY—According to reliable information received at the March On Washington Movement headquarters at the Hotel Theresa Building in New York City, Negro soldiers are subjected to limited segregation at Camp Stewart, Georgia, and it is said that white officers have been seen kicking colored soldiers.

No proper supervision of soldiers venereal diseases is carried on in this camp and the white officers go to unusual and inexcusable lengths to insult and humiliate Negro soldiers.

Secretary Stimson of the War Department should be written letters by Negro citizens and various organizations demanding an investigation of this camp immediately, states A. Philip Randolph, National Director.

47c

News
Birmingham, Ala.

Army To Investigate 364th Negro Outfit

CENTREVILLE, Miss.—(AP)—Col. R. E. Guthrie, commanding officer of Camp Van Dorn, declined comment Wednesday on an announcement by Mayor Omer Carroll, of Centreville, that two officers were being sent here from Washington to investigate disturbances in which Negro troops stationed at the camp figured.

Carroll said Senator Eastland (D., Miss.) informed him that the inspector general's department was dispatching the officers in response to an appeal from Gov. Paul B. Johnson for an investigation of the 364th Infantry, Negro, which Carroll charged "is fomenting race riots."

Col. Guthrie said the camp had been "placed under some restrictions as a precaution to prevent any possible flare-up and the situation is under control." These restrictions prevent groups of soldiers from collecting, he said.

One Negro soldier was reported shot and killed by the Wilkinson County sheriff Sunday while resisting arrest and Carroll said a group of Negro soldiers marched down Centreville's main street late Saturday night "shoving everyone from their path."

47c Camps

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

EVANSVILLE UNDER GUARD

M. P.'s Patrol Streets as the City Is Barred to Soldiers

JUN 28 1943

EVANSVILLE, Ind., June 27 (U.P.) — Military police patrolled Evansville streets tonight to enforce an out-of-bounds order for soldiers at Camp Breckenridge, Ky., and George Field, Ill., to Guard against outbreaks between soldiers and zoot-suited youths.

The public relations office at Camp Breckinridge said the orders were issued by Colonel John D. Kelly, camp commander, on instructions from the area headquarters at Fort Hayes, Ohio. The orders were issued after a series of incidents involving soldiers in the last ten days.

City officials said several soldiers were beaten and robbed by zoot-suited Negroes. A Negro soldier and a white soldier were reported to have fired at each other. An Army paratroop lieutenant was injured seriously in a fight.

"It is the unruliness of hotheads and smart alecs on both sides," a city official said. "The lareg' majority are without blame."

47c Camps

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

SOLDIER IS KILLED IN NEGRO TROOP RIOT

Four Others Wounded in Fray at Camp Stewart, Ga.

JUN 11 1943

CAMP STEWART, Ga., June 10 (U.P.)—Camp Stewart authorities said today that during a "riot of colored troops" last night a military policeman was killed and four other military police wounded. None of the Negroes was injured.

Post officials said that the cause of the disturbance was not revealed. A board of officers was appointed to investigate. One report was that the colored soldiers had been stirred up by "false and malicious rumors" that colored girls were being molested.

Major E. P. Scott, Provost Marshal, said that only one shot was fired by the police during the time they were fired on by the colored soldiers. No white soldiers other than the police were involved.

Private First Class Ronie E. Lindsey, 22, of Valdosta, Ga., was instantly killed.

The wounded were listed as Staff Sergeant John L. Mceacher, 31, Homestead, Mont.; Sergeant Charles W. Almand, 23, Atlanta; Sergeant William V. Brown, 23, New York City, and Private Merlin B. Hotchkill, 20, Perry, N. Y.

According to Major Scott, there was no further disturbance after 12:30 A. M., and the post "has returned to normal."

47c Camps

Savannah, Ga. News
July 14, 1943

COLORED UNITS SNARE TOP HONORS

They Win "Splinting Rodeo" at Camp Stewart

CAMP STEWART, Ga., July 13.—Medical detachments from three Stewart colored units snared top honors in Stewart's "splinting rodeo," it was announced today. Medics of the 790th finished in first place; the 235th took second, and the 492nd captured third place.

In the fourth place was the 505th battalion; the 565th placed fifth, and the 490th and 793rd tied for sixth.

All enlisted men and officers in the 790th's detachment will receive three-day passes as first prize. Two-day passes will be given to medical soldiers and officers of the 492nd.

Each of the 25 medical detachments entered in the contest was represented by 12 men. They competed in four events, an arm and a leg splint, with and without blindfolds.

Best time for the arm splint was one minute, forty-eight seconds, and top time for the leg splint was two minutes, ten seconds. Blindfolded, the swiftest team splinted an arm in one minute, fifty-six seconds; a leg in two minutes, fifty-one seconds.

Completed splint jobs were judged on efficiency, technique and neatness as well as speed.

Contest judges were Major William G. Taylor, AAATC surgeon, and six battalion medical officers: Capts. Joseph Procopio, Harry D. Shell, Benjamin H. Lerner, Rodrigo Rego, Arthur Leistyna and First Lieut. Othello S. Kough.

47c Camps

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

"Army Camps In South Are Hell," Is Soldiers Cry

Southernism Sponsored By White Officers Is Reason For Demoralizing Conditions

In Louisiana

CAMP HALLAHAN, La.—A soldier on furlough says that Negro soldiers at the camp have been refused the right to buy at the Post Exchange, a post that is said to be operated by the Army. The soldier states, that while the company of Negro and white soldiers were on rifle range, the Negro soldiers bought beer without any friction. Later in the day a white captain called the Negro soldiers together and told them that in the future if they wanted beer, a white lieutenant would get it for them and take it to their barracks where they would have to drink it with Negro soldiers.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (ANP) — Pfc. William R. Carothers of Chicago and a member of service battery, 931st Field Artillery battalion, was seriously wounded here Sunday night with a .45 caliber automatic pistol by Negro military police from Camp Gordon. Two others said to have been civilians were also reported injured in the line of fire. The soldier was shot in the hip.

JUN 19 1943

The trouble started when two soldiers, Pvts. Robert Bell and Felton Hall, are said to have encountered an M.P. near the intersection of Qwinnette and 9th street when Hall's remark to Bell about M.P. tactics were overheard by the MP who accosted him and placed him under arrest. Another member of the artillery unit, seeing the arrest summoned other soldiers who gathered to see what happened when the free for all fight started. Several other MPs came upon the scene and began shooting wildly into the street. Scores of soldiers on pass from camp and civilians were forced to flee the streets.

In Mississippi

COLLINS, Miss. (ANP)—Latest communique from the Mississippi sector of the racebaiting Dixie front shows 15 Negro soldiers jailed and two shot as the aftermath of a clash Sunday between members of a Camp Shelby baseball team and a state highway patrolman, C. T. Simmons.

This latest racial trouble followed by a few days the slaying of a Negro soldier by a sheriff elsewhere in this state and the request to move an entire Negro regiment, recently sent here from the west, out of Mississippi to a northern location

Sunday's clash started when Simmons flagged down a truck containing the soldiers as it passed through Mt. Olive, near here. Throwing a gun on the soldiers, he ordered them out of the vehicle. One soldier, resenting the officer's attitude, rushed Simmons and knocked the gun out of his hand. The patrolman went back to his car after another weapon just as a Tri-State bus passed the scene and stopped, the driver and a white soldier getting out to help the officer.

In the ensuing melee, shots were fired by Simmons and the soldier who took his gun, with the white soldier grabbing a fire axe from the bus and joining in the affray, clubbing one colored soldier unconscious. The others broke and ran for the nearby woods, with the armed Negro soldier joining them when the gun he had taken became empty. Believed to have been badly wounded, he is still missing.

Simmons radioed for help and other highway patrolmen, civilians and MPs responded. A posse was formed and after firing into the woods, the soldiers were rounded up and placed in the Covington county jail here temporarily, later being moved to Camp Shelby by MPs.

Feeling continued through Sunday night when an unidentified Negro soldier refused to heed the command of an armed civilian to stop and was shot through the leg.

JUN 19 1943

47c Camps

CAMP STEWART, Ga.—A board of Army oficers has been appointed to investigate the cause of a riot here last Thursday night in which a white Miitary Police was slain and four others injured.

Although camp officers gave no specific cause of the fracas, Major E P. Scott said "false and malicious rumors to the effect that Colored girls were being molested" had stirred the Negro soldiers here up to such a frame of mind, that a group of them fired on a squad of MP's resulting in the casualties.

369th "Grudge" Belvieved Cause

Informed quarters advanced the opinion that the flareup can be attributed to the arrival of 211 members of the 369th from Hawaii recently. The presence of these seasoned veterans who were instructors to the green white recruits was resented by white officers, and a undercurrent of unrest has been intensified until the least provocation on either side may result in a major disturbance.

Transportation Facilities Bad

Another rub to the soldiers is the transportation situation. It seems a private bus company operates the bus line from here to Savannah. Soldiers say they are not allowed to ride the same buses the white soldiers use, therefore they are forced to wait at the terminal until a bus "for Negroes Only" comes along.

JUN 1943

Camps

Memphis, Tenn., Com'rcial Appeal
October 19, 1943

PARIS NEGRO QUARTER IS QUIET AFTER ROW

Soldiers In Free-For-All Are Hustled Back To Camp

Special to The Commercial Appeal

PARIS, Tenn., Oct. 18.—City and county officials said Monday that there was no recurrence Sunday night of the trouble in the Paris negro section Saturday night when city police, deputy sheriffs, state highway patrolmen and military police rounded up some 300 negro soldiers after a free-for-all fight.

Fleetwood Lowe, chief deputy sheriff, said City Policemen Gilbert Jackson and Dudley Mann were on a regular patrol at 10:30 o'clock Saturday night when they stopped at the "Black Bottom," a negro social club.

Deputy Lowe said when the policemen stopped a crowd of negro soldiers estimated at from 200 to 300 began throwing rocks and bottles at the police car. All windows on one side of the car were broken and the fenders badly smashed although the officers were not hurt.

Deputies, highway patrolmen and military police answered a radio call for aid and quickly rounded up the soldiers who were placed in Army trucks and returned to their quarters at nearby Camp Tyson. Deputy Lowe said the soldiers were from a Second Army unit stationed at Camp Tyson.

47c-1943 CAMPS (Selfridge Field)

DURING COURT MARTIAL AT SELFRIDGE FIELD

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

47c
Camps

SEP 7 1943

Army officers who are hearing the charges (left to right): Col. K. G. Gould, Col. O. H. Stout, Col. J. E Duke, Col. [illegible] B. Gates, [illegible] H. Huston, Lieut. Col. McDonald and Col. J. A. Wheeler.

Col. William T. Colman, whose trial opened yesterday.

Associated Press Wirephotos

SEP 7 1943

COL. COLMAN ACCUSED IN TRANSFER CASES

Defendant in Court-Martial Said to Have Shifted Ford's Son

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich., Sept. 6 (U.P.)—The Army today charged Col. William T. Colman, deposed commander of the Selfridge Field air base, with using his position to obtain the illegal transfer of eleven men, including Private [illegible] son of the late [illegible] to the air base.

The charge was one of seven, alleging violation of five Articles of War, placed against Colonel Colman at the opening of his court-martial. Other charges included the misappropriation of Government property and the shooting of a Negro soldier, Private First Class William McRae of Morven, N. C., last May 5. McRae has recovered from his wounds.

A plea of innocent was entered for Colonel Colman, who has been held under military arrest since the shooting.

The defense called two Army Air Force psychiatrists to testify as to Colonel Colman's mental condition at the time of the shooting.

Lieut. Col. Charles R. Rayburn said the defendant was mentally irresponsible. He said Colman had been under treatment for a neurosis since 1939, when he entered the Walte[illegible] Hospit[illegible] Washington.

Capt. Leonard R. Rittenberg, Selfridge psychiatrist, said he examined Colman immediately following the shooting and he saw no signs of intoxication. On the other hand Capt. John R. Lucas said Colman appeared to be intoxicated.

SEP 7 1943

COLMAN, GUILTY, REDUCEDTOCAPTAIN

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

Former Selfridge Field Chief Is Convicted as Drunk and of Misuse of Firearms

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich., Sept. 14 (AP)—Col. William T. Colman, 39-year-old former commandant of this Army air base, was convicted by a court-martial today of careless use of firearms and drunkenness and was ordered reduced in rank to a captaincy.

He was acquitted on all other charges, including allegations that he fraudulently arranged the transfer of military personnel to the field here, that he had accepted a gift from a contractor engaged on work for the Government, and that he had misappropriated Government property and labor services.

In directing Colonel Colman's reduction in rank, the court-martial of eight colonels and one lieutenant colonel ordered that he be placed at the foot of the list of captains, not to be promoted for three years.

The verdict was announced just six hours after the court began deliberation on more than a week of testimony. The finding is subject to review by the War Department, and the sentence will not take effect until finally approved.

In all, the Government presented twenty-eight charges against Colonel Colman. He pleaded innocent on all of them, and at the opening of the trial sought their dismissal on the ground he had been suffering from a mental disorder. The court denied his motion.

The principal charge against Colonel Colman was the shooting and wounding of Pvt. William R. McRae, Negro chauffeur, at the base here last May 5. The original charge on this count was assault with intent to do bodily harm. The court reduced this to the careless use of firearms.

In the summing up by Colonel Colman's counsel, Maj. Thomas A. Ballantine, he was described as a "mentally sick man." It was argued that he accepted a vacation from a contracting firm in good faith for all the officers at Selfridge Field.

"Here is a man who had charge of $8,000,000 worth of expansion," Major Ballantine said. "He is charged with fraud in connection with a six-bit bed spring."

Capt. Phillip D. O'Connell, the trial judge advocate, summing up for the prosecution, charged that the vacation lodge "never was officially turned over by Colonel Colman to the officers' club at Selfridge" and that he "told only his particular friends about it."

Colonel Colman stood at attention as the court announced his sentence. When it was pronounced he smiled broadly and thanked the oficers of the court. He declined to make any comment on the verdict and sentence.

The court adjourned until Friday, when it will take up the trial of Lieut. Col Charles G. White, who was executive officer under Colonel Colman. The nature of the charges has not been made known.

SELFRIDGE FIELD FILES FALSIFIED, SERGEANT SAYS

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Ill.

SEP 16 1943

Transfers Are Told at Court Martial.

Selfridge Field, Mich., Sept. 18 [Special].—A wholesale enlistment and transfer system existed at this army air base during the regime of Col. William T. Colman as commandant, Master Sgt. Myron F. Collins today told a court martial that is hearing charges against Lt. Col. Charles G. White.

"Nearly every staff officer at the field had some friends he wanted in," Collins testified. "Most of them were just about to be drafted."

Col. White, executive officer at the field under Colman, is accused on 16 counts of violating two of the articles of war. Among the charges are drunkenness, arranging enlistments and transfers in an unlawful and fraudulent manner, and using labor services of civilian personnel. He is accused of conspiring with Sgt. Collins and Warrant Officer Fred Lalone in arranging the enlistments and transfers.

Colman Demoted by Court.

Earlier this week another court martial ordered Col. Colman reduced to the rank of captain after he was found guilty of drunkenness and of shooting and wounding a Negro chauffeur, Pvt. Willie McRae.

In Washington today Rep. Andrew J. May [D., K[illegible]], [illegible]man of the house [illegible]tary affairs committee, said his committee had directed Rep. Paul W. Shafer [R., Mich.] to take up with the secretary of war the question of reopening the court martial case of Colman.

"We do not intent to permit this man to remain in the army if we can help it," May added.

Falsified Records Charged.

In White's trial, Collins testified that false qualifications frequently were attributed to men for whom Col. White had ordered him to seek transfers. He said White had approved the transfer or enlistment of Privates Carl T. Lewis, Edward L. Martyka, Raymond W. Foss, and Bert Huler, and Corporals Bernard J. Rosso and Sam Lieberman.

Collins told the court officers at the field knew that "the heat was on" even before the shooting of Pvt. McRae.

"I was warned [illegible]lly thru the 6th service command in Chicago that we had gone too far," he said.

Collins said that in the case of Rosso, a Mt. Clemens sporting goods store proprietor, four telegrams had been sent to Washington before Rosso's enlistment was achieved only one day before he was to have been drafted. These telegrams, which Collins said White had ordered, described Rosso as an accoun[illegible]

Lewis, now a corporal, testified he had had no knowledge of having been described in enlistment requests as a mechanic. He said he was a piano player.

SEP 19 1943

Post
Washington, D. C

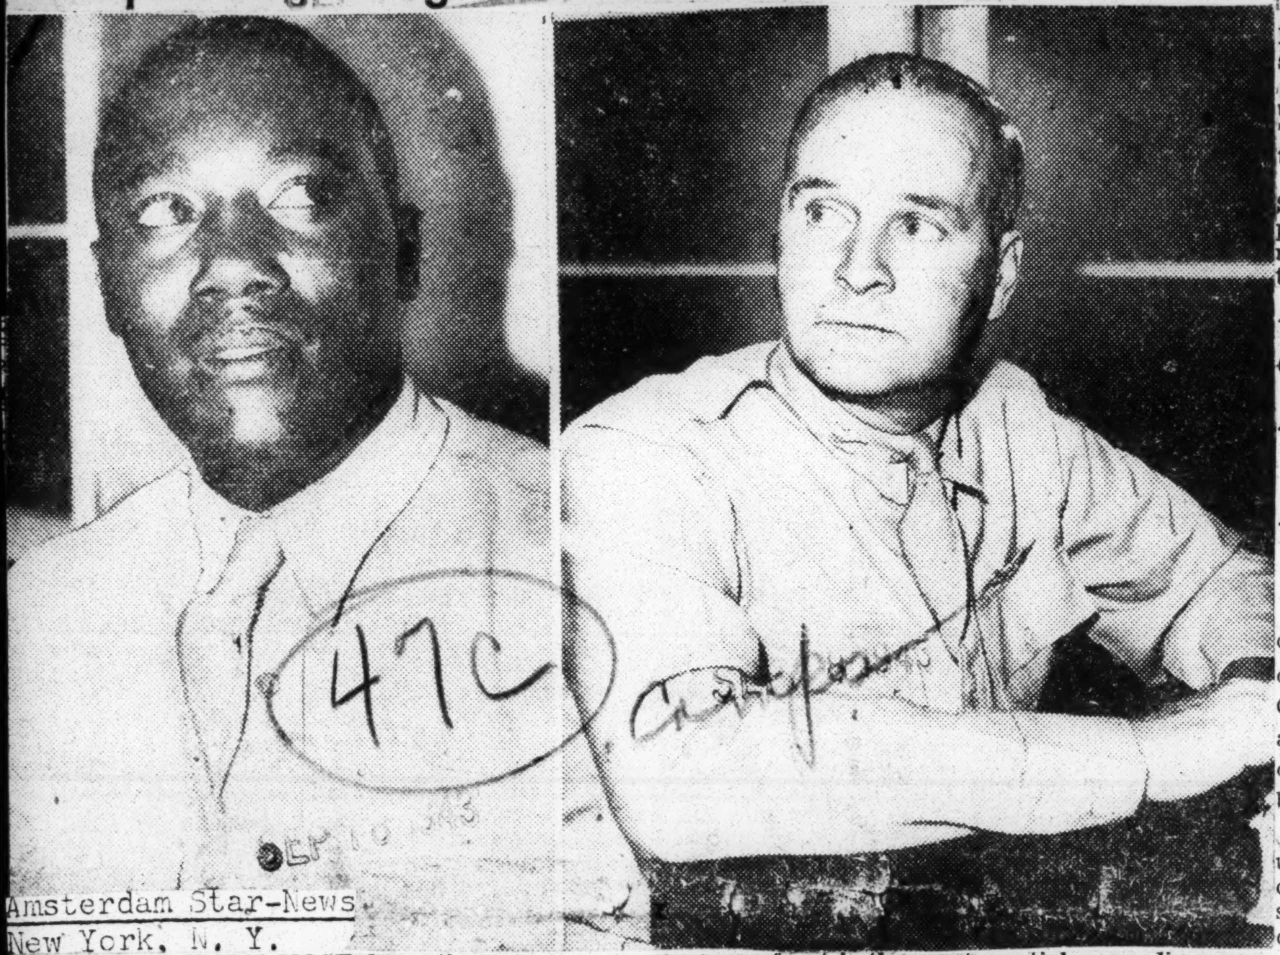
Capt. W. T. Colman Retired by Army

NOV 10 1943

Selfridge Field, Mich., Nov. 9 (AP).
Capt. W[illegible] T. Colman, former commandant at this army air base, who was convicted by a court-martial of careless use of firearms after the shooting of a Negro private, is being retired, the War Department disclosed today.

The wounding of the soldier set off an investigation of administrative affairs at Selfridge Field which resulted in court-martial of several officers. Colman was reduced in rank from colonel to captain; more severe penalties were meted out to others convicted of ministrative irregularities.

Principals in Selfridge Field Court Martial Case



Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

ONE OF THE WAR'S MOST dramatic occurences on the home front is the court martial proceedings now going on at Selfridge Field, Mich., where Col. William T. Colman, right, former commandant, is facing dismissal from the army plus a prison sentence growing out of 29 charges, main one of which is that he shot and seriously wounded Pvt. William McRae, 24 years old, soldier-chauffeur, (at left) last May. McRae has already testified and told how the unprovoked attack made upon him when he came to pick up the colonel in his car. The colonel who has been relieved of his command, testified he could recall nothing of the shooting and said his memory had snapped under the combined strain of post-Pearl Harbor duties and therefore couldn't remember the details of official misconduct with which he is charged. —INS Photo

---

War Department Retires Colonel

Washington Tribune

Who Shot Soldier at Selfridge Field

Washington, D. C.

The War Department has retired Col. William T. Colman, deposed commander of the Selfridge Field Air Base, it was announced this week.

Following a court-martial on a charge of the careless use of his service gun, in connection with the shooting of William McRae, chauffeur at the field, the commanding officer had been reduced from his temporary rank of colonel, to his permanent rank of captain.

A wave of protest followed this mild punishment, resulting in a review of the case by higher officials of the War Department, on order of Secretary of War Stimson.

NOV 13 1943

Following the review, the War Department ordered the retirement of the colonel on grounds of "inefficiency," which permits him to receive approximately thirty percent of the pay of a captain.

Colman, who had been charged with the felonious shooting of McRae, had been found not guilty of the charge by the court-martial, but guilty only of "careless use of firearms." He was also convicted on three charges of drunkenness.

Investigators of the incident had found that Colman resented a Negro chauffeur being detailed to drive him and his wife. Angered when McRae appeared to carry out the assignment, he is said to have drawn his revolver, and fired on the soldier.

An exhaustive investigation followed, participated in by the War Department, the FBI, and Congress.

Acting under a recent law permitting the War Department to retire an officer for inefficiency, the Secretary of War ordered a special board of inquiry to review the Colman case, as a result of which, the retirement under the new law was ordered.

COLMAN TO BE RETIRED

New York, N. Y.

Army Officer Was Convicted by Court-Martial

NOV 10 1943

New York Times

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich., Nov. 9 (AP)—Capt. William T. Colman, former commandant at this Army air base, who was convicted by a court-martial of careless use of firearms after the shooting of a Negro private, is being retired, the War Department disclosed today.

NOV 10 1943

The wounding of the soldier set off an investigation of administrative affairs at Selfridge Field which resulted in several officers of the base facing court martial. Colman was reduced in rank from colonel to captain; more severe penalties were meted out to others convicted of administrative irregularities.

Today's statement from the War Department, made public here, said:

'Captain Colman is being retired under public law No. 190 of the 77th Congress. The date of his retirement is not yet announced."

The law referred to gives the Secretary of War, in wartime, the power to place on the "unlimited retirement list" any officer found to be unfit for duty.

ARMY TO RETIRE CAPT. COLMAN IN NEGRO SHOOTING

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illino

Action Based on Law for Unfit Officers.

NOV 10 1943

Selfridge Field, Mich., Nov. 9 [Special].—The war department disclosed today that Capt. William T. Colman, former commandant of this army air base who recently was convicted by a court martial, is being retired.

"Capt. Colman is being retired under public law No. 190 of the 77th congress," said the war department statement, made public here. "The date of his retirement is not yet announced."

The law referred to gives the secretary of war, in war time, power to place on the unlimited retirement list any officer found to be unfit for duty.

Convicted in Soldier Shooting.

Colman was convicted of drunkenness and careless use of a pistol in the shooting and wounding of his Negro chauffeur. He was acquitted of 23 other charges, including illegal transfer of soldiers and misappropriation of government property.

NOV 10 1943

The court martial ordered his reduction from his temporary rank of colonel to his permanent rank of captain, altho two other Selfridge field officers, convicted within two weeks of his trial, received heavier sentences. Colman's aid, Lt. Col. Charles G. White, was ordered dismissed from service, as was Maj. George A. Hartford, former intelligence officer at the base.

After Colman's conviction Sept. 14 Rep. Paul W. Shafer [R., Mich.] termed his sentence "disgustingly inadequate" and announced the reopening of his investigation of alleged wholesale irregularities at Selfridge field because he believed the war department had failed to get to the bottom of them.

NOV 10 1943

Demand Made to Stimson.

A demand was made on Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson by Rep. Donald O'Toole [D., N. Y.] for an investigation of Colman's court martial and the secretary announced subsequently he had ordered additional proceedings in the case.

Under the law thru which the war department acted, Colman would receive retirement pay. The law provides that if an officer has served more than seven years of commissioned service his retirement pay would be computed on his rank and length of service.

Inasmuch as Colman entered the army as a flying cadet in 1928, he would come under this provision. If retired as a captain he would receive retirement pay of $1,125 a year.

NOV 10 1943

Soldier Says Colonel Asked His Transfer

SEP 11 1943

Courier-Journal

Tells of Letter At Court-Martial

Louisville, Ky.

Selfridge Field, Mich., Sept. 10 (U.P.)—Corp. John W. Goldsmith, Dunkirk, N. Y., today told the court-martial of Col. William T. Colman, deposed commander of the Selfridge Field Air Base, that the defendant arranged his transfer to Selfridge as an airplane mechanic and then assigned him to the payroll department.

SEP 11 1943

Goldsmith was the first witness to testify at today's proceedings against Colman, on trial for violation of five articles of war, including the shooting of a Negro soldier, Pfc. William McRae, last May 5.

Received a Letter.

Goldsmith said he knew nothing of the transfer until he received a letter dated January 16, 1943, from Colman telling him not to be surprised if the commander of the Plattsburg, N. Y., barracks talked to him about a transfer to Selfridge. The letter was signed "Bill."

"I have put in a request for you," Colman wrote, explaining that a friend at Dunkirk had reported the elder Goldsmith would like to have his son transferred to Selfridge. Colman is a native of Dunkirk.

SEP 11 1943

Goldsmith said Colman wrote that he could spend three months at Selfridge and then go into officers' candidate school. Goldsmith was transferred to the air base here February 17, 1943.

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

COLEMAN TRIAL ATTACKED

Two Congressmen Ask Investigation of Army Court Martial

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (AP)—Representative O'Toole, Democrat, of New York, demanded of Secretary Stimson today an investigation of the court-martial of Col. William T. Colman, who has been reduced to a captaincy, saying "the morale of the Army and of the public will be shattered by the retenntion of such specimens within our armed forces." The New Yorker also demanded that Colonel Colman be suspended from all duties until the inquiry was completed. Representative Shafer, Republican, of Michigan, described the outcome of the court-martial as a travesty and said he would ask the Military Affairs Committee to review the case.

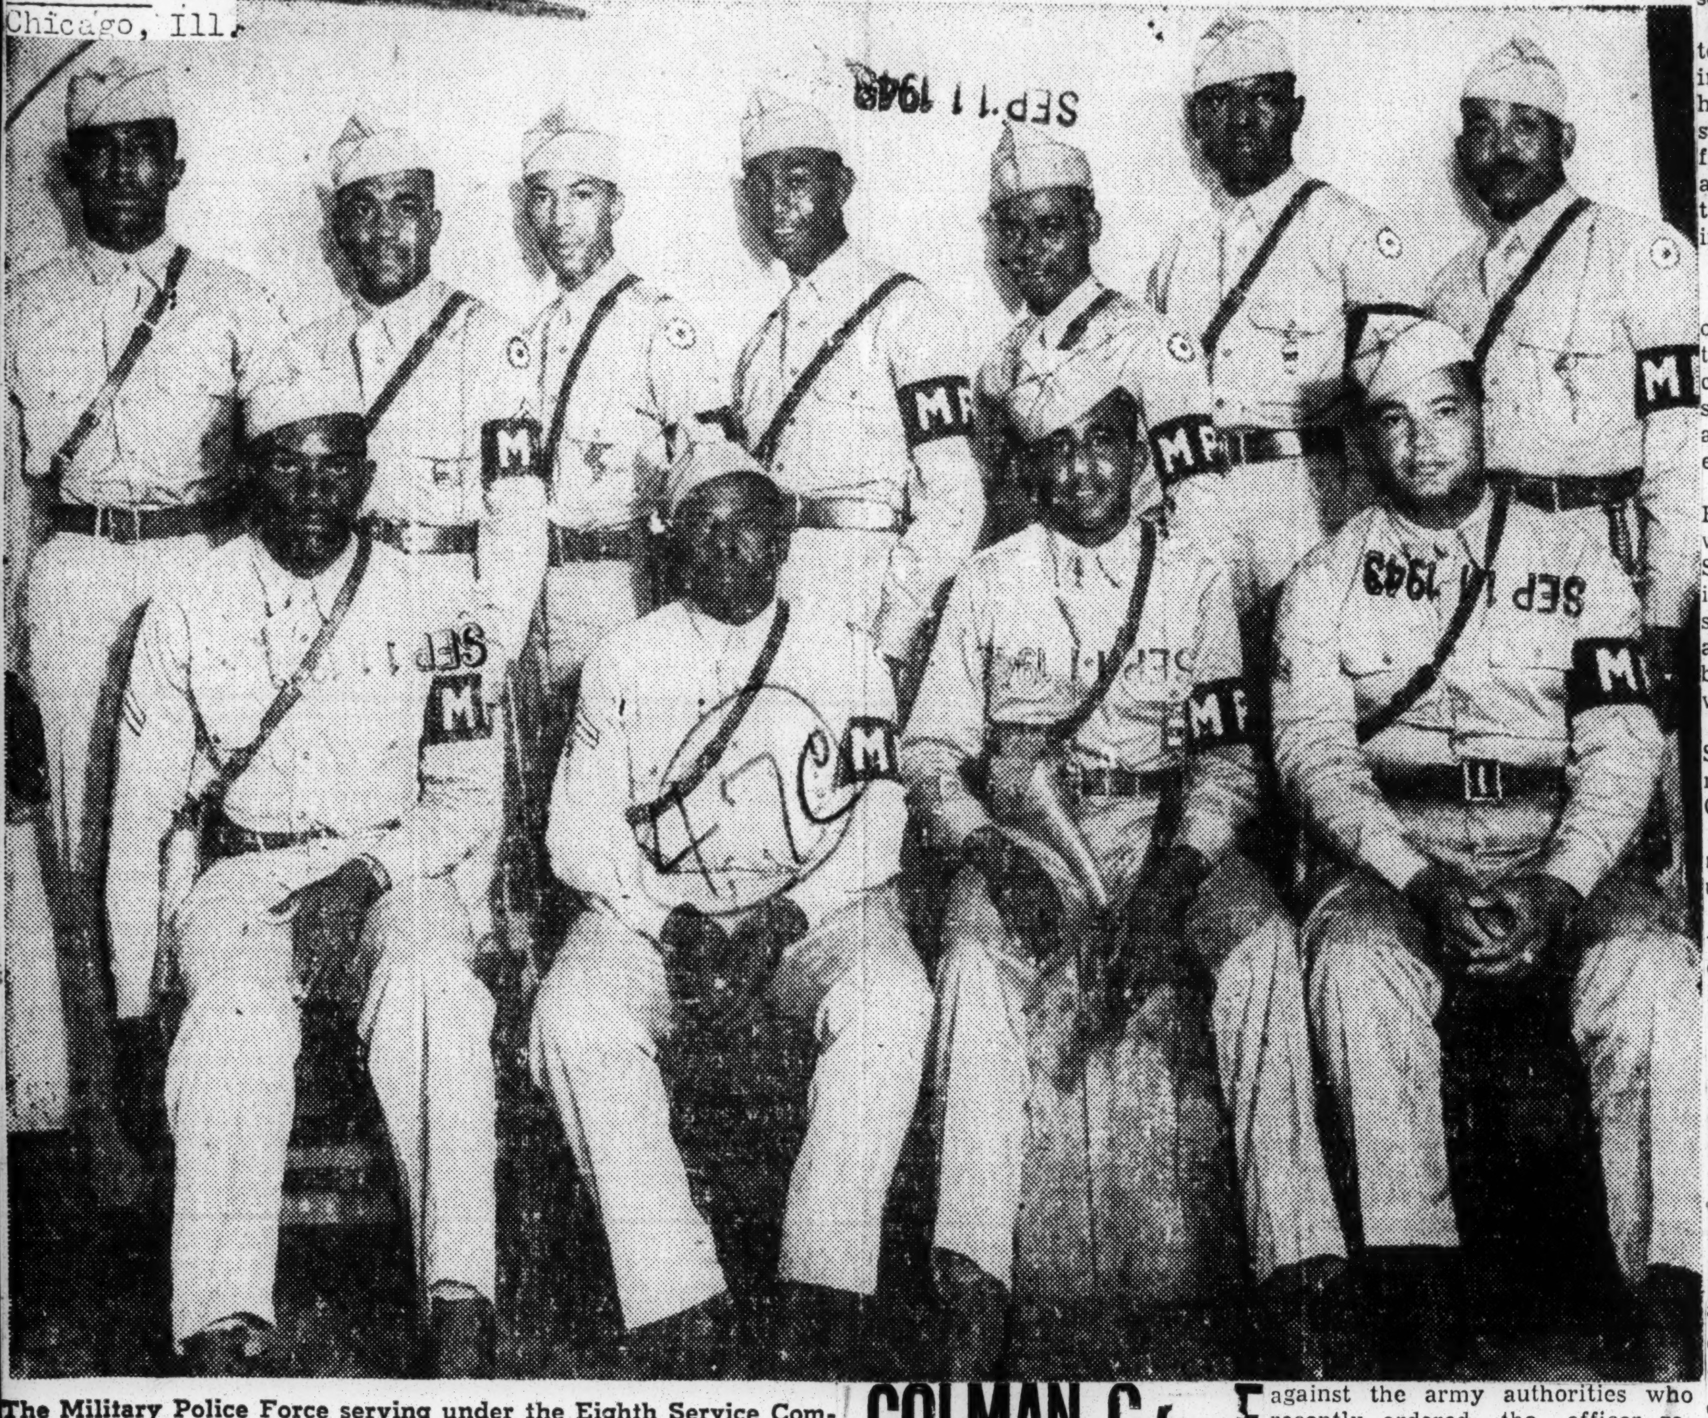
The verdict against Colonel Colman is subject to review by the War Department here and the sentence will not take effect until finally approved.

47c-1943

CAMPS (SELFRIDGE FIELD)

CAMP BOWIE, TEXAS MILITARY POLICE DETACHMENT

Defender
Chicago, Ill.



The Military Police Force serving under the Eighth Service Command, Military Police Detachment, Camp Bowie, Texas Area, is considered one of the most efficient groups in the Southwest and works with the civilian officials in maintaining law and order in nearby Brownwood, Texas. The detachment is headed by Provost Sgt. Melvin C. Mumford of Savannah, Ga., who has served in this capacity for more than a year. The members are equipped with the latest of military weapons. They work in close cooperation with other military police and city officials. Reading from left to right (standing) — Pfc. Louis Cook, Pfc. Oswald Walker, Pvts. Mathew Lee, Booker T. Askew, James Christopher, Velma Ramsey and Harvey Slaughter; (Seated from left to right) — Cpls. Lapthaniel Jackson, Mardis Washington, Pfc. Robert S. Moore and Provost Sgt. Melvin C. Mumford. Not shown on the picture are military police Pvts. Andrew Jackson and Jeffie Wilson and Cpl. Jeff Tatum.

CONGRESSMEN ASK PROBE F

COLMAN CASE

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Whitewash Of Selfridge Field Commander Hit By Angry Solons

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.— Reopening of the court-martial case against Col. William T. Colman, former commander of the Selfridge Field, Mich., air base, appeared imminent this week as Congress girded for action against the army authorities who recently ordered the officer reduced to a captain's rank for shooting a Negro soldier.

Chairman Andrew J. May, of the House Military Affairs committee, joined with Rep. Paul W. Shafer, Republican of Michigan, in declaring the verdict inadequate. Both asserted that "the committee does not intend to permit this man to remain in the army if we can help it."

Shafer, himself, lighted the fire under the Congressional boiling pot. He pointed out that the court-martial which demoted Colman to captain ignored reports that 52 drafted soldiers were being held at Selfridge Field at the request of influential families, while others drafted at the same time had been sent overseas.

"You can't do this sort of thing to a lot of swell kids who are being brought into this army of ours," he said. "They convict a man of shooting a private. They admit their findings that the officer is a drunkard. But they leave him as a captain in the army. You can't do that in a democracy."

Shafer Familiar With Case

It was Shafer who, as chairman of the military affairs subcommittee, first turned up information concerning Colman's activities. He stepped out of the case, however, at the request of the inspector general's office of the army.

Still another member of Congress, Rep. Donald L. O'Toole, (D. of N.Y.) wrote a letter to Secretary of War Stimson last week, demanding an investigation of the court-martial, saying: "The morale of the army and of the public will be shattered by the retention of such specimens within our armed forces."

At his press conference last week, Secretary Stimson said he had not received any such demand from the Congressman.

O'Toole also demanded that Colman be suspended from all duties until the inquiry was completed.

Rep. Shafer in a Defender interview called the outcome of the court-martial "a travesty" and said he would do all in his power to bring about a review of the case. He added: "We cannot have confidence in our military if we are going to allow officers to escape with nominal penalties for serious offenses."

O'Toole took a similar stand, when he said in his letter, "I could not blame any civilian or member of the army from failing to have respect for those who are known as 'officers and gentlemen' by act of Congress," if this man is allowed to remain an officer in the army of the United States.

Edgar G. Brown, chairman of the National Negro Council, sent a telegram to President Roosevelt urging him to order a new trial for Colman, on the ground that the "verdict was equivalent to acquittal."

The wire said, in part:

"The American people, including 13 million loyal and patriotic Negroes, had every right to look forward to the proper punishment of Col. Colman upon conviction by the court-martial.

"The final verdict, however, was equivalent to acquittal in merely an order to reduce him from the temporary colonelcy back to his regular rank of captain, and for that obvious reason we feel constrained to call upon you, as commander in chief, to order a new trial of the Colman case.

"The social demands of these war times necessitate the speedy correction of this outrageous and sorry spectacle of the miscarriage of justice."

Compare Sentences

Meanwhile Negroes and whites throughout the country were comparing the light penalty given Colman and the severe punishment meted out to nine soldiers accused of firing on the town of Duck Hill, Miss.

Testimony from witnesses revealed that Colman harbored racial prejudices that influenced many of his actions. He was reported to have said he would not have a Negro chauffeur and resented McRae's appearance at the post command to drive his automobile. Orders were issued by the commander to his aides to never assign a Negro to his detail.

The soldiers accused of the Duck Hill shooting, in which no one was injured, with two exceptions, were from southern states and attached to the 476th quartermaster truck regiment. They drew sentences at hard labor ranging from five to 15 years in federal and military prisons. Those sentenced were Cpl. Larue Steele, Pvts. James Harris and Elijah Outlaw, who drew 15 year terms; Pvts. Leroy Dorsey of Miss., sentenced to seven years, and Pvt. C. Wells, of Georgia who drew a term of five years.

Charge Reduced

